The Dramatist's Style

New Edition
NEARLY all that has come down to us of the personal history of Shakespeare may be expressed in the words of one of his biographers: "All that is known with any degree of certainty is, that he was born at Stratford-upon-Avon—married, and had children there—went to London, where he commenced actor, and wrote poems and plays—returned to Stratford, made his will, died, and was buried." It is most remarkable of such a man as Shakespeare, "that no letter of his writing, no record of his conversation, no fully drawn character of him by any contemporary has yet been discovered." The industry of his commentators has indeed discovered various documents in which he is mentioned, but the information is of the most meagre kind, and the history derived from the discovery, of a merely conjectural character.

At first sight one is disposed to imagine that, great as Shakespeare has been esteemed since his death, possibly he may have been undervalued by his contemporaries, but several incidental notices of him by writers of his age, show that not only were his writings appreciated, but that his plays had introduced a new era in the progress of dramatic literature.

So far as we can gather from the scanty facts which have been collected, Shakespeare seems to have had a most supreme indifference as to the place he was to occupy in the annals of literature; he has left us no records of his own life, nor does he appear ever to have taken the slightest trouble to have his dramas issued to the world in the state in which he wrote them. During his lifetime, edition after edition was published of many of his plays, unauthorised by him, and in a most imperfect and garbled form, yet he never seems to have interfered, and at his death no authorised copy of Shakespeare's plays was known to have been in existence. How much of Shakespeare we have in the generally received text is quite a matter of conjecture, and the text itself is as much a subject of discussion as the dramas of ancient Greece. The editors of the first collected edition of Shakespeare,—the famous edition of 1623,—did their duty most conscientiously, but their materials were of the most uncertain character, being chiefly collected from the manuscripts preserved in the various theatres, but not one of them bearing the authentication of Shakespeare. In this edition twenty plays were published for the first time.

The first certain information regarding the Shakespeares begins with his father, John Shakespeare, who is believed to have been the son of a substantial farmer in Snitterfield, about three miles from Stratford-on-Avon. John appears to have commenced business in Stratford about the year 1551, and it is singular that the first mention we have of him is in April, 1552, in a prosecution for "piling up a dunghill in Henley Street, contrary to the laws." In 1558 he again appears in the Court roll as being fined fourpence for not keeping his gutters clean. The first trade he seems to have taken up was a glover, and he is so described in 1556 in a register of the Bailiff's Court. He soon after engaged in other occupations, as in 1564 he appears as selling timber, and still later to have "taken to agricultural pursuits," and "to have been a considerable dealer in wool." In 1579 he is styled in the chamberlain's accounts as "a yeoman," and probably the early tradition that he was a butcher, may have originated in his occasionally slaughtering his stock for the Stratford market. In these various occupations he seems at first to have been very successful, and to have raised himself to easy circumstances. He was much esteemed by his townsmen, and filled in succession the various offices of the corporation, till in 1568 he was elected High Bailiff. It is significant of the state of education at this time that this the Chief Magistrate of Stratford could not sign his own name.
In 1557 John Shakespeare married Mary Arden, daughter of Robert Arden, then deceased, a gentleman of ancient family, and a considerable landed proprietor in the neighbourhood. They had a large family. The following is a copy of the baptisms from the Stratford Register:

1558, Sept. 15, Joan. [Died in infancy.] 1560, Apr. 15, Joan. [Married W. Hart. Died 1646.]
1562, Dec. 2, Margaret. [Died 1563.] 1571, Sept. 28, Anne. [Died 1579.]
1564, April 26, William. [Died 1616.] 1574, Mar. 11, Richard. [Died 1613.]

The marriage into the Arden family not only gave John Shakespeare a greatly superior position in society, but he inherited through his wife the estate of Asbies, about 54 acres in extent, and some other valuable tenements in Snitterfield; these were held no inconsiderable dower in his days.

As John Shakespeare advanced in years he seems to have got into difficulties through unfortunate speculations and heavy losses in his business, so much so that in 1587 we find him actually in prison for debt,—a sad downfall for the Chief Magistrate of Stratford. After this, however, he appears to have again emerged into comfort and affluence; for, in 1596, we find John Shakespeare applying for and obtaining a grant of arms from the Heralds' College; and we have the assertion of Garter King-at-Arms that he was at this time worth £5000 in tenements and lands. In 1599, a farther application is recorded, to authorise the impanelment of the Arden arms with those of Shakespeare; the permission was granted. But it is more than probable that William Shakespeare had helped his father, and was the moving spring of these applications, as he was by this time fast accumulating wealth in a profession then so much looked down upon that he was precluded from seeking the honours for himself.

There is a curious document, dated 1592, being a "return of all recusants or persons who, from various causes, did not attend church." In this document John Shakespeare's name occurs, and there is a note appended that his absence was caused by a "fear of process of debts." Yet we find him at this very time assisting in making an inventory of the effects of a tanner, not apparently afraid of arrest for debt. Some have held that these contradictions could only be reconciled by supposing a relapse from the Protestant faith, but the facts stated are too slight to justify such a conclusion.

John Shakespeare did not long enjoy his heraldic honours. He died in September, 1601. His wife survived him for seven years, dying in 1608.

William Shakespeare, the third child of John Shakespeare, was born on 23rd April, 1564. An entry in the register of Stratford records his baptism on the 26th April, and an early tradition that he died on the anniversary of his birth fixes the 23rd as the day on which he first saw the light. A house is still pointed out in Henley Street as that in which he was born.

From this time till his eighteenth year we have not a word of reliable history. Such information as we possess we gather from traditions not collected till about fifty years after his death.

It is believed that he received the elements of his education at the Free Grammar School of Stratford, which he entered about the age of seven, and at which he remained for six or seven years. We have few indications to guide us in judging of his proficiency there. One of the traditions makes him out "in his younger years to have been a schoolmaster in the country, and that he understood Latin pretty well." Some have supposed from this that in the Free Grammar School he had assisted "in teaching the young idea how to shoot." Ben Jonson, an intimate friend of his, makes the remark, "And though thou hadst small Latin and less Greek," so that it is likely that he had made progress, at all events in the classics. It is also asserted that he was apprenticed to a lawyer in Stratford, but the proof of this is very insufficient.

When William Shakespeare was about the age of fourteen, it is supposed that the difficulties into which his father was fast getting induced him to take William from school to assist in his business. It has been already said that his father killed his stock for the market; and it may have been while with his father that, as tradition asserts, "when he (Shakespeare) killed a calf, he would do it in a high style, and make a speech." The occupations in which he would thus naturally be engaged may have given rise to one of the traditions that Shakespeare was apprenticed to a butcher.
It has been supposed that it was about this time that he first became acquainted with the strolling players, who occasionally visited Stratford, and under whose influence his mind received that impulse which some years later produced such wonderful results.

We now come to one of those events in the life of Shakespeare upon which the evidence is documentary—his marriage with Anne Hathaway, a resident of the neighbourhood. A marriage bond, dated 28th November, 1552, is still preserved, in which two persons, Fulk Sandells and John Richardson, come under a penalty of £40, to be forfeited to the Bishop in the event of any cause appearing hereafter why William Shakespeare and Anne Hathaway should not be married, this bond being required to enable a clergyman to unite them after only a single publication of banns. The reason of this haste is not, unfortunately, difficult to find: their first child, Susanna, was born about the 26th May, 1583, scarcely six months after the date of the bond. Endeavours have been made to explain away the above circumstance by a suggestion that a previous marriage before witnesses had taken place, and that this was only to enable the religious part of the ceremony to be performed. But on this supposition the haste is unaccountable, especially with the responsibility which it threw on the signers of the bond. The bond, too, mentions a marriage to be performed afterwards; and as there is a seal R. H. also attached to the document, which is supposed to be that of Anne's father, then dead, it is but too plain why the various parties pushed on the legal solemnisation of the union. The truth is, the editors of Shakespeare have a feverish anxiety to show that his character was all but immaculate. The slightest incident in his favour is magnified to absurdity, while aught showing he was but a man, with the frailties of his age and times, is discarded as unworthy of credit.

Anne was seven or eight years older than her husband, and there is little in their future life to make us think that Shakespeare had much love for her. She seems, however, to have been a faithful and dutiful wife, and to have borne his long absences with at least equanimity. Shakespeare, on his departure for London, left his wife and family behind him, and there is no appearance of their ever having been with him during his residence there. It is said that he paid a yearly visit to his family at Stratford, until he finally gave up his profession, when he took up his abode with them in his native town.

In 1585 were born at Stratford Shakespeare's two children—Hamnet and Judith—twins.

We now come to a great event in Shakespeare's life, his leaving Stratford for London. Great controversy has taken place as to the cause of this. The reason commonly assigned is "the deer-stealing story." The original statement of the matter is as follows:—"He had, by a misfortune common enough to young fellows, fallen into ill company, and amongst them some that made a frequent practice of deer-stealing, engaged him more than once in robbing the park that belonged to Sir Thomas Lucy of Charlecote, near Stratford. For this he was prosecuted by that gentleman, as he thought, somewhat too severely; and, in order to revenge that ill usage, he made a ballad upon him; and though this, probably the first essay of his poetry, be lost, yet it is said to have been so very bitter, that it redoubled the prosecution against him to that degree, that he was obliged to leave his business and family in Warwickshire for some time, and shelter himself in London." Though mere tradition cannot prove the above account to be a narrative of facts, there appears nothing in the nature of the case to make the incidents unlikely. In all ages game-stealing has been a crime constantly before the law courts; and that Shakespeare, a young, active man, mingling with the class among whom the actors in these depredations are usually found, should engage with them in such an escapade, is not at all unnatural. It may be remarked, too, that the lower classes of society have ever had a difficulty in understanding a breach of the game laws to be a moral offence.

In the Merry Wives of Windsor (p. 49) Sir Thomas Lucy is plainly introduced as Justice Shallow; and when the Justice is made to threaten to make the deer-stealing a "Star Chamber business," it seems likely that Shakespeare refers to the manner in which he had been prosecuted for the offence. There is also a clear allusion to Sir Thomas Lucy's name and coat of arms in the same chapter where Slender refers to the luce (a pike.) Lucy's coat of arms contains three luces.

Though the above story seems to have been a strong reason for Shakespeare's departure, it is more than probable that the unsatisfactory state of his father's affairs gave additional reasons for his leaving home to push his fortunes in the world.
He appears to have left Stratford in 1586-7, and to have directed his course to London, but we have no reliable information regarding his occupation for the next two years. An improbable story is told, that he held gentlemen's horses at the doors of the theatres, and became a great favourite in the occupation. It is not at all consistent, however, with the well-ascertained fact, that so early as 1589, within two or three years of his entering London, he was one of the twelve proprietors of Blackfriars' Theatre. We have a document, dated November, 1589, in which this information is given. It seems probable that Shakespeare had early obtained an introduction to the company of actors, and his genius and business activity must have raised him quickly through the lower situations till he became a sharer in the profits of the theatre itself.

Shakespeare was now fairly launched as an actor and writer of plays. Mr Halliwell has recently discovered documentary evidence of Shakespeare's having acted on two occasions before Queen Elizabeth in 1594. Many discordant statements have been made as to his talents as an actor; some asserting that his "top character was the Ghost in Hamlet;" but another story, if true, shows he had the ready appreciation of the part he had to play, which is the indication of a first-class actor. The story is as follows:—Queen Elizabeth on one occasion honoured the theatre with her presence while Shakespeare was personating a king. She, happening to walk across the stage near Shakespeare, dropped her glove, but Shakespeare took no notice of the circumstance. Elizabeth, desirous of ascertaining if this was intentional or a mere inadvertence, again moved past him, and dropped her glove. Shakespeare picked it up, and still personating the monarch in the play, said,

"And though now bent on this high embassy,
Yet stoop we to take up our cousin's glove."

He then presented it to Elizabeth, who was greatly pleased with his ready wit. Queen Elizabeth was a great admirer of Shakespeare's plays, and in Midsummer-Night's Dream (p. 137) he pays her one of the most refined tributes ever paid to woman. The passage ends with

"And the imperial votaress passed on
In maiden meditation, fancy free."

As a writer of dramas, it is likely that Shakespeare produced some of his plays at a very early period of his theatrical career, and it is probable that it was to his pen more than to his acting that he owed his rapid rise in his profession; at first he seems to have confined himself to the remodelling of plays already in existence, and to this class belong Pericles (his first drama), Titus Andronicus, Taming of the Shrew, and Comedy of Errors; some of these are supposed to have appeared as early as 1583. It was not till 1591 or 1592 that his first original play, Love's Labour Lost, appeared; but no reliable information has ever been obtained as to the dates when the rest of his plays were first produced. The dates when the following were first published (unsanctioned by Shakespeare) have been ascertained pretty correctly; but they must have been acted in the theatres long before—

1697. King Richard II.
   " King Richard III.
   " Romeo and Juliet.
1698. Love's Labour's Lost.
   " First Part of King Henry IV.
   " The Merchant of Venice.
1600. Second Part of King Henry IV.
   " King Henry V.
   " Much Ado About Nothing.
   " Titus Andronicus.
1602. Merry Wives of Windsor.
1603. Hamlet.
1607. King Lear.
1609. Troilus and Cressida.
   " Pericles.

A question has been keenly discussed as to whether Shakespeare ever visited Scotland; there are circumstances which deserve notice as being the grounds for this supposition. A portion of the "Queen's players," with whom Shakespeare was connected, actually visited Scotland, and went as far as Aberdeen, having frequent opportunities of acting before King James; some have surmised that Shakespeare must have been in this company, of which he was usually a member, and that only his visit to the north would account for the marvellous descriptions in Macbeth. Adverse to this idea, it is remarkable that, though several members of the company are named as having received rewards and honours, Shakespeare's is not even mentioned. It is also to be remembered that it was only a detachment of the company which visited Scotland, the main body exhibiting at Court during the same seasons, and it is natural to suppose Shakespeare was with it, especially when we consider that he was at this time exceedingly busy with the dramas, which shortly after came out in rapid succession. All things considered, it is not probable, though quite possible, that he was ever in Scotland.

In the year 1592 the plague broke out in London, and an order was issued by the Privy Council to shut up all theatres and places of public concourse as a preventative to infection. Shakespeare, thus finding "Othello's occupation gone," took the opportunity of his forced leisure to issue a volume of poems, written some years before, entitled "Venus and Adonis." The poetry is of a most licentious character, and could not have appeared in a purer age, but its popularity was decided, and several editions were rapidly issued. It was followed by "Lucreces," which also became very popular. These are the only poems of Shakespeare which were published under his own sanction. They were dedicated to Lord Southampton, and obtained the immediate patronage of the Earl, who presented him shortly after with £1000.

It has been supposed that this munificent donation was made to enable Shakespeare to meet his share of the expense of building a new theatre, "The Globe." This theatre was opened in 1605; it was a large round building of wood, open to the sky, while only the stage was protected from the weather by an overhanging roof thatched. In bad weather or in winter the players adjourned to "The Blackfriars," which was entirely covered in. "The Globe was a great success, most probably because in it were first acted the noble dramas written by Shakespeare at this period.

Shakespeare was now on the highway to wealth and fame. His profits from the Brittania and Globe must have been very large, and he had besides his regular salary as an actor, which would enable him to make his frequent investments in the purchase of houses and lands in his native town. In 1597 he purchased New Place, one of the best houses in Stratford; in 1602 we find him acquiring, for £320, 107 acres of arable land, which he annexed to New Place; and in 1605 he purchased, for £440, a share in a lease of tithes at Stratford. Money at that time represented about five times the amount it does at present, so that the sums invested would come to no inconsiderable sum for a man in his position.

In the midst of his own success, our dramatist had the deepest sympathy with his brother poets who were struggling into fame; the petty jealousies which but too often arise among authors were unfelt by Shakespeare; a striking example of this occurs in his introduction of Ben Jonson to public notice. Ben Jonson, at this time unknown, had offered a play to one of the theatres; the person who received it, after carelessly and superciliously turning it over, rejected it. Shakespeare luckily happened to notice it, saw the merit of the piece, and brought it before the public. It was the beginning of a bright career for Jonson, and the friendship thus begun seems to have endured through life. It is said that Shakespeare acted in 1598 in one of Ben Jonson's plays.

Shakespeare seems, up to 1604, to have retained his position as an actor. A document, recently discovered by Mr Halliwell, shows that on the 15th March of that year, "4½ yards scarlet red cloth" was supplied to Shakespeare for his dress in a representation to be made before King James on his first visit to London. Shakespeare's name appears first on the list of the company, who were similarly supplied. James, on his accession, took the drama under his special patronage, and by a warrant, dated 17th May, 1603, he authorised Shakespeare's company, under the title of "The King's Players," to exercise their "arte and faculty" throughout his dominions. Shakespeare, in Macbeth, acknowledged this patronage, and is said to have delighted James by describing the long line of Scottish kings, who would at last

"The twofold balls and treble sceptre carry."

It is remarkable that the first proclamation of James closed the theatres on Sunday, on which day they had been accustomed to be open. This was only a sop for the time to the religious public, for we know, from the entries in the "Accounts of the Revels," that on Sunday, 4th November, 1604, the Merry Wives of Windsor was played before the King. This is quite in keeping with the "Book of Sports" which he afterwards forced on the community
Alonso, King of Naples.
Sebastian, his Brother.
Prospero, the rightful Duke of Milan.
Antonio, his Brother, the usurping Duke of Milan.
Ferdinand, Son to the King of Naples.
Gonzalo, the honest old Counsellor of Naples.
Adrian, Francisco.
Caliban, a savage and deformed Slave.
Trinculo, a Jester.

Persons Represented.

Act First.

Scene.—The Sea with a Ship; afterwards an uninhabited Island.

A tempestuous noise of Thunder and Lightning heard.

Enter a Ship-master and a Boatswain.

Mast. Boatswain!

Boats. Here, Master: what cheer?

Mast. Good, speak to 'th' mariners: fall to't rarely, or we run ourselves aground: bestir, bestir.

Enter Mariners.

Boats. Heigh, my hearts! cheerly, cheerly, my hearts! yare, yare. Take in the top-sail; tend to 'th' Master's whistle.—Blow, till thou burst thy wind, if room enough!

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Ferdinand, Gonzalo, and Others.

Alon. Good Boatswain, have care. Where's the Master? Play the men.

Boats. I pray now, keep below.

Ant. Where is the Master, Boatswain?

Mast. Do you not hear him? You mar our labour. Keep your cabins; you do assist the storm.

Gon. Nay, good, be patient.

Boats. When the sea is. Hence! What care these roarers for the name of king? To cabin: silence! trouble us not.

Gon. Good, yet remember whom thou hast aboard.

Boats. None that I more love than myself. You are a Counsellor: if you can command these elements to silence, and work the peace of the present, we will not hand a rope more. Use your authority: if you cannot, give thanks you have liv'd so long, and make yourself ready in your cabin for the mischance of the hour, if it so hap.

Cal. Nimbly.

[Exeunt.

—Cheerly, good hearts!—Out of our way, I say! [Exit.

Gon. I have great comfort from this fellow: methinks he hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallows. Stand fast, good Fate, to his hanging! make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our doth little advantage! If he be not born to be hang'd, our case is miserable. [Exeunt.

Enter Boatswain.

Boats. Down with the top-mast: yare, lower, lower. Bring her to: try with main-course. [A cry within.] A plague upon this howling! they are louder than the weather, or our office.

Enter Sebastian, Antonio, and Gonzalo.

Yet again! what do you hear? Shall we give o'er, and drown? Have you a mind to sink? Seb. A plague o' your throat, you bawling, blasphemous, incharitable dog!

Boats. Work you, then.

Ant. Hang, cur, hang! You insolent noise-maker, we are less afraid to be drown'd than thou art.

Gon. I'll warrant him for drowning; though the ship were no stronger than a nutshell.

Boats. Lay her a-hold, a-hold! Set her two courses. Off to sea again: lay her off.

Enter Mariners, wet.

Mnr. All lost! to prayers, to prayers! all lost! [Exeunt.

Boats. What! must our mouths be cold?

Gon. The King and Prince at prayers! let's assist them, for our case is theirs.

Seb. I'm out of patience.

Ant. We are merely cheated of our lives by drunkards.—

1 Entirely.
This wide-clapp’d rascal,—would thou might’st
The washing of ten tides! [lie drowning, Gon.
He’ll be hanged yet,
Though every drop of water swear against it,
And gape at wid’st to glut him.
[‘A confused noise within.’] Mercy on us!—
We split, we split!—Farewell, my wife and children!—Farewell, brother!—We split, we split, we split!—

Ant. Let’s all sink wi’ th’ King. [Exit.
Seb. Let’s take leave of him. [Exit.
Gon. Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea for an acre of barren ground; long heath, brown furse, anything. The wils above be done! but I would fain die a dry death. [Exit.

SCENE II.

THE ISLAND: BEFORE THE CELL OF PROSPERO.

Enter Prospero and Miranda.

M. If by your art, my dearest father, you have Put the wild waters in this roar, allay them.
The sky, it seems, would pour down stinking pitch,
But that the sea, mounting to th’ welkin’s cheek,
Dashes the fire out! O! I have suffered
With those that I saw suffer; a brave vessel,
Who had, no doubt, some noble creature in her,
Dash’d all to pieces. O! the cry did knock Against my very heart. Poor souls, they perish’d.
Had I been any god of power, I would
Have sunk the sea within the earth or e’er
It should the good ship so have swallowed, and
The freighting souls within her.

Pro. Be collected:
No more amazement. Tell your piteous heart,
There’s no harm done.

Mira. O, woe the day!

Pro. No harm.

I have done nothing but in care of thee,
(Of thee, my dear one! thee, my daughter!) who Art ignorant of what thou art, naught knowing
Of whence I am; nor that I am more better
Than Prospero, master of a full poor cell,
And thy no greater father.

Mira. More to know
Did never meddle with my thoughts.

Pro. ‘Tis time
I should inform thee farther. Lend thy hand,
And pluck my magic garment from me.—So:

[‘Lays down his mantle.’

Lie there, my art.—Wipe thou thine eyes;
have comfort.
The direful spectacle of the wrack, which touch’d
The very virtue of compassion in thee,
I have with such provision in mine art
So safely order’d, that there is no soul—
No, not so much perdition as an hair,
Betid to any creature in the vessel
Which thou heard’st cry, which thou saw’st sink.

Sit down:

For thou must now know farther.

Mira. You have often
Begun to tell me what I am: but stopp’d,
And left me to a bootless inquisition,
Concluding,—‘Stay, not yet.’

Pro. The hour’s now come;
The very minute bids thee ope thine ear:

Obey, and be attentive. Canst thou remember
A time before we came into this cell?
I do not think thou canst; for then thou wast
Out three years old. [not

Mira. Certainly, sir, I can.

Pro. By what? by any other house, or person?
Of any thing the image tell me, that
Hath kept with thy remembrance.

Mira. Tis far off,
And rather like a dream than an assurance
That my remembrance warrants. Had I not Four or five women once, that tended me?

Pro. Thou hadst, and more, Miranda. But how is it,
That this lives in thy mind? What seest thou else
In the dark backward and abysm of time?
If thou remember’st aught, ere thou cam’st here,
How thou cam’st here, thou may’st.

Mira. But that I do not.

Pro. Twelve years since, Miranda, twelve years
Thy father was the Duke of Milan, and [since,
A prince of power.

Mira. Sir, are not you my father?

Pro. Thy mother was a piece of virtue, and
She said thou wast my daughter; and thy father
Was Duke of Milan, and his only heir
And Princess, no worse issued.

Mira. O, the heavens!

What foul play had we, that we came from
Or blessed was’t, we did? [thence!

Pro. Both, both, my girl;
By foul play, as thou say’st, we were hea’d
But blessedly holp hither.

Mira. O! my heart bleeds
To think of th’ teen1 that I have turned you to,
Which is from my remembrance. Please you, farther.

P. My brother, and thy uncle, called Antonio,—
I pray thee, mark me,—that a brother should
Be so peridious!—he whom, next thyself,
Of all the world I lov’d, and to him put
The manage of my state; as, at that time,
Through all the signories it was the first,
(And Prospero the prime Duke, being so reputed
In dignity) and, for the liberal arts,
Without a parallel: those being all my study,
The government I cast upon my brother.
And to my State grew stranger, being transported
And rapt in secret studies. Thy false uncle—
Dost thou attend me?

Mira. Sir, most heedfully.

Pro. Being once perfected how to grant suits,
How to deny them, whom to advance, and whom
To trash4 for over-topping, new created [em,
The creatures that were mine, I say, or chang’d
Or else new form’d [em; having both the key
Of officer and office, set all hearts I th’ State
To what tune pleas’d his ear, that now he was
The ivy, which had hid my princely trunk,
And suck’d my verdure out on’t. — Thou attend’st
I pray thee, mark me. [not.

Mira. O good sir! I do.

Pro. I thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicate
To closeness, and the bettering of my mind
With that, which but by being so retir’d
O’er-prized all popular rate, in my false brother
Awak’d an evil nature; and my trust,

1. Sorrow.
2. Correct.

SHAKESPEARE’S DRAMATIC WORKS.

ACT I.
Like a good parent, did beget of him
A falsehood, in its contrary as great
As my trust was; which had, indeed, no limit,
A confidence sans bound. He, being thus lorded,
Not only with what my revenue yielded,
But what my power might else exact,—like one,
Who having, unto truth, by telling of it,
Made such a sinner of his memory,
To credit his own lie—he did believe
He was indeed the Duke; out o' th' substitution,
And executing th' outward face of royalty,
With all prerogative:—hence his ambition
Growing,—Dost thou hear?

Mira. Your tale, sir, would cure deafness.

Pro. To have no screen between this part he
And him he play'd it for, he needs will be[play'd,
Absolute Milan. Me, poor man!—my library
Was dukedom large enough. Of temporal royal-
He thinks me now incapable; confederates [ties
(Say he was for) wi' th' King of Naples—
To give him annual tribute, do him homage,
Subject his coronet to his crown, and bend
The dukedom, yet unbow'd, (alas, poor Milan!)
To most ignoble stooping.

Mira. O the heavens!

Pro. Mark his condition, and th' event; then
If this might be a brother. [tell me,
Mira. I should sin
To think but nobly of my grandmother.

Pro. Now the condition,
This King of Naples, being an enemy
To me inveterate, hearkens my brother's suit;
Which was, that he, in lieu o' th' premises
Of homage, and I know not how much tribute,
Should presently extirpate me and mine
Out of the dukedom, and confer fair Milan,
With all the honours, on my brother. Whereon,
A treacherous army levied, one midnight,
Fated to th' purpose, did Antonio open
The gates of Milan; and 'th' dead of darkness
The ministers for the purpose hurried thence
Me, and thy crying self.

Mira. Alack, for pity! I,
Not remembr'ing how I cried out then,
Will cry it o'er again: it is a hint,
That wrings mine eyes to 't.

Pro. Hear a little farther,
And then I'll bring thee to the present business
Which now's upon's; without which the which Were most impertinent. [story

Mira. Wherefore did they not
That hour destroy us?

Pro. Well demanded, wench:
My tale provokes that question. Dear, they durst not,
(So dear the love my people bore me) nor set
A mark so bloody on the business: but
With colours fairer painted their foul ends.
In few, they hurried us aboard a bark,
Bore us some leagues to sea, where they prepared
A rotten carcass of a boat, not rigg'd,
—Nor tackle, sail, nor mast; the very rats
Instinctively have quit it. There they hoist us,
To cry to th' sea that roar'd to us, to sigh
To th' winds, whose pity, sighing back again,
Did us but loving wrong.

Mira. Alack! what trouble
Was I then to you!

Pro. O! a cherubim
Thou wast, that did preserve me. Thou didst
Infused with a fortitude from heaven, [smile,
When I have deck'd the sea with drops full salt,
Under my burthen groan'd; which rais'd in me
An undergoing stomach, 1 to bear up Against what should ensue.

Mira. How came we ashore?

Pro. By Providence divine.

Some food we had, and some fresh water, that
A noble Neapolitan, Gonzalo,
Out of his charity (who being then appointed Master of this design), did give us, with Rich garments, linens, stuffs, and necessaries, Which since have steaded much. So, of his gentleness,
Knowing I lov'd my books, he furnish'd me,
From mine own library, with volumes that
I prize above my dukedom.

Mira. Would I might
But ever see that man!

Pro. Now I arise:— [Puts on his robe.

Sit still, and hear the last of our sea-sorrow.
Here in this island we arriv'd; and here
Have I, thy schoolmaster, made thee more profit
Than other princes can, that have more time
For vainer hours, and tutors not so careful.

Mira. Heavens thank you for't! And now, I pray you, sir,
(For still 'tis beating in my mind) your reason
For raising this sea-storm?

Pro. Know thus far forth.
By accident most strange, bountiful Fortune
(Now my dear lady) hath mine enemies
Brought to this shore; and by my presence
I find my zenith doth depend upon
A most auspicious star, whose influence
If now I court not, but omit, my fortunes
Will ever after droop. Here cease more questions,
Thou art inclin'd to sleep; 'tis a good dulness,
And give it way:—I know thou canst not choose.—

[Miranda sleeps.

Come away, servant, come! I am ready now;
Approach, my Ariel: come.

Enter Ariel.

Ariel. All hail, great master; grave sir, hail. I
To answer thy best pleasure; be't to fly, I come
To swim, to dive into the fire, to ride
On the curl'd clouds: to thy strong bidding task
Ariel, and all his quality.

Pro. Hast thou, spirit,
Perform'd to point 2 the tempest that I bade
Ari. To every article. [thee?
I boarded the King's ship; now on the beak,
Now in the waist, the deck, in every cabin,
I flamm'd amazement. Sometimes, I'd divide,
And burn in many places: on the topmast,
The yards and bowsprit, would I flame distinctly,
Then meet and join. Jove's lightnings, the precursors
O' th' dreadful thunder-claps, more momentarily
And sight-outrunning were not: the fire and

Cracks
Of sulphurous roaring the most mighty Neptune
Seem to besiege, and make his bold waves
Yea, his dread trident shake. [trouble,

SHAKESPEARE'S DRAMATIC WORKS.

ACT I.

Pro. My brave spirit! Who was so firm, so constant, that this coil
Would not infect his reason?

Ari. Not a soul
But felt a fever of the mad, and play'd
Some tricks of desperation. All, but mariners,
Plung'd in the foaming brine, and quit the vessel
Then all a-fire with hate, the King's son, Ferdinand,
With hair up-staring (then like reeds, not hair)
Was the first man that leap'd.

Pro. Why, that's my spirit!
But was not this nigh shore?

Ari. Close by, my master.

Pro. But are they, Ariel, safe?

Ari. Not a hair perish'd:
On their sustaining garments not a blemish,
But fresher than before; and, as thou bad'st me,
In troops I have dispers'd them 'bouts the isle.
The King's son have I landed by himself,
Whom I left cooling on the air with sighs
In an odd angle of the isle, and sitting
His arms in this sad knot.

Pro. Of the King's ship
The mariners, say, how thou hast dispos'd,
And all the rest of' th' fleet?

Ari. Safely in harbour
Is the King's ship: in the deep nook, where once
Thou call'dst me up at midnight to fetch dew
From the still-vex'd Bermoothes, there she's
The mariners all under hatches stow'd:
Who, with a charm join'd to theirs suffer'd labour,
I have left asleep: and for the rest of' th' fleet
Which I dispers'd, they all have met again,
And are upon the Mediterranean flote,
Bound sadly home for Naples,
Supposing that they saw the King's ship break'd,
And his great person perish.

Pro. Ariel, thy charge
Exactly is perform'd; but there's more work.
What is the time of' th' day?

Ari. Past the mid season.

Pro. At least two glasses. The time 'twixt six and now
Must by us both be spent most preciously.

Ari. Is there more toil? Since thou dost
Give me pains,
Let me remember thee what thou hast promis'd,
Which is not yet perform'd me.

Pro. How now! moody?
What is 't thou canst demand?

Ari. My liberty.

Pro. Before the time be out? no more.

Ari. I pr'ythee
Remember, I have done thee worthy service;
Told thee no lies, made thee no mistakes, serv'd
Without or grudge, or grumblings. Thou diest
To bate me a full year. (promise

Pro. Dost thou forget
From what a torment I did free thee?

Ari. No.

Pro. Thou dost; and think'st it much, to tread
Of the salt deep,
Of the ooze
To run upon the sharp wind of the north,
To do me business in the veins o' th' earth,
When it is bak'd with frost.

Ari. I do not, sir. [forgot

Pro. Thou liest, malignant thing! Hast thou
1 Bustr.[Bermudas. 3 Wave.

The foul witch Sycorax, who, with age and envy,
Was grown into a hoop? hast thou forgot her?

Ari. No, sir.

Pro. Thou hast. Where was she born, speak

Ari. Sir, in Argier. [tell me.

Pro. O! was she so? I must,
Once in a month, recount what thou hast been.
Which thou forget'st. This vile witch, Sycorax.
For mischiefs manifold, and sorceries terrible
To enter human hearing, from Argier, [did, Thou know'st, was banish'd: for one thing she
They would not take her life. Is not this true?

Ari. Ay, sir. [with child,

Pro. This blue-eyed hag was hither brought
And here was left by th'sailors. Thou, my slave
As thou report'st thyself, vast then her servant;
And, for thou wast a spirit too delicate
To act her earthly and abhor'd commands,
Refusing her grand 'ests, she did confine thee,
By help of her more potent ministers,
And in her most unmitigable rage,
Into a cloven pine; within which rift
In prison'd, thou didst painfully remain
A dozen years; within which space she died,
And left thee there, where thou didst first thy groans [Island
As fast as mill-wheels strike. Then was this (Save for the son that she did litter here,
-A freck'd whelp, bag-born) not honour'd with
A human shape.

Ari. Yes; Caliban, her son.

Pro. Dull thing, I say so; he, that Caliban,
Whom now I keep in service. Thou best know'st
What torment I did find thee in: thy groans
Did make wolves howl, and penetrate the breasts
Of ever-angry bears. This Sycorax
Could not again undo: it was mine art,
When I arriv'd and heard thee, that made gape
The pine, and let thee out.

Ari. I thank thee, master.

Pro. If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an oak,
And peg thee in his knotty entrails, till
Thou hast howl'd away twelve winters.

Ari. Pardon, master:
I will be correspondent to command,
And do my spriting gently.

Pro. Do so, and after two days
I will discharge thee.

Ari. That's my noble master!

Pro. What shall I do? say what—what shall I do?

Ari. Go, make thyself like a nymph o' th' sea:
be subject
To no sight but thine and mine; invisible
To every eyeball else. Go, take this shape,
And hither come in: go hence, with diligence.

Exit Ariel.

Mira. The strangeness of your story put Heaviness in me.

Pro. Shake it off. Come on:
We'll visit Caliban, my slave, who never Yields us kind answer.

Mira. "Tis a villain, sir,
I do not love to look on

Pro. But, as 'tis,
We cannot miss him: he does make our fire,
1 Algiers.
Fetch us in fuel; and be quick, thou art best, To answer other business. Shrug'st thou, malice? If thou neglect'st, or dost unwillingly What I command, I'll rack thee with old cramps, Fill all thy bones with aches, make thee roar, That beasts shall tremble at thy din.

Pro. No, 'tis pray thee!—
I must obey. [Aside.] His art is of such pow'r, It would control my dam's god, Setebos, And make a vassal of him.

Pro. So, slave; hence!
[Exit Caliban.

Enter Ariel invisible, playing and singing, Ferdinand following him.

ARIEL'S SONG.

Come unto these yellow sands, And then take hands: Court'se'd when you have, and kiss'd— [The wild waves whist},— Foot it fealty here and there; And, sweet sprites, the burthen bear.
Hark, hark!
[Burthen.] Bowgh-wogh. [Dispersedly.]

The watch-dogs bark:
Bogh-wogh.

ARI. Hark, hark! I hear
The strain of strutting chauticledre
Cry, Cock-a-doodle-doo.

FER. Where should this music be? If' th' air, Or' th' earth?—
It sounds no more;—and sure, it waits upon Some god o' th' island. Sitting on a bank, Weeping again the King my father's wrack, This music crept by me upon the waters, Allaying both their fury and my passion, With its sweet air: thence I have follow'd it, Or it hath drawn me rather;—but 'tis gone. —
No, it begins again.

ARIEL SINGS.

Full fudom five thy father lies; Of his bones are coral made; Those are pearls that were his eyes: Nothing of him that doth fade, But doth suffer a sea-change Into something rich and strange, Sea-nymphs howly ring his knell:
[Burthen:] Ding-dong.

Hark! now I hear them,—ding-dong, bell.

FER. The ditty does remember my drown'd father.—
This is no mortal business, nor no sound That the earth owes.—I hear it now above me.

Pro. The fringed curtains of thine eye advance And say, what thou seest yond?

MIRA. What is 't? a spirit? See how it looks about! Believe me, sir, It carries a brave form:—but 'tis a spirit.

Pro. No, wench: it eats and sleeps, and hath such senses seest As we have,—such. This gallant which thou Was in the wrack; and but he's something stain'd [call him With grief, that's beauty's canker, thou might'st A goodly person. He hath lost his fellows, And strays about to find 'em.

MIRA. I might call him
A thing divine; for nothing natural
I ever saw so noble.

Pro. [Aside.] It goes on, I see,
As my soul prompts it.—Spirit, fine spirit! I'll Within two days from this, [free thee.

Pro. Fer. Most sure, the goddess
On whom these airs attend!—Vouchsafe, my prayer
May know if you remain upon this island,
And that you will some good instruction give,
How I may bear me here: my prime request,
Which I do last pronounce, is, O you wonder!
If you be maid, or no!

Mira.

No wonder, sir;
Fer. My language! heavens!—
I am the best of them that speak this speech,
Were I but where 'tis spoken.

Pro. [Aside.] The Duke of Milan, [thee,
And his more braver daughter, could control
If now't were fit to do't. At the first sight
They have chang'd eyes—delicate Ariel,
I'll set thee free for this!—[To him.] A word,
good sir!

I fear you have done yourself some wrong—a
M. Why speaks my father so ungently? This Is the third man that e'er I saw; the first
That e'er I sigh'd for. Pity move my father
To be inclin'd my way!

Fer. O! if a virgin,
And your affection not gone forth, I'll make you
The Queen of Naples.

Pro. [Aside.] They are both in either's pow'r; but
This swift business
I must uneasy make, lest too light winning
Make the prize light.—[To him.] One word more: I charge thee,
That thou attend me. Then dost here usurp
The name thou ow'st not; and hast put thyself
Upon this island as a spy, to win it
From me, the lord on't.

Fer. No, as I am a man.

Mira. There's nothing ill can dwell in such a
If the ill spirit have so fair a house, [temple
Good things will strive to dwell with't.

Pro. [To Fer.] Follow me.—

Speak not for you him: he's a traitor.—Come.
I'll manacle thy neck and feet together;
Sea-water shalt thou drink! thy food shall be
The fresh-brook muscles, wither'd roots, and Wherein the acorn cradled. Follow, [husks,
Fer. No;
I will resist such entertainlument, till
Mine enemy has more power.

[He draws, and is charmed from moving.] 1 Confute.

Mira. O, dear father!
Make not too rash a trial of him, for
He's gentle, and not fearful.

Pro. What! I say:
My foot my tutor?—Put thy sword up, traitor:
Who mak'st a show, but dar'st not strike, thy conscience
Is so possess'd with guilt: come from thy ward,
For I can here disarm thee with this stick,
And make thy weapon drop.

Mira. Beseech you, father!

Pro. Hence! hang not on my garments.

Mira. Sir, have pity:
I'll be his surety.

Pro. Silence! one word more Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee. What?
An advocate for an impostor? Hush! [he.
Thou think'st there are no more such shapes as Having seen but him and Caliban: foolish
To th' most of men this is a Caliban, [wench!
And they to him are angels.

Mira. My affections
Are then most humble: I have no ambition
To see a goodlier man.

Pro. [To Fer.] Come on; obey;
Thy nerves are in their infancy again,
And have no vigour in them.

Fer. So they are:
My spirits, as in a dream, are all bound up,
My father's loss, the weakness which I feel,
The wrack of all my friends, nor this man's threats,
To whom I am subdu'd, are but light to me,
Might I but through my prison once a day
Behold this maid. All corners else o' th' earth
Let liberty make use of: space enough
Have I in such a prison.

Pro. [Aside.] It works.
(Alternately to Fer. and Mira., and to Art.)
Come on.—

Thou hast done well, fine Ariel!—

Follow me. —Hark, what thou else shalt do me.

Mira. De of comfort.
My father's of a better nature, sir,
Than he appears by speech: this is unwonted,
Which now came from him.

Pro. [To Ariel.] Thou shalt be as free
As mountain winds: but then exactly do
All points of my command.

Ari. To th' syllable.

Pro. Come, follow.—Speak not for him.

[Exeunt.

Act Second.

SCENE I.—ANOTHER PART OF THE ISLAND.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo,
Adriano, Francisca, and Others.

Gon. Beseech you, sir; be merry: you have (So have we all) of joy; for our escape [cause is much beyond our loss. Our hurt of woe
Is common: every day, some sailor's wife,
The masters of some merchant, and the merchant,
Have just our theme of woe; but for the miracle,—
I mean our preservation,—few in millions
Can speak like us: then, wisely, good sir, weigh
Our sorrow with our comfort.

1 Formidable.
Aton. Pr'ythee, peace.
Seb. He receives comfort like cold porridge.
Ant. The visitor will not give him o'er so.
Seb. Look; he's winding up the watch of his wit; and by it will strike.

Gen. Sir,—
Seb. One:—tell.
Gen. When every grief is entertain'd that's Comes to th' entertainer—[offered, A dollar.
Seb. Doliour comes to him, indeed; you have spoken truer than you purpos'd.
Seb. You have taken it wiselier than I meant
Gen. Therefore, my lord,—[you should.
Ant. Fie, what a spendthrift is he of his Aton. I pry'thee, spare. [tongue!
Gen. Well, I have done. But yet—
Seb. He will be talking.
Ant. Which of them, he or Adrian, for a good wager, first begins to crow?
Seb. The old cock.
Ant. The cockrel.
Seb. Done. The wager?
Ant. A laughter.
Seb. A match.
Ant. Though this island seem to be desert,—
Seb. Ha, ha, ha!
Seb. So, you're paid.
Ant. Uninhabitable, and almost inacces.
Seb. Yet—[sible,
Ant. Yet—
Seb. He could not miss'it.
Ant. The air breathes upon us here most sweetly.
Gen. Here is every thing advantageous to life.
Ant. True; save means to live.
Seb. Of that there's none, or little.
Gen. How rush! and lusty the grass looks! how
Ant. The ground, indeed, is tawny. [green!
Seb. With an eye of green in 't.
Ant. He misses not much.
Seb. No: herdloth but mistake the truth totally.
Gen. But the rarity of it is, which is indeed almost beyond credit—
Seb. As many vouch'd rarities are.
Gen.—that our garments, being, as they were, drench'd in the sea, bold, notwithstanding, their freshness and glosses; being rather new dy'd than stain'd with salt water.
Ant. If but one of his pockets could speak, would it not say, he lies?
Seb. Ay, or very falsely pocket up his report.
Gen. Methinks, our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Afric, at the marriage of the King's fair daughter Claribel to the King of Tunis.
Seb. 'Twas a sweet marriage; and we prosper
well in our return.
Ant. Tunis was never græd before with such a paragon to their Queen.
Gen. Not since widow Dido's time.
Ant. Widow! How came that widow in?
Seb. Widow Dido!
Seb. What if he had said, widower Eneas too!
good lord, how you take it.
A. Widow Dido, said you? you make me study of that: she was of Carthage, not of Tunis.

1 Luscious. 2 Tint.

Gen. This Tunis, sir, was Carthage.
Ant. Carthage?
Gen. I assure you, Carthage.
Ant. His word is more than the miraculous harp.
Gen. He hath rais'd the wall, and houses too.
Ant. What impossible matter will he make easy next?
Seb. I think he will carry this island home in his pocket, and give it his son for an apple.
Ant. And sowing the kernels of it in the sea,
bring forth more islands.
Gen. Ay?
Ant. Why, in good time.
Gen. Sir, we were talking, that our garments seem now as fresh as when we were at Tunis at the marriage of your daughter, who is now
Queen.
Ant. And the rarest that e'er came there.
Seb. Bate, I beseech you, widow Dido.
Ant. O! widow Dido; ay, widow Dido.
Gen. Is not, sir, my doubt as fresh as the first day I wore it?—I mean, in a sort.
Ant. That sort was well fish'd for.
Gen. When I wore it at your daughter's marriage?
A. You cram these words into mine ears, against The stomach of my sense. Would I had never Married my daughter there! for, coming thence,
My son is lost; and, in my rate, she, too,
Who is so far from Italy remot'd,
I ne'er again shall see her. O thou, mine heir
Of Naples and of Milan! what strange fish
Hath made his meal on thee?
Fran. Sir, he may live.
I saw him beat the surges under him,
And ride upon their backs: he trod the water,
Whose enmity he flung aside, and breasted
The surges most swoln that met him: his bold head
'Bove the contentious waves he kept, and cur'd Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke.
To th' shore, that o'er his wave-worn basis bow'd,
As stooping to relieve him. I not doubt,
He came alive to land.
Alon. No, no; he's gone.
Seb. Sir, you may thank yourself for this great loss.
That would not bless our Europe with your
But rather lose her to an African; [daughter,
Where she, at least, is banish'd from your eye,
Who hath cause to wet the grief on 't.
Alon. Pr'ythee, peace.
Seb. You were kneel'd to, and importun'd other-
By all of us; and the fair soul herself [wise
Weight'd, between loathness and obedience; at Which end o' th' beam she'd bow. We have lost your son,
I fear, for ever; Milan and Naples have
More widows in them, of this business making,
Than we bring men to comfort them: the fault's
Your own.
Alon. So is the dearst o' th' loss.
Gen. My lord Sebastian,
The truth you speak doth lack some gentleness,
And time to speak it in: you rub the sore,
When you should bring the plaster.
Seb. Very well.
Ant. And most chirurgeonly.
Shakespear's

ACT II.

Enter Ariel, playing solemn Music.

Seb. We would so, and then go a bat-fowling.

Ant. Nay, good my lord, be not angry.

Seb. I know you; I will not adventure my discretion so weakly. Will you laugh me asleep? for I am very heavy.

Ant. Go sleep, and hear us.

Seb. Please you, sir, do not omit the heavy offer of it: It seldom visits sorrow: when it doth, It is a comforter.

Ant. We two, my lord, Will guard your person while you take your rest, And watch your safety.

Ariel. Thank you.—Wondrous heavy.

Seb. What a strange drowsiness possesses

Ant. It is the quality o' th' climate. [them!]

Seb. Why

Doth it not then, when the eyelids sink? I find not Myself disposed to sleep.

Ant. Nor I: my spirits are nimble. They fell together all as by consent; [might, They dropp'd as by a thunder-stroke. What Worthy Sebastian? — O ! what might? — No And yet, methinks, I see it in thy face, [more:— What thou shouldst be. Th' occasion speaks thee, and

My strong imagination sees a crown

Dropping upon thy head.

Seb. What! art thou waking?

Ant. Do you not hear me speak?

Seb. I do; and surely, It is a sleepy language, and thou speak'st Out of thy sleep. What is it thou didst say? This is a strange repose, to be asleep With eyes wide open; standing, speaking, mov-And yet so fast asleep. [ing,

Ant. Noble Sebastian, Thou let'st thy fortunes sleep—dierather; wink'st Whiles thou are waking.

Seb. Thou dost sense distinctly:

There's meaning in thy snores.

Ant. I am more serious than my custom: you Must be so too, if heed me; which to do, Trouble thee o'er.

Seb. Well; I am standing water.

Ant. I'll teach you how to flow.

Seb. Do so: to ebb, Hereditary sloth instructs me.

Ant. O !

If you but knew, how you the purpose cherish, Whiles thou mock'st it! bow, in stripping it, You more invest it! Ebb! bug! men, indeed, Most often do so near the bottom run By their own fear or sloth.

Ant. Pr'ythee, say on, The setting of thine eye and cheek, proclaim A matter from thee, and a birth, indeed, Which throes thee much to yield.

Ant. Thus, sir,

Although this lord of weak remembrance (this, Who shall be of as little memory, When he is earth'd!) hath here almost persuaded (For he's a spirit of persuasion only) The King, his son's alive, 'tis as impossible That he's undrown'd, as he that sleeps here, I have no hope [swims.

That he's undrown'd.

Ant. O ! out of that no hope, What great hope have you? No hope, that way, is Another way so high a hope, that even Ambition cannot pierce a wink beyond, But doubts discovery there. Will you grant, That Ferdinand is drown'd? [with me,

Seb. He's gone.

Ant. Then, tell me,

Who's the next heir of Naples?

Seb. Claribel.

Ant. She that is Queen of Tunis; she that Ten leagues beyond man's life; she that from Naples.
Can have no note, unless the sun were post,
(The man i' th' moon's too slow) till new-born chins
Be rough and razorable; she, from whom
We all were sea-swallowed, though some cast
And by that destiny to perform an act, (again)
Whereof what's past is prologue, what to come;
If yours and my discharge.

Seb. What stuff is this! How say you?
’Tis true, my brother’s daughter Queen of Tunis;
So is she heir of Naples; ’twixt which regions
There is some space.

Ant. A space who’s every cubit
Seems to cry out, “How shall that Claribel
Measure us back to Naples? Keep in Tunis,
And let Sebastian wake!”—Say, this were death
That now hath seized them; why, they were no

[Here Naples
Than now they are. There be, that can rule
As well as he that sleeps; lords that can prate
As amply, and unnecessarily,
As this Gonzalo: I myself could make
A chough! of as deep chat. O, that you bore
The mind that I do! what a sleep were this
For your advancement! Do you understand me?
Seb. Methinks I do.

Ant. And how does your content
Tender your own good fortune?
Seb. I remember, You did supplant your brother Prospero.

Ant. True;
And look how well my garments sit upon me;
Much fatter than before. My brother’s servants
Were then my fellows, now they are my men.
Seb. But for your conscience—

Ant. Ay, sir; where lies that? if ’twere a kybe, 2
’Twould put me to my slipper; but I feel not
This deity in my bosom. Twenty consciences,
That stand ’twixt me and Milan, candied be they,
And melt, ere theymolest! Here lies your brother,
No better than the earth he lies upon, [dead,
If he were that which now he’s like,—that’s Whom I, with this obedient three—three inches of it—
Can lay to bed for ever; whereas you, doing thus,
To the perpetual wink for aye might put
This ancient morsel, this Sir Prudence, who Should not upbraid our course: for all the rest,
They’ll take suggestion as a cat laps milk;
They’ll tell the clock to any business that
We say befits the hour.

Seb. Thy case, dear friend,
Shall be my precedent: as thou go’st Milan,
I’ll come by Naples. Draw thy sword: one stroke
Shall free thee from the tribute which thou
And the King shall love thee. [pay’st,

Ant. Draw together;
And when I rear my hand, do you the like,
To fall it on Gonzalo.

Seb. O! but one word.

[They converse apart.

Enter Ariel, with Music, Invisible.

A. My master through his art foresees the danger
That you, his friend, are in; and sends me forth
(For else his project dies) to keep them living.

[Enters in Gonzalo’s ear.

1 A kind of jackdaw. 2 Chopped.

While you here do snoring lie,
Open-ey’d conspiracy
His time doth take.
If of life you keep a care,
Shake off slumber, and beware:
Awake! Awake!

Ant. Then let us both be sudden.

Gon. Now, good angels preserve the King!

[They wake.

Alon. Why, how now, ho! awake! Why are Wherefore this ghastly looking! [you draw?

Gon. What’s the matter?

Seb. Whiles we stood here securing your repose,
Even now, we heard a hollow burst of bellowing
Like bulls, or rather lions: did not wake you?
It struck mine ear most terribly.

Alon. I heard nothing.

Ant. O! ’twas a din to fright a monster’s ear,
To make an earthquake: sure, it was the roar
Of a whole herd of lions.

Alon. Heard you this, Gonzalo?

Gon. Upon mine honour, sir, I heard a humming—

[Search.

Gon. Heavens keep him from these beasts,
For he is, sure, I’ th’ island.

Alon. Lead away. [Exit.

Ari. Prospero, my lord, shall know what I have done;
So, King, go safely on to seek thy son. [Exit.

SCENE II.—ANOTHER PART OF THE ISLAND.

Enter Caliban, with a barthen of wood.

A noise of Thunder heard.

Col. All the infections that the sun sucks up
From bogs, fens, flats, on Prosper fall, and make him
By inch-meal a disease! His spirits hear him,
And yet I needs must curse; but they’ll nor pinch,
Fright new with urchin shows, pitch me i’ th’ mine,
Nor lead me, like a firebrand, in the dark
Out of my way, unless he bid ’em. But
For every trifle are they set upon me: [at me,
Sometimes like apes, that move 2 and chatter
And after, bite me; then like hedgehogs, which Lie tumbling in my barefoot way, and mount
Their prickes at my footfall: sometime am I
All wound with adders, who with cloven tongues,
Do hiss me into madness.—Lo, now! lo!

Enter Trinculo.

Here comes a spirit of his, and to torment me
For bringing wood in slowly. I’ll fall flat;
Perchance he will not mind me.

Trin. Here’s neither bush nor shrub to bear off any weather at all, and another storm brewing: I hear it sing ’t’ wind. Yond’ same black cloud, yond’ huge one, looks like a foul bumbard 3 that would shed his liquor. If it should thunder,

1 Fairy. 2 Make mouths. 3 Leather jack.
as it did before, I know not where to hide my head: yon' same cloud cannot choose but fail by pallufils.—What have we here? a man or a fish? dead or alive? A fish: he smiles like a fish: a very ancient and fish-like smell; a kind of, not of the newest, Poor-John. A strange fish! Were I in England now (as once I was), and had but this fish painted, not a holiday fool there but would give a piece of silver; there would this monster make a man: any strange beast there makes a man. When they will not give a doit to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian. Leg'd like a man! and his fins like arms! Warm, o' my troth! I do now let loose my opinion—hold it no longer,—this is no fish, but an islander, that hath lately suffered by a thunder-bolt. [Thunder.] Alas! the storm is come again: my best way is to creep under his gaberden; there is no other shelter hereabout. Misery acquaints a man with strange bedfellows. I will here shroud, till the dregs of the storm be past.

Enter Stephano, singing.

Ste. I shall no more to sea, to sea, Here shall I die ashore.—

This is a very scurvy tune to sing at a man's funeral.

Well, here's my comfort. [Drinks.]
The master, the swabber, the boatswain, and I, The gunner and his mate, Lov'd Mall, Meg, and Marston, and Margery, But none of us card'd for Kate: For she had a tongue with a tang, Would cry to a sailor, "Go hang:" Then, to sea, boys, and let her go hang.

This is a scurvy tune too; but here's my comfort. Col. Do not torment me: O! [Drinks.]

Ste. What's the matter? Have we devils here? Do you put tricks upon's with savages, and men of Inde? Ha! I have not'seaped drowning, to be afeard now of your four legs; for it hath been said, as proper a man as ever went on four legs cannot make him give ground; and it shall be said so again, while Stephano breathes at's nostrils.

Col. The spirit torments me: O! Ste. This is some monster of the isle, with four legs, who hath got, as I take it, an ague. Where the devil should he learn our language! I will give him some relief, if it be for that. If I can recover him, and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he's a present for any emperor that ever trod on neat's-leather.

Col. Do not torment me, pr'ythee! I'll bring my wood home faster.

Ste. He in his fit now, and does not talk after the wisest. He shall taste of my bottle: if he have never drunk wine afore, it will go near to remove his fit. If I can recover him, and keep him tame, I will not take too much for him; he shall pay for him that hath him, and that soundly.

Col. Thou dost me yet but little hurt; thou wilt anon, [upon thee. I know it by thy trembling: now Prosper works. Ste. Come on your ways: open your mouth; here is that which will give language to you, cat. Open your mouth: this will shake your shakings, I can tell you, and that soundly: you cannot tell who's your friend; open your chaps! again.

Trin. I should know that voice. It should be—but he is drown'd, and these are devils. O! defend me!—

Ste. Four legs, and two voices! a most delicate monster. If all the wine in my bottle will recover him, I will help his ague. Come,—'Amen! I will pour some in thy other mouth.

Trin. Stephano!

Ste. Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy! mercy! This is a devil, and no monster: I will leave him; I have no long spoon.

Trin. Stephano!—if thou beest Stephano, touch me, and speak to me, for I am Trinculo—be not afeard—thy good friend Trinculo.

Ste. If thou beest Trinculo, come forth: I'll pull thee by the lesser legs: if any be Trinculo's legs, these are they. Thou art very Trinculo, indeed! How canst thou to be the siege of this moon-calf?

Trin. I took him to be killed with a thunder-stroke.—But art thou not drown'd, Stephano? I hope now, thou art not drown'd. Is the storm over-blown? I hid me under the dead moon-calf's gaberden for fear of the storm. And art thou living, Stephano? O Stephano? two Neapolitans 'scap'd! Ste. P'rtythee, do not turn me about: my stomach is not constant. [sprites.]

Col. These be fine things, an if they be not That's a brave god, and bears celestial liquor: I will kneel to him.

Ste. How didst thou 'scape? How cam'st thou hither? Swear by this bottle how thou cam'st hither. I 'scape'd upon a butt of sack, which the sailors heaved o'erboard, by this bottle!—which I made of the bark of a tree with mine own hands, since I was cast ashore.

Col. I'll swear upon that bottle, to be thy true For the liquor is not earthly. [subject; Ste. Here: swear, then, how thou escap'st.

Trin. Swam ashore, man, like a duck. I can swim like a duck, I'll be sworn.

Ste. Here, kiss the book. Though thou canst swim like a duck, thou art made like a goose.

Trin. O Stephano! hast any more of this? Ste. The whole butt, man: my cellar is in a rock by th' sea-side, where my wine is hid. How now, moon-calf! how does thine ague?

Col. Hast thou not drop'd from heaven? Ste. Out o' th' moon, I do assure thee: I was the man i' th' moon, when time was, [thee: Col. I have seen thee in her, and I do adore My mistress show'd me thee, and thy dog, and thy bush.

Ste. Come, swear to that: kiss the book; I will furnish it anon with new contents: swear.

Trin. By this good light, this is a very shallow monster:—I 'scape'd of him?—a very weak monster. —The man i' th' moon!—a most poor credulous monster. —Well drawn, monster, in good sooth. [island; Col. I'll show thee every fertile inch o' th' And I will kiss thy foot. I'll swear myself thy subject.

THE TEMPEST.

21

Ste. Come on, then: down, and swear.

Trin. I shall laugh myself to death at this puppy-headed monster. A most scurvy monster: I could find in my heart to beat him,—

Ste. Come, kiss.

Trin.—But that the poor monster’s in drink.

An abominable monster! [thee berries; C. I’ll show thee the best springs; I’ll pluck I’ll fish for thee, and get thee wood enough. A plague upon the tyrant that I serve! I’ll bear him no more sticks, but follow thee, Thou wondrous man.

Trin. A most ridiculous monster,—to make a wonder of a poor drunkard! [grow; Cal. I pr’ythee, let me bring thee where crabs And I with my long nails will dig thee pig-nuts, Show thee a jay’s nest, and instruct thee how To snare the nimble marmozet. I’ll bring thee To clustering nimbos; and sometimes I’ll get thee [with me?

Young sea-nails! from the rock: Wilt thou go Ste. I pr’ythee now, lead the way, without any more talking.—Trinculo, the King and all our company else being d’worm’d, we will inherit here.—Here! beat my bottle. Fellow Trinculo, we’ll fill him, by and by, again.

Cal. [Sings drunkenly.] Farewell, master; farewell, farewell.

Tri. A howling monster; a drunken monster.

Cal. No more dams I’ll make for fish; Nor fetch in firing At requiring, Nor scrape trenchering, nor wash dish; ‘Dan Ban, Co-Caliban, Has a new master—get a new man.

Freedom, hey-day! hey-day, freedom! freedom! hey-day, freedom!

Ste. O brave monster! lend the way. [Exeunt.

Act Third.

SCENE I.—BEFORE PROSPERO’S CELL.

Enter Ferdinand, bearing a Log.

Fer. There be some sports are painful, and their labour Delight in them sets off: some kinds of baseness Are nobly undergone; and most poor matters Point to rich ends. This my mean task Would be as heavy to me, as odious; but The mistress which I serve quickens what’s dead, And makes my labours pleasures. Oh! she is Ten times more gentle than her father’s crabbed; And he’s composed of harshness. I must remove Some thousands of these logs, and pile them up, Upon a sore injunction. My sweet mistress Weeps when she sees me work, and says, such baseness Had never like executor. I forget: But these sweet thoughts do even refresh my Most busiest when I do it. [labours; Enter Miranda, and Prospero at a distance.

Mir. Alas! now, pray you, I Gulla.

Work not so hard; I would the lightning had Burnt up those logs that you are enjoined to pile. Pray, set it down, and rest you: when this burns, Twill weep for having wearied you. My father Is hard at study; pray now rest yourself: He’s safe for these three hours.

Fer. O! most dear mistress, The sun will set before I shall discharge What I must strive to do.

Mir. If you’ll sit down, I’ll bear your logs the while. Pray, give me I’ll carry it to the pile. [that:

Fer. No, precious creature; I had rather crack my sinews, break my back, Than you should such dishonour undergo, While I sit lazy by.

Mir. It would become me As well as it does you; and I should do it With much more ease, for my good will is to it, And yours it is against.

Pro. Poor worm! thou art infected; This visitation shows it.

Mir. You look warmly.

Fer. No, noble mistress; ’tis fresh morning with me,

When you are by at night, I do beseech you,— Chieflly that I might set it in my prayers—

What is your name?

Mir. Miranda.—O my father! I have broke your best to say so.

Fer. Admirend! Miranda! Indeed, the top of admiration; worth What’s dearest to the world! Full many a lady I have ey’d with best regard; and many a time The harmony of their tongues hath into bondage Brought my too diligent ear: for several virtues Have I lik’d several women; never any With so full soul, but some defect in her Did quarrel with the noblest grace she ow’d And put it to the foil: but you, O you! So perfect, and so peerless, are created Of every creature’s best.

Mir. I do not know One of my sex; no woman’s face remember, Save, from my glass, mine own; nor have I seen More that I may call men, than you, good friend, And my dear father. How features are abroad, I am skill-less of; but, by my modesty (The jewel in my dover), I would not wish Any companion in the world but you; Nor can imagination form a shape, Besides yourself, to like of.—But I prattle Something too wildly; and my father’s precepts I therein do forget.

Fer. I am, in my condition, A prince, Miranda; I do think, a king; (I would, not so!) and would no more endure This wooden slavery, than to suffer The flesh-fly blow my mouth.—Hear my soul The very instant that I saw you, did [speak: My heart fly to your service.—there resides, To make me slave to it; and for your sake, Am I this patient log-man.

Mir. Do you love me? [sound.

Fer. O heaven! O earth! bear witness to this And crown what I profess with kind event, If I speak true; if hollowly, invert What best is boded me, to mischiefs! L,
Beyond all limit of what else i' th' world,
Do love, prize, honour you.
Mira.
I am a fool,
To weep at what I am glad of.
Pro.
Fair encounter
Of two most rare affections! Heavens rain grace
On that which breeds between 'em!
Fer.
Wherefore weep you?
M. At mine unworthiness that dare not offer
What I desire to give; and, much less, take
What I shall die to want. But this is trifling
And all the more it seeks to hide itself, [ning!
The bigger bulk it shows. Hence, bashful cun-
And prompt me, plain and holy innocence!
I am your wife, if you will marry me;
If not, I'll die your maid: to be your fellow,
You may deny me; but I'll be your servant,
Whether you will or no.
Fer.
My mistress, dearest;
And I thus humble, ever.
Mira.
My husband, then?
Fer. Ay, with a heart as willing
As bondage e'er of freedom: here's my hand.
M. And mine, with my heart in't: and now
Till half an hour hence.
[farewell,
Fer.
A thousand thousand!
[Exeunt Fer. and Mira.
Pro. So glad of this as they, I cannot be,
Who are surpris'd with all: but my rejoicing
At nothing can be more. I'll to my book;
For yet, ere supper time, must I perform
Much business appertaining.
[Exit.

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Island.

Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo.

Ste. Tell not me:—when the butt is out, we will drink water; not a drop before: therefore bear up, and board 'em.—Servant-monster, drink to me.
Trin. Servant-monster?—the folly of this Island! They say there's but five upon this isle we are three of them; if th' other two be brain'd like us, the State totters.
Ste. Drink, servant-monster, when I bid thee:
thy eyes are almost set in thy head.
Trin. Where should they be set else? He were a brave monster, indeed, if they were set on his tail.
Ste. My man-monster hath drown'd his tongue in sack: for my part, the sea cannot drown me:
I swam, ere I could recover the shore, five-and-thirty leagues, and off on, by this light!—Thou shalt be my lieutenant, monster, or my standard.
Trin. Your lieutenant, if you list: he's no standard.
Ste. We'll not run, monsieur monster.
Trin. Nor go neither; but you'll lie, like dogs, and yet say nothing neither.
Ste. Moon-calf, speak once in thy life, if thou beest a good moon-calf.
Cal. How does thy honour? Let me tick thy I'll not serve him; he is not valiant.
[shoc.
Trin. Thouliest, most ignorant monster: I am in case to justle a constable. Was there ever mann a coward, that hath drunk so much sack as I to-day? wilt thou tell a monstrous lie, being but half a fish, and half a monster?
Cal. Lo, how he mocks me! wilt thou let him,
my lord?
Trin. Lord, quoth he!—that a monster should be such a natural!
Cal. Lo, lo, again! bite him to death, I pr'ythee.
Ste. Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head: if you prove a mutineer, the next tree.
The poor monster's my subject, and he shall not suffer indignity.
C. I thank my noble lord. Wilt thou be pleas'd
To hearken once again to the suit I made to thee?
Ste. Marry will I: kneel and repeat it: I will stand, and so shall Trinculo.

Enter Ariel, invisible.
[tyrant,
Cal. As I told thee before, I am subject to a Sorcerer, that by his cunning hath cheated me
Of this island.
Art. Thou liest.
Cal. Thou liest, thou jesting monkey, thou:
I would, my valiant master would destroy thee;
I do not lie.
Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in 's tale, by this hand, I will supplant some of your teeth.
Trin. Why, I said nothing.
Ste. Mum then, and no more.—[To Caliban.]
Proceed.
Cal. I say by sorcery he got this isle;
From me he got it: if thy greatness will,
Revenge it on him, for I know thou dar'st;
But this thing dare not.
Ste. That's most certain.
C. Thou shalt be lord of it, and I'll serve thee.
Ste. How, now, shall this be compass'd?
Canst thou bring me to the party?
[asleep,
Cal. Yea, yea, my lord: I'll yield him thee
Where thou may'st knock a nail into his head.
Art. Thou liest; thou canst not.
[patch!—
Cal. What a pied ninny's this! Thou scurvy
I do beseech thy greatness, give him blows,
And take his bottle from him: when that's gone,
He shall drink nought but brine; for I'll not
Where the quick freshes
[show him
Ste. Trinculo, run into no farther danger: interrump the monster one word farther, and by this hand, I'll turn my mercy out o' doors, and made a stock-fish of thee.
Trin. Why, what did I? I did nothing. I'll go farther off.
Ste. Did'st thou not say, he lied?
Art. Thou liest.
Ste. Do I so? take thou that.
[Strikes him.
As you like this, give me the lie another time.
Trin. I did not give the lie. D'uto your wits, and hearing too?—This can sack and drinking do.
A murain on your monster, and the devil take your fingers!
Cal. Ha, ha, ha!
Ste. Now, forward with your tale. Pr'ythee stand farther off.
Cal. Beat him enough: after a little time,
I'll beat him too.
Ste. Stand farther.—Come, proceed.
Cal. Why, as I told thee, 'tis a custom with him
I' th' afternoon to sleep: there thou may'st bran
Having first seized his books; or with a leg [aim, Springa.
SCENE II.

THE TEMPEST.

Batter his skull, or paunch him with a stake, Or cut his weazand with thy knife. Remember, First to possess his books; for without them He's but a sot, as I am, nor hath not One spirit to command: they all do hate him, As rootedly as I. Burn but his books; He has brave utensils (for so he calls them), Which, when he has a house, he'll deck withal: And that most deeply to consider is, The beauty of his daughter. He himself Calls her a nonpareil: I never saw a woman, But only Sycorax, my dam, and she; But she as far surpasseth Sycorax, As great'st does least.

Ste. Is it so brave a loss? Cal. Ay, lord; she will become thy bed, I war-And bring thee forth brave brood. [rant, Ste. Monster, I will kill this man: his daugh-ter and I will be King and Queen, (save our graces!) and Trinculo and thyself shall be vice-roys.—Dost thou like the plot, Trinculo? Trin. Excellent. Ste. Give me thy hand: I am sorry I beat thee, but, while thou liv'st, keep a good tongue in thy head. Cal. Within this half hour will he be asleep; Wilt thou destroy him then?

Ste. Ay, on mine honour, Arie. This will I tell my master. [pleasure. Cal. Thou mak'st me merry: I am full of Let us be jousted: will you troll the catch You taught me but while-ere?

Ste. At thy request, monster, I will do reason, any reason. Come on, Trinculo, let us sing. [Sings. Flout 'em, and skout 'em; and skout 'em, and flout 'em; Thought is free.

Cal. That's not the tune.

[Ariel plays the tune on a tabor and pipe.

Ste. What is this same? Trin. This is the tune of our catch, played by the picture of No-body.

Ste. If thou beest a man, show thyself in thy likeness: if thou beest a devil, take 't as thou list. Trin. O, forgive me my sins! Ste. Mercy upon us! Cal. Art thou afeard?

Ste. No, monster, not I. Cal. Be not afeard; the isle is full of noises, Sounds, and sweet airs, that give delight, and hurt not.

Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments Will hum about mine ears; and sometimes voices, That, if I then had wak'd after long sleep, [ing, Will make me sleep again; and then, in dream-The clouds, methought, would open, and show Ready to drop upon me, that when I wak'd riches I cry'd to dream again.

Ste. This will prove a brave kingdom to me, where I shall have my music for nothing.

Cal. When Prospero is destroy'd.

Ste. That shall be by and by: I remember the story.

Trin. The sound is going away: let's follow it, and after do our work.

1 Throat.

Sc. II.

STE. Lead, monster; we'll follow.—I would I could see this taborer: he lays it on.

T. Wilt come? I'll follow, Stephano. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—ANOTHER PART OF THE ISLAND.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco, and Others.

Gon. By 'r lak'in, I can go no farther, sir; My old bones ache: here's a maze trod, indeed, Through forth-rights and meanders! by your I need must rest me. [patience, Alon. Old lord, I cannot blame thee, Who am myself attach'd with weariness, To th' dulling of my spirits: sit down, and rest. Even here I will put off my hope, and keep it No longer for my flatterer, he is drouz'd, Whom thus we stray to find; and the sea mocks Our frustrate search on land. Well, let him go.

Ant. [Aside to Sebas.] I am right glad that he's so out of hope.

Do not, for one repulse, forego the purpose That you resolved t' effect.

Seb. The next advantage Will we take thoroughly.

Ant. Let it be to-night; For, now they are oppress'd with travel, They will not, nor cannot, use such vigilance, As when they are fresh.

Seb. I say, to-night: no more.

[Solemne and strange music; and Prospero above, invisible. Enter several strange Shapes, bringing in a Banquet: they dance about it with gentle actions of salutation; and, inviting the King, &c., to eat, they depart.]

Al. What harmony is this? my good friends, Gon. Marvelous sweet music! [hark! Alon. Give us kind keepers, heaven! What were these?

Seb. A living drollery. Now I will believe That there are unicorns; that in Arabia There is one tree, the phœnix' throne; one phœnix At this hour reigning there.

Ant. I'll believe both; And what does else want credit, come to me, And I'll be sworn 'tis true. Travellers ne'er did Though fools at home condemn 'em. [lie, Gon. If in Naples I should report this now, would they believe me? If I should say, I saw such islanders (For, certes, these are people of the island), Who, though they are of monstrous shape, yet, note, Their manners are more gentle, kind, than of Our human generation you shall find Many, say, almost any.

Pro. [Aside.] Honest lord, Thou hast said well; for some of you there present Are worse than devils.

Alon. I cannot too much muse, [pressing Such shapes, such gesture, and such sound ex- (Although they want the use of tongue) a kind Of excellent dumb discourse.

Pro. [Aside.] Praise in departing.

Fran. They vanish'd strangely.

Seb. No matter, since

1 Little lady. 2 Straight paths.
They have left their viands behind, for we have stomachs.—

Will 't please you taste of what is here?

Alon. Not I. [were boys,

Gon. Faith, sir, you need not fear: When we Who would believe that there were mountaineers Dew-lapp'd like bulls, whose throats had hanging at 'em

Wallets of flesh? or that there were such men, Whose heads stood in their breasts? which now we find,

Each putter-out on five for one will bring us Good warrant of.

Alon. I will stand to and feed, Although my last: no matter, since I feel The best is past.—Brother, my lord the duke, Stand to, and do as we.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter Ariel like a Harpy, clops his wings upon the table, and with a quaint device, the Banquet vanishes.

Ari. You are three men of sin, whom destiny That hath to instrument this lower world, And what is in 't the never surfeited sea Hath caused to throw up, and on this island Where man doth not inhabit; you 'mongst men Being most unfit to live. I have made you mad; [Seeing Alon., Seb., &c., draw their Swords. And even with such like valour men hang and drown Their proper selves. You fools! I and my fellows Are ministers of Fate: the elements, Of whom your swords are temper'd, may as well Wound the loud winds, or with benock'd-at stabs Kill the still-closing waters, as diminish One dowlé that's in my plume. My fellow-ministers Are like invulnerable. If you could hurt, Yourswords are now too massy for your strengths, And will not be uplifted. But, remember, (For that's my business to you), that you three From Milan did supplant good Prospero; Expos'd unto the sea (which hath requit it) Him, and his innocent child: for which foul deed The powers—delaying, not forgetting—have Incens'd the seas and shores, yea, all the creatures, Against your peace. Thee, of thy son, Alonso, They have bereft; and do pronounce by me, Lingering perdition (worse than any death Can be at once) shall step by step attend (from You, and your ways; whose wrath to guard you (Which here, in this most desolate isle, else fall, Upon your heads) is nothing, but heart's sorrows And a clear life ensuing.

He vanishes in Thunder: then, to soft music, enter the Shapes again, and dance with mocks and moves, and carry out the table.

Pro. [Aside.] Bravely the figure of this harpy hast thou Perform'd, my Ariel; a grace it had, devouring. Of my instruction hast thou nothing 'bated, In what thou hast'd to say: so, with good life And observation strange, my mearer ministers Their several kinds have done. My high charms And these, mine enemies, are all knit up [work, In their distractions: they now are in my power;

1 Feather.

And in these fits I leave them, while I visit Young Ferdinand (whom they suppose is drown'd), And his and my lov'd darling. [Exit Pro. above.

Gon. I' th' name of something holy, sir, why In this strange state? [stand you Alon. O, it is monstrous! monstrous! M ethought, the billows spoke, and told me of; The winds did sing it to me; and the thunder, That deep and dreadful organ-pipe, pronounced The name of Prosper: it did base my trespass. Therefore my son i' th' oze is bedded; and I'll seek him deeper than e'er plummet sounded, And with him there lie mudd'd. [Exit.

Seb. But one fiend at a time, I'll fight their legions o'er.

Ant. I'll be thy second. [Exeunt Seb. and Ant.

Gon. All three of them are desperate: their great guilt, Like poison given to work a great time after, Now 'gins to bite the spirits.—I do beseech you, That are of supper joints, follow them swiftly, And hinder them from what this ecstasy May now provoke them to.

Adr. Follow, I pray you. [Exeunt.

Act Fourth.

SCENE I.—BEFORE PROSPERO'S CELL.

Enter Prospero, Ferdinand, and Miranda.

Pro. If I have too austerity punish'd you, Your compensation makes amends; for I Have given you here a thread of mine own life, Or that—for which I live; who once again I tender to thy hand. All thy vexations Were but my trials of thy love, and thou Hast strangely stood the test: here, afore Heaven, I ratify this my rich gift. O Ferdinand! Do not smile at me that I boast her off; For thou shalt find she will outstrip all praise, And make it halt behind her.

Pro. As I hope For quiet days, fair issue, and long life, With such love as 'tis now, the strong'st sug Our worser genius can, shall never milt [gestion My honour.

Pro. Fairly spoke. Sit then, and talk with her; she is thine own.—

What, Ariel! my industrious servant Ariel! Enter Ariel.

Ari. What would my potent master? here I am. Pro. Thou and thy meener fellows your last Did worthily perform, and I must use you [service In such another trick. Go, bring the rabble, O'er whom I give thee power, here, to this place: Incite them to quick motion; for I must Bestow upon the eyes of this young couple
Some vanity of mine art: it is my promise, And they expect it from me.

Ari. Presently?

Pro. Ay, with a twink.

Ari. Before you can say, 'Come,' and 'go,' And breathe twice; and cry, 'so, so,' Each one tripping on his toe, Will be here with mop and mow.\(^1\)

Do you love me, master? no?

Pro. Dearly, my delicate Ari. Do not ap-

Till thou dost hear me call. [proach. Ari.]

Pro. Well, I conceive. [Exit. Pro. Look thou be true, or else good night your

Fer. I warrant you, sir. [vow. Pro.]

Fer. Now come, my Ariel! bring a corollary,\(^2\)

Rather than want a spirit: appear, and pertly,—

No tongue, all eyes; be silent. [Soft music.

Enter Iris.

Iris. Ceres, most bounteous lady, thy rich leas Of wheat, rye, barley, vetches, oats, and peas; Thy turfymountains, where live nibbling sheep, And flat meads thatch'd with stover, them to Thybanks with peonied and lilled brims, [keep; Which spongy April at thy best betrims, To make old nymphs chastie crowns; and thy broom groves,

Whose shadow the dismissed bachelor loves, Being lass-lorn; thy pole-clift vineyard;
And thy sea-marge, sterl; and rocky-hardy,

Where thou thyself dost air; the Queen o'the

Whose watery arch and messenger an I, [Sky, Didst thee leave these, and with her sovereign Here on this grass-plot, in this very place, grace,

To come and sport. [Juno descends.] Her peacocks fly amain;

Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain.

Enter Ceres.

C. Hall, many-colour'd messenger, that ne'er

Dost disobey the wife of Jupiter;

Who with thy saffron wings upon my flowers

Diffuseth honey-drops, refreshing showers;
And with each end of thy blue bow dost crown

My bosky acres, and my unshrub'd'down,

Richscarf to my proud earth; why hath thy Queen

Summon'd me hither, to this short-grass'd green?

Iris. A contract of true love to celebrate,
And some donation freely to estate

On the bless'd lovers.

Cer. Tell me, heavenly bow,
If Venus, or her son, as thou dost know,
Do now attend the Queen? Since they did plot
The means that dusky Dis my daughter got,
Her and her blind boy's scandal'd company
I have forsworn.

Iris. Of her society

Be not afraid: I met her deity
Cutting the clouds towards Paphos, and herson
Dove-drawn with her.

Cer. Highest Queen of State,
Great Juno comes: I know her by her gait.

Enter Juno.

J. How does my bounteous sister? Go with me,
To bless this twain, that they may prosperous be,
And honour'd in their issue.

1 Grins and wry faces. 2 Overplus.

[They sing.]

Juno. Honour, riches, marriage, blessing,
Long continuance, and increasing,
Hourly joys be still upon you!

Juno sings her blessings on you.

Cer. Earth's increase, foison plenty,
Barns, and garnerers never empty;
Vines, with clustering bunches growing;
Plants, with goodly barthen bowling;
Spring come to you, at the furthest,
The very end of harvest!

Sorcery and want shall shun you:
Ceres' blessing so is on you.

Fer. This is a most majestic vision, and Harmonious charmantly. May I be bold
To think these spirits?

Pro. Spirits, which by mine art
I have from their confines call'd to enact
My present fancies.

Fer. Let me live here ever:
So rare a wonder'd father, and a wise,
Makes this place Paradise.

Pro. Sweet now, silence!

Juno and Ceres whisper, and send Iris on employment.

Juno and Ceres whisper seriously;
There's something else to do. Hush, and be
Or else our spell is marr'd.

Iris. You nymphs, call'd Naiads, of the wa-dring brooks,
With your seg'd crowns and ever-harmless
Leave your crisp channels, and on this green land
Answer your summons: Juno does command,
Come, temperate nymphs, and help to celebrate
A contract of true love: be not too late.

Enter certain Nymphs.

You sun-burn'd sicklemen, of August weary,
Come hither from the furrow, and be merry.
Make holy day: your rye-straw hats put on,
And these fresh nymphs encounter every one
In country footing.

Enter certain Reapers, properly habited: they join with the Nymphs in a graceful dance; towards the end whereof Prospero starts suddenly, and speaks; after which, to a strange, hollow, and confused noise, they heavily vanish.

Pro. [Aside.] I had forgot that foul conspiracy
Of the beast Caliban, and his confederates,
Against my life; the minute of their plot
Is almost come.—[To the Spirits.] Well done.—

Avoid; no more.

F. This is most strange: your father's in some
That works him strongly. [passion

Mira. Never till this day,

Saw I him touch'd with anger so distemper'd,

Pro. You do look, my son, in a mov'd sort,

As if you were dismay'd: be cheerful, sir.

Our revels now are ended. These our actors,
As I foretold you, were all spirits, and

Are melted into air, into thin air:
And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,
The cloud-capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve,
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind. We are such stuff
As dreams are made on; and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep.—Sir, I am vex’d:
Bear with my weakness; my old brain is
Be not disturb’d with my infirmity. [troubled:
If you be pleas’d, retire into my cell,
And there repose; a turn or two I’ll walk,
To still my beating mind.

_Fer. Mira._ We wish your peace. [Exeunt.
_Pro. Come with a thought: I thank thee,
Ariel: come!_

_Enter Ariel._

_Ari. Thy thoughts I cleave to. What’s thy _Pro. Spirit, [pleasure? We must prepare to meet with Caliban. [Ceres.
_Ari. Ay, my commander: when I presented
I thought I have told thee of it; but I fear’d,
Lest I might anger thee. [varlets?
_Pro. Say again, where didst thou leave these
A. I told you, sir, they were red-hot with drink—
So full of valour, that they smote the air [ing:
For breathing in their faces, beat the ground
For kissing of their feet, yet always bending
Towards their project. Then I beat my tabor,
At which, like unback’d colts, they prick’d their ears,
Advanc’d their eyelids, lifted up their noses,
As they smelt music: so I charm’d their ears,
That, calf-like, they my lowing follow’d, through Tooth’d briers, sharp furzes, prickling gorge, and thorns,
Which enter’d their frail shins: at last I left them
Y’th’ filthy mantled pool beyond your cell,
Up to the chins.

_Pro. This was well done, my bird.
Thy shape invisible retain thou still:
The trumpery in my house, go, bring it hither,
For stale 1 to catch these thieves.

_Ari. I go, I go. [Exit. _Pro. A devil, a born devil, one whose nature Nurture can never stick: on whom my pains,
Humane taken, all, lost, quite lost;
And as with age his body uglier grows,
So his mind cankers. I will plague them all,
Enter Ariel, laden with glittering apparel, &c.
Even to roaring.—Come, hang them on this line._

_Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo,_
_all wet._

_Cal. Pray you, tread softly, that the blind mole may
Not hear a foot fall: we are now near his cell.
_Ste. Monster, your fairy, which you, say, is a harmless fairy, has done little better than play’d
the Jack 2 with us._
_T. Monster, my nose is in great indignation.
_Ste. So is mine. Do you hear, monster? If I should take a displeasure against you; look you,— _Trin. Thou wert but a lost monster._
_Cal. Good my lord, give me thy favour still.
Be patient, for the prize I’ll bring thee to Shall hoodwink this mischance: therefore, speak
All’s hush’d as midnight yet,—[softly;
_T. Ay, but to lose our bottles in the pool,—

ACT IV.

_Ste. There is not only disgrace and dishonour in that, monster, but an infinite loss._
_Trin. That’s more to me than my wetting:
yet this is your harmless fairy, monster._
_Ste. I will fetch off my bottle, though I be o’er ears for my labour._
_C. Pr’ythee, my King, be quiet. Seest thou here,
This is the mouth o’ th’ cell: no noise, and enter:
Do that good mischief, which may make this Thine own for ever, and I, thy Caliban, [island
For ay e thy foot-licker._
_Ste. Give me thy hand. I do begin to have bloody thoughts._
_Trin. O King Stephano! O peer! O worthy
Stephano! look, what a wardrobe here is for thee!
_Cal. Let it alone, thou fool: it is but trash._
_Trin. O, ho, monster! we know what belongs to a frippery:—O King Stephano!
_Ste. Put off that gown, Trinculo: by this hand,
I’ll have that gown._
_Trin. Thy grace shall have it._
_Cal. The dropsy drown this fool! what do you mean,
To doat thus on such luggage? Let’s alone,
And do the murther first: if he awake,
From toe to crown he’ll fill our skin with pinches;
Make us strange stuff._
_Ste. Be you quiet, monster.—Mistress line, is not this my jerkin? Now is the jerkin under the line: now, jerkin, you are like to lose your hair, and prove a bald jerkin._
_Trin. Do, do: we steal by line and level,
’a’ like your grace._
_Ste. I thank thee for that jest: here’s a gar ment for’t: wit shall not go unrewarded, while I am King of this country. “Steal by line and level,” is an excellent pass of pate; there’s an other garment for’t._
_Trin. Monster, come, put some line upon your fingers, and away with the rest._
_C. I will have none o’; we shall lose our time,
And all be turn’d to barnacles, or to apes
With foreheads villainous low._
_Ste. Monster, lay-to your fingers: help to bear this away, where my hoghead of wine is, or I’ll turn you out of my kingdom. Go to; carry this.
_Trin. And this._
_Ste. Ay, and this._

A noise of Hunters heard. Enter divers Spirits, in shape of hounds, and hunt them about;
Prospero and Ariel setting them on._

_Pro. Hey, Mountain, hey!_

_Ari. Silver! there it goes, Silver! [hark:
_Pro. Fury, Fury! there, Tyrant, there! hark_
_[Cal., Ste., and Trin. are driven out._
_Go, charge my goblins that they grind their joints
With dry convulsions; shorten up their sinews
With aged cramps, and more pinch-spotted make them,
Than pard 1 or cat o’ mountain._
_Ari. Hark! they roar._
_P. Let them be hunted soundly. At this hour
Lie at my mercy all mine enemies:—
Shortly shall all my labours end, and thou Shalt have the air at freedom. For a little,
Follow, and do me service._
[Exeunt._
Act Fifth.

SCENE I.—BEFORE THE CELL OF PROSPERO.

Enter Prospero in his magic robes; and Ariel.

Pro. Now does my project gather to a head: My charms crack not, my spirits obey, and Time Goes upright with his carriage. How's the day?

A. On the sixth hour; at which time, my lord, You said our work should cease.

Pro. I did say so, When first I raised the tempest. Say, my spirit, How fares the King and his?

Ari. Confin'd together In the same fashion as you gave in charge: Just as you left them: all prisoners, sir, In the lime-grove which weather-fends your cell; They cannot budge till you release. The King, His brother, and yours, abide all three distracted, And the remainder mourning over them, Brimful of sorrow and disdain; but chiefly Him that you term'd, sir, the good old lord, Gonzalo:

His tears run down his beard, like winter's drops From eaves of reeds. Your charm so strongly works them, That if you now behold them, your affections Would become tender.

Pro. Dost thou think so, spirit?

Ari. Mine would, sir, were I human.

Pro. And mine shall.

Hast thou, which art but air, a touch, a feeling Of their afflictions, and shall not myself, One of their kind, that relieth all as sharply, Passion as they, be kindlier mov'd than thou art? Though with their high wrongs I am struck to 'th quick,

Yet, with my nobler reason, 'gainst my fury Do I take part. The rarer action is [tent, In virtue, than in vengeance: they being peni-
The sole drift of my purpose doth extend Not a frown farther. Go, release them, Ariel. My charms I'll break, their senses I'll restore, And they shall be themselves.

Ari. I'll fetch them, sir. [Exit.

Pro. Ye elves of hills, brooks, standing lakes, And groves:

And ye, that on the sands with printless foot Do chase the ebbing Neptune, and do fly him, When he comes back; you demi-puppets, that By moonshine do the green sour ringlets make, Whereof the eoe not bites; and you, whose pastime Is to make midnight mushrooms, that rejoice To hear the solemn curfew; by whose aid (Weak masters though ye be) I have bedim'd the noontide sun, call'd forth the mutinous winds, And 'twixt the green sea and the azure vault Set roaring war: to the dread rattling thunder Have I given fire, and rifted Jove's stout oak With his own bolt: the strong-bos'ed promontory Have I made Shake; and by the spurs pluck'd up The pine and cedar: graves, at my command, Have walk'd their sleepers, op'd, and let 'em forth by my so potent art.—But this rough magic I here adjure; and, when I have requir'd Some heavenly music (which even now I do),

To work mine end upon their senses, that This airy charm is for, I'll break my staff, Bury it certain fudoms in the earth, And, deeper than did ever plummet sound, I'll drown my book. [Solemn music.

Here enter Ariel before; then Alonso, with a frantic gesture, attended by Gonzalo; Sebastian and Antonio in like manner, attended by Adrian and Francisco: they all enter the circle which Prospero had made, and there stand charmed; which Prospero observing, speaks.

A solemn air, and the best comforter To an unsettled fancy, cure thy brains, Now useless, boil'd within thy skull! There For you are spell-stopp'd.—[stand, Holy Gonzalo, honourable man, Mine eyes ev'n sociable to the shew of thine, Fall fellowly drops.—The charm dissolves apace; And as the morning steals upon the night, Melting the darkness, so their rising senses Begin to chase the ignorant fumes that mantle Their clearer reason.—O good Gonzalo! My true preserver, and a loyal sir To him thou follow'st, I will pay thy graces Home, both in word and deed. Most cruelly Didst thou, Alonso, use me and my daughter: Thy brother was a furtherer in the act; Thou'st pinch'd for't now, Sebastian.—Flesh and blood, You brother mine, that entertain'd ambition, Expell'd remorse and nature; who, with Sebastian [strong,) (Whose inward pinches therefore are most Would here have kill'd your king; I do forgive thee, [ing Unnatural though thou art.—Their understand-

-Begins to swell, and the approaching tide Will shortly fill the reasonable shores, That now lie foul and muzzy. Not one of them, That yet looks on me, or would know me.—Ariel, Fetch me the hat and rapier in my cell;

[Exit Ariel.

I will dis-case me, and myself present, As I was sometime Milan.—Quickly, spirit; Thou shalt ere long be free.

Ariel enters, singing, and helps to attire him.

Ari. Where the bee sucks, there suck I; In a cowslip's bell I lie; There I couch when owls do cry. On the bat's back I do fly, After summer, merrily. Merrily, merrily, shall I live now, Under the blossom that hang on the bough.

Pro. Why, that's my dainty Ariel! I shall miss thee;

But yet thou shalt have freedom:—so, so, so,— To the King's ship, invisible as thou art: There shalt thou find the mariners asleep Under the hatches; the Master and the Boat-Being awake, enforce them to this place; [swain, And presently, I pr'ythee. Ariel. I drink the air before me, and return Or e'er your pulse twice beat. [Exit Ariel.

Gen. All torment, trouble, wonder, and amaze-

Inhabits here: some heavenly power guide us
Out of this fearful country!

Pro. Behold, Sir King,
The wrong Duke of Milan, Prospero.
For more assurance that a living prince
Does now speak to thee, I embrace thy body;
And to thee, and thy company, I bid
A hearty welcome.

Alon. Wh't'ru beest he, or no,
Or some enchanted trifle to abuse me,
As late I have been, I not know: thy pulse
Beats as of flesh and blood; and, since I saw thee,
Th' affliction of my mind amends, with which,
I fear, a madness held me. This must crave
(An if this be at all) a most strange story.
Thy dukedom I resign; and do entreat
Thou pardon me my wrongs.—But how should
Be living, and be here! [Prospero
Pro. First, noble friend,
Let me embrace thine age, whose honour cannot
Be measured, or confin'd.
Gon. Whether this be,
Or be not, I'll not swear.
Pro. You do yet taste
Some subtleties o' th' isle, that will not let you Believe things certain.—Welcome, my friends all.
But you, my brace of lords, were I so minded,
[Aside to Seb. and Ant.]
I here could pluck his highness' frown upon you,
And justify you traitors: at this time
I'll tell no tales.
Seb. [Aside.] The devil speaks in him.
Pro. No.—
For you, most wicked sir, whom to call brother
Would even infect my mouth, I do forgive
Thy rankest fault—all of them; and require
My dukedom of thee, which, perforce, I know,
Thou must restore.
Alon. If thou beest Prospero,
Give us particulars of thy preservation: [since
How thou hast met us here, whom three hours
Were wrack'd upon this shore, where I have lost (How sharp the point of this remembrance is!)}
My dear son Ferdinand.
Pro. I am weo for't, sir.
Alon. Irreparable is the loss; and Patience
Says it is past her cure.
Pro. I rather think, [grace,
You have not sought her help; of whose soft
For the like loss, I have her sovereign aid,
And rest myself content.
Alon. You the like loss?
Pro. As great to me, as late; and, supportable
To make the dear loss, have I means much weaker
Than you may call to comfort you; for I
Have lost my daughter.
Alon. A daughter? O heavens! that they were living both in Naples,
The King and Queen there! that they were, I wish
Myself were muddied in that oozy bed [daughter?
Where my son lies. When did you lose your?
In this last tempest. I perceive, these lords
At this encounter do so much admire,
That they devour their reason, and scarce think
Their eyes do offices of truth, their words
Are natural breath; but, howso'er you have Been justified from your senses, know for certain,
That I am Prospero, and that very duke

Which was thrust forth of Milan; who most strangely [landed,
Upon this shore, where you were wrack'd, was
To be the lord on't. No more yet of this;
For 'tis a chronicle of day by day.
Not a relation for a breakfast, nor Befitting this first meeting. Welcome, sir;
This cell's my court: here have I few attendants,
And subjects none abroad; pray you, look in.
My dukedom since you have given me again,
I will require you with as good a thing;
At least, bring forth a wonder, to content ye
As much as me my dukedom.

Here Prospero discovers Ferdinand and Miranda playing at chess.

Mira. Sweet lord, you play me false.
Fer. No, my dearest love,
I would not for the world.
Mira. Yes, for a score of kingdoms you should
And I would call it fair play. [wrangle, Alon. If this prove
A vision of the island, one dear son
Shall I twice lose.
Seb. A most high miracle!
Fer. Though the seas threaten, they are merci-
I have cursed them without cause. [celful
[For, kneels to Alon.
Alon. Now, all the blessings
Of a glad father compass thee about!
Arise, and say how thou canst here.
Mira. O, wonder!
How many goodly creatures are there here!
How beauteous mankind is! O, brave new world,
That has such people in't!
Pro. 'Tis new to thee. [at play?
Alon. What is this maid, with whom thou wast
Your eld's acquaintance cannot be three hours:
Is she the goddess that hath sever'd us,
And brought us thus together?
Fer. Sir, she is mortal:
But, by immortal providence she's mine;
I chose her when I could not ask my father
For his advice; nor thought I had one. She
Is daughter to this famous Duke of Milan,
Of whom so often I have heard renown;
But never saw before; of whom I have Receiv'd a second life; and second father
This lady makes him to me.
Alon. I am her's.
But O, how oddly will it sound, that I
Must ask my child forgiveness?
Pro. There, sir, stop;
Let us not burthen our remembrances
With a heaviness that's gone.
Gon. I have fully wept,
Or should have spoke ere this. Look down, you
And on this couple drop a blessed crown, [gods,
For it is you that have chalk'd forth the way,
Which brought us hither!
Alon. I say, Amen, Gonzalo. [issue
Gon. Was Milan thrust from Milan, that his Should become Kings of Naples? O! rejoice
Beyond a common joy, and set it down
With gold on lasting pillars:—In one voyage
Did Claribel her husband find at Tunis;
And Ferdinand, her brother, found a wife, [dom
Where he himself was lost; Prospero his duke-

When no man was his own. [hands:
AIon. To Fer. and Mira.] Give me your
Let grief and sorrow still embrace his heart,
That doth not wish you joy!
Gon. Be it so: Amen.
Enter Ariel, with the Master and Boatswain amazingly following.
O look, sir! look, sir! here is more of us.
I prophesied if a gallows were on land,
This fellow could not drown.—Now, blasphemy,
That swear'st grace o'erboard, not an oath on shore?
Hast thou no mouth by land? What is the news?
Boats. The best news is, that we have safely found
Our King, and company: the next, our ship,
Which but three glasses since we gave out split,
Is tight, and yare, and bravely rig'd, as when
We first put out to sea.
Art. Sir, all this service
Have I done since I went. [Aside.]
Pro. My trickary spirit! [Aside.]
AIon. These are not natural events; they strengthen [hither?
From strange to stranger.—Say, how came you
Boats. If I did think, sir, I were well awake,
I'd strive to tell you. We were dead of sleep,
And (how we know not) all clapp'd under hatches,
Where, but even now, with strange and several noises
Of roaring, shrieking, howling, jingling chains,
And more diversity of sounds, all horrible,
We were awak'd; straightway, at liberty:
Where we, in all her trim, freshly beheld
Our royal, good, and gallant ship: our Master
Capring to eye her. On a trice, so please you,
Even in a dream, were we divided from them,
And were brought moping hither.
Art. [Aside.] Was't well done?
Pro. [Aside.] Bravely, my diligence! Thou shall be free. [trae;]
AIon. This is as strange a maze as e'er men
And there is in this business more than Nature
Was ever conduct'd of. Some oracle
Must rectify our knowledge.
Pro. Sir, my liege,
Do not infest your mind with beating [sure,
The strangeness of this business: at pick'd lei-
Which shall be shortly, single I'll resolve you (Which to you shall seem probable) of every
These happen'd accidents; till when, be cheerful,
And think of each thing well.—[Aside.]
Come
hither, spirit:
Set Caliban and his companions free: [cloussir?
Untie the spell. [Exit Ariel.] How fares my gra-
There are yet missing of your company
Some few odd lads, that you remember not.
Enter Ariel, driving in Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, in their stolen apparel.
Ste. Every man shift for all the rest, and let no man take care for himself, for all is but fortune.—Coragio, bully-monster, coragio!
Trin. If these be true spies that I wear in my head, here's a goodly sight.
Cal. O Setebos! these be brave spirits, indeed.
1 Ready. 2 Conductor.
How fine my master is! I am afraid
He will chastise me,
Seb. Ha, ha, ha!
What things are these, my lord Antonio?
Will money buy them?
Ant. Very like; one of them
Is a plain fish, and, no doubt, marketable. [loauds, Pro. Mark but the badges of these men, my
Then say, if they betrue.—This mis-shapen knave,
His mother was a witch; and one so strong
That could control the moon, make flows and ebbs,
And deal in her command, without her power.
These three have robb'd me; and this demi-devil
(For he's a bastard one) had plotted with them
To take my life. Two of these fellows you Must know, and own; this thing of darkness I Acknowledge mine.
Cal. I shall be pinch'd to death.
A1. Is not this Stephano, my drunken butler?
Seb. He is drunk now: where had he wine?
AIon. And Trinculo is reeling ripe: where should they
Find this grand liquor that hath girded 'em?—
How came't hou in this pickle?
Trin. I have been in such a pickle since I saw you last, that, I fear me, will never out of my bones: I shall not fear fly-blowing.
Seb. Why, how now, Stephano? [a cramp,
Ste. O! touch me not: I am not Stephano, but
Pro. You'd be king o' the Isle, sirrah?
Ste. I should have been a sire one then.
AIon. [Pointing to Caliban.] This is a strange thing as e'er I looked on.
Pro. He is as disproportion'd in his manners
As in his shape.—Go, sirrah, to my cell;
Take with you your companions: as you look
To have my pardon, trim it handsomely.
Cal. Ay, that I will; and I'll be wise hereafter,
And seek for grace. What a thrice-double ass
Was I, to take this drunkard for a god,
And worship this dull fool!
Pro. Go to; away!
AIon. Hence, and bestow your luggage where
Seb. Or stole it, rather. [you found it, [Exeunt Cal., Ste., and Trin.
P. Sir, I invite your highness, and your train,
To my poor cell, where you shall take your rest
For this one night; which, part of it, I'll waste
With such discourse, as, I not doubt, shall make Go quick away:—the story of my life, [it
And the particular accidents gone by,
Since I came to this isle: and in the morn,
I'll bring you to your ship, and so to Naples,
Where I have hope to see the nuptial
Of these our dear-belov'd solemnized;
And thence retire me to my Milan, where
Every third thought shall be my grave.
AIon. I long
To hear the story of your life, which must Take the ear strangely.
Pro. I'll deliver all;
And promise you calm seas, auspicious gales,
And sail so expeditious, that shall catch
Your royal fleet far off.
My Ariel—chick,
That is thy charge: then, to the ele-

Be free, and fare thou well! [ments;
Please you, draw near. [Exeunt.
EPILOGUE.
SPOKEN BY PROSPERO.
[Now my charms are all o'errowned,
And what strength I have's mine own
Which is most faint: now, 'tis true,
I must be here confin'd by you,
Or sent to Naples. Let me not,
Since I have my dukedom got,
And pardon'd the deceiver, dwell
In this bare island, by your spell;
But release me from my bands,
With the help of your good hands.
Gentle breath of yours my sails
Must fill, or else my project fails,
Which was to please. Now I want
Spirits to enfoice, art to enchant;
And my ending is despair,
Unless I be reliev'd by prayer;
Which pieces so, that it assualts
Mercy itself, and frees all faults.
As you from crimes would pardon'd be,
Let your indulgence set me free.]

SCENE I.—AN OPEN PLACE IN VERONA.

Enter Valentine and Proteus.

Val. Cease to persuade, my loving Proteus;
Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits.
Were't not, affection chains thy tender days
To the sweet glances of thy honour'd love,
I rather would entreat thy company
To see the wonders of the world abroad,
Than, living dully sluggardiz'd at home,
Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness.
But since thou lov'st, love still, and thrive there—
Even as I would, when I to love begin. [in,
P. Wilt thou begone? Sweet Valentine, adieu.
Think on thy Proteus, when thou, haply, seest
Some rare note-worthy object in thy travel;
Wish me partaker in thy happiness,
When thou dost meet good hap; and in thy
(If ever danger do environ thee,) [danger,
Commend thy grievance to my holy prayers,
For I will be thy beasds-man, Valentine.

V. And on a love-book pray for my success?
P. Upon some book I love, I'll pray for thee.
V. That's on some shallow story of deep love,
How young Leander cross'd the Hellespont.

Pro. That's a deep story of a deeper love;
For he was more than over shoes in love.

Val. 'Tis true; for you are over boots in love,
And yet you never swam the Hellespont.

P. Over the boots I may, give me not the boots.

Val. No, I will not, for it boots thee not.

Pro. What? [groans;

Val. To be in love, where scorn is bought with

Coy looks, with heart-sore sighs; one fading moment's mirth,
With twenty watchful, weary, tedious nights:
If haply won, perhaps, a hapless gain;
If lost, why then a grievous labour won:
However, but a folly bought with wit,
Or else a wit by folly vanquished.

Pro. So, by your circumstance you call me fool. [prove.

Val. So, by your circumstance, I fear, you'll

Pro. 'Tis love you cavil at: I am not Love.

Val. Love is your master, for he masters you;
And he that is so yoked by a fool,
Methinks, should not be chronicled for wise.

Pro. Yet writers say, as in the sweetest bud
The eating canker dwells, so eating love
Inhabits in the finest wits of all.

P. And writers say, as the most forward bud
Is eaten by the canker ere it blow,
Even so by love the young and tender wit
Is turn'd to folly; blasting in the bud,
Losing his verdure even in the prime,
And all the fair effects of future hopes.

But wherefore waste I time to counsel thee,
That art a votary to fond desire?
Once more, adieu. My father at the road
Expects my coming, there to see me shipp'd.

Pro. And thither will I bring thee, Valentine.

Val. Sweet Proteus, no; now let us take our
To Milan let me hear from thee by letters, [leave.
Of thy success in love, and what news else
Betideth here in absence of thy friend;
And I likewise will visit thee with mine.

Pro. All happiness becauseth thee in Milan.
Enter Speed.

Speed. Sir Proteus, 'save you! Saw you my master?

Pro. But now he parted hence to embark for Milan.

Sp. Twenty to one, then, he ishipp'd already, and I have play'd the sheep in losing him.

Pro. Indeed a sheep doth very often stray
An if the shepherd be awhile away.

Sp. You conclude, that my master is a shepherd, then, and I a sheep?

Pro. I do.

Speed. Why then my horns are his horns, whether I wake or sleep.

Pro. A silly answer, and fitting well a sheep.

Speed. This proves me still a sheep.

Pro. True, and thy master a shepherd.

Sp. Nay, that I can deny by a circumstance.

P. It shall go hard, but I'll prove it by another.

Speed. The shepherd seeks the sheep, and not the sheep the shepherd; but I seek my master, and my master seeks not me; therefore, I am no sheep.

Pro. The sheep for fodder follow the shepherd, the shepherd for food follows not the sheep; thou for wages followest thy master, thy master for wages follows not thee; therefore, thou art a sheep.

Speed. Such another proof will make me cry "baa."

Pro. But, dost thou hear? gav'st thou my letter to Julia?

Speed. Ay, sir: I, a lost mutton, gave your letter to her; and she gave me, a lost mutton. nothing for my labour.

Pro. Nay, in that you are astray: 'twere best pound you.

Speed. Nay, sir, less than a pound shall serve me for carrying your letter.

Pro. You mistake; I mean the pound, a pinfold.

Speed. From a pound to a pin, fold it over and over,
'Tis threefold too little for carrying a letter to
Pro. But what said she? [your lover.

Speed. [Nods.] Ay.

Speed. You mistook, sir: I say she did nod, and you ask me if she did nod; and I say ay.

Pro. And that set together, is—noddy.1

Speed. Now you have taken the pains to set it together, take it for your pains.

Pro. No, no; you shall have it for bearing the letter.

Speed. Well, I perceive I must be fain to bear with you.

Pro. Why, sir, how do you bear with me?

1 Fool.

Speed. Marry, sir, the letter very orderly; having nothing but the word noddy for my pains.

Pro. Beshrew me, but you have a quick wit.

S. And yet it cannot overtake your slow purse.

Pro. Come, come; open the matter in brief: what said she?

Speed. Open your purse, that the money, and the matter, may be both at once delivered.

Pro. Well, sir, here is for your pains. What said she?

Sp. Truly, sir, I think you'll hardly win her.

Pro. Why? couldst thou perceive so much from her?

Speed. Sir, I could perceive nothing at all from her; no, not so much as a ducat for delivering your letter; and being so hard to me that brought your mind, I fear she'll prove as hard to you in telling your mind.

Pro. What! said she nothing?

Sp. No, not so much as—"Take this for thy pains." To testify your bounty, I thank you, you have testerm'd me; in requital whereof, henceforth carry your letters yourself. And so, sir, I'll commend you to my master.

Pro. Go, go, be gone, to save your ship from wreck,

Which cannot perish, having thee aboard,

Being destined to a dryer death on shore.—[Exit Speed.

I must go send some better messenger:

I fear my Julia would not deign my lines,

Receiving them from such a worthless post. [Exit.

SCENE II.

THE SAME. THE GARDEN OF JULIA'S HOUSE.

Enter Julia and Lucetta.

Jul. But say, Lucetta, now we are alone,

Would'st thou then counsel me to fall in love?

Luc. Ay, madam; so you stumble not unheed-

J. Of all the fair resort of gentlemen, [fully.

That every day with parle encounter me,

In thy opinion, which is worthiest love?

Luc. Please you repeat their names, I'll show

my mind

According to my shallow simple skill. [mourn!

Jul. What think'st thou of the fair Sir Eglia-

Luc. As of a knight well-spoken, neat and fine;
But, were I you, he never should be mine.

Jul. What think'st thou of the rich Mercatio?

Luc. Well, of his wealth; but of himself, so so.

Jul. What think'st thou of the gentle Proteus?

Luc. To see what folly reigns in us!

Jul. How now? what means this passion at his name?

L. Pardon, dear madam: 'tis a passing shame,

That I, an unworthy body as I am,

Should censure thus on lovely gentlemen.

Jul. Why not on Proteus, as of all the rest?

Luc. Then thus—of many good, I think him

Luc. I have no other but a woman's reason:

I think him so, because I think him so.

Jul. And would'st thou have me cast my love on him? [away.

Luc. Ay, if you thought your love not cast

1 Sixpence.
J. Why, he, of all the rest, hath never movd'me.
L. Yet he, of all the rest, I think, best loves ye.
J. His little speaking shows his love but small.
L. Fire that's closest kept burns most of all.
Jul. They do not love, that do not show their love.
Luc. O! they love least, that let men know
Jul. I would I knew his mind. [their love.
Luc. Peruse this paper, madam.
Jul. “To Julia.” Say, from whom?
Luc. That the contents will show.
Jul. Say, say, who gave it thee?
Luc. Sir Valentine's page; and, sent, I think, from Proteus.
[way,
He would have given it you, but I, being in the
Did in your name receive it: pardon the fault, I pray.
Jul. Now, by my modesty, a goodly broker!
Dare you presume to harbour wanton lines?
To whisper and conspire against my youth?
Now, trust me, 'tis an office of great worth,
And you an officer fit for the place.
There, take the paper: see it be return'd,
Or else return no more into my sight.
Luc. To plead for love deserves more fee than hate.
Jul. Will you be gone?
Luc. That you may ruminate. [Exit.
Jul. And yet, I would I had o'erlook'd the letter.
It were a shame to call her back again,
And pray her to a fault for which I chid her.
What' foil is she, that knows I am a maid,
And would not force the letter to my view?
Since maids, in modesty, say 'No,' to that
Which they would have the proficer construe
'ay.'
Fie, fie! how wayward is this foolish love,
That like a testy babe will scratch the nurse,
And presently, all humbled, kiss the rod.
How churlishly I chid Lucetta hence.
When willingly I would have had her here!
How angrily I taught my brow to frown,
When inward joy enforc'd my heart to smile!
My penance is to call Lucetta back,
And ask remission for my folly past.—
What ho! Lucetta!

Enter Lucetta.

Luc. What would your ladyship?
Jul. Is it near dinner-time?
Luc. I would it were;
That you might kill your stomach on your meat,
And not upon your maid.
Jul. What is 't that you took up so gingerly?
Luc. Nothing.
Jul. Why didst thou stoop, then?
Luc. To take a paper up
That I let fall.
Jul. And is that paper nothing?
Luc. Nothing concerning me.
Jul. Then let it lie for those that it concerns.
Luc. Madam, it will not lie where it concerns,
Unless it have a false interpreter.
Jul. Some love of yours hath writ to you in rhyme.
Luc. That I might sing it, madam, to a tune.
Give me a note: your ladyship can set.
Jul.—As little by such toys as may be possible:
Best sing it to the tune of 'Light o' love.'
Luc. It is too heavy for so light a tune.
Jul. Heavy? belike, it hath some burthen then.
Luc. Ay; and melodious were it, would you
Jul. And why not you? [sing it.
Luc. I cannot reach so high.
Jul. Let's see your song.—How now, minion!
L. Keep tune there still, so you will sing it out:
And yet, methinks, I do not like this tune.
Jul. You do not?
Luc. No, madam; 'tis too sharp.
Jul. You, minion, are too saucy.
Luc. Nay, now you are too flat,
And mar the concord with too harsh a descant;
There wanteth but a mean to fill your song.
Jul. The mean is drowned with your unruly
Luc. Indeed I bid the base for Proteus. [base.
J. This babbleth shall not henceforth trouble me.

[Tears the letter.
Here is a coil 2 with protestation!—
Go, get you gone, and let the papers lie:
You would be fing'ring them to anger me.
Luc. She makes it strange; but she would be best pleas'd
To be so anger'd with another letter. [Exit.
Jul. Nay, would I were so anger'd with the same!
O hateful hands! to tear such loving words:
Injurious wasps! to feed on such sweet honey,
And kill the bees that yield it, with your stings.
I'll kiss each several paper for amends.
Look, here is writ—"Kind Julia;"—unkind
As in revenge of thy ingratitude,
[Julia! I throw thy name against the bruising stones,
Trampling contemptuously on thy disdain,
And here is writ—"love-wounded Proteus;"—
Poor wounded name! my bosom, as a bed, [Hen'l;
Shall lodge thee, till thy wound be thoroughly
And thus I search it with a sovereign kiss.
But twice, or thrice, was "Proteus" written down:
Be calm, good wind, blow not a word away,
Till I have found each letter in the letter;
Except mine own name; that some whirlwind
Unto a ragged, fearful, hanging rock, [bear,
And throw it thence into the raging sea.
Lo! here in one line is his name twice writ,—
"Poor forlorn Proteus; passionate Proteus
To the sweet Julia;"—that I'll tear away;—
And yet I will not, sith so prettily
He couples it to his complaining names.
Thus will I fold them one upon another:
Now kiss, embrace, contend, do what you will.

Enter Lucetta.

Luc. Madam,
Dinner is ready, and your father stays.
Jul. Well, let us go. [tales here?
Luc. What! shall these papers lie like tell—
Jul. If you respect them, best to take them up.
L. Nay, I was taken up for laying them down;
Yet here they shall not lie for catching cold.
Jul. I see, you have a mouth's mind to them.
Luc. Ay, Madam, you may say what sights you
I see things too, although you judge I wink. [see;
Jul. Come, come; will't please you go?
[Exit.
SC. III.

TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

SCENE III.

THE SAME. A ROOM IN ANTONIO'S HOUSE.

Enter Antonio and Panthino.

Ant. Tell me, Panthino, what sad talk was that, Wherewith my brother held you in the cloister?

Pant. 'Twas of his nephew Proteus, your son.

Ant. Why, what of him?

Pant. He wonder'd that your lordship Would suffer him to spend his youth at home, While other men, of slender reputation, Put forth their sons to seek preferment out; Some to the wars, to try their fortune there; Some, to discover islands far away; Some, to the studious universities. For any, or for all these exercises, He said, that Proteus, your son, was meet; And did request me to importune you To let him spend his time no more at home, Which would be great impeachment to his age, In having known no travel in his youth.

Ant. Nor need'st thou much importune me to that Whereon this month I have been hammering. I have consider'd well his loss of time, And how he cannot be a perfect man, Not being tried and tutor'd in the world: Experience is by industry achiev'd, And perfected by the swift course of time. Then, tell me, whither were I best to send him?

Pant. I think, your lordship is not in doubt How his companion, youthful Valentine, Attends the Emperor in his royal court.

Ant. I know it well.

Pant. 'Twere good, I think, your lordship sent him thither. There shall he practise tilts and tournaments, Hear sweet discourse, converse with noblemen, And be in eye of every exercise, Worthy his youth, and nobleness of birth.

Ant. I like thy counsel; well hast thou advis'd; And, that thou may'st perceive how well I like it, The execution of it shall make known. Even with the speediest expedition I will dispatch him to the Emperor's court.

Pant. To-morrow, may it please you, Don Alphonso, With other gentlemen of good esteem, Are journeying to salute the Emperor, And to commend their service to his will.

Ant. Good company: with them shall Proteus go:— And, in good time,—now will we break with him.

Enter Proteus.

Pro. Sweet love! sweet lines! sweet life! Here is her hand, the agent of her heart; Here is her oath for love, her honour's pawn. O, that our fathers would applaud our loves, To seal our happiness with their consents! O heavenly Julia!

Ant. How now! what letter are you reading there?

Pro. May't please your lordship, 'tis a word or two. Of commendations sent from Valentine, Deliver'd by a friend that came from him.
Val. Go to, sir; Tell me, do you know Madam Silvia?

Speed. She that your worship loves?

Val. Why, how know you that I am in love?

Speed. Marry, by these special marks. First, you have learn'd, like Sir Proteus, to breathe your arms, like a male-content; to relish a love-song, like a robin-redbreast; to walk alone, like one that had the pestilence; to sigh, like a school-boy that had lost his A B C; to weep, like a girl that had buried her grandam; to fast, like one that takes diet; to watch, like one that fears robbing; to speak piling, like a beggar at Hallowmas. You were wont, when you laught'd, to crow like a cock; when you walk'd, to walk like one of the lions; when you fasted, it was presently after dinner; when you look'd sadly, it was for want of money; and now you are metamorphos'd with a mistress, that, when I look on you, I can hardly think you my master.

Val. Are all these things perceiv'd in me?

Speed. They are all perceiv'd without ye.

Val. Without me? they cannot.

Speed. Without you? nay, that's certain; for, without you were so simple, none else would; but you are so without these follies, that these follies are within you.

Val. But, tell me, dost thou know my lady Silvia?

Speed. She, that you gaze on so, as she sits at supper?

Val. Hast thou observ'd that? even she I mean.

Speed. Why, sir, I know her not.

Val. Dost thou know her by my gazing on her, and yet know'st her not?

Speed. Is she not hard favour'd, sir?

Val. Not so fair, boy, as well favour'd.

Speed. Sir, I know that well enough.

Val. What dost thou know?

Speed. That she is not so fair, as (of you) well favour'd.

Val. I mean, that her beauty is exquisite, but her favour infinite.

Speed. That's because the one is painted, and the other out of all count.

Val. How painted? and how out of count?

Speed. Marry, sir, so painted to make her fair, that no man 'counts of her beauty.

Val. How esteem'st thou me? I account of her beauty.

S. You never saw her since she was deform'd.

Val. How long hath she been deform'd?

Speed. Ever since you lov'd her.

Val. I have lov'd her ever since I saw her, and still I see her beautiful.

Speed. If you love her, you cannot see her.

Val. Why?

Speed. Because Love is blind. O, that you had mine eyes, or your own eyes had the lights that were wont to have, when you chid at Sir Proteus for going ungarter'd!

Val. What should I see then?

Speed. Your own present folly, and her passing deformity; for he, being in love, could not see to garter his hose; and you, being in love, cannot see to put on your hose.

Val. Belike, boy, then you are in love; for last morning you could not see to wipe my shoes.

Speed. True, sir; I was in love with my bed. I thank you, you swing'd me for my love, which makes me the bolder to chide you for yours.

Val. In conclusion, I stand affected to her.

Speed. I would you were set, so your affection would cease.

Val. Last night she enjoin'd me to write some lines to one she loves.

Speed. And have you?

Val. I have.

Speed. Are they not lamely writ?

Val. No, boy, but as well as I can do them.

—Peace! here she comes.

Enter Silvia.

Sp. O excellent motion! O exceeding puppet! Now will he interpret to her. [Speed stands aside. Val. Madam and mistress, a thousand good morrows.

Speed. [Aside.] O! give ye good ev'n: here's a million of manners.

Sil. Sir Valentine and servant, to you two thousand.

Speed. He should give her interest, and she gives it him.

Val. As you enjoin'd me, I have writ your letter Unto the secret nameless friend of yours; Which I was much unwilling to proceed in, But for my duty to your ladyship.

Sil. I thank you, gentle servant. 'Tis very clerkly done.

Val. Now trust me, madam, it came hardly off; For, being ignorant to whom it goes, I writ at random, very doubtfully.

Sil. Perchance you think too much of so much pains?

Val. No, madam: so it stead you, I will write, Please you command, a thousand times as much. And yet—

Sil. A pretty period. Well, I guess the sequel: And yet I will not name it;—and yet I care not; —And yet take this again;—and yet I thank you, Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more.

Speed. [Aside.] And yet you will; and yet another yet. [like it?]

Val. What means your ladyship? do you not

Sil. Yes, yes; the lines are very quaintly writ, But since unwillingly, take them again.

Nay, take them.

Val. Madam, they are for you.

Sil. Ay, ay; you writ them, sir, at my request, But I will none of them: they are for you. I would have had them writ more movingly. V. Please you, I'll write your ladyship another. Sil. And, when it's writ, for my sake read it And, if it please you, so; if not, why, so. [over; Val. If it please me, madam! what then?

S. Why, if it please you, take it for your labour, And so good-morrow, servant. [Exit. Speed. O jest unseen, inscrutable, invisible, As a nose on a man's face, or a weathercock on a steeple! [suitor, My master sues to her, and she hath taught her He being her pupil, to become her tutor. O excellent device! was there ever heard a better, That my master, being scribe, to himself should write the letter? 1Whipped.
Enter Proteus and Julia.

Pro. Have patience, gentle Julia.

Jul. I must, where is no remedy.

Pro. When possibly I can, I will return.

Jul. If you turn not, you will return the sooner.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.

VERONA. A ROOM IN JULIA’S HOUSE.

Enter Proteus and Julia.

Jul. Sir Proteus, you are stay’d for.

Pro. Go, I come, I come. —

Alas! this parting strikes poor lovers dumb.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—THE SAME. A STREET.

Enter Launce, leading his dog Crab.

Launce. Nay, ‘twill be this hour ere I have done weeping; all the kind of the Launces have this very fault. I have receiv’d my proportion, like the prodigious son, and am going with Sir Proteus to the Imperial’s court. I think Crab, my dog, be the surest-natured dog that lives: my mother weeping, my father wailing, my sister crying, our maid howling, our cat wringing her hands, and all our house in a great perplexity, yet did not this cruel-hearted cut she’d one tear. He is a stone, a very pibble-stone, and has no more pity in him than a dog; a Jew would have wept to have seen our parting: why, my gran-dam, having no eyes, look you, wept herself blind at my parting. Nay, I’ll show you the manner of it. This shoe is my father’s; — no, this left shoe is my father’s; — no, no, this left shoe is my mother’s; — nay, that cannot be so, neither: —yes, it is so, it is so; it hath the worser sole. This shoe is my mother’s, and this my father’s. A vengeance on’t! there ‘tis: now, sir, this staff is my sister; for, look you, she is as white as a lily, and as small as a wand; this hat is Nan, our maid: I am the dog; — no, the dog is himself, and I am the dog, — O! the dog is me, and I myself: ay; so, so. Now come I to my father: — “Father, your blessing.” Now should not the shoe speak a word for weeping: now should I kiss my father: well, he weeps on. Now come I to my mother: — O! that shoe could speak now, like an woman. Well, I kiss her: why there ‘tis; here’s my mother’s breath up and down. Now come I to my sister; mark the mean she makes: now, the dog all this while sheds not a tear, nor speaks a word: but see how I lay the dust with my tears.

Enter Pantaloon.

Pant. Launce, away, away, aboard: thy master is ship’d; and thou art to post after with oars. What’s the matter? why weep’st thou, man? Away, ass; you’ll lose the tide if you tarry any longer.

L. It is no matter if the tid’d were lost; for it is the unkindest tid’t that ever any man tid’d.

Pant. What’s the unkindest tid’?

L. Why he that’s tid’d here; Crab, my dog.

Pant. Tut, man, I mean thou’lt lose the flood; and, in losing the flood, lose thy voyage: and, in losing thy voyage, lose thy master; and, in losing thy master, lose thy service; and, in losing thy service, — why dost thou stop my mouth?

L. For fear thou shouldst lose thy tongue.

Pant. Where should I lose my tongue?

Launce. In thy tale.

Pant. In thy tail?

L. Lose the tide, and the voyage, and the master, and the service, and the tide. Why, man, if the river were dry, I am able to fill it with my tears; if the wind were down, I could drive the boat with my sighs.

Pant. Come, come away, man; I was sent to call thee.

Launce. Sir, call me what thou dar'st.

Pant. Wilt thou go?

Launce. Well, I will go. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

MILAN. A ROOM IN THE DUKE'S PALACE.
Enter Valentine, Silvia, Thurio, and Speed.

Sil. Servant.—

Val. Mistress.

Speed. Master, Sir Thurio frowns on you.

Val. Ay, boy, it's for love.

Speed. Not of you.

Val. Of my mistress, then.

Speed. 'Twere good you knock'd him.

Sil. Servant, you are sad.

Val. Indeed, madam, I seem so.

Thu. Seems you that you are not?

Val. Haply, I do.

Thu. So do counterfeits.

Val. So do you.

Thu. What seem I that I am not?

Val. Wise.

Thu. What instance of the contrary?

Val. Your folly.

Thu. And how quote you my folly?

Val. I quote it in your jerkin.

Thu. My jerkin is a doublet.

Val. Well, then, I'll double your folly.

Thu. How?

Sil. What, angry, Sir Thurio? do you change colour?

Val. Give him leave, madam: he is a kind of cameleon.

Thu. That hath more mind to feed on your blood, than live in your air.

Val. You have said, sir.

Thu. Ay, sir, and done too, for this time.

Val. I know it well, sir: you always end ere you begin.

Sil. A fine volley of words, gentlemen, and quickly shot off.

Val. 'Tis indeed, madam; we thank the giver.

Sil. Who is that, servant?

Val. Yourself, sweet lady; for you gave the fire. Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your ladyship's looks, and spends what he borrows kindly in your company.

Thu. Sir, if you spend word for word with me,
I shall make your wit bankrupt.

Val. I know it well, sir: you have an excha-quer of words, and, I think, no other treasure to give your followers; for it appears by their bare liveries, that they live by your bare words.

Sil. No more, gentlemen, no more. Here comes my father.

Enter the Duke.

D. Know you Don Antonio, your countryman?

Val. Ay, my good lord; I know the gentleman
To be of worth, and worthy estimation,
And not without desert so well reputed.

Duke. Hath he not a son?

V. Ay, my good lord; a son, that well deserves
The honour and regard of such a father.

Duke. You know him well? [fancy

Val. I know him, as myself; for from our in-
We have convers'd, and spent our hours together:
And though myself have been an idle truant,
Omitting the sweet benefit of time
To clothe mine age with angel-like perfection,
Yet hath Sir Proteus, for that's his name,
Made use and fair advantage of his days;
His years but young, but his experience old;
His head unmellow'd, but his judgment ripe;
And, in a word (for far behind his worth
Come all the praises that I now bestow),
He is complete in feature, and in mind,
With all good grace to grace a gentleman.

Duke. Beshrew me, sir, but, if he make this
He is as worthy for an' empress' love, [good
As meet to be an emperor's counsellor.

Well, sir, this gentleman is come to me
With commendation from great potentates;
And here he means to spend his time a while:
I think, 'tis no unwelcome news to you.

V. Should I have wished a thing, it had been he.

D. Welcome him, then, according to his worth.

Silvia, I speak to you; and you, Sir Thurio:—

For Valentine, I need not 'citre him to it.

I'll send him hither to you presently. [Exit Duke.

V. This is the gentleman, I told your ladyship,

Had come along with me, but that his mistress
Did hold his eyes lock'd in her crystal looks.

Sil. Belike, that now she hath enfranchis'd

Upon some other pawn for fealty. [them,

Val. Nay, sure, I think, she holds them prisoners still. [blind

Sil. Nay, then he should be blind; and, being
How could he see his way to seek out you?

V. Why, lady, Love hath twenty pair of eyes.

Thu. They say, that Love hath not an eye at all.

Val. To see such lovers, Thurio, as yourself;

Upon a homely object, Love can wink.

Enter Proteus.

Sil. Have done, have done: here comes the gentleman.

Val. Welcome, dear Proteus!—Mistress, I beseech you,

Confirm his welcome with some special favour.

S. His worth is warrant for his welcome hither.
If this be he you oft have wish'd to hear from Val. Mistress, it is. Sweet lady, entertain him
To be my fellow-servant to your ladyship.

Sil. Too low a mistress for so high a servant.

Pro. Not so, sweet lady; but too mean a servant
To have a look of such a worthy mistress.

Val. Leave off discourse of disability,—

Sweet lady, entertain him for your servant.

Pro. My duty will I boast of, nothing else.

Sil. And duty never yet did want his need.

Servant, you are welcome to a worthless mistress.

Pro. I'll die on him that says so, but yourself.

Sil. That you are welcome?

I'vo. No; that you are worthless.
Enter Servant.

Ser. Madam, my lord, your father, would speak with you. [Sir Thurio, St. I wait upon his pleasure; [Exit Ser.] come, Go with me.—Once more, new servant, welcome: I'll leave you to confer of home affairs; When you have done, we look to hear from you. Pro. We'll both attend upon your ladyship. [Exit Silvia, Thurio, and Speed.

Val. Now, tell me, how do all from whence you came?

P. Your friends are well, and have them much

Val. And how do yours? [commended.

Pro. I left them all in health. [love?

Val. How does your lady, and how thrives your

Pro. My tales of love were wont to weary you: I know, you joy not in a love discourse.

Val. Ay, Proteus, but that life is altered now:
I have done penance for contemning love;
Whose high imperious thoughts have punish'd
With bitter fasts, with penitential groans;
With nightly tears, and daily heart-sore sighs;
For, in revenge of my contempt of love,
Love hath chas'd sleep from my enthralled eyes,
And made them watchers of mine own heart's
O, gentle Proteus! Love's a mighty lord, [sorrow.
And hath so humbled me, as I confess,
There is no woe to his correction,
Nor, to his service, so much joy on earth!
Now, no discourse, except it be of love;
Now can I break my fast, dine, sup, and sleep,
Upon the very naked name of love.

Pro. Enough; I read your fortune in your eye.
Was this the idol that you worship so?

Val. Even so; and is she not a heavenly saint?

Pro. No, but she is an earthly paragon.

Val. Call her divine.

Pro. I will not flatter her.

Val. O! flatter me, for love delights in praises.

Pro. When I was sick you gave me bitter pills;
And I must minister the like to you.

Val. Then speak the truth by her; if not divine,
Yet let her be a principality,
Sovereign to all the creatures on the earth.

Pro. Except my mistress.

Val. Sweet, except not any;
Except thou wilt except against my love.

Pro. Have I not reason to prefer mine own?

Val. And I will help thee to prefer her, too;
She shall be dignified with this high honour,—
To bear my lady's train, lest the base earth
Should from her venture chance to steal a kiss,
And, of so great a favour growing proud,
Disdain to root the summer-swelling flower,
And make rough winter everlasting.

P. Why, Valentine, what braggardism is this!

Val. Pardon me, Proteus: all I can, is nothing
To her, whose worth makes other worth as no-
She is alone.

Pro. Then, let her alone.

V. Not for the world. Why, man, she is mine own;
And I as rich in having such a jewel,
As twenty sons, if all their sand were pearl,
The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold.
Forgive me, that I do not dream on thee,
Because thou seest me dote upon my love.
My foolish rival, that her father likes

Only for his possessions are so huge,
Is gone with her along, and I must after;
For love, thou know'st, is full of jealousy.

Pro. But she loves you?

V. Ay, and we are betroth'd; nay, more, our marriage hour,
With all the cunning manner of our flight
Determin'd of: how I must climb her window,
The ladder made of cords, and all the means
Plotted and 'greed on for my happiness.
Good Proteus, go with me to my chamber.

Pro. Go on before; I shall enquire you forth.
I must unto the road, to disembark
Some necessaries that I needs must use,
And then I'll presently attend you.

Val. Will you make haste?

Pro. I will.— [Exit Valentine.
Even as one heat another heat expels,
Or as one nail by strength drives out another,
So the remembrance of my former love
Is by a newer object quite forgotten.
Is it her mien, or Valentine's praise,
Her true perfection, or my false transgression,
That makes me, reasonless, to reason thus?
She's fair, and so is Julia that I love:—
That I did love; for now my love is thaw'd,
Which, like a waxen image against a fire,
Bears no impression of the thing it was,
Methinks, my zeal to Valentine is cold,
And that I love him not as I was wont: O!
But I love his lady too, too much;
And that's the reason I love him so little.
How shall I dote on her with more advice, 1
That thus without advice begin to love her?
'Tis but her picture I have yet beheld,
And that hath dazzled my reason's light;
But when I look on her perfections,
There is no reason but I shall be blind.
If I can check my erring love, I will;
If not, to compass her I'll use my skill. [Exit.

SCENE V.—THE SAME. A STREET.

Enter Speed and Launce.

Speed. Launce! by mine honesty, welcome to Milan.

Launce. Forswear not thyself, sweet youth, for I am not welcome. I reckon this always—that a man is never undone, till he he hang'd; nor never welcome to a place, till some certain shot be paid, and the hostess say, welcome.

Speed. Come on, you mad-cap; I'll to the ale-house with you presently; where for one shot of five pence thou shalt have five thousand welcomes. But, sirrah, how did thy master part with Madam Julia?

Launce. Marry, after they clos'd in earnest, they parted very fairly in jest.

Speed. But shall she marry him?

Launce. No.

Speed. How then? Shall he marry her?

Launce. No, neither.

Speed. What, are they broken?

Launce. No, they are both as whole as a fish.

Speed. What an ass art thou! I understand thee not.

Acquaintance.
Launce. What a block art thou, that thou canst not. My staff understands me.

Speed. What thou say'st?

Launce. Ay, and what I do too: look thee; I'll but lean, and my staff understands me.

Speed. It stands under thee, indeed.

Launce. Why, stand-under and under-stand is all one.

Speed. But tell me true, will't be a match?

Launce. Ask my dog: if he say, ay, it will; if he say, no, it will; if he shake his tail, and say nothing, it will.

Speed. The conclusion is, then, that it will.

Launce. Thou shalt never get such a secret from me, but by a parable.

Speed. 'Tis well that I get it so. But, Launce, how say'st thou, that my master is become a notable lover?

Launce. I never knew him otherwise.

Speed. Than how?

Launce. A notable lubber, as thou reportest him to be.

Speed. Why, thou ass, thou mistak'st me.

Launce. Why, fool, I meant not thee; I meant thy master.

Speed. I tell thee, my master is become a hot lover.

Launce. Why, I tell thee, I care not though he burn himself in love. If thou wilt, go with me to the alehouse, so; wilt thou go?

Speed. At thy service. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.
The Same. An Apartment in the Palace.

Enter Proteus.

Pro. To leave my Julia, shall I be forsworn? To love fair Silvia, shall I be forsworn? To wrong my friend, I shall be much forsworn; And ev'n that power, which gave me first my oath, Provokes me to this threefold perjury: Love bade me swear, and Love bids me forswear; O sweet-suggesting Love! if thou hast sinn'd, Teach me, thy tempted subject, to excuse it. At first I did adore a twinkling star, But now I worship a celestial sun. Unheedful vows may needfully be broken; And he wants wit, that wants resolved will To learn his wit't exchange the bad for better. Fie, fie, unreverend tongue! to call her bad, Whose sovereignty so oft thou hast preferr'd With twenty thousand soul-confirming oaths. I cannot leave to love, and yet I do; But there I leave to love, where I should love. Julia I lose, and Valentine I lose: If I keep them, I needs must lose myself; If I lose them, thus find I, by their loss, For Valentine, myself, for Julia, Silvia. I to myself am dearer than a friend, For love is still most precious in itself; And Silvia, witness heaven that made her fair! Shows Julia but a swarthy Ethiop, I will forget that Julia is alive, Remembering that my love to her is dead; And Valentine I'll hold an enemy, Aiming at Silvia, as a sweeter friend. I cannot now prove constant to myself Without some treachery us'd to Valentine. This night, he meaneth with a corded ladder To climb celestial Silvia's chamber window; Myself in counsel, his competitor. Now, presently I'll give her father notice Of their disguising, and pretended flight, Who, all enrag'd, will banish Valentine, For Thurio, he intends, shall wed his daughter: But, Valentine being gone, I'll quickly cross By some sly trick blunt Thurio's dull proceeding. Love, lend me wings to make my purpose swift, As thou hast lent me wit to plot this drift! [Exit.

SCENE VII.

VERONA. A Room in JULIA's HOUSE.

Enter JULIA and LUCETTA.

Jul. Counsel, Lucetta; gentle girl, assist me: And, ev'n in kind love, I do conjure thee, Who art the table wherein all my thoughts Are visibly character'd and engrav'd, To lessen me; and tell me some good mean, How, with my honour, I may undertake A journey to my loving Proteus.

Luc. Alas! the way is warisome and long. Jul. A true-devoted pilgrim is not weary To measure kingdoms with his feeble steps; Much less shall she, that hath Love's wings to fly; And when the flight is made to one so dear, Of such divine perfection, as Sir Proteus.

Luc. Better forbear, till Proteus make return. Jul. O! know'st thou not, his looks are my soul's Pity the dearth that I have pined in, [food? By longing for that food so long a time. Didst thou but know the inly touch of love, Thou would'st as soon go kindle fire with snow, As seek to quench the fire of love with words. Luc. I do not seek to quench your love's hot But qualify the fire's extreme rage, [fire, Lest it should burn above the bounds of reason. Jul. The more thou damnest it up, the more it burns. The current, that with gentle murmur glides, Thou know'st, being stopp'd, impatiently doth But, when his fair course is not hindered, [rage; He makes sweet music with th' enamel'd stones, Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge He ovetaketh in his pilgrimage; And so by many winding nooks he strays, With willing sport, to the wild ocean. Then let me go, and hinder not my course. I'll be as patient as a gentle stream, And make a pastime of each weary step, Till the last step have brought me to my love; And there I'll rest, as, after much turmoil, A blessed soul doth in Elysium.

Luc. But in what habit will you go along? Jul. Not like a woman, for I would prevent The loose encounters of lascivious men. Gentle Lucetta, fit me with such weeds As may beseech some well-reputed page. Luc. Why, then your ladyship must cut your hair.

Jul. No, girl; I'll knit it up in silken strings, With twenty odd-conceited true-love knots: To be fantastic, may become a youth Of greater time than I shall show to be. 1 Confederate.
SC. VII.

TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

But tell me, wench, how will the world repute
For undertaking so unsteadied a journey? [me
I fear me, it will make me scandaliz'd.
Luc. If you think so, then stay at home, and
Jul. Nay, that I will not. [go not.
Luc. Then never dream on infamy, but go,
If Proteus like your journey, when you come,
No matter who's displeas'd, when you are gone.
I fear me, he will scarce be pleas'd withal.
Jul. That is the least, Lucetta, of my fear,
A thousand oaths, an ocean of his tears,
And instances as infinite of love,
Warrant me welcome to my Proteus.
Luc. All these are servants to deceitful men.
Jul. Base men, that use them so to base effect:
But truer stars did govern Proteus' birth:
His words are bonds, his oaths are oracles;
His love sincere, his thoughts immaculate;
His tears, pure messengers sent from his heart;
His heart as far from fraud, as heav'n from earth. [come to him!
Luc. Pray heav'n he prove so, when you
Jul. Now, as thou lov'st me, do him not that
To bear a hard opinion of his truth: [wrong,
Only deserve my love by loving him;
And presently go with me to my chamber,
To take a note of what I stand in need of,
To furnish me upon my longing journey.
All that is mine I leave at thy dispose,
My goods, my lands, my reputation:
Only in lieu thereof, dispatch me hence.
Come; answer not, but to it presently:
I am impatient of my tarryance. [Exeunt.

Act Third.

SCENE I.—MILAN. AN ANTE-CHAMBER IN THE DUKE'S PALACE.

Enter Duke, Thurio, and Proteus.

D. Sir Thurio, give us leave, I pray, a while:
We have some secrets to confer about.—
[Exit Thurio.

Now tell me, Proteus, what's your will with me?
Pro. My gracious lord, that which I would dis-
The law of friendship bids me to conceal; [cover,
But, when I call to mind your gracious favours
Done to me, undeserving as I am,
My duty pricks me on to utter that,
Which else no worldly good should draw from me.
Know, worthy prince, Sir Valentine, my friend,
This night intends to steal away your daughter:
Myself am one made privy to the plot.
I know, you have determin'd to bestow her
On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates:
And should she thus be stol'n away from you,
It would be much vexation to your age.
Thus, for my duty's sake, I rather chose
To cross my friend in his intended drift,
Than, by concealing it, heap on your head
A pack of sorrows, which would press you down,
Being unprepared, to your timeless grave.

D. Proteus, I thank thee for thine honest care,
Which to requite, command me while I live.
This love of theirs myself have often seen,
Haply, when they have judg'd me fast asleep,
And oftentimes have purpos'd to forbid
Sir Valentine her company, and my court;
But, fearing lest my jealous aim might err,
And so unworthily disgrace the man
(A rashness that I ever yet have shunn'd),
I gave him gentle looks; thereby to find
That which thyself hast now disclos'd to me.
And, that thou may'st perceive my fear of this,
Knowing that tender youth is soon suggested,
I nightly lodge her in an upper tower,
The key whereof myself have ever kept;
And thence she cannot be convey'd away.

P. Know, noble lord, they have devis'd a mean
How he her chamber-window will ascend,
And with a corded ladder fetch her down;
For which the youthful lover now is gone,
And this way comes he with it presently;
Where, if it please you, you may intercept him.
But, good my lord, do it so cunningly,
That my discovery be not aimed at;
For love of you, not hate unto my friend,
Hath made me publisher of this pretence.

Duke. Upon mine honour, he shall never know
That I had any light from thee of this.

Pro. Adieu, my lord; Sir Valentine is coming.

[Exit.

Enter Valentine.

Duke. Sir Valentine, whither away so fast?
Val. Please it your Grace, there is a messenger
That stays to bear my letters to my friends,
And I am going to deliver them.

Duke. Be they of much import?
Val. The tenor of them doth but signify
My health, and happy being at your court.

D. Nay, then no matter: stay with me a while.
I am to break with thee of some affairs
That touch me near, wherein thou must be secret.
'Tis not unknown to thee, that I have sought
To match my friend, Sir Thurio, to my daughter.
V. I know it well, my lord; and, sure, the match
Were rich and honourable: besides, the gentleman
Is full of virtue, bounty, worth, and qualities
Beseeing such a wife as your fair daughter.

Duke. Cannot your Grace win her to fancy him?
D. No, trust me: she is peevish, sullen, froward,
Proud, disobedient, stubborn, lacking duty,
Neither regarding that she is my child,
Nor fearing me as if I were her father:
And, may I say to thee, this pride of hers,
Upon advice, hath drawn my love from her;
And, where I thought the remnant of mine age
Should have been cherish'd by her childlike duty,
I now am full resolv'd to take a wife,
And turn her out to who will take her in:
Then, let her beauty be her wedding-dower;
For me and my possessions she esteems not.

Val. What would your Grace have me to do in Duke. There is a lady of Verona, here, [this?
Whom I affect; but she is nice, and coy,
And nought esteems my aged eloquence:
Now, therefore, would I have thee to my tutor,
(For long ago I have forgot to court,
Besides, the fashion of the time is chang'd,)

How, and which way, I may bestow myself,
To be regarded in her sun-bright eye.

V. Win her with gifts, if she respect not words.
Dumb jewels often, in their silent kind,
More than quick words do move a woman's mind.
D. But she did scorn a present that I sent her.

V. A woman sometimes scorches what best con-
Send her another; never give her o'er, [tents her.
For scorn at first makes after-love the more.
If she do frown, 'tis not in hate of you,
But rather to beget more love in you;
If she do chide, 'tis not to have you gone,
For why!—the fools are mad, if left alone.
Take no repulse, whatever she doth say;
For ' get you gone,' she doth not mean ' away.'
Flatter, and praise, commend, extoll their graces;
Though 'er's so black, say they have angels' faces.
That man that hath a tongue, I say, is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.

Duke. But she I mean is promis'd by her friends
Unto a youthful gentleman of worth,
And kept severely from resort of men;
That no man hath access by day to her.

Val. Why, then I would resort to her by night.

D. Ay, but the doors be lock'd, and keys kept
That no man hath recourse to her by night; [safe,
V. What lets, but one may enter at her window?
D. Her chamber is aloft, far from the ground,
And built so shelving that one cannot climb it
Without apparent hazard of his life.

V. Why, then, a ladder quaintly made of cords,
To cast up, with a pair of anchoring hooks,
Would serve to scale another Hero's tower,
So bold Leander would adventure it.

Duke. Now, as thou art a gentleman of blood,
Advise me where I may have such a ladder.

Val. Who would use it? pray, sir, tell me that.

Duke. This very night; for love is like a child,
That loves for everything that he can come by.

Val. By seven o'clock I'll get you such a ladder.

Duke. But hark thee; I will go to her alone.
How shall I best convey the ladder thither?

V. It will be light, my lord, that you may bear
Under a cloak that is of any length. [fit

Duke. A cloak as long as thine will serve the Val. Ay, my good lord. turn? [lord.

Duke. Then, let me see thy cloak:
I'll get me one of such another length. [lord.

Val. Why, any cloak will serve the turn, my
D. How shall I fashion me to wear a cloak?—
I pray thee, let me feel thy cloak upon me.—
What letter is this same? What's here?—'To Silvia!'

And here an engine fit for my proceeding!
I'll be so bold to break the seal for once. [Reads.

'My thoughts do harbour with my Silvia nightly; [flying:
And slaves they are to me, that send them
O! could their master come and go as lightly,
Himself would lodge where senseless they are lying.
[them;
My herald thoughts in thy pure bosom rest
While I, their king, that thither them importune,[bless'd them,
Do curse the grace that with such grace hath Because myself do want my servant's for
I curse myself, for they are sent by me, [tune.
That they should harbour where their lord should be.'

What's here?

'Silvia, this night I will enfranchise thee.'

'Tis so; and here's the ladder for the purpose.—
Why, Phæton (for thou art Merops' son),
Wilt thou aspire to guide the heavenly car,
And with thy daring folly burn the world?
Wilt thou reach stars, because they shine on thee?
Go, base intruder! over-weening slave!
Bestow thy fawning smiles on equal mates,
And think my patience, more than thy desert,
Is privilege for thy departure hence.
Thank me for this, more than for all the favours
Which, all too much, I have bestow'd on thee.
But if thou linger in my territories
Longer than sweiftest expedition
Will give thee time to leave our royal court,
By heaven, my wrath shall far exceed the love
I ever bore my daughter, or thyself.
Begone: I will not hear thy vain excuse;
But, as thou lov'st thy life, make speed from
hence.

[Exit Duke.

Val. And why not death, rather than living
To die is to be banish'd from myself,
And Silvia is myself: banish'd from her,
Is self from self; a deadly banishment.
What light is light, if Silvia be not seen?
What joy is joy, if Silvia be not by?
Unless it be, to think that she is by,
And feed upon the shadow of perfection.
Except I be by Silvia in the night,
There is no music in the nightingale;
Unless I look on Silvia in the day,
There is no day for me to look upon.
She is my essence; and I leave to be,
If I be not by her fair influence
Foster'd, illum'd, cherish'd, kept alive.
I fly not death, to fly this deadly doom:
Tarry I here, I but attend on death;
But, fly I hence, I fly away from life.

Enter Proteus and Launce.

Pro. Run, boy; run, run, and seek him out.

Launce. So-ho! so-ho!

Pro. What seest thou?

Launce. Him we go to find: there's not a hair on 's head, but 'tis a Valentine.

Pro. Valentine?

Val. No.

Pro. Who then? his spirit?

Val. Neither.

Pro. What then?

Val. Nothing.

L. Can nothing speak? master, shall I strike?

Pro. Who wouldst thou strike?

Launce. Nothing.

Pro. Villain, forbear.

L. Why, sir, I'll strike nothing: I pray you,—

Pro. Sirrah, I say, forbear.—Friend Valentine, a word. [news,

V. My ears are stopp'd, and cannot hear good
So much of bad already hath possess'd them.

Pro. Then in dumb silence will I bury mine,
For they are harsh, untuneable, and bad.

Val. Is Silvia dead?

Pro. No, Valentine.

V. No Valentine, indeed, for sacred Silvia!—
Hath she forsworn me?

Pro. No, Valentine.

Val. No Valentine, if Silvia have forsworn
What is your news?
SC. I.
TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

L. The black'st news that ever thou heard'st.
Speed. Why, man, how black?
Lau. Why, as black as ink.
Speed. Let me read them.
L. Fie on thee, jolt-head! thou canst not read.
Speed. Thou liest; I can.
Lau. I will try thee.
Speed. Come, fool, come: try me in thy paper.
Lau. There, and St Nicholas be thy speed?
Speed. "Imprimis: She can milk."
Lau. Ay, that she can.
Speed. "Item: She brews good ale."
Lau. And thereof comes the proverb,—
Blessing of your heart, you brew good ale.
Speed. "Item: She can sew."
Lau. That's as much as to say,—Can she so?
Speed. Here follow her virtues.
Lau. Close at the heels of her virtues.
Speed. "Item: She doth talk in her sleep."
Lau. It's no matter for that, so she sleep not in her talk.
Speed. "Item: She is slow in words."
Lau. O villain! that set this down among her vices. To be slow in words is a woman's only virtue: I pray thee, out with't, and place it for her chief virtue.
Speed. "Item: She is proud."
Lau. Out with that too: it was Eve's legacy, and cannot be ta'en from her.
Speed. "Item: She hath no teeth."
Lau. I care not for that neither, because I love crusts.
Speed. "Item: She is cursed."2
L. Well; the best is, she hath no teeth to bite.
S. "Item: She will often praise her liquor."
Lau. If her liquor be good, she shall: if she will not, I will; for good things should be praised.
Speed: "Item: She is too liberal."
Lau. Of her tongue she cannot; for that's writ down she is slow of: of her purse she shall not; for that I'll keep shut. What's next?
S. "Item: She hath more faults than hairs."
L. That's monstrous: O, that that were out! Speed—"and more wealth than faults."
Lau. Why that word makes the faults gracious. Well, I'll have her; and if it be a match, as nothing is impossible,— Speed. What then?
Lau. Why, then will I tell thee,—that thy master stays for thee at the North-gate.
Speed. For me?
Lau. For thee? ay; who art thou? he hath stay'd for a better man than thee.
Speed. And must I go to him?
Lau. Thou must run to him: for thou hast stay'd so long, that going will scarce serve the turn.
Speed. Why didst not tell me sooner? plague of your love-letters! [Exit.]
Lau. Now will he be swing'd for reading my letter. An unmannerly slave, that will thrust himself into secrets,—I'll after, to rejoice in the boy's correction. [Exit.]

1 Dunce. 2 Shrewish.

Lau. Sir, there is a proclamation that you are vanished.
Pro. That thou art banish'd: O! that is the news:
From hence, from Silvia, and from me, thy Val. O! I have fed upon this woe already, And now excess of it will make me surfeit.
Doth Silvia know that I am banish'd?
Pro. Ay, ay; and she lath offered to the doom
(Which, unrever'st, stands in effectual force),
A sea of melting pearl, which some call tears:
Those at her father's churlish feet she tender'd,
With them, upon her knees, her humble self;
Wringing her hands, whose whiteness so became them,
As if but now they wax'd pale for woe:
But neither bended knees, pure hands held up,
Sad sighs, deep groans, nor silver-shedding tears,
Could penetrate her uncompassionate sire;
But Valentine, if he be ta'en, must die,
Besides, her intercession chaf'ld him so,
When she for thy repeal was suppliant,
That to close prison he commanded her,
With many bitter threats of biding there.
Val. No more; unless the next word that thou speak'st
Have some malignant power upon my life;
If so, I pray thee, breathe it in mine ear,
As ending anthem of my endless dolor. [Help,
Pro. Cease to lament for that thou canst not
And study help for that which thou lament'st.
Time is the nurse and breeder of all good.
Here if thou stay, thou canst not see thy love;
Besides, thy staying will abridge thy life.
Hope is a lover's staff; walk hence with that,
And manage it against despairing thoughts.
Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence;
Which, being writ to me, shall be deliver'd
Even in the milk-white bosom of thy love.
The time now serves not to expostulate:
Come, I'll convey thee through the city gate,
And, ere I part with thee, confer at large
Of all that may concern thy love affairs.
As thou lov'st Silvia, though not for thyself,
Regard thy danger, and along with me.
Val. I pray thee, Launce, an if thou seest my boy,
Bid him make haste, and meet me at the North-gate.
P. Go, sirrah, find him out. Come, Valentine.
Val. O, my dear Silvia! hapless Valentine.
[Exeunt Valentine and Proteus.

Lau. I am but a fool, look you, and yet I have the wit to think, my master is a kind of a kuave; but that's all one, if he be but one knave.
He lives not now, that knows me to be in love;
yet I am in love; but a team of horse shall not pluck that from me, nor who 'tis I love; and yet 'tis a woman: but what woman, I will not tell myself.

Enter Speed.

Speed. How now, Signor Launce! what news with your mastership?
L. With my master's ship? why, it is at sea.
Speed. Well, your old vice still; mistake the word. What news, then, in your paper?
SCENE II.—The Same.

AN APARTMENT IN THE DUKE'S PALACE.

Enter Duke and Thurio; Proteus behind.

Duke. Sir Thurio, fear not but that she will love you.

Now Valentine is banish'd from her sight.

Thur. Since his exile she hath despis'd me most.

Forsworn my company, and railed at me,

That I am desperate of obtaining her.

Duke. This weak impress of love is as a figure

Trenched in ice, which with an hour's heat

Dissolves to water, and doth lose his form.

A little time will melt her frozen thoughts,

And worthless Valentine shall be forgot.—

How now, Sir Proteus? Is your countryman,

According to our proclamation, gone?

Pro. Gone, my good lord.

Duke. My daughter takes his going grievously.

Pro. A little time, my lord, will kill that grief.

Duke. So I believe; but Thurio thinks not so.

Proteus, the good conceit I hold of thee

(For thou hast shown some sign of good desert)

Makes me the better to confer with thee.

Pro. Longer than I prove loyal to your Grace,

Let me not live to look upon your Grace.

Duke. Thou know'st how willingly I would effect

The match between Sir Thurio and my daughter?

Pro. I do, my lord.

Duke. And also, I think, thou art not ignorant

How she opposes her against my will?

Pro. She did, my lord, when Valentine was here.

Duke. Ay, and perversely she perseveres so.

What might we do to make the girl forget

The love of Valentine, and love Sir Thurio?

Pro. The best way is, to slander Valentine

With falsehood, cowardice, and poor descent;

Three things that women highly hold in hate.

Duke. Ay, but she'll think that it is spoke in hate.

Pro. Ay, if his enemy deliver it:

Therefore, it must, with circumstance, bespoken

By one whom she esteemeth as his friend.

D. Then you must undertake to slander him.

Pro. And that, my lord, I shall be loath to do;

'Tis an ill ofice for a gentleman;

Especially, against his very friend.

Duke. Where your good word can not advantage

Your slander never can endanger him: [him,

Therefore, the office is indifferent,

Being entreated to it by your friend.

P. You have prevail'd, my lord. If I can do it,

By aught that I can speak in his dispraise,

She shall not long continue love to him.

But say this weed her love from Valentine,

It follows not that she will love Sir Thurio.

Thur. Therefore, as you unwind her love from Lest it should ravel and be good to none, [him,

You must provide to bottom it on me,

Which must be done, by praising me as much

As you in worthier dispraise Sir Valentine.

Duke. And, Proteus, we dare trust you in this

Because we know, on Valentine's report, [kind,

You are already Love's firm votary,

And cannot soon revolt, and change your mind.

Upon this warrant shall you have access

Where you with Silvia may confer at large;

For she is lumpish, heavy, melancholy,

And for your friend's sake will be glad of you,

Where you may temper her, by your persuasion,

To hate young Valentine, and love my friend.

Pro. As much as I can do I will effect.

But you, Sir Thurio, are not sharp enough;

You must lay time to tangle her desires

By wanton sonnets, whose composed rhymes

Should be full fraught with serviceable vows.

D. Ay; much is the force of heaven-born poesy.

Pro. Say, that upon the altar of her beauty

You sacrifice your tears, your sighs, your heart.

Write till your ink be dry, and with your tears

Moist it again; and frame some feeling line

That may discover such integrity:

For Orpheus' lute was strung with poets' sinews,

Whose golden touch could soften steel and stones,

Make tigers tame, and huge Leviathans

Forsake unsounded deeps to dance on sands.

After your dire lamenting elegies,

Visit by night your lady's chamber window

With some sweet consort: to their instruments

Tune a deploring tune, the night's dead silence

Will well become such sweet complaining grief;

This, or else nothing, will inherit her. [ance.

Duke. This discipline shows thou hast been in love.

Thur. And thy advice this night I'll put in practice,

Therefore, sweet Proteus, my direction-giver,

Let us into the city presently.

To sort some gentlemen well skilled in music.

I have a sonnet that will serve the turn

To give the onset to thy good advice.

Duke. About it, gentlemen.

Pro. We'll wait upon your grace till after supper,

And afterward determine our proceedings.

Duke. Even now about it: I will pardon you.

[Exeunt.

Act Fourth.

SCENE I.—A FOREST NEAR MILAN.

Enter certain Outlaws.

1 Out. Fellows, stand fast: I see a passenger.

2 Out. If there be ten, shrink not, but down with 'em.

Enter Valentine and Speed.

3 Out. Stand, sir, and throw us that you have about you.

If not, we'll make you sit, and rifle you.

Sp. Sir, we are undone. These are the villains

That all the travellers do fear so much.

Val. My friends,—

1 Out. That's not so, sir; we are your enemies.

2 Out. Peace! we'll hear him. [proper man.

3 Out. Ay, by my beard, will we: for he is a

Val. Then know, that I have little wealth to

A man I am, cross'd with adversity; [lose.

My riches are these poor habiliments,

Of which if you should here disfurnish me,

You take the sum and substance that I have.

2 Out. Whither travel you?

1 Air.  2 Choose.
Val. To Verona.

1 Out. Whence came you?

Val. From Milan.

3 Out. Have you long sojourn'd there?

Val. Some sixteen months; and longer might have stay'd,

If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.

2 Out. What! were you banish'd thence?

Val. I was.

2 Out. For what offence?

Val. For that which now torments me to rehearse.

I kill'd a man, whose death I much repent;

But yet I slew him manfully, in fight.

Without false vantage, or base treachery.

1 Out. Why, ne'er repent it, if it were done so.

But were you banish'd for so small a fault?

Val. I was, and held me glad of such a doom.

1 Out. Have you the tongues?

Val. My youthful travel therein made me happy.

Or else I often had been miserable.

3 Out. By the bare scalp of Robin Hood's fat friar,

This fellow was a king for our wild faction.

1 Out. We'll have him. Sir, a word.

Speed. Master, be one of them: it's an honourable kind of thievery.

Val. Peace, villain!

2 Out. Tell us this: have you anything to take

Val. Nothing, but my fortune. [to?]

3 Out. Know then, that some of us are gentlemen,

Such as the fury of ungovern'd youth

Thrust from the company of awful 2 men:

Myself was from Verona banish'd,

For practising to steal away a lad,

An heir, and near allied unto the duke.

2 Out. And I from Mantua, for a gentleman

Whom, in my mood, I stabb'd unto the heart.

1 0. And I, for such like petty crimes as these.

But to the purpose,—for we cite our faults,

That they may hold excused our lawless lives,—

And, partly, seeing you are beautif'd

With goodly shape; and by your own report

A linguist, and a man of such perfection,

As we do in our quality much want—

2 Out. Indeed, because you are a banish'd man,

Therefore, above the rest, we parley to you.

Are you content to be our General?

To make a virtue of necessity,

And live, as we do, in this wilderness?

3 Out. What say'st thou? wilt thou be of our

Say ay, and be the captain of us all. [consort?]

We'll do thee homage, and be rule'd by thee,

Love thee as our Commander and our King.

1 Out. But if thou scorn our courtesy, thou diest. [offer'd,

2 Out. Thou shalt not live to brag what we have

Val. I take your offer, and will live with you;

Provided that you do no outrages

On silly women, or poor passengers.

3 Out. No; we detest such vile, base practices.

Come, go with us; we'll bring thee to our crews,

And show thee all the treasure we have got,

Which, with ourselves, all rest at thy dispose.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—MILAN. THE COURT OF THE PALACE.

Enter Proteus.

Pro. Already have I been false to Valentine,

And now I must be as unjust to Thurio.

Under the colour of commanding him,

I have access my own love to prefer;

But Silvia is too fair, too true, too holy,

To be corrupted with my worthless gifts.

When I protest true loyalty to her,

She twits me with my falsehood to my friend;

When to her beauty I commend my vows,

She bids me think how I have been forsworn

In breaking faith with Julia whom I lov'd:

And, notwithstanding all her sudden quips,

The least whereof would quell a lover's hope,

Yet, spaniel-like, the more she spurs my love

The more it grows, and fawneth on her still.

But here comes Thurio. Now must we to her win-

And give some evening music to her ear. [dow,

Enter Thurio and Musicians.

Thu. How now, Sir Proteus! are you crept before us?

Pro. Ay, gentle Thurio; for you know that love

Will creep in service where it cannot go.

Thu. Ay; but I hope, sir, that you love not here.

Pro. Sir, but I do; or else I would be hence.

Thu. Who? Silvia?

Pro. Ay, Silvia,—for your sake.

Thu. I thank you for your own. Now, gentle-

Let's tune, and to it lustily a while. [men,

Enter, at a distance, Host, with Julia in boy's clothes.

Host. Now, my young guest; methinks you're allycholly: I pray you, why is it? [merry.

Jul. Marry, mine host, because I cannot be Host. Come, we'll have you merry. I'll bring you where you shall hear music, and see the gentleman that you ask'd for.

Jul. But shall I hear him speak?

Host. Ay, that you shall.

Jul. That will be music. [Music plays.

Host. Hark! hark!

Jul. Is he among these?

Host. Ay; but peace! let's hear 'em.

SONG.

Who is Silvia? what is she,

That all our swains commend her?

Holy, fair, and wise is she;

The heaven such grace did lend her,

That she might admired be.

Is she kind, as she is fair,

For beauty lives with kindness?

Love doth to her eyes repair,

To help him of his blindness;

And, being help'd, inhabits there.

Then to Silvia let us sing,

That Silvia is excelling;

She excels each mortal thing,

Upon the dull earth dwelling:

To her let us garlands bring.

Host. How now! are you sadder than you were before? How do you, man? the music like me not.

Jul. You mistake: the musician likes me not.
Host. Why, my pretty youth?
Jul. He play false, father.
Host. How? out of tune on the strings?
Jul. Not so; but yet so false, that he grieves my very heart-strings.
Host. You have a quick ear.
Jul. Ay; I would I were deaf! it makes me have a slow heart.
Host. I perceive you delight not in music.
Jul. Not a whit, when it jars so.
Host. Hark! what fine change is in the music.
Jul. Ay, that change is the spite.
Host. You would have them always play but one thing?
J. I would always have one play but one thing.
But, Host, doth this Sir Proteus, that we talk on, often resort unto this gentlewoman?
Host. I tell you what Launce, his man, told me—he lov'd her out of all nick.¹
Jul. Where is Launce?
Host. Gone to seek his dog; which, to-morrow, by his master's command, he must carry for a present to his lady.
Pro. Sir Thurio, fear not you: I will so plead,
That you shall say my cunning drift excels.
Thu. Where meet we?
Pro. At Saint Gregory's well.
Thu. Farewell. [Exeunt Thu. and Musicians.

_Silvia appears at her window._

_Pro. Madam, good even to your ladyship._
_Sil. I thank you for your music, gentlemen._
Who is that, that speake? [truth,
_Pro. One, lady, if you knew his pure heart's
You would quickly learn to know him by his
Sil. Sir Proteus, as I take it. [voice.
_Pro. Sir Proteus, gentle lady, and your
Sil. What's your will? [servant.
_Pro. That I may compass yours.
Sil. You have your wish: my will is even this,
That presently you hee you home to bed.
Thou subtle, perjurd, false, disloyal man!
Think'st thou I am so shallow, so conceitless,
To be seduced by thy flattery,
That hast decy'd so many with thy vows?
Return, return, and make thy love amends.
For me, by this pale queen of night I swear,
I am so far from granting thy request,
That I despise thee for thy wrongful suit,
Any by and by intend to chide myself,
Even for this time I spend in talking to thee.
_Pro. I grant, sweet love, that I did love a lady;
But she is dead.
Jul. 'Twere false, if I should speak it; For, I am sure, she is not buried.
S. Say, that she be; yet Valentine, thy friend,
Survives, to whom thyself art witness
I am betroth'd; and art thou not asham'd to wrong him with thy importunity?
_Pro. I likewise hear that Valentine is dead.
Sil. And so, suppose, am I; for in his grave
Assure thyself, my love is buried.
_Pro. Sweet lady, let me make it from the earth.
S. Go to thy lady's grave, and call her's thence; Or, at the least, in her sepulture thine.
Jul. He heard not that.

¹ Reckoning.

_Pro. Madam, if your heart be so obdurate, Vouchsafe me yet your picture for my love,
The picture that is hanging in your chamber: To that I'll speak, to that I'll sigh and weep;
For, since the substance of your perfect self Is else devoted, I am but a shadow,
And to your shadow will I make true love.
J. If 'twere a substance, you would, sure, de-
And make it but a shadow, as I am. [ceiving it,
_Sil. I am very loath to be your idol, sir;
But, since your falsehood shall become you well To worship shadows, and adore false shapes, Send to me in the morning, and I'll send it.
And so, good rest. [Silvia retires.
_Pro. As wretches have o'er night.
That wait for execution in the morn. [Exit Pro.
_Jul. Host, will you go?
_HOST. By my halidom, I was fast asleep.
_Jul. Pray you, where lies Sir Proteus?
_Host. Marry, at my house. Trust me, I think 'tis almost day.
_Jul. Not so; but it hath been the longest night That e'er I watched, and the most heaviest. [Exit.

_SCENE III.—The Same._
Enter Eglamour.

_Egl. This is the hour that Madam Silvia
Entreated me to call, and know her mind.
There's some great matter she'd employ me in,— Madam, madam!"

_Silvia appears at her window._

_Sil. Who calls?
_Egl. Your servant, and your friend;
One that attends your ladyship's command.
_Sil. Sir Eglamour, a thousand times good morrow.
_Egl. As many, worthy lady, to yourself.
According to your ladyship's impose, I am thus early come, to know what service It is your pleasure to command me in.
_Sil. O Eglamour, thou art a gentleman,
(Think not I flatter, for I swear I do not,) Valiant, wise, remorseful, well accomplish'd. Thou art not ignorant what dear good-will I bear unto the banish'd Valentine, Nor how my father would enforce me marry Valn Thurio, whom my very soul abhor'd. Thyself hast lov'd; and I have heard thee say, No grief did ever come so near thy heart, As when thy lady and thy true love died, Upon whose grave thou vow'dst pure chastity. Sir Eglamour, I would to Valentine, To Mantua, where, I hear, he makes abode; And, for the ways are dangerous to pass, I do desire thy worthy company, Upon whose faith and honour I repose. Urge not my father's anger, Eglamour, But think upon my grief, a lady's grief; And on the justice of my flying hence, To keep me from a most unholy match Which Heaven and Fortune still reward with I do desire thee, even from a heart [plagues. As full of sorrow as the sea of sands, To bear me company, and go with me: If not, to hide what I have said to thee, That I may venture to depart alone.

Egl. Madam, I pity much your grievances; Which since I know they virtuously are plac'd, I give consent to go along with you; Recking as little what betideth me, As much I wish all good befortune you. When will you go? Syl. This evening coming. Egl. Where shall I meet you? Syl. At Friar Patrick's cell, Where I intend holy confession. Egl. I will not fall your ladyship. Good morrow, gentle lady, Syl. Good morrow, kind Sir Eglandem. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—THE SAME. Enter Launce and Crab. Launce. When a man's servant shall play the cur with him, look you, it goes hard: one that I brought up of a puppy; one that I saved from drowning, when three or four of his blind brothers and sisters went to it. I have taught him, even as one would say precisely,—thus I would teach a dog. I was sent to deliver him as a present to Mistress Silvia from my master, and I came no sooner into the dining-chamber, but he steps me to her treacher, and steals her capon's leg. O! 'tis a foul thing, when a cur cannot keep himself in all companies. I would have, as one should say one that takes upon him to be a dog indeed, to be, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not had more wit than he, to take a fault upon me that he did, I think verily, he had been hang'd for't: sure as I live, he had suffer'd for't. I have sat in the stocks for puddings he hath stolen; otherwise he had been executed: I have stood on the pillory for geese he hath kill'd; otherwise he had suffer'd for't: thou think'st not of this now!

Enter Proteus and Julia. Pro. Sebastian is thy name? I like thee well, And will employ thee in some service presently. Jul. In what you please:—I'll do what I can. Pro. I hope thou wilt. How now, you idle peasant! Where have you been these two days loitering? Launce. Marry, sir, I carried Mistress Silvia the dog you bade me, Pro. And what says she to my little jewel? Launce. Marry, she says, your dog was a cur; and tells you, currish thanks is good enough for such a present. Pro. But she receiv'd my dog? Launce. No, indeed, did she not. Here have I brought him back again. Pro. What! didst thou offer her this from me? Launce. Ay, sir: the other squirrel was stolen from me by the hangman boys in the marketplace; and then I offer'd her mine own, who is a dog as big as ten of yours, and therefore the gift the greater. Pro. Go: get thee hence, and find my dog again, Or ne'er return again into my sight. Away, I say! Stayest thou to vex me here?— A slave that still an end turns me to shame.— [Exit Launce.]

Partly, that I have need of such a youth, That can with some discretion do my business (For 'tis no trusting to yond foolish lowf), But, chiefly, for thy face, and thy behaviour, Which (if my angry deceivel me not) Witness good bringing up, fortune, and truth: Therefore know thou, for this I entertain thee. Go presently, and take this ring with thee: Deliver it to Madam Silvia. She lov'd me well deliver'd it to me. Jul. It seems, you lov'd not her, to leave her She's dead belike? [token. Pro. Not so; I think she lives. Jul. Alas! Pro. Why dost thou cry, alas! Jul. I cannot choose but pity her. Pro. Wherefore should'st thou pity her? Jul. Because, methinks, that she lov'd you as As you do love your lady Silvia. [well She dreams on him that has forgot her love; You dote on her that cares not for your love. 'Tis pity, love should be so contrary; And thinking on it makes me cry, alas! Pro. Well, give her that ring; and therewithal This letter,—that's her chamber. Tell my lady I claim the promise for her heavenly picture. Your message done, he home unto my chamber, Where thou shalt find me sad and solitary. [Exit. Jul. How many women would do such a message? Alas, poor Proteus! thou hast entertain'd A fox to be the shepherd of thy lambs. Alas, poor fool! why do I pity him, That with his very heart despiseth me? Because he loves her, he despiseth me; Because I love him, I must pity him. This ring I gave him when he parted from me, To bind him to remember my good-will; And now am I (an unhappy messenger!) To plead for that which I would not obtain: To carry that which I would have refuse'd; To praise his faith which I would have disprais'd I am my master's true confirmed love, But cannot be true servant to my master, Unless I prove false traitor to myself. Yet will I woo for him; but yet so coldly, As, Heaven it knows, I would not have him speed. Enter Silvia, attended. Gentleswoman, good day. I pray you, be my mean To bring me wheresoe you speak with Madam Silvia. Sil. What would you with her, if that I be she? Jul. If you be she, I do entreat your patience To hear me speak the message I am sent on. Sil. From whom? Jul. From my master, Sir Proteus, madam. Sil. O! he sends you for a picture? Jul. Ay, madam. Sil. Ursula, bring your picture there. [A picture brought. Go, give your master this; tell him from me, One Julia, that his changing thoughts forget, Would better fit his chamber, than this shadow. Jul. Madam, please you peruse this letter.— Pardon me, madam, I have unadvis'd Deliver'd you a paper that I should not: This is the letter to your ladyship. Sil. I pray thee, let me look on that again.
Jul. It may not be: good madam, pardon me.
Sil. There, hold.
I will not look upon your master's lines:
I know they are stuff'd with protestations,
And full of new-found oaths, which he will break,
As easily as I can tear his paper.
Jul. Madam, he sends your ladyship this ring.
S. The more shame for him that he sends it me;
For, I have heard him say, a thousand times,
His Julia gave it him at his departure.
Though his false finger have profan'd the ring,
Mime shall not do his Julia so much wrong.
Jul. She thanks you.
Sil. What say'st thou?
Jul. I thank you, madam, that you tender her.
Poor gentlewoman! my master wrongs her much.
Sil. Dost thou know her?
Jul. Almost as well as I do know myself:
To think upon her woes, I do protest,
That I have wept a hundred several times.
Sil. Belike, she thinks, that Proteus hath forsook her.
Jul. I think she doth, and that's her cause of sorrow.
Sil. Is she not passing fair?
Jul. She hath been fairer, madam, than she is.
When she did think my master lov'd her well,
She, in my judgment, was as fair as you;
But since she did neglect her looking-glass,
And threw her sun-expelling mask away,
The air hath stary'd the roses in her cheeks,
And pinch'd the lily-tincture of her face,
That now she is become as black as I.
Sil. How tall was she?
Jul. About my stature; for, at Pentecost,
When all our pageants of delight were play'd,
Our youth got me to play the woman's part;
And I was trimm'd in Madam Julia's gown,
Which served me as fit, by all men's judgments,
As if the garment had been made for me:
Therefore, I know she is about my height.
And at that time I made her weep a-good,
For I did play a lamentable part.
Madam, 'twas Ariadne, passioning
For Theseus' perjury and unjust flight;
Which I so lively acted with my tears,
That my poor mistress, moved therewithal,
Wept bitterly; and, would I might be dead,
If I in thought felt not her very sorrow.
Sil. She is beholden to thee, gentle youth.—
Alas, poor lady! desolate and left!—
I weep myself, to think upon thy words.
Here, youth; there is my purse; I give thee this
For thy sweet mistress' sake, because thou lov'st her.
Farewell. [Exit Silvia.
Jul. And she shall thank you for't, if ever you know her.—
A virtuous gentlewoman, mild, and beautiful.
I hope my master's suit will be but cold,
Since she respects my mistress' love so much.
Alas, how love can trifle with itself!
Here is her picture. Let me see: I think,
If I had such a tire, this face of mine
Were full as lovely as is this of hers;
And yet the painter flatter'd her a little,
Unless I flatter with myself too much.
Her hair is auburn, mine is perfect yellow:
If that be all the difference in his love,
I'll get me such a coloured periwig:
Her eyes are grey as glass, and so are mine:
Ay, but her forehead's low, and mine's as high.
What should it be, that he respects in her,
But I can make respective in myself,
If this fond. Love were not a blinded god?
Come, shadow, come, and take this shadow up,
For 'tis thy rival. O thou senseless form!
Thou shalt be worshipp'd, kiss'd, lov'd, and
And, were there sense in his idolatry, [ador'd,
My substance should be statu'd in thy stead.
I'll use thee kindly for thy mistress' sake,
That us'd me so; or else, by Jove, I vow,
I should have scratch'd out your unseeing eyes,
To make my master out of love with thee. [Exit.

Act Fifth.

SCENE I.—THE SAME. AN ABBEY.

Enter Eglamour.
Egl. The sun begins to gild the western sky,
And now it is about the very hour,
That Silvia at Friar Patrick's cell should meet me.
She will not fail; for lovers break not hours,
Unless it be to come before their time,
So much they spur their expedition.

Enter Silvia.

See, where she comes!—Lady, a happy evening.
Sil. Amen, amen! go on, good Eglamour.
Out at the postern by the abbey-wall.
I fear I am attended by some spies. [off;
Egl. Fear not: the forest is not three leagues
If we recover that, we are sure enough. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—THE SAME.

A ROOM IN THE DUKE'S PALACE.

Enter Thurio, Proteus, and Julia.

Thu. Sir Proteus, what says Silvia to my suit?
Pro. O, sir! I find her milder than she was;
And yet she takes exceptions at your person.
Thu. What, that my leg is too long?
Pro. No, that it is too little.
Thu. I'll wear a boot to make it somewhat rounder.

Jul. But love will not be spur'd to what it
Thu. What says she to my face? [loathes.
Pro. She says it is a fair one. [black.
Thu. Nay, then the wanton lies: my face is Pro. But pearls are fair; and the old saying is,
Black men are pearls in beauteous ladies' eyes.
J. 'Tis true, such pearls as put ladies' eyes;
For I had rather wink than look on them.
Thu. How likes she my discourse?
Pro. Ill, when you talk of war. [peace?
Thu. But well, when I discourse of love and
Jul. But better, indeed, when you hold your
Thu. What says she to my valour? [peace.
Pro. O, sir, she makes me no doubt of that.
Jul. She needs not, when she knows it cow-
Thu. What says she to my birth? [ardise.
Pro. Than you are well deriv'd.
Jul. True; from a gentleman to a fool.
Thu. Considers she my possessions?
Enter Duke.

Duke. How now, Sir Proteus! Now now, Thurio? Which of you saw Sir Eglamour of late?

Pro. Not I.

Duke. Saw you my daughter?

Pro. Neither.

D, Why, then she's fled unto that peasant Val.

And Eglamour is in her company. Lent, 'Tis true; for Friar Laurence met them both, As he in penance wander'd through the forest. Him he well knew, and guess'd that it was she; But, being mask'd, he was not sure of it: Besides, she did intend confession

At Patrick's cell this even, and there she was not. These likelihoods confirm her flight from hence: Therefore, I pray you, stand not to discourse, But mount you presently, and meet with me Upon the rising of the mountain foot, That leads towards Mantua, whither they are fled. Dispatch, sweet gentlemen, and follow me.[Exit.

Thu. Why, this it is to be a peevish girl, That flies her fortune when it follows her. I'll after, more to be reveng'd on Eglamour, Than for the love of reckless Silvia. [Exit.

Pro. And I will follow, more for Silvia's love, Than hate of Eglamour, that goes with her. [Exit.

Jul. And I will follow, more to cross that love, Than hate for Silvia, that is gone for love. [Exit.

SCENE III.—THE FOREST.

Enter Silvia and Outlaws.

1 Out. Come, come; be patient, we must bring you to our Captain.

Sil. A thousand more mischiefs than this one Have learn'd me how to brook this patiently.

2 Out. Come, bring her away.

10. Where is the gentleman that was with her?

3 Out. Being nimble-footed, he hath outrun us; But Myles and Valerius follow him. Go thou with her to the west end of the wood; There is our Captain. We'll follow him that's fled: The thicket is beset; he cannot make escape.

1 Out. Come, I must bring you to our Captian's cave.

Fear not; he bears an honourable mind, And will not use a woman lawlessly.

Sil. O Valentine! this I endure for thee. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—ANOTHER PART OF THE FOREST.

Enter Valentine.

Val. How use doth breed a habit in a man! These shadowy desert unfrondented woods, I better brook than flourishing peopled towns. Here can I sit alone, unseen of any, And to the nightingale's complaining notes Tune my distresses, and record my woes.

O thou that dost inhabit in my breast.

Pro. O! ay; and pities them.

Thu. Wherefore?

Jul. That such an ass should owe them.

Pro. That they are out by lease.

Jul. Here comes the Duke.

Enter Proteus, Silvia, and Julia.

Pro. Madam, this service I have done for you, (Though you respect not aught your servant doth) To hazard life, and rescue you from him, [love. That would have forc'd your honour and your Vouchsafe me, for my meed, but one fair look; A smaller boon than this I cannot beg, And less than this, I am sure, you cannot give.

Val.[Aside.] How like a dream is this, I see, and Love, lend me patience to forbear a while. [hear!

Sil. O miserable, unhappy that I am!

Pro. Unhappy were you, madam, ere I came; But by my coming I have made you happy.

Sil. By thy approach thou mak'st me most unhappy. [your presence.

Jul.[Aside.] And me, when he approacheth to

Sil. Had I been seized by a hungry lion, I would have been a breakfast to the beast, Rather than have false Proteus rescue me, O, Heaven! be judge, how I love Valentine, Whose life's as tender to me as my soul; And full as much (for more there cannot be) I do detest false, perjur'd Proteus: Therefore, be gone! solicit me no more.

Pro. What dangerous action, stood it next to Would I not undergo for one calm look! [death, O! 'tis the curse in love, and still approv'd, When women cannot love, where they're belov'd, Sil. When Proteus cannot love, where he's been Read over Julia's heart, thy first best love, [lov'd, For whose dear sake thou didst then rend thy Into a thousand oaths; and all those oaths [faith Descended into perjury to love me. Thou hast no faith left now, unless thou dost two; And that's far worse than none: better have none Than plural faith, which is too much by one: Thou counterfeit to thy true friend!

Pro. In love

Who respects friend?

Sil.

All men but Proteus.

Pro. Nay, if the gentle spirit of moving words Can no way change you to a milder form, I'll woo you like a soldier, at arms' end, And love you 'gainst the nature of love—force

Sil. O Heaven!

[you.

Pro. I'll force thee yield to my desire.

Enter Valentine.

Val. Ruffian, let go that rude uncivil touch; Thou friend of an ill fashion!

Pro. Valentine!

Val. Thou common friend, that's without faith or love;

(For such is a friend now) treacherous man! [eye Thou hast beguil'd my hopes: naught but mine
Could have persuaded me. Now I dare not say, I have one friend alive: thou would'st disprove me.

Who should be trusted, when one's right hand Is perjur'd to the bosom? Proteus, I am sorry I must never trust thee more, But count the world a stranger for thy sake. The private wound is deepest. O time most accur'd!

'Mongst all foes, that a friend should be the worst!

Pro. My shame and guilt confound me.—

Forgive me, Valentine. If hearty sorrow Be a sufficient ransom for offence, I tender 'tis here: I do as truly suffer, As 'er I did commit.

Val. Then, I am paid;

And once again I do receive thee honest. Who by repentance is not satisfied, Is nor of heaven, nor earth; for these are pleas'd, By penitence th' Eternal's wrath 's appeas'd: And, that my love may appear plain and free, All that was mine in Silvia I give thee.

Jul. O me unhappy!

Pro. Look to the boy.

Val. Why, boy! why, wag! how now! what's the matter? Look up; speak.

Jul. O good sir! my master charg'd me to deliver a ring to Madam Silvia, which, out of my neglect, was never done.

Pro. Where is that ring, boy?

Jul. Here 'tis: this is it.

Pro. How! let me see.—Why, this is the ring I gave to Julia.

Jul. O! cry your mercy, sir; I have mistook: This is the ring you sent to Silvia.

[Shews another ring.]

Pro. But how came'st thou by this ring? At my depart I gave this unto Julia.

Jul. And Julia herself did give it to me; And Julia herself hath brought it hither.

Pro. How? Julia!

Jul. Behold her that gave aim to all thy oaths, And entertain'd 'em deeply in her heart: How oft hast thou with perjury cleft the root? O Proteus! let this habit make thee blush: Be thou ashamed, that I have took upon me Such an immodest raiment; if shame live In a disguise of love. It is the lesser blot, modesty finds, Women to change their shapes, than men their minds.

Pro. Than men their minds: 'tis true. O Heaven! were man

But constant, he were perfect: that one error Fills him with faults, makes him run through all th' sins:

Inconstancy falls off, ere it begins.

What is in Silvia's face, but I may spy

More fresh in Julia's, with a constant eye?

Val. Come, come, a hand from either.

Let me be blest to make this happy close:

'Twere pity two such friends should be long foes.

Pro. Bear witness, Heaven, I have my wish for ever.

Jul. And I mine.

Enter Outlaws, with Duke and Thurio.

Out. A prize! a prize! a prize!

V. Forbear, I say; it is my lord the Duke.—Your Grace is welcome to a man disgrac'd, Banished Valentine.

Duke. Sir Valentine!

Thur. Yonder is Silvia; and Silvia's mine.

V. Thurio, give back, or else embrace thy death. Come not within the measure of my wrath: Do not name Silvia thine; if once again, Milan shall not behold thee. Here she stands: Take but possession of her with a touch; I dare thee but to breathe upon my love.

Thur. Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I. I hold him but a fool that will endanger His body for a girl that loves him not: I claim her not, and therefore she is thine.

Duke. The more degenerate and base art thou, To make such means for her as thou hast done, And leave her on such slight conditions. Now, by the honour of my ancestry, I do applaud thy spirit, Valentine, And think thee worthy of an empress' love. Know, then, I here forget all former griefs, Cancel all grudge, repeal thee home again, Plead a new state in thy unrival'd merit, To which I thus subscribe.—Sir Valentine, Thou art a gentleman, and well deriv'd: Take thou thy Silvia, for thou hast deserv'd her

Val. I thank your grace, the gift hath made me happy.

I now beseech you, for your daughter's sake, To grant one boon that I shall ask of you.

Duke. I grant it for thine own, what'er it be.

V. These banish'd men, that I have kept Are men endu'd with worthy qualities; withal, Forgive them what they have committed here, And let them be recall'd from their exile. They are reformed, civil, full of good, And fit for great employment, worthy lord.

Duke. Thou hast prevail'd: I pardon them and thee:

Dispose of them as thou know'st their deserts. Come; let us go: we will include all jars With triumphs, mirth, and rare solemnity.

Val. And as we walk along, I dare be bold With our discourse to make your Grace to smile. What think you of this page, my lord?

Duke. I think the boy hath grace in him: he blushes.

Val. I warrant you, my lord,—more grace than boy.

Duke. What mean you by that saying?

Val. Please you, I'll tell you as we pass along, That you will wonder what hath fortune.— Come, Proteus; 'tis your penance, but to hear The story of your loves discovered: That done, our day of marriage shall be yours; One feast, one house, one mutual happiness.

Act First.

Enter Justice Shallow, Slender, and Sir
Hugh Evans.

Shall. Sir Hugh, persuade me not; I will make a Star-chamber matter of it; if he were twenty Sir John Falstaffs, he shall not abuse Robert Shallow, Esquire.

Slan. In the county of Gloster, justice of peace, and coronor.

Shal. Ay, Cousin Slender, and Cust-actorum, Slender, Ay, and ratolorum too; and a gentleman born, master parson; who writes himself armiger; in any bill, warrant, quittance, or obligation, armiger.

Shal. Ay, that we do: and have done any time these three hundred years.

Slan. All his successors, gone before him, have done’t; and all his ancestors, that come after him, may: they may give the dozen white luces in their coat.

Shal. It is an old coat.

Eva. The dozen white louses do become an old coat well; it agrees well, passant: it is a familiar beast to man, and signifies—love.

Shal. The luce is the fresh fish; the salt fish is an old coat.

Slan. I may quarter, coz?

Shal. You may, by marrying.

Eva. It is marrying indeed, if he quarter it.

Shal. Not a whitt.

Eva. Yes, py’r lady; if he has a quarter of your coat, there is but three skirts for yourself, in my simple conjectures: but this is all one: If Sir John Falstaff have committed disparagements unto you, I am of the church, and will be glad to do my benevolence, to make atonements and compromises between you.

1 A little formerly applied to the clergy.
2 Custos Rotulorum, officer of the county.
3 Esquire.
tures shall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your likings.

_Page._ I am glad to see your worshipps well: I thank you for my venison, master Shallow.

_Shal._ Master _Page_, I am glad to see you; Much good do it your good heart! I wished your venison better; it was ill-killed:—How doth good mistress Page?—and I love you always with my heart, la; with my heart.

_Page._ Sir, I thank you.

_Shall._ Sir, I thank you; by yea and no, I do.

_P._ I am glad to see you, good master _Slender_.

_Slen._ How does your fallow greyhound, sir? I heard say he was outrun on Cotesale.

_Page._ It could not be judged, sir.

_Slen._ You'll not confess, you'll not confess.

_Shall._ That he will not:—'tis your fault, 'tis your fault:—'Tis a good dog.

_Page._ A cur, Sir.

_Shall._ Sir, he is a good dog, and a fair dog; can there be more said? he is good, and fair:—Is Sir John Falstaff here?

_Page._ Sir, he is within; and I would I could do a good office between you.

_Eva._ It is spoke as a Christian ought to speak.

_Shall._ He hath wrong'd me, master _Page_.

_Page._ Sir, he doth in some sort confess it.

_Shall._ If it be confess'd, it is not redress'd: is not that so, master _Page_? He hath wrong'd me; indeed, he hath:—at a word, he hath:—believe me;—Robert Shallow, Esquire, saith he is wrong'd.

_Página._ Here comes Sir John.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, Bardolph, _Nym_, and _Pistol_.

_Fal._ Now, master Shallow; you'll complain of me to the king?

_Shall._ Knight, you have beaten my men, killed my deer, and broke open my lodge: this shall be answer'd.

_Fal._ I will answer it straight:—I have done all this:—That is now answer'd.

_Shall._ The Council shall know this.

_Fal._ 'Twere better for you, if it were known in counsel: you'll be laugh'd at.

_Eva._ Paucè verba, Sir John, good worts.

_Fal._ Good worts! good cabbage.—_Slender_, I broke your head; what matter have you against me?

_Slen._ Marry, Sir, I have matter in my head against you; and against Bardolph, _Nym_, and _Pistol_. They carried me to the tavern, and made me drunk, and afterwards picked my pocket.

_Bard._ You Banbury cheese!

_Slen._ Ay, it is no matter.

_Pistol._ How now, _Mephostophilus_?

_Slen._ Ay, it is no matter.

_Nym._ Slice, I say! paucè, paucè; slice! that's my humour.

_Slen._ Where's Simple, my man?—can you tell, cousin?

_Eva._ Peace: I pray you! Now let us understand: There is three umpires in this matter as I understand: that—master _Page_, _fidelicet_, master _Page_; and there is myself, _fidelicet_,

1 The ancient name of all the cabbage kind.

myself; and the three party is, lastly and finally, mine host of the Garter.

_P._ We three, to hear it, and end it between _Eva._ Ferry goot: I will make a prief of it in my note-book; and we will afterwards' ork upon the cause, with as great discreetly as we can.

_Fal._ _Pistol_,—

_Pistol._ He hears with ears.

_Eva._ What phrase is this, _He hears with ear_? Why, it is affectations.

_F._ _Pistol_, did you pick master _Slender_'s purse?

_Slen._ Ay, by these gloves, did he (or I would I might never come in mine own great chamber again else), of seven groats in a ill-sixpences, and two Edward shovel-boards, that cost me two shillings and twpence a-piece of Yead Miller, by these gloves.

_Fal._ Is this true, _Pistol_?

_Eva._ No; it is false, if it is a pick-purse.

_Pist. Ha, thou mountain-foreigner!—_Sir John, another mine?

_Fal._ I combat challenge of this latter blibo:3 Word of denial in thy labras3 here; Word of denial; froth and scum, thou liest.

_Slen._ By these gloves, then 'twas he.

_Nym._ Be advised, sir, and pass good humours; I will say, marry tramp, with you if you run the nut-hook's4 humour on me: that is the very note of it.

_Slen._ By this hat, then he in the red face had it: for though I cannot remember what I did, when you made me drunk, yet I am not altogether an ass.

_Fal._ What say you, Scarlet and _John_?

_Bard._ Why, sir, for my part, I say, the gentleman had drunk himself out of his five sentences.

_Eva._ It is his five senses: fie, what the ignorance is!

_Bard._ And being fab,5 sir, was, as they say, cashier'd; and so conclusions pass'd the carearies.6

_S._ Ay, you spake in Latin then too: but 'tis no matter: I'll ne'er be drunk whilst I live again, but in honest, civil, godly company, for this trick: if I be drunk, I'll be drunk with those that have the fear of God, and not with drunken knaves.

_Eva._ That is a virtuous mind.

_Fal._ You hear all these matters denied, gentlemen; you hear it.

Enter Mistress Anne _Page_ with wine; Mistress _Ford_ and Mistress _Page_ following.

_Page._ Nay, daughter, carry the wine in; we will drink within.

[Exit _Anne Page_.

_Page._ How now, mistress _Ford_?

_F._ Mistress _Ford_, by my troth, you are very well met: by your leave, good mistress. [Kissing her.

_Page._ Wife, bid these gentlemen welcome:—Come, we have a hot venison pasty to dinner; come, gentlemen, I hope we shall drink down all unkindness.

[Exit all but _Shall_, _Slender_, and _Evans_.

_Slen._ I had rather than forty shillings, I had my book of _Songs_ and _Sonnets_ here:

[Enter _Simple_.

_How now, Simple! where have you been! I did call thee. 2 Call me thief. 3 Drunk.
1 Shillings.
2 Blade, thin as a lath.
3 Lips.
4 Bounds of good behaviour.}
must wait on myself, must I? You have not
The Book of Riddles about you, have you?
Sim. Book of Riddles! why, did you not lend it to Alice Shortcake upon Allhallowmas last, a fortnight afore Michaelmas? 1
Shal. Come, coz; come, coz; we stay for you.
A word with you, coz; marry, this, coz; There is, as 'twere a tender, a kind of tender, made afar off by Sir Hugh here.—Do you understand me?
Slen. Ay, sir, you shall find me reasonable;
if it be so, I shall do that is reason.
Shal. Nay, but understand me.
Slen. So I do, sir.
Eva. Give ear to his motions, master Slenider:
I will description the matter to you, if you be capacity of it.
Slen. Nay, I will do as my cousin Shallow says:
I pray you, pardon me; he's a justice of peace
in his country, simple though I stand here.
Eva. But this is not the question; the question is concerning your marriage.
Shal. Ay, there's the point, sir.
Eva. Marry, is it; the very point of it; to mistress Anne Page.
Slen. Why, if it be so, I will marry her, upon any reasonable demands.
Eva. But can you affection the 'oman? Let us command to know that of your mouth, or of your lips; for divers philosophers hold, that the lips is parcel of the mouth; —Therefore, precisely, can you carry your good will to the maid?
Sh. Cousin Abraham Slender, can you love her?
Slen. I hope, sir, —I will do, as it shall become one that would do reason.
Eva. Nay, you must speak possisible, if you can carry her your desires towards her.
Shal. That you must: Will you, upon good dowry, marry her?
Slen. I will do a greater thing than that, upon your request, cousin, in any reason.
Shal. Nay, conceive me, conceive me, sweet coz; what I do, is to pleasure you, coz: Can you love the maid?
Slen. I will marry her, sir, at your request;
but if there be no great love in the beginning,
yet heaven may decrease it upon better acquaintance, when we are married, and have more occasion to know one another: I hope, upon familiarity will grow more contempt; but if you say, marry her, I will marry her, that I am freely dissolved, and absolutely.
Eva. It is a fery discretion answer; save, the faul is in the 'ort absolutely; the 'ort is, according to our meaning, resolutely; —his meaning is good.
Shal. Ay, I think my cousin meant well.
Sl. Ay, or else I would I might be hanged, la.
Slen. No, I thank you, forsooth, heartily; I am very well.
Anne. The dinner attends you, sir.
Slen. I am not a-hungry, I thank you, forsooth:
Go, sirrah, for all you are my man, go, wait upon my cousin Shallow: [Exit Simple.] A justice of peace sometime may be beholden to his friend for a man: —I keep but three men and a boy yet, till my mother be dead: But what though? yet I live like a poor gentleman born.
Anne. I may not go in without your worship:
they will not sit, till you come.
Slen. 'Tis faith, I'll eat nothing; I thank you
as much as though I did.
Anne. I pray you, sir, walk in.
Slen. I had rather walk here, I thank you: I bruised my shin the other day with playing at sword and dagger with a master of fence, three veneys 1 for a dish of stewed prunes; and, by my troth, I cannot abide the smell of hot meat since.
Why do your dogs bark so? be there bears in the town?
Anne. I think there are, sir; I heard them talked of.
Slen. I love the sport well; but I shall as soon quarrel at it, as any man in England: —You are afraid, if you see the bear loose, are you not?
Anne. Ay, indeed, sir.
Slen. That's meat and drink to me now: I have seen Sackerson 2 loose, twenty times: and have taken him by the chain: but, I warrant you, the women have so cried and shriek'd at it, that it pass'd 3: —but women, indeed, unable 'em; they are very ill-favoured rough things.
Re-enter Page.
Page. Come, gentle master Slenider, come;
we stay for you.
Slen. I'll eat nothing; I thank you, sir.
Page. By cock and pye, you shall not choose,
sir; come, come.
Slen. Nay, pray you, lead the way.
Page. Come on, sir.
Slen. Mistress Anne, yourself shall go first.
Anne. Not I, sir, pray you, keep on.
Slen. Truly, I will not go first; truly, la; I will not do you that wrong.
Anne. I pray you, sir.
Slen. I'll rather be unmannerly than troublesome; you do yourself wrong, indeed, la.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—THE SAME.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans and Simple.
Eva. Go your ways, and ask of Doctor Cains house, which is the way: and there dwells one mistress Quickly, which is in the manner of his nurse, or his dry nurse, or his cook, or his laundry, his washer, and his wringer.
Sim. Well, sir.
Eva. Nay, it is petter yet:—give her this letter: for it is a 'oman that altogether's acquaintance with mistress Anne Page: and the letter is, to desire and to require her to solicit your master's desires to mistress Anne Page: I pray you be gone; I will make an end of my dinner;
there's pippins and cheese to come.  [Exeunt.
1 Three bouts.  2 Name of a bear exhibited at South-
3 Passed expression.
[work.
SCENE III.—A ROOM IN THE GARTER INN.

Enter Falstaff, Host, Bardolph, Nym, Pistol, and Robin.

Fal. Mine host of the Garter,—
Host. What says my bully-rook? Speak scholarly, and wisely.
Fal. Truly, mine host, I must turn away some of my followers.
Host. Discard, bully Hercules; cashier: let them wag: trot, trot.
Fal. I sit at ten pounds a week.
Host. Thou art an emperor, Caesar, Keiser, and Pheezer. I will entertain Bardolph; he shall draw, he shall tap: said I well, bully Hector?
Fal. Do so, good mine host.
Host. I have spoke; let him follow: Let me see thince froth, and lime: I am at a word; follow.

[Exit Host.

Fal. Bardolph, follow him; a tapster is a good trade; an old cloak makes a new jerkin; a withered servingman, a fresh tapster; Go, adieu.

Bard. It is a life that I have desired; I will thrive.

[Exit Bard.

Pist. O base Gongarian! wilt thou the spigot wield?

Nym. His mind is not heroick, and there's the humour of it.

Fal. I am glad I am so acquitt of this tinder-box: his thefts were too open: his filching was like an unskilful singer, he kept not time.

Nym. The good humour is, to steal at a minute's rest.

Pist. Convey, the wise it call: Steal! foh, a frieze for the phrase!

Fal. Well, sirs, I am almost out at heels.

Pist. Why, then, let kibes ensue.

Fal. There is so remedy; I must shift.

Pist. Young ravens must have food.

Fal. Which of you know Ford of this town?

Pist. I ken the wight; he is of substance good.

Fal. My honest lads, I tell you what I am about.

Pist. Two yards and more.

Fal. No quips now, Pistol; indeed I am in the waist two yards about: but I am now about no waste; I am about thrift. Briefly, I do mean to make love to Ford's wife; I spy entertainment in her; she discourses, she carves, she gives the leer of invitation; I can construe the action of her familiar style; and the hardest voice of her behaviour, to be English'd rightly, is, I am Sir John Falstaff's.

Pist. He hath studied her well, and translated her well; out of honesty into English.

N. The anchor is deep: will that humour pass?

Fal. Now; the report goes, she has all the rule of her husband's purse.

Pist. To her, boy, say I.

Nym. The humour rises; it is good.

Fal. I have writ me here a letter to her: and here another to Page's wife; who even now gave me good eyes too; she bears the purse too; she is a region in Guiana, all gold and bounti. I will be cheater to them both, and they shall be exchequers to me; they shall be my East and West Indies, and I will trade to them both. Go, bear thou this letter to mistress Page; and thou this to mistress Ford: we will thrive, lads, we will thrive.

Pist. Shall I Sir Pandarus of Troy become, And by my side wear steelf then, Lucifertakeall!

Nym. I will run no base humour; here, take the humour letter; I will keep the 'haviour of reputation.

Fal. Hold, sirrah, [To Rob.] bear you these letters tightly 1; Sail like my pinace to these golden shores.—Rogues, hence avaut! vanish like hallstones, go; Trudge, plot away, o' the hook; seek shelter, pack! Falstaff will learn the humour of this age, French thrift, you rogues; myself, and skirted base.

[Exeunt Falstaff and Robin.

Pist. Let vultures gripe thee, for gourd and fullam 2 hold, And high and low beguile the rich and poor; Tester 3 I'll have in pouch, when thou shalt lack, Base Phrygian Turk!

Nym. I have operations in my head, which be humours of revenge.

Pist. Wilt thou revenge?

Nym. By velkin, and her star!

Pist. With wit, or steel!

Nym. With both the humours, I: I will discuss the humour of this love to Page.

Pist. And I to Ford shall eke unfold, How Falstaff, varlet vile, His dove will prove, his gold will hold, And his soft couch defile.

Nym. My humour shall not cool: I will incense 4 Page to deal with poison; I will possess him with yollowness 5, for the revolt of inien is dangerous: that is my true humour.

Pist. Thou art the Mars of malcontents: I second thee; troop on.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A ROOM IN DR CAIUS'S HOUSE.

Enter Mrs Quickly, Simple, and Rugby.

Quick. What; John Rugby!—I pray thee, go to the casement, and see if you can see my master, master doctor Caius, coming: if he do, i'faith, and find any body in the house, here will be an old abusing of the king's English.

Rug. I'll go watch.

[Exit Rugby.

Quick. Go; and we'll have a posset for't soon at night, at the latter end of a sea-coal fire. An honest, willing, kind fellow, as ever servant shall come in house withal; and, I warrant you, no tall-tale, nor no breed-bate; his worst fault is, that he is given to prayer: he is something peevish that way: but nobody but has his fault;—but let that pass. Peter Simple, you say your name is?

Sim. Ay, for fault of a better.

Quick. And master Slender's your master?

Sim. Ay, forsooth.

Quick. Does he not wear a great round beard, like a grover's paring knife?

S. No, forsooth: he hath but a little wee face, with a little yellow beard; a Cain-coloured beard.

Quick. A softly-sprightly man, is he not?

Sim. Ay, forsooth: but he is as tall? a man of

1 Hungarian. 3 Chapped feet.
2 A fig. 4 Escheautour; an officer in Eschequer.
3 Sixpence.
his hands, as any is between this and his head; he hath fought with a warrener.

Quick. How say you?—O, I should remember him; does he not hold up his head, as it were? and strut in his gait?

Sim. Yes, indeed, does he.

Quick. Well, heaven send Anne Page no worse fortune. Tell master parson Evans, I will do what I can for your master; Anne is a good girl, and I wish—

Re-enter Rugby.

Rug. Out, alas! here comes my master.

Q. We shall all be shent! Run in here, good young man; go into this closet. [Shuts Simple in the closet.] He will not stay long.—What, John Rugby! John, what, John, I say!—Go, John, go enquire for my master; I doubt he be not well, that he comes not home:—and down, down, adown-a, &c. [Sings.

Enter De Caius.

Caius. Vat is you sing? I do not like dese toys; Pray you, go and veet h me in my closet un boiter verd; a box, a green-a box; Do in- tend vat I speak? a green-a box.

Q. Ay forsooth, I'll fetch it you. I am glad he went not in himself; if he had found the young man, he would have been horn-mad. [Aside.

Caius. Fe, fe, fe! ma foi, il fait fort chaud. Je m'en vais a la cour,—la grande affaire.

Quick. Is it this, sir?

C. Ouy; mettre le au mon pocket; Dépêche, quickly.—Vere is dat knave Rugby?

Caius. You are John Rugby, and you are Jack Rugby: Come, take-a your rapier, and come after my heel to de court.

Rug. 'Tis ready, sir, here in the porch.

C. By my troth, I tarry too long:—O'!s me! Qu'ay j'oublié? dere is some simples in my closet, dat I will not for the world I shall leave behind.

Quick. Ah me! he'll find the young man there, and be mad.

Caius. Vat is in my closet?—Villany? larron! [Pulling Simple out.] Rugby, my rapier.

Quick. Good master, be content.

Caius. Verefore shall I be content-a?

Quick. The young man is an honest man.

C. Vat shall de honest man do in my closet? dere is no honest man dat shall come in my closet.

Quick. I beseech you, be not flagmatic; hear the truth of it. He came of an errand to me from parson Hugh.

Caius. Yell.

Sim. Ay, forsooth, to desire her to—

Quick. Peace, I pray you.

C. Peace-a your tongue:—Speak-a your tale.

Sim. To desire this honest gentlewoman, your maid, to speak a good word to mistress Anne Page for my master, in the way of marriage.

Quick. This is all, indeed, la: but I'll ne'er put my finger in the fire, and heed not.

Caius. Sir Hugh send-a you?—Rugby, boillez me some paper:—Tarry you a little a while.

[Writes.

Quick. I am glad he is so quiet: if he had been thoroughly moved, you should have heard him so loud, and so melancholy:—But notwithstanding, man, I'll do your master what good I can: and the very yea and the no is, the French doctor, my master,—I may call him my master, look you, for I keep his house; and I wash, wring, brow, bake, scour, dress meat and drink, make the beds, and do all myself;—

Sim. 'Tis a great charge, to come under one body's hand.

Quick. Are you avis'd o' that? you shall find it a great charge: and to be up early and down late:—but notwithstanding (to tell you in your ear; I would have no words of it;) my master himself is in love with mistress Anne Page; but notwithstanding that,—I know Anne's mind—that's neither here nor there.

Caius. You jack'nape: give-a dis letter to Sir Hugh; by gar, it is a challenge; I vill cut his trat in de park, and I will teach a scurry jack'nape priest to paddle or make:—you may be gone; it is not good you tarry here. [Exit Simple.

Quick. Alas, he speaks but for his friend.

C. It is no matter-a for dat;—do not you tell-a me dat I shall have Anne Page for myself?—by gar, I will kill de jack priest; and I have appointed mine host of de Jarrett to measure our weapon;—by gar, I vill myself have Anne Page.

Quick. Sir, the maid loves you, and all shall be well: we must give folks leave to prate.

Caius. Rugby, come to the court vit me;—by gar, if I have not Anne Page, I shall turn your head out of my door:—Follow my heels, Rugby.

[Exeunt Caius and Rugby.

Quick. You shall have An fools-head of your own. No, I know Anne's mind for that; never a woman in Windsor knows more of Anne's mind than I do; nor can do more than I do with her.

Fent. [Within.] Who's within there, ho?

Quick. Who's there, I trow? Come near the house, I pray you.

Enter Fenton.

Fent. How now, good woman; how dost thou? Quick. The better, that it pleases your good worship to ask.

F. What news? how does pretty mistress Anne?

Q. In truth, sir, and she is pretty, and honest, and gentle: and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way; I praise heaven for it.

Fent. Shall I do any good, thinkest thou? Shall I not loose my suit?

Q. Troth, sir, all is in his hands above; but notwithstanding, master Fenton, I'll be sworn on a book she loves you:—Have not your worship a wart above your eye?

Fent. Yes, marry, have I; what of that?

Quick. Well, thereby hangs a tale:—good faith, it is such another Nan;—but, I detest, an honest maid as ever broke bread:—We had an hour's talk of that wart;—I shall never laugh but in that maid's company!—But, indeed, she has given too much to alcholly and musing: But for you,—Well, go to.

F. Well, I shall see her to-day: Hold, there's money for thee; let me have thy voice in my behalf:—if thou seest her before me, commend me—

1 I protest.
Quick. Will I? i'faith, that we will: and I will tell your worship more of the wart the next time we have confidence; and of other wooers.

Fent. Well, farewell; I am in great haste now.

Quick. Farewell to your worship.—Truly, an honest gentleman; but Anne loves him not: for
I know Anne's mind as well as another does:
—Out upon 't! what have I forgot? [Exit.

Act Second.

SCENE I.—BEFORE PAGE'S HOUSE.

Enter Mistress Page with a letter.

Mrs Page. What! have I seaped love-letters in the holy-day time of my beauty, and am I now a subject for them? Let me see: [Reads.

Ask me no reason why I love you; for though love use reason for his precision, he admits him for not his counsellor: You are not young, no more am I: go to then, there's sympathy: you are merry, so am I: Ha! ha! then there's more sympathy: you love sack, and so do I; Would you desire better sympathy? Let it suffice thee, mistress Page (at the least, if the love of a soldier can suffice), that I love thee. I will not say, pity me,
'tis not a soldierlike phrase; but I say, love me.
By me,

Thine own true knight,
By day or night,
With all his might,
For thee to fight.

John Falstaff.

O wicked, wicked world!—one that is well nigh worn to pieces with age, to show himself a young gallant! What unweighed behaviour hath this Flemish drunkard picked out of my conversation, that he dares in this manner assay me?
Why, he hath not been thrice in my company!
—What should I say to him?—I was then frugal of my mirth.—Why, I'll exhibit a bill in the parliament for the putting down of men.
How shall I be revenged on him? for revenged
I will be.

Enter Mistress Ford.

Mrs Ford. Mrs Page! trust me, I was going to your house.

Mrs Page. And trust me, I was coming to you. You look very ill.

Mrs Ford. Nay, I ne'er believe that; I have to show to the contrary.

Mrs Page. 'Faith, but you do, in my mind.

Mrs Ford. Well, I do then; yet, I say, I could show you to the contrary: O, mistress
Page, give me some counsel!

Mrs Page. What's the matter, woman?

Mrs Ford. O woman, if it were not for one trifling respect, I could come to such honour!

Mrs Page. Hang the trile, woman:—take the honour: What is it?—dispense with trifles;—
what is it?

Mrs Ford. If I would but go to hell for an eternal moment, I could be knighted.

Mrs Page. What?—Sir Alice Ford?

Mrs Ford. We burn daylight:—here, read,
1 One rigidly exact.

read;—perceive how I might be knighted.—I shall think the worse of fat men, as long as I have an eye to make difference of men's liking: And yet he would not swear; praised women's modesty; and gave such orderly and well-behaved reproof to all uncomeliness, that I would have sworn his disposition would have gone to the truth of his words: but they do no more adhere and keep place together, than the hundreded psalm to the tune of Green sleeves. What tempest, I trow, threw this whale, with so many tusof oil in him, ashore at Windsor? How shall I be revenged on him? I think, the best way were to entertain him with hope, and the wicked fire to melt him.—Did you ever hear the like?

Mrs Page. Letter for letter; but that the name of Page and Ford differs!—To thy great comfort in this mystery of ill-opinions, here's the twin-brother of thy letter: but let thine inherit first; for, I protest, mine never shall.
I warrant he hath a thousand of these letters writ with blank space for different names (sure more), and these are of the second edition:
He will print them out of doubt.

Mrs Ford. Why this is the very same; the very hand, the very words: What doth he think of us?

Mrs Page. Nay, I know not: it makes me almost ready to wrangle with mine own honesty, I'll entertain myself like one that I am not acquainted withal; for, sure, unless he know some strain in me, that I know not myself, he would never have boarded me in this fury. Let's be revenged on him; let's appoint him a meeting;
give him a show of comfort in his suit: and lead him on with a fine-baited delay, till he hath pawn'd his horses to mine host of the Garter.

Mrs Ford. Nay, I will consent to act any villainy against him, that may not sully the chariness of our honesty. O, that my husband saw this letter! it would give eternal food to his jealousy.

Mrs Page. Why, look where he comes; and my good man too; he's as far from jealousy, as I am from giving him cause; and that, I hope, is an unmeasurable distance.

Mrs Ford. You are the happier woman.

Mrs Page. Let's consnitt together against this greasy knight: Come hither. [They retire.

Enter Ford, Pistol, Page, and Nym.

Ford. Well, I hope it be not so.

Pist. Hope is a curtail dog in some affairs;
Sir John affects thy wife.

Ford. Why, sir, my wife is not young, [poor.

Pist. He wooes both high and low, both rich and both young and old, one with another, Ford;
He loves thy gally-mawfry; 3 Ford, perdont. 4

Ford. Love my wife? [thou

Pist. With liver burning hot: Prevent, or go
Like Sir Acteon he, with Ring-wood at thy heels:
O, odious is the name!

Ford. What name, sir?

Pist. The horn, I say: Farewell. [night:
Take heed; have open eye; for thieves do foot
Take heed, threesummer comes, or cuckoo-birds do Away, sir corporal Nym.— [sing.

Believe it, Page; he speaks sense. [Exit Ford.
Ford. I will be patient; I will find out this.

1 Scrupulousness. 3 Medley.
2 That misses his game. 4 Consider.
Enter Host and Shallow.

Shal. I follow, mine host, I follow. — Good even and twenty, good master Page! master Page, will you go with us? we have sport in hand.

Host. Tell him, cavalero-justice; tell him, bully-rook.

Shal. Sir, there is a fray to be fought, between Sir Hugh the Welsh priest, and Caius the French doctor.

Ford. Good mine host of the Garter, a word with you. Host. What say'st thou, bully-rook?

[They go aside.

Shal. Will you to page) go with us to behold it? my merry host hath had the measuring of their weapons; and, I think, he hath appointed them contrary places: for, believe me, I hear, the parson is no jester. Hark, I will tell you what our sport shall be.

Host. Hast thou no suit against my knight, my guest-cavalier?

Ford. None, I protest: but I'll give you a bottle of burnt sack to give me recourse to him, and tell him my name is Brook; only for a jest.

Host. My hand, bully: thou shalt have egress and regress; said I well? and thy name shall be Brook: It is a merry night. — Will you go on, hearts?

Shal. Have with you, mine host.

Page. I have heard the Frenchman hath good skill in his rapier.

Shal. Tut, sir, I could have told you more! In these times you stand on distance, your passes, stoccadoes, and I know not what: 'tis the heart, master Page; 'tis here, 'tis here. I have seen the time, with my long sword, I would have made you four tall fellows skip like rats.

Host. Here, boys, here! shall we wag?

Page. Have with you: — I had rather hear them scold than fight.

[Exeunt Host, Shallow, and Page.

Enter Falstaff and Pistol.

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.

Pist. Why then the world's mine oyster, Which I with sword will open: — I will retort the sum in equi-page. 1

Fal. Not a penny. I have been content, sir, you should lay my countenance to pawn; I have grated upon my good friends for three reprieves for you and your coach-fellow Nym; or else you had looked through the grate like a Gemini 2 of baboons. I am disgraced for swearing to gentlemen my friends, you were good soldiers, and tall fellows: and when Mistress Bridget lost the handle of her fan, I took't upon mine honour, thou hadst it not.

Pist. Didst thou not share? hadst thou not fifteen pence?

Fal. Reason, you rogue, reason: Think'st thou, I'll endanger my soul gratis? At a word, hang no more about me, I am no gibbet for you:—go. —A short knife and a thong:—to your manor of Picket-hatch, go. —You'll not bear a letter for me, you rogue!—you stand upon your honour!—Why, thou unconfined baseness, it is as much as I can do, to keep the terms of my honour précise. I, I, I myself sometimes, leaving the fear of heaven on the left hand, and hiding mine honour in my necessitie, am fain to shuffle, to hedge, and to lurch; and yet you, rogue, will ensconce your rags, your cat-a-mountain looks, your red-lattice phrases, and your bold-beating oaths, under the shelter of your honour! You will not do it, you?

Pist. I do relent: what would'st thou more of man?

Enter Robin.

Rob. Sir, here’s a woman would speak with you.

Fal. Let her approach.

Enter Mrs Quickly.

Quick. Give your worship good-morrow.

Fal. Good-morrow, goodwife, What with me?

Quick. Shall I vouchsafe your worship a word or two?

Fal. Two thousand, fair woman; and I’ll vouch-safe thee the hearing.

Quick. There is one mistress Ford, sir;—I pray, come a little nearer this ways;—I myself dwell with master doctor Caius.

Fal. Well, on: Mistress Ford you say,—

Quick. Your worship says very true: I pray your worship, come a little nearer this ways.

Fal. I warrant thee, nobody hears;—mine own people, mine own people.

Quick. Are they so? Heaven bless them, and make them his servants!

Fal. Well. Mistress Ford:—what of her?

Quick. Why, sir, she’s a good creature; but your worship’s a wanton: Well, heaven forgive you, and all of us, I pray!

Fal. Mistress Ford:—come, mistress Ford.—

Quick. Marry, this is the short and the long of it; you have brought her into such canaries as ‘tis wonderful. The best courtier of them all, when the court lay at Windsor, could never have brought her to such a canary. Yet there has been knights, and lords, and gentlemen, with their coaches; I warrant you coach after coach, letter after letter, gift after gift; smelling so sweety (all musk), and so rishling, I warrant you, in silk and gold; and in such alligant terms; and in such wine and sugar of the best and the fairest, that would have won any woman’s heart; and, I warrant you, they could never get an eyewink of her—I had myself twenty angels given me this morning: but I defy all angels (in any such sort, as they say), but in the way of honesty:—and, I warrant you, they could never get her so much as sip on a cup with the proudest of them all; and yet there has been earls, nay, which is more, pensioners; but, I warrant you, all is one with her.

Fal. But what says she to me? be brief, my good she-Mercury.

Quick. Marry, she hath received your letter; for which she thanks you a thousand times; and she gives you to notify, that her husband will be absence from his house between ten and Fal. Ten and eleven?

Quick. Ay, forsooth; and then you may come and see the picture, she says that you got of,—master Ford, her husband will be from home. Alas! the sweet woman lends an ill life with him; he’s a very jealousy man; she leads a very frampold life with him, good heart.

Fal. Ten and eleven: Woman, commend me to her; I will not fail her.

Quick. Why, you say well: But I have another messenger to your worship: Mistress Page hath her hearty commendations to you too;—and let me tell you in your ear, she’s as virtuous a civil modest wife, and one (I tell you) that will not miss your morning nor evening prayer, as any is in Windsor, whoer’s the other: and she bade me tell your worship, that her husband is seldom from home; but she hopes there will come a time. I never knew a woman so dote upon a man; surely, I think you have charms, la; yes, in truth.

Fal. Not I, I assure thee; setting the attraction of my good parts aside, I have no other charms.

Quick. Blessing on your heart for’t!

Fal. But, I pray thee, tell me this: has Ford’s wife, and Page’s wife, acquainted each other how they love me?

Quick. That were a jest, indeed!—they have not so little grace, I hope:—that were a trick, indeed! But mistress Page would desire you to send her your little page, of all loves; her husband has a marvellous infection to the little page; and, truly, master Page is an honest man. Never a wife in Windsor leads a better life than she does; do what she will, say what she will, take all, pay all, all is as she will; and, truly, she deserves it: for if there be a kind woman in Windsor, she is one. You must send her your page: no remedy.

Fal. Why, I will.

Quick. Nay, but do so then; and look you, he may come and go between you both; and, in any case, have a pay-word that you may know one another’s mind, and the boy never need to understand any thing; for ‘tis not good that children should know any wickedness: old folks, you know, have discretion, as they say, and know the world.

Fal. Fare thee well: commend me to them both: there’s my purse; I am yet thy debtor. —Boy, go along with this woman.—This news distracts me. [Exeunt Quickly and Robin.

Pist. This is one of Cupid’s carriers:—

Clap on more sails; pursue, up with your sights; Give fire; she is my prize, or oceanwhelm them all!

[Exit Pistol.

Fal. Say’st thou so, old Jack? Go thy ways: 1

1 Fretted. 2 By all means. 3 A watch-word.
I'll make more of thy old body than I have done. Will they yet look after thee? Wilt thou, after the expence of so much money, be now a gaining?

Enter Bardolph.

Bard. Sir John, there's one master Brook below would fain speak with you, and be acquainted with you; and hath sent your worship a morning's draught of sack.

Fal. Brook, is his name?

Bard. Ay, sir.

Fal. Call him in. [Exit Bardolph.] Such Brooks are welcome to me, that o'erflow such liquor. Ah! ha! mistress Ford and mistress Page, have I compassed you? go to; via!

Re-enter Bardolph, with Ford disguised.

Ford. Bless you, sir.

Ford. Sir, I am a gentleman that have spent much; my name is Brook.

Fal. Good master Brook, I desire more acquaintance of you.

Ford. Good Sir John, I sue for yours: not to charge you; for I must let you understand, I think myself in better plight for a lender than you are: the which hath something embolden'd me to this season'd intrusion: for they say, if money go before, all ways do lie open.

Fal. Money is a good soldier, sir, and will on.

Ford. Troth, and I have a bag of money here troubles me: if you will help me to bear it, Sir John, take all, or half, for easing me of the carriage.

Fal. Sir, I know not how I may deserve to be your porter.

Fal. I will tell you, sir, if you will give me the hearing.

Fal. Speak, good master Brook; I shall be glad to be your servant.

Ford. Sir, I hear you are a scholar;—I will be brief with you;—and you have been a man long known to me, though I had never so good means, as desire, to make myself acquainted with you. I shall discover a thing to you, wherein I must very much lay open mine own imperfection; but, good Sir John, as you have one eye upon my follies, as you hear them unfolded, turn another into the register of your own; that I may pass with a reproof the easier, sith you yourself know how easy it is to be such an offender.

Fal. Very well, sir: proceed.

Ford. There is a gentlewoman in this town, her husband's name is Ford.

Fal. Well, sir.

Ford. I have long loved her, and, I protest to you, bestowed much on her; followed her with a doting observance; engrossed opportunities to meet her; fee'd every slight occasion, that could butiggardly give me sight of her; not only bought many presents to give her, but have given largely to many, to know what she would have given; briefly, I have pursued her, as love hath pursued me; which hath been, on the wing of all occasions. But whatsoever I have merited, either in my mind, or in my means, mead, I am sure, I have received none; unless experience be a jewel: that I have purchase'd at an infinite rate; and that hath taught me to say this:

Love like a shadow flies, when substance love pursues;

Pursuing that she flies, and flying what pur-

Fal. Have you received no promise of satisfaction at her hands?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Have you importun'd her to such a purpose?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Of what quality was your love then?

Ford. Like a fair house, built upon another man's ground; so that I have lost my edifice, by mistaking the place where I erected it.

Fal. To what purpose have you unfolded this to me?

Ford. When I have told you that, I have told you all. Some say, that, though she appear honest to me, yet, in other places, she enlargeth her mirth so far, that there is shrewd construction made of her. Now, Sir John, here is the heart of my purpose: You are a gentleman of excellent breeding, admirable discourse, of great admittance, authentic in your place and person, generally allowed for your many warlike, court-like, and learned preparations.

Fal. O, sir.

Ford. Believe it, for you know it.—There is money; spend it, spend it; spend more; spend all I have; only give me so much of your time in exchange of it, as to lay an amiable siego to the honesty of this Ford's wife: use your art of wooing, win her to consent to you; if any man may you marry as soon as any.

Fal. Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection, that I should win what you would enjoy? Methinks you prescribe to yourself very preposterously.

Ford. O, understand my drift! she dwells so securely on the excellency of her honour, that the folly of my soul dares not present itself; she is too bright to be looked against. Now, could I come to her with any detection in my hand, my desires had instance and argument to commend themselves; I could drive her then from the ward of her purity, her reputation, her marriage vow, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too strongly embattled against me:—What say you to 't, Sir John?

Fal. Master Brook, I will first make bold with your money; next, give me your hand; and last, as I am a gentleman, you shall, if you will, have Ford's wife.

Ford. O good sir!

Fal. Master Brook, I say you shall.

Ford. Want no money, Sir John, you shall want none.

Fal. Want no mistress Ford, master Brook, you shall want none. I shall be with her (I may tell you) by her own appointment; even as you came in to me, her assistant, or go-between, parted from me: I say, I shall be with her between ten and eleven: for at that time the jealous rascally knave, her husband, will be forth. Come you to me at night; you shall know how I speed.

Ford. I am blest in your acquaintance. Do you know Ford, sir?

Fal. Hang him, poor knave! I know him not,—yet I wrong him to call him poor; they say, the jealous knave hath masses of money; for the which his wife seems to me well-favoured. I will use her as the key of the rogue's cofi; and there's my harvest-home.

Ford. I would you knew Ford, sir; that you might avoid him, if you saw him.

Fal. Hang him, mechanical salt-butter rogue! I will stare him out of his wits; I will awe him with my cudgel: it shall hang like a meteor o'er his horns: Master Brook, thou shalt know, I will predominate o'er the peasant, and thou shalt have his wife.—Come to me soon at night:—Ford's a knave, and I will aggravate his stile; come to me soon at night. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—WINDSOR PARK.

Enter Caius and Rugby.

Caius. Jack Rugby!

Rug. Sir.

Caius. Vat is de clock, Jack?

Rug. 'Tis past the hour, sir, that Sir Hugh promised to meet.

Caius. By gar, he has save his soul, dat he is no come; he has pray his Pible vell, dat he is no come: by gar, Jack Rugby, he is dead already, if he be come.

Rug. He is wise, sir: he knew your worship would kill him, if he came.

Caius. By gar, de herring is no dead, so as I will kill him. Take your rapier, Jack: I will tell you how I will kill him.

Caius. Villainy, take your rapier.

Rug. Forbear, here's company.

Enter Host, Shallow, Slender, and Page.

Host. Bless thee, bully doctor.

Shal. 'Save you, master doctor Caius.

Slen. Give you good morrow, sir.

C. Vat beall you, one, two, three, four, come for? Host. To see thee fight, to see thee foin, to see thee traverse, to see thee here, to see thee there; to see thee pass thy punto, thy stock, thy reverse, thy distance, thy montant. Is he dead, my Ethiopian? is he dead, my Francisco? ha, bully! What says my Escaluspius? my Galen? my heart of elder? ha! is he dead, bully Slate? is he dead?

Caius. By gar, he is de coward Jack priest of the world; he is not show his face.

Host. Thou art a Castillian king! a Hector of Greece, my boy!

Caius I pray you, bear witness that I have stay six or seven, two, tree hours for him, and he is no come.

Shal. He is the wiser man, master doctor: he is a curer of souls, and you a curer of bodies: if you should fight, you go against the hair of your professions: is it not true, master Page?

Page. Master Shallow, you have yourself been a great fighter, though now a man of peace.

Shal. Bodykins, master Page, though I now be old, and of the peace, if I see a sword out, my finger itches to make one: though we are justices, and doctors, and churchmen, master Page, we have some salt of our youth in us; we are the sons of women, master Page.

Page. 'Tis true, master Shallow.

Shal. It will be found so, master Page. Master doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home. I am sworn of the peace; you have showed yourself a wise physician, and Sir Hugh hath shown himself a physician and patient churchman: you must go with me, master doctor.

H. Pardon, guest justice:—A word, monsieur. Caius. Scourvy Jack-dog priest! by gar me will cut his ears.

Host. He will clapper-claw thee tightly, bully. Caius. Clapper-de-claw! vat is dat? Host. That is, he will make thee amends.

Caius. By gar, me do look, he shall clapper-de-claw me: for by gar, me will have it.

H. And I will provoke him to it, or let him wag.

Caius. Me tank you for dat.

Host. And moreover, bully.—But first, master guest, and master Page, and eke cavalero Slen- der, go you through the town to Frokmore.

[Aside to them.]

Page. Sir Hugh is there, is he?

Host. He is there: see what humour he is in: and I will bring the doctor about by the fields: will it do well?

Shal. We will do it.

Caius. By gar, me will kill de priest; for he speak for a jack-an-ape to Anne Page.

Host. Let him die: but, first, sheath thy impatience; throw cold water on thy choler: go about the fields with me through Frokmore: I will bring thee where Mrs Anne Page is, at a farm-house, a feasting; and thou shalt woo her; said I well? Caius. By gar, me tank you for dat: by gar, I love you; and I shall procure-a you de good 1 Fence. 2 All terms in fencing.
guest, de earl, de knight, de lords, de gentlemen, my patients.
Host. For the which, I will be thy adversary towards Anne Page: said I well?
Caius. By gar, 'tis good; vell said.
Host. Let us wag then.
C. Come at my heels, Jack Rugby. [Exeunt.

Act Third.

SCENE I.—A FIELD NEAR FROGMORE.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans and Simple.

Eva. I pray you now, good master Slender's serving man, and friend Simple by your name, which way have you looked for master Caius, that calls himself Doctor of Physick?
Sim. Marry, sir, the city-ward, the park-ward, every way; old Windsor way, and every way but the town way.

Eva. I most vehemently desire you, you will also look that way.
Sim. I will, sir.

E. Pless my soul! how full of choler I am, and trembling of mind!—I shall be glad, if he have deceived me:—how melancholy I am!—I will knog his knave's costard, when I have good opportunities for the 'ork;—pless my soul! [Sings.

To shallow rivers, to whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals;
There will we make our peds of roses,
And a thousand fragrant posies.

To shallow—

Mercy on me! I have a great dispositions to cry.

Melodious birds sing madrigals:
When as I sat in Babylon,
And a thousand vaguey posies.

To shallow—

S. Yonder he is coming, this way, Sir Hugh.
Eva. He's welcome:—

To shallow rivers, to whose falls—

Heaven prosper the right!—What weapons is he?
S. No weapons, sir: there comes my master, master Shalow, and another gentleman from Frognore, over the stile, this way.

Eva. Pray you, give me my gown; or else keep it in your arms.

Enter Page, Shallow, and Slender.

Shal. How now, master parson? Good morrow, good Sir Hugh. Keep a gamester from the dice, and a good student from his book, and it is wonderful.

Slen. Ah, sweet Anne Page!

Page. Save you, good Sir Hugh!

E. 'Pless you from his mercy sake, all of you!

Shal. What! the sword and the word! do you study them both, master parson?

Page. And youthful still, in your doublet and hose, this raw rheumatic day?

Eva. There is reasons and causes for it.

Page. We are come to you, to do a good office, master parson.

Eva. Fery well: What is it?
and let us knog our prains together, to be revenge on this same seall, seury, coggyn, companion, the host of the Garter.

Caius. By gar, vit all my heart: he promise to bring me vere is Anne Page: by gar, he deceive me too.

Eva. Well, I will smite his noitles:—Pray you, follow. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—THE STREET IN WINDSOR.

Enter Mrs Page and Robin.

Mrs Page. Nay, keep your way, little gallant; you were wont to be a follower, but now you are a leader: Whether had you rather lead mine eyes, or eye your master's heels?

Rob. I had rather, forsooth, go before you like a man, than follow him like a dwarf.

Mrs Page. O you are a flattering boy; now, I see, you'll be a courtier.

Enter Ford.

F. Well met, mistress Page: Whither go you?

Mrs Page. Truly, sir, to see your wife: Is she at home?

Ford. Ay; and as idle as she may hang togethers, for want of company: I think if your husbands were dead, you two would marry.

Mrs F. Be sure of that,—two other husbands.

Ford. Where had you this pretty weather-cock?

Mrs Page. I cannot tell what his name is my husband had him of: What do you call your knight's name, sirrah?

Ford. Sir John Falstaff.

Ford. Sir John Falstaff?

Mrs Page. He, he; I can never hit on's name.

There is such a league between my good man and he!—Is your wife at home, indeed?

Ford. Indeed, she is.

Mrs Page. By your leave, sir;—I am sick, till I see her. [Exeunt Mrs Page and Robin.

Ford. Has Page any brains? hath he any eyes; hath he any thinking? Sure they sleep; he hath no use of them. Why, this boy will carry a letter twenty miles, as easy as a cannon will shoot point-blank twelve score. He pieces-out his wife's inclination: he gives her folly motion, and advantage; and now she's going to my wife, and Falstaff's boy with her. A man may hear this shower sing in the wind—and Falstaff's boy with her!—Good plots!—they are laid; and our revoluted wives share damnation together. Well; I will take him, then torture my wife, pluck the borrowed veil of modesty from the so seeming mistress Page, divulge Page himself for a secure and wilful Acteon; and to these violent proceedings all my neighbours shall cry aim [Clock strikes.] The clock gives me my cue, and my assurance bids me search; there I shall find Falstaff: I shall be rather praised for this than mocked; for it is as positive as the earth is firm, that Falstaff is there: I will go.

Enter Page, Shallow, Slocer, Host, Sir Hugh Evans, Caius, and Rugby.

Shal. Well met, master Ford.

Ford. Trust me, a good knot: I have good cheer at home; and I pray you, all go with me.

1 Encouragement.

Shal. I must excuse myself, master Ford.

Sloc. And so must I, sir; we have appointed to dine with Mistress Anne, and I would not break with her for more money than I'll speak of.

Shal. We have lingered about a match between Anne Page and my cousin Slocer, and this day we shall have our answer.

Sloc. I hope I have your good-will, father Page.

Page. You have, master Slocer; I stand wholly for you—but my wife, master doctor, is for you altogether.

Caius. Ay, by gar; and de maid is love-a:—my nur-s'h-Quickly tell me so much.

Host. What say you to young master Fenton? he capers, he dances, he has eyes of youth, he writes verses, he speaks holyday; he smells April and May:—he will carry't, he will carry't.

Page. Not by my consent, I promise you. The gentleman is of no having: he kept company with the wild Prince and Poins; he is of too high a region, he knows too much. No, he shall not knot a knot in his fortunes with the finger of my substance: if he take her, let him take her simply; the wealth I have, waits on my consent, and my consent goes not that way.

Ford. I beseech you, heartily, some of you go home with me to dinner: besides your cheer, you shall have sport; I will show you a monster. —Master doctor, you shall go;—so shall you, master Page:—and you, Sir Hugh.

Shal. Well, fare you well:—we shall have the freer wooling at master Page's.

[Exeunt Shallow and Slocer.

Caius. Go home, John Rugby; I come anon.

Exit Rugby.

Host. Farewell, my hearts: I will to my honest knight Falstaff, and drink canary with him.

[Exit Host.

Ford. [Aside.] I think, I shall drink in pipe-wine first with him; I'll make him dance. Will you go, gentlemen?

All. Have with you, to see this monster. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A ROOM IN FORD'S HOUSE.

Enter Mrs Ford and Mrs Page.

Mrs Ford. What, John! what, Robert!

Mrs P. Quickly, quickly: Is the buck-basket—

Mrs Ford. I warrant:—What, Robin, I say.

Enter Servants with a basket.

Mrs Page. Come, come, come.

Mrs Ford. Here, set it down.

Mrs Page. Give your men the charge; we must be brief.

Mrs Ford. Marry, as I told you before, John and Robert, be ready here hard by in the brew-house; and when I suddenly call you, come forth, and (without any pause, or staggering,) take this basket on your shoulders: that done, trudge with it in all haste, and carry it among the whitsters in Datchet-mead, and there empty it in the muddy ditch, close by the Thames' side.

Mrs Page. You will do it?

Mrs Ford. I have told them over and over; they lack no direction: Begone, and come when you are called. [Exeunt Servants.

Mrs Page. Here comes little Robin.

1 Bleachers.
Enter Robin.

Mrs Ford. How now, my eyes-musket! what news with you?

Rob. My master Sir John is come in at your back-door, mistress Ford; and requests your company.

Mrs Page. You little Jack-a-lent,² have you been true to us?

Rob. Ay, I'll be sworn: My master knows not of your being here; and hath threatened to put me into everlasting liberty, if I tell you of it; for, he swears, he'll turn me away.

Mrs Page. Thou 'rt a good boy; this secrecy of thine shall be a tailor to thee, and shall make thee a new doublet and hose.—I'll go hide me.

Mrs Ford. Do so:—Go tell thy master, I am alone. Mistress Page, remember you your cue.

[Exit Robin.

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Have I caught thee, my heavenly jewel! Why, now let me die, for I have lived long enough; this is the period of my ambition: O this blessed hour!

Mrs Ford. O sweet Sir John!

Fal. Mistress Ford, I cannot cog,³ I cannot prate, mistress Ford. Now shall I sin in my wish: I would thy husband were dead: I'll speak it before the best lord, I would make thee my lady.

Mrs Ford. I your lady, Sir John! alas, I should be a pitiful lady.

Fal. Let the court of France show me such another: I see how thine eye would emulate the diamond: Thou hast the right arched bent of the brow, that becomes the ship-tire, the trelvaliant, or any tire of Venetian admittance.

Mrs F. A plain kerchief, Sir John: my brows become nothing else; nor that well neither.

Fal. Thou art a traitor to say so: thou would'st make an absolute courtier; and the firm fixture of thy foot would give an excellent motion to thy gait, in a semi-circular fairthangale. I see what thou wert, if fortune thy foe were not; nature is thy friend. Come, thou canst not hide it.

Mrs F. Believe me, there's no such thing in me.

Fal. What made me love thee? let that per- snade thee, there's something extraordinary in thee. Come, I cannot cog, and say, thou art this and that, like a many of these lisping haw- thorn buds, that come like women in men's apparel, and smell like Bucklers-bury in simple-time,⁴ I cannot: but I love thee; none but thee; and thou deservest it.

Mrs Ford. Do not betray me, sir; I fear you love mistress Page.

Fal. Thou might'st as well say, I love to walk by the Counter-gate; which is as hateful to me as the reek of a lime-kiln.

Mrs Ford. Well, heaven knows how I love you; and you shall one day find it.

1 Young hawk. ² Puppet. ³ Wheelie. ⁴ Formerly inhabited by druggists.

Fal. Keep in that mind; I'll deserve it.

Mrs Ford. Nay, I must tell you, so you do; or else I could not be in that mind.

Rob. [within.] Mistress Ford, mistress Ford! here's mistress Page at the door, sweating, and blowing, and looking wildly, and would needs speak with you presently.

Fal. She shall not see me; I will esconce me behind the arras.

Mrs Ford. Pray you, do so; she's a very tating woman.—[Falstaff hides himself.

Enter Mrs Page and Robin.

What's the matter? how now?

Mrs Page. O mistress Ford, what have you done? You're shamed, you are overthrown, you are undone for ever.

Mrs F. What's the matter, good mistress Page?

Mrs P. O well-a-day, mistress Ford! having an honest man to your husband, to give him such cause of suspicion!

Mrs Ford. What cause of suspicion?

Mrs Page. What cause of suspicion!—Out upon you! How am I tostook in you?

Mrs Ford. Why, alas! what's the matter?

Mrs Page. Your husband's coming hither, woman, with all the officers in Windsor, to search for a gentleman, that, he says, is here, now in the house, by your consent, to take an ill advantage of his absence: you are undone.

Mrs Ford. Speak louder [Aside.]—Tis not so, I hope.

Mrs Page. Pray heaven it be not so, that you have such a man here; but 'tis most certain your husband's coming with half Windsor at his heels, to search for such a one. I come before to tell you: If you know yourself clear, why I am glad of it: but if you have a friend here, convey, convey him out. Be not amazed; call all your senses to you: defend your reputation, or bid farewell to your good life for ever.

Mrs F. What shall I do?—There is a gentle- man, my dear friend; and I fear not mine own shame, so much as his peril: I had rather than a thousand pounds he were out of the house.

Mrs Page. For shame, never stand you had rather, and you had rather; your husband's here at hand, bethink you of some conveyance in the house you cannot hide him.—O, how have you deceived me!—Look, here is a basket: if he be of any reasonable stature, he may creep in here; and throw foul linen upon him, as if it were going to bucking:¹ Or, it is whitting-time,² send him by your two men to Datchet-mead.

Mrs Ford. He's too big to go in there: What shall I do?

Re-enter Falstaff.

Fal. Let me see 't! let me see 't! O let me see 't! I'll in, I'll in;—follow your friend's counsel:—I'll in.

Mrs Page. What! Sir John Falstaff! Are these your letters, knight?

Fal. I love thee, and none but thee; help me away: let me creep in here; I'll never—[He goes into the basket; they cover him with foul linen.

Mrs Page. Help to cover your master, boy:

Fal. Keep in that mind; I'll deserve it.

Mrs Ford. Nay, I must tell you, so you do; or else I could not be in that mind.

Rob. [within.] Mistress Ford, mistress Ford! here's mistress Page at the door, sweating, and blowing, and looking wildly, and would needs speak with you presently.

Fal. She shall not see me; I will esconce me behind the arras.

Mrs Ford. Pray you, do so; she's a very tating woman.—[Falstaff hides himself.

Enter Mrs Page and Robin.

What's the matter? how now?

Mrs Page. O mistress Ford, what have you done? You're shamed, you are overthrown, you are undone for ever.

Mrs F. What's the matter, good mistress Page?

Mrs P. O well-a-day, mistress Ford! having an honest man to your husband, to give him such cause of suspicion!

Re-enter Falstaff.

Fal. Let me see 't! let me see 't! O let me see 't! I'll in, I'll in;—follow your friend's counsel:—I'll in.

Mrs Page. What! Sir John Falstaff! Are these your letters, knight?

Fal. I love thee, and none but thee; help me away: let me creep in here; I'll never—[He goes into the basket; they cover him with foul linen.

Mrs Page. Help to cover your master, boy:

1 Washing. ² Bleaching time.
Act III.

Cull your men, mistress Ford:—You dissembling knight.

Mrs. Ford. What, John, Robert, John! [Exit Robin; Re-enter Servants.] Go, take up these clothes here, quickly; Where's the cowl-staff? look, how you drumble; carry them to the laundress in Datchet-mead; quickly, come.

Enter Ford, Page, Caius, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Ford. Pray you, come near: if I suspect without cause, why then make sport at me, then let me be your jest; I deserve it.—How now? whither bear you this?

Serv. To the laundress, forsooth.

Mrs. Ford. Why, what have you to do whither they bear it? You were best meddle with buck-washing.

Ford. Buck? I would I could wash myself of the buck! Buck, buck, buck? Ay, back! I warrant you, buck; and of the season too, it shall appear. [Exeunt Servants with the basket.]

Gentlemen, I have dreamed to-night: I'll tell you my dream. Here, here, here be my keys: ascend my chambers, search, seek, find out: I'll warrant we'll un kennel the fox:—Let me stop this way first.—So now uncape.

Page. Good master Ford, be contented; you wrong yourself too much.

F. True, master Page.—Up, gentlemen; you shall see sport anon: follow me, gentlemen. [Exit.]

Eva. This is a very fantastical humour, and jealousies.

Caius. By gar, 'tis no de fashion of France: it is not jealous in France.

P. Nay, follow him, gentlemen; see the issue of his search. [Exeunt Evans, Page, and Caius.]

Mrs. Page. Is there not a double excellency in this?

Mrs. Ford. I know not which pleases me better, that my husband is deceived, or Sir John.

Mrs. Page. What a taking was he in, when your husband asked who was in the basket!

Mrs. Ford. Throwing him into the water will do him a benefit.

Mrs. P. Hang him, dishonest rascal! I would all of the same strain were in the same distress.

Mrs. Ford. I think my husband hath some special suspicion of Falstaff's being here: for I never saw him so gross in his jealousy till now.

Mrs. P. I will lay a plot to try that: And we will yet have more tricks with Falstaff: his dilatory disease will scarce obey this medicine.

Mrs. Ford. Shall we send that foolish carrion, mistress Quickly, to him, and excuse his throwing into the water; and give him another hope, to betray him to another punishment?

Mrs. Page. We'll do it; let him be sent for to-morrow eight o'clock, to have amends.

Re-enter Ford, Page, Caius, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Ford. I cannot find him: may be the knife bragged of that he could not compass.

Mrs. Page. Heard you that?

Mrs. Ford. Ay, ay, peace:—You use me well, master Ford, do you?

Ford. Ay, I do so.

Mrs. Ford. Heaven make you better than your thoughts!

Ford. Amen.

Mrs. Page. You do yourself mighty wrong, master Ford.

Ford. Ay, ay; I must bear it.

Eva. If there be any body in the house, and in the chambers, and in the coffers, and in the presses, heaven forgive my sins!

Caius. By gar, nor I too; dere is no bodies.

Page. Fie, fie, master Ford! are you not ashamed? What spirit, what devil suggests this imagination? I would not have your distemper in this kind, for the wealth of Windsor Castle.

F. 'Tis my fault, master Page: I suffer for it. Eva. You suffer for a sad conscience; your wife is as honest a 'oman, as I will desires among five thousand, and five hundred too.

Caius. By gar, I see 'tis an honest woman.

Ford. Well;—I promised you a dinner:—Come, come, walk in the park: I pray you, pardon me; I will hereafter make known to you why I have done this.—Come, wife;—come mistress Page: I pray you, pardon me; pray heartily, pardon me.

Page. Let's go in, gentlemen; but, trust me, we'll mock him. I do invite you to-morrow morning to my house to breakfast; after, we'll a-birding together; I have a fine hawk for the bush: Shall it be so?

Ford. Any thing.

Eva. If there is one, I shall make two in the company.

Ford. Pray you go, master Page.

Eva. I pray you now, remembrance to-morrow on the knife, mine host.

Caius. Dat is good; by gar, vit all my heart. Eva. A knife; to have his gibes and his mockeries.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A ROOM IN PAGE'S HOUSE.

Enter Fenton and Mistress Anne Page.

Fent. I see, I cannot get thy father's love; Therefore, no more turn me to him, sweet Nan. Anne. Alas! how then?

Fent. Why, thou must be thyself. He doth object, I am too great of birth; And that, my state being gall'd with my ex- pect to heal it only by his wealth; [pence. Besides these, other bars he lays before me;— My riots past, my wild societies; And tells me, 'tis a thing impossible I should love thee, but as a property. Anne. May be, he tells you true.

Fent. No, heaven so speed me in my time to Albeit, I will confess thy father's wealth; [come The first motive that I wo'd thee, Anne: Yet, wooing thee, I found thee of more value Than stamps in gold, or sums in sealed bags; And 'tis the very riches of thyself That now I aim at.

Anne. Gentle master Fenton, Yet seek my father's love: still seek it, sir; If opportunity and humblest suit, Cannot attain it, why then.—Hark you hither.

[They converse apart.
Enter Shallow, Slender, and Mrs Quickly.

Shal. Break their talk, Mrs Quickly; my kinsman shall speak for himself.

Slen. I'll make a shaft 1 or a bolt 2 on't: slid, 'tis but venturing.

Shal. Be not dismay'd.

Slen. No, she shall not dismay me: I care not for that. - but that I am afeard.

Quick. Hark ye; master Slender shall speak a word with you.

A. I come to him. - This is my father's choice. O, what a world of vile ill-fav'rd faults Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a year!

[Aside.]

Quick. And how does good master Fenton? Pray you, a word with you.

Shal. She's coming; to her, coz. O boy, thou hast a father.

Slen. I had a father, mistress Anne; my uncle can tell you good jests of him: Pray you, uncle, tell mistress Anne the jest, how my father stole two geese out of a pen, good uncle.

Shal. Mistress Anne, my cousin loves you.

Slen. Ay, that I do; as well as I love any woman in Gloucestershire.

S. He will maintain you like a gentlewoman.

Slen. Ay, that I will, come cut and long-tail, under the degree of a squire.

Shal. He will make you a hundred and fifty pounds jointure.

Anne. Good master Shallow, let him woo for himself.

Shal. Marry, I thank you for it; I thank you for that good comfort. She calls you, coz: I'll leave you.

Anne. Now, master Slender.

Slen. Now, good mistress Anne.

Anne. What is your will?

Slen. My will? od's heartlings, that's a pretty jest indeed! I ne'er made my will yet, I thank heaven; I am not such a sickly creature, I give heaven praise.

Anne. I mean, master Slender, what would you with me?

Slen. Truly, for mine own part, I would little or nothing with you: Your father, and my uncle, have made motions: if it be my luck, so: if not, happy man be his due! They can tell you how things go, better than I can: You may ask your father; here he comes.

Enter Page and Mistress Page.

Why, how now! what does master Fenton here? You wrong me, sir, thus still to haunt my house: I told you, sir, my daughter is dispos'd of.

Fent. Nay, master Page, be not impatient. Mrs P. Good master Fenton, come not to my Page. She is no match for you. [child.

Fent. Sir, will you hear me?

Page. No, good master Fenton. Come, master Shallow: come, son Slender; in knowing my mind, you wrong me, master Fenton.

[Exeunt Page, Shallow, and Slender.

Quick. Speak to mistress Page.

1 A long arrow. 2 A thick short arrow. 3 Lot.

Fent. Good mistress Page, for that I love your In such a righteous fashion as I do, [daughter Perforce, against all checks, rebukes, and man- I must advance the colours of my love, [ners, And not retire: Let me have your good will.

A. Good mother, do not marry me to yond' fool, Mrs P. I mean it not; I seek you a better hus- Q. That's my master, master doctor. [band.

Anne. Alas, I had rather be set quick i' the And bowl'd to death with turnips. [earth, Mrs Page. Come, trouble not yourself: Good master Fenton. I will not be your friend, nor enemy: My daughter will I question how she loves you, And as I find her, so am I affected; 'Till then, farewell sir: - She must needs go in; Her father will be angry.

[Exeunt Mrs Page and Anne.

F. Farewell, gentle mistress; farewell, Nan. Quick. This is my doing, now; - Nay, said I, will you cast away your child on a fool, and a physician? Look on master Fenton: - this is my doing.

[night.

Fent. I thank thee; and I pray thee, once to Give my sweet Nan this ring: There's for thy pains. [Exit. Quick. Now heaven send thee good fortune! A kind heart he hath: a woman would run through fire and water for such a kind heart. But yet, I would my master had mistress Anne; or I would master Slender had her; or, in sooth, I would master Fenton had her: I will do what I can for them all three; for so I have promised, and I'll be as good as my word; but specially I for master Fenton. Well, I must of another errand to Sir John Falstaff from my two mistresses: What a beast am I to slack 3 it. [Exit.

SCENE V. - A ROOM IN THE GARTER INN.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Fal. Bardolph I say,

Bard. Here, sir.

R. Go fetch me a quart of sack; put a toast in't. [Exit Bardol.] Have I lived to be carried in a basket, like a barrow of butcher's offal? and to be thrown into the Thames? Well; if I be served such another trick, I'll have my brains ta'en out, and buttered, and give them to a dog for a new year's gift. The rogues smelted me into the river with as little remorse as they would have drowned blind puppies, fifteen f' the litter; and you may know by my size, that I have a kind of alacrity in sinking: if the bottom were ever so deep, I should down. I had been drowned, but that the shore was shelly and shallow: a death that I abhor; for the water swells a man; and what a thing should I have been, when I had been swelled! I should have been a mountain of mummy.

Re-enter Bardolph, with the wine.

Bard. Here's mistress Quickly, sir, to speak with you.

Fal. Come, let me pour in some sack to the Thames water; for my inside's as cold as if I had swallowed snow-balls. Call her in.

Bard. Come in, woman.

1 Specially. 2 Neglect.
Enter Mrs Quickly.

Quick. By your leave; I cry you mercy: Give your worship good-morrow.

Fal. Take away these chalices: Go brew me a bottle of sack finely.—[Exit Bardolph.]

How now?

Quick. Marry, sir, I come to your worship from mistress Ford.

Fal. Mistress Ford! I have had ford enough: I was thrown into the ford.

Quick. Alas the day! good heart, that was not her fault; she does so take on with her men; they mistook their erection.

Fal. So did I mine, to build upon a foolish woman's promise.

Quick. Well, she laments, sir, for it, that it would yearm your heart to see it. Her husband goes this morning a-birding; she desires you once more to come to her between eight and nine: I must carry her word quickly; she'll make you amends, I warrant you.

Fal. Well, I will visit her: Tell her so; and bid her think, what a man is: let her consider his frailty, and then judge of my merit.

Quick. I will tell her.

Fal. Do so. Between nine and ten, say'st thou?

Quick. Eight and nine, sir.

Fal. Well, he gone: I will not miss her.

Quick. Peace be with you, sir. [Exit. Fal. I marvel, I hear not of master Brook; he sent me word to stay within: I like his money well. O, here he comes.

Enter Ford.

Ford. Bless you, sir!

Fal. Now, master Brook? you come to know what hath passed between me and Ford's wife?

Ford. That, indeed, Sir John, is my business.

Fal. Master Brook, I will not lie to you; I was at her house the hour she appointed me.

Ford. And how sped you, sir?

Fal. Very ill-favouredly, master Brook.

Ford. How so, sir? Did she change her determination?

Fal. No, master Brook; but the peaking cornuto, her husband, master Brook, dwelling in a continual 'larum of jealousy, comes me in the instant of our encounter, after we had embraced, kissed, protested, and, as it were, spoke the prologue of our comedy; and at his heels a rabble of his companions, thither provoked and instigated by his distemper, and, forsooth, to search his house for his wife's love.

Ford. What, while you were there?

Fal. While I was there.

Ford. And did he search for you, and could not find you?

Fal. You shall hear. As good luck would have it, comes in one mistress Page; gives intelligence of Ford's approach; and, by her invention, and Ford's wife's distraction, they conveyed me into a buck-basket!

Ford. A buck-basket?

Fal. Ye, a buck-basket: rammed me in with foul shirts and socks, foul stockings, and greasy napkins; that, master Brook, there was the rankest compound of villaneous smell that ever offended nostril.

Ford. And how long lay you there?

Fal. Nay, you shall hear, master Brook, what I have suffered to bring this woman to evil for your good. Being thus crammed in the basket, a couple of Ford's knaves, his hinds, were called forth by their mistress, to carry me in the name of foul clothes to Datchet-lane: they took me on their shoulders: met the jealous knave their master in the door; who asked them once or twice what they had in their basket; I quaked for fear, lest the lunatic knave would have searched it; but Fate held his hand. Well; on went he for a search, and away went I for foul clothes. But mark the sequel, master Brook: I suffered the pangs of three several deaths: first, an intolerable fright, to be detected with a jealous bell-wether; next, to be compassed like a good bilbo, in the circumference of a peck, hilt to point, heel to head: and then, to be stopped in, like a strong distillation, with stinking clothes: think of that—a man of my kidney, think of that; that am as subject to heat as butter; a man of continual dissolution and thaw; it was a miracle to 'scape suffocation. And in the height of this bath, when I was more than half-stewed in grease, like a Dutch dish, to be thrown into the Thames, and cooled, glowing hot, in that surge, like a horse-shoe; think of that;—hiss hot,—think of that, master Brook.

Ford. In good sadness, sir, I am sorry that for my sake you have suffered all this. My suit then is desperate; you'll undertake her no more?

Fal. Master Brook, I will be thrown into Etta, as I have been into Thames, ere I will leave her this. Her husband is this morning gone-a-birding: I have received from her another embassy of meeting; 'twixt eight and nine is the hour, master Brook.

Ford. 'Tis past eight already, sir.

Fal. Is it? I will then address me to my appointment. Come to me at your convenient leisure, and you shall know how I sped; and the conclusion shall be crowned with your having her: Adieu, you shall have her, master Brook. [Exit. Ford. Hum! ha! is this a vision? is this a dream? do I sleep? master Ford, awake; awake, master Ford; there's a hole made in your best coat, master Ford. 'Tis to be married! this 'tis to have linen and buck-baskets!—Well, I will proclaim myself what I am: I will now take the lecher; he is at my house: he cannot 'scape me; 'tis impossible he should; he cannot creep into a halfpenny purse, nor into a pepper-box; but, lest the devil that guides him should aid him, I will search impossible places. Though what I am I cannot avoid, yet to be what I would not, shall not make me tame: if I have horns to make one mad, let the proverb go with me, I'll be horn mad.

[Exit.

Act Fourth.

SCENE I.—A ROOM IN FORD'S HOUSE.

Enter Falstaff and Mrs Ford.

Fal. Mistriss Ford, your sorrow hath eaten up my sufferance; I see you are obsequious in your love, and I profess requital to a hair's breadth; not only, mistress Ford, in the simple office of love, but in all the accoutrement, complement, and ceremony of it. But are you sure of your husband now?

Mrs Ford. He's a birding, sweet Sir John.
Mrs Page. [Within.] What ho, gossip Ford! what hoa!

Mrs Ford. Step into the chamber, Sir John. [Exit Falstaff.

Enter Mrs Page.

Mrs Page. How now, sweetheart? who's at home beside yourself?

Mrs Ford. Why, none but mine own people.

Mrs Page. Indeed?

Mrs F. No, certainly;—speak louder. [Aside. Mrs Page. Truly, I am so glad you have nobody here.

Mrs Ford. Why?

Mrs P. Why, woman, your husband is in his own lunes! again: he so takes on yonder with my husband; so railes against all married mankind; so curses all Eve's daughters, of what complexion soever; and so buffets himself on the forehead, crying Peor out, peer out! that any madness I ever yet beheld seemed but tameness, civility, and patience, to this his distemper he is in now: I am glad the fat knight is not here.

Mrs Ford. Why, does he talk of him?

Mrs P. Of none but him; and swears he was carried out, the last time he searched for him, in a basket: protests to my husband he is now here; and hath drawn him and the rest of their company from their sport, to make another experiment of his suspicion: but I am glad the knight is not here; now he shall see his own foolery.

Mrs Ford. How near is he, mistress Page?

Mrs Page. Hard by; at street end; he will be here anon.

Mrs Ford. I am undone!—the knight is here.
Mrs Page. Why, then yor are utterly shamed, and he's but a dead man. What a woman are you?—Away with him, away with him; better shame than murder.

Mrs Ford. Which way should he go? how should I bestow him? Shall I put him into the basket again?

Re-enter Falstaff.

Fal. No, I'll come no more i' the basket: May I not go out ere he come?

Mrs Page. Alas, three of master Ford's brothers watch the door with pistols, that none shall issue out: otherwise you might slip away ere he came. But what make you here?

Fal. What shall I do?—I'll creep up into the chimney.

Mrs Ford. There they always use to discharge their birding-pieces: creep into the kiln-hole.

Fal. Where is it?

Mrs Ford. He will seek there, on my word. Neither press, coffe, chest, trunk, well, vault, but he hath an abstract for the remembrance of such places, and goes to them by his note: There is no hidning you in the house.

Fal. I'll go out then.

Mrs Page. If you go out in your own sem

1 Mad fits.

blance, you die, Sir John. Unless you go out disguised.

Mrs Ford. How might we disguise him?

Mrs Page. Alas the day, I know not. There is no woman's gown big enough for him; otherwise, he might put on a hat, a muffler, and a kerchief, and so escape.

Fal. Good hearts, devise something: any extremity rather than a mischief.

Mrs Ford. My maid's aunt, the fat woman of Brentford, has a gown above.

Mrs Page. On my word, it will serve him; she's as big as he is: and there's her thrum'd hat, and her muffler too: Run up, Sir John.

Mrs Ford. Go, go, sweet Sir John: mistress Page and I will look some linen for your head.

Mrs P. Quick, quick; we'll come dress you straight; put on the gown the while. [Exit Fal. Mrs F. I would my husband would meet him in this shape: he cannot abide the old woman of Brentford; he swears she's a witch: forbade her my house, and hath threatened to beat her. Mrs Page. Heaven guide him to th' husband's cudgel; and the devil guide his cudgel afterwards! Mrs Ford. But is my husband coming?

Mrs Page. Ay, in good sadness is he; and talks of the basket too, howsoever he hath had intelligence.

Mrs Ford. We'll try that; for I'll appoint my men to carry the basket again, to meet him at the door with it, as they did last time.

Mrs Page. Nay, but he'll be here presently: let's go dress him like the witch of Brentford. Mrs Ford. I'll first direct my men, what they shall do with the basket. Go up, I'll bring linen for him straight. [Exit.

Mrs Page. Hang him, dishonest varlet! we cannot misuse him enough.

We'll leave a proof, by that which we will do, Wives may be merry, and yet honest too. [Exit.

Re-enter Mrs Ford, with two Servants.

Mrs Ford. Go, sirs, take the basket again on your shoulders; your master is hard at door; if he bid you set it down, obey him; quickly, dispatch. [Exit.

1 Serv. Come, come, take it up.

2 Serv. Pray heaven, it be not full of the knight again.

1 Serv. I hope not; I had as lief bear so much lead.

Enter Ford, Page, Shallow, Caius, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Ford. Ay, but if it prove true, master Page, have you any way then to unfool me again?—Set down the basket, villain:—Somebody call my wife—you, youth in a basket, come out here!—O, you panderly rascal! there's a knot, a gang, a pack, a conspiracy against me; Now shall the devil be shamed. What! wife, I say! come, come forth; behold what honest clothes you send forth to bleeding.

Page. Why, this passes! Master Ford, you are not to go loose any longer; you must be pinioned.

Eva. Why, this is lunatics! this is mad as a mad dog!

Shal. Indeed, master Ford, this is not well; indeed.
Enter Mrs. Ford.

Ford. So say I too, sir.—Come hither, mistress Ford; mistress Ford, the honest woman, the modest wife, the virtuous creature, that hath the jealous fool to her husband!—I suspect without cause, mistress, do I?

Mrs. Ford. Heaven be my witness, you do, if you suspect me in any dishonesty.

Ford. Well said, brazen face; hold it out.—

Come forth, sirrah.

[Pulls the clothes out of the basket.

Page. This passes!

Mrs. Ford. Are you not ashamed? let the clothes alone.

Ford. I shall find you anon.

Eva. 'Tis unreasonable! Come away.

Ford. Empty the basket, I say.

Mrs. Ford. Why, man, why,—

F. Master Page, as I am a man, there was one conveyed out of my house yesterday in this basket: Why may not he be there again? In my house I am sure he is: my intelligence is true; my jealousy is reasonable: Pluck me out all the linen.

Mrs. Ford. If you find a man there, he shall die a flea's death.

Page. Here's no man.

Shal. By my fidelity, this is not well, master Ford; this wrongs you.

Eva. Master Ford, you must pray, and not follow the imaginations of your own heart: this is jealousies.

Ford. Well, he's not here I seek for.

Page. No, nor nowhere else, but in your brain.

Ford. Help to search my house this one time: if I find not what I seek, show no colour for my extremity, let me for ever be your table sport; let them say of me, As jealous as Ford, that searched a hollow walnut for his wife's leman. Satisfy me once more; once more search with me.

Mrs. Ford. What hoa, mistress Page! come you and the old woman down; my husband will come into the chamber.

Ford. Old woman! What old woman's that?

Mrs. Ford. Why, it's my maid's aunt of Brentford.

Ford. A witch, a queen, an old cozening queen! Have I not forbid her my house? She comes of errands, does she? We are simple men; we do not know what's brought to pass under the profession of fortune-telling. She works by charms, by spells, by the figure, and such daubery as this is; beyond our element: we know nothing. Come down, you witch, you bag you; comedown, I say.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, good, sweet husband;—good gentlemen, let him not strike the old woman.

Enter Falstaff in woman's clothes, led by Mrs. Page.

Mrs. Page. Come, mother Pratt, come, give me your hand.

Ford. I'll prat her:—out of my door, you witch! [beats him.] You rags, you baggage, you pole-cat! out! out! I'll conjure you, I'll fortune-tell you. [Exit Fal.

Mrs. Page. Are you not ashamed? I think you have kill'd the poor woman.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, he will do it:—'Tis a goodly credit for you.

Ford. Hang her, witch!

Eva. By yea and no, I think, the 'oman is a witch indeed: I like not when a 'oman has a great beard; I spy a great beard under her muffler.

Ford. Will you follow, gentlemen? I beseech you, follow; see but the issue of my jealousy: if I cry out thus upon no trail, never trust me when I open again.

Page. Let's obey his humour a little further:

Come, gentlemen.

[Exeunt Page, Ford, Shallow, and Evans.

Mrs. P. Trust me, he beat him most pitifully.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, by the mass, that he did not; he beat him most unpitifully, methought.

Mrs. Page. I'll have the cudgel hallowed; it hath done meritorious service.

Mrs. Ford. What think you? May we, with the warrant of womanhood, and the witness of a good conscience, pursue him with any further revenge?

Mrs. Page. The spirit of wantonness is, sure, scared out of him; if the devil have him not in fee-simple, with fine and recovery, he will never, I think, attempt us again.

Mrs. Ford. Shall we tell our husbands how we have served him?

Mrs. Page. Yes, by all means; if it be but to scrape the figures out of our husband's brains. If they can find in their hearts, the poor unvirtuous fat knight shall be any further afflicted, we two will still be the ministers.

Mrs. F. I'll warrant, they'll have him publicly shamed: and, methinks, there would be no period to the jest, should he not be publicly shamed.

Mrs. Page. Come, to the forge with it then, shape it: I would not have things cool. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A ROOM IN THE GARTER INN.

Enter Host and Bardolph.

Bard. Sir, the Germans desire to have three of your horses: the duke himself will be to sorrow at court, and they are going to meet him.

Host. What duke should that be, comes so secretly? I hear not of him in the court: Let me speak with the gentlemen; they speak English?

Bard. Ay, sir; I'll call them to you.

Host. They shall have my horses; but I'll make them pay, I'll charge them: they have had my houses a week at command; I have turned away my other guests: they must come off; I'll charge them: Come. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A ROOM IN FORD'S HOUSE.

Enter Page, Ford, Mrs. Page, Mrs. Ford, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Eva. 'Tis one of the pest discretions of a 'oman as ever I did look upon.

Page. And did he send you both these letters at an instant?

Mrs. Page. Within a quarter of an hour.

F. Tarnold me, wife: Henecforth do what thou: I rather will suspect the sun with cold, [wilt: Than thee with wantonness: now doth thy honour In him that was of late an heretick, [stand, As firm as faith.

Page. 'Tis well, 'tis well; no more. Be not as extreme in submission.

As in offence:

But let our plot go forward: let our wives
Yet once again, to make us publick sport, Anpoint a meeting with this old fat fellow, Where we may take him, and disgrace him for it. Ford. There is no better way than that they spoke of.

Page. How! to send him word they’ll meet him in the park at midnight? sic, sic! he’ll never come. Eva. You say, he has been thrown in the rivers; and has been grievously peaten, as an old‘oman: methinks, there should be terrors in him, that he should not come.

Page. So think I too. [he comes, Mrs Ford. Devise but how you’ll use him when And let us two devise to bring him thither. Mrs P. There is an old tale goes, that Herne the hunter, Sometimes a keeper here in Windsor forest, Doth all the winter time, at still midnight, Walk round about an oak, with great ragg’d horns; And there he blasts the tree, and takes the cattle; And makes milk-kine yield blood, and shakes a In a most hideous and dreadful manner: cf a chain. You have heard of such a spirit; and well you know The superstitious idle-headed old3 [know, Received, and did deliver to our age, This tale of Herne the hunter for a truth.

P. Why, yet there want not many, that do fear In deep of night to walk by this Herne’s oak: But what of this?

Mrs Ford. Marry, this is our device; That Falstaff at that oak shall meet with us, Disguise’d like Herne, with huge horns on his head. P. Well, let it not be doubted but he’ll come, And in this shape: When you have brought him thither, Whate’er shall be done with him? what is your plot? Mrs Page. That likewise have we thought upon, and thus: Nan Page my daughter, and my little son, And three or four more of their growth, we’ll dress Like unicorns, ophæs, and fairies, green and white, With rounds of waxen tapers on their heads, And rattles in their hands; upon a sudden, As Falstaff, she, and I, are newly met, Let them from forth a saw-pit rush at once With some diffused song; upon their sight, We two in great amazedness will fly: Then let them all encircle him about, And, fairy-like, to pinch the unclean knight: And ask him, why, that hour of fairy-revel, In their so sacred paths he dares to tread, In shape prophanè.

Mrs Ford. And till he tell the truth, Let the supposed fairies pinch him sound, And burn him with their tapers.

Mrs Page. The truth being known, We’ll all present ourselves; dis-horn the spirit, And mock him home to Windsor.

Ford. The children must Be practised well to this, or they’ll never do. Eva. I will teach the children their behaviour; and I will be like a jack-an-apes also, to burn the knight with my taper. [Wizards. Ford. That will be excellent. I’ll go lay them

P. That silk will I go by;—and in that time Shall master Slender steal my Nan away. [Aside. And marry her at Eton.——Go, send to Falstaff straight.

Ford. Nay, I’ll to him again in name of Brook: He’ll tell me all his purpose: Sure, he’ll come. Mrs Page. Fear not you that: Go, get us pro- And tricking for our fairies. [perties, Eva. Let us about it: It is admirable pleasures, and fery honest knaveries. [Exeunt Page, Ford, and Evans. Mrs Page. Go, mistress Ford, Send quickly to Sir John, to know his mind. [Exit Mrs Ford. I’ll to the doctor; he hath my good will, And none but he, to marry with Nan Page. That Slender, though well landed, is an idiot; And he my husband best of all affects: The doctor is well money’d, and his friends Potent at court; he, none but he, shall have her, Though twenty thousand worthier come to crave her. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—A ROOM IN THE GARTER INN.

Enter Host and Simple. Host. What wouldst thou have, boor? what, thick-skinn’d speak, breathe, discuss; brief, short, quick, snap.

Sim. Marry, sir, I come to speak with Sir John Falstaff from master Slender.

Host. There’s his chamber, his house, his castle, his standing-bed, and tucklè-bed; tis painted about with the story of the prodigal, fresh and new: Go, knock and call; he’ll speak like an Anthropophagaminus unto thee: Knock, I say. Sim. There’s an old woman, a fat woman, gone up into his chamber; I’ll be so bold as stay, sir, till she come down: I come to speak with her, indeed.

Host. Ha! a fat woman! the knight may be rob’d: I’ll call.——Bully knight! Bully Sir John! speak from thy lungs military: Art thou there? it is thine host, thine Ephesian, calls. Fal. [above. How now, mine host? Host. Here’s a Bohemian-Tartar tarries the coming down of thy fat woman: Let her descend, bully, let her descend; my chambers are honourable: Fye! privacy! fye!

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. There was, mine host, an old fat woman even now with me; but she’s gone. Sim. Pray you, sir, was’t not the wise woman of Brentford?

Fal. Ay, marry, was it, muscle-shell; What would you with her?

Sim. My master, sir, my master Slender, sent to her, seeing her go through the streets, to know, sir, whether one Nyn, sir, that baguiled him of a chain, had the chain, or no.

Fal. I speak with the old woman about it. Sim. And what says she, I pray, sir? Fal. Marry, she says, that the very same man, that baguiled master Slender of his chain, cozened him of it.

Sim. I would, I could have spoken with the woman herself; I had other things to have spoken with her too, from him.

Fal. What are they? let us know.

Host. Ay, come; quick.

Sim. I may not conceal them, sir.

Fal. Conceal them, or thou diest.

Sim. Why, sir, they were nothing but about mistress Anne Page; to know, if it were my master's fortune to have her, or no.

Fal. 'Tis, 'tis his fortune.

Sim. What, sir?

Fal. To have her,—or no: Go; say, the woman told me so.

Sim. May I be so bold to say so, sir?

Fal. Ay, Sir Tike; who more bold?

Sim. I thank your worship: I shall make my master glad with these tidings. [Exit Simple.

Host. Thou art clerkly, I thank thee clerkly, Sir John. Was there a wise woman with thee?

Fal. Ay, that there was, mine host; one that hath taught me more wit than ever I learned before in my life: and I paid nothing for it neither, but was paid for my learning.

Enter Bardolph.

Bard. Out, alas, sir! cozenage! mere cozenage!

Host. Where be my horses? speak well of them, varletto.

Bard. Run away with the cozeners: for so soon as I came beyond Eton, they threw me off, from behind one of them, in a slough of mire; and set spurs, and away, like three German devils, three Doctor Faustuses.

Host. They are gone but to meet the duke, villain; do not say, they be fled; Germans are honest men.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans.

Eva. Where is mine host?

Host. What is the matter, sir?

Eva. Have a care of your entertainments; there is a friend of mine come to town, tells me, there is three cousin germans, that has cozened all the hosts of Readings, of Maidenhead, of Colebrook, of horses and money. I tell you for good will, look you: you are wise, and full of gibes and vulture-stogs: and 'tis not convenient you should be cozened: Fare you well. [Exit.

Enter Doctor Caius.

Caius. Were is mine Host de Jarterre?

Host. Here, master doctor, in perplexity and doubtful dilemma.

Caius. I cannot tell vat is dat: but it is tell-me, dat you make grand preparation for a duke de Jarmy, by my trot, dere is no duke, dat the court is know to come; I tell you for good vill: Adieu. [Exit.

Host. Hue and cry, villain, go:—assist me, knight; I am undone:—fly, run, hue and cry, villain! I am undone!}

[Exeunt Host and Bardolph.

Fal. I would all the world might be cozened; for I have been cozened and beaten too. If it should come to the ear of the court, how I have been transformed, and how my transformation hath been washed and cudged, they would melt me out of my fat, drop by drop, and liquor fisherman's boots with me: I warrant, they would whip me with their fine wits, till I were as crest-fallen as a dried pear. I never prospered since I foreswore myself at Primero. Well, if my wind were but long enough to say my prayers, I would repent.
That he shall likewise shuffle her away,
While other sports are tasking of their minds,
And at the deanery, where a priest attends,
Straight marry her: to this his mother's plot
She, seemingly obedient, likewise hath
Made promise to the doctor:—Now, thus it rests;
Her father means she shall be all in white;
And in that habit, when Slender sees his time
To take her by the hand, and bid her go,
She shall go with him:—her mother hath in
The better to denote her to the doctor (tended,
For they must all be mask'd and vizarded).
That, quaint in green, she shall lose enrōb'd,
With ribands pendant, flaring 'bout her head;
And when the doctor spies his vantage ripe,
To pinch her by the hand, and on that token,
The maid hath given consent to go with him.

Host. Which means she to deceive? father or mother!

F. Both, my good host, to go along with me:
And here it rests,—that you'll procure the vicar
'To stay for me at church, 'twixt twelve and one,
And, in the lawful name of marrying,
To give our hearts united ceremony. [vicar:
Host. Well, husband your device: I'll to the Bring you the maid, you shall not lack a priest.
Fent. So shall I evermore be bound to thee;
Besides, I'll make a present recompense.

[Exeunt.

Act Fifth.

SCENE I.—A ROOM IN THE GARTER INN.

Enter Falstaff and Mrs Quickly.

Fal. Pr'ythee, no more prattling:—go.—
I'll hold. This is the third time; I hope, good luck lies in odd numbers. Away, go; they say, there is divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance, or death.—Away.

Quick. I'll provide you a chain; and I'll do what I can to get you a pair of horns.

Fal. Away, I say; time wears: hold up your head and mine.

[Exit Mrs Quickly.

Enter Ford.

How now, master Brook? master Brook, the matter will be known to-night, or never. Be you in the Park about midnight, at Herne's oak, and you shall see wonders.

Ford. Went you not to her yesterday, sir, as you told me you had appointed?

Fal. I went to her, master Brook, as you see,
like a poor old man: but I came from her, master Brook, like a poor old woman. That same knave, Ford, her husband, hath the finest mad devil of jealousy in him, master Brook; that ever governed frenzy. I will tell you. He beat me grievously, in the shape of a woman;
for in the shape of man, master Brook, I fear not Goliath with a weaver's beam; because I know also, life is a shuttle. I am in haste; go along with me; I'll tell you all, master Brook.
Since I plucked geese, played truant, and whipp'd top, I knew not what it was to be beaten, till lately. Follow me: I'll tell you strange things of this knave Ford; on whom to-night
I will be revenged, and I will deliver his wife into your hand. — Follow: Strange things in hand, master Brook! follow. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—WINDSOR PARK.

Enter Page, Shallow, and Slender.

Page. Come, come; we'll couch i' the castle-ditch, till we see the light of our fairies.—Remember, son Slender, my daughter.

Slan. Ay, forsooth; I have spoke with her, and we have a nay-word, how to know one another. I come to her in white, and cry mum;
she cries budget; and by that we know one another.

Shal. That's good too: But what needs either your mum or her budget? the white will decipher her well enough.—It hath struck ten o'clock.
Page. The night is dark; light and spirits will become it well. Heaven prosper our sport! No man means evil but the devil, and we shall know him by his horns. Let's away; follow me.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—THE STREET IN WINDSOR.

Enter Mrs Page, Mrs Ford, and Dr Caius.

Mrs Page. Master doctor, my daughter is in green; when you see your time, take her by the hand, away with her to the deanery, and despatch it quickly: Go before into the park;
we must go together.

Caius. I know vat I have to do; Adieu.
Mrs Page. Fare you well, sir. [Exit Caius.
My husband will not rejoice so much at the abuse of Falstaff, as he will chafe at the doctor's marrying my daughter: but 'tis no matter; better
a little chiding than a great deal of heart-break.

Mrs Ford. Where is Nan now, and her troop of fairies? and the Welsh devil, Hugh?

Mrs Page. They are all couched in a pit hard by Herne's oak, with obscured lights; which at the very instant of Falstaff's and our meeting, they will at once display to the night.

Mrs Ford. That cannot choose but amaze him.
Mrs Page. If he be not amazed, he will be mocked; if he be amazed, he will every way be mocked.

Mrs Ford. We'll betray him finely.
Mrs P. Those who betray him do no treachery.
Mrs Ford. The hour draws on: To the oak,
to the oak!

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—WINDSOR PARK.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans, and Fairies.

E. Trib, trib, fairies; come; and remember your parts: be bold, I pray you; follow me into the pit: and when I give the watch-ords, do as I bid you; come, come; trib, trib. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—ANOTHER PART OF THE PARK.

Enter Falstaff disguised, with a buck's head on.

F. The Windsor bell hath struck twelve; the minute draws on: Now, love assist me.—Remember, Jove, thou wast a bull for thy Europa; love set on thy horns.—O powerful love!—For me, I am here a Windsor stag; and the fattest,
I think, it's the forest: Who comes here? my doe?

1 Watchword.
Enter Mrs Ford and Mrs Page.

Mrs Ford. Sir John? art thou there, my dear? my male deer?

Fal. My doe?—let the sky rain potatoes; let it thunder to the tune of Green Sleeves; hail kissing-comfits, and snow eringoes; I will shelter me here.

Mrs Ford. Mistress Page is come with me, sweet-heart.

Fal. Divide me like a bribe-buck, each a haunch: I will keep my sides to myself, my shoulders for the fellow of this walk, and my horns I bequeath your husbands. Am I a woodman? ha! speak I like Herne the hunter?—Why, now is Cupid a child of conscience; he makes restitution, as I am a true spirit, welcome.

[Noise within.

Mrs Page. Alas! what noise?

Mrs Ford. Heaven forgive our sins!

Fal. What should this be?

Mrs Page. I think the devil will not have me; he would never else cross me thus.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans, like a satyr; Mrs Quickly and Pistol; Anne Page, as the Fairy Queen, attended by her brother and others, dressed like fairies, with woven tapers on their heads.

Quick. Fairies, black, grey, green, and white, you moon-shine revellers, and shades of night, you orphan heirs of fixed destiny, attend your office, and your quality.—Crier Hobgoblin, make the fairy o-yes. [Toys.

Pist. Elves, list your names; silence, you airy Cricket, to Windsor chimney shalt thou leap: Where fires thou find'st unrak'd, and hearths unhearthed, there pinch the maid's as blue as bilberry: Sweep, our radiant queen hates sluts and slutt'ry.

Fal. They are fairies; he, that speaks to them, shall die:

[Eye.

I'll wink and cough: no man their works must see [Lies down upon his face.

Eva. Where's Pode?—Go you, and where you find a maid,

That ere she sleep, has thrice her prayers said,

Raise up the organs of her fantasy.

Sleep she as sound as careless infancy:

But those as sleep, and think not on their sins,

Pinch them, arms, legs, backs, shoulders, sides,

Quick. About, about; [and shins.

Search Windsor Castle, elves, within and out.

Strew good luck, ophies, on every sacred room;

That it may stand till the perpetual doom,

In state as wholesome, as in state 'tis fit;

Worthy the owner, and the owner it.

The several chairs of order look you scour

With juice of balm, and every precious flower;

Each fair instalment, coat, and several crest,

With royal blazon, evermore be blest!

And nightly, meadow-fairies, look you sing,

Like to the Garter's compass, in a ring:

The expressure that it bears; green let it be,

More fertile-fresh than all the field to see;

And, Hon y soit qui mal y pense, write,

In emerald tufts, flowers purple, blue, and white:

Like sapphire, pearl, and rich embroidery,

Buckled below fair knighthood's bending knee:

Fairies use flowers for their charactery,

Away; disperse: but, till 'tis one o'clock,

Our dance of custom, round about the oak

Of Herne the hunter, let us not forget.

Eva. Pray you, lock hand in hand; yourselves in order set:

And twenty glow-worms shall our lanterns be,

To guide our measure round about the tree.

But, stay; I smell a man of middle earth.

F. Heavens defend me from that Welsh fairy!

Pist. Vile worm thou wast o'looked even in thy birth.

Quick. With trial-fire touch me his finger-end:

If he be chaste, the flame will back descend,

And turn him to no pain; but if he start,

It is the flesh of a corrupted heart.

Pist. A trial, come.

Eva. Come, will this wood take fire?

[They burn him with their tapers.

Fal. Oh, oh, oh!

Quick. Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in desire!

About him fairies; sing a scornful rhyme:

And, as you trip, still pinch him to your time.

Eva. It is right; indeed he is full of inquity.

SONG.

Fye on sinful fantasy!

Fye on lust and luxury!

Lost is but a bloody fire,

Kindled with unchaste desire,

Fed in heart; whose flames aspire

As thoughts do blow them, higher and higher.

Pinch him, fairies, mutually;

Pinch him for his villainy:

Pinch him; and burn him, and turn him about,

Till candles, and starlight, and moonshine beout.

[During this song, the fairies pinch Falstaff.

Doctor Caius comes one way, and steals away a fairy in green; slender another way, and takes off a fairy in white; and Fenyon comes, and steals away Mrs Anne Page. A noise of hunting is made within. All the fairies run away. Falstaff pulls off his buck's head, and rises.]

Enter Page, Ford, Mrs Page, and Mrs Ford.

They lay hold on him.

Page. Nay, do not fly; I think we have watch'd you now;

Will none but Herne the hunter serve your turn?

Mrs Page. I pray you, come; hold up the jest no higher:—[wives.

Now, good Sir John, how like you Windsor

See you these, husband? do not these fair yokes

Become the forest better than the town?

Ford. Now, sir, who's a cuckold now?—Master Brook, Falstaff's a knave, a cuckold knave; here are his horns, master Brook: And, master Brook, he hath enjoyed nothing of Ford's but his buck-basket, his cudgel, and twenty pounds of money; which must be paid to master Brook; his horses are arrested for it, master Brook.

Mrs Ford. Sir John, we have had ill luck: we could never meet. I will never take you for my love again, but I will always count you my dear.

F. I do begin to perceive that I am made an ass.
Ford. Ay, and an ox too; both the proofs are extant.

Fal. And these are not fairies? I was three or four times in the thought, they were not fairies; and yet the guiltiness of my mind, the sudden surprise of my powers, drove the grossness of the fancy into a received belief, in despite of the teeth of all rhyme and reason, that they were fairies. See now, how wit may be made a Jack-a-lent, when 'tis upon ill employment.

Eva. Sir John Falstaff, serve God, and leave your desires, and fairies will not pine you.

Ford. Well said, fairy Hugh.

Eva. And leave you your jealousies too, I pray you.

Ford. I will never mistrust my wife again, till thou art able to woo her in good English.

Fal. Have I laid my brain in the sun, and dried it, that it wants matter to prevent so gross o'er-reaching as this? Am I ridden with a Welsh goat too? Shall I have a coxcomb of prize? 'tis time I were chocked with a piece of toasted cheese.

Eva. Seese is not good to give putter; your pelly is all putter.

Fal. Seese and putter! Have I lived to stand at the taunt of one that makes fritters of English? This is enough to be the decay of late-walking through the realm.

Mrs Page. Why, Sir John, do you think, though we would have thrust virtue out of our hearts by the head and shoulders, and have given ourselves without scruple to hell, that ever the devil could have made you our delight?

Ford. What, a hodge-pudding? a bag of flax?

Ford. And one that is as slanderous as Satan?

Page. And as poor as Job?

Ford. And as wicked as his wife?

Eva. And given to taverns, and sack, and wine, and methelins, and to drinkings, and swearings, and startling, pribbles, and prabbles?

Fal. Well, I am your theme: you have the stamp of me; I am dejected; I am not able to answer the Welsh flanner; ignorance itself is a plummet o'er me; use me as you will.

Ford. Marry, sir, we'll bring you to Windsor, to one master Brook, that you have cozened of money, to whom you should have been a pander: over and above that you have suffered, I think to repay that money will be a biting affliction.

Mrs Ford. Nay, husband, let that go to make amends:

Forgive that sum, and so we'll all be friends.

F. Well, here's my hand; all's forgiven at last.

F. Yet be cheerful, knight; thou shalt eat a posset to-night at my house; where I will desire thee to laugh at my wife that now laughs at thee: Tell her, master Slender hath married her daughter.

Mrs Page. Doctors doubt that:—If Anne Page be my daughter, she is, by this, doctor Caius's wife.

[Aside.

Enter Slender.

Slender. Whoa! ho! ho! father Page?

Page. Son! how now? how now, son? have you despatched?

[1 Puppet.  2 A fool's cap.

St. Despatched—I'll make the best in Gloucestershire know'n; would I were hanged, la, else.

Page. Of what, son?

Slender. I came yonder at Eton to marry mistress Anne Page, and she's a great lubbery boy: If it had not been't the church, I would have swunged him, or he should have swunged me. If I did not think it had been Anne Page, would I might never stir, and 'tis a post-master's boy.

Page. Upon my life then you took the wrong.

Slender. What need you tell me that? I think so, when I took a boy for a girl: If I had been married to him, for all he was in woman's apparel, I would not have had him.

Page. Why, this is your own folly. Did not I tell you, how you should know my daughter by her garments?

St. I went to her in white, and cry'd mum, and she cry'd wot, as Anne and I had appointed; and yet it was not Anne, but a post-master's boy.

Eva. Master Slender, cannot you see but marry boys?

Page. O, I am vexed at heart: What shall I do?

Mrs Page. Good George, be not so angry: I knew of your purpose; turned my daughter into green; and, indeed, she is now with the doctor at the deanery, and there married.

Enter Caius.

Caius. Vere is mistress Page? By gar, I am cozened: I ha' married un garcon, a boy; un poison, by gar, a boy; it is not Anne Page: by gar, I am cozened.

Mrs Page. Why, did you take her in green?

Caius. Ay, by gar, and 'tis a boy: by gar, I'll raise all Windsor. (Exit Caius.)

Ford. This is strange: Who hath got the right Anne?

Page. My heart misgives me: Here comes master Fenton.

Enter Fenton and Anne Page.

F. How now, master Fenton? [pardon! Anne, Fenton, good father! good my mother.

Page. Now, mistress! how chance you went not with master Slender?

[maid?

Mrs Page. Why went you not with master doctor, Fent? You do amaze her: Hear the truth of it. You would have married her most shamefully. Where there was no proportion held in love. The truth is, she and I, long since contracted, Are now so sure, that nothing can dissolve us. The offence is holy, that she hath committed: And this deceit loses the name of craft, Of disobedience, or undutious title; Since therein she doth evitate and shun A thousand irreligious cursed hours. [her.

Which forced marriage would have brought upon Ford. Stand not; annul: there is no remedy: —

In love, the heavens themselves do guide the state; Money buys lands, and wives are sold by fate.

F. I am glad, though you have ta'en a special stand to strike at me, that your arrow hath glanced.

Page. Well, what remedy? Fenton, heaven give thee joy?

What cannot be eschew'd must be embrac'd.
Fal. When night-dogs run, all sorts of deer are chas’d.
E. I will dance and eat plums at your wedding.
Mrs Page. Well, I will muse no further:—
Master Fenton,

Heaven give you many, many merry days!
Good husband, let us every one go home,
And laugh this sport o’er by a country fire;
Sir John and all. [Exeunt.

Twelfth Night; or, What You Will.

Persons Represented.

SEBASTIAN, a young Gentleman, Brother to Viola.
ANTONIO, a Sea-Captain, Friend to Sebastian.
A SEA-CAPTAIN, Friend to Viola.
VALENTINE, Gentlemen attending on the Duke.
CURIO,
SIR TOBY BELCH, Uncle of Olivia.
SIR ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.
MALVOLIO, Steward to Olivia.

FABIAN, Servants to Olivia.
CLOWN, Servants to Olivia.

OLIVIA, a rich Countess.
VIOLA, in love with the Duke.
MARIA, Olivia’s woman.

Lords, Priests, Sailors, Officers, Musicians, and other Attendants.

SCENE.—A city in Illyria; and the Sea-Coast near it.

Act First.

SCENE I.

AN APARTMENT IN THE DUKE’S PALACE.

Enter Duke, Curio, Lords; Musicians attending.

Duke. If musick be the food of love, play on,
Give me excess of it; that, surfeiting,
The appetite may sicken, and so die.—
That strain again;—it had a dying fall:
O, it came o’er my ear like the sweet south,
That breathes upon a bank of violets,
Stealing, and giving odour.—Enough; no more;
’Tis not so sweet now as it was before.
O spirit of love, how quick and fresh art thou!
That notwithstanding thy capacity
Receiveth as the sea, nought enters there,
Of what validity and pitch soever,
But falls into abatement and low price,
Even in a minute! so full of shapes is fancy
That it alone is high-fantastical.

cur. Will you go hunt, my lord?
duke. What, Curio?
cur. The hart.
duke. Why, so I do, the noblest that I have:
O, when mine eyes did see Olivia first,
Methought she purg’d the air of pestilence;
That instant was I turned into a hart;
And my desires, like fell and cruel hounds,
E’er since pursuit me.—How now? what news from her?

Enter Valentine.

V. So please my lord, I might not be admitted,
But from her handmaid do return this answer:
The element itself, till seven years’ heat,
Shall not behold her face at ample view;
But, like a cloistress, she will veiled walk,
And water once a day her chamber round

With eye-offending brine: all this, to season
A brother’s dead love, which she would keep
And lasting, in her sad remembrance. [fresh,]
D. O, she, that hath a heart of that fine frame,
To pay this debt of love but to a brother,
How will she love, when the rich golden shaft
Hath killed the flock of all affections else
That live in her! when liver, brain, and heart,
These sovereign thrones, are all supplied, and fill’d
(Her sweet perfections) with one self king!—
Away before me to sweet beds of flowers;
Love-thoughts lie rich, when canopied with bowers.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—THE SEA-COAST.

Enter Viola, Captain, and Sailors.

Vio. What country, friends, is this?
cap. Illyria, lady.

Vio. And what should I do in Illyria?
My brother he is in Elysium. [sailors? Perchance, he is not drown’d:—What think you, Cap. It is perchance that you yourself were saved.
Vio. O my poor brother! and so, perchance, may he be,
cap. True, madam: and to comfort you with chance,
Assure yourself, after our ship did split,
When you, and that poor number saved with you,
Hung on our driving boat, I saw your brother,
Most provident in peril, bind himself
(Courage and hope both teaching him the prac-
To a strong mast, that lived upon the sea; [tice]
Where, like Arion on the dolphin’s back,
I saw him hold acquaintance with the waves,
So long as I could see.
Vio. For saying so, there's gold:
Mine own escape unfoldeth to my hope
Where so thy speech serves for authority,
The like of him. Know'st thou this country?
Cap. Ay, madam, well; for I was bred and born,
Not three hours' travel from this very place.
Vio. Who governs here?
Cap. A noble duke, in nature,
As in his name.
Vio. What's his name?
Cap. Orsino! I have heard my father name him!
He was a bachelor then.
Cap. And so is now,
Or was so very late: for but a month
Ago I went from hence; and then 'twas fresh
In murmur (as, you know, what great ones do,
The less will prattle of), that he did seek
The love of fair Olivia.
Vio. What's she?
Cap. A virtuous maid, the daughter of a count
That died some twelvemonth since; then leaving
In the protection of his son, her brother, [her
Who shortly also died: for whose dear love,
They say, she hath abjur'd the company
And sight of men.
Vio. O, that I served that lady:
And might not be delivered to the world,
Till I had made mine own occasion mellow,
What my estate is.
Cap. That were hard to compass;
Because she will admit no kind of suit,
No, not the duke's.
Vio. There is a fair behaviour in thee, captain:
And though that nature with a beauteous wall
Doth oft close in pollution, yet of thee
I will believe, thou hast a mind that suits
With this thy fair and outward character.
I pray thee, and I'll pay thee bounteously,
Conceal me what I am: and be my aid
For such disguise as, haply, shall become
The form of my intent. I'll serve this duke;
Thou shalt present me as a page to him,
It may be worth thy pains; for I can sing,
And speak to him in many sorts of music,
That will allow me very well his service.
What else may hap, to-time I will commit;
Only shape thou silence to my wit.
Cap. Be you his page, and I your mute will be:
When my tongue blabs, let mine eyes not see!
Vio. I thank thee, lead me on. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A ROOM IN OLIVIA'S HOUSE.

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Martia.

Sir To. What a plague means my niece, to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure, care's an enemy to life.

Mar. By troth, Sir Toby, you must come in earlier o' nights; your cousin, my lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.

Sir To. Why, let her except before excepted.

Mar. Ay, but you must confine yourself within the modest limits of order.

Sir To. Confine! I'll confine myself no finer than I am; these clothes are good enough to drink in, and so be these boots too; an they be not, let them hang themselves in their own straps.

Mar. That quaffing and drinking will undo you: I heard my lady talk of it yesterday; and of a foolish knight, that you brought in one night here, to be her wooer.

Sir To. Who? Sir Andrew Ague-cheek?

Mar. Ay, he.

Sir To. He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria.

Mar. What's that to the purpose?

Sir To. Why, he has three thousand ducats a year.

Mar. Ay, but he'll have but a year in all these ducats; he's a very fool, and a prodigal.

Sir To. Iye, that you'll say so! he plays of the viol-de gambo, and speaks three or four languages word for word without book, and hath all the good gifts of nature.

Mar. He hath, indeed,—almost natural: for, besides that he's a fool, he's a great quarreler; and but that he hath the gift of a coward to allay the gust he hath in quarrelling, 'tis thought among the prudent he would quickly have the gift of a grave.

Sir To. By this hand, they are scoundrels, and substractors, that say so of him. Who are they?

Mar. They that add moreover, he's drink nightly in your company.

Sir To. With drinking healths to my niece; I'll drink to her, as long as there is a passage in my throat, and drink in Illyria: He's a coward, and a coxcomb, that will not drink to my niece, till his brains turn o' the toe like a parish top. Here comes Sir Andrew Ague-face.

Enter Sir Andrew Ague-cheek.

Sir A. Sir Toby Belch! how now, Sir Toby Belch?

Sir To. Sweet Sir Andrew!

Sir And. Bless you, fair shrew.

Mar. And you too, sir.

Sir To. Accost, Sir Andrew, accost.

Sir And. What's that?

Sir To. My niece's chamber-maid.

Sir And. Good mistress Accost, I desire better acquaintance.

Mar. My name is Mary, sir.

Sir And. Good mistress Mary Accost,—
Sir To. You mistake, knight: accost, is, front her, board her, woo her, assail her.

Sir And. Is that the meaning of accost?

Mar. Fare you well, gentlemen.

Sir To. An thou let part so, Sir Andrew, 't would thou might'st never draw sword again.

Sir And. An you part so, mistress, I would I might never draw sword again. Fair lady, do you think you have fools in hand?

Mar. Sir, I have not you by the hand.

Sir And. Marry, but you shall have; and here's my hand.

M. Now, sir, thought is free: I pray you, bring your hand to the buttery-bar, and let it drink.

Sir And. Wherefore, sweet heart? what's your metaphor?

Mar. It's dry, sir.

Sir A. Why, I think so; I am not such an ass but I can keep my hand dry. But what's your jest?

1 Keystril, a bastard hawk.
SCENE IV.—A ROOM IN THE DUKE’S PALACE.

Enter Valentine, and Viola in man’s attire.

Val. If the duke continue these favours towards you, Cesario, you are like to be much advanced; he hath known you but three days, and already you are no stranger.

Vio. You either fear his humour, or my negligence, that you call in question the continuance of his love: Is he inconstant, sir, in his favours?

Val. No, believe me.

Enter Duke, Curio, and Attendants.

Vio. I thank you. Here comes the count.

Duke. Who saw Cesario, ho?

Vio. On your attendance, my lord; here.
CLO. APT, IN GOOD FAITH; VERY APT! WELL, GO THY WAY; IF SIR TOBY WOULD LEAVE DRINKING, THOU WERT AS WITY A PIECE OF EVE'S FLESH AS ANY IN ILLIRIA.

MAR. PEACE, YOU ROGUE, NO MORE O' THAT; HERE COMES MY LADY: MAKE YOUR EXCUSE WISELY, YOU WERE BEST.

[EXIT.

ENTER OLIVIA AND MALVOLIO.

CLO. WIT, AND 'BE THY WILL, PUT ME INTO GOOD FOOLING! THOSE WITS, THAT THINK THEY HAVE, DO VERY OFT PROVE FOOLS; AND I, THAT AM SURE I LACK THEE, MAY PASS FOR A WISE MAN: FOR WHAT SAYS QUINAPALUS? BETTER A WITY FOOL THAN A FOOLISH WIT.—GOD BLESS THEE, LADY! OH. TAKE THE FOOL AWAY.

CLO. DO YOU NOT HEAR, FELLOWS? TAKE AWAY THE LADY.

OH. GO TO, YOU'RE A FOOL: I'LL NO MORE OF YOU: BESIDES, YOU GROW IDIOTIC.

CLO. TWO FAULTS, MADAM, THAT DRINK AND GOOD CONSIGL WILL AMEND: FOR GIVE THE DRY FOOL DRINK, THEN IS THE FOOL NOT DRY; BUT THE IDIOTIC MAN MEND HIMSELF; IF HE MEND, HE IS NO LONGER IDIOTIC; IF HE CANNOT, LET THE BUTCHER MEND HIM.—THE LADY BADE TAKE AWAY THE FOOL: THEREFORE, I SAY AGAIN, TAKE HER AWAY.

OH. SIR, I BADE THEM TAKE AWAY YOU.

CLO. MISPRISION IN THE HIGHEST DEGREE!—LADY, Cucullus non facit monachum: THAT'S AS MUCH AS TO SAY, I WEAR NOT MOTLEY IN MY BRAIN.

OH. WHAT THINK YOU OF THIS FOOL, MALVOLIO? DO THE IT NOT MEND?

MAL. YES; AND SHALL DO, TILL THE Pangs OF DEATH SHAKE HIM: INFIRMITY, THAT DECAYS THE WISE, DOH EVER MAKE THE BETTER FOOL.

CLO. HEAVEN SEND YOU, SIR, A SPEEDY INFIRMITY, FOR THE BETTER INCREASING YOUR YOLLY! SIR TOBY WILL BE SWORN THAT I AM NO FOOL: BUT HE WILL NOT PASS HIS WORD FOR TWOPENCE THAT YOU ARE NO FOOL.

OH. HOW SAY YOU TO THAT, MALVOLIO?

MAL. I MARVEL YOUR LADYSHIP TAKES DELIGHT IN SUCH A BAREFOOT RASER: I SAW HIM PUT DOWN THE OTHER DAY WITH AN ORDINARY FOOL, THAT HAS NO MORE BRAIN THAN A STONE. LOOK YOU NOW, HE'S OUT OF HIS GUARD ALREADY; UNLESS YOU LAUGH AND MINISTER OCCASION TO HIM, HE IS GAGGED. I PROTEST, I TAKE THESE WISE MEN, THAT CROW ON AT THESE SET KIND OF FOOLS, NO BETTER THAN THE FOOLS' ZANIES.

OH. O, YOU ARE SICK OF SELF-LOVE, MALVOLIO, AND TASTE WITH A DISTEMPERED APPETITE. TO BE GENEROUS, GUILTLESS, AND OF FREE DISPOSITION, IS TO TAKE THOSE THINGS FOR BIRD-BOLTS, THAT YOU DEEM CANNON-BULLETS: THERE IS NO SLANDER IN AN ALLOWED FOOL, THAT HE DOES NOT HOLD THEE, BUT RAIL; NOR NO RAILING IN A KNOWN DISCREET MAN, THOUGH HE DOES NOT REPROVE.

CLO. NOW MERCURY ENDEE THEE WITH LEASING, FOR THOU SPEAKEST WELL OF FOOLS.

RE-ENTER MARIA.

MAR. MADAM, THERE IS AT THE GATE A YOUNG GENTLEMAN MUCH DESIRES TO SPEAK WITH YOU.

OH. FROM THE COUNT ORSINO, IS IT?

MAR. I KNOW NOT, MADAM; 'TIS A FAIR YOUNG MAN, AND WELL ATTENDED.

OH. WHO OF MY PEOPLE HOLD HIM IN DELAY?

MAR. SIR TOBY, MADAM, YOUR KINSMAN.

OH. FETCH HIM OFF, I PRAY YOU; HE SPEAKS NOTH-ING BUT MADMAN: FYE ON HIM! [EXIT MARIA.

GO YOU, MALVOLIO; IF IT BE A SUIT FROM THE COUNT, I SICK, OR NOT AT HOME; WHAT YOU WILL, TO DISMISS IT. [EXIT MALVOLIO.

NOW YOU SEE, SIR, HOW YOUR FOOLING GROWS OLD, AND PEOPLE DISLIKE IT.

CLO. THOU HAST SPOKE FOR US, MADONNA, AS IF THY ELDEST SON SHOULD BE A FOOL: WHOSE SKULL JOVE CRAM WITH BRAINS, FOR HERE COMES ONE OF THY KIN, HAS A MOST WEAK PIA MATER.

[EXIT SIR TOBY BELCH.

OH. BY MY MINE HONOUR, HALF DRUNK.—WHAT IS HE AT THE GATE, COUSIN?

SIR TO. A GENTLEMAN.

OH. A GENTLEMAN! WHAT GENTLEMAN?

SIR TO. 'TIS A GENTLEMAN HERE—A PLAUGE OF THESE PICKLE-HERRINGS!—HOW NOW, SOT?

MAR. GOOD SIR TOBY.

SIR TO. THERE'S ONE AT THE GATE.

OH. AY, MARRY; WHAT IS HE?

SIR TO. LET HIM BE THE DEVIL, AND HE WILL, I CARE NOT; GIVE ME FAITH, SAY I. WELL, IT'S ALONE. [EXIT.

OH. WHAT'S A DRUNKEN MAN LIKE, FOOL?

MAL. LIKE A DROWN'D MAN, A FOOL, AND A MAD- MAN; ONE RAUGHT ABOVE HEAT MAKES HIM A FOOL; THE SECOND MADS HIM: AND A THIRD DROWNS HIM.

OH. GO THOU AND SEEK THE CORNER, AND LET HIM SIT O' MY COZ; FOR HE'S IN THE THIRD DEGREE OF DRINK, HE'S DROWN'D: GO, LOOK AFTER HIM.

CLO. HE IS BUT MAD YET, MADONNA; AND THE FOOL SHALL LOOK TO THE MADMAN. [EXIT CLOM.

RE-ENTER MALVOLIO.

MAL. MADAM, YOND' YOUNG FELLOW SWEARS HE WILL SPEAK WITH YOU. I TOLD HIM YOU WERESICK; HE TAKES ON HIM TO UNDERSTAND SO MUCH, AND THEREFORE COMES TO SPEAK WITH YOU: I TOLD HIM YOU WERE A SLEEP; HE SEEMS TO HAVE A FORE-KNOWLEDGE OF THAT TOO, AND THEREFORE COMES TO SPEAK WITH YOU. WHAT IS TO BE SAID TO HIM, LADY? HE'S FORTIIFIED AGAINST ANY DENIAL.

OH. TELL HIM, HE SHALL NOT SPEAK WITH ME.

MAL. HE HAS BEEN TOLD SO; AND HE SAYS, HE'LL STAND AT YOUR DOOR LIKE A SHERIFF'S POST, AND BE THE SUPPORTER OF A BENCH, BUT HE'LL SPEAK WITH YOU.

OH. WHAT KIND OF MAN IS HE?

MAL. WHY, OF MAN KIND.

OH. WHAT MANNER OF MAN?

MAL. OF VESTILL MANNER; HE'LL SPEAK WITH YOU, WILL YOU OR NO.

OH. OF WHAT PERSONAGE AND YEARS IS HE?

MAL. NOT YET OLD ENOUGH FOR A MAN, NOR YOUNG ENOUGH FOR A BOY, BETWEEN BOY AND MAN. HE IS VERY WELL FAVOURED, AND HE SPEAKS VERY WITTELY; ONE WOULD THINK, HIS MOTHER'S MILK WERE SCARE OUT OF HIM.

OH. LET HIM APPROACH: CALL IN MY GENTLEWOMAN.

MAL. GENTLEWOMAN, MY LADY CALLS. [EXIT.

RE-ENTER MARIA.

OH. GIVE ME MY VEIL: COME, THROW IT O'ER MY HEAD WE'LL ONCE MORE HEAR ORSINO'S EMBASSY. [FACE.

1. Membrane which encloses the brain.
Enter Viola.

Vio. The honourable lady of the house, which is she?

Oli. Speak to me, I shall answer for her.

Your will?

Vio. Most radiant, exquisite, and unmatchable beauty,—I pray you, tell me, if this be the lady of the house, for I never saw her: I would be loth to cast away my speech; for, besides that it is excellently well penned, I have taken great pains to con it. Good beauties, let me sustain no scorn: I am very comphitable,1 even to the least sinister usage.

Oli. Whence came you, sir?

Vio. I can say little more than I have studied, and that question's out of my part. Good gentle one, give me modest assurance, if you be the lady of the house, that I may proceed in my speech.

Oli. Are you a comedian?

Vio. No, my profound heart: and yet, by the very fangs of malice, I swear, I am not that I play. Are you the lady of the house?

Oli. If I do not usurp myself, I am.

Vio. Most certain, if you are she, you do usurp yourself; for what is yours to bestow, is not yours to reserve. But this is from my commission: I will on with my speech in your praise, and then show you the heart of my message.

Oli. Come to what is important in't: I forgive you the praise.

Vio. Alas, I took great pains to study it, and 'tis poetical.

Oli. It is the more like to be feigned; I pray you, keep it in. I heard, you were saucy at my gates; and allowed your approach, rather to wonder at you than to hear you. If you be not mad, be gone; if you have reason, be brief: 'tis not that time of moon with me, to make one in so skipping a dialogue.

M. Will you holst sail, sir? here lies your way:

Vio. No, good swabber; I am to hull here a little longer.—Some mollification for your giant,2 sweet lady.

Oli. Tell me your mind.

Vio. I am a messenger.

Oli. Sure, you have some hideous matter to deliver, when the courtesy of it is so fearful. Speak your office.

Vio. It alone concerns your ear. I bring no overture of war, no taxation of homage; I hold the olive in my hand: my words are as full of peace as matter.

Oli. Yet you began rudely. What are you? what would you?

Vio. The rudeness, that hath appear'd in me, have I learn'd from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are to your ears, divinity; to any other's profanation.

Oli. Give us the place alone: we will hear this divinity. [Exit Maria.] Now, sir, what is your text?

Vio. Most sweet lady,—

Oli. A comfortable doctrine, and much may be said of it. Where lies your text?

1 Accountable.
2 The original actress of Maria was very short.
TWELFTH NIGHT; OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

Vio. I am nofe'd post, lady; keep your purse; My master, not myself, lacks rescompense. Love make his heart of flint, that you shall love; And let your fervour, like my master's, be Plac'd in contempt! Farewell, fair crueltie. [Exit.

Oli. What is your parentage?
Above my fortunes, yet my state is well: I am a gentleman.—I'll be sworn thou art;
Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbs, actions, and spirit,
Do give thee five-fold blazon:—Not too fast:—
soft! soft!
Unless the master were the man.—How now? Even so quick may one catch the plague? Methinks, I feel this youth's perfections, With an invisible and subtle stealth,
To creep in at mine eyes. Well, let it be.—
What, ho, Malvolio!—

Re-enter Malvolio.

Mal. Here, madam, at your service.

Oli. Run after that same peevish messenger, The county's man: he left this ring behind him, Would I, or not; tell him I'll none of it. Desire him not to flatter with his lord, Nor hold him up with hopes; I am not for him: If that the youth will come this way to-morrow, I'll give him reasons for't. Hee thee, Malvolio.

Mal. Madam, I will. [Exit.

Oli. I do I know what: and fear to find Mine eye too great a flatterer for my mind. Fate, show thy force: Ourselves we do not owe 1:
What is decreed, must be: and be this so! [Exit.

Act Second.

SCENE I.—THE SEA-COAST.

Enter Antonio and Sebastian.

Ant. Will you stay no longer? nor will you not, that I go with you?

Seb. By your patience, no: my stars shine darkly over me; the malignancy of my fate might, perhaps, distemper yours; therefore I shall crave of you your leave, that I may bear my evils alone: It were a bad expence for your love, to lay any of them on you.

Ant. Let me yet know of you, whither you are bound.

Seb. No, 'sooth, sir; my determinate voyage is mere extravagancy. But I perceive in you so excellent a touch of modesty, that you will not extort from me what I am willing to keep in; therefore it charges me in manners the rather to express myself. You must know of me then, Antonio, my name is Sebastian, which I called Roderigo: my father was that Sebastian of Messaline, whom, I know, you have heard of: he left behind him, myself, and a sister, both born in an hour. If the heavens had been pleas'd, would we had so ended! but you, sir, alter'd that; for, some hour before you took me from the breach of the sea, was my sister drowned.

Ant. Alas, the day!

Seb. A lady, sir, though it was said she much resembled me, was yet of many accounted beautiful: but though I could not, with such estimable wonder, overfar believe that, yet thus far I will boldly publish her, she bore a mind that envy could not but call fair: she is drowned already, sir, with salt water, though I seem to drown her remembrance again with more.

Ant. Pardon me, sir, your bad entertainment.

S. O, good Antonio, forgive me your trouble. Ant. If you will not murder me for my love, let me be your servant.

S. If you will not undo what you have done, that is, kill him whom you have recovered, desire it not. Fare ye well at once: my bosom is full of kindness; and I am yet so near the manners of my mother, that upon the least occasion more, mine eyes will tell tales of me. I am bound to the Count Orsino's court: farewell. [Exit.

Ant. The gentleness of all the gods go with I have many enemies in Orsino's court, [thee: Else would I very shortly see thee there: But come what may, I do adore thee so, That danger shall seem sport, and I will go. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A STREET.

Enter Viola; Malvolio following.

Mal. Were not you even now with the Countess Olivia?

Vio. Even now, sir; on a moderate pace I have since arrived but hither.

Mal. She returns this ring to you, sir; you might have saved me my pains, to have taken it away yourself. She adds, moreover, that you should put your lord into a desperate assurance she will none of him: And one thing more; that you be never so hardy to come again in his affairs, unless it be to report your lord's taking of this. Receive it so.

Vio. She took the ring of me; I'll none of it.

Mal. Come, sir, you peevishly threw it to her; and her will is it should be so returned: if it be worth stooping for, there it lies in your eye; if not, be it his that finds it. [Exit.

Vio. I left no ring with her: What means this lady? Fortune forbid, my outside have not charmed her! She made good view of me; indeed, so much, That sure, methought her eyes had lost her tongue, For she did speak in starts distractedly. She loves me, sure; the cunning of her passion invites me in this churlish messenger. None of my lord's ring! why, he sent her none.

I am the man:—If it be so (as 'tis), Poor lady, she were better love a dream. Disguise, I see, thou art a wickedness, Wherein the pregnant 1 enemy does much. How easy is it, for the proper-false In women's waxen hearts to set their forms! Alas, our frailty is the cause, not we; For, such as we are made of, such we be.

1 Own.

1 Dexterox.
How will this fadge? My master loves her dearly;
And I poor monster, fond as much on him:
And she, mistaken, seems to dote on me:
What will become of this! As I am man,
My state is desperate for my master's love;
As I am woman, now alas the day!
What thriftless sighs shall poor Olivia breathe!
O time thou must entangle this, not I;
It is too hard a knot for me to untie. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—A ROOM IN OLIVIA'S HOUSE.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, and Sir Andrew Ague-cheek.

Sir To. Approach, Sir Andrew: not to be a bed after midnight, is to be up betimes; and diuinculo surgere, thou know'st,—

Sir And. Nay, by my troth, I know not: but I know, to be up late, is to be up late.

Sir To. A false conclusion: I hate it as an unfilled can: To be up after midnight, and to go to bed then, is early; so that, to go to bed after midnight, is to go to bed betimes. Do not our lives consist of the four elements?

Sir And. 'Faith, so they say; but I think it rather consists of eating and drinking.

Sir To. Thou art a scholar; let us therefore eat and drink.—Marian, I say!—a stoup of wine!

Enter Clown.

Sir And. Here comes the fool.

Clo. How now, my hearts? Did you never see the picture of we three?—

Sir To. Welcome, ass. Now, let's have a catch.

Sir And. By my troth, the fool has an excellent breast. I had rather than forty shillings I had such a leg; and so sweet a breath to sing, as the fool has. In sooth, thou wast in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spakest of Pigromeritus, the Vapians passing the equinoctial of Quebus; 'twas very good, 'faith.

Clo. My lady has a white hand, and the Myrmidons are no bottle-ale houses.

Sir And. Excellent! Why, this is the best fooling, when all is done. Now, a song.

Sir To. Come on; there is a sixpence for you: let's have a song.

Sir And. There's a testril of me too: if one knight give a—

Clo. Would you have a love-song, or a song of good life?

Sir To. A love-song, a love-song.

Sir And. Ay, ay; I care not for good life.

SONG.

Clo. O mistress mine, where are you roaming?
O stay and hear; your true love's coming,
That can sing both high and low:
Trip no further, pretty sweeting;
Journey's end in lovers' meeting,
Every wise man's son doth know.

Sir And. Excellent good, 'faith!

Sir To. Good, good.

1 Suit.  "We three loggerheads be."
2 Chast.

Clo. What is love? 'tis not hereafter;
Present worth hath present laughter;
What's to come, is still unsure:
In delay there lies no plenty;
Then come kiss me, sweet-and-twenty,
Youth's a stuff will not endure.

Sir And. A mellifluous voice, as I am true knight.

Sir To. A contagious breath.

Sir And. Very sweet and contagious, 'faith.

Sir To. To hear by the nose, it is dulcet in contagion. But shall we make the walken dance indeed? Shall we rouse the night-owl in a catch, that will draw three souls out of one weaver? Shall we do that?

Sir And. An you love me, let's do: I am dog at a catch.

Clo. By'r lady, sir, and some dogs will catch.

Sir And. Most certain: let our catch be, Thou knave, Hold thy peace, thou knave, knight! I shall be constrain'd in 't to call thee knave, knight.

Sir And. 'Tis not the first time I have constrain'd one to call me knave. Begin, fool; it begins, Hold thy peace.

Clo. I shall never begin, if I hold my peace.

Sir And. Good, 'faith! Come, begin.

[They sing a catch.

Enter Maria.

Mar. What a catterwauling do you keep here!
If my lady have not called up her steward, Malvolio, and bid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.

Sir To. My lady's a Catalian, I am a politician; Malvolio's a Peg-a-Ramsay, and Three merry men we be. Am not I consanguineous? Am I not of her blood? silly-valley, lady! There dwelt a man in Babylon, lady, lady!

Clo. Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable fooling.

Sir And. Ay, he does well enough, if he be disposed, and so do I too; he does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

Sir To. O the twelfth day of December—
Mar. Peace.

[Stirring.

Clo. O mistress mine, where are you roaming?
O stay and hear; your true love's coming,
That can sing both high and low:
Trip no further, pretty sweeting;
Journeys end in lovers' meeting,
Every wise man's son doth know.

Sir And. Excellent good, 'faith!

Sir To. Good, good.

1 Romancer.  5 Cobblers.
2 Name of an old song.  4 Hang yourself.

Mal. What, or bad? or what are you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honesty, but to gabble like tinkers at this time of night? Do ye make an alehouse of my lady's house, that ye squeak out your coxers'6 catches without any mitigation or remorse of voice? Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time, in you?

Sir To. We did keep time, sir, in our catches. Snack up!14

Mal. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My lady bade me tell you, that, though she harbour you as her kinsman, she's nothing allied to your disorders. If you can separate yourself and your misdemeanors, you are welcome to the house; if not, an it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.

1 Romancer.  5 Cobblers.
2 Name of an old song.  4 Hang yourself.
Sir To. Farewell, dear heart, since I must needs be gone.

Mar. Nay, good Sir Toby.

Clo. His eyes do show his days are almost done.

Mal. Is't even so?

Sir To. But I will never die.

Clo. Sir Toby, there you lie.

Mal. This is much credit to you.

Sir To. Shall I bid him go?

Clo. What an if you do?

Sir To. Shall I bid him go, and spare not?

Clo. O no, no, no, you dare not.

Sir To. Out o'time? sir, ye he. —Art any more than a steward? Dost thou think, because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale?

Clo. Yes, by Saint Anne; and ginger shall be hot in the mouth too.

Sir To. Thou'rt a th'right. —Go, sir, rub your chain with crumps: —A stoop of wine, Maria!

Mal. Mistress Mary, if you prized my lady's favour at anything more than contempt, you would not give means for this uncivil rule; she shall know of it, by this hand.

[Exit Malvolio.

Clo. Go shake your ears.

Sir And. Twere as good a deed as to drink when a man's a hungry, to challenge him to the field, and then to break promise with him, and make a fool of him.

Sir To. Do't, knight; I'll write thee a challenge: or I'll deliver thy indignation to him by word of mouth.

Mar. Sweet Sir Toby, be patient for to-might: since the youth of the count's was to-day with my lady, she is much out of quiet. For monsieur Malvolio, let me alone with him: if I do not pull him into a nay-word, and make him a common recreation, do not I think I have wit enough to lie straight in my bed: I know, I can do it.

Sir To. Possess us, possess us; tell us something of him.

Mar. Marry, sir, sometimes he is a kind of Puritan.

Sir And. O, if I thought that, I'd beat him like a dog.

Sir To. What, for being a Puritan? thy exquisite reason, dear knight?

Sir And. I have no exquisite reason for't, but I have reason good enough.

Mar. The devil a Puritan that he is, or any thing constantly but a time-pleaser: an affected ass, that cons state without book, and utters it by great swarths: the best persuaded of himself, so crammed, as he thinks, with excellencies, that it is his ground of faith, that all that look on him love him; and on that vice in him will my revenge find notable cause to work.

Sir To. What wilt thou do?

Mar. I will drop in his way some obscure epistles of love; wherein, by the colour of his beard, the shape of his leg, the manner of his gait, the expression of his eye, forehead, and complexion, he shall find himself most feelingly personated: I can write very like my lady, your niece; on a forgotten matter we can hardly make distinction of our hands.

Sir To. Excellent! I smell a device.

Sir And. I have't in my nose too.

Sir To. He shall think, by the letters that thou wilt drop, that they come from my niece, and that she is in love with him.

Mar. My purpose is, indeed, a horse of that colour.

Sir And. And your horse now would make him an ass.

Mar. Ass, I doubt not.

Sir And. O, 'twill be admirable.

M. Sport royal, I warrant you. I will plant you two, and let the fool make a third, where he shall find the letter; observe his construction of it. For this night to bed, and dream on the event. Farewell.

[Exit.

Sir To. Good night, Penthesilea.

Sir And. Before me, she's a good wench.

Sir To. She's a beagle, true bred, and one that adores me: What o' that?

Sir And. I was adored once too.

Sir To. Let's to bed, knight.—Thou hadst need send for more money.

Sir And. If I cannot recover your niece, I am a foul way out.

Sir To. Send for money, knight; if thou hast her not 't the end, call me Cut.

Sir And. If I do not, never trust me, take it how you will.

Sir To. Come, come; I'll go burn some sack, 'tis too late to go to bed now; come, knight; come, knight.

SCENE IV.—A ROOM IN THE DUKE'S PALACE.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and others.

Duke. Give me some musick:—Now, good morrow, friends:—Now, good Cesario, but that piece of song, that old and antique song we heard last night; Methought, it did relieve my passion much; More than light airs, and recollected terms Of these most brisk and giddy-paced times:—Come, but one verse.

Cur. He is not here, so please, your lordship, that should sing it.

Duke. Who was it?

Cur. Feste, the jester, my lord: a fool, that the lady Olivia's father took much delight in: he is about the house.

Duke. Seek him out, and play the tune the while.

[Exit Curio. —Musick.

Duke. Who?

Cur. This, boy: If ever thou shalt love,
In the sweet pangs of it, remember me:
For, such as I am, all true lovers are;
Untaught and skittish in all motions else,
Save, in that constant image of the creature
That is belov'd.— How dost thou like this tune?

Vio. It gives a very echo to the seat
Where Love is thron'd.

Duke. Thou dost speak masterly:
My life upon't, young though thou art, thin eye
Hath stay'd upon some favour that it loves;
Hath it not, boy?

1 Eye-word.
2 Row of grass left by a mower.
Vio. A little, by your favour.

Duke. What kind of woman is't?

Vio. Of your complexion.

Duke. She is not worth thee, then. What years i'faith?

Vio. About your years, my lord.

Duke. Too old, by heaven; Let still the woman take
An elder than herself; so wears she to him,
So sways she level in her husband's heart.
For, boy, however we do praise ourselves,
Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm,
More longing, wavering, sooner lost and worn,
Than women's are.

Vio. I think it will, my lord.

Duke. Then let thy love be younger than thy-
Or thy affection cannot hold the bent: [self,
For women are as roses; whose fair flower,
Being once display'd, doth fall that very hour.
Vio. And so they are: alas, that they are so;
To die, even when they to perfection grow!

Re-enter Curio and Clown.

Duke. O fellow, come, the song we had last night:—
Mark it, Cesario; it is old, and plain:
The spinsters and the knitters in the sun,
And the free maids that weave their thread with
Do use to chant it; it is silly sooth,1 [bones,
And dallies with the innocence of love,
Like the old age.

Clo. Are you ready, sir?

Duke. Ay; pr'ythee, sing. [Musick.

SONG.

Clo. Come away, come away, death,
And in sad cypress let me be laid;
Fly away, fly away breath;
I am sick at heart, I am sick at blood;
My shroud of white, stuck all with yew,
O, prepare it:
My part of death, no one so true
Did share it.

Not a flower, not a flower, sweet,
On my black coffin let there be strown;
Not a friend, not a friend, greet
My poor corpse, where my bones shall be thrown:
A thousand thousand sighs to save,
Lay me, O, where
Sad true lover ne'er find my grave,
To weep there.

Duke. There's for thy pains.

Clo. No pains, sir; I take pleasure in singing,
Duke. I'll pay thy pleasure, then. [sir.

Clo. Truly, sir, and pleasure will be paid,
one time or another.

Duke. Give me now leave to leave thee.

Clo. Now, the melancholy god protect thee;
and the tailor make thy doublet of changeable taffata, for thy mind is a very opal.—I would have men of such constancy put to sea, that their business might be every thing, and their intent every where; for that's it, that always makes a good voyage of nothing.—Farewell.

(Exit Clown.

Duke. Let all the rest give place.—
[Exeunt Curio and Attendants. Once more, Cesario.

Get thee to yon' same sovereign cruelty:
Tell her, my love, more noble than the world,
Prizes not quantity of dirty lands;
The parts that fortune hath bestow'd upon her,
Tell her, I hold as giddily as fortune;
But 'tis that miracle, and queen of gems,
That nature pranks1 her in, attracts my soul.
Vio. But, if she cannot love you, sir?

Duke. I cannot be so answer'd.

Vio. 'Sooth, but you must.

Say, that some lady, as, perhaps, there is,
 Hath for your love as great a pang of heart
As you have for Olivia: you cannot love her;
You tell her so; Must she not then be answer'd?

Duke. There is no woman's sides
Can bide the beating of so strong a passion
As love doth give my heart: no woman's heart
So big, to hold so much; they lack retention.
But mine is all as hungry as the sea,
And can digest as much: make no compare
Between that love a woman can bear me,
And that I owe Olivia.

Vio. Ay, but I know,—

Duke. What dost thou know?

Vio. Too well what love women to men may owe:
In faith, they are as true of heart as we.
My father had a daughter lov'd a man,
As it might be, perhaps, were I a woman,
I should your lordship.

Duke. And what's her history?

Vio. A blank, my lord: She never told her love,
But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud,
Feed on her damask cheek; she pin'd in thought:
And, with a green and yellow melancholy,
She sat like patience on a monument,
Smiling at grief. Was not this love, indeed?
We men may say more, swear more; but, indeed,
Our shows are more than will; for still we prove
Much in our vows, but little in our love.

Duke. But died thy sister of her love, my boy?
V. I am all the daughters of my father's house.
And all the brothers too;—and yet I know
Sir, shall I to this lady? [not:—

Duke. Ay, that's the theme.
To her in haste; give her this jewel; say,
My love can give no place, bide no denay.2

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—OLIVIA'S GARDEN.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew Ague-cheek, and Fabian.

Sir To. Come thy ways, signior Fabian.

Fab. Nay, I'll come; if I lose a scruple of this sport, let me be boiled to death with melancholy.
Sir To. Would'st thou not be glad to have the niggardly rascally sheep-biter come by some notable shame?

Fab. I would exult, man; you know, he brought me out of favour with my lady, about a bear-baiting here.

Sir To. To anger him, we'll have the bear again; and we will fool him black and blue.—
Shall we not, Sir Andrew?

1 Simple truth.

1 Deeks. 2 Denay.
Sir. An we do not, it is pitty of our lives.

Enter Maria.

Sir To. Here comes the little villain:—How now, my notle of India?

Mar. Get ye all three into the box-tree; Malvolio’s coming down this walk; he has been yonder i’ the sun, practising behaviour to his own shadow this half hour; observe him, for the love of mockery; for, I know, this letter will make a contemplative idiot of him. Close, in the name of jesting! [The men hide themselves.] Lie thou there; [Throws down a letter.] for here comes the trout that must be caught with tickling. [Exit Maria.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. Tis but fortune; all is fortune. Maria once told me, she did affect me; and I have heard herself come thus near that, should she fancy, it should be one of my complexion. Besides, she uses me with a more exalted respect than any one else that follows her. What should I think on’t?

Sir To. Here’s an overweening rogue!

Fab. O, peace! Contemplation makes a rare turkey-cock of him; how he jetsi under his advanced plumes!

Sir And. ‘Slight, I could so beat the rogue:—

Sir To. Peace, I say.

Mal. To be Count Malvolio;—

Sir To. Ah, rogue!

Sir And. Pistol him, pistol him.

Sir To. Peace, peace!

Mal. There is example for’t; the lady of the strarchy married the yeoman of the wardrobe.

Sir And. Tie on him, Jezebel!

Fab. O, peace! now he’s deeply in, look, how imagination blows him.

Mal. Having been three months married to her, sitting in my state,—

Sir To. O, for a stone-bow, to hit him in the eye!

Mal. Calling my officers about me, in my branched velvet gown; having come from a day-bed, where I left Olivia sleeping.

Sir To. Fire and brimstone!

Fab. O, peace, peace!

Mal. And then to have the humour of state; and after a demure travel of regard,—telling them, I know my place, as I would they should do theirs,—To ask for my kinsman Toby:

Sir To. Bolts and shackles!

Fab. O, peace, peace, peace! now, now.

Mal. Seven of my people, with an obedient start, make out for him: I frown the while; and, perchance, wind up my watch, or play with some rich jewel. Toby approaches; court’sies there to me:

Sir To. Shall this fellow live?

Fab. Though our silence be drawn from us with cars, yet peace.

Mal. I extend my hand to him thus, quenching my familiar smile with an austere regard of control:

Sir To. And does not Toby take you a blow o’ the lips then?

Mal. Saying, Cousin Toby, my fortunes having cast me on your niece, give me this prerogative of speech:—

Sir To. What, what?

Mal. You must amend your drunkenness.

Sir To. Out, scab!

Fab. Nay, patience, or we break the sinews of our plot.

Mal. Besides, you waste the treasure of your time with a foolish knight;

Sir And. That’s me, I warrant you.

Mal. One Sir Andrew;

Sir And. I knew, ’twas I; for many do call me fool.

Mal. What employment have we here?

[Taking up the letter.

Fab. Now is the woodcock near the gin.

Sir To. O, peace! and the spirit of humour intimate reading aloud to him!

Mal. By my life, this is my lady’s hand: these be her very P’s and her T’s, and thus makes she her great C’s. It is, in contempt of question, her hand.

Sir And. Her P’s, her U’s, and her T’s: Why that?

Mal. [Reads.] To the unknown beloved, this, and my good wishes: her very phrases!—By your leave, wax.—Soft! and the impressure her Lucrece, with which she uses to seal: ’tis my lady: To whom should this be?

Fab. This wins him, liver and all.

Mal. [Reads.] Jove knows, I love:

But who?

Lips do not move,

No man must know.

No man must know.—What follows? the numbers altered!—No man must know:—If this should be thee, Malvolio?

Sir To. Marry, hang thee, brock!

Mal. I may command, where I adore:

But silence, like a Lucrece knife,

With bloodless stroke my heart doth gore;

M, O, A, I, doth sway my life.

Fab. A fustian riddle?

Sir To. Excellent wench, say I.

Mal. M, O, A, I, doth sway my life.—Nay, but first, let me see,—let me see,—let me see.

Fab. What a dish of poison has she dressed him!

Sir To. And with what wing the stannyl2 checks3 at it!

Mal. I may command where I adore. Why, she may command me; I serve her, she is my lady. Why, this is evident to any formal capacity. There is no obstruction in this;—And the end,—What should that alphabetical position portend? If I could make that resemble something in me,—Softly!—M, O, A, I,—

Sir To. O, ay! make up that:—he is now at a cold scent.

Fab. Sowter4 will cry upon’t for all this, though it be as rank as a fox.

Mal. M,—Malvolio;—M,—why, that begins my name.

Fab. Did not I say, he would work it out? the cur is excellent at faults.

1 Strata. 2 Haw. 3 Files. 4 Name of a hound.
SHAKESPEARE'S DRAMATIC WORKS.

Act III.

SCENE I.—OLIVIA'S GARDEN.

Enter Viola, and Clown with a tabor.

Vio. Save thee, friend, and thy music: Dost thou live by thy tabor?

Clo. No, sir; I live by the church.

Vio. Art thou a churchman?

Clo. No such matter, sir; I do live by the church: for I do live at my house, and my house doth stand by the church.

Vio. So thou may'st say, the king lies by a beggar, if a beggar dwell near him: or, the church stands by thy tabor, if thy tabor stand by the church.

Clo. You have said, sir.—To see this age!—A sentence is but a cheveril 2 glove to a good wit; how quickly the wrong side may be turned outward!

Vio. I warrant thou art a merry fellow, and carest for nothing.

Clo. Not so, sir, I do care for something: but in my conscience, sir, I do not care for you; if that be to care for nothing, sir, I would it would make you invisible.

Vio. Art not thou the lady Olivia's fool?

Clo. No, indeed, sir; the lady Olivia has no folly: she will keep no Fool, sir, till she be married; and fools are as like husbands as pigeons are to herring the husband's the bigger: I am, indeed, not her fool, but her corrupter of words.

Vio. I saw thee late at the Count Orsino's.

Clo. Foolery, sir, does walk about the orb, like the sun; it shines every where. I would be sorry, sir, but the fool should be as oft with your master, as with my mistress: I think, I saw your wisdom there.

Vio. Nay, an thou pass upon me, I'll no more with thee, Hold, there's expences for thee. Is thy lady within?

Clo. My lady is within, sir. I will construe to her whence you come; who you are, and what

Sir To. Shall I play my freedom at tray-trip, 1 and become thy bond slave?

Sir And. I' faith, or I either.

Sir To. Why, thou hast put him in such a dream, that, when the image of it leaves him, he must run mad.

Mar. Nay, but say true; does it work upon him?

Sir To. Like aque vitae.

Mar. If you will then see the fruits of the sport, mark his first approach before my lady: he will come to her in yellow stockings, and 'tis a colourshe abhors; and cross-gartered, a fashion she detests; and he will smile upon her, which will now be so unsuitable to her disposition, being addicted to a melancholy as she is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt: if you will see it, follow me.

Sir To. To the gates of Tartar, thou must excellent devil of wit.

Sir And. I'll make one too. [Exeunt.

Enter Maria.

Sir And. Nor I neither.

Fab. Here comes my noble gull-catcher.

Sir To. wilt thou set thy foot o' my neck?

Sir And. Or o' mine either?

1 Skin. 2 Open country. 3 To utmost exactness.

1 A boy's diversion. 2 Kid.
you would, are out of my welkin: I might say, element; but the word is over-worn. [Exit.

_Vio._ This fellow's wise enough to play the fool; And, to do that well, craves a kind of wit.
He must observe their mood on whom he jests, The quality of persons, and the time.
And, like the haggard, check at every feather That comes before his eye. This is a practice, As full of labour as a wise man's art:
For folly, that he wisely shows, is fit; But wise men, folly-fallen, quite taint their wit.

_Enter Sir Toby Belch and Sir Andrew Ague-cheek._

_Sir To._ Save you, gentlemen.
 _Vio._ And you, sir.
 _Sir And._ Dieu vous garde, monsieur.
 _Vio._ Et vous aussi : votre serviteur.
 _Sir And._ I hope, sir, you are; and I am yours.
 _Sir To._ Will you encounter the house? my niece is desirous you should enter, if your trade be to her.
 _Vio._ I am bound to your niece, sir; I mean, she is the list of my voyage.

_Sir To._ Taste your legs, sir, put them to motion. _Vio._ My legs do better understand me, sir, than I understand what you mean by biding me taste my legs.

_Sir To._ I mean, to go, sir, to enter.
 _Vio._ I will answer you with gait and entrance: But we are prevented.

_Enter Olivia and Maria._

_Most excellent accomplished lady, the heavens rain odours on you!_

_Sir And._ That youth's a rare courtier! Rain odours! well.

_Vio._ My matter hath no voice, lady, but to your own most pregnant and vouchsafed ear.

_Sir A._ Odours, pregnant, and vouchsafed:—
_I'll get 'em all three ready._

_Oli._ Let the garden door be shut, and leave me to my hearing.

_[Exeunt Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Maria._

_Give me your hand, sir._

_Vio._ My duty, madam, and most humble service.

_Oli._ What is your name? [princess.

_Vio._ Cesario is your servant's name, fair O. My servant, sir! 'Twas never merry world,
Since lowly feigning was called compliment:
You are servant to the Count Orsino, youth.
_V._ And he is yours, and his must needs be yours:
Your servant's servant is your servant, madam.

_Oli._ For him, I think not on him; for his thoughts,

'Would they were blanks, rather than fill'd with _Vio._ Madam, I come to what your gentle

_[On his behalf:_

_Oli._ O, by your leave, I pray you;
I bade you never speak again of him:
But, would you undertake another suit, I had rather hear you to solici that,
Than music from the spheres.

_Vio._ Dear lady,—

_O._ Give me leave, I beseech you: I did send, After the last enchantment you did here,

1_Sky. 3_Fly. 2 NIL trained hawk. 4_Limit.

_A ring in chace of you: so did I abuse
Myself, my servant, and, I fear me, you:
Under your hard construction must I sit,
To force that on you, in a shameful cunning,
Which you knew none of yours: What might you think?

Have you not set mine honour at the stake
And bated it with all the unmus'd thoughts
That tyrannous heart can think? To one of your receiving!

Enough is shown: a cyprus, not a bosom,
Hides my poor heart: So let me hear you
_Vio._ I pity you.

_Oli._ That's a degree to love.

_Vio._ No, not a grise: but 'tis a vulgarproof,
That very oft we pity enemies.

_[again;_ Oli._ Why, then, methinks, 'tis time to smile O, world, how apt the poor are to be proud
If one should be a prey, how much the better
To fall before the lion, than the wolf?_

_[Clock strikes._

_The clock upbraids me with the waste of time,—
Be not afraid, good youth, I will not have you:
And yet, whose wit and youth is come to harry
Your wife is like to reap a proper man: [vest
There lies your way, due west.

_Vio._ Then westward-hoe: [ship _Grace, and good disposition 'tend your lady—
You'll nothing, madam, to my lord by me?

_Oli._ Stay:

_I pr'ythee, tell me, what thou think'st of me. V._ That you do think, you are not what you are.

_Oli._ If I think so, I think the same of you.
_V._ Then think you right; I am not what I am,
O. I would you were as I would have you be!
_Vio._ Would it be better, madam, than I am, I wish it might; for now I am your fool.

_Oli._ O, what a deal of scorn looks beautiful
In the contempt and anger of his lip!
A mur'd'rous guilt shows not itself more soon
Than love that would seem hid: love's night is noon.

_Cesario by the roses of the spring,
By maidhood, honour, truth, and every thing,
I love thee so, that, maugre all thy pride,
Nor wit, nor reason, can my passion hide.
Do not extort thy reasons from this clause,
For, that I woo, thou therefore hast no cause:
But, rather, reason thus with reason fitter:
Love sought is good, but given unsought is better.

_V._ By innocence I swear, and by my youth,
I have one heart, one bosom, and one truth,
And that no woman has; nor never none
Shall mistress be of it, save I alone.
And so adieu, good madam; never more
Will I my master's tears to you deplore.[move

_O._ Yet come again: for thou, perhaps, may'st That heart, which now abhors, to like his love,

_[Exeunt._

SCENE II.—A ROOM IN OLIVIA'S HOUSE.

_Enter Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew Ague-cheek, and Fabian._

_Sir To._ No, faith, I'll not stay a jot longer.

_Sir To._ Thy reason, dear venom, give thy reason.

1 Ready apprehension. 2 Step.
Fab. You must needs yield your reason, Sir Andrew.

Sir And. Marry, I saw your niece do more favours to the count’s serving man, than ever she bestowed upon me: I saw’t i’ the orchard.

Sir To. Did she see thee the while, old boy? tell me that.

Sir And. As plain as I see you now.

Fab. This was a great argument of love in her toward you.

Sir A. ‘Slight! will you make an ass o’me?

Fab. I will prove it legitimate, sir, upon the oaths of judgment and reason.

Sir To. And they have been grand jury-men, since before Noah was a sailor.

Fab. She did show favour to the youth in your sight, only to exasperate you, to awake your dormant valour, to put fire in your heart, and brimstone in your liver: You should then have accosted her; and with some excellent jests, fire-new from the mint, you should have banged the youth into dumbness. This was looked for at your hand, and this was baulked: the double gift of this opportunity you let time wash off, and you are now sailed into the north of my lady’s opinion; where you will hang like an icicle on a Dutchman’s beard, unless you do redeem it by some laudable attempt, either of valour or policy.

Sir And. And’t be any way, it must be with valour; for policy I hate: I had as lief 1 be a Brownist, 2 as a politician.

Sir To. Why then, build me thy fortunes upon the basis of valour. Challenge me the count’s youth to fight with him; hurt him in eleven places; my niece shall take note of it: and assure thyself, there is no love-broker in the world can more prevail in man’s commendation with woman, than report of valour.

Fab. There is no way but this, Sir Andrew.

Sir And. Will either of you bear me a challenge to him?

Sir To. Go, write it in a martial hand; be curst 3 and brief: it is no matter how witty, so it be eloquent, and full of invention: taunt him with the licence of ink: if thou shouldst him some thrice, it shall not be amiss; and as many lies as will lie in thy sheet of paper, although the sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware 4 in England, set ’em down; go, about it. Let there be gall enough in thy ink: though thou write with a goose pen, no matter: About it.

Sir And. Where shall I find you?

Sir To. We’ll call thee at the cubiculo; 5 Go.

Fab. This is a dear manakin to you, Sir Toby.

Sir To. I have been dear to him, lad; some two thousand strong, or so.

Fab. We shall have a rare letter from him: but you’ll not deliver it?

Sir To. Never trust me then; and by all means stir on the youth to an answer. I think, oxen and wainropes cannot hale them together. For Sir Andrew, if he were opened, and you find so much blood in his liver as will clog the foot of a flea, I’ll eat the rest of the anatomy.

1 As willingly.  3 Crabb’d.  5 Chamber.
2 A Puritan sect.  4 Which held forty persons.

Fab. And his opposite, the youth, bears in his visage no great presage of cruelty.

Enter Maria.

Sir To. Look, where the youngest wrack of nine comes.

Mar. If you desire the spleen, and will laugh yourselves into stitches, follow me: you’gull Malvolio is in yellow stockings.

Sir To. And cross-gartered?

Mar. Most villainously; like a pedant that keeps a school i’ the church.—I have dogged him, like his murderer: He does obey every point of the letter that I dropped to betray him. He does smile his face into more lines than are in the new map, with the augmentation of the Indies: you have not seen such a thing as ’tis; I can hardly forbear hurling things at him. I know, my lady will strike him; if she do, he’ll smile, and take ’t for a great favour.

Sir To. Come, bring us, bring us where he is.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A STREET.

Enter Antonio and Sebastian.

S. I would not, by my will, have troubled you;
But, since you make your pleasure of your pains, I will no further chide you.

Ant. I could not stay behind you; my desire,
More sharp than filed steel, did spur me forth;
And not all love to see you (though so much,
As might have drawn one to a longer voyage),
But jealousy what might befal your travel,
Being skillest in these parts; which to a stranger,
Unfriended and unfriend, often prove
Rough and unhospital: My willing love,
The rather by these arguments of fear,
Set forth in your pursuit.

Seb. My kind Antonio,
I can no other answer make, but, thanks,
And thanks, and ever thanks: Often good turns
Are shuffled off with such uncourteous pay:
But were my worth, as is my conscience, firm,
You should find better dealing. What’s to do?
Shall we go see the reliques of this town?

Ant. To-morrow, sir; best, first, go see your lodging.

Seb. I am not weary, and ’tis long to-night;
I pray you, let us satisfy our eyes
With the memorials, and the things of fame,
That do renown this city.

Ant. Would you’d pardon me;
I do not without danger walk these streets:
Once in a sea-fight, ’gainst the Count his galleys,
I did some service; of such note, indeed,
That, were I a’ten here, it would scarce be answer’d.

S. Belike, you steal great number of his people.
A. The offence is not of such a bloody nature;
Albeit the quality of the time and quarrel,
Might well have given us bloody argument.
It might have since been answer’d in repaying
What we took from them; which for traffic’s sake
Most of our city did; only myself stood out;
For which, if I be lapsed in this place,
I shall pay dear.

1 Caught.
SC. III.

TWELFTH NIGHT; OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

Seb. Do not then walk too open.
A. It doth not fit me. Hold, sir, here's my purse;
In the south suburbs, at the Elephant,
Is best to lodge: I will bespeak our diet. [ledge,
While you beguile the time, and feed your know-
With viewing of the town; there shall you have me.

Seb. Why do you purse?
A. Haply, your eye shall light upon some toy
You have desire to purchase; and your store,
I think, is not for idle markets, sir.

Seb. I'll be your purse-bearer, and leave you for an hour.

Ant. To the Elephant. —

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—OLIVIA'S GARDEN.

Enter Olivia and Maria.

O. I have sent after him: He says, he'll come;
How shall I feast him? what bestow on him?
For youth is bought more oft than begg'd, or
I speak too loud. — [borrow'd.
Where is Malvolio? — he is sad, and civil,
And suited well for a servant with my fortunes;
Where is Malvolio?

Mar. He's coming, madam;
But in strange manner. He is sure possess'd.

Oli. Why, what's the matter? does he rave?

Mar. No, madam,
He does nothing but smile; your ladyship
Were best have guard about you if he come;
For, sure, the man is tainted in his wits.

Oli. Go call him hither. I'm as mad as he,
If sad and merry madness equal be.—

Enter Malvolio.

How now, Malvolio?

Mal. Sweet lady, ho, ho. [Smiles fantastickly.

Oli. Smil'st thou?

I sent for thee upon a sad 1 occasion.

Mal. Sad, lady? I could be sad: This does make some obstruction in the blood, this cross-gardening: But what of that, if it please the eye of one, it is with me as the very true somet is:
Please one, and please all.

Oli. Why, how dost thou, man? what is the matter with thee?

Mal. Not black in my mind, though yellow in my legs: it did come to his hands, and commands shall be executed. I think, we do know the sweet Roman hand.

Oli. Wilt thou go to bed, Malvolio?

Mal. To bed? ay, sweet-heart.

Oli. Heaven comfort thee! Why dost thou smile so, and kiss thy hand so oft?

Mar. How do you, Malvolio?

Mal. At your request? Yes; Nightingales answer daws.

Mar. Why appear you with this ridiculous boldness before my lady? [writ.

Mal. Be not afraid of greatness: 'Twas well
Oli. What meanest thou by that, Malvollo?

Mal. Some are born great;

Oli. Ha?

1 Grave.

Mal. Some achieve greatness,—

Oli. What say'st thou?

Mal. And some have greatness thrust upon

Oli. Heaven restore thee! [them.

Mal. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings;—

Oli. Thy yellow stockings?

Mal. And wished to see thee cross-gartered.

Oli. Cross-gartered?

Mal. Go to: thou art made, if thou desirest to be so;—

Oli. Am I made?

Mal. If not, let me see thee a servant still.

Oli. Why, this is very midsummer madness.

Enter Servant.

Serv. Madam, the young gentlemen of the Count Orsino's is returned; I could hardly entreat him back: he attends your ladyship's pleasure.

Oli. I'll come to him. [Exit Servant.] Good Maria, let this fellow be looked to. Where's my cousin Toby? Let some of your people have a special care of him; I would not have him miscarry for the half of my dowry.

[Exeunt Olivia and Maria.

Mal. Oh, ho! do you come near me now? no worse man than Sir Toby to look to me. This concurs directly with the letter; she sends him on purpose that I may appear stubborn to him; for she incites me to that in the letter. Cast thine humble slough, says she; be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants,—let thy tongue tell with arguments of state,—put thyself into the trick of singularity: — and, consequently, sets down the manner how; as, a sad face, a reverend carryage, a slow tongue, in the habit of some sir of note, and so forth. I have limed her; but it is Jove's doing, and Jove make me thankful!
And when she went away now, Let this fellow be looked to: Fellow! not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but fellow. Why, every thing adheres together; that no dram of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incredulous or unsafe circumstance,—What can be said?
Nothing, that can be, can come betwixt me and the full prospect of my hopes. Well, Jove, not
I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Re-enter Maria, with Sir Toby Belch, and Fabian.

Sir To. Which way is he, in the name of sanctity? I'll speak to him.

Fab. Here he is, here he is:—How is't with you, sir? how is't with you, man?

Mal. Go off; I discard you, let me enjoy my private; go off.

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend speaks within him! did not I tell you?—Sir Toby, my lady prays you to have a care of him.

Mal. Ah, ha! does she so?

Sir To. Go to, go to; peace, peace, we must deal gently with him; let me alone. How do you, Malvolio? how is't with you? What, man! defy the devil? consider he's an enemy to mankind.

Mal. Do you know what you say?

Mar. La you, an you speak ill of the devil, how he takes it at heart! Pray heaven, he be not bewitched! My lady would not lose him for more than I’ll say.

Sir To. Pr’ythee, hold thy peace: this is not the way: Do you not see, you move him? let me alone with him.

Fab. No way but gentleness; gently, gently: the fiend is rough, and will not be roughly used.

Sir To. Why how now, my bawcock? how dost thou, chuck?

Mat. Sir?

Sir To. Ay, Biddy, come with me. What, man! ’tis not for gravity to play at cherry-pit with Satan; Hang him, foul collier!

Mat. Go hang yourselves all! you are idle shallow things: I am not of your element; you shall know more hereafter. [Exit.

Sir To. Is’t possible?

Fab. If this were played upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction.

Sir To. His very genius hath taken the infection of the device, man.

Mar. Nay, pursue him now; lest the device take air, and faint.

Fab. Why, we shall make him mad, indeed.

Mar. The house will be the quieter.

Sir To. Come, we’lI have him in a dark room, and bound. My niece is already in the belief that he is mad; we may carry it thus, for our pleasure, and his penance, till our very pastime, tired out of breath, prompt us to have mercy on him: at which time, we will bring the device to the bar, and crown thee for a finder of madmen. But see, but see.

Enter Sir Andrew Ague-cheek.

Fab. More matter for a May morning.

Sir And. Here’s the challenge, read it; I warrant, there’s vinegar and pepper in’t.

Fab. Is’t so saucy?

Sir And. Ay it is, I warrant him; do but read.

Sir To. Give me. [Reads.] Youth, whatsoever thou art, thou art but a scurvy fellow.

Fab. Good and valiant.

Sir To. Wonder not, nor admire not in thy mind, why I do call thee so, for I will show thee no reason for’t.

Fab. A good note: that keeps you from the blow of the law.

Sir To. Thou comest to the lady Olivia, and in my sight she uses thee kindly; but thou liest in thy throat, that is not the matter I challenge thee for.

F. Very brief, and exceeding good sense-less.

Sir To. I will way-lay thee going home; where if it be thy chance to kill me,——

Fab. Good.

Sir To. Thou killest me like a rogue and a villain.

Fab. Still you keep o’ the windy side of the law: Good.

Sir To. Fare thee well: And God have mercy upon one of our souls! He may have mercy upon mine; but my hope is better, and so look to thyself. Thy friend, as thou usest him, and thy sworn enemy. [Exeunt.

Andrew Ague-cheek.

Sir To. If this letter move him not, his legs cannot: I’ll giv’t him.

Mar. You may have very fit occasion for’t; he is now in some commerce with my lady, and will by and by depart.

Sir To. Go, Sir Andrew; scout me for him at the corner of the orchard, like a bailiff: so soon as ever thou seest him, draw; and, as thou drawest, swear horrible; for it comes to pass oft, that a terrible oath, with a swaggering accent sharply twanged off, gives manhood more approbation than ever proof itself would have earned him.

Away.

Sir And. Nay, let me alone for swearing. [Exit.

Sir To. Now will not I deliver his letter: for the behaviour of the young gentleman gives him out to be of good capacity and breeding; his employment between his lord and my niece confirms no less; therefore this letter, being so excellently ignorant, will breed no terror in the youth; he will find it comes from a clodpole. But, sir, I will deliver his challenge by word of mouth; set upon Ague-cheek a notable report of valour; and drive the gentleman (as, I know his youth will aptly receive it) into a most hideous opinion of his rage, skill, fury, and imputiosity. This will so frighten them both, that they will kill one another by the look, like cockatrices.

Enter Olivia and Viola.

Fab. Here cometh with your niece: give them way, till he take leave, and presently after him.

Sir To. I will meditate the while upon some horrid message for a challenge.

[Exeunt Sir Toby, Fabian, and Maria.

Ol. I have said too much unto a heart of stone, And laid mine honour too uncharily out: There’s something in me, that reproves my fault; But such a headstrong potent fault it is, That it but mocks reproof.

Vio. With the same ‘haviour that your passion Go on my master’s griefs. [bears.

O. Here, wear this jewel for me, ‘tis my picture; Refuse it not, it hath no tongue to vex you: And, I beseech you, come again to-morrow. What shall you ask of me, that I’ll deny? That honour, say’d, may upon asking give? Vio. Nothing but this, your true love for my master.

Ol. How with mine honour may I give him Which I have given to you? [that

Vio. I will acquit you.

Ol. Well, come again to-morrow: Faire thee well. [Exit.

Re-enter Sir Toby Belch and Fabian.

Sir To. Gentleman, heaven save thee. Vio. And you, sir.

Sir To. That defence thou hast, betake thee to’t: of what nature the wrongs are thou hast done him, I know not; but thy interpreter, full of despight, bloody as the hunter, attends thee at the orchard end: dismount thy tuck, 1 be yare 2 in thy preparation, for thy assailant is quick, skilful, and deadly.

Vio. You mistake, sir; I am sure, no man

1 Rapier. 2 Ready.

1 A boy’s play.
hath any quarrel to me; my remembrance is very free and clear from any image of offence done to any man.

Sir To. You’ll find it otherwise, I assure you: therefore, if you hold your life at any price, take you to your guard; for your opposite hath in him what youth, strength, skill and wrath, can furnish man withal.

Vio. I pray you, sir, what is he?

Sir To. He is knight, dubbed with unhacked rapier, and on carpet consideration; but he is a devil in private brawl: souls and bodies hath he divorced three; and his incumbrance at this moment is so implacable, that satisfaction can be none but by pangs of death and sepulchre; hob, nob, is his word; give’t or tak’t.

Vio. I will return again into the house, and desire some conduct of the lady. I am no fighter. I have heard of some kind of men, that put quarrels purposely on others, to taste their valour: belike, this is a man of that quirk.

Sir To. Sir, no; his indignation derives itself out of a very competent injury; therefore get you on, and give him his desire. Back you shall not to the house, unless you undertake that with me, which with as much safety you might answer him: therefore, on, or strip your sword stark naked: for meddle you must, that’s certain, or forswear to wear iron about you.

Vio. That is as uncivil, as strange. I beseech you, do me this courteous office, as to know of the knight what my offence to him is: it is something of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.

Sir To. I will do so. Signor Fabian, stay you by this gentleman till my return. [Exit Sir To.]

Vio. Pray you, sir, do you know of this matter?

Fab. I know the knight is incensed against you, even to a mortal arbitrament; but nothing of the circumstance more.

Vio. I beseech you, what manner of man is he?

Fab. Nothing of that wonderful promise, to read him by his form, as you are like to find him in the proof of his valour. He is, indeed, sir, the most skilful, bloody, and fatal opposite that you could possibly have found in any part of Illyria: Will you walk towards him? I will make your peace with him, if I can.

Vio. I shall be much bound to you for’t: I am one, that would rather go with sir priest, than sir knight: I care not who knows so much of my mettle. [Exeunt.]

Re-enter Sir Toby with Sir Andrew.

Sir To. Why, man, he’s a very devil; I have not seen such a virago. I had a pass with him, rapier, scabbard, and all, and he gives me the stuck-in, with such mortal motion, that it is invincible; and on the answer, he pays you as surely as your feet hit the ground they step on: They say he has been fencer to the Sophy.

Sir And. I’ll not meddle with him.

Sir To. Ay, but he will not now be pacified; Fabian can scarce hold him yonder.

Sir And. Plague on’t; an I thought he had been valiant, and so cunning in fence, I’d have seen him hanged ere I’d have challenged him.

1 Stocatto, a term in fencing.

Let him let the matter slip, and I’ll give him my horse, grey Capilet.

Sir To. I’ll make the motion: Stand here, make a good show on’t; this shall end without the perdition of souls. [Aside.] Marry, I’ll ride your horse as well as I ride you.

Re-enter Fabian and Viola.

[To Fab.] I have his horse to take up the quarrel; I have persuaded him the youth’s a devil.

Fab. He is as horribly concocted of him; and pants, and looks pale, as if a bear were at his heels.

Sir To. There’s no remedy, sir; he will fight with you for his oath’s sake: marry, he hath better bethought him of his quarrel, and he finds that now scarce to be worth talking of: therefore draw, for the supportance of his vow: he protests, he will not hurt you.

Vio. [Aside.] Pray heaven defend me! A little thing would make me tell them how much I lack of a man.

Fab. Give ground, if you see him furious.

Sir To. Come, Sir Andrew, there’s no remedy: the gentleman will, for his honour’s sake, have one bout with you: he cannot by the duello avoid it: but he has promised me, as he is a gentleman and a soldier, he will not hurt you. Come on: to’t.

Sir A. Pray heaven, he keep his oath! [Draws.]

Enter Antonio.

V. I do assure you, 'tis against my will. [Draws.]

Ant. Put up your sword: if this young gentleman

Vio. Pray you, sir, do you know of this matter?

Sir To. I will do so. Signor Fabian, stay you by this gentleman till my return. [Exit Sir To.]

Vio. Pray you, sir, do you know of this matter?

Fab. I know the knight is incensed against you, even to a mortal arbitrament; but nothing of the circumstance more.

Vio. I beseech you, what manner of man is he?

Fab. Nothing of that wonderful promise, to read him by his form, as you are like to find him in the proof of his valour. He is, indeed, sir, the most skilful, bloody, and fatal opposite that you could possibly have found in any part of Illyria: Will you walk towards him? I will make your peace with him, if I can.

Vio. I shall be much bound to you for’t: I am one, that would rather go with sir priest, than sir knight: I care not who knows so much of my mettle. [Exeunt.]

Re-enter Sir Toby with Sir Andrew.

Sir To. Why, man, he’s a very devil; I have not seen such a virago. I had a pass with him, rapier, scabbard, and all, and he gives me the stuck-in, with such mortal motion, that it is invincible; and on the answer, he pays you as surely as your feet hit the ground they step on: They say he has been fencer to the Sophy.

Sir And. I’ll not meddle with him.

Sir To. Ay, but he will not now be pacified; Fabian can scarce hold him yonder.

Sir And. Plague on’t; an I thought he had been valiant, and so cunning in fence, I’d have seen him hanged ere I’d have challenged him.

1 Stocatto, a term in fencing.
Vio. What money, sir?
For the fair kindness you have show'd me here,
And, part, being prompted by your present trouble,
Out of my lean and low ability
I'll lend you something; my having is not much;
I'll make division of my present with you:
Hold, there is half my coffers.

Ant. Will you deny me now?
Is't possible, that my deserts to you
Can lack persuasion? Do not tempt my misery,
Lest that it make me so unsound a man,
As to upbraid you with those kindnesses
That I have done for you.

Vio. I know of none;
Nor know I you by voice, or any feature:
I hate ingratitude more in a man,
Than lying, vainness, babbling, drunkenness,
Or any taint of vice, whose strong corruption
Inhabits our frail blood.

Ant. O heavens themselves!
2 Off. Come, sir, I pray you, go.
A. Let me speak a little. This youth that you see here,
I snatch'd one half out of the jaws of death;
Reliev'd him with such sanctity of love,
And to his image, which, methought, did promise
Most venerable worth, did I devotion.

1 Off. What's that to us? The time goes by; away.

A. But, O, how vile an idol proves this god!—
Thou hast, Sebastian, done good feature-shame.—
In nature there's no blemish, but the mind;
None can be call'd deform'd, but the unkind;
Virtue is beauty; but the beauteous evil
Are empty trunks, o'erflourish'd by the devil.

1 Off. The man grows mad; away with him.
Come, come, sir.

A. Lead me on. [Exeunt Officers with Antonio.
V. Methinks, his words do from such passions fly,
That he believes himself; so do not I.
Prove true, imagination, O, prove true,
That I, dear brother, be now ta'en for you!

Sir To. Come hither, knight; come hither, Fabian; we'll whisper o'er a couplet or two of most sage saws.

Vio. He nam'd Sebastian; I my brother know Yet living in my glass; even such, and so,
In favour was my brother; and he went Still in this fashion, colour, ornament,
For him I imitate: O, if it prove,
Tempests are kind, and salt waves fresh in love!

[Exit Sir To. A very dishonest paltry bo, and more a coward than a hare: his dishonesty appears in leaving his friend here in necessity, and denying him; and for his cowardship, ask Fabian.

Fab. A coward, a most devout coward, religious in it.

Sir A.'s, Slid, I'll after him again, and beat him.

Sir To. Do, cuff him soundly, but never draw thy sword.

Sir And. An I do not,—

Fab. Come, let's see the event.

Sir To. I dare lay any money, 'twill be nothing yet.

[Exit.

Act Fourth.

SCENE I.

THE STREET BEFORE OLIVIA'S HOUSE.

Enter Sebastian and Clown.

Clo. Will you make me believe, that I am not sent for you?

Seb. Go to, go to, thou art a foolish fellow;
Let me be clear of thee.

Clo. Well held out, faith! No, I do not know you; nor I am not sent to you by my lady, to bid you come speak with her; nor your name is not master Cesario; nor this is not my nose neither.—Nothing, that is so, is so.

Seb. I pr'ythee, vent thy folly somewhere else;
Thou know'st not me.

Clo. Vent my folly! He has heard that word of some great man, and now applies it to a fool.

Vent my folly! I am afraid this great lubber, the world, will prove a cockney. —I pr'ythee now ungird thy strangeness, and tell me what I shall vent to my lady; Shall I vent to her, that thou art coming?

Seb. I pr'ythee, foolish Greek, depart from me;
There's money for thee; if thy tarry longer,
I shall give worse payment.

C. By my troth, thou hast an open hand:—These wise men, that give fools money, get themselves a good report after fourteen years' purchase.

Enter Sir Andrew, Sir Toby, and Fabian.

Sir And. Now, sir, have I met you again? there's for you. [Striking Sebastian.

Seb. Why, there's for thee, and there, and there:
Are all the people mad? [Beating Sir Andrew.

Sir To. Hold, sir, or I'll throw your dagger o'er the house.

Clo. This will I tell my lady straight: I would not be in some of your coats for twopence.

[Exit Clown.

Sir T. Come on, sir; hold. [Holding Sebastian.

Sir A. Nay, let him alone, I'll go another way to work with him; I'll have an action of battery against him, if there be any law in Illyria: though I struck him first, yet it's no matter for that.

Seb. Let go thy hand.

Sir To. Come, sir, I will not let you go. Come, my young soldier, put up your iron: you are well fleshed; come on. [thou know? Seb. I will be free from thee. What would'st If thou dar'st tempt me further, draw thy sword.

[Draws.

Sir To. What, what? Nay, then I must have an ounce or two of this malapert blood from you.

[Draws.

Enter Olivia.

Oli. Hold, Toby; on thy life, I charge thee, Sir To. Madam? [hold.

Oli. Will it be ever thus? Ungracious wretch, Fit for the mountains, and the barbarous caves,
Where manner men were preach'd! out of my
Be not offended, dear Cesario:—[sigh,

Rudesby,1 be gone! —I pr'ythee, gentle friend, [Exeunt Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

Let thy fair wisdom, not thy passion, sway
In this uncivil and unjust extent:—

1 Rude fellow. 2 Degree.
Against thy peace. Go with me to my house;
And hear thou there how many fruitless pranks
This ruffian hath botch'd up, that thou thereby May'st smile at this: thou shalt not choose but
Do not deny: Beshrew his soul for me, [go;
He started one poor heart of mine in thee.

S. What relish is in this? how runs the stream?
Or I am mad, or else this is a dream:—
Let fancy still my sense in Lethe steep;
If it be thus to dream, still let me sleep!

Oli. Nay, come, I prythee: 'Would thou'dst
Seb. Madam, I will. [be rul'd by me!]
Oli. O, say so, and so be!
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A ROOM IN OLIVIA'S HOUSE.

Enter Maria and Clown.

Mar. Nay, I pr'ythee, put on this gown, and this beard; make him believe thou art Sir Topas, the curate; do it quickly: I'll call Sir Toby the whilst.

Exit Maria.

Clo. Well, I'll put it on, and I will dissemble myself in't; I am not tall enough to become the function well: nor lean enough to be thought a good student: but to be said, an honest man, and a good housekeeper, goes as fairly, as to say, a careful man, and a great scholar. The competitors! enter.

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Maria.

Sir To. Jove bless thee, master parson.
Clo. Bonos dies, Sir Toby: for as the old hermit of Prague, that never saw pen and ink, very wittily said to a niece of king Gorbonuce, That, that is, is; so I, being master parson, am master parson; for what is that, but that? and is, but is? Sir To. To him, Sir Topas.

Clo. What, hoa, I say,—Peace in this prison! Sir To. The knife counterfeits well; a good knife.

Mal. [In an inner chamber.] Who calls there? Clo. Sir Topas, the curate, who comes to visit Malvolio the lunatick.

Mal. Sir Topas, Sir Topas, good Sir Topas, go to my lady.

Clo. Out, hyperbolical fiend! how vexest thou this man? talkest thou nothing but of ladies?

Sir To. Well said, master parson.

M. Sir Topas, never was a man thus wronged: good Sir Topas, do not think I am mad; they have laid me here in hideous darkness.

Clo. Fie, thou dishonest Sathan! I call thee by the most modest terms; for I am one of those gentle ones that will use the devil himself with courtesy: Say'st thou, that house is dark?

Mal. As hell, Sir Topas.

Clo. Why, it hath bay-windows, transparent as barricades, and the clear stones towards the south-north are as lustrous as ebony; and yet complainest thou of obstruction?

Mal. I am not mad, Sir Topas; I say to you, this house is dark.

Clo. Madman, thou errest: I say, there is no darkness, but ignorance; in which thou art more puzzled than the Egyptians in their fog.

Mal. I say, this house is as dark as ignorance,
Mal. By this hand I am: Good fool, some ink, paper, and light, and convey what I will set down to my lady; it shall advantage thee more than ever the bearing of letter did.

Clo. I will help you to't. But tell me true, are you not mad indeed? or do you but counterfeit?

Mal. Believe me, I am not; I tell thee true.

Clo. Nay, I'll ne'er believe a madman, till I see his brains. I will fetch you light, and paper, and ink.

Mal. Fool, I'll require it in the highest degree: I pray thee, be gone.

Clo. I am gone, sir,
And anon, sir,
I'll be with you again,
In a trice;
Like to the old vice
Your need to sustain.

Who with dagger of death,
In his rage and his wrath,
Cries, ah! to the devil:
Like a mad lad,
Fare thee well, dad.
Adieu, good man, drive off. [Exit.

SCENE III.—OLIVIA'S GARDEN.

Enter Sebastian.

Seb. This is the air; that is the glorious sun; this pearl she gave me, I do feel't and see't: And though 'tis wonder that enraps me thus, Yet 'tis not madness. Where's Antonio then? I could not find him at the Elephant: Yet there he was; and there I found this credit, That he did range the town to seek me out. His counsel now might do me golden service: For though my soul disputes well with my sense, That this may be some error, but no madness, Yet doth this accident and flood of fortune So far exceed all instance, all discourse, That I am ready to distrust mine eyes, And wrangle with my reason, that persuades me
To any other trust, but that I am mad, Or else the lady's mad; yet, if 'twere so, She could not sway her house, command her followers.

Take, and give back, affairs and their despatch, With such a smooth, discreet, and stable bearing; As, I perceive, she does: there's something in't, That is deceitful. But here comes the lady.

Enter Olivia and a Priest.

Oli. Blame not this haste of mine: If you mean well, Now go with me, and with this holy man, Into the chasuble by: there, before him, And underneath that consecrated roof, Plight me the full assurance of your faith; That my most jealous, and too doubtful soul May live at peace: he shall conceal it, Whiles you are willing it shall come to note; What time we will our celebration keep According to my birth.—What do you say? S. I'll follow this good man, and go with you; And, having sworn truth, ever will be true.

1 Buffoon. 2 Account. 3 Until.

Oli. Then lead the way, good father;—And heaven to shine,
That they may fairly note this act of mine!

[Exeunt.

Act Fifth.

SCENE I.

THE STREET BEFORE OLIIVIA'S HOUSE.

Enter Clown and Fabian.

F. Now, as thou lovest me, let me see his letter.

Clo. Good master Fabian, grant me another request.

Fab. Any thing.

Clo. Do not desire to see this letter.

Fab. That is, to give a dog, and, in recompense, desire my dog again.

Enter Duke, Viola, and Attendants.

Duke. Belong you to the lady Olivia, friends?

Clo. Ay, sir; we are some of her trappings.

Duke. I know thee well; How dost thou, my good fellow?

Clo. Truly, sir, the better for my foes, and the worse for my friends.

Duke. Just the contrary; the better for thy friends.

Oli. No, sir, the worse.

Duke. How can that be?

Clo. Marry, sir, they praise me, and make an ass of me; now my foes tell me plainly I am an ass; so that by my foes, sir, I profit in the knowledge of myself; and by my friends I am abused: so that, conclusions to be as kisses, if your four negatives make your two affirmatives, why, then the worse for my friends, and the better for my foes.

Duke. Why, this is excellent.

Clo. By my troth, sir, no; though it please you to be one of my friends.

Duke. Thou shalt not be the worse for me; there's gold.

Clo. But that it would be double-dealing, sir, I would you could make it another.

Duke. O, you give me ill counsel.

Clo. Put your grace in your pocket, sir, for this once, and let your flesh and blood obey it.

Duke. Well, I will be so much a sinner to be a double-dealer; there's another.

Clo. Primo, secundo, tertio, is a good play; and the old saying is, the third pays for all: the triplex, sir, is a good tripping measure; or the bells of St Bennet, sir, may put you in mind: One, two, three.

Duke. You can fool no more money out of me at this throw: if you will let your lady know, I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

Clo. Marry, sir, lullaby to your bounty till I come again. I go, sir; but I would not have you to think, that my desire of having is the sin of covetousness: but, as you say, sir, let your bounty take a nap, I will awake it anon. [Exit Clown.

Enter Antonio and Officers.

V. Here comes the man, sir, that did rescue me.

Duke. That face of his I do remember well: Yet, when I saw it last, it was besmeard'
As black as vulcan, in the smoke of war?
A babbling vessel he cap't of,
For shallow draught, and bulk, unpriz'd;
With which such scathful grapple did he make
With the most noble bottom of our fleet,
That very envy, and the tongue of loss, [matter?]
Cry'd fame and honour on him.—What's the

1 Off. Orsino, this is that Antonio,
That took the Phœnix, and her fraught[^1] from
And this is he that did the Tiger board, [Candy;
When your young nephew Titus lost his leg:
Here in the streets, desparate of shame and state,
In private brabble did we apprehend him.

V. He did me kindness, sir; drew on my side;
But, in conclusion, put strange speech upon me,
I know not what 'twas, but distraction.

Duke. Notable pirate! thou salt-water thief!
What foolish boldness brought bhee to their mercies,
Whom thou, in terms so bloody, and so dear,
Hast made thine enemies?

Ant. Orsino, noble sir,
Be pleased that I shake off these names you give
Antonio never yet was thief, or pirate, [me;
Though I confess, on base and ground enough,
Orsino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither;
That most ingrateful boy there, by your side,
From the rude sea's enrag'd and foamy mouth
Did I redeem; a wreck past hope he was:
His life I gave him, and did thereto add
My love, without retention, or restraint,
All his in dedication: for his sake,
I did expose myself, pure for his love,
Into the danger of this adverse town;
Drew to defend him, when he was beset;
Where being apprehended, his false cunning
[Not meaning to partake with me in danger,]
Tonght him to face me out of his acquaintance,
And grew a twenty-years-removed thing,
While one would wink; denied me mine own
Which I had recommended to his use [purse,
Not half an hour before.

Vio. How can this be?

Duke. When came he to this town?

Ant. To-day, my lord; and for three months
[No interim, not a minute's vacancy,) [before,
Both day and night did we keep company.

Enter Olivia and Attendants.

Duke. Here comes the countess; now heaven walks on earth.—[madness,
But for thee, fellow, fellow, thy words are
Three months this youth hath tended upon me,
But more of that anon.—Take him aside.

O. What would my lord, but that he may not Wherin Olivia may seem serviceable? [have,
Cesario, you do not keep promise with me.

Vio. Madam?

O. What do you say, Cesario?—Good my
V. My lord would speak, my duty hushes me.

Oli. If it be aught to the old tune, my lord,
It is as fat^2 and fulsome to mine ear
As howling after music.

Duke. Still so cruel.

Oli. Still so constant, lord.

Duke. What! to perverseness? you uncivil lady,

To whose ingratitude and unassuming altars [out,
My soul the faithful'st offerings hath breath'd
That e'er devotion tender'd! What shall I do?

Oli. Even what it please my lord, that shall become him.

Du. Why should I not, had I the heart to doit,
Like to the Egyptian thief at point of death,
Kill what I love; a savage jealousy, [this:
That sometimes savours nobly?—But hear me
Since you to non-regardance cast my faith,
And that I partly know the instrument [our,
That screws me from my true place in your fav-
Live you, the marble-breasted tyrant, still;
But this your minion, whom, I know you love,
And whom, by heaven, I swear, I tender dearly,
Him will I tear out of that cruel eye,
Where he sits crowned in his master's spile.—
Come boy, with me; my thoughts are ripe in mischief:
I'll sacrifice the lamb that I do love,
To spite a raven's heart within a dove. [Going.
Vio. And I, most jocund, apt, and willingly,
To do you rest, a thousand deaths would lie.

[Following.

Oli. Where goes Cesario?

Vio. After him I love,
More than I love these eyes, more than my life,
More, by all mores, than e'er I shall love wife:
If I do feign, you witnesses above,
Punish my life, for tainting of my love!

Oli. Ah me, detested! how am I beguil'd?

Vio. Who does beguile you? who does you wrong?

Oli. Hast thou forgot thyself? Is it so long?—
Call forth the holy father. [Exit an attendant.

Duke. Come away. [To Viola.

O. Whither, my lord?—Cesario, husband, stay.

Duke. Husband?

Oli. Ay, husband; Can he that deny?

Vio. Her husband, sirrah?

O. No, my lord, not I.

Oli. Alas, it is the baseness of thy fear,
That makes thee strange thy propriety:
Fear not, Cesario, take thy fortunes up;
Be that thou know'st thou art, and then thou art
As great as that thou fear'st—O, welcome, father!

Re-enter Attendant and Priest.

Father, I charge thee, by thy reverence,
Here to unfold (though lately we intended
To keep in darkness, what occasion now
Reveals before 'tis ripe), what thou dost know
Hath newly pass'd between this youth and me.

Priest. A contract of eternal bond of love,
Confirm'd by mutual joinder of thy hands,
Attest'd by the holy close of lips,
Strengthen'd by interchange of your rings;
And all the ceremony of thine compact
Seal'd in my function, by my testimony:
Since whom, my watch hath told me, toward my
I have travell'd but two hours. [grave,

D. O, thou dissembling cub! what wilt thou be,
When time hath sow'd a grizzle on thy case?
Or will not else thy craft so quickly grow,
That thine own trip shall be thine overthrow?
Farewell, and take her; but direct thy feet,
Where thou and I henceforth may never meet.

Vio. My lord, I do protest,—
Oti. Hold little faith, though thou hast too much to fear.

Enter Sir Andrew Ague-cheek, with his head broke.

Sir And. For the love of heaven, a surgeon; send one presently to Sir Toby.

Oti. What's the matter?

Sir And. He has broke my head across, and has given Sir Toby a bloody coxcomb too: for the love of heaven, your help: I had rather forty pound I were at home.

Oti. Who has done this, Sir Andrew?

Sir And. The count's gentleman, one Cesario: we took him for a coward, but he's the very devil incardinable.

Duke. My gentleman, Cesario!

Sir And. Od's lifefellings, here he is:—You broke my head for nothing; and that that I did, I was set on to 't by Sir Toby.

Vio. Why do you speak to me? I never hurt you: You drew your sword upon me, without cause; But I bespake you fair, and hurt you not.

Sir And. If a bloody coxcomb be a hurt, you have hurt me; I think, you set nothing by a bloody coxcomb.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, drunk, led by the Clown.

Here comes Sir Toby halting, you shall hear more: but if he had not been in drink, he would have tickled you othergates than he did.

D. How now, gentleman? how's with you?

Sir To. That's all one; he has hurt me, and there's the end on't.—Sot, did'st see Dick surgeon, sot?

Clo. O he's drunk, Sir Toby, an hour agone; his eyes were set at eight i' the morning.

Sir To. Then he's a rogue, and after a passy-measures pavin: I hate a drunken rogue.

Oti. Away with him: Who hath made this havock with them.

Sir And. I'll help you, Sir Toby, because we'll be dressed together.

Sir To. Will you help an ass-head, and a coxcomb, and a knave? a thin-faced knave, a gull? Oti. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be look'd to.

[Exeunt Clown, Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew. Enter Sebastian.

Seb. I am sorry, madam, I have hurt yourkins: But had it been the brother of my blood, [man; I must have done no less, with wit, and safety. You throw a strange regard upon me, and By that I do perceive it hath offended you; Pardon me, sweet one, even for the vows We made each other but so late ago. [persons; Duke. One face, one voice, one habit, and two

A natural perspective, that is, and is not.

Seb. Antonio, O my dear Antonio! How have the hours rack'd and tortur'd me, Since I have lost thee?

Ant. Sebastian are you?

Seb. Fear'st thou that, Antonio?

A. How have you made division of yourself?—An apple cleft in two, is not more twin Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?

Oti. Most wonderful! 1 Otherways. 2 Stately dances.

Seb. Do I stand there? I never had a brother; Nor can there be that deity in my nature Of here and everywhere. I had a sister, [your'd.— Whom the blind waves and surges have de- [To Viola.] Of charity, what kin are you to me? What countryman? what name? what parentage?

Vio. Of Messaline: Sebastian was my father; Such a Sebastian was my brother too, So went he suited to his watery tomb: If spirits can assume both form and suit, You come to fright us.

Seb. A spirit I am, indeed; But am I in that dimension grossly clad, Which from the womb I did participate. Were you a woman, as the rest goes even, I should my tears let fall upon your cheek, And say—Thrice welcome, drown'd Viola! Vio. My father had a mole upon his brow.

Seb. And so had mine.

Vio. And died that day when Viola from her Had number'd thirteen years. [birth

Seb. O, that record is lively in my soul! He finished, indeed, his mortal act, That day that made my sister thirteen years. Vio. If nothing lets to make us happy both, But this my masculine usurp'd attire, Do not embrace me, till each circumstance Of place, time, fortune, do cohere, and jump, That I am Viola: which to confirm, I'll bring you to a captain in this town, Where lie my maiden weeds; by whose gentle I was preserv'd, to serve this noble count: [help All the occurrence of my fortune since Hath been between this lady and this lord. Seb. So comes it lady, you have been mistook; [To Olivia.

But nature to her bias drew in that. You would have been contracted to a maid; Nor are you therein, by my life, deceived, You are betroth'd both to a maid and man.

D. Be not amazed; right noble is his blood.—If this be so, as yet the glass seems true, I shall have share in this most happy wreck; Boy, thou hast said to me a thousand times, [Viola.

Thou never should'st love woman like to me. Vio. And all those sayings will I over-swear; And all those swearings keep as true in soul, As doth that orb'd continent the fire That severs day from night.

Duke. Give me thy hand; And let me see thee in thy woman's weeds.

V. The captain that did bring me first on shore Hath my maid's garments: he, upon some action, Is now in durance; at Malvolio's suit, A gentleman, and follower of my lady's.

Oti. He shall enlarge him:—Fetch Malvolio And yet, alas, now I remember me, [hither:— They say, poor gentleman, he's much distract.

Re-enter Clown, with a Letter.

A most extracting frenzy of mine own From my remembrance clearly banish'd his. How does he, sirrah?

Clo. Truly, madam, he holds Belzebub at the stave's end, as well as a man in his case may do: he has here writ a letter to you; I should have given it to you to-day morning; but as a madman's epistles are no gospels, so it skills not much when they are delivered.

Oli. Open it, and read it.

Clo. Look then to be well edified, when the fool delivers the madman:—

Oli. How now! art thou mad?

Clo. No, madam, I do but read madness; an your ladyship will have it as it ought to be, you must allow vox.¹

Oli. Pr'ythee, read i' thy right wits.

Clo. So I do, madonna; but to read his right wits, is to read thus: therefore preprend,² my princess, and give ear.

Oli. Read it you, sirrah. [To Fabian. Fab. [Reads.] Madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it: though you have put me into darkness, and given your drunken cousin rule over me, yet have I the benefit of my senses as well as your ladyship. I have your own letter that induced me to the semblance I put on; with the which I doubt not but to do myself much right, or you much shame. Think of me as you please. I leave my duty a little unthought of, and speak out of my injury. The madly-used Malvolio.

Oli. Did he write this?

Clo. Ay, madam.

Duke. This savours not much of distinction.

Oli. See him deliver'd, Fabian; bring him hither. [Exit Fabian.

My lord, so please you, these things further To think me as well a sister as a wife, [thoughton, One day shall crown the alliance on't, so please Here at my house, and at my proper cost.

Duke. Madam, I am most apt to embrace your offer.— [you,
Your master quits you: [To Viola] and, for your service done him,
So much against the mettle of your sex, So far beneath your soft and tender breeding, And since you call'd me master for so long, Here is my hand: you shall from this time be Your master's mistress.

Oli. A sister?—you are she.

Re-enter Fabian, with Malvolio.

Duke. Is this the madman?

Oli. Ay, my lord, the same:
How now, Malvolio?

Mal. Madam, you have done me wrong, Notorious wrong.

Oli. Have I, Malvolio? no. [letter: M. Lady, you have. Pray you peruse that You must not now deny it is your hand, Write from it, if you can, in hand or phrase; Or say, 'tis not your seal, nor your invention: You can say none of this: Well, grant it then, And tell me, in the modesty of honour, Why you have given me such clear lights of favour;
Bade me come smiling, and cross-garter'd to you, To put on yellow stockings, and to frown Upon Sir Toby, and the lighter people: And, acting this in an obdient hope, Why have you suffer'd me to be imprison'd, Kept in a dark house, visited by the priest, And made the most notorious glee,³ and gull, That e'er invention played on? tell me why.

Act First.

Scene I.
An Apartment in the Duke's Palace.
Enter Duke, Escalus, and Lords.

Duke. Escalus,

Esc. My lord.

Duke. Of government the properties to unfold,
Would seem in me 't affect speech and discourse,
Since I am put to know, that your own science
Exceeds in that the lists of all advice
My strength can give you: Then no more remains
But that to your sufficiency, as your worth is able,
And let them work. The nature of our people,
Our city's institutions, and the terms
For common justice, you are as pregnant in
As art and practice hath enriched any
That we remember: There is our commission,
From which we would not have you warp. Call
I say, bid come before us, Angelo.—[hither,
What figure of us think you he will bear?
For you must know, we have with special soul
Elected him our absence to supply;
Let him our terror, drest him with our love,
And given his deputations all the organs
Of our own power: What think you of it?

Esc. If any in Vienna be of worth
To undergo such ample grace and honour,
It is lord Angelo.

Enter Angelo.

Duke. Look, where he comes.

Ang. Always obedient to your grace's will,
I come to know your pleasure.

Duke. Angelo,

There is a kind of character in thy life,
That to th' observer, doth thy history
Fully unfold:—Thyself, and thy belongings,
Are not thine own so proper, as to waste
Thyself upon thy virtues, then on thee.
Heaven doth with us, as we with torches do.
Not light them for themselves: for if our virtues

1 Bounds.
Enter Lucio, and two Gentlemen.

Lucio. If the duke, with the other dukes, come not to composition with the king of Hungary, why then all the dukes fall upon the king.

1st Gent. Heaven grant us its peace; but not the king of Hungary's!

2nd Gent. Amen.

Lucio. Thou concludest like the sanctimonious pirate, that went to sea with the ten commandments, but scraped one out of the table.

2nd Gent. Thou shalt not steal?

Lucio. Ay, that he raked.

1st Gent. Why, 'twas a commandment to command the captain and all the rest from their functions: they put forth to steal: there's not a soldier of us all, that, in the thanksgiving before meat, doth relish the petition well that prays for peace.

2nd Gent. I never heard any soldier dislike it.

Lucio. I believe thee; for, I think, thou never wast where grace was said. Thou thyself art a wicked villain, despite of all grace. But see, where madam Mitigation comes.

Enter Mrs Overdone.

1st Gent. How now?

Overd. There's one yonder, arrested and carried to prison, was worth five thousand of you all.

1st Gent. Who's that, I pray thee?

Ov. Marry, sir, that's Claudio, Signor Claudio.

1st Gent. Claudio to prison! 'tis not so.

O. Nay, but I know 'tis so; I saw him arrested; saw him carried away; and, which is more, within these three days his head's to be chopped off.

Lucio. But, after all this foolish, I would not have it so: art thou sure of this?

Overd. I am too sure of it; and it is because of Madam Julietta.

Lucio. Believe me, this may be: he promised to meet me two hours since; and he was ever precise in promise-keeping.

2nd Gent. Besides, you know, it draws something near to the speech we had to such a purpose.

1st Gent. But most of all, agreeing with the proclamation.

Lucio. Away; let's go learn the truth of it. [Exeunt Lucio and Gentlemen.

Enter Clown.

Overd. How now, what's the news with you?

Clown. You have not heard of the proclamation, have you?

Overd. What proclamation, man?

Clown. All our houses in the suburbs of Vienna must be pluck'd down.

Overd. And what shall become of those in the city?

Clown. They had gone down too, but that a wise burgler put in for them.

Overd. But, shall all our houses in the suburbs be pulled down?

Clown. To the ground, mistress.

Overd. Why, here's a change, indeed, in the commonwealth: what shall become of me?

Clown. Here comes Signior Claudio, led by the provost to prison: and there's Madam Juliet.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The SAME.

Enter Provost, Claudio, Juliet, and Officers.

Claud. Fellow, why dost thou show me thus to the world? Bear me to prison, where I am committed.

Prov. I do it not in evil disposition, but from lord Angelo by special charge.

Claud. Thus can the demigod, Authority, Make us pay down for our offence by weight. — The words of heaven; on whom it will, it will; On whom it will not, so; yet still 'tis just.

Enter Lucio.

Lucio. Why, how now, Claudio? whence comes this restraint?

Claud. From too much liberty, madam Lucio, As surfeit is the father of much fast, [liberty: So every scope by the immoderate use Turns to restraint; Our natures do pursue (Like rats that ravin down their proper bane), A thirsty evil; and when we drink, we die.

Lucio. If I could speak so wisely under an arrest, I would send for certain of my creditors; And yet, to say the truth, I had as lief have the notable of freedom as the morality of imprisonment.—What's thy offence, Claudio?

Claudio. What, but to speak of would offend again.

Lucio. What is it? murder?

Claudio. No.

Prov. Away, sir; you must go.

Claudio. One word, good friend:—Lucio, a word with you. [Takes him aside.

Lucio. A hundred, if they'll do you any good.

Claudio. Thus stands it with me:—Upon a true I got possession of Julietta's bed; [contract, You know the lady; she is fast my wife, Save that we do the denunciation lack Of outward order; this we came not to, Only for propagation of a dower Remaining in the coffer of her friends; From whom we thought it meet to hide our love, Till time had made them for us. But it chances, The stealth of our most mutual intercourse, With character too gross, is writ on Juliet, Lucio. With child, perhaps?

Claudio. Unhappily, even so.

And the new deputy now for the duke,— Whether it be the fault and glimpse of newness; Or whether that the body public be A horse whereon the governor doth ride, Who, newly in the seat, that it may know He can command, let's it straight feel the spur: Whether the tyranny be in his place, Or in his eminence that fills it up,

1 Proclamation.
SHAKESPEARE'S DRAMATIC WORKS.

ACT I.

I stagger in:—But this new governor
Awakes me all the enrolled penalties, [wall
Which have like unscour'd armour, hung by the
So long, that nineteen zodiacs have gone round,
And none of them been worn; and, for a name,
Now puts the drowsy and neglected act
Freshly on me:—'tis surely for a name.

Lucio. I warrant it is: and thy head stands so tickle on thy shoulders, that a milkmaid, if she be in love, may sigh it off. Send after the duke, and appeal to him.

Claud. I have done so, but he's not to be found,
I pr'ythee, Lucio, do me this kind service:
This day my sister should the cloister enter,
And there receive her approbation:
Acquaint her with the danger of my state;
Implore her, in my voice, that she make friends
To the strict deputy; bid herself assay him;
I have great hope in that: for in her youth
There is a proce and speechless dialect, [art
Such as moves men: beside, she hath prosperous
When she will play with reason and discourse,
And well she can persuade.

Lucio. I pray she may; as well for the encouragement of the like, which else would stand under grievous imposition; as for the enjoying of thy life, who I would be sorry should be thus foolishly lost. I'll to her.

Claud. I thank you, good friend Lucio.

Lucio. Within two hours,—

Claud. Come, officer, away. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—A MONASTERY.

Enter Duke and Friar Thomas.

D. No, holy father; throw away that thought;
Believe not that the dribbling dart of love
Can pierce a complete bosom: why I desire thee
To give me a secret harbour, hath a purpose
More grave and wrinkled than the aims and ends
Of burning youth.

Fri. May your grace speak of it?

D. My holy sir, none better knows than you
How I have ever lov'd the life remov'd;
And held in idle price to haunt assemblies,
Where youth and cost, and witless bravery
I have deliver'd to Lord Angelo [keeps.
(A man of stricture and firm abstinance)
My absolute power and place here in Vienna,
And he supposes me travell'd to Poland;
For so I have strew'd it in the common ear,
And so it receiv'd: Now, pious sir,
You will demand of me, why I do this?

Fri. Gladly, my lord. [biting laws,

Duke. We have strict statutes, and most
(The needful bits and curbs for headstrong steeds),
Which for these fourteen years we have let sleep;
Even like an o'ergrown lion in a cave,
That goes not out to prey: Now, as fond fathers
Having bound up the threat'ning twigs of birch,
Only to stick it in their children's sight,
For terror, not to use; in time the rod [crees,
Becomes more mock'd than fear'd: so our de-
Dead to infliction, to themselves are dead;
And liberty plucks justice by the nose:
The baby beats the nurse, and quite athwart
Goes all decorum.

Fri. It rested in your grace
To unloose this tied-up justice, when you pleas'd:
And it in you more dreadful would have
Than in lord Angelo. [seem'd,

Duke. I do fear, too dreadful:
Sith 'twas my fault to give the people scope,
'Twould be my tyranny to strike, and galm them
For what I bid them do: For we bid this be done,
When evil deeds have their permissive pass,
And not the punishment. Therefore, indeed, my
I have on Angelo impos'd the office; [father,
Who may, in the ambush of my name, strike
And yet my nature never in the sight, [home,
To do it slander: And to behold his sway,
I will, as 'twere a brother of your order, [thee,
Visit both prince and people: therefore, I pr'y-
Supply me with the habit, and instruct me
How I may formally in person bear me
Like a true friar. More reasons for this action,
At our more leisure shall I render you;
Only, this one:—Lord Angelo is precise;
Stands at a guard with envy; scarce confesses
That his blood flows, or that his appetite [see,
Is more to breed than stone: Hence shall we
If power change purpose, what our seemers be.

Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A NUNNERY.

Enter Isabella and Francisca.

I. And have you nuns no further privileges?

Fran. Are not these large enough?

I. Yes, truly: I speak not as desiring more;
But rather wishing a more strict restraint
Upon the sisterhood, the votarists of Saint Clare.

Lucio. Ho! Peace be in this place! [Within,
Isab. Who is that which calls?

Fran. It is a man's voice: Gentle Isabella,
Turn you the key, and know his business of him;
You may, I may not; you are yet unsworn:
When you have vowed, you must not speak with
But in the presence of the prioress: [men, Then, if you speak, you must not show your face;
Or if you show your face, you must not speak.
He calls again; I pray you answer him.

[Exit Francisca.

I. Peace and prosperity! Who is't that calls?

Enter Lucio.

L. Hail, virgin, if you be; as those cheek-roses
Proclaim you are no less! Can you so stoop me
As bring me to the sight of Isabella,
A novice of this place, and the fair sister
To her unhappy brother Claudio?

Isab. Why her unhappy brother? let me ask;
The rather, for I now must make you know
I am that Isabella, and his sister.

[Exit Isabella.

I.gentle and fair, your brother kindly greets
Not to be weary with you, he's in prison.

Isab. Woe me! For what? [judge,
Lucio. For that which, if myself might be his
He should receive his punishment in thanks:
His friend's with child by him.

Isab. Sir, make me not your story. [Lucio.

It is true.
I hold you as a thing enskied, and sainted;
By your renunciation an immortal spirit;
And to be talk'd with in sincerity,
As with a saint.

I. Jest.
I. You do blaspheme the good, in mocking me.
Lu. Do not believe it. Fewness and truth, 'tis Isab. My cousin Juliet?
[thus.
Lucio. Is she your cousin?
Isab. Adoptedly: as school-maids change their
By vain though apt affection.
Lucio. She it is.
Isab. O, let him marry her!
Lucio. This is the point.
The duke is very strangely gone from hence;
Bore many gentlemen, myself being one,
In hand, and hope of action: but we do learn
By those that know the very nerves of state,
His givings out were of an infinite distance
From his true-meant design. Upon his place,
And with full line of his authority,
Govern lord Angelo; a man, whose blood
Is very snow-broth; one who never feels
The wanton stings and motions of the sense;
But doth rebate 2 and blunt his natural edge
With profits of the mind, study and fast.
He (to give fear to use and liberty,
Which have, for long, run by the hideous law,
As mice by lions,) hath pick'd out an act,
Under whose heavy sense your brother's life
Falls into forfeit! he arrests him on it;
And follows close the rigour of the statute,
To make him an example: all hope is gone,
Unless you have the grace by your fair prayer
To soften Angelo: And that's my pith
Of business 'twixt you and your poor brother.
Isab. Doth he so seek his life?
Lucio. Has censur'd 8 him
Already; and, as I hear, the provost hath
A warrant for his execution.
Isab. Alas! what poor ability's in me
To do him good?
Lucio. Assay the power you have.
Isab. My power! Alas! I doubt,—
Lucio. Our doubts are traitors,
And make us lose the good we oft might win,
By fearing to attempt: Go to lord Angelo,
And let him learn to know, when maidens sue,
Men give like gods; but when they weep and kneel,
All their petitions are as freely theirs
As they themselves would owe 4 them.
Isab. I'll see what I can do.
Lucio. But speedily.
Isab. I will about it straight;
No longer staying but to give the mother
Notice of my affair. I humbly thank you:
Commend me to my brother: soon at night
I'll send him certain word of my success.
Lucio. I take my leave of you.
Isab. Good sir, adieu.
[Exeunt.

Act Second.

SCENE I.—A HALL IN ANGELO'S HOUSE.

Enter Angelo, Escalus, Provost, Officers, and other Attendants.

Ang. We must not make a scare-crow of the law,
Setting it up to fear the birds of prey,
1 In few and true words. 2 Dull. 3 Sentenced. 4 Have.
And let it keep one shape, till custom make it
Their perch and not their terror.
Escal. Ay, but yet
Let us be keen, and rather cut a little, [man,
Than fall, and bruise to death: Alas! this gentle-
Whom I would save, had a most noble father.
Let but your honour know
(Whom I believe to be most straight in virtue),
That, in the working of your own affections,
Had time coher'd with place, or place with wish-
Or that the resolute acting of your blood [ing,
Could have attained the effect of your own purpose,
Whether you had not some time in your life
Err'd in this point which now you censure him,
And pull'd the law upon you.
Ang. 'Tis one thing to be tempted, Escalus,
Another thing to fall. I not deny,
The jury, passing on the prisoner's life,
May, in the sworn twelve, have a thief or two Guiltier than him they try: What's open made
To that justice seizes. What know the laws, [justice,
That thieves do pass on thieves? 'Tis very preg-
The jewel that we find, we stop and take it, [nant,
Because we see it; but what we do not see,
We tread upon, and never think of it.
You may not so extenuate his offence,
For I have had such faults; but rather tell me,
When I that censure him, do so offend,
Let mine own judgment pattern out my death,
And nothing come in partial. Sir, he must die.
Escal. Be it as your wisdom will.
Ang. Where is the provost?
Prov. Here, if it like your honour.
Ang. See that Claudio
Be executed by nine to-morrow morning:
Bring him his confessor, let him be prepared:
For that's the utmost of his pilgrimage.
[Exit Angelo and Provost.
Es. Well, heaven forgive him; and forgive us
Some rise by sin, and some by virtue fall: [all!
Some run from brakes of vice, and answer none;
And some condemned for a fault alone.
Mercy is not itself that oft looks so,
Pardon is still the nurse of second woe.
But yet, poor Claudio!—there's no remedy.
[Exit.

SCENE II.—ANOTHER ROOM IN THE SAME.

Enter Provost and a Servant.

Serv. He's hearing of a cause; he will come
I'll tell him of you. [straight.
Prov. Pray you, do. [Exit Servant.] I'll know
His pleasure; may be, he will relent: Alas!
All sects, all ages, smack of this vice; and he
To die for it!
[Exit.

Enter Angelo.

Ang. Now, what's the matter, Provost?
Prov. Is it your will Claudio shall die tomorrow?
Ang. Did I not tell thee, yea? hadst thou not Why dost thou ask again?
[order?
Prov. Lest I might be too rash:
Under your good correction, I have seen,
When, after execution, judgment hath
Repented o'er his doom.
Ang. Go to; let that be mine.
Do you your office, or give up your place,
And you shall well be spar’d.

Prov.
I crave your honour’s pardon.—
What shall be done, sir, with the groaning Juliet?
She’s very near her hour.

Ang.
Dispose of her
To some more fitter place; and that with speed.

Re-enter Servant.

Serv.
Here is the sister of the man condemn’d
Desires access to you.

Ang.
Hath he a sister?

Prov.
Ay, my good lord; a very virtuous maid,
And to be shortly of a sisterhood,
If not already.

Ang.
Well, let her be admitted.

[Exit Servant.

See you, that Julietta be remov’d;
Let her have needful, but not lavish, means;
There shall be order for it.

Enter Lucio and Isabella.

Prov.
Save your honour! [Offering to retire.

Ang.
Stay a little while.—[To Isab.] You are welcome: What’s your will?

Isab.
I am a woeful suitor to your honour:
But please your honour hear me.

Ang.
Well; what’s your suit?

Isab.
There is a vice that most I do abhor,
And most desires should meet the blow of justice;
For which I would not plead, but that I must;
For which I must not plead, but that I am
At war, ’twixt will, and will not.

Ang.
Well; the matter?

Isab.
I have a brother is condemn’d to die:
I do beseech you, let it be his fault,
And not my brother.

Prov.
Heaven give thee moving graces!
Ang.
Condemn the fault and not the actor of it!
Why, every fault’s condemn’d; ere it be done:
Mine were the very ciphers of a function,
To find the faults, whose fine stands in record,
And let go by the actor.

Isab.
O just, but severe law!
I had a brother then.—Heaven keep your honour!

[Retiring.

Lucio.
[To Isab.] Give’t not o’er so: to him again, entreat him;
Kneel down before him, hang upon his gown;
You are too cold: if you should need a pin,
You could not with more tame a tongue desire it:
To him, I say.

Isab.
Must he needs die?

Ang.
Maiden, no remedy.

Is.
Yes; I do think that you might pardon him,
And neither heaven, nor man, grieve at the
Ang.
I will not do.

Isab.
But can you, if you would?

Ang.
Look, what I will not, that I cannot do.

Isab.
But might you do’t, and do the world no wrong?
If so, your heart were touch’d with that remorse
As mine is to him.

Ang.
He’s sentenc’d: ’tis too late.
Lucio.
You are too cold.

Is.
Too late? why, no; I, that do speak a word,
May call it back again: Well, believe this,
No ceremony that to great ones longs,
Not the king’s crown, nor the deputed sword,
The marshal’s truncheon, nor the judge’s robe,
Become them with one half so good a grace
As mercy does. If he had been as you,
And you as he, you would have slight like him;
But he like you, would not have been so stern.
Ang.
Pray you, begone.

Isab.
I would to heaven I had your potency,
And you were Isabel! should it then be thus?
No; I would tell what ’twere to be a judge,
And what a prisoner.

Luc. [Aside.] Ay, touch him: there’s the vein.

Ang.
Your brother is a forfeit of the law,
And you but waste your words.

Isab.
Alas! alas!
Why, all the souls that were, were forfeit once;
And He that might the vantage best have took,
Found out the remedy: How would you be,
If He, which is the top of judgment, should
But judge you as you are? O, think on that;
And mercy then will breathe within your lips,
Like man new made.

Ang.
Be you content, fair maid;
It is the law, not I, condemn your brother:
Were he my kinsman, brother, or my son,
It should be thus with him;—he must die to-morrow.

Isab.
To-morrow? O, that’s sudden! Spare him, spare him:
He’s not prepar’d for death! Even for our kitchens
We kill the fowl of season; shall we reserve Heaven
With less respect than we do minister
To our gross selves? Good, good my lord, bethink,
Who is it that hath died for this offence? [you]
There’s many have committed it,

Lucio.
Ay, well said.

Ang.
The law hath not been dead, though it hath slept:
Those many had not dar’d to do that evil,
If the first man that did the edict infringe
Had answer’d for his deed: now, ’tis awake;
Takes note of what is done; and, like a prophet,
Looks in a glass, that shows what future evils,
(Either now, or by remissness new-conceiv’d,
And so in progress to be hatch’d and born),
Are now to have no successive degrees,
But, where they live, to end.

Isab.
Yet show some pity.

Ang.
I show it most of all, when I show jus;
For then I pity those I do not know, [tice;
Which a dismiss’d offence would after gill;
And do him right, that answering one foul wrong,
Lives not to act another. Be satisfied;
Your brother dies to-morrow: be content.

Isab.
So you must be the first that gives this sentence;
And he, that suffers: O, it is excellent
To have a giant’s strength; but it is tyrannous
To use it like a giant.

Lucio.
That’s well said.

Isab.
Could great men thunder
As Jove himself does, Jove would ne’er be quiet,
For every pelting, I petty officer,
Would use his heaven for thunder; nothing but Merciful heaven! [Thunder.—
Thou rather, with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt,

1 Falyr.
MEASURE OF MEASURE. 99

Split'st the unwedgeable and gnarled oak,
Than the soft myrtle; O, but man, proud man!
Drest in a little brief authority;
Most ignorant of what he's most assured,
His glassy essence,—like an angry ape,
Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven,
As make the angels weep, who with our spleens,
Would all themselves laugh mortal.
Luc. O, to him, to him, wench: he will relent;
It's coming, I perceive't.
Prov. Pray heaven she win him! I. We cannot weigh our brother with yourself: Great men may jest with saints: 'tis wit in them;
But, in the less, foul profanation.
Lucio. Thou'rt in the right, girl; more o'that.
Isab. That in the captain's but a choleric word,
Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy.
Lucio. Art advis'd o'that? more on't.
Ang. Why do you put these sayings upon me?
I. Because authority, though it err like others,
Hath yet a kind of medicine in itself,
That skims the vice o'the top: Go to your bosom;
Knock there; and ask your heart, what it doth know
That's like my brother's fault: if it confess
A natural guiltiness, such as is his,
Let it not sound a thought upon your tongue
Against my brother's life.
Ang. She speaks, and 'tis
Such sense, that my sense breeds with it,—Farewell.
Isab. Gentle my lord, turn back. [you well.
I. I will bethink me:—Come again to-morrow.
Isab. Hark, how I'll bribe you: Good my lord, turn back.
Ang. How, bribe me?
I. Ay, with such gifts, that heaven shall share
Lucio. You had marr'd all else. [with you.
Isab. Not with fond shekels of the tested gold,
Or stoues, whose rates are either rich or poor,
As fancy values them: but with true prayers
That shall be up at heaven, and enter there,
Ere sun-rise; prayers from preserved souls,
From fasting maids, whose minds are dedicate
To nothing temporal.
Ang. Well: come to me
To-morrow.
Lucio. Go to; it is well; away. [Aside to Isab.
Isab. Heaven keep your honour safe!
Ang. Amen: for I
Am that way going to temptation. [Aside.
Where prayers cross.
Isab. At what hour to-morrow
Shall I attend your lordship?
Ang. At any time 'fore noon.
[Exeunt Lucio, Isabella, and Provost.
Ang. From thee; even from thy virtue!—
What's this? what's this? Is this her fault or mine?
The tempter, or the tempted, who sins most? ha!
Not she; nor doth she tempt: but it is I,
That lying by the violet, in the sun,
Do, as the carrion does, not as the flower,
Corrupt with seasonous. Can it be,
That modesty may more betray our sense
Than woman's lightness? Having waste ground enough,
Shall we desire to raise the sanctuary,
And pitch our evils there? O, fye, fye, fye!
What dost thou? or what art thou, Angelo?
Dost thou desire her feely, for those things
That make her good? O, let her brother live;
Thieves for their robbery have authority,
When judges steal themselves. What? do I love
That I desire to hear her speak again, [her,
And feast upon her eyes? What is't I dream on?
O cunning enemy, that, to catch a saint,
With saints dost bait thy hook! Most dangerous
Is that temptation, that doth goad us on
To sin in loving virtue; never could the wanton
Once stir my temper; but this virtuous maid
Subdues me quite:—Ever, till now,
When men were fond, I smil'd, and wonder'd how.
[Exit.

SCENE III.—A ROOM IN A PRISON.

Enter Duke, habited like a Friar, and Provost.
Duke. Hail to you, provost! so I think you are.
Prov. I am the provost. What's your will,
good friar?
Duke. Bound by my charity, and my bless'd
I came to visit the afflicted spirits [order,
Here in the prison: do me the common right
To let me see them; and to make me know
The nature of their crimes, that I may minister
To them accordingly.
Prov. I would do more than that, if more were [needful.

Enter Juliet.
Look, here comes one; a gentlewoman of mine,
Who, falling in the flames of her own youth,
Hath blister'd her report: She is with child;
And he that owns it sentenc'd.

Duke. When must he die?
Prov. As I do think, to-morrow.—
I have provided for you; stay awhile. [To Juliet.
And you shall be conduct'd.
D. Repent you, fair one, of the sin you carry?
Jul. I do; and bear the same most patiently.
Duke. I'll teach you how you shall arraign your conscience,
And try your penitence, if it be sound,
Or hollowly put on.
Juliet. I'll gladly learn.
Duke. Love you the man that wrong'd you?
J. Yes, as I love the woman that wrong'd him.
Duke. So then, it seems, your most offenceful
Was mutually committed?
Juliet. Mutually.
D. Then was your sin of heavier kind than his.
Juliet. I do confess it, and repent it, father.
Duke. 'Tis meet so, daughter: But lest you do repent,
As that the sin hath brought you to this shame,—
Which sorrow is always toward ourselves, not heaven;
Showing, we'd not spare heaven, as we love it,
But as we stand in fear.
Juliet. I do repent me, as it is an evil;
And take the shame with joy.
Duke. There rest,
Your partner, as I hear, must die to-morrow,
And I am going with instruction to him,—
Grace go with you! Benedicite! [Exit.
Juliet. Must die to-morrow! O, injurious love,
That respite me a life, whose very comfort
Is still a dying horror!

 Prov.
'Tis pity of him. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A ROOM IN ANGELO'S HOUSE.

Enter Angelo.

Ang. When I would pray and think, I think and pray [words,
To several subjects: heaven hath my empty
Whilst my invention, hearing not my tongue,
Anchors on Isabel: Heaven in my mouth,
As if I did but only chew his name;
And in my heart, the strong and swelling evil
Of my conception: The state, whereon I studied,
Is like a good thing, being often read,
Grown fear’d and tedious: yea, my gravity,
Wherein (let no man hear me) I take pride,
Could I, with boot, 1 change for an idle plum,
Which the air beats for vain. O place! O form!
How often dost thou with thy case, thy habit,
Wrench awe from fools, and tie the wiser souls
To thy false seeming? Blood, thou still art blood;
Let’s write good angel on the devil’s horn,
’Tis not the devil’s crest.

Enter Servant.

How now, who’s there?

Serv. One Isabel, a sister,
Desires access to you.

Ang. Teach her the way. [Exit Serv.

O heavens!

Why does my blood thus muster to my heart;
Making both it unable for itself,
And dispensing all the other parts
Of necessary fitness?
So play the foolish throngs with one that swoons;
Come all to help him, and so stop the air
By which he should revive: and even so
The general, 2 subject to a well-wished king,
Quit their own part, and in obsequious fondness
Crowd to his presence, where their untaught love
Must needs appear offence.

Enter Isabella.

How now, fair maid?

Isab. I am come to know your pleasure.

Ang. That you might know it, would much better please me. [live.

Than to demand what ’tis. Your brother cannot Isab. Even so?—Heaven keep your honour!

[Retiring.

Ang. Yet may he live a while; and, it may be
As long as you or I: Yet he must die.

Isab. Under your sentence?

Ang. Yea.

Is. When, I beseech you? that in his reprieve,
Longer or shorter, he may be so fitted,
This his soul sicken not.

A. Ha! I see, these filthy vices: It were as good
To pardon him, that hath from nature stolen
A man already made, as to remit [image,
Their saucy sweetness, that do coin heaven’s
In stamps that are forbid; ’tis all as easy
Falsely to take away a life true made,
As to put mettle in restrained means,
To make a false one.

1 Pref. 2 People.

Is. ’Tis set down so in heaven, but not in earth.
A. Say you so? then I shall pose you quickly.
Which had you rather, that the most just law
Now took your brother’s life; or, to redeem him,
Give up your person to such sweet uncleanness,
As she that he hath stain’d?

Isab. Sir, believe this,
I had rather give my body than my soul.

Ang. I talk not of your soul; our compell’d sins
Stand more for number than accomp’t.

Isab. How say you?

Ang. Nay, I’ll not warrant that; for I can speak Against the thing I say. Answer to this:—
I, now the voice of the recorded law,
Proclaim a sentence on your brother’s life:
Might there not be charity in sin,
To save this brother’s life?

Isab. Please you to do’t,
I’ll take it as a peril to my soul,
It is no sin at all, but charity.

Ang. Pleas’d you to do’t, at peril of your soul,
Were equal poise of sin and charity.

Isab. That I do beg his life, if it be sin,
Heaven let me bear it! you granting of my suit,
If that be sin, I’ll make it my mon’r prayer
To have it added to the faults of mine,
And nothing of your answer.

Ang. Nay, but hear me:
Your sense pursues not mine: either you are igno-
Or seem so craftily; and that’s not good. [want,
Isab. Let me be ignorant, and in nothing good,
But graciously to know I am no better. [bright.

Ang. Thus wisdom wishes to appear most
When it doth tax itself: as these black masks
Proclaim an enskiled beauty ten times louder
Than beauty could display.—But mark me;
To be received plain, I’ll speak more gross:
Your brother is to die.

Isab. So.

Ang. And his offence is so, as it appears Accountant to the law upon that pain.

Isab. True.

Ang. Admit no other way to save his life,
(As I subscribe not that, nor any other,
But in the loss of question), that you, his sister,
Finding yourself desir’d of such a person,
Whose credit with the judge, or own great place,
Could fetch your brother from the manacles
Of the all-binding law; and that there were
No earthly mean to save him, but that either
You must lay down the treasures of your person
To this supposed, or else let him suffer;
What would you do?

Isab. As much for my poor brother as myself:
That is, were I under the terms of death,
The impression of keen whips I’d wear as rubies,
And strip myself to death, as to a bed
That longing I have been sick for, ere I’d yield
My honour up to shame.

Ang. Then must your brother die.

Isab. And ’twere the cheaper way:
Better it were a brother died at once,
Than that a sister, by redeeming him,
Should die for ever.

Ang. Were not you then as cruel as the sentence
That you have slander’d so?

Isab. Ignomy in ransom, and free pardon,
Are of two houses: lawful mercy is Nothing akin to foul redemption. [tyrant;
Ang. You seem’d of late to make the law a
And rather prov’d the sliding of your brother
A Merrill than a vice.
Isab. O, pardon me, my lord; it oft falls out
To have what we’d have, we speak not what we
I something do excuse the thing I hate, [mean:
For his advantage that I dearly love.
Ang. We are all frail.
Isab. Else let my brother die,
If, not a fe卓ary, but only he
Owe,2 and succeed by weakness.
Ang. Nay, women are frail too.
I. Ay, as the glasses where they view themselves;
Which are as easy broke as they make forms.
Women!—Help heaven! men their creation mar
In profiting by them. Nay, call us ten times frail;
For we are soft as our complexions are,
And credulous to false prints.
Ang. I think it well;
And from this testimony of your own sex,
(Since, I suppose, we are made to no stronger Than faults may shake our frames), let me be
I do arrest your words; be that you are, [bold
That is, a woman; if you be more, you’re none:
If you be one (as you are well express’d
By all external warrants), show it now,
By putting on the destin’d livery.
Isab. I have no tongue but one; gentle my lord,
Let me entreat you, speak the former language.
Ang. Plainly conceive, I love you.
Isab. My brother did love Juliet; and you tell
That he shall die for it. [me,
Ang. He shall not, Isabel, if you give me love.
Isab. I know your virtue hath a licence in’t,
Which seems a little fouler than it is,
To pluck on others.
Ang. Believe me, on mine honour,
My words express my purpose.
Isab. Ha? little honour to be much believ’d,
And most pernicious purpose!—Seeming, seem-
I will proclaim thee, Angelo; look for’t: (ing!
Sign me a present pardon for my brother,
Or, with an outstretched throat, I’ll tell the world
Aloud, what man thou art.
Ang. Who will believe thee, Isabel?
My unsoil’d name, the austereness of my life,
My vouch against you, and my place i’ the state
Will so your accusation outweigh,
That you shall stifle in your own report,
And smell of calumny. I have begun;
And now I give my sensual race the rein:
Fit thy consent to my sharp appetite;
Lay by all nicety and prolixious blushes.
That banish what they use for; redeem thy brother
By yielding up thy person to my will;
Or else he must not only die the death,
But thy unkindness shall his death draw out
To lingering sufferance: answer me to-morrow,
Or, by the affection that now guides me most,
I’ll prove a tyrant to him: As for you,
Say what you can, my false o’erweighs your true.
[Exit.
Isab. To whom shall I complain? Did I tell this,
Who would believe me? O perilous months,
That bear in them one and the self-same tongue,
1 Owing service. 2 Own.
Either of condemnation or reproof!
Bidding the law make court’ry to their will;
Hooking both right and wrong to the appetite,
To follow as it draws? I’ll to my brother:
Though he hath fallen by prompture of the blood,
Yet hath he in him such a mind of honour,
That had he twenty heads to tender down
On twenty bloody blocks, he’d yield them up,
Before his sister should her person stoop
To such abhor’d pollution.
Then, Isabel, live chaste, and, brother, die:
More than our brother is our chastity.
I’ll tell him yet of Angelo’s request,
And fit his mind to death, for his soul’s rest.
[Exit.

Act Third.

SCENE I.—A ROOM IN THE PRISON.

Enter Duke, Claudio, and Provost.

D. So, then you hopefull pardon from lord Angelo?
Claud. The miserable have no other medicine
But only hope: I have hope to live, and am prepar’d to die.
Du. Be absolute for death: either death, or life, Shall thereby be the sweeter. Reason thus with
If I do lose thee, I do lose a thing [life,—
That none but fools would keep: a breath thou
(Servile to all the skiey influences), [art,
That dost this habitation, where thou keep’st,
Hourly afflict: merely, thou art death’s fool;
For him thou labour’st by thy flight to shun,
And yet run’st toward him still: Thou art not noble;
For all the accommodations that thou bear’st,
Are nurs’d by baseness: Thou art by no means valiant;
For thou dost fear the soft and tender fork
Of a poor worm: Thy best of rest is sleep,
And that thou oft provok’st; yet grossly fear’st
Thy death, which is no more. Thou art not thy-
For thou exist’st on many a thousand grains[sel;
That issue out of dust: Happy thou art not:
For what thou hast not, still thou striv’st to get;
And what thou hast, forget’st: Thou art not certain;
For thy complexion shifts to strange effects,1
After the moon: If thou art rich, thou art poor;
For, like an ass, whose back with ingots bows,
Thou bear’st thy heavy riches but a journey,
And death unloads thee: Friend hast thou none;
For thine own bowels, which do call thee sire,
The mere effusion of thy proper loins,
Do curse the gout, serpigo,2 and the rheum,
For ending thee no sooner. Thou hast nor youth,
But, as it were, an after-dinner’s sleep, (nourage;
Dreaming on both: for all thy blessed youth
Becomes as aged, and doth beg the aims
Of palsied eld; and when thou art old and rich,
Thou hast neither heat, affection, limb, nor beauty,
To make thy riches pleasant. What’s yet in this,
That bears the name of life? Yet in this life
Lie hid more thousand deaths: yet death we fear,
That makes these odds all even.
Claud. I humbly thank you.

1 Affections. 2 Leprous eruptions.
To sue to live, I find, I seek to die;
And seeking death, find life: Let it come on.

Enter Isabella.

Isab. What, ho! Peace here; grace and good company! [A welcome.

Prov. Who’s there? come in; the wish deserves

Duke. Dear sir, ere long I’ll visit you again.

Claud. Most holy sir, I thank you.

Is. My business is a word or two with Claudio.

Prov. And very welcome. Look, signior, here’s

Duke. Provost, a word with you. [to his sister.

Prov. As many as you please.

Duke. Bring them to speak, where I may be

Yet hear them. [conceal’d.

Exeunt Duke and Provost.

Claud. Now, sister, what’s the comfort?

Isab. Why, as all comforts are; most good in

Lord Angelo, having affairs to heaven, [deed:
Intends you for his swift ambassador,

Where you shall be an everlasting lieger;
Therefore your best appointment make with to-morrow you set on. [speed.

Claud. Is there no remedy?

Isab. None, but such remedy, as to save a head,

To cleave a heart in twain.

Claud. But is there any?

Isab. Yes, brother, you may live;

There is a devilish mercy in the judge,

If you’ll implore it, that will free your life,

But fetter you till death.

Claud. Perpetual durance?

Isab. Ay, just perpetual durance; a restraint,

Though all the world’s fastidiousity you had,

To a determined scope.

Claud. But in what nature?

Isab. In such a one as (you consenting to’t)

Would bark your honour from that trunk you

And leave you naked. [bear,

Claud. Let me know the point.

Isab. O, I do fear thee, Claudio; and I quake,

Lest thou a feverous life should’st entertain,

And six or seven winters more respect

Than a perpetual honour. Darst thou die?

The sense of death is most in apprehension;

And the poor beetle that we tread upon,

In corporeal sufferance finds a pang as great

As when a giant dies.

Claud. Why give you me this shame?

Think you I can a resolution fetch

From flowery tenderness? If I must die,

I will encounter darkness as a bride,

And hug it in mine arms.

I. There spake my brother; there my father’s

grave

Did utter forth a voice! Yes, thou must die:

Thou art too noble to conserve a life [deputy—

In base appliances. This outward-sainted

Whose settled visage and deliberation

Wits youth i’ the head, and follies doth enymow,

As falcon doth the fowl,—is yet a devil;

His flux within being cast, he would appear

A pond as deep as hell.

Claud. The princely Angelo?

Isab. O, ’tis the cunning livery of hell,

The vilest body to invest and cover

In princely guards! Dost thou think, Claudio,

[1 Re-enter. 2 Make hide under cover.

If I would yield him up my person,

Thou might’st be freed?

Claud. O, heavens! it cannot be.

Isab. Yes, he would give it thee, from this rank offence,

So to offend him still: This night’s the time,

That I should do what I abhor to name,

Or else thou diest to-morrow.

Claud. Thou shalt not do’t.

Isab. O, were it but my life,

I’d throw it down for your deliverance

As frankly as a pin.

Claud. Thanks, dear Isabel.

Duke. Be ready, Claudio, for your death to-morrow.

Claud. Yes. Has he affections in him,

That thus can make him bite the law by the nose,

When he would force it? Sure it is no sin;

Or of the deadly seven it is the least.

Isab. Which is the least?

Claud. If it were damnable, he, being so wise,

Why, would he for the momentary trick

Be perdurably fin’d—O Isabel!

Isab. What says my brother?

Claud. Death is a fearful thing.

Isab. And shamed life a hateful.

C. Ay, but to die, and go we know not where;

To lie in cold obstruction, and rot:

This sensible warm motion to become

A kneaded clot; and the delighted spirit

To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside

In thrilling regions of thick-ribbed ice;

To be imprison’d in the viewless winds,

And blown with restless violence round about

The pendent world; or to be worse than worst

Of those, that lawless and uncertain thoughts

Imagine howling!—’tis too horrible!

The weariest and most loathed worldly life,

That age, ache, penury, and imprisonment

Can lay on nature, is a paradise

To what we fear of death.

Isab. Alas! alas!

Claud. Sweet sister, let me live;

What sin you do to save a brother’s life,

Nature dispenses with the deed so far,

That it becomes a virtue.

Is. O, faithless coward! O, dishonest wretch!

Wilt thou be made a man out of my vice?

Is’t not a kind of incest, to take life

From thine own sister’s shame? take my defence;

Die; perish! might but my bending down

Reprieve thee from thy fate, it should proceed;

I’ll pray a thousand prayers for thy death,

No word to save thee.

Claud. Nay, hear me, Isabel.

Isab. O, fye, fye, fye:

Thy sin’s not accidental, but a trade:

"Tis best that thou diest quickly. [Going.

Claud. O hear me, Isabella.

Re-enter Duke.

Duke. Vouchsafe a word, young sister, but one word.

Isab. What is your will?

Duke. Might you dispense with your leisure,

I would by and by have some speech with you:

the satisfaction I would require, is likewise your own benefit.

Isab. I have no superfluous leisure; my stay must be stolen out of other affairs; but I will attend you awhile.

Duke. [To Claudio, aside.] Son, I have overheard what hath past between you and your sister. Angelo had never the purpose to corrupt her; only he hath made an essay of her virtue, to practise his judgment with the disposition of natures; she, having the truth of honour in her, hath made him that gracious denial which he is most glad to receive: I am confessor to Angelo, and I know this to be true; therefore prepare yourself to death: Do not satisfy your resolution with hopes that are fallible: to morrow you must die; go to your knees, and make ready.

C. Let me ask my sister pardon. I am so out of love with life, that I will sue to be rid of it.

D. Hold you there: Farewell. [Exit Claudio.]

Re-enter Provost.

Provost, a word with you.

Prov. What's your will, father?

Duke. That now you are come you will be gone: Leave me a while with the maid; my mind promises with my habit, no less shall touch her by my company.

Prov. In good time. [Exit Provost.

Duke. The hand that hath made you fair, hath made you good: the goodness that is cheap in beauty, makes beauty brief in goodness: but grace, being the soul of your complexion, should keep the body of it ever fair. The assault that Angelo hath made to you, fortune hath conveyed to my understanding; and, but that frailty hath examples for his falling, I should wonder at Angelo. How would you do to content this substitute, and to save your brother?

Isab. I am now going to resolve him: I had rather my brother die by the law, than my son should be unlawfully born. But O, how much is the good duke deceived in Angelo! If ever he return, and I can speak to him, I will open my lips in vain, or discover his government.

Duke. That shall not be much amiss: Yet, as the matter now stands, he will avoid your accusation; he made trial of you only.—Therefore, fasten your ear on my advisings: to the love I have in doing good, a remedy presents itself. I do make myself believe, that you may most uprightly do a poor wronged lady a merited benefit; redeem your brother from the angry law; do no stain to your own gracious person; and much please the absent duke, if, peradventure, he shall ever return to have hearing of this business.

Isab. Let me hear you speak further: I have spirit to do any thing that appears not foul in the truth of my spirit.

Duke. Virtue is bold, and goodness never fearful. If you have not heard speak of Mariana, the sister of Frederick, the great soldier, who miscarried at sea?

Isab. I have heard of the lady, and good words went with her name.

Duke. Her should this Angelo have married: was affianced to her by oath, and the nuptial appointed: between which time of the contract, and limit of the solemnity, her brother Frederick was wrecked at sea, having in that perish'd vessel the dowry of his sister. But mark, how heavily this befell to the poor gentlewoman; there she lost a noble and renowned brother, in his love toward her ever most kind and natural; with him the portion and sinew of her fortune; her marriage-dowry; with both, her combinat

1 Betrothed. 2 Over-reached. 3 A sweet wine.
Enter Lucio.

Elb. His neck will come to your waist, a cord, sir.
Clo. I spy comfort; I cry ball: Here's a gentleman, and a friend of mine.
Lucio. How, now, noble Pompey? What, at the heels of Caesar? Art thou led in triumph? Art going to prison, Pompey?
Clo. Yes, faith, sir.
Lucio. Why, 'tis not amiss, Pompey: Farewell: Go; say, I sent thee thither.
C. I hope sir, your good worship will be my bail.
Lucio. No, indeed, will I not, Pompey; it is not the wear. I will pray, Pompey, to increase your bondage: if you take it not patiently, why your mettle is the more: Adieu, trusty Pompey.—Bless you, friar.
Duke. And you.
Lucio. Does Bridget paint still, Pompey? Ha?
Elb. Come your ways, sir; come.
Clo. You will not bail me then, sir?
Lucio. Then, Pompey? nor now.—What news abroad, friar? What news?
Elb. Come your ways, sir; come.
Lucio. Go,—to kennel, Pompey, go: [Exeunt Elbow, Clown, and Officers.
What news, friar, of the Duke?
Duke. I know none: Can you tell me of any?
Lucio. Some say, he is with the emperor of Russia; other some, he is in Rome: But where is he, think you?
Duke. I know not where: But wheresoever, I wish him well.
Lucio. It was a mad fantastical trick of him, to steal from the state, and usurp the beggary he was never born to. Lord Angelo dukes it well in his absence; he puts transgression to't.
Duke. He does well in't.
Lucio. A little more lenity to wenching would do no harm in him: something too crabbed that way, friar.
Duke. It is too general a vice, and severity must cure it.
Lucio. Yes, in good sooth, the vice is of a great kindred; it is well ally'd.
Duke. You are pleasant, sir; and speak apace.
Lucio. Why, what a ruthless thing is it in Angelo to take away the life of a man thus? Would the duke that is absent have done this? He knew the service, and that instructed him to mercy.

Duke. I never heard the absent duke much detected for women; he was not inclined that way.
Lucio. O, sir, you are deceived.
Duke. 'Tis not possible.
Lucio. Who? not the duke? yes, your beggar of fifty;—and his use was, to put a ducat in her clack-dish: the duke had crotchets in him: He would be drunk too; that let me inform you.
Lucio. Sir, I was an inward of his: a shy fellow was the duke: and I believe I know the cause of his withdrawing.
Duke. What, I pr'ythee, might be the cause?
Lucio. No,—pardon: 'tis a secret must be lock'd within the teeth and the lips: but this I can let you understand,—The greater file of the subject held the duke to be wise.
Duke. Wise? why, no question but he was.
Lucio. A very superficial, ignorant, unweighing fellow.
Duke. Either this is envy in you, folly, or mistaking; the very stream of his life, and the business he hath helmed, must, upon a warranted need, give him a better proclamation. Let him be but testified in his own bringings forth, and he shall appear to the envious a scholar, a statesman, and a soldier: Therefore, you speak unskilfully; or, if your knowledge be more, it is much darken'd in your malice.
Lucio. Sir, I know him, and I love him.
Duke. Love talks with better knowledge, and knowledge with dearer love.
Lucio. Come, sir, I know what I know.
Duke. I can hardly believe that, since you know not what you speak. But, if ever the duke return (as our prayers are he may), let me desire you to make your answer before him: If it be honest you have spoke, you have courage to maintain it: I am bound to call upon you; and, I pray you, your name?
Lucio. Sir, my name is Lucio, well known to the duke.
Duke. He shall know you better, sir, if I may live to report you.
Lucio. I fear you not.
Duke. O, you hope the duke will return no more; or you imagine me too unhurtful an opposite. But, indeed, I can do little harm: you'll find him again.
Lucio. I'll be hanged first: thou art deceived in me, friar. But no more of this: I would the duke we talk of were return'd again: this agent will unpeople the province. Farewell, good friar: I pr'ythee pray for me. The duke, I say to thee again, will eat mutton on Fridays: say that I said so. Farewell. [Exit.
Duke. No might nor greatness in mortality
Can censure 'scape; back-wounding calumny
The whitest virtue strikes: What king so strong,
Can tie the gall up in the slanderous tongue?
But who comes here?

Enter Escalus, Provost, Overdone, and Officers.
Escal. Go, away with her to prison.
Over. Good my lord, begood to me; your honour is accounted a merciful man: good my lord.

1 Clack-dish: The beggars proclaimed their want by a wooden dish with a cover, which they clacked.
2 Guided.
Kills for faults of his own liking!
Twice treble shame on Angelo,
To weed my vice, and let his grow!
O, what may man within him hide,
Though angel on the outward side—
How may likeness, made in crimes,
Making practice on the times,
Draw with idle spiders' strings
Most pond'rous and substantial things!
Craft against vice I must apply:
With Angelo to-night shall lie
His old betrothed, but despis'd;
So disgrace shall, by the disguis'd,
Pay with falsehood false exacting,
And perform an old contracting. [Exit.

Act Fourth.

SCENE I.—A ROOM IN MARIANA’S HOUSE.

Mariana discovered sitting; a Boy singing.

SONG.

Take, oh take those lips away,
That so sweetheart were forsworn;
And those eyes, the break of day,
Lights that do mislead the morn:
But my kisses bring again,

Seals of love, but seal’d in vain,

[Exit Boy.

Enter Duke.

I cry you mercy, sir; and well could wish
You had not found me here so musical:—
Let me excuse me, and believe me so,—[woe,
My mirth it much displeas’d, but pleas’d my
Duke. ’Tis good: though music oft hath such a charm,
To make bad good, and good provoke to harm.
I pray you, tell me, hath any body enquired for me here to-day? much upon this time have I promis’d here to meet.
MARI. You have not been enquired after: I have sat here all day.

Enter Isabella.

Duke. I do constantly believe you:—The time is come, even now. I shall crave your forbearance a little; may be, I will call upon you anon, for some advantage to yourself.
MARI. I am always bound to you. [Exit.

Duke. Very well met, and welcome.

What is the news from this good deputy? [brick.
Isab. He hath a garden circum-mur’d with
Whose western side is with a vineyard back’d; And to that vineyard is a planched gate,
That makes his opening with this bigger key:
This other doth command a little door,
Which from the vineyard to the garden leads:
There have I made my promise to call on him, Upon the heavy middle of the night.

1 Wooden.
Duke. But shall you on your knowledge find this way?

I. Have ta'en a due and wary note upon't; With whispering and most guilty diligence, In action all of precept, he did show me The way twice o'er.

Duke. Are there no other tokens Between you 'greed, concerning her observance? Isob. No, none, but only a repair 'tis, dark, And that I have possess'd him, my most stay Can be but brief: for I have made him know, I have a servant comes with me along, That stays upon me; whose persuasion is, I come about my brother.

Duke. Tis well borne up. I have not yet made known to Mariana A word of this.—What ho! within! come forth! Re-enter Mariana.

I pray you, be acquainted with this maid; She comes to do you good.

Isob. I do desire the like.

D. Do you persuade yourself that I respect you? Mari. Good friar, I know you; and have found it.

Duke. Take then this your companion by the Who hath a story ready for your ear: [hand, I shall attend your leisure; but make haste; The vaporous night approaches.

Mari. Will 't please you walk aside? [Exeunt Mariana and Isabella.

D. O place and greatness, millions of false eyes Are stuck upon thee! volumes of report Run with these false and most contrarious quests. Upon thy doings! thousand escapes of wit Make thee the father of their idle dream, And rack thee in their fancies!—Welcome! How agreed?

Re-enter Mariana and Isabella.

I. She'll take the enterprise upon her, father, If you advise it.

Duke. It is not my consent, But my entreaty too.

Isob. Little have you to say, When you depart from him, but, soft and low, Remember now my brother.

Mari. Fear me not.

D. Nor, gentle daughter, fear you not at all: He is your husband on a pre-contract: To bring you thus together 'tis no sin; Siths that the justice of your title to him Doth flourish the deceit. Come, let us go; Our corn's to reap, for yet our tithe's to sow.

[Exeunt.

Scene II.—A Room in a Prison.

Enter Provost and Clown.

Prov. Come hither, sirrah: Can you cut off a man's head?

Clo. If the man be a bachelor, sir, I can: but if he be a married man, he is his wife's head, and I can never cut off a woman's head.

Prov. Come, sir, leave me your snatches, and yield me a direct answer. To-morrow morning are to die Claudio and Barnardine: here is in our prison a common executioner, who in his office lacks a helper: if you will take it on you to assist him, it shall redeem you from your gyes; if not, you shall have your full time of imprisonment, and your deliverance with an unpitied whipping.

Clo. Sir, I will be content to be a lawful hangman. I would be glad to receive some instruction from my fellow-partner.

Prov. What ho, Abhorson! Where's Abhorson, there?

Enter Abhorson.

Abhor. Do you call, sir?

Prov. Sirrah, here's a fellow will help you to-morrow in your execution: If you think it meet, compound with him by the year, and let him abide here with you; if not, use him for the present, and dismiss him.

Abhor. Fye upon him, he will discredit our mystery.

Prov. Go to, sir; you weigh equally; a feather will turn the scale.

[Exit. Clo. Pray, sir, by your good favour (for surely, sir, a good favour you have, but that you have a hanging look), do you call, sir, your occupation a mystery?

Abhor. Ay, sir; a mystery.

Clo. Painting, sir, I have heard say, is a mystery, but what mystery there should be in hanging, if I should be hanged, I cannot imagine.

Abhor. Sir, it is a mystery.

Clo. Proof.

Abhor. Every true man's apparel fits your thief: if it be too little for your thief, your true man thinks it big enough; if it be too big for your thief, your thief thinks it little enough; so every true man's apparel fits your thief.

Re-enter Provost.

Prov. Are you agreed?

Clo. Sir, I will serve him; for I do find your hangman is a penitent trade; he doth often ask forgiveness.

Prov. You, sirrah, provide your block and your axe, to-morrow, four o'clock.

Abhor. Come on; I will instruct thee in my trade; follow.

Clo. I do desire to learn, sir; and, I hope, if you have occasion to use me for your own turn, you shall find me yare: for truly, sir, for your kindness, I owe you a good turn.

Prov. Call hither Barnardine and Claudio.

[Exeunt Clown and Abhorson.

One has my pity; not a jot the other, Being a murderer, though he were my brother.

Enter Claudio.

Look, here's the warrant, Claudio, for thy death: 'Tis now dead midnight, and by eight to-morrow Thou must be made immortal. Where's Barnardine?

Claud. As fast lock'd up in sleep as guiltless When it lies starkly in the traveller's bones: He will not wake.

Prov. Who can do good on him? Well, go prepare yourself. But, hark, what noise?

[Knocking within.

Heaven give your spirits comfort! [Exit Claudio. By and by—

1 Inquiries. 2 Since. 5 Tilth, tilled ground.

2 Salutes. 4 Grace. 6 Tilth, tilled ground.
I hope it is some pardon or reprieve,
For the most gentle Claudio.—Welcome, father.

Enter Duke.

Duke. The best and wholesomest spirits of the night Envelope you, good provost? Who call’d here of Prov. None, since the curfew rung. [late?
Duke. Not Isabel?
Prov. No.
Duke. They will then, ere’t be long.
Prov. What comfort is for Claudio?
Duke. There’s some in hope.
Prov. It is a bitter deputy.
Duke. Not so, not so; his life is parallel’d
Even with the stroke and line of his great justice:
He doth with holy abstinence subdue
That in himself, which he spurs on his power
To qualify in others: were he meal’d [nous :
With that which he corrects, then were he tyrant:
But this being so, he’s just. —Now are they come.
[Knocking within—Provost goes out.
This is a gentle provost: Seldom, when
The steel’d gaoler is the friend of men. —
How now? what noise? That spirit’s possess’d with haste, [strokes.
That wounds the unsisting 2 postern with these

Provost returns, speaking to one at the door.
Prov. There he must stay until the officer
Arise to let him in; he is call’d up.
Duke. Have you no countermand for Claudio
But he must die to-morrow? [yet,
Prov. None, sir, none.
Duke. As near the dawning, provost, as it is,
You shall hear more ere morning.
Prov. Happily, 3
You something know; yet, I believe, there comes
No countermand; no such example have we:
Besides, upon the very siege 4 of justice,
Lord Angelo hath to the public ear
Profess’d the contrary.

Enter a Messenger.

Duke. This is his lordship’s man.
Prov. And here comes Claudio’s pardon.
Mess. My lord hath sent you this note; and by me this further charge, that you swerve not from the smallest article of it, neither in time, matter, or other circumstance. Good morrow; for, as I take it, it is almost day.
Prov. I shall obey him. [Exit Messenger.
Duke. This is his pardon; purchas’d by such sin.
[Aside.
For which the pardoner himself is in:
Hence hath offence his quick celerity,
When it is borne in high authority:
When vice makes mercy, mercy’s so extended,
That for the fault’s love is the offender
Now, sir, what news?
[friendled.
Prov. I told you; Lord Angelo, belike, thinking me remiss in mine office, awakens me with this unwonted putting on: methinks, strangely:
for he hath not used it before.
Duke. Pray you, let’s hear.
Prov. [Reads.] Whatever you may hear to the contrary, let Claudio be executed by four of the clock: and, in the afternoon, Barnardine: for my better satisfaction, let me have Claudio’s head sent me by five. Let this be duly performed: with a thought that more depends on it than we must yet deliver. Thus fail not to do your office, as you will answer it at your peril.

What say you to this, sir?

Duke. What is that Barnardine who is to be executed in the afternoon?
Prov. A Bohemian born; but here nursed up and bred; one that is a prisoner nine years old.
D. How came it, that the absent duke had not either delivered him to his liberty, or executed
I have heard it was ever his manner to do so, [him?
P. His friends still wrought reprieves for him:
And indeed, his fact, till now in the government of lord Angelo, came not to an undoubtedly proof.
Duke. Is it now apparent?
P. Most manifest, and not denied by himself.
Duke. Hath he borne himself penitently in prison?
How seems he to be touch’d?
Prov. A man that apprehends death no more dreadfully but as a drunken sleep; careless, reckless, and fearless of what’s past, present,
or to come; insensible of mortality, and desperately merciful.
Duke. He wants advice.
Prov. He will hear none; he hath evermore had the liberty of the prison; give him leave to escape hence, he would not: drunk many times a day, if not many days entirely drunk. We have very often awak’d him, as if to carry him to execution, and show’d him a seeming warrant for it; he hath not moved him at all.
Duke. More of him anon. There is written in your brow, provost, honesty and constancy: if I read it not truly, my ancient skill beguiles me;
but in the boldness of my cunning, I will lay myself in hazard. Claudio, whom here you have a wart to execute, is no greater forfeit to the law than Angelo who hath sentenced him: To make you understand this in a manifest defect, I crave but four days’ respite; for which you are to do me both a present and a dangerous courtesy.

Prov. Pray, sir, in what?
Duke. In the delaying death.
Prov. Alack! how may I do it? having the hour limited; and an express command, under penalty, to deliver his head in the view of Angelo?
I may make my case as Claudio’s, to cross this in the smallest.

Duke. By the vow of mine order, I warrant you, if my instructions may be your guide. Let this Barnardine be this morning executed, and his head borne to Angelo.
Prov. Angelo hath seen them both, and will discover the favour. 1
Duke. O, death’s a great disquiser: and you may add it to. Shave the head, and tie the beard; and say it was the desire of the penitent to be so bared before his death; you know the course is common. If any thing fall to you upon this, more than thanks and good fortune, by the saint whom
I profess, I will plead against it with my life.

Prov. Pardon me, good father; it is against your oath.

Duke. Were you sworn to the duke, or to the deputy?

1 (Of countenance.)
Prov. To him, and to his substitutes.

Duke. You will think you have made no offence, if the duke avouch the justice of your dealing?

Prov. But what likelihood is in that?

Duke. Not a resemblance, but certainty. Yet since I see you fearful, that neither my coat, integrity, nor my persuasion, can with ease attempt you, I will go further than I meant, to pluck all fears out of you. Look you, sir, here is the hand and seal of the duke. You know the character, I doubt not; and the signet is not strange to you.

Prov. I know them both.

Duke. The contents of this is the return of the duke; you shall anon over-read it at your pleasure; where you shall find, within these two days, he will be here. This is a thing that Angelo knows not: for he this very day receives letters of strange tenor; perchance, of the duke’s death; perchance, entering into some monastery; but, by chance, nothing of what is writ. Look, the unfolding star calls up the shepherd; put not yourself into amazement, how these things should be; all difficulties are but easy when they are known. Call your executioner, and off with Barnardine’s head: I will give him a present shift, and advise him for a better place. Yet you are amazed; but this shall absolutely resolve you. Come away, it is almost clear dawn. [Exit.

SCENE III.—ANOTHER ROOM IN THE SAME.

Enter Clown.

Clo. I am as well acquainted here as I was in mistress Overdone’s own house, for here be many of her old customers.

Enter Abhorson.

Abhor. Sirrah, bring Barnardine hither.

Clo. Master Barnardine! you must rise and be hang’d, master Barnardine!

Abhor. What, ho, Barnardine!

Barnar. [Within.] A plague o’ your throats! Who makes that noise there? What are you?

Clo. Your friends, sir—the hangmen: You must be so good, sir, to rise, and be put to death.

Barnar. [Within.] Away, you rogue, away; I am sleepy.

Abhor. Tell him, he must awake, and that quickly too.

Clo. Tray, master Barnardine, awake till you are executed, and sleep afterwards.

Abhor. Go in to him, and fetch him out.

Clo. He is coming, sir; he is coming; I hear his straw rustle.

Enter Barnardine.

Abhor. Is the axe upon the block, sirrah?

Clo. Very ready, sir.

Barnar. How now, Abhorson? what’s the news with you?

Ab. Truly, sir, I would desire you to clap into your prayers: for, look you, the warrant’s come.

Barnar. You rogue, I have been drinking all night; I am not fitted for’t.

Clo. O, the better, sir; for he that drinks all night, and is hang’d betimes in the morning, may sleep the sounder all the next day.
For I would commune with you of such things,
That want no ear but yours.

Pro. I'll make all speed. [Exit.

Isob. [Within.] Peace, ho, be here!

D. The tongue of Isabel:—She's come to know
If yet her brother's pardon be come hither;
But I will keep her ignorant of her good,
To make her heavenly comforts of despair,
When it is least expected.

Enter Isabella.

Isob. Ho, by your leave.

Duke. Good morning to you, fair and gracious daughter.

Isob. The better, given me by so holy a man.

Duke. Hath yet the deputy sent your brother's pardon?

Isob. He hath released him, Isabel, from the
His head is off, and sent to Angelo. [Exit; world;

Isob. Nay, but it is not so.

Duke. It is no other: [tence.

Show your wisdom, daughter, in your close pa-

Isob. Unhappy Claudio! Wretched Isabel! Injurious world! Accursed Angelo!

D. This nor hurs him, nor profits you a jot;

Forbear it, therefore; give your cause to heaven.

Mark what I say; which you shall find
By every syllable, a faithful verity:
The duke comes home to-morrow;—nay, dry
your eyes;

One of our convent, and his confessor,

Gives me this instance: Already he hath carried

Notice to Escalus and Angelo:

Who do prepare to meet him at the gates,

There to give up their power. If you can, pace your wisdom

In that good path that I would wish it go;

And you shall have your bosom on this wretch,
Grace of the duke, revenges to your heart,

And general honour.

Isob. I am directed by you.

Duke. This letter then to Friar Peter give;

'Tis that he sent me of the duke's return:

Say, by this token, I desire his company
At Mariana's house to-night. Her cause, and
yours,

I'll perfect him withal; and he shall bring you

Before the duke; and to the head of Angelo

Accuse him home, and home. For my poor self,

I am combined by a sacred vow,
And shall be absent. Wendi you with this letter:

Command these fretting waters from your eyes

With a light heart; trust not my holy order,

If I pervert your course. —Who's here?

Enter Lucio.

Lucio. Good even! Friar, where is the provost?

Duke. Not within, sir.

Lucio. O, pretty Isabella, I am pale at mine heart, to see thine eyes so red; thou must be patient: But they say the duke will be here tomorrow. By my troth, Isabel, I lov'd thy brother: if the old fantastical duke of dark corners had been at home, he had lived.

[Exit Isabella.

D. Sir, the duke is marvellous little beholden to your reports; but the best is, he lives not in them.

Lucio. Friar, thou knowest not the duke so well as I do: he's a better woodman than thou takest him for.

Duke. Well, you'll answer this one day. Fare ye well.

Lucio. Nay, tarry; I'll go along with thee:

I can tell thee pretty tales of the duke.

Duke. You have told me too many of him already, sir, if they be true; if not true, none were enough: but, sir, your company is fairer than honest: Rest you well.

Lucio. By my troth, I'll go with thee to the lane's end: Nay, friar, I am a kind of burr, I shall stick.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—A ROOM IN ANGELO'S HOUSE.

Enter Angelo and Escalus.

Ang. Every letter he hath writ hath dis vouch'd other.

Escal. In most uneven and distracted manner.
His actions show much like to madness; pray, heaven, his wisdom be not tainted! And why meet him at the gates, and re-deliver our authorities there?

Ang. I guess not.

Escal. And why should we proclaim it in an hour before his entering, that, if any crave redress of injustice, they should exhibit their petitions in the street?

Escal. He shows his reason for that: to have a deepatch of complaints; and to deliver us from device hereafter, which shall then have no power to stand against us.

Ang. Well, I beseech you, let it be proclaim'd:

Betimes t' the morn, I'll call at your house:

Give notice to such men of sort and suit

As are to meet him.

Escal. I shall, sir; fare you well.

[Exit.

Ang. Good night. — [pregnant,

This deed unshapes me quite, makes me un-

And dull to all proceedings. A deflower'd maid!

And by an eminent body, that enforc'd

The law against it! But that her tender shame

Will not proclaim against her maiden loss,

How might she tongue me? Yet reason dares her—no:

For my authority bears a credent bulk,

That no particular scandal once can touch,

But it confounds the breather. He should have li'd [sense,

Save that his riotous youth, with dangerous

Might, in the times to come, have ta'en revenge,

By so receiving a dishonour'd life, [li'd,

With ransom of such shame. Would yet he had

Alack, when once our grace we have forgot,

Nothing goes right; we would, and we would not.

[Exit.

SCENE V.—FIELDS WITHOUT THE TOWN.

Enter Duke in his own habit, and Friar Peter.

Duke. These letters at fit time deliver me.

[Giving letters.

The provost knows our purpose, and our plot.

The matter being afoot, keep your instruction,

1 Desire. 2 Go. 3 D. 4 Friar. 5 Duke. 1 Rank.
And hold you ever to our special drift; [that,
Though sometimes you do blench from this to
As cause doth minister, go, call at Flavius's house,
And tell him where I stay: give the like notice
To Valentinus, Rowland, and to Crassus,
And bid them bring the trumpets to the gate;
But send me Flavius first.
F. Peter. It shall be speeded well.

Enter Varrius.

Duke. I thank thee, Varrius; thou hast made good haste:
Come, we will walk: There's other of our friends
Will greet us here anon, my gentle Varrius.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Street near the City Gate.

Enter Isabella and Mariana.

Isab. To speak so indirectly, I am loath;
I would say the truth; but to accuse him so,
That is your part; yet I am advis'd to do it;
He says, to veil full purpose.

Mori. Be rul'd by him.

Isab. Besides, he tells me, that if peradventure
He speak against me on the adverse side,
I should not think it strange; for 'tis a physick
That's bitter to sweet end.

Mori. I would, friar Peter—

Isab. O, peace; the friar is come.

Enter Friar Peter.

F. Peter. Come, I have found you out a stand most fit,
Where you may have such vantage on the duke,
He shall not pass you; Twice have the trumpets
The generous and gravest citizens [sounded;
Have hent the gates, and very near upon
The duke is ent'ring; therefore hence, away.

[Exeunt.

Act Fifth.

SCENE I.

A PUBLIC PLACE NEAR THE CITY GATE.

Mariana (veil'd), Isabella, and Peter, at a distance. Enter at opposite doors, Duke,
Varrius, Lords; Angelo, Escalus, Lucio,
Provost, Officers, and Citizens.

Duke. My very worthy cousin, fairly met:—
Our old and faithful friend, we are glad to see you.

Ang. and Escal. Happy return be to your royal grace!

Duke. Many and hearty thankings to you both.
We have made inquiry of you; and we hear
Such goodness of your justice, that our soul
Cannot but yield you forth to public thanks,
For running more requital.

Ang. You make my bonds still greater.

Duke. O, your desert speaks loud; and I should wrong it
To lock it in the wards of covert bosom,
When it deserves with characters of brass
A forted residence, 'gainst the tooth of time,
And raze of oblivion: Give me your hand,
And let the subject see, to make them know

1 Start.  2 Nobles.  3 Crowded.

That outward courtesies would fain proclaim
Favours that keep within.—Come, Escalus:
You must walk by us on our other hand:—
And good supporters are you.

Peter and Isabella come forward.

F. Peter. Now, is your time; speak loud, and kneel before him.

Isa. Justice, O royal duke! Vail your regard
Upon a wrong'd, I'd fain have said, a maid!
A worthy prince, dishonour not your eye
By throwing it on any other object,
Till you have heard me in my true complaint,
And given me justice, justice, justice, justice!

Duke. Relate your wrongs: In what? By whom!
Be brief:
Here is lord Angelo shall give you justice;
Reveal yourself to him.

Isab. O, worthy duke,
You bid me seek redemption of the devil:
Hear me yourself; for that which I must speak
Must either punish me, not being believ'd, [here,
Or wring redress from you: hear me, O hear me,
A. My lord, her wits, I fear me, are not firm:
She hath been a suitor to me for her brother,
Cut off by course of justice!

Isab. By course of justice!

Ang. And she will speak most bitterly and strange, [speak:

Isab. Most strange, but yet most truly will I
That Angelo's forswn, is it not strange?
That Angelo’s a murderer, is’t not strange?
That Angelo is an adulterous thief,
An hypocrite, a virgin-violator;
Is it not strange, and strange?

Duke. Nay, ten times strange!

Isab. It is not truer he is Angelo,
Than this is all as true as it is strange:
Nay, it is ten times true; for truth is truth
To the end of reckoning.

Duke. Away with her; Poor soul,
She speaks this in the infirmity of sense.

Isab. O prince, I conjure thee, as thou believest
There is another comfort than this world,
That thou neglect me not, with that opinion
That I am touch'd with madness: make not impossible
That which but seems unlike: 'tis not impossible,
But one the wicked'st caitiff on the ground,
May seem as shy, as grave, as just, as absolute,
As Angelo; even so may Angelo,
In all his dressings,2 characts, titles, forms,
Be an arch-villain: believe it, royal prince,
If he be less, he's nothing; but he's more,
Had I more name for badness.

Duke. By mine honesty,
If she be mad (as I believe no other),
Her madness hath the oddest frame of sense,
Such a dependency of thing on thing,
As e'er I heard in madness.

Isab. O, gracious duke,
Har prepare not on that, nor do not banish reason
For inequality: but let your reason serve
To make the truth appear, where it seems hid;
And hide the false, seems true.

Duke. Many that are not mad, [say?
Have sure more lack of reason. What would you
SC. 2.

MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

111

Isab. I am the sister of one Claudio,
Condemn'd upon the law of fornication,
To lose his head; condemn'd by Angelo!
I, in probation of a sisterhood,
Was sent to by my brother: one Lucio
Was then the messenger;—

Lucio. That's I, as't like your grace;
I came to her from Claudio, and desired her
To try her gracious fortune with lord Angelo,
For her poor brother's pardon.

Isab. That's he indeed.

Lucio. Right.

Duke. The warrant's for yourself; take heed to't.

Isab. This gentleman told somewhat of my tale.

Lucio. It may be right; but you are in the wrong
To speak before your time.—Proceed.

Isab. I went to this pernicious caitiff deputy.

Duke. That's somewhat madly spoken.

Isab. Pardon it;

The phrase is to the matter.

Isab. O, that it were as like as it is true!

Duke. By heaven, fond wretch, thou know'st
Not what thou speakest?

Or else thou art suborn'd against his honour,
In hateful practice: First, his integrity (reason,
Stands without blemish:—next, it imports no
That with such vehemency he should pursue
Faults proper to himself: if he had so offended,
He would have weigh'd thy brother by himself,
And not have cut him off: some one hath set you Confess the truth, and say by whose advice (on)
Thou cam'st here to complain.

Isab. And is this all?

Then, oh, you blessed ministers above,
Keep me in patience; and, with ripen'd time,
Unfold the evil which is here wrapt up (woe,
In countenance! Heaven shield your grace from
As I, thus wrong'd, hence unbeliev'd.

Duke. I know you'd faint be gone:—An officer!
To prison with her:—Shall we thus permit
A blasting and a scandalous breath to fall
On him so near us? This needs must be a practice.

Who knew of your intent, and coming hither?

1. That I would were here, friar Lodovick.

2. Refuted.

3. Pity.

4. Foolish.

Duke. A ghostly father, belike.—Who knows that Lodovick?

L. My lord, I know him: 'tis a meddling friar;
I do not like the man: he had been lay, my lord,
For certain words he spoke against your grace
In your retirement, I had swing'd him soundly.

D. Words against me? This a good friar, be—
And to set on this wretched woman here [like!]
Against our substitute!—Let this friar be found.

L. But yesternight, my lord, she and that friar
I saw them at the prison: a saucy friar,
A very scurrilous fellow.

F. Peter. Blessed be your royal grace!
I have stood by, my lord, and I have heard
Your royal ear abus'd: First, hath this woman
Most wrongfully accus'd your substitute;
Who is as free from touch or guilt with her
As she from one unborn.

Duke. We did believe no less.

Know you that friar Lodovick that she speaks of?

F. Pet. I know him for a man divine and holy:
Not scurril, nor a temporary3 meddler,
As he's reported by this gentleman;
And, on my trust, a man that never yet,
Did, as he vouches, misreport your grace.

Lucio. My lord, most villainously! believe it.

F. Peter. Well, he in time may come to clear
But at this instant he is sick, my lord, [himself]
Of a strange fever: Upon his mere request (Being come to knowledge that there was complain
Intended against lord Angelo), came I hither,
To speak, as from his mouth, what he doth know
Is true, and false; and what he with his oath,
And all probition, will make up full clear,
Whensoever he's convented.4 First, for this
(To justify this worthy nobleman, [woman;]
So vulgarly3 and personally accus'd.)
Her shall you hear disproved to her eyes,
Till she herself confess it.

Duke. Good friar, let's hear it.

[Isabella is carried off, guarded; and Mariana comes forward.

Duke. Do you not smile at this, lord Angelo?—
O heaven! the vanity of wretched fools!
Give us some seats.—Come, cousin Angelo,
In this I'll be impartial; be you judge
Of your own cause.—Is this the witness, friar?
First, let her show her face; and, after, speak.

Mari. Pardon, my lord; I will not show my Until my husband bid me. [face

Duke. What, are you married?

Mari. No, my lord.

Duke. Are you a maid?

Mari. No, my lord.

Duke. A widow then?

Mari. Neither, my lord.

Duke. Why, you [wife?
Are nothing then?—Neither maid, widow, nor
Mar. My lord, I do confess I ne'er was married;
And I confess, besides, I am no maid:
I have known my husband; yet my husband
That ever he knew me. [knows not

Lucio. He was drunk, then, my lord; it can be no better. [wont so too!

Duke. For the benefit of silence, would thou

1. Layman.

2. Temporal.

3. Foolish.

4. Publicly.
Lucio. Well, my lord.

Duke. This is no witness for Lord Angelo.

Mari. Now I come to't, my lord: She that accuses him of fornication, In selfsame manner doth accuse my husband, And charges him, my lord, with such a time, When I'll depose I had him in mine arms.

Ang. Charges she more than me?

Mari. Not that I know.

Duke. No? you say your husband?

Mari. Why, just my lord, and that is Angelo.

A. This is a strange abuse!—Let's see thy face.

Mar. My husband bids me; now I will unmask.

[Unveiling.]

This is that face, thou cruel Angelo, [on] Which once thou swor'st was worth the looking This is the hand, which, with a vow'd contract, Was fast belock'd in thine: and this is she That took away the match from Isabel, And did supply thee at thy garden-house, In her imagin'd person.

Duke. Know you this woman?

A. My lord, I must confess, I know this woman; And, five years since, there was some speech of marriage Betwixt myself and her; which was broke off, Partly, for that her promised proportions Came short of composition; but in chief, For that her reputation was disvalued In levity: since which time, of five years, [her] I never spake with her, saw her, nor heard from Upon my faith and honour.

Mari. Noble prince, [breath, As there comes light from heaven, and words from As there is sense in truth, and truth in virtue, I am affiancé'd this man's wife, as strongly [lord, As words could make up vows; and, my good But Tuesday night last gone, in his garden-house, He knew me as a wife: As this is true Let me in safety raise me from my knees, Or else for ever be confixed here, A marble monument!

Ang. I did but smile till now: Now, good my lord, give me the scope of justice; My patience here is touch'd: I do perceive, These poor informal women are no more But instruments of some more mightier member, That sets them on: Let me have way, my lord, To find this practice out.

Duke. Ay, with my heart; And punish them unto your height of pleasure.— Thou foolish friar; and thou pernicious woman, Compact with her that's gone! think'st thou thy oaths, [saint, Though they would swear down each particular Were testimonies against his worth and credit, That's seal'd in approbation?—You, lord Escalus, Sit with my cousin; lend him your kind pains To find out this abuse, whence 'tis derived. —There is another friar that set them on: Let him be sent for, [indeed, F. Peter. Would he were here, my lord; for he, Hath set the women on to this complaint: Your provost knows the place where he abides, And he may fetch him.

Duke. Go do it instantly.— [Exit Provost. And you, my noble, and well-warranted cousin, Whom it concerns to hear this matter forth, Do with your injuries as seems you best, In any chastisement: I for a while. [well Will leave you; but stir not you, till you have Determined upon these slanderers.

Escal. My lord, we'll do it thoroughly.—[Exit Duke.] Signior Lucio, did not you say, you knew that friar Lodovick to be a dishonest person? Lucio. Cuculius non facit monachum: honest in nothing but in his clothes; and one that hath spoke most villainous speeches of the duke.

Escal. We shall entreat you to abide here till he come, and enforce them against him: we shall find this friar a notable fellow.

Lucio. As any in Vienna, on my word.

Escal. Call that same Isabel here once again; [To an Attendant.] I would speak with her: Pray you, my lord, give me leave to question; you shall see how I'll handle her.

Re-enter Officers, with Isabella; the Duke in the Friar's habit, and Provost.

Escal. Come on, mistress; [To Isabella.] here's a gentlewoman denies all that you have said. Lucio. My lord, here comes the rascal I spoke of; here, with the provost.

Escal. In very good time:—speak not you to him, till we call upon you.

Lucio. Mum.

Escal. Come, sir; did you set these women on to slander lord Angelo? they have confess'd you did.

Duke. 'Tis false.

Escal. How! know you where you are?

Duke. Where is the duke? 'tis he should hear me speak. [speak:

Escal. The duke's in us; and we will hear you Look, you speak justly.

Duke. Boldly, at least:—But, O, poor souls, Come you to seek the lamb here of the fox? Good night to your redress. Is the duke gone? Then is your cause gone too. The duke's unjust, Thus to retort your manifest appeal, And put your trial in the villain's mouth, Which here you come to accuse.

Lucio. This is the rascal; this is he I spoke of. Escal. Why, thou unrevenged and unhallow'd friar? [women, Is't not enough that thou hast suborn'd these To accuse this worthy man; but in foul mouth, And in the witness of his proper ear, To call him villain?

And then to glance from him to the duke himself; To tax him with injustice?—Take him hence; To the rack with him:—We'll touze you joint by joint,

But we will know this purpose:—What! unjust? Duke. Be not so hot; the duke Dare no more stretch this finger of mine, than he Dare rack his own; his subject am I not, Nor have I provincial: My business in this state, Made me a looker-on here in Vienna, Where I have seen corruption boil and bubble, Till it o'er-run the stew: laws for all faults; But faults so countenanc'd, that the strong statutes Stand like the forfeits in a barber's shop, As much in mock as mark.
SC. I.

MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

Escala. Slander to the state! Away with him to prison.

Duke. What can you vouch against him, signior? Is this the man that you did tell us of? [Lucio! Lucio. 'Tis he, my lord. Come hither, good- man bald-pate: Do you know me?

Duke. I remember you, sir, by the sound of your voice: I met you at the prison in the absence of the duke.

Lucio. O, did you so? And do you remember what you said of the duke?

Duke. Most notably, sir.

Lucio. Do you so, sir? And was the duke a fleshmonger, a fool, and a coward, as you then reported him to be?

Duke. You must, sir, change persons with me, ere you make that my report: you, indeed, spoke of him: and much more, much worse.

Lucio. Thou fellow! Did not I pluck thee by the nose for thy speeches?

Duke. Why, thou bald-pated, lying rascal! you must be hooded, must you? Show your knave's visage! Show your sheep-biting face, and be hang'd an hour! Will 't not off?

Lucio. Such a fellow is not to be talked withal:—Away with him to prison. Where is the provost?—Away with him to prison; lay bolts enough upon him; let him speak no more. Away with those giglotes, too, and with the other confederate companion.

[The Provost lays hands on the Duke.]

Duke. Stay, sir; stay awhile.

Ang. What! resist he? Help him, Lucio.

Lucio. Come, sir; come, sir; come, sir; foh, sir: Why, you bald-pated, lying rascal! you must be hooded, must you? Show your knave's visage! Show your sheep-biting face, and be hang'd an hour! Will 't not off?

Escala. [Pulls off the Friar's hood & discovers the Duke.]

Duke. Thou art the first knave that e'er made a duke,—

First, provost, let me bail these gentle three:—Sneak not away, sir: [To Lucio.] for the friar and you Must have a word anon:—Lay hold on him.

Lucio. This may prove worse than hanging.

Duke. What you have spoke, I pardon; sit you down.—

[To Escalus.

We'll borrow place of him:—Sir, by your leave:

[To Angelo.

Ang. O my dread lord, I should be guiltier than my guiltiness, To think I can be indiscernible, When I perceive your grace, like power divine, Hath look'd on my passages: Then good prince, No longer session hold upon my shame, But let my trial be mine own confession; Immediate sentence then, and sequent death, Is all the grace I beg.

Duke. Come hither, Mariana?—

Ang. Say, wast thou e'er contracted to this woman? [Ang. I was, my lord.

Duke. Go, take her hence, and marry her instantly.

Do you the office, friar; which consummate, Return him here again:—Go with him, provost. [Exeunt Angelo, Mariana, Peter, and Provost. Escal. My lord, I am more amazed at his Than at the strangeness of it. [dishonour, Duke. Come hither, Isabel: Your friar is now your prince: As I was then Advertising, and holy to your business, Not changing heart with habit, I am still Attorney'd at your service.

Isab. O give me pardon,

That I, your vassal, have employ'd and pain'd Your unknown sovereignty.

Duke. You are pardon'd, Isabel: And now, dear maid, be you as free to us. Your brother's death, I know, sits at your heart; And you may marvel why I obscure'd myself, Labouring to save his life; and would not rather Make rash remonstrance of my hidden power, Than let him be so lost: O, most kind maid, It was the swift celerity of his death, Which I did think with slower foot came on, That brain'd my purpose: But peace be with That life is better life, past fearing death, [him! Than that which lives to fear: make it your So happy is your brother. [comfort, Re-enter Angelo, Mariana, Peter, and Provost. Isab. I do, my lord.

Duke. You do but lose your labour; Away with him to death.—[To Lucio.] Now, sir, to you.
M. O, my good lord!—Sweet Isabel, take my part;
Lend me your knees, and all my life to come.
I'll lend you all my life to do you service.

Duke. Against all sense you do importune her:
Should she kneel down, in mercy of this fact,
Her brother's ghost his paved bed would break,
And take her hence in horror.

Mar. Isabel, Isabel, Sweet Isabel, do yet but kneel by me;
Hold up your hands; say nothing; I'll speak all.
They say, best men are moulded out of faults;
And, for the most, become much more the better
For being a little bad: so may my husband.
O, Isabel! will you not lend a knee?

Duke. He dies for Claudio's death.

Isa. Most bounteous sir, (Kneeling.
Look if it please you, on this man condemn'd,
As if my brother liv'd: I partly think,
A due sincerity govern'd his deeds,
Till he did look on me; since it is so,
Let him not die: My brother had but justice,
In that he did the thing for which he died:
For Angelo,
His act did not o'ertake his bad intent,
And must be buried but as an intent
That perish'd by the way: thoughts are no subjects;

Intents but merely thoughts.

Mar. Merely, my lord.
D. Your suit's unprofitable; stand up, Isay.—
I have bethought me of another fault:—
Provost, how came it, Claudio was beheaded
At an unusual hour?

Prov. It was commanded so.

Duke. Had you a special warrant for the deed?
P. No, my good lord: it was by private message.
D. For which I do discharge you of your office:
Give up your keys.

Prov. Pardon me, noble lord:
I thought it was a fault, but knew it not;
Yet did repent me after more advice:¹
For testimony whereof, one in the prison,
That should by private order else have died,
I have reserv'd alive.

Duke. What's he?

Prov. His name is Barnardine.
D. I would thou hadst done so by Claudio.—
Go, fetch him hither; let me look upon him.

[Exit Provost.

Escal. I am sorry one so learned and so wise
As you, lord Angelo, have still appear'd
Should slip so grossly, both in the heat of blood,
And lack of temper'd judgment afterward.

Ang. I am sorry, that such sorrow I procure:
And so deep sticks it in my penitent heart,
That I crave death more willingly than mercy;
'Tis my deserving, and I do entreat it.

Re-enter Provost, Barnardine, Claudio, and Juliet.

Duke. Which is that Barnardine?

Prov. This, my lord.

Duke. There was a friar told me of this man.
Sirrah, thou art said to have a stubborn soul,
That apprehends no further than this world,

1 Consideration.

And squar'st thy life according. Thou'rt condemn'd;
But, for those earthly faults I quit them all;
And pray thee, take this mercy to provide
For better times to come:—Friar, advise him;
I leave him to your hand. —What muffled fellow's that?

Prov. This is another prisoner that I sav'd,
That should have died when Claudio lost his head;

As like almost to Claudio as himself.

[Unmuffles Claudio.

Duke. If he be like your brother, [To Isabel.] for his sake

Is he pardon'd; and for your lovely sake,
Give me your hand, and say you will be mine,
He is my brother too: But fitter time for that.
By this lord Angelo perceiveth he's safe;
Methinks, I see a quick'nig in his eye:—
Well, Angelo, your evil quits! you well:
Look that you love your wife; her worth, worth
I find an apt remission in myself: (yours.—
And yet here's one in place I cannot pardon:
You, sirrah, [To Lucio.] that knew me for a fool,
a coward,
One all of luxury, an ass, a madman;
Wherein have I so deserved of you,
That you extol me thus?

Lucio. Faith, my lord, I spoke it but according to the trick: If you will hang me for it,
you may, but I had rather it would please you,
I might be whipp'd.

Duke. Whipp'd first, sir, and hang'd after.

Proclaim it, provost, round about the city;
If any woman's wrong'd by this lewd fellow,
(As I have heard him swear himself, there's one),
Let her appear, and he shall marry her:
The nuptial finish'd, let him be whipp'd and hang'd.

Lucio. I beseech your highness, do not marry me so. Your highness said even now, I made you a duke; good my lord, do not recompense me
so.

Duke. Upon mine honour, thou shalt marry her.
Thy slanderers I forgive; and therewithal
Remit thy other forfeits.—Take him to prison:
And see our pleasure herein executed.

Lucio. Marrying me so, my lord, is pressing to death, whipping, and hanging.

Duke. Stand! A prince deserves it.—
She, Claudio, that you wrong'd, look you restore.
Joy to you, Mariana! love her, Angelo;
I have confess'd her, and I know her virtue;
Thanking good friend Escalus, for thy much goodness:
There's more behind, that is more gratulate,
Thanks, provost, for thy care and secrecy;
We shall employ thee in a worthier place:—
Forgive him, Angelo, that brought you home
The head of Ragozine for Claudio's;
The offence pardons itself.—Dear Isabel,
I have a motion much imports your good;
Whereto if you'll a willing ear incline,
What's mine is yours, and what is yours mine:
So bring us to our palace; where we'll show
What's yet behind, that's meet you all should know.

[Exeunt.

Act First.

SCENE I.—BEFORE LEONATO’S HOUSE.

Enter Leonato, Hero, Beatrice, and others, with a Messenger.

Leon. I learn in this letter, that Don Pedro of Aragon comes this night to Messina.

Mess. He is very near by this; he was not three leagues off when I left him.

Leon. How many gentlemen have you lost in this action?

Mess. But few of any sort, and none of name.

Leon. A victory is twice itself, when the achiever brings home full numbers. I find here, that Don Pedro hath bestowed much honour on a young Florentine, called Claudio.

Mess. Much deserved on his part, and equally remembered by Don Pedro: He hath borne himself beyond the promise of his age; doing, in the figure of a lamb, the feats of a lion: he hath, indeed, better bettered expectation, than you must expect of me to tell you how.

Leon. He hath an uncle here in Messina will be very much glad of it.

Mess. I have already delivered him letters, and there appears much joy in him; even so much, that joy could not show itself modest enough, without a badge of bitterness.

Leon. Did he break out into tears?

Mess. In great measure.

Leon. A kind overflow of kindness: There are no faces truer than those that are so washed. How much better is it to weep at joy, than to joy at weeping.

Beat. I pray you, is signior Montanto returned from the wars, or no?

Mess. I know none of that name, lady; there was none such in the army of any sort.

Leon. What is he that you ask for, niece? My cousin means signior Benedick of Padua.

Mess. O, he is returned; and as pleasant as ever he was.

Beat. He set up his bills here in Messina, and challenged Cupid at the flight; and my uncle’s fool, reading the challenge, subscribed for Cupid, and challenged him at the bird-bolt.—I pray you, how many hath he killed and eaten in these wars? But how many hath he killed? for, indeed, I promised to eat all of his killing.

L. Faith, niece, you tax signior Benedick too much; but he’ll be meet with you, I doubt it not.

Mess. He hath done good service, lady, in these wars.

Beat. You had musty victual, and he hath help to eat it: he is a very valiant treacher-man, he hath an excellent stomach.

Mess. And a good soldier too, lady.

Beat. And a good soldier to a lady. — But what is he to a lord?

Mess. A lord to a lord, a man to a man, stuffed with all honourable virtues.

Beat. It is so, indeed, he is no less than a stuffed man but for the stuffing. — Well, we are all mortal.

Leon. You must not, sir, mistake my niece; there is a kind of merry war betwixt signior Benedick and her; they never meet, but there is a skirmish of wit between them.

Beat. Alas, he gets nothing by that. In our last conflict, four of his five wits went halting off, and now is the whole man governed with one: so that if he have wit enough to keep himself warm, let him bear it for a difference between himself and his horse: for it is all the wealth that he hath left, to be known a reasonable creature. — Who is his companion now? He hath every month a new sworn brother.

Mess. Is it possible?

Beat. Very easily possible: he wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat; it ever changes with the next block.

Mess. I see, lady, the gentleman is not in your books.

Beat. No: an he were, I would burn my study. But, I pray you, who is his companion? Is there no young squarer? I now, that will make a voyage with him to the devil?
Mess. He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio.

Beat. He will hang upon him like a disease; he is sooner caught than the pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. Heaven help the noble Claudio! if he have caught the Benedick, it will cost him a thousand pound ere he be cured. Mess. I will hold friends with you, lady.

Beat. Do, good friend.

Leon. You will never run mad, niece.

Beat. No, not till a hot January.

Mess. Don Pedro is approached.

Enter Don Pedro, attended by Balthasar and others, Don John, Claudio, and Benedick.

D. Pedro. Good signior Leonato, you are come to meet your trouble: the fashion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter it.

Leon. Never came trouble to my house in the likeness of your grace: for trouble being gone, comfort should remain: but, when you depart from me, sorrow abides, and happiness takes his leave.

D. Pedro. You embrace your charge too willingly.—I think this is your daughter.

Leon. Her mother hath many times told me so.

Be. Were you in doubt, sir, that you asked her?

Leon. Signior Benedick, no; for then were you a child.

D. Pedro. You have it full, Benedick: we may guess by this what you are, being a man. Truly, the lady fathers herself: Be happy, lady! for you are like an honourable father.

Bene. If signior Leonato be her father, she would not have his head on her shoulders for all Messina, as like him as she is.

Beat. I wonder that you will still be talking, signior Benedick: nobody marks you.

Bene. What, my dear lady Disdain! are you yet living?

Beat. Is it possible, disdain should die, while she hath such meet food to feed it as signior Benedick? Courtesy itself must convert to disdain, if you come in her presence.

Bene. Then is courtesy a turncoat:—But it is certain, I am loved of all ladies, only you excepted; and I would I could find in my heart that I had not a hard heart; for, truly, I love none.

Beat. A dear happiness to women; they would else have been troubled with a pernicious suitor, I am of your humour for that; I had rather hear my dog bark at a crow, than a man swear he loves me.

Bene. Heaven keep your ladyship still in that mind! so some gentleman or other shall scape a predestinate scratched face.

Beat. Scratching could not make it worse, an 'twere such a face as yours were.

Bene. Well, you are a rare parrot-teacher.

Beat. A bird of my tongue is better than a beast of yours.

Bene. I would my horse had the speed of your tongue; and so good a continuer: But keep your way; I have done.

Beat. You always end with a jade's trick; I know you of old.

D. Pedro. This is the sum of all: Don John,—signior Claudio, and signior Benedick,—my dear friend Leonato hath invited you all. I tell him, we shall stay here at the least a month; and he heartily prays some occasion may detain us longer; I dare swear he is no hypocrite, but prays from his heart.

Leon. If you swear, my lord, you shall not be forsworn.—Let me bid you welcome, my lord: being reconciled to the prince your brother, I owe you all duty.

D. John. I thank you; I am not of many words, but I thank you.

Leon. Please it your grace lead on?

D. Pedro. Your hand, Leonato; we will go together. [Exeunt all but Benedick and Claudio.

Claud. Benedick, didst thou note the daughter of signior Leonato?

Bene. I noted her not; but I looked on her.

Claud. Is she not a modest young lady?

Bene. Do you question me, as an honest man should do, for my simple true judgment; or would you have me speak after my custom, as being a professed tyrant to their sex?

Claud. No, I pray thee, speak in sober judgment.

Bene. Why, I faith, methinks she is too low for a high praise, too brown for a fair praise, and too little for a great praise: only this commendation I can afford her; that she were other than she is, she were unhandsome; and being no other but as she is, I do not like her.

Claud. Thou think'st I am in sport; I pray thee, tell me truly how thou likest her.

Bene. Would you buy her, that you inquire after her?

Claud. Can the world buy such a jewel?

Bene. Yea, and a case to put it into. But speak you this with a sad brow? or do you play the flouting Jack; to tell us Cupid is a good hare-founder, and Vulcan a rare carpenter? Come, in what key shall a man take you, to go in the song?

Claud. In mine eye, she is the sweetest lady that ever I look'd on.

Bene. I can see yet without spectacles, and I see no such matter: there's her cousin, an she were not possessed with a fury, exceeds her as much in beauty as the first of May doth the last of December. But I hope you have no intention to turn husband, have you?

Claud. I would scarce trust myself, though I had sworn the contrary, if Hero would be my wife.

Bene. Is it come to this? Hath not the world one man, but he will wear his cap with suspicion? Shall I never see a bachelor of first-score again? Go to; and thou wilt needs thrust thy neck into a yoke, wear the print of it, and sigh away Sundays. Look, Don Pedro is returned to seek you.

Re-enter Don Pedro.

D. Pedro. What secret hath held you here, that you followed not to Leonato's?

Bene. I would, your grace would constrain me to tell.

D. Pedro. I charge thee, on thy allegiance. Bene. You hear, Count Claudio: I can be secret as a dumb man, I would have you think so; but on my allegiance,—mark you this, on my allegiance:—He is in love. With who?—now that is your grace's part. —Mark, how short... his answer is:—With Hero, Leonato’s short daughter.

Claud. If this were so, so were it uttered.

Bene. Like the old tale, my lord: it is not so, nor ’twas not so: but, indeed, heaven forbid it should be so.

Claud. If my passion change not shortly, heaven forbid it should be otherwise.

D. Pedro. Amen, if you love her; for the lady is very well worthy.

Claud. You speak this to fetch me, my lord.

D. Pedro. By my troth, I speak my thought.

Claud. And, in faith, my lord, I spoke mine.

Bene. And, by my two faiths and troths, my lord, I spoke mine.

Claud. That I love her, I feel.

D. Pedro. That she is worthy, I know.

Bene. That I neither feel how she should be loved, nor know how she should be worthy, is the opinion that fire cannot melt out of me; I will die in it at the stake.

D. Pedro. Thou wast ever an obdurate heretic in the despite of beauty.

Claud. And never could maintain his part, but in the force of his will.

Bene. That a woman brought me up, I give her most humble thanks: but that I will have a recreant winded in my forehead, all women shall pardon me. Because I will not do them the wrong to mistrust any, I will do myself the right to trust none; and the fine is (for which I may go the finer), I will live a bachelor.

D. Pedro. I shall see thee, ere I die, look pale with love.

Bene. With anger, with sickness, or with hunger, my lord! not with love: prove, that ever I lose more blood with love, than I will get again with drinking, pick out mine eyes with a ballad-maker’s pen, and hang me up for the sign of blind Cupid.

D. Pedro. Well, if ever thou dost fall from this faith, thou wilt prove a notable argument.

Bene. If I do, hang me in a bottle like a cat, and shoot at me; and he that hits me, let him be clapped on the shoulder, and called Adam.1

D. Pedro. Well, as time shall try: in time the savage bull doth bear the yoke.

Bene. The savage bull may; but if ever the sensible Benedick bear it, pluck off the bull’s horns, and set them in my forehead: and let me be vilely painted; and in such great letters as they write, Here is good horse to hire, let them signify under my sign,—Here you may see Benedick, the married man.

Claud. If this should ever happen, thou wouldst be horn-mad.

D. Pedro. Nay, if Cupid have not spent all his quiver in Venice, thou wilt awake for this shortly.

Bene. I look for an earthquake too then.

D. Pedro. Well, you will temporeise with the hours. In the meantime, good signior Benedick, repair to Leonato’s; commend me to him, and tell him, I will not fail him at supper; for, indeed, he hath made great preparation.

Bene. I have almost matter enough in me for such an embassage; and so I commit you—

---

1 The note sounded to recall the dogs.
2 A famous archer.

Claud. To the tuition of heaven: From my house (if I had it),—

D. Pedro. The sixth of July: Your loving friend Benedick.

Bene. Nay, mock not, mock not: The body of your discourse is sometime guarded with fragments, and the guards are but slightly basted on neither; ere you flout old ends any further, examine your conscience; and so I leave you.

[Exit Benedick.]

C. Myliece, your highness now may do me good.

D. Ped. My love is thine to teach; teach it but And thou shalt see how apt it is to learn [how, Any hard lesson that may do thee good.

Claud. Hath Leonato any son, my lord?

D. Ped. No child but Hero, she’s his only heir: Dost thou affect her, Claudio?

Claud. O my lord, When you went onward on this ended action, I look’d upon her with a soldier’s eye, That lik’d, but had a rougher task in hand Than to drive liking to the name of love: But now I am return’d, and that war-thoughts Have left their places vacant, in their rooms Come thronging soft and delicate desires, All prompting me how fair young Hero is, Saying, I lik’d her ere I went to wars.

D. Pedro. Thou wilt be like a lover presently, And tire the hearer with a book of words: If thou dost love fair Hero, cherish it; And I will break with her, and with her father, And thou shalt have her: Was’t not to this end That thou began’st to twist so fine a story?

Claud. How sweetly do you minister to love, That know love’s grief by his complexion! But lest my liking might too sudden seem I would have salvd it with a longer treatise.

D. Pedro. What need the bridge much broader than the flood?

The fairest grant is the necessity: Look, what will serve, is fit: ’tis once,1 thou And I will fit thee with the remedy. [lov’st; I know we shall have revelling to-night; I will assume thy part in some disguise, And tell fair Hero I am Claudio; And in her bosom I’ll unclasp my heart, And take her hearing prisoner with the force And strong encounter of my amorous tale: Then, after, to her father will I break; And the conclusion is, she shall be thine:

In practice let us put it presently. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A ROOM IN LEONATO’S HOUSE.

Enter Leonato and Antonio.

Leon. How now, brother? Where is my cousin, your son? Hath he provided this musick?

Ant. He is very busy about it. But, brother, I can tell you strange news that you yet dreamed not of.

Leon. Are they good?

Ant. As the event stamps them; but they have a good cover, they show well outward. The prince and Count Claudio, walking in a thick-pleached2 alley in my orchard, were thus much overheard by a man of mine: The prince discovered to Claudio that he loved my niece your daughter,

1 Once for all.
2 Thickly interwoven.
SCENE III.

ANOTHER ROOM IN LEONATO’S HOUSE.

Enter Don John and Conrade.

Con. My lord! why are you thus out of measure sad?

D. John. There is no measure in the occasion that breeds it, therefore the sadness is without limit.

Con. You should hear reason.

D. John. And when I have heard it, what blessing bringeth it?

Con. If not a present remedy, yet a patient sufferance.

D. John. I wonder, that thou being (as thou say’st thou art) born under Saturn, goest about to apply a moral medicine to a mortifying mischief. I cannot hide what I am: I must be sad when I have cause, and smile at no man’s jests; eat when I have stomach, and wait for no man’s leisure; sleep when I am drowsy, and tend to no man’s business; laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humour.

Con. Yea, but you must not make the full show of this, till you may do it without controlment. You have of late stood out against your brother, and he hath ta’en you newly into his grace; where it is impossible you should take true root, but by the fair weather that you make yourself; it is needful that you frame the season for your own harvest.

D. John. I had rather be a canker in a hedge, than a rose in his grace; and it better fits my blood to be disdained of all, than to fashion a carriage to rob love from any: in this, though I cannot be said to be a flattering honest man, it must not be denied that I am a plain-dealing villain. I am trusted with a muzzle, and enfranchised with a clog; therefore I have decreed not to sing in my cage: If I had my mouth, I would bite; if I had my liberty, I would do my liking; in the mean time, let me be that I am, and seek not to alter me.

C. Can you make no use of your discontent? D. John. I make all use of it, for I use it only. Who comes here? What news, Borachio?

Enter Borachio.

Bor. I came yonder from a great supper; the prince, your brother, is royally entertained by 1 Flatter.
Leon. Well, niece, I hope to see you one day fitted with a husband.

Beat. Not till men are made of some other metal than earth. Would it not grieve a woman to be overmaster'd with a piece of valiant dust? to make an account of her life to a clod of wayward marl? No, uncle; I'll none; Adam's sons are my brethren; and truly, I hold it a sin to match in my kindred.

Leon. Daughter, remember what I told you: if the prince do solicit you in that kind, you know your answer.

Beat. The fault will be in the musick, cousin, if you be not woo'd in good time: if the prince be too important, tell him, there is measure in everything, and so dance out the answer. For hear me, Hero; wooing, wedding, and repenting is as a Scotch jig, a measure, and a cinquepace: the first suit is hot and hasty, like a Scotch jig, and full as fantastical; the wedding, mannerly-modest, as a measure full of state and antiquity; and then comes repentance, and, with his bad legs, falls into the cinquepace faster and faster, till he sink into his grave.

L. Cousin, you apprehend passing shrewdly.

Beat. I have a good eye, uncle; I can see a church by daylight.

Leon. The revellers are entering; brother, make good room.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, Balthasar; Don John, Borachio, Margaret, Ursula, and others, masked.

D. Pedro. Lady, will you walk about with your friend?

Hero. So you walk softly, and look sweetly, and say nothing, I am yours for the walk; and, especially, when I walk away.

D. Pedro. With me in your company?

Hero. I may say so, when I please.

D. Pedro. And when please you to say so?

Hero. When I like your favour; for heaven forbid the lute should be like the case!

D. Pedro. My visor is Philemon's roof; within the house is Jove.

Hero. Why, then your visor should be thatch'd.

D. Pedro. Speak low, if you speak love.

[Takes her aside.

Urs. I know you well enough; you are signior Antonio.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. I know you by the wagging of your head.

Ant. To tell you true, I counterfeit it.

Urs. You could never do him so ill-well, unless you were the very man: Here's his dry hand up and down; you are he, you are he.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. Come, come; do you think I do not know you by your excellent wit? Can virtue hide itself? Go to, mum, you are he: grace will appear, and there's an end.

Beat. Will you not tell me who told you so?

Bene. No, you shall pardon me.

Beat. Nor will you not tell me who you are?

Bene. Not now.

Beat. That I was disdainful,—and that I had

1 importunate. 2 A slow dance.

my good wit out of the Hundred Merry Tales—

——Well, this was Signior Benedick that said so.

Bene. What's he?

Beat. I am sure, you know him well enough.

Bene. Not I, believe me.

Beat. Did he never make you laugh?

Bene. I pray you, what is he?

Beat. Why, he is the prince's jester; a very dull fool; only his gift is in devising impossible slanders; few delight in him; and the commendation is not in his wit, but in his villainy; for he both pleases men and angers them; and then they laugh at him and beat him.

Bene. When I know the gentleman, I'll tell him what you say.

Beat. Do, do; he'll but break a comparison or two on me; which, peradventure, not marked, or not laughed at, strikes him into melancholy; and then there's a partridge wing saved, for the fool will eat no supper that night. [Musick within.] We must follow the leaders.

Bene. In every good thing.

Beat. Nay, if they lead to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning.

[Dance. Then exeunt all but Don John, Borachio, and Claudio.

D. John. Sure, my brother is amorous on Hero, and hath withdrawn her father to break with him about it: The ladies follow her, and but one visor remains.

Boro. And that is Claudio; I know him by his bearing.

D. John. Are you not signior Benedick?

Claud. You know me well; I am he.

D. John. Signior, you are very near my brother in his love; he is enamoured on Hero; I pray you, dissuade him from her, she is no equal for his birth; you may do the part of an honest man in it.

Claud. How know you he loves her?

D. John. I heard him swear his affection.

Boro. So did I too; and he swore he would marry her to-night.

D. John. Come, let us to the banquet.

[Exeunt Don John and Borachio.

Claud. Thus answer I in name of Benedick, but bear these ill news with the ears of Claudio,—

'Tis certain so:—the prince woes for himself. Friendship is constant in all other things; Save in the office and affairs of love; Therefore, all hearts in love use their own tongues; Let every eye negotiate for itself, And trust no agent; for beauty is a witch, Against whose charms faith melteth into blood. This is an accident of hourly proof, Which I mistrusted not: Farewell, therefore, Hero!]

Re-enter Benedick.

Bene. Count Claudio?

Claud. Yea, the same.

Bene. Come, will you go with me?

Claud. Whither?

Bene. Even to the next willow, about your own business, count. What fashion will you wear the garland of? About your neck, like an usurer's chain? or under your arm, like a lieutenant's scarf? You must wear it one way, for the prince hath got your Hero.

Clau. I wish him joy of her.

Bene. Why, that's spoken like an honest drover, so they sell bullocks. But did you think, the prince would have served you thus?

Clau. I pray you, leave me.

Bene. Ho! now you strike like the blind man; 'twas the boy that stole your meat, and you'll beat the post.

C. If it will not be, I'll leave you. [Exit.

Bene. Alas, poor hurt fowl! Now will he creep into sedges.—But, that my lady Beatrice should know me, and not know me! The prince's fool!—Ha, it may be, I go under that title, because I am merry.—Yea; but so; I am apt to do myself wrong: I am not so reputed: it is the base, the bitter disposition of Beatrice, that puts the world into her person, and so gives me out. Well, I'll be revenged as I may.

Re-enter Don Pedro.

D. Pedro. Now, signior, where's the count? Did you see him?

Bene. Troth, my lord, I have played the part of lady Fame. I found him here as melancholy as a lodge in a warren; I told him, and, I think, I told him true, that your grace had got the good will of this young lady; and I offered him my company to a willow-tree, either to make him a garland, as being forsaken, or to bind him up a rod, as being worthy to be whipped.

D. Pedro. To be whipped! What's his fault?

Bene. The flat transgression of a school-boy; who, being overjoyed with finding a bird's nest, shows it his companion, and he steals it.

D. Pedro. Wilt thou make a tryst a transgression? The transgression is in the stealer.

Bene. Yet it had not been amiss, the rod had been made, and the garland too; for the garland he might have worn himself; and the rod he might have bestowed on you, who, as I take it, have stole't his bird's nest.

D. Pedro. I will but teach them to sing, and restore them to the owner.

Bene. If their singing answer your saying, by my faith, you say honestly.

D. Pedro. The lady Beatrice hath a quarrel to you; the gentleman that danced with her, told her, she is much wronged by you.

Bene. O, she misused me past the endurance of a block; an oak, but with one green leaf on it, would have answered her; my very visor began to assume life, and scold with her. She told me, not thinking I had been myself, that I was the prince's jester; that I was droller than a great thaw; huddling jest upon jest, with such impossible conveyance, upon me, that I stood like a man at a mark, with a whole army shooting at me: She speaks poniards, and every word stabs; she would have made Hercules have turned spit; yea, and have cleft his club to make the fire too. Come, talk not of her; you will find her Até in good apparel. Come, talk not of her.

Re-enter Claudio, Beatrice, Leonata, and Hero.

D. Pedro. Look, here she comes.
SCENE I.
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING. 121

Leon. niece, will you look to those things I told you of?
Beat. I cry you mercy, uncle.—By your grace’s pardon.

D. Ped. By my troth, a pleasant-spirited lady.
Leon. There’s little of the melancholy element in her, my lord: she is never sad, but when she sleeps: and not ever sad then; for I have heard my daughter say, she hath often dreamed of unhappiness, and waked herself with laughing.
D. Pedro. She cannot endure to hear tell of a husband.
Leon. O, by no means; she mocks all her wooers out of suit.
D. P. She were an excellent wife for Benedick.
Leon. O, my lord, if they were but a week married, they would talk themselves mad.
D. Pedro. Count Claudio, when mean you to go to church?
Claud. To-morrow, my lord: Time goes on crutches, till love have all his rites.
Leon. Not till Monday, my dear son, which is hence a just seven-night; and a time too brief too, to have all things answer my mind.
D. Pedro. Come, you shake the head at so long a breathing; but, I warrant thee, Claudio, the time shall not go dully by us; I will, in the interim, undertake one of Hercules’ labours; which is, to bring signior Benedick and the lady Beatrice into a mountain of affection, the one with the other. I would fain have it a match; and I doubt not but to fashion it, if you three will but minister such assistance as I shall give you direction.
Leon. My lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights’ watchings.
Claud. And I, my lord.
D. Pedro. And you too, gentle Hero?
Hero. I will do any modest office, my lord, to help my cousin to a good husband.
D. Pedro. And Benedick is not the unhopefullest husband that I know: thus far can I praise him; he is of a noble strain 1 of approved valour and confirmed honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cousin, that she shall fall in love with Benedick:—and I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedick, that, in spite of his quick wit and his quassy 2 stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice. If we can do this, Cupid is no longer an archer; his glory shall be ours, for we are the only love-gods. Go in with me, and I will tell you my drift. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.
ANOTHER ROOM IN LEONATO’S HOUSE.

Enter Don John and Borachio.

D. John. It is so; the Count Claudio shall marry the daughter of Leonato.
Borach. Yes, my lord; but I can cross it.
D. John. Any bar, any cross, any impediment will be medicinable to me: I am sick in displeasure to him; and whatsoever comes athwart his affection, ranges evenly with mine. How causeth thou this marriage?
Borach. Not honestly, my lord; but so covertly that no dishonestly shall appear in me.

D. John. Show me briefly how.
Borach. I think, I told your lordship, a year since, how much I am in the favour of Margaret, the waiting-gentlewoman to Hero.
Borach. I can, at any unseasonable instant of the night, appoint her to look out at her lady’s chamber window.
D. John. What life is in that to be the death of this marriage?
Borach. The poison of that lies in you to temper. Go you to the prince your brother; spare not to tell him, that he hath wronged his honour in marrying the renowned Claudio (whose estimation do you mightily hold up) to a contaminated person, such a one as Hero.
D. John. What proof shall I make of that?
Borach. Proof enough to misuse the prince, to vex Claudio, to undo Hero, and kill Leonato: Look you for any other issue?
D. John. Only to despite them, I will endeavour any thing.
Borach. Go, then, find me a meet hour to draw Don Pedro and the Count Claudio, alone: tell them, that you know that Hero loves me; intend a kind of zeal both to the prince and Claudio, as—in love of your brother’s honour who hath made this match; and his friend’s reputation, who is thus like to be cozened 3 with the semblance of a maid,—that you have discovered thus. They will scarcely believe this without trial: offer them instances; which shall bear no less likelihood, than to see me at her chamber-window; hear me call Margaret, Hero; hear Margaret term me Borachio; and bring them to see this, the very night before the intended wedding: for, in the mean time, I will so fashion the matter, that Hero shall be absent; and there shall appear such seeming truth of Hero’s disloyalty, that jealousy shall be call’d assurance, and all the preparation overturned.
D. John. Grow this to what adverse issue it can, I will put it in practice: Be cunning in the working this, and thy fee is a thousand ducats.
Borach. Be you constant in the accusation, and my cunning shall not shame me.
D. John. I will presently go learn their day of marriage.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—LEONATO’S GARDEN.

Enter Benedick and a Boy.

Bene. Boy,—
Boy. Signior.
Ben. In my chamber-window lies a book; bring it hither to me in the orchard.
Boy. I am here already, sir.
Bene. I know that;—but I would have thee hence, and here again. [Exeunt Boy.]—I do much wonder that one man, seeing how much another man is a fool when he deduces his behaviour to love, will, after he hath laughed at such shallow follies in others, become the argument of his own scorn, by falling in love; And such a man is Claudio. I have known, when there was no music with him but the drum and fife; and now had he rather hear the tabor and the pipe:---

1 Lineage. 2 Fastidious.
1 Pretend.
I have known, when he would have walked ten mile afoot, to see a good armour; and now will he lie ten nights awake, carving the fashion of a new doublet. He was wont to speak plain, and to the purpose, like an honest man, and a soldier; now is he turned orthographer; his words are a very fantastical banquet, just so many strange dishes. May I be so converted, and see with these eyes? I cannot tell; I think not: I will not be sworn, but love may transform me to an oyster; but I'll take my oath on it, till he have made an oyster of me, he shall never make me such a fool. One woman is fair; yet I am well: another is wise; yet I am well: another virtuous; yet I am well: but till all graces be in one woman, one woman shall not come in my grace. Rich she shall be, that's certain; wise, or I'll none; virtuous, or I'll never cherish her; fair, or I'll never look on her; mild, or come not near; noble, or not I for an angel; of good discourse, of an excellent musician, and her hair shall be of what colour it pleases. Ha! the prince and monsieur love! I will hide me in the harbour. \[Withdraws.\]

Enter Don Pedro, Leonato, and Claudio.

D. Pedro. Come, shall we hear this music? C. Yea, my good lord:—How still the evening As hush'd on purpose to grace harmony! \[is.\]

D. Pedro. See you where Benedick hath hid himself? C. O, very well, my lord: the musique ended, We'll fit the kid-fox with a pennyworth.

Enter Balthazar with musique.

D. Pedro. Come, Balthazar, we'll hear that song again.

Balth. O good my lord, tax not so bad a voice To slander musique any more than once.

D. Pedro. It is the witness still of excellency, To put a strange face on his own perfection:— I pray thee sing, and let me woo no more.

Balth. Because you talk of wooing, I will sing: Since many a wooer doth commence his suit To her he thinks not worthy; yet he vows; Yet will he swear he loves.

D. Pedro. Nay, pray thee, come: Or, if thou wilt hold longer argument, Do it in notes.

Balth. Note this before my notes, There's not a note of mine that's worth the noting.

D. Pedro. Why these are very crotches that he speaks; Notes, notes, forsooth, and noting? \[Musick.\]

Be. Now, Divine air! now is his soul ravish'd!— Is it not strange, that sheep's guts should hale souls out of men's bodies?—Well, a horn for my money, when all's done.

Balthazar sings.

I.

BALTH. Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more, Men were deceivers ever; One foot on sea, and one on shore; To one thing constant never: Then sigh not so, But let them go, And be ye blithe and bonny: Converting all your sounds of woe Into, Hey nonny, nonny.

Bene. \[Aside.\] An he had been a dog, that should have howled thus, they would have hanged him; and, I pray heaven, his bad voice bode no mischief! I had as lief \[2] have heard the night-raven, come what plague could have come after it.

D. Pedro. Yea, marry; \[To Claudio.\]—Dost thou hear, Balthazar? I pray thee, get us some excellent musique; for to-morrow night we would have it at the lady Hero's chamber window.

Balth. The best I can, my lord.

D. Pedro. Do so; farewell. \[Exeunt Balthazar and musique.\] Come hither, Leonato. What was it you told me of to-day? that your niece Beatrice was in love with signior Benedick?

Claud. O, ay:—Stalk on, stalk on; the fowle sits. \[Aside to Pedro.\] I did never think that lady would have loved any man.

Leon. No, nor I neither; but most wonderful, that she should so dote on signior Benedick, whom she hath in all outward behaviours seemed ever to abhor.

Bene. Is't possible? Sits the wind in that corner? \[Aside,\]

Leon. By my troth, my lord, I cannot tell what to think of it; but that she loves him with an enraged affection—it is past the infinite of thought.

D. Pedro. May be, she doth but counterfeit. Claud. \[Faith, like enough.\]

Leon. Counterfeit! There never was counterfeit of passion come so near the life of passion, as she discovers it.

D. Ped. Why, what effects of passion shows she? Claud. Bait the hook well; this fish will bite, \[Aside.\]

Leon. What effects, my lord? She will sit you.—You heard my daughter tell you how. Claud. She did, indeed.

D. Pedro. How, how, I pray you? You amaze me: I would have thought her spirit had been invincible against all assaults of affection.

Leon. I would have sworn it had, my lord; especially against Benedick.

Bene. \[Aside.\] I should think this a gull, but that the white-beard fellow speaks it: knavery cannot, sure, hide itself in such reverence.

Claud. He hath ta'en the infection; hold it up, \[Aside.\]

D. Pedro. Hath she made her affection known to Benedick?

Leon. No; and swears she never will; that's her torment.

Claud. \[Tis true, indeed; so your daughter says: \] Shall I, says she, that have so oft encountered him with scorn, write to him that I love him? Leon. This she says now when she is beginning to write to him: for she'll be up twenty times a night; and there will she sit till she have writ a sheet of paper:—my daughter tells us all. O, she tore the letter into a thousand halfpence; railed at herself, that she should be so immodest to write to one that she knew would flout her: I measure him, says she, by my own spirit; for I should flout him if he writ to me; yea, though I love him, I should.

1 Moro. 2 Willingly.

Claud. Then down upon her knees she falls, weeps, sobs, beats her heart, tears her hair, and cries, O sweet Benedict!

Leon. She doth, indeed; my daughter says so; and the ecstasy hath so much overcome her, that my daughter is sometime afraid she will do a desperate outrage to herself: It is very true.

D. Pedro. It were good that Benedick knew of it by some other, if she will not discover it.

Claud. To what end? He would but make a sport of it, and torment the poor lady worse.

D. Pedro. An he should it were an arms to hang him. She's an excellent sweet lady; and, out of all suspicion, she is virtuous.

Claud. And she is exceeding wise.

D. Ped. In everything, but in loving Benedick. Leon. I am sorry for her, as I have just cause, being her uncle and her guardian.

D. Pedro. I would she had bestowed this dotage on me; I would have daff'd all other respects, and made her half myself: I pray you, tell Benedick of it, and hear what he will say.

Claud. Were it good, think you?

Claud. Hero thinks surely, she will die; for she says, she will die if he love her not; and she will die ere she makes her love known; and she will die if he woo her, rather than she will hate one breath of her accustomed crossness.

D. Pedro. She doth well: if she should make tender of her love, 'tis very possible he'll scorn it; for the man, as you know all, hath a contemptuous spirit.

Claud. He is a very proper man.

D. Pedro. He hath, indeed, a good outward happiness.

Claud. And in my mind, very wise.

D. Pedro. He doth, indeed, show some sparks that are like wit.

Leon. And I take him to be valiant.

D. Pedro. As Hector, I assure you: and in the managing of quarrels you may say he is wise; for either he avoids them with great discretion, or undertakes them with a most Christian-like fear.

Leon. If he do fear God, he must necessarily keep peace; if he break the peace, he ought to enter into a quarrel with fear and trembling.

D. Pedro. And so will he do; for the man doth fear God. Well, I am sorry for your niece: Shall we go see Benedick, and tell him of her love?

Claud. Never tell him, my lord; let her wear it out with good counsel.

Leon. Nay, that's impossible; she may wear her heart out first.

D. Pedro. Well, we'll hear further of it by your daughter; let it cool the while. I love Benedick well; and I could wish he would modestly examine himself, to see how much he is unworthy so good a lady.

Leon. My lord, will you walk? Dinner is ready.

1 Tossed aside.

Claud. If he do not dote on her upon this, I will never trust my expectation. [Aside.]

D. Pedro. Let there be the same net spread for her; and that must your daughter and her gentlewoman carry. The sport will be when they hold one an opinion of another's dotage, and no such matter: that's the scene that I would see, which will be merely a dumb show. Let us send her to call him into dinner. [Aside.

[Exeunt Don Pedro, Claudia, and Leonato.]

Benedick advances from the Arbour.

Bene. This can be no trick. The conference was sadly1 borne. They have the truth of this from Hero. They seem to pity the lady; it seems her affections have their full bent. Love me! why, it must be requited. I hear how I am certed: they say I will bear myself proudly, if I perceive the love come from her; they say too, that she will rather die than give any sign of affection. I did never think to marry:—I must not seem proud:—Happy are they that hear their detractions, and can put them to mending. They say the lady is fair; 'tis a truth I can bear them witness: and virtuous;—tisso, I cannot reprove it; and wise, but for loving me:—By my troth, it is no addition to her wit:—nor no great argument of her folly, for I will be horribly in love with her. I may chance have some odd quirks and remnants of wit broken on me, because I have railed so long against marriage. But doth not the appetite alter? A man loves the meat in his youth that he cannot endure in his age. Shall quips, and sentences, and these paper bullets of the brain, awe a man from the career of his humour? No; the world must be peopled. When I said I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till I were married. Here comes Beatrice. By this day, she's a fair lady: I do spy some marks of love in her.

Enter Beatrice.

Beat. Against my will, I am sent to bid you come to dinner.

Ben. Fair Beatrice, I thank you for your pains.

Beat. I took no more pains for those thanks than you take pains to thank me; if it had been painful I would not have come.

Bene. You take pleasure in the message?

Beat. Yes, just so much as you may take upon a knife's point, and choke a daw withal. You have no stomach, signior; fare you well. [Exit.]

Bene. Ha! Against my will, I am sent to bid you come to dinner—there's a double meaning in that: I took no more pains for those thanks than you take pains to thank me—that's as much as to say, Any pains that I take for you is as easy as thanks. If I do not take pity of her, I am a villain; if I do not love her, I am a Jew. I will go get her picture.

[Exit.]

Act Third.

SCENE I.—LEONATO’S GARDEN.

Enter Hero, Margaret, and Ursula.

H. Good Margaret, run thee into the parlour; There shalt thou find my cousin Beatrice.

1 Seriously.
Proposing with the prince and Claudio:
Whisper her ear, and tell her I and Ursula
Walk in the orchard, and our whole discourse
Is all of her; say that thou overheardst us,
And bid her steal into the pleased bower,
Where honeysuckles, ripened by the sun,
Forbid the sun to enter—like favourites,
Made proud by princes, that advance their pride
Against that power that bred it: there will she hide her,
To listen our propose. This is thy office,
Bear thee well in it, and leave us alone.

Marg. I'll make her come, I warrant you, presently.
[Exit.

Hero. Now, Ursula, when Beatrice doth come,
As we do trace this alley up and down,
Our talk must only be of Benedick:
When I do name him, let it be thy part
To praise him more than ever man did merit:
My talk to thee must be, how Benedick
Is sick in love with Beatrice: Of this matter
Is little Cupid's crafty arrow made,
That only wounds by hearsay. Now begin;

Enter Beatrice, behind.

For look where Beatrice, like a lapwing, runs
Close by the ground, to hear our conference.

Urs. The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish
Cut with her golden oars the silver stream,
And greedily devour the treacherous bait:
So angle we for Beatrice: who, even now
Is couch'd in the woodbine overture:
Fear you not my part of the dialogue. [nothing

Hero. Then go we near her, that her ear lose
Of the false sweet bait that we lay for it.—

[They advance to the bower.

No, truly, Ursula, she is too disdainful;
I know, her spirits are as coy and wild
As haggards of the rock.

Urs. But are you sure,
That Benedick loves Beatrice so entirely? [lord.

Hero. So says the prince, and my new-trothed
U. And did they bid you tell her of it, madam?
H. They did entreat me to acquaint her of it:
But I persuaded them, if they loved Benedick,
To wish him wrestle with affection,
And never to let Beatrice know of it.

Ur. Why did you so? Dost not the gentleman
Deserve as full, as fortunate a bed,
As ever Beatrice shall couch upon?

Hero. O god of love! I know, he doth deserve
As much as may be yielded to a man:
But nature never framed a woman's heart
Of prouder stuff than that of Beatrice:
Disdain and scorn ride sparkling in her eyes,
Misprizing what they look on; and her wit
Values itself so highly, that to her
All matter else seems weak: she cannot love,
Nor take no shape nor project of affection,
She is so self-endear'd.

Urs. Sure, I think so;
And therefore, certainly, it were not good
She knew his love, lest she make sport at it.

H. Why, you speak truth: I never yet saw man,
How wise, how noble, young; how rarely-favour'd,
But she would spell him backward: if fair-faced,
She'd swear, the gentleman should be her sister;

If black, why, nature, drawing of an antick,
Made a foul blot: if tall, a lance ill-headed;
If low, an agate very vitally cut;
If speaking, why, a vane blown with all wind:
If silent, why, a block moved with none.
So turns she every man the wrong side out;
And never gives to truth and virtue, that
Which simplicity and merit purchase.

U. Sure, sure, such carping is not commendable:
H. No; not to be so odd, and from all fashions,
As Beatrice is, cannot be commendable:
But who dare tell her so? If I should speak,
She'd mock me into air; O, she would laugh me
Out of myself, press me to death with wit.
Therefore let Benedick, like cover'd fire,
Consume away in sighs, waste inwardly:
It were a better death than die with mocks.
U. Yet tell her of it; hear what she will say.

Hero. No; rather I will go to Benedick,
And counsel him to fight against his passion:
And, truly, I'll devise some honest slanders
To stain my cousin with: One doth not know,
How much an ill word may empoison liking.

Urs. O, do not do your cousin such a wrong.
She cannot be so much without true judgment,
(Having so swift and excellent a wit,
As she is priz'd to have), as to refuse
So rare a gentleman as signior Benedick.

Hero. He is the only man of Italy,
Always excepted my dear Claudio.

Ur. I pray you, be not angry with me, madam,
Speaking my fancy; signior Benedick,
For shape, for bearing, argument, and valour,
Goes foremost in report through Italy.

Hero. Indeed, he hath an excellent good name.

Urs. His excellence did earn it, ere he had it.—
When are you married, madam?

H. Why, every day,—to-morrow: Come go in;
I'll shew thee some attire; and have thy counsel,
Which is the best to furnish me to-morrow.

Urs. She's lim'd, I warrant you; we have cought her, madam.

Hero. If it prove so, then loving goes by haps:
Some Cupid kills with arrows, some with traps.

[Exeunt Hero and Ursula.

Beatrice advances.

B. What fire is in mine ears? Can this be true?
Stand I condemn'd for pride and scorn so much?
Contempt, farewell! and maiden pride, adieu!
No glory lives behind the back of such.
And, Benedick, love on, I will requite thee;
Taming my wild heart to thy loving hand;
If thou dost love, my kindness shall incite thee
To bind our loves up in a holy band;
For others say, thou dost deserve; and I Believe it better than reportingly.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—A ROOM IN LEONATO'S HOUSE.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, and Leonato.

D. Pedro. I do but stay till your marriage be consummated, and then I go toward Aragon.

Claud. I'll bring you thither, my lord, if you'll vouchsafe me.

D. Pedro. Nay, that would be as great a soil in the new gloss of your marriage, as to show a child his new coat, and forbid him to wear it. I will only be bold with Benedick for his company; for, from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot, he is all thine; he hath twice or thrice cut Cupid's bow-string, and the little hangman dare not shot at him: he hath a heart as sound as a bell, and his tongue is the clapper; for what his heart thinks, his tongue speaks.

Bene. Gallants, I am not as I have been.
Leon. So say I; methinks you are sadder.
Claud. I hope, he be in love.
D. Pedro. Hang him, truant; there's no true drop of blood in him, to be truly touched with love: if he be sad, he wants money.
Bene. I have the tooth-ache.
D. Pedro. Draw it.
Bene. Hang it!
Claud. You must hang it first, and draw it afterwards.
D. Pedro. What? sigh for the tooth-ache?
Leon. Where is but a humour, or a worm!
Bene. Well, every one can master a grief, but he that has it.
Claud. Yet say I, he is in love.
D. Pedro. There is no appearance of fancy in him, unless it be a fancy that he hath to strange disguises; as, to be a Dutchman to-day; a Frenchman to-morrow; or in the shape of two countries at once. Unless he have a fancy to this folly, as it appears he hath, he is no fool for fancy, as you would have it appear he is.
Claud. If he be not in love with some woman, there is no believing old signs: he brushes his hat off mornings; What should that bode?
D. P. Hath any man seen him at the barber's?
Claud. No, but the barber's man hath been seen with him; and the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis-balls.
Leon. Indeed, he looks younger than he did by the loss of a beard.
D. Pedro. Nay, he rubs himself with civet. Can you smell him out by that?
Claud. That's as much as to say, The sweet youth's in love.
D. P. The greatest note of it is his melancholy.
And when was he wont to wash his face?
D. Pedro. Yeas, or to paint himself? for the which, I hear what they say of him.
C. Nay, but his jesting spirit; which is now crept into a lute-string, and now governed by stops.
D. Pedro. Indeed, that tells a heavy tale for him: Conclude, conclude, he is in love.
Claud. Nay, but I know who loves him.
D. Pedro. That would I know too; I warrant, one that knows him not.
Claud. Yes, and his ill conditions; and in despite of all, dies for him.
Bene. Yet is this no charm for the tooth-ache.—Old signor, walk aside with me: I have studied eight or nine wise words to speak to you, which these hobby-horses must not hear: [Exeunt Benedick and Leonato.
D. Pedro. For my life, to break with him about Beatrice.
Claud. 'Tis even so: Hero and Margaret have by this played their parts with Beatrice and then the two bears will not bite one another, when they meet.

Enter Don John.
D. John. My lord and brother, God save you.
D. Pedro. Good den, brother.
D. John. If your leisure served, I would speak with you.
D. Pedro. In private?
D. J. If it please you;—yet Count Claudio may hear; for what I would speak of, concerns him.
D. Pedro. What's the matter?
D. John. Means your lordship to be married to-morrow?
[To Claudio.
D. Pedro. You know, he does.
D. John. I know not that, when he knows what I know.
Claud. If there be any impediment, I pray you, discover it.
D. John. You may think I love you not; let that appear hereafter, and aim better at me by that I now will manifest: For my brother, I think he holds you well; and in dearness of heart hath help to effect your ensuing marriage: surely suit ill spent, and labour ill bestowed!
D. Pedro. Why, what's the matter?
D. John. I came hither to tell you; and, circumstances shortened (for she hath been too long a talking of), the lady is disloyal.
Claud. Who? Hero?
D. John. Even she; Leonato's Hero, your Hero, every man's Hero.
Claud. Disloyal!
D. John. The word is too good to paint out her wickedness; I could say, she were worse; think you of a worse title, and I will fit her to it. Wonder not till further warrant: go but with me to-night, you shall see her chamber-window centered; even the night before her wedding-day: if you love her then, to-morrow wed her; but it would better fit your honour to change your mind.
Claud. May this be so?
D. Pedro. I will not think it.
D. John. If you dare not trust that you see, confess not that you know: if you will follow me, I will show you enough; and when you have seen more and heard more, proceed accordingly.
Claud. If I see anything to-night why I should not marry her to-morrow: in the congregation, where I should wed, there will I shame her.
D. Pedro. And as I woe'd for thee to obtain her, I will join with thee to disgrace her.
D. John. I will disparage her no farther, till you are my witnesses; bear it coldly but till midnight, and let the issue show itself.
D. Pedro. O day untowardly turned!
Claud. O mischief strangely thwarting!
D. John. O plague right well prevented!
So will you say, when you have seen the sequel.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A STREET.
Enter Dogberry and Verges, with the Watch.
Dogb. Are you good men, and true?
Verg. Yea, or else it were a pity but they should suffer salvation.
Dogb. Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should have any allegiance in them, being chosen for the prince’s watch.

_Verg._ Well, give them their charge, neighbour

__Dogb._ First, who think you the most disheartless man to be constable?

1 _Watch._ Hugh Oatcake, sir, or George Sea-coal; for they can write and read.

_D._ Come hither, neighbour Sea-coal. Heaven hath blessed you with a good name: to be a well favoured man is the gift of fortune; but to write and read comes by nature.

2 _Watch._ Both which, master constable,—

__Dogb._ You have; I knew it would be your answer. Well, for your favour, sir, make no boast of it; and for your writing and reading, let that appear when there is no need of such vanity. You are thought here to be the most senseless and fit man for the constable of the watch; therefore bear you the lantern: This is your charge; You shall comprehend all vagrom men; you are to bid any man stand, in the prince’s name.

_Verg._ If he will not stand when he isidden, he is none of the prince’s subjects.

__Dogb._ True, and they are to meddle with none but the prince’s subjects:—You shall also make no noise in the streets; for, for the watch to babble and talk is most tolerable and not to be endured.

2 _Watch._ We will rather sleep than talk; we know what belongs to a watch.

__Dogb._ Why, you speak like an ancient and most quiet watchman; for I cannot see how sleeping should offend: only, have a care that your bills be not stolen:—Well, you are to call at all the ale-houses, and bid those that are drunk get them to bed.

2 _Watch._ How, if they will not?

__Dogb._ Why then, let them alone till they are sober; if they make you not then the better answer, you may say, they are not the men you took them for.

2 _Watch._ Well, sir.

__Dogb._ If you meet a thief, you may suspect him, by virtue of your office, to be no true man; and, for such kind of men, the less you meddle or make with them, why, the more is for your honesty.

2 _Watch._ If we know him to be a thief, shall we not lay hands on him?

__Dogb._ Truly, by your office, you may; but, I think, they that touch pitch will be defiled: the most peaceable way for you, if you do take a thief, is, to let him show himself what he is, and steal out of your company.

_Verg._ You have been always called a merciful man, partner.

_D._ Truly, I would not hang a dog by my will; much more a man who hath any honesty in him.

_Verg._ If you hear a child cry in the night, you must call to the nurse, and bid her still it.

2 _Watch._ How, if the nurse be asleep, and will not hear us?

__Dogb._ Why, then depart in peace, and let the child wake her with crying; for the ewe that will not hear her lamb when it bleats, will never answer a calf when he bleats.

_Verg._ ’Tis very true.

__Dogb._ This is the end of the charge. You, constable, are to present the prince’s own person: if you meet the prince in the night, you may stay him.

_Verg._ Nay, by ’r lady, that, I think, he cannot.

__Dogb._ Five shillings to one on’t, with any man that knows the statues, he may stay him: marry, not without the prince be willing: for, indeed, the watch ought to offend no man; and it is an offence to stay a man against his will.

_Verg._ By ’r lady, I think it be so.

__Dogb._ Ha, ha, ha! Well, masters, good night: an there be any matter of weight, chances, call up me: keep your fellows’ counsels and your own, and good night.—Come, neighbour.

2 _Watch._ Well, masters, we hear our charge: let us go sit here upon the church-bench till two, and then all to bed.

__Dogb._ One word more, honest neighbours: I pray you, watch about signior Leonato’s door; for the wedding being there to-morrow, there is a great coil to-night: Adieu, be vigilant, I beseech you. [Exit Dogberry and Verges.

Enter Borachio and Conrade.

_Bora._ What! Conrade.—[Aside.]

_Watch._ Peace, stir not. [Aside.]

_Bora._ Conrade, I say!

_Con._ Here, man, I am at thy elbow.

_Bora._ Stand thee close then under this penthouse, for it drizzles rain; and I will, like a true drunkard, utter all to thee.

_Watch._ [Aside.] Some treason, masters; yet stand close.

_Bora._ Therefore know, I have earned of Don John a thousand ducats.

_Con._ Is it possible that any villainy should be so deep?

_Bora._ Thou shouldst rather ask, if it were possible any villainy should be so rich; for when rich villains have need of poor ones, poor ones may make what price they will.

_Con._ I wonder at it.

_Bora._ That shows thou art unconfirmed; 2 Thou knowest that the fashion of a doublet, or a hat, or a cloak, is nothing to a man.

_Con._ Yes, it is apparel.

_Bora._ I mean the fashion.

_Con._ Yes, the fashion is the fashion.

_Bora._ Tush! I may as well say, the fool’s the fool. But see’st thou not what a deformed thief this fashion is?

_Watch._ [Aside.] I know that Deformed; he has been a vile thief this seven year; he goes up and down like a gentleman; I remember his name.

_Bora._ Didst thou not hear somebody?

_Con._ No; ’twas the vane on the house.

_Bora._ Seest thou not I say, what a deformed thief this fashion is! how giddily he turns about all the hot bloods, between fourteen and five-and-thirty?

_Con._ All this I see; and see that the fashion wears out more apparel than the man: But are not thou thyself giddy with the fashion too, that thou hast shifted out of thy tale into telling me of the fashion?

Bora. Note, neither; but know, that I have to-night wooed Margaret, the lady Hero's gentlewoman, by the name of Hero; she leans me out at her mistress' chamber-window, bids me a thousand times good-night,—I tell this tale vilely:—I should first tell thee, how the prince, Claudio, and my master, planted, and placed, and possessed by my master Don John, saw afar off in the orchard this amiable encounter.

Con. And thought they Margaret was Hero? Bora. Two of them did, the prince and Claudio; but the devil my master knew she was Margaret; and partly by his oaths, which first possessed them, partly by the dark night, which did deceive them, but chiefly by my villainy, which did confirm any slander that Don John had made, away went Claudio enraged; swore he would meet her as he was appointed, next morning at the temple, and there, before the whole congregation, shame her with what he saw over-night, and send her home again without a husband.

1 Watch. We charge you in the prince's name stand.

2 Watch. Call up the right master constable: We have here recovered the most dangerous piece of lechery that ever was known in the commonwealth.

1 Watch. And one Deformed is one of them; I know him, he wears a lock.

Con. Masters, masters.

2 Watch. You'll be made bring Deformed forth, I warrant you.

Con. Masters,—

1 Watch. Never speak; we charge you, let us obey you to go with us.

Bora. We are like to prove a goodly commodity, being taken up of these men's bills.

Con. A commodity in question, I warrant you. Come, we'll obey you. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A ROOM IN LEONATO'S HOUSE.

Enter Hero, Margaret, and Ursula.

Hero. Good Ursula, wake my cousin Beatrice, and desire her to rise.

Urs. I will, lady.

Hero. And bid her come hither.

Urs. Well. [Exit Ursula.

Marg. Troth, I think, your other raptures were better.

Hero. No, pray thee, good Meg, I'll worth's this.

Marg. By my troth, it's not so good; and I warrant, your cousin will say so.

Hero. My cousin's a fool, and thou art another; I'll wear none but this.

Marg. I like the new tire within excellently, if the hair were a thought browner; and your gown's a most rare fashion. I saw the Duchess of Milian's gown, that they praise so.

Hero. O that exceeds, they say.

Marg. By my troth, it's but a night-gown in respect of yours: Cloth of gold, and cuts, and lace with silver; set with pearls, down sleeves, side-sleeves, and skirts round, underborne with a blush tinsel; but for a fine, quaint, graceful, and excellent fashion, yours is worth ten on't.

Hero. God give me joy to wear it, for my heart is exceeding heavy.

Enter Beatrice.

Hero. Good morrow, coz.

Beat. Good morrow, sweet Hero. 'Tis almost five o'clock, cousin; 'tis time you were ready.

By my troth, I am exceeding ill:—hey ho!

Marg. For a hawk, a horse, or a husband!

Beat. By my troth, I am sick.

Marg. Get you some of this distilled Carduus! Benedictus, and lay it to your heart; it is the only thing for a quain.

Hero. There thou prick'st her with a thistle.

Beat. Benedictus! why Benedictus? you have some moral in this Benedictus.

Marg. Moral! no, by my troth, I have no moral meaning: I meant, plain holy-thistle. You may think, perchance, that I think you are in love: nay, by'r lady, I am not such a fool to think what I list; nor I list not to think what I can: nor, indeed, I cannot think, if I would think my heart out of thinking, that you are in love, or that you will be in love, or that you can be in love; yet Benedictus was such another, and now is he become a man; he swore he would never marry; and yet now, in despite of his heart, he eats his meat without grudging: and how you may be converted, I know not; but, methinks, you look with your eyes as other women do.

Beat. What place is this that thy tongue keeps?

Marg. Not a false gallop.

Re-enter Ursula.

Urs. Madam, withdraw; the prince, the count, signior Benedict, Don John, and all the gallants of the town, are come to fetch you to church.

Hero. Help to dress me, good coz, good Meg; good Ursula. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.

ANOTHER ROOM IN LEONATO'S HOUSE.

Enter Leonato, with Dogberry and Verges.

L. What would you with me, honest neighbour? Dogb. Marry, sir, I would have some confidence with you, that decoys you nearly.

Leon. Brief, I pray you; for you see, 'tis a busy time with me.

Dogb. Marry, this it is, sir.

Verg. Yes, in truth, it is, sir.

Leon. What is it, my good friends?

Dogb. Goodman Verges, sir, speaks a little off the matter; an old man, sir, and his wits are not so blunt, as I would desire they were; but, in faith, honest, as the skin between his brows.

Verg. Yes, I thank God, I am as honest as any man living, that is an old man, and no holier than I.

Dogb. Comparisons are odorous; palabras, neighbour Verges.

Leon. Neighbours, you are tedious.

Dogb. It pleases your worship to say so, but we are the poor duke's officers; but truly, for mine

1 A plant of the thistle kind.
own part, if I were as tedious as a king, I could find in my heart to bestow it all of your worship.

Leon. All thy tediousness on me! ha!

Dogb. Yea, and 'twere a thousand times more than 'tis: I hear as good exclamation on your worship, as of any man in the city; and though I be but a poor man, I am glad to hear it.

Verg. And so am I.

Leon. I would fain know what you have to say.

Verg. Marry, sir, our watch to-night, excepting your worship's presence, have ta'en a couple of as arrant knaves as any in Messina.

Dogb. A good old man, sir; he will be talking; as they say, When the age is in, the wit is out: it is a world to see!—Well said, I faith, neighbour Verges:—well, an two men ride of a horse, one must ride behind:—An honest soul, I'faith, sir; by my troth he is, as ever broke bread: but, all men are not alike; alas, good neighbour!

Leon. Indeed, neighbour, he comes too short of you; but I must leave you.

Dogb. One word, sir; our watch, sir, have, indeed, comprehended two aspicious persons, and we would have them this morning examined before your worship.

Leon. Take their examination yourself, and bring it me; I am now in great haste, as it may appear unto you.

Dogb. It shall be sufficience.

L. Drink some wine ere you go; fare you well.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, they stay for you to give your daughter to her husband.

Leon. I will wait upon them; I am ready.

[Exeunt Leonato and Messenger.

Dogb. Go, good partner, go, get you to Francis Seacoal, bid him bring his pen and inkhorn to the gaol; we are now to examination these men.

Verg. And we must do it wisely.

Dogb. We will spare for no wit, I warrant you; here's that [Touching his forehead.] shall drive some of them to a non com: only get the learned writer to set down our excommunication, and meet me at the gaol.

[Exeunt.

Act Fourth.

SCENE I.—THE INSIDE OF A CHURCH.

Enter Don Pedro, Don John, Leonato, Friar, Claudio, Benedict, Hero, and Beatrice, &c.

Leon. Come, friar Francis, be brief; only to the plain form of marriage, and you shall recount their particular duties afterwards.

Fr. You come hither, my lord, to marry this

Claud. No. [lady?

Leon. To be married to her, friar; you come to marry her.

Friar. Lady, you come hither to be married to this count?

Hero. I do.

Friar. If either of you know any inward impediment why you should not be conjoined, I charge you, on your souls, to utter it.

Claud. Know you any, Hero?

Hero. None, my lord.

Friar. Know you any, count?

Leon. I dare make his answer, none.

Cl. O, what men dare do! what men may do! what men daily do! not knowing what they do!

Dene. How now! Interjections? Why, then some be of laughing, as, ha! ha! he!

C. Stand thee by, friar.—Father, by your leave! Will you with free and unconstrained soul Give me this maid, your daughter?

Leon. As freely, son, as God did give her me.

Claud. And what have I to give you back, whose worth

May counterpoise this rich and precious gift?

D. Ped. Nothing, unless you render her again.

Claud. Sweet prince, you learn me noble thankfulness.

There, Leonato, take her back again; Give not this rotten orange to your friend; She's but the sign and semblance of her honour:— Behold, how like a maid she blushes here:— O, what authority and show of truth Can cunning sin cover itself withal! Comes not that blood, as modest evidence, Tow'nere simple virtue? Would you not swear, All you that see her, that she were a maid, ly these exterior shows? But she is none: her blush is guiltiness, not modesty.

Leon. What do you mean, my lord?

Claud. Not to be married, Not knit my soul to an approved wanton.

Leon. Dear my lord, if you in your own proof Have vanquish'd the resistance of her youth, And made defeat—

Claud. I know what you would say; if I have known her, You'll say, she did embrace me as a husband, And so extenuate the 'forehand sin:—

No, Leonato, I never tempted her with word too large; But, as a brother to his sister, show'd Bashful sincerity, and comely love.

Hero. And seem'd I ever otherwise to you?

C. Out on thy seeming! I will write against it: You seem to me as Dian in her orb; As chaste as is the bud ere it be blown; But you are more intemperate in your blood Than Venus, or those pamper'd animals That rage in savage sensuality.

H. Is my lord well, that he doth speak so wide?

Leon. Sweet prince, why speak not you?

D. Pedro. What should I speak? I stand dishonour'd, that have gone about To link my dear friend to a common stale.

L. Are these things spoken? or do I but dream? D. John. Sir, they are spoken, and these things are true.

Dene. This looks not like a nuptial.

Hero. True? O Heaven! Claud. Leonato, stand I here?

Is this the prince? Is this the prince's brother? Is this face Hero's? Are our eyes our own? Leon. All this is so; But what of this, my lord? Claud. Let me but move one question to your daughter:

And, by that fatherly and kindly power That you have in her, bid her answer truly.

L. I charge thee do so, as thou art my child.

Hero. O God defend me! how am I beset!—

1 Lamentations. 2 Wildly.
What kind of catechising call you this?
Cla. To make you answer truly to your name.
Hero. Is it not Hero? Who can blot that name
With any just reproach?
Claud. Marry, that can Hero; Hero itself can blot out Hero’s virtue.
What man was he talk’d with you yesternight?
Out at your window, betwixt twelve and one?
Now, if you are a maid, answer to this.
I. I talk’d with no man at that hour, my lord.
D. P. Why, then are you no maiden.—Leonato,
I am sorry you must hear; Upon mine honour,
Myself, my brother, and this grieved count,
Did see her, hear her, at that hour last night,
Talk with a ruffian at her chamber-window;
Who hath, indeed, most like a liberal? villain,
Confess’d the vile encounters they have had
A thousand times in secret.
D. John,
Fye, fye! they are
Not to be nam’d, my lord, not to be spoke of;
There is not chastity enough in language,
Without offence to utter them: Thus, pretty lady,
I am sorry for thy much misgovernment.
Claud. O, Hero! what a Hero hast thou been,
If half thy outward graces had been placed
About thy thoughts, and counsels of thy heart!
But, fare thee well, most foul, most fair! farewell,
Thou pure impiety, and impious purity!
For thee I’ll lock up all the gates of love,
And on my eyelids shall conjecture hang,
To turn all beauty into thoughts of harm,
And never shall it more be gracious.
L. Hath no man’s dagger here a point for me?
[Hero swoons.
Beat. Why, how now, cousin? wherefore sink you down?
D. John. Come, let us go; these things come thus to light,
Smother her spirits up.
[Exeunt Don Pedro, Don John, and Claudius.
Bene. How doth the lady?
Beat. Dead, I think:—help, uncle:—
Hero! why, Hero!—Uncle!—Signior Benedick!—
friar!
Leon. O fate, take not away thy heavy hand!
Death is the fairest cover for her shame,
That may be wish’d for.
Beat. How now, cousin Hero?
Friar. Have comfort, lady.
Leon. Dost thou look up?
Friar. Yea; wherefore should she not?
Leon. Wherefore? Why, doth not every earthly thing
Cry shame upon her? Could she here deny
The story that is printed in her blood?
Do not live, Hero: do not ope thine eyes:
For did I think thou wouldst not quickly die,
Thought I thy spirits were stronger than thy shames,
Myself would, on the rearward of reproaches,
Strike at thy life. Griev’d I, I had but one,
Child I for that at frugal nature’s frame; 2
O, one too much by thee! Why had I one?
Why ever wast thou lovely in my eyes?
Why had I not, with charitable hand,
Took up a beggar’s issue at my gates;
Who smirch’d thus, and mir’d with infamy,
1 Free of tongue. 2 Disposition. 3 Sullied.
I might have said, No part of it is mine,
This shame derives itself from unknown loins?
But mine, and mine I lov’d, and mine I prais’d,
And mine that I was proud on; mine so much,
That I myself was to myself not mine,
Valuing of her; why, she—O, she is fallen
Into a pit of ink! that the wide sea
Hath drops too few to wash her clean again.
Bene. Sir, sir, be patient;
For my part, I am so attir’d in wonder,
I know not what to say.
Beat. O, on my soul, my cousin is belied!
Bene. Lady, were you her bedfellow last night?
Beat. No, truly, not: although, until last night,
I have this twelvemonth been her bedfellow.
Leon. Confirmd,’confirmd! O, that is stronger made,
Which was before barr’d up with ribs of iron!
Would the two princes lie? and Claudio lie?
Who lov’d her so, that, speaking of her foulness, Wash’d it with tears? Hence from her; let her Frier. Hear me a little; 4
[die.
For I have only been silent so long,
And given way unto this course of fortune,
By noting of the lady; I have mark’d
A thousand blushing apparitions start
Into her face; a thousand innocent shames
In angel whiteness bear away those blushes,
And in her eye there hath appear’d a fire,
To burn the errors that these princes hold
Against her maiden truth:—Call me a fool;
Trust not my reading, nor my observations,
Which with experimental seal doth warrant
The tenour of my book: trust not my age,
My reverence, calling, nor divinity,
If this sweet lady lie not guiltless here
Under some biting error.
Leon. Friar, it cannot be:
Thou seest, that all the grace that she hath left,
Is, that she will not add unto her guilt
A sin of perjury; she not denies it;
Why seek’st thou then to cover with excuse
That which appears in proper nakedness?
Frier. Lady, what man is he you are accus’d of?
Hero. They know, that do accuse me; I know
If I know more of any man alive, [none:
Than that which maiden modesty doth warrant,
Let all my sins lack mercy—O my father,
Prove you that any man with me convers’d
At hours unmeet, or that I yesternight: [tune,
Maintain’d the change of words with any crea-
Refuse me, hate me, torture me to death.
Frier. There is some strange misprision 1 in the princes.
Ben. Two of them have the very bent of honour;
And if their wisdoms be misled in this,
The practice of it lives in John the bastard,
Whose spirits toll in frame of villainies.
Leon. I know not; If they speak but truth of her, [honour,
These hands shall tear her; if they wrong her
The proudest of them shall well hear of it.
Time hath not yet so dried this blood of mine,
Nor age so eat up my invention,
Nor fortune made such havoc of my means,
Nor my bad life reft me so much of friends,
But they shall find, avak’d in such a kind,
1 Misconception,
Both strength of limb, and policy of mind,
Ability in means, and choice of friends,
To quit me of them throughly.

Friar. Pause a while,
And let my counsel sway you in this case.
Your daughter here the princes left for dead;
Let her a while be secretly kept in,
And publish it, that she is dead indeed:
Maintain a mourning ostentation:
And on your family’s old monument
Hang mournful epitaphs, and do all rites
That appertain unto a burial.

Leon. What shall become of this? What will this do?

Friar. Marry, this, well carried, shall on her
Change slander to remorse; that is some good:
But not for that, dream 1 on this strange course,
But on this travail look for greater birth.
She dying, as it must be so maintain’d,
Upon the instant that she was accus’d,
Shall be lamented, pitied, and excus’d,
Of every hearer: For it so falls out,
That what we have we prize not to the worth,
Whiles we enjoy it; but being lack’d and lost,
Why, then we rack1 the value; then we find
The virtue, that possession would not show
Whiles it was ours:—So will it fare with Claudio:
When he shall hear she died upon his words,
The idea of her life shall sweetly creep
Into his study of imagination;
And every lovely organ of her life
Shall come apparel’d in more precious habit,
More moving-delicacy, and full of life,
Into the eye and prospect of his soul,
Than when she liv’d indeed:—then shall hemourn,
And wish he had not so accus’d her;
No, though he thought his accusation true.
Let this be so, and doubt not but success
Will fashion the event in better shape
Than I can lay it down in likelihood.
But if all aim but this be levell’d false,
The supposition of the lady’s death
Will quench the wonder of her infancy:
And, if it sort not well, you may conceal her
(As best betis her wounded reputation)
In some reclusive and religious life,
Out of all eyes, tongues, minds, and injuries.

Ben. Signior Leonato, let the friar advise you:
And though, you know, my inwardness 2 and love
Is very much unto the prince and Claudio,
Yet, by mine honour, I will deal in this
As secretly, and justly, as your soul
Should with your body.

Leon. Being that I flow in grief,
The smallest twine may lead me.

Friar. ’Tis well consented; presently away;
For to strange sores strangely they strain the cure:—
Come, lady, die to live; this wedding day,
Perhaps, is but prolong’d; have patience, and endure.

[Exeunt Friar, Hero, and Leonato.

Bene. Lady Beatrice, have you wept all this while?
Beat. Yea, and I will weep a while longer.
Bene. I will not desire that.
Beat. You have no reason, I do it freely.

1 Over-rate. 2 Intimacy.

Bene. Surely, I do believe your fair cousin is wrong’d.
Beat. Ah, how much might the man deserve of me, that would right her!
Ben. Is there any way to show such friendship?
Beat. A very even way, but no such friend.
Ben. May a man do it?
Beat. It is a man’s office, but not yours.
Beat. I do love nothing in the world so well as you: Is not that strange?
Beat. As strange as the thing I know not: It were as possible for me to say, I loved nothing so well as you: but believe me not; and yet I lie not; I confess nothing, nor I deny nothing:—
I am sorry for my cousin.
Beat. By my sword, Beatrice, thou lovest me.
Beat. Do not swear by it, and eat it.
Beat. I will swear by it, that you love me;
and I will make him eat it, that says I love you.
Beat. Will you not eat your word?
Bene. With no sauce that can be devised to it: I protest, I love thee.
Beat. Why then, heaven forgive me!
Ben. Why, than, what offence, sweet Beatrice.
Beat. You have staid me in a happy hour; I was about to protest, I loved you.
Bene. And do it with all thy heart.
Beat. I love you with so much of my heart, that none is left to protest.
Bene. Come, bid me do any thing for thee.
Beat. Kill Claudio.
Bene. Ha! not for the wide world.
Beat. You kill me to deny it? Farewell.
Beat. Tarry, sweet Beatrice.
Beat. I am gone, though I am here:—There is no love in you:—Nay, I pray you, let me go.
Beat. Beatrice,—
Beat. In faith, I will go.
Beat. We’ll be friends first.
Beat. You dare easier be friends with me, than fight with mine enemy.
Ben. Is Claudio thine enemy?
Beat. Is he not approved in the height a villain, that hath slandered, scorn’d, dishonour’d my kinswoman?—O, that I were a man!—What! I dare bear her in hand until they come to take hands; and then with public accusation, uncovered slander, unmitigated rancour,—O, that I were a man! I would eat his heart in the market-place.
Bene. Hear me, Beatrice:—
Beat. Talk with a man out at a window?—a proper saying!
Bene. Nay, but, Beatrice:—
Beat. Sweet Hero!—she is wronged, she is slandered, she is undone.
Bene. Beat.
Beat. Princes and counties! Surely a princely testimony, a goodly count-confect; 2 a sweet gallant, surely! O, that I were a man for his sake! or that I had any friend would be a man for my sake! But manhood is melted into courtesies, valour into compliment, and men are only turned into tongue, and trim ones too: he is now as valiant as Hercules, that only tells a lie, and swears it:—I cannot be a man with wishing, therefore I will dic a woman with grieving.

1 Noblemen. 2 A sugar nobleman.
Bene. Tarry, good Beatrice: By this hand, I love thee.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way than swearing by it.

Bene. Think you in your soul the Count Claudio hath wrong’d Hero?

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought, or a soul.

Bene. Enough, I am engaged, I will challenge him; I will kiss your hand, and so leave you:

By this hand, Claudio shall render me a dear account: As you hear of me, so think of me.

Go, comfort your cousin: I must say, she is dead; and so, farewell. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A PRISON.

Enter Dogberry, Verges, and Sexton, in gowns; and the Watch, with Conrad and Borachio.

Dogb. Is our whole assembly appeared?

Verg. O, a stool and a cushion for the sexton!

Sexton. Which be the malefactors?

Dogb. Marry, that am I and my partner.

Verg. Nay, that’s certain; we have the exhibition to examine.

Sexton. But which are the offenders that are to be examined? let them come before master constable.

Dogb. Yea, marry, let them come before me.—What is your name, friend?

Bora. Borachio.

Dogb. Pray write down—Borachio.—Yours, sirrah?

Con. I am a gentleman, sir, and my name is Conrad.

D. Write down—master gentleman Conrad.

—Masters, it is proved already that you are little better than false-knaves; and it will go near to be thought so shortly. How answer you for yourselves?

Con. Marry, sir, we say we are none.

Dogb. A marvellous witty fellow, I assure you; but I will go about with him.—Come you hither, sirrah: a word in your ear, sir; I say to you, it is thought you are false knaves.

Bora. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Dogb. Well, stand aside.—They are both in a tale. Have you writ down that they are none?

Sexton. Master constable, you go not the way to examine: you must call forth the watch that are their accusers.

Dogb. Yea, marry, that’s the easiest way:—Let the watch come forth.—Masters, I charge you, in the prince’s name, accuse these men.

1 Watch. This man said, sir, that Don John, the prince’s brother, was a villain.

Dogb. Write down—Prince John a villain:—Why this is flat perjury to call a prince’s brother—villain.

Bora. Master constable,—

Dogb. Pray thee, follow, peace; I do not like thy look, I promise thee.

Sexton. What heard you him say else?

2 Watch. Marry, that he had received a thousand ducats of Don John, for accusing the lady Hero wrongfully.

Dogb. Flat burglary as ever was committed.

1 Quickest.

Verg. Yea, by the mass, that it is.

Sexton. What else, fellow?

1 Watch. And that Count Claudio did mean upon his words, to disgrace Hero before the whole assembly, and not marry her.

Dogb. O villain! thou wilt be condemned into everlasting redemption for this.

Sexton. What else?

2 Watch. This is all.

Sexton. And this is more, masters, than you can deny. Prince John is this morning secretly stolen away; Hero was in this manner accused, in this very manner refused, and upon the grief of this suddenly died.—Master constable, let these men be bound, and brought to Leonato’s; I will go before, and show him their examination.

[Exit.

Dogb. Come, let them be opinioned.

Verg. Let them be in band.

Con. Off, coxcomb.

Dogb. Where’s the sexton; let him write down—the prince’s officer, coxcomb. Come, bind them:—Thou naughty varlet!

Con. Away! you are an ass, you are an ass.

Dogb. Dost thou not suspect my place? Dost thou not suspect my years?—O that he were here to write me down—an ass—but, masters, remember that I am an ass; though it be not written down, yet forget not that I am an ass.—No, thou villain, thou art full of piety, as shall be proved upon thee by good witness. I am a wise fellow; and, which is more, an officer; and, which is more, a householder; and, which is more, as pretty a piece of flesh as any is in Messina; and one that knows the law, go to; and a rich fellow enough, go to; and a fellow that hath had losses; and one that hath two gowns, and every thing handsome about him:—Bring him away. O, that I had been writ down—an ass. [Exeunt.

Act Fifth.

SCENE I.—Before LEONATO’S HOUSE.

Enter Leonato and Antonio.

Ant. If you go on thus, you will kill yourself;
And ’tis not wisdom, thus to second grief
Against yourself.

Leon. I pray thee, cease thy counsel,
Which falls into mine ears as profitless
As water in a sieve; give not me counsel;
Nor let no comforter delight mine ear,
But such a one whose wrongs do suit with mine.
Bring me a father, that so lov’d his child,
Whose joy of her is overwhelm’d like mine,
And bid him speak of patience:

Measure his woe the length and breadth of mine,
And let it answer every strain for strain;
As thus for thus, and such a grief for such,
In every lineament, branch, shape, and form:
If such a one will smile, and stroke his beard:
Cry—sorrow, wag! and hem, when he should groan;

[drunk
Patch grief with provers, make misfortune
With candle-wasters; bring him yet to me,
And I of him will gather patience.
But there is no such man: For, brother, men can counsel, and speak comfort to that grief Which they themselves not feel; but tasting it, Their counsel turns to passion, which before Would give preceptual medicine to rage, Fetter stronger madness in a silken thread, Charm ache with air, and agony with words: No, no: 'tis all men's office to speak patience To those that wring under the load of sorrow, But no man's virtue, nor sufficiency, To be so moral, when he shall endure The like himself: therefore give me no counsel: My griefs cry louder than advertisement.¹

Ant. Therein do men from children nothing differ.

Leon. I pray thee, peace: I will be flesh and For there was never yet philosopher, That could endure the tooth-ache patiently; However they have writ the style of gods, And made a pitch at chance and sufferance.

Ant. Yet bend not all the harm upon yourself; Make those, that do offend you, suffer too.

Leon. There thou speak'st reason: nay, I will do so:

My soul doth tell me, Hero is belied;
And that shall Claudio know, so shall the prince,
And all of them that thus dishonour her.

Enter Don Pedro and Claudio.

Ant. Here comes the prince, and Claudio.

Don Pedro. Good den, good den. [hastily.

Claudio. Good day to both of you.

Leon. Hear you, my lords,—

Don Pedro. We have some haste, Leonato.

Leon. Some haste, my lord!—well, fare you well, my lord:

Are you so hasty now?—well, all is one.

Don Pedro. Nay, do not quarrel with us, good old man.

Ant. If he could right himself with quarrel—

Some of us would lie low. [ling.

Claudio. Who wrongs him?

Leon. Marry,

Thou, thou dost wrong me: thou dissembler,

Nay never lay thy hand upon thy sword,

I fear thee not.

Claudio. Marry, beshrew my hand,

If it should give your age such cause of fear:

In faith, my hand meant nothing to my sword.

L. Tush, tush, man, never fleer and jest at me;

I speak not like a dotard, nor a fool;

As, under privilege of age, to brag

What I have done being young, or what would do

Were I not old: Know, Claudio, to thy head,

Thou hast so wrong'd mine innocent child and

That I am forc'd to lay my reverence by; [me,

And, with grey hairs, and bruise of many days,

Do challenge thee to trial of a man.

I say, thou hast belied mine innocent child;

Thy slander hath gone through and through her heart,

And she lies buried with her ancestors:

O! in a tomb where never scandal slept,

Save this of hers fram'd by thy villainy!

Claudio. My villainy!

Leon. Thine, Claudio; thine I say.

1 Admonition.

Don Pedro. You say not right, old man.

Leon. My lord, my lord,

I'll prove it on his body, if he dare;

Despite his nice fence, and his active practice,

His May of youth, and bloom of lustyhood.

Claudio. Away, I will not have to do with you.

Leon. Canst thou so daff? me? Thou hast kill'd my child;

If thou kill'st me, boy, thou shalt kill a man.

Ant. He shall kill two of us, and men indeed:

But that's no matter; let him kill one first:—

Win me and wear me,—let him answer me,—

Come, follow me, boy; come, boy, follow me:

Sir boy, I'll whip you from your foining fence;

Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will.

Leon. Brother,—

Ant. Content yourself: 'Tis heaven knows, I lov'd my niece;

And she is dead, slander'd to death by villains;

That dare as well answer a man, indeed,

As I dare take a serpent by the tongue?

Boys, apes, braggarts, Jacks, milksops!—

Leon. Brother Antony,—

Ant. Hold you content; What, man! I know them, yea, [scruple:

And what they weigh, even to the utmost Scrambling,⁴ out-facing, fashion-mong're ring boys, [slander,

That lie and cog,⁵ and flout,⁶ deprave and Go antickly, and show outward hideousness, And speak of half a dozen dangerous words, How they might hurt their enemies, if they And this is all. [durst,

Leon. But, brother Antony,—

Ant. Come, 'tis no matter;

Do not you meddle, let me deal in this.

Don Pedro. Gentlemen both, we will not wave your patience.

My heart is sorry for your daughter's death;

But, on my honour, she was charg'd with nothing But what was true, and very full of proof.

Leon. My lord, my lord,—

Don Pedro. I will not hear you.

Leon. No?

Brother, away:—I will be heard:—

Ant. And shall,

Or some of us will smart for it.

[Exeunt Leonato and Antonio.

Enter Benedick.

D. P. See, see; here comes the man we went

Bene. Good day, my lord.

Don Pedro. Welcome, signior: You are almost come to part almost a fray.

Claudio. We had like to have had our two noses snapped off with two old men without teeth.

Don Pedro. Leonato and his brother: What think'st thou? Had we fought, I doubt we should have been too young for them.

Bene. In a false quarrel there is no true valour. I came to seek you both.

Claudio. We have been up and down to seek thee; for we are high-proof melancholy, and would fain have it beaten away: Wilt thou use thy wit?

1 Put me aside. 2 Thrusting. 3 Turbulent. 4 Mock. 5 Scruple. 6 Flout.
D. Pedro. He is in earnest.
Claud. In most profound earnest; and, I'll warrant you, for the love of Beatrice.
D. Pedro. And hath challenged thee.
Claud. Most sincerely.
D. Pedro. What a pretty thing man is, when he goes in his doublet and hose, and leaves off his wit!

Enter Dogberry, Verges, and the Watch, with Conrade and Borachio.
Claud. He is then a giant to an ape; but then is an ape a doctor to such a man.
D. Pedro. But, soft you, let be; pluck up, my heart, and be sad.¹ Did he not say, my brother was fled?

Dogb. Come, you, sir; if justice cannot tame you, she shall ne'er weigh more reasons in her balance; nay, an you be a cursing hypocrite once, you must be looked to.
D. Pedro. How now, two of my brother's men bound! Borachio, one!
Claud. Hearken after their offence, my lord!
D. Pedro. Officers, what offence have these men done?

Dogb. Marry, sir, they have committed false report; moreover, they have spoken untruths; secondarily, they are slanders; sixth and lastly, they have belied a lady; thirdly, they have verified unjust things; and, to conclude, they are lying knaves.
D. Pedro. First, I ask thee what they have done; thirdly, I ask thee what's their offence; sixth and lastly, why they are committed; and, to conclude, what you lay to their charge?
Cl. Rightly reasoned, and in his own division; and, by my troth, there's one meaning well suited.
D. Pedro. Whom have you offended, masters, that you are thus bound to your answer? this learned constable is too cunning to be understood: What's your offence?

Bora. Sweet prince, let me go no further to mine answer; do you hear me, and let this count kill me. I have deceived even your very eyes; what your wisdoms could not discover, these shallow fools have brought to light; who, in the night, overheard me confessing to this man, how Don John your brother incensed me to slander the lady Hero; how you were brought into the orchard, and saw me court Margaret in Hero's garment; how you disgraced her, when you should marry her: my villainy they have upon record; which I had rather seal with my death, than repeat over to my shame: the lady is dead upon mine and my master's false accusation; and, briefly, I desire nothing but the reward of a villain.

D. Pedro. Runs not this speech like iron through your blood?
Cl. I have drunk poison, while he utter'd it.
D. Pedro. But did my brother set thee on to this?

Bora. Yea, and paid me richly for the prac-

And fie he is upon this villainy. [Exit Benedick.

time our sexton hath reformed signior Leonato of the matter: And, masters, do not forget to specify, when time and place shall serve, that I am an ass.

_Verg. Here, here comes master signior Leo-

Re-enter Leonato and Antonio, with the Sexton.

Leon. Which is the villain? Let me see his eyes;
That when I note another man like him,
I may avoid him: Which of these is he?
_Bora. If you would know your wronger, look

Leon. Art thou the slave, with that by breath
Mine innocent child? [hast kill’d
_Bora. Yea, even I alone.
Leon. No, not so, villain; thou bely’st thyself;
Here stand a pair of honourable men.
A third is fled, that had a hand in it:—
I thank you, princes, for my daughter’s death;
Record it with your high and worthy deeds;
’Twas bravely done, if you bethink you of it.
_Claud. I know not how to pray your patience,
Yet I must speak: Choose your revenge yourself;
Impose me to what penance your invention
Can lay upon my sin: yet sin’d I not,
But in mistaken.

_D. Pedro._ By my soul, nor I;
And yet, to satisfy this good old man,
I would bend under any weight
That he’ll enjoin me to.

Leon. I cannot bid you bid my daughter live,
That were impossible: but, I pray you both,
Possess 1 the people in Messina here
How innocent she died: and, if your love
Can labour ought in sad invention,
Hang her an epitaph upon her tomb,
And sing it to her bones; sing it to-night:—
To-morrow morning come you to my house;
And since you could not be my son-in-law,
Be yet my nephew: my brother hath a daughter,
Almost the copy of my child that’s dead,
And she alone is heir to both of us;
Give her the right you should have given her
And so die my revenge. [cousin,
_Claud. O, noble sir,
Your over-kindness doth wring tears from me!
I do embrace your offer; and dispose
For henceforth of poor Claudio.

_D. Pedro._ To-morrow then I will expect your coming;
To-night I take my leave.—This naughty man
Shall face to face be brought to Margaret,
Who, I believe, was pack’d 2 in all this wrong,
Hir’d to it by your brother.

_Bora._ No, by my soul, she was not;
Nor knew not what she did, when she spoke
to me;
But always hath been just and virtuous,
In any thing that I do know by her.

_Dogb. Moreover, sir (which, indeed, is not under white and black), this plaintiff here, the offender, did call me ass: I beseech you, let it be remembered in his punishment; And also the watch heard them talk of one Deformed: they say, he wears a key in his ear, and a lock hanging by it; and borrows money; the which he hath used so long, and never paid, that now men grow hard-hearted, and will lend nothing: Pray you, examine him upon that point.

_Leon. I thank thee for thy care and honest pains._

_Dogb. Your worship speaks like a most thankful and reverend youth.

_Leon. There’s for thy pains. Go, I discharge thee of thy prisoner, and I thank thee._

_Dogb. I leave an arrant knave with your worship; which, I beseech your worship, to correct yourself, for the example of others. I wish your worship well: I humbly give you leave to depart.—Come, neighbour.

_[Exeunt Dogberry, Verges, and Watch.
L. Until to-morrow morning, lords; farewell.
_Ant. Farewell, my lords; we look for you to-
_D. Pedro. We will not fail._

_Claud. To-night I’ll mourn with Hero._

_Leon. Bring you these fellows on; we’ll talk with Margaret.

How her acquaintance grew with this levé 1

_[Exeunt._

SCENE II.—Leonato’s Garden.

Enter Benedick and Margaret, meeting.

_Bene. Pray thee, sweet mistress Margaret, deserve well at my hands, by helping me to the speech of Beatrice._

_Mary. Will you then write me a sonnet in praise of my beauty?_

_Bene. In so high a style, Margaret, that no man living shall come over it; for in most comely truth, thou deservest it._

_Mary. Well, I will call Beatrice to you._

_[Exit Margaret._

_Bene. [Singing._

_The God of love,
That sits above,
And knows me, and knows me,
How pitiful I deserve,—_

I mean, in singing; but in loving.—Leander the good swimmer, Troilus the first employer of pandars, and a whole book full of these quondam carpet-mongers, whose names yet run smoothly in the even road of a blank verse, why, they were never so truly turned over and over as my poor self, in love: Marry, I cannot show it in rhyme; I have tried; I can find out no rhyme to lady but baby, an innocent rhyme; for soorn, horn, a hard rhyme; for school, fool, a babbling rhyme; very ominous endings: No, I was not born under a rhyming planet, nor I cannot woo in festival terms._

_[Enter Beatrice._

_Sweet Beatrice, wouldst thou come when I called thee?_

_Beat. Yea, signior, and depart when you bid
_Bene. O, stay but till then!_ [me.

_Beat. Then, is spoken; fare you well now:—
and yet, ere I go, let me go with that I came for, which is, with knowing what hath passed between you and Claudio._

1 Acquaint. 2 Confederate. 1 Wicked.
Bene. Only foul words; and thereupon I will kiss thee.

Beat. Foul words are but foul breath, and foul breath is noisome; therefore I will depart un-kissed.

Bene. Thou hast frighted the word out of his right sense, so forcible is thy wit: But I must tell thee plainly, Claudio undergoes my challenge; and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward. And I pray thee now, tell me, for which of my bad parts didst thou first fall in love with me?

Beat. For them altogether; which maintained so politic a state of evil, that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them. But for which of my good parts did you first suffer love for me?

Bene. Suffer love; a good epithet! I do suffer love, indeed, for I love thee against my will.

Beat. In spite of your heart, I think; alas! poor heart! If you spit it for my sake, I will spit it for yours; for I will never love that which my friend hates.

Bene. Thou and I are too wise to woo peaceably.

Beat. It appears not in this confession: there's not one wise man among twenty that will praise himself.

Bene. An old, an old instance, Beatrice, that lived in the time of good neighbours: if a man do not erect in this age his own tomb ere he die, he shall live no longer in monument than the bell rings and the wind does weeps.

Beat. And how long is that, think you?

Bene. Question?—Why, an hour in cloumple, and a quarter in rhum: Therefore it is most expedient for the wise, (if Don Worm his conscience find no impediment to the contrary,) to be the trumpet of his own virtues, as I am to myself: So much for praising myself, (who, I myself will bear witness, is praise-worthy), and now tell me, How doth your cousin?

Beat. Very ill.

Bene. And how do you?

Beat. Very ill too.

Bene. Serve God, love me, and mend; there will I leave you too, for here comes one in haste.

Enter Ursula.

Urs. Madam, you must come to your uncle; your old coll at home: it is proved, my lady Hero hath been falsely accused, the prince and Claudio mighty abused; and Don John is the author of all, who is fled and gone; will you come presently?

Beat. Will you go hear this news, signor?

Bene. I will live in thy heart, be buried in thy eyes, and will go with thee to thy uncle's.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.— THE INSIDE OF A CHURCH.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, and Attendants, with music and tapers.

Claud. Is this the monument of Leonato?

Att. It is, my lord.

Claud. [Reads from a scroll.]

1 Tears. 2 Stir.

Done to death by slanderous tongues, Was the hero that here lies: Death in guerdon of her wrongs, Gives her fame which never dies: So the life, that died with shame, Lives in death with glorious fame.

Hang thou there upon the tomb, [Affixing it. Praising her when I am dumb.

Now, music, sound, and sing your solemn hymn.

SONG.

Pardon, goddess of the night, Those that slew thy virgin knight, For which, with songs of woe, Round about her tomb they go. Midnight, assist our moan; Help us to sigh and groan, Heavily, heavily: Graves yawn, and yield your dead, Till death be uttered, Heavily, heavily.

Claud. Now, unto thy bones good night! Yearly will I do this rite.

D. Pedro. Good morrow, masters, put your torches out:

[day. The wolves have prey'd; and, look! the gentle Before the wheels of Tbebus, round about Dapples the drowsy east with spots of grey: Thanks to you all, and leave us; fare you well. C. Good morrow, masters, each his several way; D. Pedro. Come, let us hence, and put on other weeds: And then to Leonato's we will go. [speechs. Claud. And, Hymen, now with luckier issue Than this, for whom we rendered up this woe! [execut.

SCENE IV.—A ROOM IN LEONATO'S HOUSE.

Enter Leonato, Antonio, Benedick, Beatrice, Ursula, Friar, and Hero.

Friar. Did I not tell you she was innocent? L. So are the prince and Claudio, who accus'd Upon the error that you heard debated: [her, But Margaret was in some fault for this; Although against her will, as it appears In the true course of all the question.

Ant. Well, I am glad that all things sort so well. Bene. And so am I, being else by faith enforc'd To call young Claudio to a reckoning for it. L. Well, daughter, and you gentlewomen all, Withdraw into a chamber by yourselves; And, when I send for you, come hither mask'd; The prince and Claudio promis'd by this hour To visit me;—You know your office, brother; You must be father to your brother's daughter, And give her to young Claudio. [Exeunt Ladies. A. Which I will do with confirm'd countenance. Bene. Friar, I must entreat your pains, I think. Friar. To do what, signior?

Bene. To bind me, or undo me, one of them,— Signior Leonato, truth it is, good signior, Your niece regards me with an eye of favour. Leon. That eye my daughter lent her: 'Tis most true, Enter Don Pedro and Claudio, with Attendants.

D. Pedro. Good morrow to this fair assembly.

Leon. Good morrow, prince: good morrow, Claudio:

We here attend you: are you yet determin’d
To-day to marry with my brother’s daughter?
Claud. I’ll hold my mind, were she an Ethiopie.

Leon. Call her forth, brother, here’s the friar ready.

[Exit Antonio.]

D. Pedro. Good morrow, Benedick: What, what’s the matter,
That you have such a February face,
So full of frost, of storm, and cloudiness.

Re-enter Antonio, with the Ladies masked.

Claud. For this I owe you: here come other reckonings.

Which is the lady I must seize upon?

Ant. This same is she, and I do give you her.

Claud. Why, then, she’s mine: Sweet, let me see your face. [her hand,]

Leon. No, that you shall not, till you take Before this friar, and swear to marry her.

Cl. Give me your hand before this holy friar;
I am your husband, if you like of me.

Hero. And when I lived, I was your other wife:

[Unmasking.]

And when you loved, you were my other hus-

Claud. Another Hero? [band.]

Hero. Nothing certain: One Hero died defam’d; but I do live,
And, surely as I live, I am a maid.

D. Pedro. The former Hero! Hero that is dead.

Leon. She died, my lord, but whiles her slander lived.

Friar. All this amazement can I qualify;

When, after that the holy rites are ended,
I’ll tell you largely of fair Hero’s death:

Mean time, let wonder seem familiar,
And to the chapel let us presently.

Bene. Soft and fair, friar.—Which is Beatrice?

Bene. I answer to that name; [Unmasking.

What is your will?

Bene. Do not you love me?

Beat. No, no more than reason.

Bene. Why, then your uncle, and the prince,

Have been deceived: for they swore you did.

Beat. Do you not love me?

Bene. No, no more than reason.

Beat. Why, then my cousin, Margaret, and Ursula, Are much deceiv’d: for they did swear you did.

Bene. They swore that you were almost sick

For me.

Beat. They swore that you were well-nigh dead for me.

Bene. ’Tis no such matter:—Then you do not love me?

Beat. No, truly, but in friendly recompense.

Leon. Come, cousin, I am sure you love the gentleman.

Cl. And I’ll be sworn upon’t, that he loves her;

For here’s a paper, written in his hand,
A halting sonnet of his own pure brain,
Fashion’d to Beatrice.

Hero. And here’s another,

Writ in my cousin’s hand, stolen from her pocket,

Containing her affection unto Benedick.

Bene. A miracle! here’s our own hands against our hearts!—Come, I will have thee; but, by this light, I take thee for pity.

Beat. I would not deny you; but, by this good day, I yield upon great persuasion; and, partly to save your life; for I was told you were in a consumption.

Bene. Peace, I will stop your mouth.—

[Kissing her.]

D. Pedro. How dost thou, Benedick the married man?

Bene. I’ll tell thee what, prince; a college of wit-crackers cannot flout me out of my honour:

Dost thou think, I care for a satire, or an epigram?

No: If a man will be beaten with brains, he shall wear nothing handsome about him: In brief, since I do propose to marry, I will think nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it; and therefore never flout at me for what I have said against it; for man is a giddy thing, and this is my conclusion.—For thy part, Claudio, I did think to have beaten thee; but in that thou art like to be my kinsman, live unbruised, and love my cousin.

Claud. I had well hoped, thou wouldst have denied Beatrice, that I might have cudgelled thee out of thy single life, to make thee a double-dealer; which, out of question, thou wilt be, if my cousin do not look exceeding narrowly to thee.

Bene. Come, come, we are friends:—let’s have a dance, ere we are married, that we might lighten our own hearts, and our wives’ heels.

Leon. We’ll have dancing afterwards.

B. First, o’ my word; therefore, play, musick.

—Prince, thou art sad; get thee a wife, get thee a wife: there is no staff more reverend than one tipped with horn.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My lord, your brother John is ta’en in flight,

And brought with armed men back to Messina.

Bene. Think not on him till to-morrow: I’ ll devise thee brave punishments for him.—Strike up, pipers.

Act First.

Scene I.

Athens. A Room in the Palace of Theseus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Philostrate, and Attendants.

Theseus. Now, fair Hippolyta, our nuptial hour Draws on apace: four happy days bring in Another moon: but, oh, methinks, how slow
This old moon wanes! she lingers my desires,
Like to a step-dame, or a dowager,
Long withering out a young man's revenue.

Hippolyta. Four days will quickly steep themselves in nights;
Four nights will quickly dream away the time;
And then the moon, like to a silver bow
New bent in heaven, shall behold the night
Of our solemnities.

Theseus. Go, Philostrate,
Stir up the Athenian youth to merriments:
Awake the pert and nimble spirit of mirth;
Turn melancholy forth to funerals,
The pale companion is not for our pomp.

(Exit Philostrate.

Hippolyta. I woo'd thee with my sword,
And won thy love, doing thee injuries;
But I will wed thee in another key,
With pomp, with triumph, and with revelling.

Enter Egeus, Hermia, Lysander, and Demetrius.

Egeus. Happy be Theseus, our renowned duke!
Theseus. Thanks, good Egeus: What's the news
with thee?

Egeus. Full of vexation come I, with complaint Against my child, my daughter Hermia.—
Stand forth, Demetrius; My noble lord,
This man hath my consent to marry her:—
Stand forth, Lysander;—and, my gracious duke,

Oberon, King of the Fairies.
Titania, Queen of the Fairies.
Puck, or Robin-Goodfellow, a Fairy.

Peas-Blossom, Cobweb, Moth, Mustard Seed,

Pyramus, Thisbe, Wall, Moonshine, Lion,

Characters in the Interlude performed by the Clowns.

Other Fairies attending their King and Queen.
Attendants on Theseus and Hippolyta.

This hath bewitch'd the bosom of my child:
Thou, thou, Lysander, thou hast given her rhymes,
And interchang'd love-tokens with my child:
Thou hast by moonlight at her window sung,
With feigning voice, verses of feigning love;
And stol'n the impression of her fancy [eels,
With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gauds, con-Knacks, trifles, nose-gays, sweet-meats; messsengers
Of strong prevailment in unharden'd youth:
With cunning hast thou filch'd my daughter's heart;
Turn'd her obedience, which is due to me,
To stubborn harshness:—And, my gracious duke,
Be it so she will not here before your grace
Consent to marry with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient privilege of Athens;
As she is mine, I may dispose of her:
Which shall be, either to this gentleman,
Or to her death; according to our law,
Immediately provided in that case. [maid:
T. What say you, Hermia? be advis'd, fair
To you your father should be as a god;
One that compos'd your beauties; yea, and one
To whom you are but as a form in wax,
By him imprinted, and within his power
To leave the figure, or disfigure it.
Demetrius is a worthy gentleman.
Her. So is Lysander.
The. In himself he is:
But, in this kind, wanting your father's voice,
The other must be held the worthier. [eyes.

T. I would, my father look'd but with my Rather your eyes must with his judgment
I do entreat your grace to pardon me. [look,
I know not by what power I am made bold;
Nor how it may concern my modesty,
In such a presence here, to plead my thoughts:

1 Thimbles.
But I beseech your grace that I may know
The worst that may befall me in this case,
If I refuse to wed Demetrius.

The. Either to die the death, or to abjure
For ever the society of men.
Therefore, fair Hermia, question your desires,
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether, if you yield not to your father's choice,
You can endure the livery of a nun;
For aye to be in shroud cloister new'd,
To live a barren sister all your life,
Chanting plaintive hymns to the cold fruitless moon.
Thrice blessed they, that master so their blood,
To undergo such maiden pilgrimage:
But earthier happy is the rose distill'd,
Than that, which, withering on the virgin thorn,
Grows, lives, and dies in single blessedness.

Her. So will I grow, so live, so die, my lord,
Ere I will yield my virgin patent up
Unto his lordship, whose unwished yoke
My soul consents not to give sovereignty.

The. Take time to pause; and, by the next new moon
(The sealing-day betwixt my love and me,
For everlasting bond of fellowship),
Upon that day either prepare to die,
For disobedience to your father's will;
Or else, to wed Demetrius, as he would:
Or on Diana's altar to protest,
For aye, austerity and single life.

Dem. Relent, sweet Hermia; — And, Lysander, yield
Thy crazed title to my certain right.

Lys. You have her father's love, Demetrius:
Let me have Hermia's: do you marry him.

E. Scornful Lysander! true, he hath my love;
And what is mine my love shall render him:
And she is mine; and all my right of her
I do estate unto Demetrius.

Lys. I am, my lord, as well deriv'd as he,
As well possess'd; my love is more than his;
My fortunes every way as fairly rank'd,
If not with vantage, as Demetrius':
And, which is more than all these boons can be,
I am belov'd of beauteous Hermia:
Why should not I then prosecute my right?
Demetrius, I'll avouch it to his head,
Made love to Nedar's daughter, Helena,
And won her soul; and she, sweet lady, dotes,
Devoutly dotes, dotes in idolatry,
Upon this spotted1 and inconstant man.

The. I must confess, that I have heard so much,
And with Demetrius thought to have spoke
But, being over-full of self-affairs, [thereof]
My mind did lose it.—But, Demetrius, come;
And come, Egeus; you shall go with me;
I have some private schooling for you both.
For you, fair Hermia, look you arm yourself
To fit your fancies to your father's will;
Or else the law of Athens yields you up
(Which by no means we may extenuate,)
To death, or to a vow of single life.—
Come, my Hippolyta; What cheer, my love?
Demetrius, and Egeus, go along:
I must employ you in some business
Against our nuptial; and confer with you
Of something nearly that concerns yourselves.

Egeus. With duty, and desire, we follow you.
[Exeunt Thes., Hip., Ege., Dem., and train.
Lys. How now, my love? Why is your cheek
so pale?
How chance the roses there do fade so fast?
H. Belike,2 for want of rain; which I could well
Beteem3 them from the tempest of mine eyes.

Lys. Ah me! for aught that ever I could read,
Could ever hear by tale or history,
The course of true love never did run smooth:
But, either it was different in blood;
Or else mis-grafted, in respect of years;
Or else it stood upon the choice of friends;
Or, if there were a sympathy in choice,
War, death, or sickness did lay siege to it;
Making it momentany4 as a sound,
Swift as a shadow, short as any dream;
Brief as the lightning in the collid5 night,
That, in a spasm, unfolds both heaven and earth,
And ere a man hath power to say,—Behold!
The jaws of darkness do devour it up:
So quick bright things come to confusion.

Her. If then true lovers have been evercross'd,
It stands thus as an effect in destiny;
Then let us teach our trial patience,
Because it is a customary cross;5
[shgs,
As due to love, as thoughts, and dreams, and
Wishes, and tears, poor fancy's6 followers.

Lys. A good persuasion; therefore, hear me,
I have a widow aunt, a dowager [Hermia,
Of great revenue, and she hath no child:
From Athens is her house remote seven leagues;
And she respects me as her only son.
There, gentle Hermia, may I marry thee;
And to that place the sharp Athenian law
Cannot pursue us: If thou lovest me then,
Steal forth thy father's house to-morrow night;
And in the wood, a league without the town,
Where I did meet thee once with Helena,
To do observance to a morn of May,
There will I stay for thee.

Her. My good Lysander!
I swear to thee by Cupid's strongest bow;
By his best arrow with the golden head;
By the simplicity of Venus' doves;
By that which knitteth souls, and prospers loves;
And by that fire which burn'th the Carthage queen,
When the false Trojan under sail was seen;
By all the vows that ever men have broke,
In number more than ever women spoke; —
In that same place thou hast appointed me,
To-morrow truly will I meet with thee.

Lys. Keep promise, love; Look, here comes Helena.

Enter Helena.

Her. God speed fair Helena! Whither away?
Hel. Call you me fair? that fair again unsay.
Demetrius loves you fair: O happy fair!
Your eyes are lodge-stars,6 and your tongue's sweet air
More tuneful than lark to shepherd's ear,
When wheat is green, when hawthorn buds ap-
Sickness is catching; O, were favour7 so! [pair.
Yours would I catch, fair Hermia, ere I go;
My ear should catch your voice, my eye your eye,
1 Perhaps. 2 Black. 4 Polo stars. 3 Love's. 7 Kind regard.
4 Momentary.
My tongue should catch your tongue's sweet melody.
Wore the world mine, Demetrius being bated,
The rest I'll give to you translated.
O, teach me how you look; and with what art
You sway the motion of Demetrius's heart.

Her. I frown upon him, yet he loves me still.
Hel. O, that your frowns would teach my smiles such skill!

Her. I give him curses, yet he gives me love.
Hel. O that my prayers could such affection move.

Her. The more I hate, the more he follows me.
Hel. The more I love, the more he hateth me.
Her. His folly, Helena, is no fault of mine.
Hel. None but your beauty; 'Would that fault were mine!

[face.

Her. Take comfort; he no more shall see my Lysander and myself will fly this place.—
Before the time I did Lysander see,
Seem'd Athens as a paradise to me;
O then, what graces in my love do dwell,
That he hath turned a heaven into hell!

Lys. Helen, to you our minds will we unfold:
To-morrow night when Phoebe doth behold
Her silver visage in the wat'ry glass,
Decking with liquid pearl the bladed grass,
(A time that lovers' flights doth still conceal),
Through Athens' gates have we devis'd to steal.
Her. And in the wood, where often you and I
Upon soft primrose-beds were wont to lie,
Emptying our bosoms of their counsel sweet;
There my Lysander and myself shall meet;
And thence, from Athens, turn away our eyes,
To seek new friends and stranger companies,
Farewell, sweet play-fellow; pray thou for us,
And good luck grant thee thy Demetrius!
Keep word, Lysander: we must starve our sight
From lovers' food, till morrow deep midnight.

[Exit Lys.

Lys. I will, my Hermia.—Helena, adieu;
As you on him, Demetrius dote on you!

[Exit Hel.

Hel. How happy some, o'er others some can be!
Through Athens I am thought as fair as she.
But what of that? Demetrius thinks not so;
He will not know what all but he do know.
And as he errs, dotting on Hermia's eyes,
So I, admiring of his qualities.
Things base and vile, holding no quantity,
Love can transpierce to form and dignity.
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind;
And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blind.
Nor hath love's mind of any judgment taste;
Wings, and no eyes, figure unheedy haste:
And therefore is love said to be a child,
Because in choice he is so oft beguiled.
As waggish boys in game themselves forswear,
So the boy love is perfur'd everywhere:
For ere Demetrius look'd on Hermia's eye,
He hail'd down oaths, that he was only mine;
And when this hail some blood from Hermia felt,
So he dissolved, and showers of oaths did melt.
I will go tell him of fair Hermia's flight:
Then to the wood will he to-morrow night,
Pursue her; and for this intelligence
If I have thanks, it is a dear expence:

SCENE II.—THE SAME, A ROOM IN A COTTAGE.

Enter Snug, Bottom, Flute, Snout, Quince, and Starveling.

Quin. Is all our company here?
Bot. You were best to call them generally, man by man, according to the script.

Quin. Here is the scroll of every man's name, which is thought fit, through all Athens, to play in our interlude before the duke and duchess, on his wedding-day at night.

Bot. First, good Peter Quince, say what the play treats on;
then read the names of the actors, and so grow to a point.

Quin. Marry, our play is—The most lamentable comedy, and most cruel death of Pyramus and Thisby.

Bot. A very good piece of work, I assure you, and a merry.—Now, good Peter Quince, call forth your actors by the scroll: Masters, spread yourselves.

Quin. Answer, as I call you.—Nick Bottom, the weaver.

Bot. Ready: Name what part I am for, and proceed.

Quin. You, Nick Bottom, are set down for Pyramus.

Bot. What is Pyramus? a lover, or a tyrant?
Quin. A lover, that kills himself most gallantly for love.

Bot. That will ask some tears in the true performing of it:
If I do it, let the audience look to their eyes; I will move storms, I will condole in some measure. To the rest:—Yet my chief humour is for a tyrant: I could play Ercles rarely, or a part to tear a cat in, to make all split.

"The raging rocks,
"With shivering shocks,
"Shall break the locks
"Of prison gates:
"And Phibbus' car
"Shall shine from far,
"And make and mar
"The foolish fates."

This was lofty!—Now name the rest of the players—This is Ercles' vein, a tyrant's vein;
a lover is more condoling.

Quin. Francis Flute, the bellows-mender.
Flu. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. You must take Thisby on you.
Flu. What is Thisby? a wandering knight?
Quin. It is the lady that Pyramus must love.
Flu. Nay, faith, let me not play a woman;
I have a beard coming.

Quin. That's all one; you shall play it in a mask, and you may speak as small as you will.

Bot. An I may hide my face, let me play Thisby too; I'll speak in a monstrous little voice;—

——Thisne, Thisne,—Ah, Pyramus, my lover dear; thy Thisby dear: and lady dear!
Quin. No, no: you must play Pyramus, and Flute, you Thisby.

1 Written line.
Bot. Well, proceed.

Quin. Robin Starveling, the tailor.

Starr. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. Robin Starveling, you must play
Thisby's mother.—Tom Snout, the tinker.

Snout. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. You, Pyramus's father; myself Thisby's father;—Snug, the joiner, you, the lion's part;—
and, I hope, here is a play fitted.

Snug. Have you the lion's part written? pray you, if it be, give it me, for I am slow of study.

Quin. You may do it extempore, for it is nothing but roaring.

Bot. Let me play the lion too; I will roar, that I will do any man's heart good to hear me:
I will roar, that I will make the duke say, Let him roar again, Let him roar again.

Quin. An you should do it too terribly, you would fright the duchess and the ladies, that they would shriek: and that were enough to hang us all.

All. That would hang us every mother's son.

Bot. I grant you, friends, if that you should fright the ladies out of their wits, they would have no more discretion but to hang us: but I will aggravate my voice so, that I will roar you as gently as any sucking dove; I will roar you and'twere any nightingale.

Quin. You can play no part but Pyramus;
for Pyramus is a sweet-faced man; a proper man as one shall see in a summer's day: a most lovely, gentleman-like man; therefore you must needs play Pyramus.

Bot. Well, I will undertake it. What beard wore I best to play it in?

Quin. Why, what you will.

Bot. I will discharge it in either your straw-coloured beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple-in-grain beard, or your perfect yellow.

Quin. Masters, here are your parts; and I am to entreat you, request you, and desire you, to con them by to-morrow night; and meet me in the palace wood, a mile without the town, by moon-light; there will we rehearse: for if we meet in the city, we shall be dog'd with company, and our devices known. In the mean time, I will draw a bill of properties such as our play wants. I pray you, fail me not.

Bot. We will meet; and there we may rehearse courageously. Take pains; be perfect; adieu.

Quin. At the duke's oak we meet.

Bot. Enough: I hold or cut bowstrings.

[Exeunt.

Act Second.

SCENE I. — A WOOD NEAR ATHENS.

Enter a Fairy at one door, and Puck at another.

Puck. How now, spirit! whither wander you?

Fairy. Over hill, over dale,
Thorough bush, thorough brier,
Over park, over pale,
Thorough flood, thorough fire,
I do wander everywhere,
Swifter than the moones sphere;
1 As if. 2 Go at all events.

And I serve the fairy queen,
To dew her orbs
Upon the green:
The cowslips tell her pensioners be;
In their gold coats spots you see;
Those be rubies, fairy favours,
In those freckles live their savours:
I must go seek some dew-drops here,
And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear.
Farewell, thou lob2 of spirits, I'll be gone;
Our queen and all her elves come here anon.

P. The king doth keep his revels here to-night;
Take heed, the queen come not within his sight,
For Oberon is passing fell3 and wrath,
Because that she, as her attendant, hath
A lovely boy, stol'n from an Indian king;
She never had so sweet a changeling:
And jealous Oberon would have the child
Knight of his train, to trace the forests wild:
But she performeth, withholds the loved boy, joy:
Crowns him with flowers, and makes him all her
And now they never meet in grove, or green,
By fountain clear, or spangled star-light sheen,4
But they do square,5 that all their elves, for fear,
Creep into acorn cups, and hide them there.

Fat. Either I mistake your shape and making quite,
Or else you are that shrupid and knavish sprite,
Call'd Robin Goodfellow: are you not he,
That fright the maidens of the village?
Skim milk; and sometimes labour in the quern,6
And mock'st how make the breathless housewife churn;
And sometimes make the drink to bear no harm;
Mislead night-wanderers, laughing at their harm?

Those that Hobgoblin call you, and sweet Puck,
You do their work, and they shall have good
Are not you he? [luck:

Puck. Thou speakest aright;
I am that merry wanderer of the night.
I jest to Oberon, and make him smile,
When I a fat and bean-fed horse beguile,
Neighing in likeness of a silly foal;
And sometime lurk I in a gossip's bowl,
In very likeness of a roasted crab,
And, when she drinks, against her lips I bob,
And on her wither'd lap-lap pour the ale.
The wisest aunt, telling the saddest tale,
Sometimes for three-foot stool mistaketh me;
Then slip I from her, and down topples she,
And tailor cries, and falls into a cough; [loffe,
And then the whole quire hold their hips, and
And waxen in their mirth, and neigh and swear
A merrier hour was never wasted there.—
But room, Fairy, here comes Oberon.

Fairy. And here my mistress:—'Would that he were gone?}

SCENE II.

Enter Oberon, at one door, with his train,
and Titania, at another, with hers.

Ober. Ill met by moonlight, proud Titania.
Tit. What, jealous Oberon! Fairy, skip; hence;
I have forsworn his bed and company.

1 Circles. 5 Quarrel. 2 Wild-apple. 6 Handmills.
2 A term of contempt. 7 Laugh. 3 Fierce. 10 Sneeze.
4 Splendour.
SC. II.

MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM.

11

Marking the embarked traders on the flood:
But she, being mortal, of that boy did die;
And, for her sake, I do rear up her boy;
And, for her sake, I will not part with him.

O. How long within this wood intend you stay?
T. Perchance, till after Theseus' wedding-day.
If you will patiently dance in our round,
And see our moonlight revels, go with us;
If not, shun me, and I will spare your haunts.
Obe. Give me that boy, and I will go with thee.

Tita. Not for thy kingdom.—Fairies, away:
We shall chide downstairs, if I longer stay.

[Exeunt Tita and her train.]

Obe. Well, go thy way: thou shalt not from this grove,
Till I torment thee for this injury.—
My gentle Puck, come hither: Thou remember'st Since once I sat upon a promontory,
And heard a mermaid on a dolphin's back,
Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath,
That the rude sea grew civil at her song;
And certain stars shot madly from their spheres,
To hear the sea-maid's musick.

Puck. I remember.

O. That very time I saw, but thou could'st not, Flying between the cold moon and the earth, Cupid all arm'd: A certain aim he took At a fair vestal, thronged by the west;
And loo'd his love-shaft smartly from his bow, As it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts: But I might see young Cupid's fiery shaft Quench'd in the chaste beams of the wat'ry moon;
And the imperial vot'ress passed on, In maiden meditation, fancy-free. Yea mark'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell: It fell upon a little western flower,— Before, milk-white; now purple with love's wound—
And maidsens call it love-in-idleness. Fetch me that flower; the herby I show'd thee once: The juice of it on sleeping eyelids laid, Will make or man or woman madly dote Upon the next live creature that it sees. Fetch me this herb; and be thou here again, Ere the Leviathan can swim a league.

Puck. I'll put a girdle round about the earth In forty minutes. [Exit Puck.]

Obe. Having once this juice, I'll watch Tita when she is asleep, And drop the liquor of it in her eyes: The next thing then she waking looks upon, (Be it on lion, bear, or wolf, or bull, On meddling monkey, or on busy ape,) She shall pursue it with the soul of love. And ere I take this charm off from her sight, (As I can take it with another herb,) I'll make her render up her page to me. But who comes here? I am invisible; And I will overhear their conference.

Enter Demetrius, Helena following him.

Dem. I love thee not, therefore pursue me not.
Where is Lysander, and fair Hermia? The one I'll slay, the other slayeth me. Thou told'st me they were stolen into this wood, And here am I, and wood 1 within this wood.

---

1 Petty. 4 Producing flowers unusually.
2 Banks. 5 Page.
3 A boy's game with nine holes in the ground.
Because I cannot meet with Hermia.
Hence, get thee gone, and follow me no more.
H. You draw me, you hard-hearted adaman:
But yet you draw not iron, for my heart
Is true as steel: Leave you your power to draw,
And I shall have no power to follow you.
Dem. Do I entice you? Do I speak you fair?
Or rather, do I not in plainest truth
Tell you—I do not, nor I cannot love you?
Tell. And even for that do I love you the more.
I am your spaniel; and, Demetrius,
The more you beat me, I will fawn on you;
Use me but as your spaniel, spurn me, strike me,
Neglect me, lose me: only give me leave,
Unworthy as I am, to follow you.
What worser place can I beg in your love,
(And yet a place of high respect with me,)
Than to be used as you use your dog?
Dem. Tempt not too much the hatred of my spirit;
For I am sick, when I do look on thee.
Hel. And I am sick, when I look not on you.
D. You do impeach 1 your modesty too much,
To leave the city, and commit yourself
Into the hands of one that loves you not.
Hel. Your virtue is my privilege for that.
It is not night, when I do see your face,
Therefore I think I am not in the night:
Nor doth this wood lack worlds of company:
For you, in my respect, are all the world:
Then how can it be said, I am alone,
When all the world is here to look on me?
Dem. I'll run from thee, and hide me in the brakes,
And leave thee to the mercy of wild beasts.
H. The wildest hath not such a heart as you.
Run when you will, the story shall be chang'd;
Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chase;
The dove pursues the griffin; the mild hind
Makes speed to catch the tiger: Bootless speed!
When cowardice pursues, and value flies.
Dem. I will not stay thy questions; let me go:
Or, if thou follow me, do not believe
But I shall do thee mischief in the wood.
Hel. Ay, in the temple, in the town, the field,
You do me mischief. Fye, Demetrius!
Your wrongs do set a scandal on my sex!
We cannot fight for love, as men may do;
We should be wo'd, and were not made to woo.
I'll follow thee, and make a heaven of hell,
To die upon the hand I love so well.
[Exeunt Dem. and Hel.

Obe. Fare thee well, nymph; ere he do leave this grove,
Thou shalt fly him, and he shall seek thy love.—

Re-enter Puck.

Hast thou the flower there? Welcome wanderer.
Puck. Ay, there it is.
Obe. I pray thee, give it me.
I know a bank whereon the wild thyme blows,
Where ox-lips2 and the nodding violet grows:
Quite over-canopied with lish3 woodbine,
With sweet musk-roses, and with eglantine:
There sleeps Titania, some time of the night,
Lull'd in these flowers with dances and delight.
1 Call in question. 2 The cowslip. 3 Rich colour.

And there the snake throws her enamell'd skin,
Weed wide enough to wrap a fairy in:
And with the juice of this I'll streak her eyes,
And make her full of hateful fantasies.
Take thou some of it, and seek through this
A sweet Athenian lady is in love [grove:
With a disdainful youth: anoint his eyes;
But do it, when the next thing he espies
May be the lady: Thou shalt know the man
By the Athenian garments he hath on.
Effect it with some care; that he may prove
More fond on her, than she upon her love;
And look thou meet me ere the first cock crow.

Puck. Fear not, my lord, your servant shall do so.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—ANOTHER PART OF THE WOOD.
Enter Titania, with her train.

Tita. Come, now a roundel,1 and a fairy song;
Then, for the third part of a minute, hence;
Some, to kill cankers in the musk-rose buds;
Some, with rear-mice2 for their leathern wings,
To make my small elves coats; and some, keep
The clamorous owl, that nightly hoots, and wonders
At our quaint spirits: Sing me now asleep;
Then to your offices, and let me rest.

SONG.

1 FAI. You spotted snakes, with double tongue,
Thorny hedge-hogs, be not seen;
Neats, and blind-worms, do no wrong;
Come not near our fairy queen:3
Chorus. Philomel, with melody,
Sing in our sweet lullaby;
Lulla, lulla, lullaby; lulla, lulla, lullaby;
Never harm, nor spell, nor charm,
Come our lovely lady nigh;
So, good night, with lullaby.

2 FAI. Weaving spiders, come not here:
Hence, you long-legged spinners,
Beetles black, approach not near; hence;
Worm, nor snail, do no offence.
Chorus. Philomel, with melody, &c.

1 FAI. Hence, away; now all is well:
One, aloof, stand sentinel.
[Exeunt Fairies. Titania sleeps.

Enter Oberon.

Obe. What thou seest, when thou dost wake,
[Squeezes the flower on Titania's eye-lids.
Do it for thy true love take;
Love, and languish for his sake:
Be it ouncé,6 or cat, or bear,
Pard, or boar with bristled hair,
In thy eye that shall appear
When thou wak'st, it is thy dear;
Wake, when some vile thing is near.
[Exit.

Enter Lysander and Hermia.

Lys. Fair love, you faint with wandering in the wood:
And to speak truth, I have forgot our way;

1 A dance. 3 Sports. 5 Of the genus Angus. 2 Bats. 4 Lizards. 6 Of the lynx kind.
We'll rest us, Hermia, if you think it good,
And tarry for the comfort of the day.
Her. Bo it so, Lysander: find you out a bed,
For I upon this bank will rest my head.
Such separation, as, may well be said,
Becomes a virtuous bachelor and a maid:
So far be distant; and good night, sweet friend:
Thy love ne'er alter, till thy sweet life end!
Lys. Amen, amen, to that fair prayer, say I;
And then end life, when I can loyalty
Here is my bed: sleep give thee all his rest!
Her. With half that wish the wiser's eyes be pressed!

(They sleep.)

Enter Puck.

Puck. Through the forest have I gone,
But Athenian found I none.
On whose eyes I might approve
This flower's force in stirring love.
Night and silence! who is here?
Weeds of Athens be doth wear:
This is he my master said,
Despis'd the Athenian maid;
And here the maiden, sleeping sound,
On the dank and dirty ground,
Pretty soul! she durst not lie
Near this lack-love, kill-courtesy.
Churl, upon thy eyes I throw
All the power this charm doth owe:
When thou wak'st let love forbid
Sleep his seat on thy eyelid,
So awake, when I am gone;
For I must now to Oberon.

(Exit Demetrius and Helena, running.)

Hel. Stay, though thou kill me, sweet Demetrius.
[me thus.
Dem. I charge thee, hence, and do not haunt
H. O, wilt thou darkling leave me? do not so.
Dem. Stay, on thy peril; I alone will go.

(Exit Demetrius.)

Hel. O, I am out of breath in this fond chase!
The more my prayer, the lesser is my grace.
Happy is Hermia, wheresoe'er she lies;
For she hath blessed and attractive eyes.
How came her eyes so bright? Not with salt tears:
If so, my eyes are oftener wash'd than hers.
No, no, I am us ugly as a bear;
For beasts that meet me, run away for fear:
Therefore, no marvel, though Demetrius
Do, as a monster, fly my presence thus:
What wicked and dissembling glass of mine
Made me compare with Hermia's spery eye?
But who is here?—Lysander! on the ground!
Dead? or asleep? I see no blood, no wound:
Lysander, if you live, good sir, awake.

Lys. And run through fire I will, for thy sweet sake.

[Waking.
Transparent Helena! Nature here shows art,
That through thy bosom makes me see thy heart.
Where is Demetrius? O, how fit a word
Is that vile name to perish on my sword!
Hel. Do not say so, Lysander: say not so:
What though he love your Hermia? O, what though?
Yet Hermia still loves you: then be content.

Lys. Content with Hermia? No: I do repent
The tedious minutes I with her have spent.
Not Hermia, but Helena I love:
Who will not change a raven for a dove?
The will of man is by his reason swayed;
And reason says you are the worthier maid.
Things growing are not ripe until their season:
So I, being young, till now ripe to reason;
And touching now the point of human skill,
Reason becomes the marshal to my will,
And leads me to your eyes, where I o'erclock
Love's stories written in love's richest book.
Hel. Wherefore was I to this keen mockery born?
When, at your hands, did I deserve this scorn?
Is't not enough, is't not enough, young man,
That I did never, no, nor never can,
Deserve a sweet look from Demetrius' eye,
But you must flout my insufficiency?
Good truth, you do me wrong, good sooth, you do,
In such disdainful manner me to woo.
But fare you well: perform I must confess,
I thought you lord of more true gentleness.
O, that a lady, of one man refusal,
Should, of another, therefore be abus'd!

Lys. She sees not Hermia:—Hermia, sleep thou there;
And never may'st thou come Lysander near!
For, as a surfeit of the sweetest things
The deepest loathing to the stomach brings,
Or, as the heresies, that men do leave,
Are hated most of those they did deceive;
So thou, my surfeit, and my heresy,
Of all be hated; but the most of me!
And all my powers, address your love and might,
To honour Helen, and to be her knight!

Hel. [Starting.] Help me, Lysander, help me!
do thy best,
To pluck this crawling serpent from my breast!
Ah me, for pity!—what a dream was here?
Lysander, look, how I do quake with fear!
Methought a serpent eat my heart away,
And you sat smiling at his cruel prey:—
Lysander! what, removed? Lysander! lord!
What, out of hearing? gone? no sound, no word?
Alack, where are you? speak, an if you hear;
Speak, of all loves! I swoon almost with fear.
No?—then I well perceive you are not nigh:
Either death, or you, I'll find immediately.

(Exit.)

Act Third.

SCENE I.—THE SAME. THE QUEEN OF FAIRIES LYING ASLEEP.

Enter Quince, Snug, Bottom, Flute, Snout, and Starveling.

Bot. Are we all met?
Quin. Pat, pat; and here's a marvellous convenient place for our rehearsal: This green plot shall be our stage, this hawthorn brake our trying-house; and we will do it in action, as we will do it before the duke.

1 By all that is dear.
Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, sit down, every mother’s son, and rehearse your parts. Pyramus, you begin: when you have spoken your speech, enter into that brake, 1 and so every one according to his cue.

Enter Puck behind.

Puck. What hempen home-spuns have we swaggering here?

So near the candle of the fairy queen?

What, a play toward? I’ll be an auditor;
An actor too, perhaps, if I see cause.

Quin. Speak, Pyramus—Thisy by, stand forth.

Pyr. Thisy by, the flowers of odious savours sweet,

Quin. Oudours, odours.

Pyr. ——odours savours sweet:

So doth thy breath, my dearest Thisy by dear—
But, hark, a voice! I stay thou but here awhile,
And by and by I will thee appear. [Exit.

Puck. [Aside.] A stranger Pyramus than e’er play’d here! [Exit.

This. Must I speak now?

Quin. Ay, marry, must you; for you must understand, he goes but to see a noise that he heard, and is to come again.

[Quin. T. Most radiant Pyramus, most lily-white of colour like the red rose on triumphant brier,
Most briskly juvenal, 2 and eke most lovely Jew,
As true as truest horse, that yet would never tire,
I’ll meet thee, Pyramus, at Ninny’s tomb.

Quin. Ninus’ tomb, man: Why you must not speak that yet; that you answer to Pyramus: you speak all your part at once, cues 3 and all.—Pyramus, enter; your cue is past; it is, never tire.

Re-enter Puck, and Bottom with an Ass’s head.

This. O,—As true as truest horse, that yet would never tire.

Pyr. If I were fair, Thisy by, I were only thin—
Q. O monstrous! O strange! we are haunted.
Pray, masters! fly, masters! help!

[Exit Clowns.

P. I’ll follow you, I’ll lead you about a round,
Through bog, through bush, through brake, through brier;

Sometimes a horse I’ll be, sometime a hound,
A hog, a headless bear, sometime a fire;
And neigh, and bark, and grunt, and roar, and burn,
Like horse, hound, hog, bear, fire at every turn.

[Exit.

Bot. Why do they run away? This is a knavery of them, to make me afeard.

Re-enter Snout.

Snout. O Bottom, thou art changed! what do I see on thee!

[Exit.

Bot. What do you see? you see an ass’s head of your own; Do you?

Re-enter Quince.

Quin. Bless thee, Bottom! bless thee: thou art translated.

[Exit.

1 By our little lady.

2 Juvenile.

3 The last words of a speech, which serve as a hint to the next speaker.
Bot. I see their knavery: this is to make an ass of me; to fright me, if they could. But I will not stir from this place, do what they can: I will walk up and down here, and I will sing, that they shall hear I am not afraid. [Sings.]

The owlet cock, so black of hue,
With orange-tawny bill,
The thrumthese with his note so true,
The wren with little gull.

Tita. What angel wakes me from my flowery bed? [Waking.]

Bot. The finch, the sparrow, and the lark,
The plain-song cuckoo grey,
Whose note full many a man doth war,
And dares not answer, nay;—

or, indeed, who would set his wit to so foolish a bird? who would give a bird the lie, though he cry, cuckoo, never so?

Tita. I pray thee, gentle mortal, sing again: Mine ear is much enamour'd of thy note, So is mine eye enthralled to thy shape: [me, And thy fair virtuous force performe dost move On the first view to say, to swear, I love thee.

Bot. Methinks, mistress, you should have little reason for that: And yet, to say the truth, reason and love keep little company together now-a-days: Th' more the pity, that some honest neighbours will not make them friends. Nay, I can gleeke upon occasion.

Tita. Thou art as wise as thou art beautiful. Bot. Not so, neither; but if I had wit enough to get out of this wood, I have enough to serve mine own turn.

Tita. Out of this wood do not desire to go; Thou shalt remain here, whether thou wilt or no. I am a spirit of no common rate: The summer still doth tend upon my state, And I do love thee: therefore, go with me; I'll give thee fairies to attend on thee; And they shall fetch thee jewels from the deep, And sing, while thou on pressed flowers dost sleep:

And I will purge thy mortal grossness so, That thou shalt like an airy spirit go.—[seed! Peas-blossom! Cobweb! Moth! and Mustard-

Enter four Fairies.

1 Fai. Ready. 2 Fai. And I. 3 Fai. And I. 4 Fai. Where shall we go? Tita. Be kind and courteous to this gentleman; Hop in his walks, and gambol in his eyes; Feed him with apricocks and dawberries, With purple grapes, green figs, and mulberries; The honey-bags steal from the humble-bees, And, for night-tapers, crop their waxen thighs, And light them at the fiery glow-worm's eyes, To have my love to bed, and to arise; And pluck the wings from painted butterflies, To fan the moonbeams from his sleeping eyes: Not to him, elves, and do him courtesies.

Bot. I cry your worship's mercy, heartily.—I beseech, your worship's name?

Cob. Cobweb.

Bot. I shall desire you of more acquaintance, good master Cobweb: If I cut my finger, I shall make bold with you.—Your name, honest gentleman?

Peas. Peas-blossom.

Bot. I pray you, commend to mistress Squash, your mother, and to master Peasod, your father. Good master Peas-blossom, I shall desire you of more acquaintance too.— Your name, I beseech you, sir?

Mus. Mustard-seed.

Bot. Good master Mustard-seed, I know your patience well; that same cowardly, giant-like ox-beef hath devoured many a gentleman of your house: I promise you, your kindred hath made my eyes water ere now. I desire you more acquaintance, good master Mustard-seed.

T. Come wait upon him; lead him to my bower. The moon, methinks, looks with a watery eye; And when she weeps, weeps every little flower, Lamenting some enforced chastity. Tie up my love's tongue, bring him silently.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—ANOTHER PART OF THE WOOD.

Enter Oberon.

Obe. I wonder, if Titania be awak'd; Then, what it was that next came in her eye, Which she must dote on in extremity.

Enter Puck.

Here comes my messenger. Hownow, mad spirit? What night-rule now about this haunted grove? Puck. My mistress with a monster is in love. Near to her close and consecrated bower, While she was in her dull and sleeping hour, A crew of patches, rude mechanicals, That work for bread upon Athenian stalls, Were met together to rehearse a play, Intended for great Theseus' nuptial day. The shallowest thick-skin of that barren sort, Who Pyramus presented, in their sport Forsook his scene, and enter'd in a brake: When I did him at this advantage take, An ass's now! I fixed on his head; Anon, his Thisebe must be answered, [spy, And forth my mimic comes: When they him As wild geese that the creeping fowler eye, Or russet-pated crotchets, many in sort, Rising and cawing at the gun's report, Sever themselves, and madly sweep the sky; So, at his sight, away his fellows fly; And, at our stamp, here o'er and o'er one falls; He murder cries, and help from Athens calls. Their sense, thus weak, lost with their fears, thus strong, Made senseless things begin to do them wrong: For briers and thorns at their apparel snatch; Some, sleeves; some, hats; from yielders all things catch. I led them on in this distracted fear, And left sweet Pyramus translated there: When in that moment (so it came to pass,) Titania wak'd, and straightway lov'd an ass.

1 Paltry fellows. 2 Top of the head. 3 Jackdaws.
Obe. This falls out better than I could devise.
But hast thou yet latch'd the Athenian's eyes
With the love-juice, as I did bid thee do?
Puck. I took him sleeping,—that is finish'd
And the Athenian woman by his side; [too,
That, when he wak'd, of course she must beey'd.

Enter Demetrius and Hermia.

Obe. Stand close; this is the same Athenian.
Puck. This is the woman, but not this the man.
D. O, why rebuke you him that loves you so?
Lay breath so bitter on your bitter toe. [worse;
H. Now I but chide, but I should use thee
For thou, I fear, hast given me cause to curse.
If thou hast slain Lysander in his sleep,
Being o'er shoes in blood, plunge in the deep,
And kill me too.
The sun was not so true unto the day,
As he to me: Would he have stol'n away
From sleeping Hermia? I'll believe as soon
This whole earth may be bor'd; and that the moon
May through the centre creep, and so displease
Her brother's noon-tide with the Antipodes.
It cannot be, but thou hast murder'd him;
So should a murderer look; so dead, so grim.
Dem. So should the murderer look; and so should I,
Pierc'd through the heartwith your stern cruelty;
Yet you the murderer, look as bright, as clear,
As yonder Venus in her glimmering sphere.
Her. What's this to my Lysander? where is he?
Ah, good Demetrius, wilt thou give me me?
D. I had rather give his carcass to my hounds.
Her. Out, dog! out, cur! thou driv'st me past the bounds
Of maiden's patience. Hast thou slain him then?
Henceforth be never number'd among men!
O! once tell true, tell true, even for my sake;
Durst thou have looked upon him, being awake,
And hast thou kill'd him sleeping? O brave touch
Could not a worm, an adder, do so much?
An adder did it; for with doubler tongue
Than thine, thou serpent, never adder sung.
Dem. You spend your passion on a mispris'd
I am not guilty of Lysander's blood; [mood:
Nor is he dead, for aught that I can tell.
Her. I pray thee, tell me then, that he is well.
D. And if I could, what should I get therefor?
Her. A privilege, never to see me more.——
And from thy hated presence part I so:
See me no more, whether he be dead or no. [Exit.
D. There is no following her in this fierce vein:
Here, therefore, for a while I will remain.
So sorrow's heaviness doth heavier grow
For debt that bankrupt sleep doth sorrow owe;
Which now, in some slight measure it will pay,
If for his tender here I make some stay.

[Dies down.

Obe. What hast thou done? thou hast mistaken
quite,
And laid the love-juice on some true love's sight;
Of thy misprision must perfecr ensue
Some true-love turned, and not a false turn'd true.
Puck. Then fate o'er-rules; that, one man holding
A million fail, confounding oath on oath. [troth,
1 Smeared.
2 Mistaken.

Obe. About the wood go swifter than the wind,
And Helena of Athens look thou find:
All fancy-sick she is, and pale of cheer,
With sighs of love, that cost the fresh blood dear;
By some illusion see thou bring her here;
I'll charm his eyes, against she do appear.
Puck. I go, I go; look how I go;
Swifter than arrow from the Tartar's bow. [Exit.

Obe. Flower of this purple die,
Hit with Cupid's archery,
Sink in apple of his eye!
When his love he doth espy,
Let her shine as gloriously
As the Venus of the sky.—
When thou wak'st, if she be by,
Beg of her for remedy.

Re-enter Puck.

Puck. Captain of our fairy band,
Helena is here at hand;
And the youth, mistook by me,
Pleading for a lover's foe;
Shall we their fond pageant see?
O, what fools these mortals be!
Obe. Stand aside; the noise they make,
Will cause Demetrius to awake.
Puck. Then will two at once, woo one;
That must needs be sport alone;
And those things do best please me,
That befl that preposterously.

Enter Lysander and Helena.

Lys. Why should you think, that I should woo in scorn?
Scorn and derision never come in tears:
Look, when I vow, I weep; and vows so born,
In their nativity all truth appears.
How can these things in me seem scorn to you,
Bearing the badge of faith, to prove them true?
Hel. You do advance your cunning more and more.
When truth kills truth, O matchless holy fray!
These were the Hermia's: Will you give her o'er?
Weigh oath with oath, and you will nothing weigh:
Your vows, to her and me, put in two scales,
Will even weigh; and both as light as tales.
Lys. I had no judgement, when to her I swore.
Hel. Nor none, in my mind, now you give her o'er.
Lys. Demetrius loves her, and he loves not Dem. [Awaking.] O Helen, goddess, nymph, perfect, divine!
To what, my love, shall I compare thine eye?
Crystal is muddy. O, how ripe in show
Thy lips, those kissing cherries, tempting grow
That pure concealed, white, high Taurus' snow,
Fann'd with the eastern wind, turns to a crow,
When thou hold'st up thy hand: O let me kiss
This princess of pure white, this seal of bliss!
Hel. O cruel spite! I see you all are bent
To set against me, for your merriment.
If you were civil, and knew courtesy,
You would not do me thus much injury.
Can you not hate me, as I know you do,
But you must join, in souls, to mock me too?
1 Love-sick.
2 Countenance.
3 Eyes.
4 Heartily.
SC. II.

MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM.

147

Like to a double cherry, seeming parted;
But yet a union in partition,
Two lovely berries moulded on one stem;
So with two seeming bodies, but one heart;
Two of the first, like coats in heraldry,
Due but to one, and crowned with one crest,
And will you rent our ancient love asunder,
To join with men in scorn ing your poor friend?
It is not friendly, 'tis not maidenly:
Our sex as well as I, may chide you for it;
Though I alone do feel the injury.

Her. I am amazed at your passionate words:
I scorn you not; it seems that you scorn me.

Hel. Have you not set Lysander, as in scorn,
To follow me, and raise my eyes and face?
And made your other love, Demetrius,
(Who even but now did spurn me with his foot,) To call me goddess, nymph, divine, and rare,
Precious, celestial: Wherefore speaks he this
To her he hates? and wherefore doth Lysander
Deny your love, so rich within his soul,
And tender me, forsooth, affection;
But by your setting on, by your consent?
What though I be not so in grace as you,
So hung upon with love, so fortunate;
But miserable most, to love unlov'd?
This you should pity, rather than despise.

Her. I understand not what you mean by this.

Hel. Ay, do, persever, counterfeit sad looks,
Make mows upon me when I turn my back;
Wink at each other; hold the sweet jest up:
This sport, well carried, shall be chronicled.
If you have any pity, grace, or manners,
You would not make me such an argument.
But fare ye well: 'tis partly mine own fault;
Which death, or absence, soon shall remedy.

Lys. Stay, gentle Helena: hear my excuse;
My love, my life, my soul, fair Helena!

Hel. O excellent!

Her. Sweet, do not scorn her so.

Dem. If she cannot entreat, I can compel.

Lys. Thou canst compel no more than she entreat;
Thy threats have no more strength than her weak prayers.

Helen, I love thee; by my life, I do;
I swear by that which I will lose for thee,
To prove him false, that says I love thee not.

Dem. I say, I love thee more than he can do.

Lys. If thou say so, withdraw, and prove it too.

Dem. Quick, come—

Her. Lysander, whereto tends all this?

Lys. Away, you Ethiop!

Dem. No, no, sir:—he will

Seem to break loose; take on, as you would follow;
But yet come not; you are a tame man, go!

Lys. Hang off, thou cat, thou burr: vile thing, let loose;
Or I will shake thee from me, like a serpent.

Her. Why are you grown so rude? what change is this,
Sweet love?

Lys. Thy love? out, tawny Tartar, out!
Out, loathed medicine! hated potion, hence!

Hel. Do you not jest?

Hel. Yes, 'sooth; and so do you.

1 Wry faces.
Lys. Demetrius, I will keep my word with thee.

D. I would, I had your bond; for, I perceive, A weak bond holds you; I'll not trust your word.

Lys. What, should I hurt her, strike her, kill her dead?

Although I hate her, I'll not harm her so.

Her. What, can you do me greater harm, than hate?

Hate me! wherefore? O me! what news, my love? Am not I Hermia? Are not you Lysander?

I am as fair now, as I was erewhile.

Since night, you lov'd me; yet, since night you left me:

Why, then you left me.—O, the gods forbid!—

In earnest shall I say?

Lys. Ay, by my life;

And never did desire to see thee more.

Therefore, be out of hope, of question, doubt,

Be certain, nothing true, till I'st no jest,

That I do hate thee, and love Helena.

Her. O me! you jangle! you canker blossom!

You thief of love! what, have you come by night,

And stolen my love's heart from him?

Hel. Fine, i' faith!

Have you no modesty, no maiden shame,

No touch of bashfulness? What, will you tear

Impatient answers from my gentle tongue?

Pie, fie! you counterfeit, you puppet you!

Her. Puppet! why so? Ay, that way goes the game.

Now I perceive that she hath made compare

Between our statures, she hath urg'd her height;

And with her personage, her tall personage,

Her height, forsooth, she hath prevail'd with him.—

And are you grown so high in his esteem,

Because I am so dwarfish, and so low?

How low am I, thou painted maypole? speak;

How low am I? I am not yet so low,

But that my nails can reach unto thine eyes.

Hel. I pray you, though you mock me gentle,

Let her not hurt me: I was never curst; [men,

I have no gift at all in shrewishness;

I am a right maid for my cowardice;

Let her not strike me: You, perhaps, may think,

Because she's something lower than myself,

That I can match her.

Her. Lower! hark, again.

Hel. Good Hermia, don't be so bitter with me.

I evermore did love you, Hermia,

Did ever keep your counsels, never wrong'd you;

Save, that, in love unto Demetrius,

I told him of your stealth unto this wood:

He follow'd you; for love, I follow'd him:

But he hath chid me hence; and threaten'd me

To strike me, spurn me, nay, to kill me too:

And now, so you will let me quiet go,

To Athens will I bear my folly back,

And follow you no further: Let me go;

You see how simple and how fond I am. [you?

Her. Why, get you gone; Who is't that hinders

Hel. A foolish heart, that I leave here behind.

Her. What, with Lysander?

Hel. With Demetrius.

Lys. Be not afraid: she shall not harm thee,

Helena.

1 Shrewish.
SC. II.

MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM.

190

P. My fairy lord, this must be done with haste; For night's swift dragons cut the clouds full fast, And yonder shines Aurora's harbinger; [there, At whose approach, ghosts, wandering here and Troop home to church-yards; and the spirits all, That in cross-ways and floodes have burial, Already to their wormy beds are gone; For fear lest day should look their shames upon, They wilfull themselves exil from light, And must for aye consort with black-brow'd 0. But we are spirits of another sort: [night. I with the Morning's Love have oft made sport; And, like a forester, the groves may tread, Even till the eastern gate, all fiery red, Opening on Neptune with fair blessed beams, Turns into yellow gold his salt-green streams. But, notwithstanding, haste; make no delay: We may effect this business yet ere day. [Exit Ob. Puck. Up and down, up and down; I will lead thee up and down: I am fear'd in field and town; Goblin lead them up and down. Here comes one.

Enter Lysander.

Puck. Follow me then

To planter ground. [Exit Lysander as following the voice.

Enter Demetrius.

Dem. Lysander! speak again. Thou runaway, thou coward, art thou fled? Speak. In some bush? Where dost thou hide thy heart? [stars, Puck. Thou coward, art thou bragging to the Telling the bushes that thou art look'st for wars, And wilt not come? Come, recreant; come, thou child; I'll whip thee with a rod: He is defil'd, That draws a sword on thee.

Dem. Yea; art thou there? Puck. Follow my voice; we'll try no manhood here. [Exeunt.

Re-enter Lysander.

Lys. He goes before me, and still dares me on, When I come where he calls, then he is gone. The villain is much lighter heel'd than I: I follow'd fast, but faster he did fly: That fallen am I in dark uneven way, And here will rest me. Come, thou gentle day! [Lies down.

For if but once thou show me thy grey light, I'll find Demetrius, and revenge this spite. [Sleeps.

Re-enter Puck and Demetrius.

Puck. Ho! ho! ho! ho! Coward, why com'st thou not? Dem. Abide me, if thou dar'st; for well I wot, Thou runnst before me, shifting every place: And dar'st not stand, nor look me in the face. Where art thou? Puck. Come hither; I am here. Dem. Nay, thou mock'st me. Thou shalt buy this dear,

If ever I thy face by daylight see: Now, go thy way. Faintness constraineth me To measure out my length on this cold bed. — By day's approach look to be visited. [Lies down and sleeps. Enter Helena.

Hel. O weary night, O long and tedious night, Abate thy hours; shine, comforts, from That I may back to Athens, by day-light, [east; From these that my poor company detest: — And sleep, that sometimes shuts up sorrow's eye, Steal me awhile from mine own company. [Sleeps.

Puck. Yet but three? Come one more; Two of both kinds makes up four. Here she comes, curst and sad: — Cupid is a knavish lad, Thus to make poor females mad.

Enter Hermia.

Her. Never so weary, never so in woe, Bedabbled with the dew, and torn with I can no further crawl, no further go: [briers: My legs can keep no pace with my desires. Here will I rest me, till the break of day. Heavens shield Lysander, if they mean a fray! [Lies down.

Puck. On the ground Sleep sound: I'll apply To your eye, Gentle lover, remedy. [Squeezing the juice on Lysander's eye. When thou wak'st, Thou tak'st True delight In the sight Of thy former lady's eye: And the country proverb known, That every man should take his own, In your waking shall be shown: Jack shall have Jill; Nought shall go ill; The man shall have his mare again, and all shall be well. [Exit Puck.—Dem., Hel., &c., sleep.

Act Fourth.

SCENE I.—THE SAME.

Enter Titania and Bottom, Fairies attending; Oberon behind unseen.

Bot. Monsieur Cobweb; good monsieur, get your weapons in your hand, and kill me a red-haired humble-bee on the top of a thistle; and, good monsieur, bring me the honey-bag. Do not

1 Cephalus.
fret yourself too much in the action, monsieur; and, good monsieur, have a care the honey-bag break not: I would be loath to have you over-flow with a honey-bag, signior.—Where's monsieur Mustard-seed?

Must. Ready.

B. Give me your neck, monsieur Mustard-seed. Pray you, leave your courtesy, good monsieur.

Must. What's your will?

Bot. Nothing, good monsieur, but to help cavalero Cobweb to scratch. I must to the barber's, monsieur; for, methinks, I am marvellous hairy about the face: and I am such a tender ass, if my hair do but tickle me, I must scratch.

Titania. What, wilt thou hear some music, my sweet love?

Bot. I have a reasonable good ear in musick: let us have the tongs and the bones.

T. Or, say, sweet love, what thou desirest to eat.

Bot. Truly, a peck of provender; I could munch your good dry oats. Methinks, I have a great desire to a bottle of hay; good hay, sweet hay, hath no fellow.

Titania. I have a venturous fairy that shall seek the squirrel's hoard, and fetch thee new nuts.

Bot. I had rather have a handful, or two, of dried peas. But, I pray you, let none of your people stir me: I have an exposition of sleep come upon me.

T. Sleep thou, and I will wind thee in my arms. Fairies, begone, and be all ways away. [Exeunt Fairies.

So doth the woodbine, the sweet honeysuckle, Gently entwist,—the female ivy so Enrings the barly fingers of the elm. O, how I love thee! how I dote on thee!

[They sleep.

Oberon advances. Enter Puck.

Obe. Welcome, good Robin. Seest thou this sweet sight?

Her dotage now I do begin to pity. For meeting her of late, behind the wood, Seeking sweet savours for this hateful fool, I did upbraid her, and fall out with her: For she her hairy temple then had rounded With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers; And that same dew, which sometime on the buds Was wont to swell, like round and orient pearls, Should now within the pretty flower's eyes, Like teares, that did their own disgrace bewail. When I had, at my pleasure, taunted her, And she, in mild terms, beg'd my patience, I then did ask of her her changeling child; Which straight she gave me, and her fairy sent To bear him to my bower in fairy land. And now I have the boy, I will undo This hateful imperfection of her eyes. And, gentle Puck, take this transformed scalp From off the head of this Athenian swain; That he awaking when the others do, May all to Athens back again repair; And think no more of this night's accidents, But as the fierce vexation of a dream. But first I will release the fairy queen. Be, as thou wast wont to be;

[Touching her eyes with an herb. 1 Tis.

Dian's bud o'er Cupid's flower Hath such force and blessed power. Now, my Titania; wake you, my sweet queen.

Titania. My Oberon! what visions have I seen! Methought, I was enamour'd of an ass.

Obe. There lies your love.

Titania. How came these things to pass? O, how mine eyes do loath his visage now! Obe. Silence, a while.—Robin, take off this head. Titania, music call; and strike more dead Than common sleep, of all these five the sense. Titania. Musick, ho! music, such as charmeth sleep.

Puck. Now, when thou wak'st, with thine own fool's eyes peep.

Obe. Sound. music. [Still musick.] Come, my queen, take hands with me, And rock the ground whereon these sleepers be. Now thou and I are new in amity; And will, to-morrow midnight, solemnly, Dance in Duke Theseus' house triumphantly, And bless it to all fair posterity: There shall the pairs of faithful lovers be Wedded, with Theseus, all in jollity.

Puck. Fairy king, attend and mark; I do hear the morning lark. Obe. Then, my queen, in silence sad, Trip we after the night's shade: We the globe can compass soon, Swifter than the wand'ring moon.

Titania. Come, my lord; and in our flight, Tell me how it came this night, That I sleeping here was found, With these mortals, on the ground. [Exeunt. [Horns sound within.

Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Egeus, and train.

The. Go, one of you, find out the forester;— For now our observation is perform'd; And since we have the vaward of the day, My love shall hear the musick of my hounds,— Uncouple in the western valley; go:— Despatch, I say, and find the forester.— We will, fair queen, up to the mountain's top, And mark the musical confusion Of hounds and echo in conjunction.

Hep. I was with Hercules, and Cadmus, once, When in a wood of Crete they bay'd the bear With hounds of Sparta: never did I hear Such gallant chiding; for, besides the groves, The skies, the fountains, every region near Seem'd all one mutual cry: I never heard So musical a discord, such sweet thunder.

The. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind, So flew'd, so sand'd: and their heads are hung With ears that sweep away the morning dew; Crook-knee'd, and dew-lap'd like Thessalian bulls; Slow in pursuit, but match'd in mouth like bells, Each under each. A cry more tuneable Was never holla'd to, nor cheer'd with horn, In Crete, in Sparta, nor in Thessaly: Judge, when you hear. But, soft; what nymphs are these?

Egeus. My lord, this is my daughter here asleep: And this, Lysander; this Demetrius is; 1 Forepart. 2 Large chips. 3 Colour of blood-bound.
This Helena, old Nadar's Helena:
I wonder of their being here together.
The. No doubt, they rose up early, to observe
The rite of May; and, hearing our intent,
Came here in grace of our solemnity.—
But, speak Egeus; is not this the day
That Hermia should give answer of her choice?
Egeus. It is, my lord. [theirs, horns, horns, and shouts within. Demetrius, Lysander, Hermia, and Helena, wake and start up.]
The. Good-morrow, friends. St Valentine is past;
Begin these wood-birds but to couple now?
Egeus. Pardon, my lord. [He and the rest kneel to Theseus.]
The. I pray you all, stand up,
I know you are two rival enemies;
How comes this gentle concord in the world,
That hatred is so far from jealousy,
To sleep by hate, and fear no enmity?
Lys. My lord, I shall reply amazedly.
Half 'sleep, half waking: But as yet, I swear
I cannot truly say how I came here:
But, as I think, (for truly would I speak,—
And now, I do bethink me, so it is;)
I came with Hermia hither: our intent
Was, to be gone from Athens, where we might be Without the peril of the Athenian law.
Egeus. Enough, enough, my lord; you have
I beg the law, the law, upon his head. — [enough:
They would have stolen away, they would, Demetrius
Thereby to have defeated you and me: [triumph,
You, of your wife; and me, of my consent;
Of my consent that she should be your wife.
De. My lord, fair Helen told me of their stealth,
Of this their purpose hither to this wood;
And I in fury hither follow'd them;
Fair Helena in fancy following me.
But, my good lord, I wot not by what power,
(But by some power it is,) my love to Hermia,
Melted as doth the snow, seems to me now
As the remembrance of an idle gawd, 1
Which in my childhood I did dote upon:
And all the faith, the virtue of my heart,
The object, and the pleasure of mine eye,
Is only Helena. To her, my lord,
Was I betroth'd ere I saw Hermia:
But, like in sickness, did I loath this food:
But, as in health, come to my natural taste,
Now do I wish it, love it, long for it,
And will for evermore be true to it.

The. Fair lovers, you are fortunately met:
Of this discourse we more will hear anon.—
Egeus, I will overbear your will;
For in the temple, by and by with us,
These couples shall eternally be knit.
And, for the morning now is something worn,
Our purpose hunting shall be set aside.—
Away, with us, to Athens: Three and three,
We'll hold a feast in great solemnity.—
Come Hippolyta. [Exeunt The., Hip., Ege., and train.
Dem. These things seem small and undistinguishable,
Like far-off mountains turned into clouds.
1 Ornament.

SCENE II.

ATHENS. A ROOM IN QUINCE'S HOUSE.

Enter Quince, Flute, Snout, and Starveling.
Quin. Have you sent to Bottom's house? Is he come home yet?
Star. He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt, he is transported.
Flute. If he come not, then the play is marred;
It goes not forward, doth it?
Quin. It is not possible; you have not a man in all Athens, able to discharge Pyramus, but he.
Flute. No; he hath simply the best wit of any handycraft man in Athens.
Quin. Yea, and the best person, too; and he is a very paragon for a sweet voice.

Enter Snug.
Snug. Masters, the duke is coming from the temple, and there is two or three lords and ladies more married: if our sport had gone forward, we had all been made men.
Flute. O sweet bully Bottom! Thus hath he lost sixpence a-day during his life; he could not have 'scape d sixpence a-day: an the duke had not given him sixpence a-day for playing Pyramus, I'll be hanged; he would have deserved it: sixpence a-day, in Pyramus, or nothing.

Enter Bottom.

Bot. Where are these lads? where are these hearts?
Quin. Bottom!—O most courageous day! O most happy hour!
Act Fifth.

SCENE I.

An Apartment in the Palace of Theseus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Philostrate, Lords, and Attendants.

The. More strange than true. I never may believe These antique fables nor these fairy toys. [Lieve Lovers and madmen have such seething brains, Such shaping fantasies, that apprehend More than cool reason ever comprehends. The lunatick, the lover, and the poet, Are of imagination all compact: One sees more devils than vast hell can hold: That is the madman: the lover, all as frantic, Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt: The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling, Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven, And, as imagination bodies forth The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing A local habitation, and a name. Such tricks hath strong imagination; That, if it would but apprehend some joy, It comprehends some bringer of that joy; Or, in the night, imagining some fear, How easy is a bush suppos'd a bear? Hip. But all the story of the night told over, And all their minds transfigur'd so together, More witnesses than fancy's images, And grows to something of great constancy; But, howsoever, strange and admirable.

Enter Lysander, Demetrius, Hermia, and Helena.

The. Here come the lovers, full of joy and mirth, Joy, gentle friends! joy, and fresh days of love, Accompany your hearts! Lys. More than to us Wait on your royal walks, your board, your bed! The. Come now; what masks, what dances shall we have, To wear away this long age of three hours, Between our after-supper, and bed-time? Where is our usual manager of mirth? What revels are in hand? Is there no play, To ease the anguish of a torturing hour: Call Philostrate. Philo. Here, mighty Theseus. The. Say what abridgment have you for this evening? What mask? what musick? How shall we begin The lazy time, if not with some delight? [suite Philo. There is a brief, how many sports are ripe; Make choice of which your highness will see first. [Giving a paper. The. [Reads.] The battle with the Centaurs, to be sung, By an Athenian songster to the harp, We'll none of that: have I told my love, In glory of my kinsman Hercules, The riot of the tipsey Bacchantes, Tearing the Thracian singer in their rage. That is an old device; and it was play'd When I from Thesebe came last a conqueror. The thrice three muses mourning for the death Of learning, late deceas'd in beggary. That is some satire, keen, and critical, Not sorting with a nuptial ceremony. A tedious brief scene of young Pyramus, And his love Thisbe: very tragical mirth. Merry and tragical? Tedious and brief? That is hot ice, and wonderous strange snow. How shall we find the concord of this discord? Philo. A play there is, my lord, some ten words long; Which is as brief as I have known a play; But by ten words, my lord, it is too long; Which makes it tedious: for in all the play There is not one word apt, one player fitted. And tragical, my noble lord, it is; For Pyramus therein doth kill himself. Which, when I saw rehearse'd, I must confess, Made mine eyes water; but more merry tears The passion of loud laughter never shed. The. What are they, that do play it? [here, Phil. Hard-handed men that work in Athens Which never labour'd in their minds till now; And now have toll'd their unbreath'd memories With this same play, against your nuptial. The. And we will hear it. Philo. No, my noble lord, It is not for you: I have heard it over, And it is nothing, nothing in the world; Unless you can find sport in their intents, Extremely stretch'd, and conn'd with cruel pain, To do you service. The. I will hear that play; For never anything can be amiss, When simplicity and duty tender it. Go, bring them in;—and take your places, ladies. [Exit Philostrate. Hy. I love not to see wretchedness o'ercharg'd, And duty in his service perishing. [thing. The. Why, gentle sweet, you shall see no such thing. He. He says, they can do nothing in this kind. [nothing. The. The kinder we, to give them thanks for 1 Pastime. 2 Short account.
Our sport shall be, to take what they mistake:
And what poor duty can do,
Noble respect takes it in might, not merit.
Where I have come, great clerks have purposed
To greet me with premeditated welcomes;
Where I have seen them shiver and look pale,
May periods in the midst of sentences,
Throttle their practis'd accent in their fears,
And, in conclusion, dumbly have broke off,
Not paying me a welcome: Trust me, sweet,
Out of this silence, yet, I pick'd a welcome;
And in the modesty of fearful duty
I read as much, as from the rattling tongue
Of sawcy and audacious eloquence.
Love, therefore, and tongue-tied simplicity,
In least, speak most, to my capacity.

Enter Philostrate.

Philo. So please your grace, the prologue is adrest.1

The. Let him approach. [Flourish of trumpets.

Enter Prologue.

Prologue. If we offend, it is with our good-will.
That you should think, we come not to offend,
But with good-will. To show our simple skill,
That is the true beginning of our end.
Consider then, we come but in desire.
We do not come as miniing to content you.
Our true intent is. All for your delight.
We are not here. That you should here repent
The actors are at hand; and, by their show, [you,
You shall know all, that you are like to know.
These. This fellow doth not stand upon points.
Lyceus. He hath read his prologue, like a rough colt; he knows not the stop. A good moral, my lord: It is not enough to speak, but to speak true.

Hip. Indeed he hath played on this prologue, like a child on a recorder;2 a sound, but not in government.

The. His speech was like a tangled chain:
nothing impaired, but all disordered. Who is next?

Enter Pyramus and Thisbe, Wall, Moonshine,
and Lion, as in dumb show.

Prologue. Gentles, perchance you wonder at this show:
[plain.

But wonder on, till truth make all things
This man is Pyramus, if you would know;
This beauteous lady Thisby is, certain.
This man, with lime and rough-cast, doth present
[sunder:

Wall, that vile wall which did these lovers
And through wall's chink, poor souls, they content
To whisper; at the which let no man wonder.
This man, with lantern, dog, and bush of thorn,
Presenteth moon-shine: for, if you will know,
By moon-shine did these lovers think no scorn
To meet at Ninus' tomb, there, there to woo.
This grisly beast, which by name Lion hight,3
This trusty Thisby, coming first by night,
Did scare away, or rather did affright.
And, as she fled, her mantle she did fall;
Which lion with bloody mouth did stain:

1 Prepared. 2 An instrument like a bagpiper. 3 Is called.

"Anon comes Pyramus, sweet youth, and tall,
"And finds his trusty Thisby's mantle slain:
"Whereat with blade, with bloody blamful blade,
[breast;
"He bravely broach'd his boiling bloody
And, Thisby tarrying in mulberry shade,
"His dagger drew, and died. For all the rest,
"Let lion, moonshine, wall and lovers twain,
"At large discourse, while here they do remain."
[Entral Prologue, Pyr., Thisbe, Lion, & Moonshine.

The. I wonder if the lion be to speak.
Dem. No wonder, my lord: one lion may,
when many asse do.

Wall. "In this same interlude, it doth befal,
"That I, one Snout by name, present a wall;
"And such a wall, as I would have you think,
"That had in it a cranny'd hole, or chink,
"Through which the lovers, Pyramus and Thisby,
"Did whisper often very secretly, [show
This loam, this rough-cast, and this stone, doth
"That I am that same wall; the truth is so;
"And this the cranny is, right and sinister,
"Through which the fearful lovers are to whisper."

The. Would you desire lime and hair to speak better?
Dem. It is the wittiest portion that ever I heard discourse, my lord.

The. Pyramus draws near the wall: silence!

Enter Pyramus.

Pyramus. "O grim-look'd night! O night with hue so black!
"O night, which ever art, when day is not!
"O night, O night, alack, alack, alack,
"I fear my Thisby's promise is forgot —
"And thou, O wall, O sweet, O lovely wall,
"That stand'st between her father's ground and mine!
"Thou wall, O wall, O sweet and lovely wall,
"Show me thy chink, to blink through with mine eye.1 [Wall holds up his fingers.
"Thanks, courteous wall! Jove shield thee well
"But what see I? No Thisby do I see. [for this!
"O wicked wall, through whom I see no bliss;"Curst be thy stones for thus deceiving me!

The. The wall, methinks, being sensible, should curse again.

Pyramus. No, in truth, sir, he should not. De-catching me, is Thisby's cue: she is to enter now, and I am to spy her through the wall. You shall see, it will fall pat as I told you:—Yonder
she comes.

Enter Thisbe.

T. "O wall, full often hast thou heard my moans,
"For parting my fair Pyramus and me:
"My cherry lips have often kissed thy stones:
"Thy stones, with lime and hair knit up in thee."

Pyramus. "I see a voice: now will I to the chink,
"To spy an I can hear my Thisby's face.
"Thisby!"

Thisbe. "My love, thou art my love, I think."

Pyramus. "Think what thou wilt, I am thy lover's
And like Limander am I trusty still." [Grace: 1 Eyes.
Enter Thisbe.

This. "This is old Ninny's tomb: Where is Lion. "Oh,—" [my love?"

[The Lion roars.—Thisbe runs off.

Dem. Well roared, lion.

The. Well run, Thisbe.

Hip. Well shone, moon.—Truly, the moon shines with a good grace.

The. Well moused, lion.

[The Lion tears Thisbe's mantle, and exit.

Dem. And so comes Pyramus.

Lys. And so the lion vanish'd.

Enter Pyramus.

Pyr. "Sweet moon, I thank thee for thy sunny beams;
"I thank thee, moon, for shining now so bright;
"For, by thy gracious, golden, glittering streams,
"I trust to taste of truer Thisby's sight.
"But stay,—O spite!
"But mark,—Poor knight,
"What dreadful dole is here?
"Eyes, do you see?
"How can it be?
"O dainty duck! O dear!
"Thy mantle good,
"What, stain'd with blood?
"Approach, ye furies fell!
"O fates! come, come;
"Cut thread and thrum;[1]
"Quail, crush, conclude, and quell!"

The. This passion, and the death of a dear friend, would go near to make a man look sad.

Hip. Beshrew my heart, but I pity the man.

Pyr. "O, wherefore, nature, didst thou lions frame?
"Since lion vile hath here desil'd my dear:
"Which is,—no, no,—which was the fairest dame,
"That liv'd, that lov'd, that lik'd, that look'd with cheer. 2
"Come, tears, confound:
"Out, sword, and wound
"The pap of Pyramus:
"Ay, that left pap,
"Where heart doth hop:
"Thus die I, thus, thus, thus.
"Now am I dead,
"Now am I fled;
"My soul is in the sky:
"Tongue, loose thy light!
"Moon, take thy flight!
"Now die, die, die, die, die, die."

[Dies.—Exit Moonshine.

D. No die, but an ace, for him; for heirs but one.

Lys. Less than an ace, man; for he is dead; he is nothing.

The. With the help of a surgeon, he might yet recover, and prove an ass.

Hip. How chance moonshine is gone, before Thisbe comes back and finds her lover?

The. She will find him by star-light.—Here she comes; and her passion ends the play.
Enter Thisbe.

_Hip._ Methinks, she should not use a long one, for such a Pyramus: I hope she will be brief,

_Dem._ A note will turn the balance, which Pyramus, which Thisbe is the better.

_Lys._ She hath spied him already with those sweet eyes.

_Dem._ And thus she moans, _videlicet._—

_This_. "Asleep, my love?

"What, dead, my dove?

"O, Pyramus, arise,

"Speak, speak. Quite dumb?

"Dead, dead. A tomb

"Must cover thy sweet eyes,

"These lily brows,

"This cherry nose,

"These yellow cowslip cheeks,

"Are gone, are gone:

"Lovers, make moan!

"His eyes were green as leeks.

"O sisters three,

"Come, come, to me,

"With hands as pale as milk;

"Lay them in gore;

"Since you have shore

"With shears his thread of silk.

"Tongue, not a word:—

"Come, trusty sword;

"Come, blade, my breast imbrue:

"And farewell, friends:—

"Thus Thisbe ends:

"Adieu, adieu, adieu." [Dies.

_T._ Moonshine and lion are left to bury the dead.

_Dem._ Ay, and wall too.

_Bot._ No, I assure you; the wall is down that parted their fathers. Will it please you to see the epilogue, or to hear a Bergomask dance, between two of our company?

_The._ No epilogue, I pray you; for your play needs no excuse. Never excuse; for when the players are all dead, there need none to be blamed. Marry, if he that writ it, had play’d Pyramus and Thisbe himself in Thisbe’s garter, it would have been a fine tragedy: and so it is, truly; and very notably discharged. But come, your Bergomask: let your epilogue alone.

[Here a dance of Clowns.

The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve:—

Lovers, to bed; ’tis almost fair time.

I fear we shall outsleep the coming morn,
As much as we this night have overwatch’d.

This palpable gross play hath well beguill’d
The heavy gait of night. —Sweat friends, to bed.

A fortnight hold we this solemnity,
In nightly revels, and new jolly. [Exit.

SCENE II.

Enter Puck.

_Puck._ Now the hungry lion roars,
And the wolf beholds the moon;
Whilst the heavy ploughman snores,
All with weary task fordone.¹

Now the wasted brands do glow,
Whilst the scratch-owl, screeching loud,

¹ Overcome.

puts the wretch, that lies in woe,
In remembrance of a shroud.

Now it is the time of night,
That the graves, all gaping wide,
Every one lets forth his sprite,
In the church-way paths to glide;
And we fairies that do run
By the triple Hecat’s team,
From the presence of the sun,
Following darkness like a dream,
Now are frolick; not a mouse
Shall disturb this hallow’d house:
I am sent, with broom, before,
To sweep the dust behind the door.

Enter Oberon and Titania, with their Train.

_Ob._ Through this house give glistening light,
By the dead and drowsy fire:
Every elf, and fairy sprite,
Hop as light as bird from brier;
And his ditty, after me,
Sing, and dance it trippingly.

_Tita._ First, rehearse this song by rote:
To each word a warbling note,
Hand in hand, with fairy grace,
Will we sing, and bless this place.

SONG, AND DANCE.

_Obe._ Now, until the break of day,
Through this house each fairy stray.
To the best bride-bed will we,
Which by us shall blessed be;
So shall all the couples three Ever true in loving be;
And the blots of nature’s hand
Shall not in their issue stand;
Never mole, harc-lip, nor scar,
Nor mark prodigious,¹ such as arc
Despised in nativity,
Shall upon their children be.—
With this field-dew consecrate,
Every fairy take his gate²;
And each several chamber bless,
Through this palace with sweet peace:
E’er shall it in safety rest,
And the owner of it blest.

_Trip away;
Make not stay;
Meet me all by break of day.

_Exect Oberon, Titania, and Train.

_Puck._ If we shadows have offended,
Think but this, (and all is mended,)¹
That you have but slumber’d here,
While these visions did appear,
And this weak and idle theme,
No more yielding but a dream,
Gentles, do not reprehend;
If you pardon, we will mend.
And, as I am honest Puck,
If we have unearned luck
Now to ‘scape the serpent’s tongue,
We will make amends, ere long;
Else the Puck a liar call.
So, good night unto you all.
Give me your hands, if we be friends,
And Robin shall restore amends.

[Exit.

Act First.

SCENE I.

NAVARR. A PARK, WITH A PALACE IN IT.

Enter the King, Biron, Longaville, & Dumain.

King. Let fame, that all hunt after in their Live register'd upon our brazen toms, [lives,
And then grace us in the disgrace of death;
When, spite of cornorant devouring time,
The endeavour of this present breath may buy
That honour, which shall bate his stythc's keen
And make us heirs of all eternity. [edge,
Therefore, brave conquerors:—for so you are,
That war against your own affections,
And the huge army of the world's desires,—
Our late edict shall strongly stand in force;
Navarre shall be the wonder of the world;
Our court shall be a little academe,
Still and contemplative in living art.
You three, Biron, Dumain, and Longaville,
Have sworn for three years term to live with me,
My fellow-scholars, and to keep those statutes,
That are recorded in this schedule here:
Your oaths are past, and now subscribe your names;
That his own hand may strike his honour down,
That violates the smallest branch herein:
If you are arm'd to do, as sworn to do,
Subscribe to your deep oath, and keep it too.

Lon. I am resolv'd; 'tis but a three years' fast,
The mind shall banquet, though the body pine:
Fat paunches have lean pates; and dainty bits
Make rich the ribs, but bank'rut quite the wits.

Dum. My loving lord, Dumain is mortified;
The grosser manner of these world's delights
He throws upon the gross world's baser slaves:
To love, to wealth, to pomp, I pine and die;
With all these living in philosophy.

Biron. I can but say their protestation over,
So much, dear liege, I have already sworn,
That is, To live and study here three years.
But there are other strict observances:

As, not to see a woman in that term;
Which, I hope well, is not enrolled there;
And, one day in a week to touch no food;
And but one meal on every day beside;
The which, I hope, is not enrolled there;
And then to sleep but three hours in the night,
And not be seen to wink of all the day:
(When I was wont to think no harm all night,
And make a dark night too of half the day;)
Which, I hope well, is not enrolled there:
O, these are barren tasks, too hard to keep;
Not to see ladies, study, fast, not sleep.

K. Your oaths pass'd to pass away from these;
B. Let me say no, my liege, an if you please?
I only swore, to study with your grace,
And stay here in your court for three years' space.

Lon. You swore to that, Biron, and to the rest.
B. By yea and nay, sir, then I swore in jest.

What is the end of study? Let me know.

King. Why, that to know, which else we should not know.

Biron. Things hid and barr'd, you mean,
from common sense?

King. Ay, that is study's god-like recompense.

Biron. Come on then, I will swear to study so.

To know the thing I am forbid to know:
As thus,—To study where I well may dine,
When I to feast expressly am forbid;
Or, study where to meet some mistress fine.

When mistresses from common sense are hid:
Or, having sworn too hard-a-keeping oath,
Study to break it, and not break my truth.
If study's gain be thus, and this be so,
Study knows that, which yet it doth not know:

Swear me to this, and I will ne'er say, no.
K. These be the stops that hinder study quite,
And train our intellects to vain delight.

Biron. Why, all delights are vain; but that most vain,
Which, with pain purchas'd, doth inherit pain:

As, painfully to pore upon a book,
To seek the light of truth; while truth the while Both falsely blind the eyesight of his look;
Light, seeking light, doth light of light beguile:
So, ere you find where light in darkness lies,
Your light grows dark by losing of your eyes.
Study me how to please the eye indeed,
By fixing it upon a fairer eye;
Who dazzling so, that eye shall be his heed,
And give him light that was it blinded by.
Study is like the heaven's glorious sun,
That will not be deep-search'd with saucy looks;
Small have continual plodders ever won,
Save base authority from others' books.
These earthy godfathers of heaven's lights,
That give a name to every fixed star,
Have no more profit of their shining nights,
Than those that walk, and wot not what they are.
Too much to know, is, to know nought but fame;
And every godfather can give a name.
King. How well he's read, to reason against reading! [ceding!
Dum. Proceeded well, to stop all good prof-
Long. He weeds the corn, and still let's grow the weeding.
Biron. The spring is near, when greengee are a-breeding.
Dum. How follows that?
Biron. Fit in his place and time.
Dum. In reason nothing.
Biron. Something then in rhyme.
Long. Biron is like an envious snipping I frost,
That bites the first-born infants of the spring.
Biron. Well, say I am; why should proud summer boast,
Before the birds have any cause to sing?
Why should I joy in an abortive birth?
At Christmas I no more desire a rose
Than wish a snow in May's new-fangled shows;
But like of each thing, that in season grows.
So you, to study now it is too late.
Climb o'er the house t' unlock the little gate.
K. Well, sit you out: go home, Biron; adieu!
Biron. No, my good lord; I have sworn to stay with you:
And, though I have for barbarism spoke more,
Than for that angel knowledge you can say,
Yet confident I'll keep what I have sworn,
And bide the penance of each three years' day.
Give me the paper, let me read the same;
And to the strictest decrees I'll write my name.
King. How well this yielding rescues thee from shame!
Biron. [Reads.] Item, That no woman shall come within a mile of my court.—
And hath this been proclain'd?
Long. Four days ago.
Biron. Let's see the penalty.
[Reads.]—On pain of losing her tongue. —
Who devis'd this?
Long. Marry, that did I.
Long. To fright them hence with that dread
Biron. A dangerous law against gentility.
[Reads.] Item, If any man be seen to talk with a woman within the term of three years, he shall endure such publick shame as the rest of the court can possibly devise.—

1 Nipping.

This article, my liege, yourself must break;
For, well you know, here comes in embassy
The French king's daughter, with yourself to speak,—
A maid of grace, and complete majesty,—
About surrender-up of Aquitain
To her decrepit, sick, and bed-rid father:
Therefore this article is made in vain,
Or vainly comes the admired princess hither.
King. What say you, lords? why, this was quite forgot.
Biron. So study evermore is overshot;
While it doth study to have what it would,
It doth forget to do the thing it should;
And when it hath the thing it hunteth most,
'Tis won, as towns with fire; so won, so lost.
King. We must, of force, dispense with this
She must be here on mere necessity. [decree;
Biron. Necessity will make us all forsworn,
Three thousand times within this three years' space;
For every man with his affects is born;
Not by might mastered, but by special grace:
If I break faith, this word shall speak for me,
I am forsworn on mere necessity.—
So to the laws at large I write my name:—

[Subscribes.
And he, that breaks them in the least degree,
Stands in attendant of perpetual shame:
Suggestions1 are to others, as to me;
But, I believe, although I seem so loth,
I am the last that will last keep his oath.
But is there no quick recreation granted?
King. Ay, that there is: our court, you know,
With a refined traveller of Spain; [is haunted
A man in all the world's new fashion planted,
That hath a mint of phrases in his brain:
One, whom the music of his own vaine tongue
Doth ravish, like enchanting harmony;
A man of compliments, whom right and wrong
Have chose as umpire of their mutiny:
This child of fancy, that Armado hight,2
For interim to our studies, shall relate,
In high-born words, the worth of many a knight
From tawny Spain, lost in the world's debate.
How you delight, my lords, I know not, I;
But, I protest, I love to hear him lie,
And I will use him for my minstrelsy.
Biron. Armado is a most illustrious wight,
A man of fire-new words, fashion's own knight.
Long. Costard the swain, and he, shall be our sport;
And, so to study, three years is but short.

Enter Dull, with a letter, and Costard.
Dull. Which is the duke's own person?
Biron. This, fellow; What would'st?
Dull. I myself reprehend his own person, for I am his grace's tharborough;3 but I would see his own person in flesh and blood.
Biron. This is he.
Dull. Signior Arme—Arme—commends you.
There's villany abroad; this letter will tell you more.
Cost. Sir, the contempts thereof are as touching me.
King. A letter from the magnificent Armado.

1 Temptations. 2 Called. 3 Constable.
Biron. How low soever the matter I hope for high words.

Long. A high hope for a low heaven: Heaven grant us patience!

Biron. To hear? or forbear hearing?

Long. To hear meekly, sir, and to laugh moderately; or to forbear both.

Biron. Well, sir, be it as the style shall give us cause to climb in the merriness.

Cost. The matter is to me, sir, as concerning Jaquenetta. In manner and form following, I was seen with her in the manor house, sitting with her upon the form, and taken following her into the park; which, put together, is, in manner and form following.

King. Will you hear this letter with attention?

Biron. As we would hear an oracle.

Cost. Such is the simplicity of man to hearken after the flesh.

King. [Reads.] Great Deputy, the welkin’s viegerent, and sole dominator of Navarre, my body’s fostering patron,—

Cost. Not a word of Costard yet.

King. So it is,—

Cost. It may be so: but if he say it is so, he is, in telling true, but so, so.

King. Peace!

Cost. —be to me, and every man that dares not fight!

King. No words.

Cost. —of other men’s secrets, I beseech you.

King. So it is, besieged with sable coloured melancholy, I did commend the black oppressing humour to the most wholesome physic of thy health-giving air; and, as I am a gentleman, betook myself to walk. The time when? About the sixth hour: when beasts most graze, birds best peck, and men sit down to that nourishment which is called supper. So much for the time when. Now for the ground which; which I mean, I walked upon: it is yeleped thy park. Then for the place where; where, I mean, I did encounter that most preposterous event, that draweth from my snow-white pen the e’en-coloured ink, which here thou viewest, beholdest, surveyest, or seest: But to the place, where,—It standeth north-north-east and by east from the west corner of thy curious-knotted garden: There did I see that low-spirited swain, that base minnow of thy mirth.

Cost. Me.

King.—that unletter’d small-knowing soul.

Cost. Me.

King.—that shallow vassal.

Cost. Still me.

King.—which, as I remember, hight Costard.

Cost. O me!

King. —sorted and consort’d, contrary to thy established proclaimed edict and canon, with— with—O with—a child of our grandmother Eve, a female, or, for thy more sweet understanding, a woman. Him I (as my ever esteemed duty pricks me on) have sent to thee, to receive the meed of punishment, by thy sweet grace’s officer, Antony Dull: a man of good repute, carriage, bearing, and estimation.

Dull. Me, an’t shall please you; I am Antony Dull.

King. For Jaquenetta, (so is the weaker vessel called, which I apprehend with the aforesaid), I keep her as a vessel of thy law’s fury; and shall, at the least of thy sweet notice, bring her to trial. Thine, in all compliments of devoted and heart-burning head of duty.

DON ADRIANO DE ARMADO.

Biron. This is the best that ever I heard.

King. Ay, the best for the worst. But, sirrah, what say you to this? Did you hear the proclamation?

Cost. I do confess much of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it.

King. Sir, I will pronounce your sentence; You shall fast a week with bran and water.

Cost. I had rather pray a month with mutton and porridge.

King. And Don Armado shall be your keeper.

—My lord Biron, see him deliver’d o’er.—

And go we, lords, to put in practice that Which each to other hath so strongly sworn.—

[Execunt King, Longaville, and Dumain.

Biron. I’ll lay my head to any good man’s hat, These oaths and laws will prove an idle scorn.

Syrrah, come on.

Cost. I suffer for the truth, sir; for true it is. Jaquenetta is a true girl; and therefore, Welcome the sour cup of prosperity: Affliction may one day smile again, and still then, sit thee down, sorrow!

[Execunt.

SCENE II.—Armado’s House.

Enter Armado and Moth.

Arm. Boy, what sign is it when a man of great spirit grows melancholy?

Moth. A great sign, sir, that he will look sad.

Arm. Why, sadness is one and the self-same thing, dear imp.

Moth. No, no, sir, no.

Arm. How canst thou part sadness and melancholy, my tender juvenal?

Moth. By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough senior.

Arm. Why tough senior? why tough senior?

Arm. I spoke it, tender juvenal, as a congruent epitheton, appertaining to thy young days, which we may nominate tender.

Moth. And I, tough senior, as an appertaining title to your old time, which we may name tough.

Arm. Pretty and apt.

Moth. How mean you, sir? I pretty, and my saying apt? or, I apt, and my saying pretty?

Arm. Thou pretty because little.

Moth. Little pretty, because little: Wherefore apt?

Arm. And therefore apt, because quick.

Moth. Speak you this in my praise, master?

Arm. In thy condign praise.

Moth. I will praise an eel with the same praise.

Arm. What? that an eel is ingenious?

Moth. That an eel is quick.

Arm. I do say, thou art quick in answers: Thou heatest my blood.

Moth. I am answered, sir.

1 Juvenile.
Arm. I love not to be crossed.

Moth. He speaks the mere contrary, crosses love not him.

Arm. I have promised to study three years with the Duke.

Moth. You may do it in an hour, sir.

Arm. Impossible.

Moth. How many is one thrice told?

Arm. I am ill at reckoning, it fitteth the spirit of a tapster.

M. You are a gentleman, and a gamester, sir.

Arm. I confess both; they are both the varnish of a complete man.

Moth. Then, I am sure you know how much the gross sum of deni-ace amounts to.

Arm. It doth amount to one more than two.

Moth. Which the base vulgar do call three.

Arm. True.

Moth. Why, sir, is this such a piece of study? Now here is three studied, ere you'll thrice wink; and how easy it is to put years to the word three, and study three years in two words, the dancing horse will tell you.

Arm. A most fine figure!

Moth. To prove you a cipher. [Aside. Arm.] I will hereupon confess, I am in love; and, as it is base for to love, so am I in love with a base wench. If drawing my sword against the humour of affection would deliver me from the reprobate thought of it, I would take desire prisoner, and ransom him to any French courtier for a new devised courtesy. I think scorn to sigh; methinks, I should out-swear Cupid. Comfort me, boy: What great men have been in love?

Moth. Hercules, master.

Arm. Most sweet Hercules!—More authority, dear boy, name more; and, sweet my child, let them be men of good repute and carriage.

Moth. Samson, master: he was a man of good carriage, great carriage! for he carried the town-gates on his back, like a porter: and he was in love.

Arm. O well knit Samson! strong jointed Samson! I do exel thee in my rapier, as much as thou didst me in carrying gates. I am in love too.—Who was Samson’s love, my dear Moth?

Moth. A woman, master.

Arm. Of what complexion?

Moth. Of all the four, or the three, or the two; or one of the four.

Arm. Tell me precisely of what complexion?

Moth. Of the sea-water green, sir.

Arm. Is that one of the four complexions?

Moth. As I have read, sir; and the best of them too.

Arm. Green, indeed, is the colour of lovers: but to have a love of that colour, methinks, Samson had small reason for it. He, surely, affected her for her wit.

Moth. It was so, sir; for she had a green wit.

Arm. My love is most immaculate white and red.

Moth. Most maculate thoughts, master, are masked under such colours.

Arm. Define, define, well-educated infant.

M. My father’s wit, and my mother’s tongue assist me!

Arm. Sweet invocation of a child; most pretty, and pathetical!

Moth. If she be made of white and red,

Her faults will ne’er be known;

For blushing cheeks by faults are bred,

And fears by pale white shown:

Then, if she fear, or be to blame,

By this you shall not know;

For still her cheeks possess the same,

Which native she doth owe.¹

A dangerous rhyme, master, against the reason of white and red.

Arm. Is there not a ballad, boy, of the King and the Beggar?

Moth. The world was very guilty of such a ballad some three ages since: but, I think, now ’tis not to be found; or, if it were, it would neither serve for the writing nor the tune.

Arm. I will have the subject newly writ o’er, that I may example my digression by some mighty precedent. Boy, I do love that country girl, that I took in the park with the rational hind, Costard; she deserves well.

Moth. To be whipped; and yet a better love than my master. [Aside. Arm.] Sing, boy; my spirit grows heavy in love.

Moth. And that’s great marvel, loving a light woman.

Arm. I say sing.

Moth. Forbear till this company be past.

Enter Dull, Costard, and Jaquenetta.

Dull. Sir, the duke’s pleasure is, that you keep Costard safe: and you must let him take no delight, nor no pittance; but a’ must fast three days in a week: For this damsel, I must keep her at the park; she is allowed for the day-woman.² Fare you well.

A. I do betray myself with blushing.—Maid.

Jaq. Man.

Arm. I will visit thee at the lodge.

Jaq. That’s here-by.

Arm. I know where it is situate.

Jaq. How wise you are!

Arm. I will tell thee wonders.

Jaq. With that face?

Arm. I love thee.

Jaq. So I heard you say.

Arm. And so farewell.

[Exeunt Dull and Jaquenetta.]

Arm. Villain, thou shalt fast for thy offences, ere thou be pardoned.

Cost. Well, sir, I hope, when I do it, I shall do it on a full stomach.

Arm. Thou shalt be heavily punished.

Cost. I am more bound to you, than your fellows, for they are but lightly rewarded.

Arm. Take away this villain; shut him up.

Cost. Come, you transgressing slave; away.

Arm. Let me not be pent up, sir, I will fast, being loose.

Moth. No, sir, that were fast and loose: thou shalt to prison.

Cost. Well, if ever I do see the merry days of desolation that I have seen, some shall see—

¹ Own.

² Dairywoman.
SHAKESPEARE’S DISTANCE.

SHAKESPEARE’S DRAMATIC WORKS.

ACT II.

Moth. What shall some see?
Cost. Nay, nothing, master Moth, but what they look upon. It is not for prisoners to be too silent in their words; and, therefore, I will say nothing; I have as little patience as another man; and therefore I can be quiet.

[Exeunt Moth and Costard.
Arm. I do affect the very ground, which is base, where her shoes, which is baser, guided by her foot, which is basest, doth tread. I shall be forsworn (which is a great argument of falsehood) if I love: And how can that be true love, which is falsely attempted? Cupid’s butt-shaft is too hard for Hercules’ club, and therefore too much odds for a Spaniard’s rapier.
The first and second cause will not serve my turn; the passado he respects not, the duello he regards not: his disgrace is to be called boy; but his glory is to subordinate. Adieu, valour! rust, rapier! be still drum! for your manager is in love; yea, he loveth. Assist me, some extemporal god of rhyme, for, I am sure, I shall turn sonneteer. Devise, wit; write, pen; for I am for whole volumes in folio.

Act Second.

SCENE I.

A PAVILION, AND TENTS AT A DISTANCE.

Enter the Princess of France, Rosaline, Maria,
Katherine, Boyet, Lords, and other Attendants.

Boyet. Now, madam, summon up your dearest spirits:
Consider who the king your father sends;
To whom he sends; and what’s his embassy:
Yourself, held precious in the world’s esteem;
To parley with the sole inheritor
Of all perfections that a man may owe,
Matchless Navarre; the plea of no less weight
Than Aquitain; a dowry for a queen.
Be now as prodigal of all dear grace,
As nature was in making graces dear,
When she did starve the general world beside,
And prodigally gave them all to you.

Prin. Good lord Boyet; my beauty, though but mean,
Needs not the painted flourish of your praise;
Beauty is bought by judgment of the eye,
Not utter’d by base sale of chapmen’s tongues:
I am less proud to hear you tell my worth,
Than you much willing to be counted wise
In spending your wit in the praise of mine.
But now to task the tasker. — Good Boyet,
You are not ignorant, all-telling fame
Doth noise abroad Navarre hath made a vow,
Till painful study shall out-wear three years,
No woman may approach his silent court:
Therefore to us seemeth it needful course,
Before we enter his forbidden gates.
To know his pleasure; and, in that behalf,
Bold of your worthiness, we single you
As our best-moving fair solicitor:
Tell him, the daughter of the king of France,
1 Love. 2 Arrow to shoot at butts with. 3 Thrust.

On serious business, craving quick despatch,
ImpurItunes personal conference with his grace.
Haste, signify so much; while we attend,
Like humbly-visaged suitors, his high will.

Boyet. Proud of employment, willingly I go.

[Exit.

P. All pride is willing pride, and yours is so.—
Who are the votaries, my loving lords,
That are vow-fellows with this virtuous duke?
1 Lord. Longaville is one.

Prin. Know you the man?

Mar. I know him, madam; at a marriage feast,
Between lord Perigot and the beautious heir
Of Jaques Falconbridge solemnized,
In Normandy saw I this Longaville:
A man of sovereign parts he is esteem’d:
Well fitted in the arts, glorious in arms:
Nothing becomes him ill, that he would well.
The only soil of his fair virtue’s gloss,
(If virtue’s gloss will stain with any soil,)
Is a sharp wit match’d with too blunt a will;
Whose edge hath power to cut, whose will still wills
It should noespare that come within his power.
P. Some merry mocking lord, belike; is’t so?
Mar. They say so much, that most his humours
know.

Prin. Such short-liv’d wits do wither as they
Who are the rest? [grow.

Kath. The young Dumnais, a well accomplish’d youth,
Of all that virtue love for virtue lov’d:
Most power to do most harm, least knowing ill;
For he hath wit to make an ill shape good,
And shape to win grace though he hath no wit.
I saw him at the duke Alençon’s once;
And much too little of that good I saw,
Is my report, to his great worthiness.

Ros. Another of these students at that time
Was there with him: If I have heard a truth,
Biron they call him; but a merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never spent an hour’s talk withal:
His eye begetts occasion for his wit;
For every object that the one doth catch,
The other turns to a mirth-moving jest;
Which his fair tongue (conceit’s expositor)
Delivers in such apt and gracious words,
That aged ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished;
So sweet and voluble is his discourse.

P. Heaven bless my ladies! are they all in love;
That every one her own hath garnished
With such bedecking ornaments of praise;

Mar. Here comes Boyet.

Re-enter Boyet.

Prin.

Now, what admissance, lord?

Boy. Navarre had notice of your fair approach;
And he, and his competitors in oath,
Were all address’d to meet you, gentle lady,
Before I came. Marry, thus much I have learnt,
He rather means to lodge you in the field,
(Like one that comes here to besiege his court,)
Than seek a dispensation for his oath,
To let you enter his unpoiseed house.

Here comes Navarre. [The Ladies mask.

1 Confederates. 2 Prepared.
Enter King, Longaville, Dumain, Biron, and Attendants.

King. Fair princess, welcome to the court of Navarre.

Prin. Fair, I give you back again; and, welcome I have not yet: the roof of this court is too high to be yours; and welcome to the wild fields too base to be mine.

K. You shall be welcome, madam, to my court.

P. I will be welcome, then; conduct me thither.

K. Hear me, dear lady: I have sworn an oath.

P. Our lady help my lord! he'll be forsworn.

King. Not for the world, fair madam, by my will.

Prin. Why, will shall break it; will, and nothing else.

King. Your ladyship is ignorant what it is.

P. Were my lord so, his ignorance were wise, Where now his knowledge must prove ignorance.

I hear, your grace hath sworn out house-keeping: 'Tis deadly sin to keep that oath, my lord, And sin to break it:

But pardon me, I am too sudden-bold;
To teach a teacher ill beseemeth me.

Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my coming,
And suddenly resolve me in my suit.

[Give a paper.

King. Madam, I will, if suddenly I may.

Prin. You will the sooner, that I were away:
For you'll prove perjur'd, if you make me stay.

Biron. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Ros. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Biron. I know you did.

Ros. How needless was it then to ask the question!

Biron. You must not be so quick.

Ros. 'Tis 'long of you that spur me with such questions.

Biron. Your wit's too hot, it speeds too fast, 'twill tire.

Ros. Not till it leave the rider in the mire.

Biron. What time o' day?

Ros. The hour that fools shall ask.

Biron. Now fair befall your mask!

Ros. Fair fall the face it covers!

Biron. And send you many lovers!

Ros. Amen, so you be none.

Biron. Nay, then will I be gone.

King. Madam, your father here doth intimate The payment of a hundred thousand crowns; Being but the one half of an entire sum, Disburs'd by my father in his wars.

But say, that he, or we (as neither have), Receiv'd that sum; yet there remains unpaid A hundred thousand more; in surety of the which, One part of Aquitain is bound to us. Although not valued to the money's worth, If then the king your father will restore But that one half which is unsatisfied, We will give up our right in Aquitain, And hold fair friendship with his majesty. But that, it seems, he little purposeth, For here he doth demand to have repaid An hundred thousand crowns; and not demands, On payment of a hundred thousand crowns, To have his title live in Aquitain;

Which we much rather had depart'd withal, And have the money by our father lent, Than Aquitain divided as it is. Dear princess, were not his requests so far From reason's yielding, your fair self should make A yielding, 'gainst some reason, in my breast, And go well satisfied to France again.

P. You do the king my father too much wrong, And wrong the reputation of your name, In so unseeming to confess receipt Of that which hath so faithfully been paid.

King. I do protest, I never heard of it; And, if you prove it, I'll repay it back, Or yield up Aquitain.

Prin. We arrest your word:—

Boyet, you can produce acquaintances, For such a sum, from special officers Of Charles his father.

King. Satisfy me so. [Come, Boyet. So please your grace, the packet is not Where that and other specialities are bound; To-morrow you shall have a sight of them.

King. It shall suffice me: at which interview, All liberal reason I will yield unto.

Mean time, receive such welcome at my hand, As honour, without breach of honour, may Make tender of to thy true worthiness: You may not come, fair princess, in my gates; But here without, you shall be so receiv'd, As you shall deem yourself lodg'd in my heart, Though so denied fair harbour in my house. Your own good thoughts excuse me, and farewell:

To-morrow shall we visit you again. [Grace! P. Sweet health and fair desires consort your King. Thy own wish wish I thee in every place! [Exit. King and his Train. Biron. Lady, I will commend you to my own heart.

Ros. Pray you, do my commendations; I would be glad to see it.

Biron. I would, you heard it groan.

Ros. Is the fool sick?

Biron. Sick at heart.

Ros. Alack, let it bleed.

Biron. Would that it do good?

Ros. My physic says, I.

Biron. Will you prick't with your eye?

Ros. No poynt, with my knife.

Biron. Now, heaven save thy life!

Ros. And yours from long living!

Biron. I cannot stay Thanksgiving. [Retiring. Dum. Sir, I pray you, a word: What lady is this same?

Boyet. The heir of Alençon, Rosaline her name. Dum. A gallant lady! Monsieur, fare you well.

Long. I beseech you a word: What is she in the white?

Boyet. A woman sometimes, an you saw her in the light.

Long. Pray you, sir, whose daughter?

Boyet. Her mother's, I have heard.

Long. Heaven's blessing on your beard!

Boyet. Good, sir, be not offended:
She is an heir of Falconbridge.

1 Part with. 2 Says ay. 3 A French particle of negation.
Long. Nay, my choler is ended.
She is a most sweet lady.
Boyet. Not unlike, sir; that may be. [Exit Long.

Biron. What's her name in the cap?
Boyet. Katharine, by good hap.
Biron. Is she wedded or no?
Boyet. To her will, sir, or so.
Biron. You are welcome, sir; adieu!
Boyet. Farewell to me, sir, and welcome to you. [Exit Biron.—Ladies unmask.
Mar. That last is Biron, the merry mad-cap.
Not a word with him but a jest. (lord;
Boyet. And every jest but a word.
If my observation, (which very seldom lies,) By the heart's still rhetoric, disclosed with eyes,
Deceive me not now, Navarre is infected.
Prim. With what?
Boyet. With that which we lovers entitle, Prim. Your reason? [affected.
Boyet. Why all his behaviours did make their retire
To the court of his eye, peeping thorough desire:
His heart, like an agate, with your print impressed,
Proud with his form, in his eye pride expressed:
His tongue, all impatient to speak and not see,
Did stumble with haste in his eye sight to be;
All senses to that sense did make their repair,
To feel only looking on fairest of fair:
Methought, all his senses were lock'd in his eye,
As jewels in crystal for some prince to buy;
Who, tend'ring their own worth, from where they were glass'd,
Did point you to buy them, along as you pass'd.
His face's own margent did quote such amazes,
That all eyes saw his eyes enchanted with gazes:
I'll give you Aquitain, and all that is his,
An you give him for my sake but one loving kiss.
Prim. Come, to our pavilion: Boyet is dis-pos'd—
Boy. But to speak that in words, which his eye hath disclosed:
I only have made a mouth of his eye,
By adding a tongue which I know will not lie.
Ros. Thou art an old love-monger, and speak'st skilfully. [of him.
M. He is Cupid's grandfather, and learns news
Ros. Then was Venus like her mother; for her father is but grim.
Boyet. Do you hear, my mad girls?
Mar. No.
Boyet. What then, do you see?
Ros. Ay, our way to be gone.
Boyet. You are too hard for me. [Exeunt.

Act Third.

SCENE I.—THE PARK, NEAR THE PALACE.
Enter Armado and Moth.

Arm. Warble, child; make passionate my sense of hearing.
Moth. Concoct me. [Singing.
Arm. Sweet air!—Go, tenderness of years;
take this key, give enlargement to the swain; bring him festinately hither; I must employ him in a letter to my love.
Moth. Master, will you win your love with a French brawl? 2

Arm. How mean'st thou? brawling in French?
Moth. No, my complete master: but to jog off a tune at the tongue's end, canary to it with your feet, humour it with turning up your eyelids; sigh a note, and sing a note; sometime through the throat, as if you swallowed love with singing love; sometime through the nose, as if you sniffed up love by smelling love; with your hat penthouse-like, o'er the shop of your eyes; with your arms crossed on your thin doublet, like a rabbit on a spit; or your hands in your pocket, like a man after the old painting; and keep not too long in one tune, but a snip and away.

A. How hast thou purchased this experience?
Moth. By my penny of observation.
Arm. But O,—but O,—
Moth. — the hobby-horse is forgot.
Arm. Callest thou my love, hobby-horse?
Moth. No, master; the hobby-horse is but a colt, and your love, perhaps, a hackney. But have you forgot your love?
Arm. Almost I had.
Moth. Negligent student! learn her by heart.
Arm. By heart, and in heart, boy.
Moth. And out of heart, master: all those three I will prove.
Arm. What will that prove?
Moth. A man, if I live; and this, by, in, and without, upon the instant: By heart you love her, because your heart cannot come by her: in heart you love her, because your heart is in love with her: and out of heart you love her, being out of heart that you cannot have her.
Arm. I am all these three.
Moth. And three times as much more, and yet nothing at all.
Arm. Fetch hither the swain; he must carry me a letter.
Moth. A message well sympathised; a horse to be ambassador for an ass!
Arm. Ha, ha! what sayest thou?
Moth. Marry, sir, you must send the ass upon the horse, for he is very slow-gaited: But I go.
Arm. The way is but short; away.
Moth. As swift as lead, sir.
Arm. Thy meaning, pretty ingenious?
Is not lead a metal, heavy, dull, and slow?
Moth. Mincemeat, honest master; or, rather master no.
Arm. I say, lead is slow.
Moth. You are too swift, sir, to say so:
Is that lead slow which is fired from a gun?
Arm. Sweet smoke of rhetoric:
He repents me a cannon; and the bullet, that's I shoot thee at the swain. [he:

Moth. Thump then, and I flee. [Exit.
Arm. A most acute juvenile; valuable and free of grace!
By thy favour, sweet welkin, I must sigh in thy face:
Most rude melancholy, valour gives thee place.
My herald is returned.

1 Hastily. 2 A dance. 3 A sprightly dance.
Re-enter Moth and Costard.

Moth. A wonder, master; here's a costard broken in a shin.

Cost. Some enigma, some riddle: come,—thy l'envoy;—begin.

Arm. I, sir, no enigma, no riddle, no l'envoy; no salve in the mail, sir: O, sir, plantain, a plain plaintain; no l'envoy, no l'envoy, no salve, sir, but a plantain!

Arm. By virtue, thou enforcest laughter; thy silly thought, my spleen; the heaving of my lungs provokes me to ridiculous smiling: O, pardon me, my stars! Doth the inconsiderate take salve for l'envoy, and the word, l'envoy, for a salve?

Moth. Do the wise think them other? is not l'envoy a salve?

Arm. No, page; it is an epilogue or discourse to make plain
Some obscure precede that hath tofore
I will example it:

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Wore still at odds, being but three.
There's the moral: Now the l'envoy.

Arm. The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Wore still at odds, being but three:

Moth. Until the goose came out of door,
And stay'd the odds by adding four.

Arm. Yes, page; it is an epilogue or discourse
to make plain
Some obscure precede that hath tofore
I will example it:

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Wore still at odds, being but three:
Arm. Until the goose came out of door,
Staying the odds by adding four.

Moth. A good l'envoy, ending in the goose:
Would you desire more?

Cost. The boy hath sold him a bargain, a goose, that's flat:
Sir, your pennyworth is good, an goose be fat.

Arm. To sell a bargain well is as cunning as fast and Let me see a fat l'envoy; ay, that's a fat goose.

Arm. Come hither, come hither: How did this argument begin?

Moth. By saying that a Costard was broken in Then call'd you for the l'envoy.

Arm. True, and I for a plantain: Thus came your argument in:
Then the boy's fat l'envoy, the goose that you
And he ended the market.

Arm. But tell me; how was there a Costard
broken in a shin?

Moth. I will tell you sensibly.

Cost. Thou hast no feeling of it, Moth; I will speak that l'envoy:
I, Costard, running out, that was safely within,
Fell over the threshold, and broke my shin.

Arm. We will talk no more of this matter.

Cost. Till there be more matter in the shin.

Moth. Sirrah Costard, I will enfranchise thee.

Cost. O, marry me to one Frances:—I smell some l'envoy, some goose, in this.

Arm. I, mean, setting thee at liberty, enfredoming thy person; thou wert immured, restrained, captivated, bound.

C. True, true; and now you will let me loose.

Arm. I give thee thy liberty, set thee from durance; and, in lieu thereof, impose on thee nothing but this: Bear this significant to the country maid Jaquenetta: there is remuneration;
[Giving him money.] for the best ward of mine honour, is rewarding my dependents. Moth, follow.

Moth. Like the sequel, I.—Signior Costard, adieu.

Moth. So Now will I look to his remuneration.
Remuneration! O, that's the Latin word for three farthings: three farthings—remuneration.

Enter Biron.

Biron. O, my good knave Costard! exceedingly well met.

Cost. Pray you, sir, how much carination ribbon may a man buy for a remuneration?

Biron. What is a remuneration?

Cost. Marry, sir, half-penny farthing.

Biron. O, why then, three-farthings-worth of silk.

Arm. I. thank your worship; Heaven be with
you!

Biron. O, stay, slave; I must employ thee:
As thou wilt win my favour, good my knave,
Do one thing for me that I shall entreat.

Cost. When would you have it done, sir?

Biron. O, this afternoon.

Cost. Well, I will do it, sir: Fare you well.

Biron. O, thou knowest not what it is.

Cost. I shall know, sir, when I have done it.

Biron. Why, villain, thou must know first.

Cost. I will come to your worship to-morrow morning.

Biron. It must be done this afternoon. Hark, slave, it is but this:

The princess comes to hunt here in the park,
And in her train there is a gentle lady;
When tongues speak sweetly, then they name
her name,
And Rosaline they call her: ask for her;
And to her white hand see thou do commend
This seal'd up counsel. There's thy guerdon;

Cost. Guerdo,—O sweet guerdon! better than remuneration; eleven-pence farthing better;
Most sweet guerdon!—I will do it, sir, in print,

—Guerdo—remuneration.

Biron. O!—And I, forsooth, in love! I, that have been love! whip:
A very beadle to a humorous sign;
A critic; nay, a night-watch constable;
A domineering pedant o' the boy,
Than whom no mortal so magnificent!
This whimpled, whining, purblind, wayward boy.
This senior-junior, giant-dwarf, Dan Cupid;
Regent of love rhymes, lord of folded arms,
The anointed sovereign of sighs and groans,
Liege of all loiterers and malcontents,
And I to be a corporal of his field,
And wear his colours like a tumbler's hoop!
What? I! I love! I sue! I seek a wife!

1 Tape. 2 Reward. 3 Exactly. 4 Veiled.
A woman, that is like a German clock,
Still a-repairing; ever out of frame;
And never going a-right, being a watch,
But being watch'd that it may still go right?
Nay, to be perjur'd, which is worst of all;
And, among three, to love the worst of all;
And I to sigh for her! to watch for her!
To pray for her! Go to; it is a plague
That Cupid will impose for my neglect
Of his most mighty dreadful little might.
Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue, and groan;
Some men must love my lady, and some Joan.

[Exit.

Act Fourth.

SCENE I.—A PAVILION IN THE PARK.

Enter the Princess, Rosaline, Maria, Katherine, Boyet, Lords, Attendants, and a Forester.

Prin. Was that the king, that spurred his horse so hard
Against the steep uprising of the hill?
Boyet. I know not; but, I think, it was not he.
Prin. Who'er he was, he showed a mounting mind.
Well, lords, to-day we shall have our despatch;
On Saturday we will return to France—
Then, forester, my friend, where is the bush,
That we must stand and play the murderer in?
F. Here by, upon the edge of youder coppice;
A stand, where you may make the fairest shoot.
Prin. I thank my beauty, I am fair that shoot.
And thereupon thou speakest the fairest shoot.
For, Pardon me, madam, for I meant not so.
Prin. What, what? first praise me, and again say, no?
O short-liv'd pride! Not fair; slack for woe!
For, Yes, madam, fair.
Prin. Nay, never paint me now;
Where fair is not, praise cannot mend the brow.
Here, good my glass, take this for telling true;
[Giving him money.
Fair payment for foul words is more than due.
For, Nothing but fair is that which you inherit.
P. See, see, my beauty will be sav'd by merit.
O heresy in fair, fit for those days!
A giving hand, though foul, shall have fair praise.—
But come, the bow:—Now mercy goes to kill,
And shooting well is then account'd ill.
Thus will I save my credit in the shoot:
Not wounding, pity would not let me do't;
If wounding, then it was to show my skill,
That more for praise, than purpose, meant to kill.
And, out of question, so it is sometimes;
Glory grows guilty of detested crimes;
When, for fame's sake, for praise, an outward part.
We bade to that the working of the heart:
As I for praise alone, now seek to spill
The poor deer's blood, that my heart means no ill.

Boyet. Do not curb' wives hold that self-sovereignty
Only for praise' sake, when they strive to be Lords o'er their lords?
Prin. Only for praise: and praise we may
To any lady that subsides a lord.
[afford

Enter Costard.

Prin. Here comes a member of the commonwealth.
Cost. Pray you, which is the head lady?
Prin. Thou shalt know her, fellow, by the rest that have no heads.
Cost. Which is the greatest lady, the highest?
Prin. The thickest, and the tallest.
Cost. The thickest, and the tallest! it is so;
truth is truth.
Are not you the chief woman? you are the thickest here.
Prin. What's your will, sir? what's your will?
Cost. I have a letter from monsieur Birôn, to one lady Rosaline.
Prin. O, thy letter, thy letter; he's a good friend of mine:
Stand aside, good bearer.—Boyet, you can carve;
Break up this capon.
Boyet. I am bound to serve.—
This letter is mistook, it importeth none here:
It is writ to Jaquenetta.
Prin. We will read it, I swear;
Break the neck of the wax, and everyone give ear.
Boyet. [Reads.] By heaven, that thou art fair,
is most infallible; true, that thou art beauteous;
truer than myself, that thou art lovely:
More fairer than fair, beautiful than beauteous:
truer than truth itself, have commissarion on thy hercoidal vassal! The magnanimous and most illustrious Cophetua set eye upon the pernicious and indubitable beggar Zenophen; and he it was that might rightly say, veui, vidi, vici; which to anatomise in the vulgar (O base and obscure culte) videlicet, he came, saw, and overcome:
he came, one; saw, two; overcome, three. Who came? the king; Why did he come? to see:
Why did he see? to overcome: To whom came he? to the beggar: What saw he? the beggar:
Who overcome he? the beggar: the conclusion is victory; On whose side? the king's: The captive is enriched; On whose side? the beggar's:
The catastrophe is a nymphal; On whose side?
the king's?—no, on both in one, or one in both,
I am the king; for so stands the comparison:
thou the beggar; for so witnesseth thy lowliness, Shall I command thy love? I may; Shall I enforce thy love? I could: Shall I entreat thy love? I will. What shalt thou exchange for rags? robes; For tittles, titles; For thyself, me.
Thus, expecting thy reply, I profess my lips on thy foot, my eyes on thy picture, and my heart on thee.

Thine, in the dearest design of industry,
DON ADRIANO DE ARMADO.

Thus dost thou hear the Nemean lion roar
'Gainst thee, thou lamb, that staudest as his prey;
Submissive fall his princely feet before,
And he from forage will incline to play:

1 Shrewish.
SCENE II.—THE SAME.

Enter Holofernes, Sir Nathaniel, and Dull.

Nath. Very reverent sport, truly; and done in the testimony of a good conscience.

Hol. The deer was, as you know, in sanguis,—blood; ripe as a pome-water; who now hangeth like a jewel in the ear of cælo,—the sky, therewin, the heaven; and anon fertility like a crab, on the face of terra,—the soil, the land, the earth.

Nath. Truly, master Holofernes, the epithets are sweeTly varied, like a scholar at the least: But, sir, I assure ye, it was a buck of the first head.

Sir Nathaniel, hand credo.

Dull. 'Twas not a hand credo, 'twas a pricket.

Hol. Most barbarous inquisition! yet a kind of insinuation, as it were, in via, in way of explication; facere, as it were, replication, or rather, ostentare, to show, as it were, his inclination,—after his undressed, unpolished, uneducated, unpractised, untrained, or rather unlettered, or, ratherest, unconfirmed fashion,—to insert again my hand credo for a deer.

Dull. I said, the deer was not a hand credo; 'twas a pricket.

Hol. Twice sol simplicity, bis coctus!—O thou monstrous ignorance, how deformed dost thou look!

Nath. Sir, he hath never fed of the dauntless that are bred in a book; he hath not eat paper, as it were; he hath not drunk ink; his intellect is not replenished; he is only an animal, only sensible in the duller parts; and such barren plants are set before us, that we thankful should be

(Which we of taste and feeling are) for those parts that do fructify in us more than he.

For as it would ill become me to be vain, indiscreet, or a fool, [in a school: So, were there a patch set on learning, to see him But, omne bene, say I; being of an old father's mind. Many can brook the weather, that love not the wind.

Dull. You two are bookmen; Can you tell by your wit,

What was a month old at Cain's birth, that's not five weeks old as yet?

H. Dictynna, good man dull; Dictynna, good man Dull.

Dull. What is Dictynna?

Nath. A title to Phoebe, to Luna, to the moon.

Hol. The moon was a month old, when Adam was no more;

And raught! not to five weeks, when he came to
The allusion holds in the exchange. [fivescore.

Dull. 'Tis true, indeed; the allusion holds in the exchange.

Hol. Heaven comfort thy capacity! I say, the allusion holds in the exchange.

Dull. And I say the pollution holds in the exchange; for the moon is never but a month old: and I say beside, that 'twas a pricket that the princess killed.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you hear an extemporal epitaph on the death of the deer? and, to honour the ignorant, I have call'd the deer the princess killed a pricket.

Nath. Perge, good master Holofernes, perge; so it shall please you to abrogate scurrility.

Hol. I will something affect the letter; for it argues facility.

The praiseful princess pier'd and pricket a pretty pleasing pricket.

Some say a sore; but not a sore, till now made sore with shooting.

The dogs did yet; put L to sore, then sore jumps from thicket; [a-hooting.

Or pricket, sore, or else sore; the people fall;

If sore be sore, then L to sore makes fifty sores; O sore L!

Of one sore I an hundred make, by adding but

Nath. A rare talent! [one more L.

Dull. If a talent be a claw, look how he claws him with a talent.

Hol. This is a gift that I have, simple, simple; a foolish extravagant spirit, full of forms, figures, shapes, objects, ideas, apprehensions, motions, revolutions; But the gift is good in those in whom it is acute, and I am thankful for it.

Nath. Sir, I praise heaven for you; and so may my parishioners; for their sons are well tutor'd by you; and their daughters profit very greatly under you: you are a good member of the commonwealth.

Hol. Mehercle, if their sons be ingenious, they shall want no instruction: if their daughters be capable, I will put it to them: But, vir sapit, qui paucaliquidur: a soul feminine saluteth us.

Enter Jaquenetta and Costard.

Jag. Good morrow, master person.

Hol. Master person,—quasi pers on. And if one should be pierced, which is the one?
Cost. Marry, master schoolmaster, he that is likest to a hogshedd.

Hol. Of piercing a hogshedd! a good lustre of conceit in a turf of earth; fire enough for a fint: 'tis pretty; it is well.

Jaq. Good master parson, beso good as read me this letter; it was given me by Costard, and sent me from Don Armithio: I beseech you, read it.

Hol. Fauste, procroor gelidd quando pecus omne sub umbra Daminat,—and so forth. Ah, good old Mantuan: I may speak of thee as the traveller doth of Venice!

--- Vinegia, Vinegia,

Chi non te vede, ei non te pregia.

Old Mantuan! old Mantuan! Who understand-theth thee not, loves thee not.—Ut, re, sol, ta, mi, fa,—Under pordon, sir, what are the contents? or, rather, as Horace says in his—

What, my soul, verses?

Nath. Ay, sir, and very learned.

Hol. Let me hear a staff, a stanza, a verse;

Lege, domine.

Nath. [Reads.] If love make me forewarned,

how shall I swear to love? [vow'd!]

Ah, never faith could hold, if not to beauty

Though to myself forewarned, to thee I'll faithful prove;

Those thoughts to me were oaks, to thee like oysters bowed.

Study his bias leaves, and makes his book thin eyes: [comprehend;]

Where all those pleasures live, that art would

If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall

Well learned is that tongue, that well can thee

All ignorant that soul, that sees thee without wonder; [admire;]

(Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts

Thy eye Love's lightning bears, thy voice his dreadful thunder, [fire.

Which not to anger bent, is musick, and sweet

Celestial, as thou art, oh pardon, love, this

That sings heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue!]

Hol. You find not the apostrophes, and so miss the accent; let me supervise the canzonet.

Here are only numbers ratified; but for the elegancy, facility, and golden cadence of poesy, caret. Ovidius Naso was the man: and why, indeed, Naso; but for smelling out the odoriferous flowers of fancy, the jerks of invention?
Initiates, is nothing: so doth the hound his master, the ape his keeper, the tied horse his rider.
But damosella virgin, was this directed to you?
Jaq. Ay, sir, from one Monsieur Biron, one of the strange queen's lords.

Hol. I will overlook the superscript. To the snow-white hand of the most beauteous Lady Rosaline. I will look again on the intellect of the letter, for the nomination of the party writing to the person written unto:

Your Ladyship's in all desired employment,

BIRON.

Sir Nathaniel, this Biron is one of the votaries with the king; and here he hath framed a letter to a sequel of the stranger queen's, which, accidentally, or by the way of progression, hath miscarried.—Trip and go, my sweet; deliver this paper into the royal hand of the king; it can concern much: Stay not thy compliment;

I forgive thy duty; adieu.

Jaq. Good Costard, go with me.

C. Have with thee, my girl. [Ex. Cost. and Jaq.

Nath. Sir, you have done this very religiously;

and, as a certain father saith——

Hol. Sir, tell not me of the father, I do fear colourable colours. But, to return to the verses;

Did they please you, Sir Nathaniel?

Nath. Marvellous well for the pen.

Hol. I dodine-to-day at the father's of a certain pupil of mine; where if, before repast, it shall please you to gratify the table with a grace, I will,

on my privilege I have with the parents of the foresaid child or pupil, undertake your benvenuto; where I will prove those verses to be very unlearned, neither savouring of poetry, wit, nor invention: I beseech your society.

Nath. And thank you too: for society (sath texth, the text,) is the happiness of life.

Hol. And, certes, the text most infallibly concludes it,—Sir, [To Dull.] I do invite you too;

you shall not say me, nay: pauca verba. Away;

the gentle are at their game, and we will to our recreation.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—ANOTHER PART OF THE PARK.

Enter Biron, with a paper.

Biron. The king he is hunting the deer; I am courting myself. Well, Set thee down, sorrow!

for so, they say, the fool said, and so say I, and

I the fool. Well proved, wit! This love is as mad as Ajax: it kills sheep; it kills me, I a sheep: Well proved again on my side! I will not love: if I do, hang me; I\' faith, I will not.

O, but her eye,—by this light, but for her eye,

I would not love her; yes, for her two eyes.

Well, I do nothing in the world but lie, and lie in my throat. By heaven, I do love: and it hath taught me to rhyme, and to be melancholy; and here is part of my rhyme, and here my melancholy.

Well, she hath once o\' my somnolent already;

the clown bore it, the fool sent it, and the lady lathit: sweet clown, sweeter fool, sweetest lady!

By the world, I would not care a pin if the other three were in: Here comes one with a paper.

[Gets up into a tree.

Enter the King, with a paper.

King. Ah me!

Biron. [Aside.] Shot, by heaven!—Proceed, sweet

Cupid; thou hast thump'd him with thy bird-bolt under the left pap:—

King. [Reads.] So sweet a kiss the golden sun gives not

To those fresh morning drops upon the rose

As thy eyes-beams, when their fresh rays have smote

The night of dew that on my cheeks down flows;

Nor shines the silver moon one half so bright

Through the transparent bosom of the deep,

As doth thy face through tears of mine give light;

Thou shin'est in every tear that I do weep;

1 Caparisoned.

1 In truth.
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

No drop, but as a coach doth carry thee
So ridest thou triumphing in my woe;
Do but behold the tears that swell in me,
And they thy glory through my grief show.
But do not lose thyself; then thou wilt keep
My tears for glasses, and still make me weep.
O queen of queens, how far dost thou excel!
No thought can think, nor tongue of mortal tell.
How shall she know my griefs? I'll drop the paper;
Sweet leaves shade folly. Who is he comes here? [Steps aside.

Enter Longaville, with a paper.

What Longaville! and reading! listen, ear.
Biron. Now, in thy likeness, one more fool, appear! [Aside.

Long. Ah me! I am forsworn.

Biron. Why, he comes in like a perjur'd, wearing papers. [Aside.

King. In love, I hope: Sweet fellowship in shame! [Aside.

Biron. One drunkard loves another of the name. [Aside.

L. Am I the first that have been perjur'd so?
Biron. [Aside.] I could put thee in comfort; not by two, that I know: [society,
Thou mak'st the trimm'ry, the corner-cap of
The shape of love's Tyburn that hangs up simplicity.
(to move:

Long. I fear, these stubborn lines lack power
O sweet Maria, empress of my love!
These numbers will I tear, and write in prose.
Bir. [Aside.] Jove, rhymes are guards on wan disguise not his slope. [Cupid's hose:

L. This same shall go.—[He reads the sonnet.
Did not the heavenly rhetorick of thine eye
('Gainst whom the world cannot hold account)
Persuade my heart to this false perjury?
Vows, for thee broke, deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore; but, I will prove,
Thou, being a goddess, I forswore not thee.
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love; [me
Thy grace being gain'd, cures all disgrace in Vows are but breath, and breath a vapour is:
Then thou, fair sun, which on my earth doth
Exhale this vapour 'wau; in thee it is: [shine,
If broken, then, it is no fault of mine:
If by me broke: What fool is not so wise,
To lose an oath to win a paradise?

Enter Dumain, with a paper.

Long. By whom shall I send this?—Company! stay. [Stepping aside.

Byron. [Aside.] All hid, all hid, an old infirm
Like a demi-god here sit I in the sky, [play:
And wretched fools' secrets heedfully o'er-eye.
More sacks for the mill! O heavens, I have my wish;
Dumain transform'd: four woodcocks in a dish!
Dum. O most divine Kate!
Biron. O most prophanecoxcomb! [Aside.
Dum. As upright as the cedar, fair as day.
Biron. Ay, as some days; but then no sun must shine. [Aside.

Dum. O that I had mine!

Long. And I had mine! [Aside.

King. And I mine too, good lord! [Aside.

Biron. Amen, so I had mine: Is not that a

Dum. I would forget her; but a fever she Reigns in my blood, and will remember'd be.
Biron. A fever in your blood, why then incision
Would let her out in saucers; Sweet misprision!
[Aside.

D. Once more I'll read the ode that I have writ.
Biron. Once more I'll mark how love can vary wit. [Aside.

Dum. On a day, (alack the day!) Love, whose month is ever May,
Spied a blossom, passing fair,
Playing in the wanton air:
Through the velvet leaves the wind,
All unseen, 'gan passage find;
That the lover, sick to death,
Wish'd himself the heavens' breath.
Air, quoth he, thy cheeks may blow;
Air, would I might triumph so!
But, alack, my hand is sworn,
Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn:
Vow, alack, for youth unmeet;
Youth so apt to pluck a sweet.
Do not call it sin in me,
That I am forsworn for thee:
Thou for whom Jove would swear,
Juno but an Ethiop were;
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love.—

This will I send; and something else more plain,
That shall express my true love's fasting pain.
O would the King, Biron, and Longaville,
Were lovers too! Ill to example fill,
Would from my forehead wipe a perjur'd note;
For none offend, where all alike do dote.

Long. Dumain, [Advancing.] thy love is far from charity,
That in love's grief dear'st society:
You may look pale, but I should blush, I know,
To be o'erheard, and taken napping so.

King. Come, sir, [Advancing.] you blush; as his your case is such;
You chide at him, offending twice as much:
You do not love Maria; Longaville
Did never sonnet for her sake compile;
Nor never lay his wraithed arms athwart
His loving bosom, to keep down his heart.
I have been closely shrouded in this bush,
And mark'd you both, and for you both did blush.
[fashion;
I heard your guilty rhymes, observ'd your
Saw sighs areek from you, noted well your passion:
Ah me! says one; O Jove! the other cries:
One, her hairs were gold, crystal the other's eyes:
You would for paradise break faith, and troth;
[To Long.
And Jove, for your love, would infringe an oath.
[To Dumain.

What will Biron say, when that he shall hear
A faith infring'd, which such a zeal did swear?
How will he scorn? how will he spend his wit?
How will he triumph, leap, and laugh at it?
For all the wealth that ever I did see,
I would not have him know so much by me.

Biron. Now step I forth to whip hypocrisy.—
Ah, good my liege, I pray thee pardon me:
[Descends from the tree.
Good heart, what grace hast thou, thus to repro\avor your obstrue a love?
Your eyes do make no coaches; in your tears,
There is no certain princess that appears:
You'll be perjur'd 'tis a hateful thing;
Tush, none but minstrels like of sonneting.
But are you not ashamed? nay, are you not,
All three of you, to be thus much o'ershoot?
You found his note; the king your note did see;
But I a beam do find in each of three,
O what a scene of foolery I have seen,
Of sighs, of groans, of sorrow, and of teen.
O me, with what strict patience have I sat,
To see a king transformed to a gnat!
To see great Hercules whipping a gig,
And profound Solomon to tune a jigg.
And Nestor play at push-pin with the boys,
And critic Timon laugh at idle toys!
Where lies thy grief, O tell me, good Dumain?
And, gentle Longaville, where lies thy pain?
And where my liege's all about the breast:
A candle, ho!

King. Too bitter is thy jest.
Are we betray'd thus to thy over-view?
Biron. Not you by me, but I betray'd to you;
I, that am honest; I, that hold it sin
To break the vow I am engaged in?
I am betray'd, by keeping company
With moon-like men of strange inconstancy.
When shall you see me write a thing in rhyme?
Or groan for Joan? or spend a minute's time
In pruning me? When shall you hear that I
Will praise a hand, a foot, a face, an eye?
King. Soft; whether away so fast?
A true man or a thief that gallops so?
Biron. I post from love; good lover, let me go.

Enter Jaquenetta and Costard.
Jaq. God bless the king!
King. What present hast thou there?
Cost. Some certain treason.
King. What makes treason here?
Cost. Nay, it makes nothing, sir.
King. If it mar nothing neither,
The treason, and you, go in peace away together.
J. I beseech your grace, let this letter be read,
Our parson misdubts it; 'twas treason, he said.
K. Biron, read it over. [Giving him the letter.
Where hadst thou it?
Jaq. Of Costard.
King. Where hadst thou it?
Cost. Of Dun Adrianadio, Dun Adramadio.
King. How now! what is in you? why dost
\pearance tear it?
Biron. A toy, my liege, a toy; your grace needs not fear it.
Long. It did move him to passion, and therefore let's hear it.
Dum. It is Biron's writing, and here is his name. [Picks up the pieces.
Biron. Ah, you loggerhead, [To Costard.]you were born to do me shame. —
Guilty, my lord, guilty; I confess, I confess.
King. What?
Biron. That you three fools lack'd me fool to make up the mess:
He, he, and you, my liege, and I,
1 Grief, 2 Cynic. 3 A spiced mixture for invalids,
Are pick-purses in love, and we deserve to die.
O, dismiss this audience, and I shall tell you
Dum. Now the number is even. [more.
Biron. True, true; we are four; —
Will these turtles be gone?
King. Hence, sirs; away.
Cost. Walk aside the true folk, and let the traitors stay.
[Exeunt Cost. and Joq.
B. Sweet lords, sweet lovers, O let us embrace!
As we true are as flesh and blood can be:
The sea will ebb and flow, heaven show his face;
Young blood will not obey an old decree.
King. What, did these rent lines show some love of thine?
Biron. Did they, quoth you? Who sees the heavenly Rosaline,
That, like a rude and savage man of Inde,
At the first opening of the gorgeous east,
Bows not his vassal head; and, strucken blind,
Kisses the base ground with obedient breast?
What peremptory eagle-sighted eye
Dares look upon the heaven of her brow,
That is not blinded by her majesty? [now?
King. What zeal, what fury hath inspired thee
My love, her mistress, is a gracious moon;
She, an attending star, scarce seen a light.
Biron. My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Biron;
O, but for my love, day would turn to night!
Of all complections the culd's sovereignty
Do meet, as at a fair, in her fair cheek;
Where several worthies make onedignity; [seek.
Where nothing wants, that want itself doth
Lend me the flourish of all gentle tongues—
Eye, painted rhetorick! O, she needs it not;
To things of sale a seller's praise belongs;
She passes praise; then praise too short doth
A wither'd hermit, five-score winters worn, [blot.
Might shake off fifty, looking in her eye;
Beauty doth varnish age, as if new-born,
And gives the crutch the cradle's infancy.
O, tis the sun, that maketh all things shine!
King. By heaven, thy love is black as ebony.
Biron. Is ebony like her? O wood divine!
A wife of such wood were felicity.
O, who can give an oath? where is a book?
That I may swear, beauty doth beauty lack.
If that she learn not of her eye to look:
No face is fair, that is not full so black.
O, if in black my lady's brows be deckt,
It mourns, that painting, and usurping hair,
Should ravish doters with a false aspect;
And therefore is she born to make black fair,
Her favour turns the fashion of the days;
For native blood is counted painting now;
And therefore red, that would avoid displeasure,
Paints itself black, to imitate her brow.
King. But what of this? Are we not all in love?
B. Nothing so sure; and thereby all forsworn.
K. Then leave this chat: and, good Biron, now
Our loving lawfull, and our faith not torn. [prove Dum. Ay, marry, there,—some flattery for this evil.
Long. O, some authority how to proceed;
Some tricks, some quibbles, how to cheat the
Dum. Some salve for perjury. [devil.
Biron. O, 'tis more than need! —
Have at you then, affection's men at arms;
1 Chide.
Consider, what you first did swear unto:—
To fast,—to study,—and to see no woman:—
Flat treason 'gainst the kingly state of youth.
Say, can you fast? Your stomachs are too young,
And abstinence engenders maladies.
And where that you have vow'd to study, lords,
In that each of you hath forsworn his book:
Can you still dream, and pore, and thereon look:
For when would you, my lord, or you, or you, Have found the ground of study's excellence,
Without the beauty of a woman's face?
From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
They are the ground, the books, the academies,
From whence doth spring the true Promethean Why, universal plodding prisons up [fire.
The nimble spirits in the arteries;
As motion, and long-during action, tires
The sinewy vigour of the wanderer.
Now, for not looking on a woman's face,
You have in that forsworn the use of eyes;
And study too, the cause of your vow:
For where is any author in the world,
Teaches such beauty as a woman's eye?
Learning is but an adjunct to ourself,
And where we are, our learning likewise is.
Then, when ourselves we see in ladies' eyes,
Do we not likewise see our learning there?
O, we have made a vow to study, lords;
And in that vow we have forsworn our books;
For when would you, my liege, or you, or you, In leaden contemplation, have found out
Such fiery numbers, as the prompting eyes;
Of beauteous tutors have enrich'd you with?
Other slow arts entirely keep the brain;
And therefore finding barren practisers,
Scarce show a harvest of their heavy toil:
But love, first learned in a lady's eyes,
Lives not alone immured in the brain;
But with the motion of all elements,
Courses as swift as thought in every power;
And gives to every power a double power,
Above their functions and their offices,
It adds a precious seeing to the eye;
A lover's eyes will gaze an eagle blind;
A lover's ear will hear the lowest sound,
When the suspicious head of theft is stopp'd;
Love's feeling is more soft, and sensible,
Than are the tender horns of cocked snails;
Love's tongue provokes dainty Bacchus gross in taste:
For valour, is not love a Hercules,
Still climbing trees in the Hesperides?
Subtle as sphinx; as sweet, and musical,
As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair:
And, when love speaks, the voice of all the gods
Makes heaven drowse with the harmony.
Never durst poet touch a pen to write,
Until his ink were temper'd with love's sighs;
0, then his limbs would in ravish savage ears,
And play in tyrants mild humility.

From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
They sparkles still the right Promethean fire;
They are the books, the arts, the academies,
That show, contain, and nourish all the world;
Else none at all in aught proves excellent:
Then fools you were these women to forswear;
Or, keeping what is sworn, you will prove fools,
For wisdom's sake, a word that all men love;
Or for love's sake, a word that loves all men;
Let us once lose our oaths, to find ourselves,
Or else we lose ourselves to keep our oaths:
It is religion to be thus forsworn:
For charity itself fulfils the law;
And who can sever love from charity?

King. Saint Cupid, then! and soldiers to the field!

Long. Shall we resolve to woo these girls of King. And win them too: therefore let us devise
Some entertainment for them in their tents.

Enter, from the park let us conduct them thinner;
Then, homeward, every man attach the hand
Of his fair mistress: in the afternoon
We will with some strange pastime solace them,
Such as the shortness of the time can shape;
For revels, dances, masks, and merry hours,
For enrichment fair Love, strewing her way with flowers.

King. Away, away! no time shall be omitted,
That will be time, and may by us be fitted.

[Exeunt.

Act Fifth.

SCENE I.—A STREET.

Enter Holofernes, Sir Nathaniel, and Dull.

Hol. Satis quod sufficit.

Nath. Sir, your reasons 1 at dinner have been sharp and sententious; pleasant without scruplicity, witty without affection, 2 audacious without impudence, learned without opinion, and strange without heresy. I did converse this quondam day with a companion of the king's, who is intituled,

Hol. Novi hominem tanquam te: his humour is lofty, his discourse peremptory, his tongue filed, his eye ambitious, his gait majestic, and his general behaviour vain, ridiculous, and thrasnical. 3 He is too picked, 4 too spruce, too affected, too odd, as it were, too perigrinate, as I may call it.

Nath. A most singular and choice epithet.

When Hol. He draweth out the thread of his verbosity finer than the staple of his argument. I abhor such fanatical phantasms, such insociable and point-devise 5 companion; such rackers of orthography, as to speak, doute, fine, when he should say, doubt; det, when he should pronounce, debt; d, e, b, t; not, d, e, t; he clepeth 6 a calf,

cauf; half, haunt; neighbour, vocauler, nebour,
neigh, abbreviated, ne: This is abominable, (which he would call abominable,) it insinuath me of insane: Non intelligis domine? to make frantium, lunatick.

Nath. Laus deo, bone intelligo.

Hol. Bone?—bone, for bene: Priscinus a little scratch'd; 'twill serve.

Nath. Armado, Moth, and Costard.

Enter Armado, Moth, and Costard.

Nath. Videsne quis venit?

Hol. Video, et gaudeo.

Arm. Chirra!

[To Moth.

1 Discoursa. 2 Boastful. 5 Finical exactness.
2 Affectation. 4 Smart. 6 Quotation.
3 Oratorical.
Hol. Quare Chirra, not sirrah?
Arm. Men of peace well encounter’d.
Hol. Most military, sir, salutation.
Moth. They have been at a great feast of languages, and stolen the scraps. [To Costard aside.
Cost. O, they have lived long in the alms-basket of words! I marvel, thy master hath not eaten thee for a word; for thou art so not long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus: thou art easier swallowed than a flap-dragon.1
Moth. Peace; the peal begins.
Arm. Monsieur, [To Hol.] are you not letter’d?
Moth. Yes, yes; he teaches boys the horn-book:—What is a, b, spelt backward with a horn on his head?
Hol. Ba, pueritia, with a horn added.
Moth. Ba, most silly sheep, with a horn:—You hear his learning.
Hol. Quis, quis, thou consonant?
Moth. The third of the five vowels, if you repeat them; or the fifth, if I.
Hol. I will repeat them, a, e, i,—Moth. The sheep: the other two concludes it; o, u.
Arm. Now, by the salt wave of the Mediter- raneum, a sweet touch, a quick venus 2 of wit: snap, snap, quick and home; it rejoiceth my intellect: true wit.
Moth. Offer’d by a child to an old man.
Cost. And I had but one penny in the world, thou shouldst have it to buy gingerbread: hold, there is the very remuneration I had of thy master, thou halfpenny purse of wit, thou pigeon-egg of discretion.
A. Arts-man, prærambula; we will be singled from the barbarous.3 Do you not educate youth at the charge-house 4 on the top of the mountain?
Hol. Or, mons, the hill.
Arm. At your sweet pleasure, for the moun-
Hol. I do, sans question. [tain.
Arm. Sir, the king is a noble gentleman; and my familiar, I do assure you, very good friend:
—For what is inward between us, let it pass:—I do beseech thee, remember thy courtesy;—I beseech thee, apparel thy head;—and among other importunate and most serious designs,—and of great import indeed, too;—but let that pass:—for I must tell thee, it will please his grace (by the world) sometime to lean upon my poor shoulder; but sweet heart, let that pass. By the world, I recount no fable; some certain special honours it pleaseth his greatness to impart to Armado, a soldier, a man of travel, that hath seen the world: but let that pass.—The very all of all is,—but, sweet heart, I do implore secrecy,—that the king would have me present the princess, sweet chuck, with some delightful ostentation, or show, or pageant, or antic, or fire-work. Now, understanding that the curate and your sweet self, are good at such eruptions, and sudden breaking out of mirth, as it were, I have acquainted you withal, to the end to crave your assistance.
Hol. Sir, you shall present before her the nine worthies.—Sir Nathaniel, as concerning some entertainment of time, to be rendered by our assistance,—the king’s command, and this most gallant, illustrate, and learned gentleman,—before the princess; I say, none so fit as to present the nine worthies.

1 raisins put into brandy on fire. 2 Free school.

Nath. Where will you find men worthy enough to present them?
Hol. Yourself; myself, or this gallant gentleman; this swain, because of his great limb or joint, shall pass Pompey the great; the page, Hercules.
Arm. Pardon, sir; error; he is not quantity enough for that worthy’s thumb: he is not so big as the end of his club.
Hol. Shall I have audience? he shall present Hercules in minority: his enter and exit shall be strangethe snake; and I will have an apology for that purpose.
Moth. An excellent device! so, if any of the audience hiss, you may cry, Well done Hercules! now thou crushest the snake! that is the way to make an offence gracious; though few have the grace to do it.
Arm. For the rest of the worthies.—
Hol. I will play three myself.
Moth. Thrice-worthy gentleman!
Arm. Shall I tell you a thing?
Hol. We attend.
Arm. We will have, if this fadge 5 not, an antick. I beseech you follow.
Hol. Vio, 2 Goodman Dull! thou hast spoken no word all this while.
Dull. Nor understood none neither, sir.
Hol. Allons! we will employ thee.
Dull. I’ll make one in a dance, or so; or I will play on the tabor to the worthies, and let them dance the hay.
Hol. Most dull, honest Dull, to our sport away.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—BEFORE THE PRINCESS’S PAVILION.

Enter the Princess, Katherine, Rosaline, and Maria.

Prin. Sweet hearts, we shall be rich ere we depart,
If fairings come thus plentifully in:
A lady wall’d about with diamonds!—
Look you, what I have from the loving king.
Ros. Madam, came nothing else along with that!
Prin. Nothing but this? yes, as much love in rhyme,
As would be cram’d up in a sheet of paper,
Writ on both sides the leaf, margent and all;
That he was fain to seal on Cupid’s name.
Ros. That was the way to make his god-head wax;
For he hath been five thousand years a boy.
Kath. Ay, and a shrewd unhappy gallows too.
Ros. You’ll ne’er be friends with him; he’ll kill your sister.
K. He made her melancholy, sad, and heavy;
And so she died: had she been light, like you,
Of such a merry, nimble, stirring spirit,
She might have been a grandam ere she died:
And so may you; for a light heart lives long.

1 suit. 2 Come on. 3 Grow.
Ros. What's your dark meaning, mouse, 1 of this light word?
Kath. A light condition in a beauty dark.
Ros. We need more light to find your meaning out. [snuff 2 ;
Kath. You'll mar the light, by taking it in. Therefore, I'll darkly end the argument.
Ros. Look what you do, you do it still 't the dark.
Kath. So do not you; for you are a light girl.
Ros. Indeed, I weigh not you; and therefore light.
Kath. You weigh me not—O, that's you care not for me.
Ros. Great reason; for, Past cure is still past care.
P. Well bandied both; a set of wit well play'd.
But, Rosaline, you have a favour too:
Who sent it? and what is it?
Ros. I would, you knew:
An if my face were but as fair as yours,
My favour were as great; be witness this.
Nay, I have verses too, I thank Birón:
The number's true; and, were the numbering too,
I were the fairest goddess on the ground:
I am compar'd to twenty thousand fairs.
O, he hath drawn my picture in his letter!
Prin. Any thing like?
R. Much, in the letters: nothing in the praise.
Prin. Beauteous as ink; a good conclusion.
Ros. 'Ware pencils! How? let me not die your debtor,
My red dominical, my golden letter:
O, that your face were not so full of O's!
Kath. A plague of that jest! and beshrew all shrouds!
P. But what was sent to you from fair Dumain?
Kath. Madam, this glove.
Prin. Did he not send you twain?
Kath. Yes, madam; and moreover,
Some thousand verses of a faithful lover:
A huge translation of hypocrisy,
Vilely compil'd, profound simplicity.
Mar. This, and these pearls, to me sent Longaville:
The letter is too long by half a mile.
P. I think no less: Dost thou not wish in heart,
The chain were longer, and the letter short?
M. Ay, or I would these hands might never part.
Prin. We are wise girls to mock our lovers so.
R. They are worse fools to purchase mocking.
That same Birón I'll torture ere I go. [so.
O, that I knew he were but in by the week!
How I would make him fawn, and beg, and kick;
And wait the season, and observe the times.
And spend his prodigal wits in bootless rhymes;
And shape his service wholly to my behets.
And potent like would I o'er-sway his state,
That he should be my fool, and I his fate.
Prin. None are so surely caught, when they are catch'd,
As wit turn'd fool: folly in wisdom hatch'd,
If wisdom's warrant, and the help of school;
And wit's own grace to grace a learned fool.
Ros. The blood of youth burns not with such
As gravity's revolt to wantonness. [excess.
So shall Biron take me for Rosaline.—
And change your favours too; so shall your loves
Woo contrary, deceive'd by these removes.
Ros. Come on then; wear the favours most in sight.
Kath. But, in this changing, what is your intent?
Prin. The effect of my intent is, to cross
They do it but in mocking merriment; [their:
And mock for mock is only my intent.
Their several counsels they unsuom shall
To loves mistook; and so be mock'd withal,
Upon the next occasion that we meet,
With visages display'd, to talk, and greet.
Ros. But shall we dance, if they desire us to't?
Prin. No: to the death, we will not move a foot,
Nor to their pens'd speech render we no grace;
But, while 'tis spoke, each turn away her face.
Boyet. Why, that contempt will kill the speaker's heart.
And quite divorce his memory from his part.
Prin. Therefore I do it, and I make no doubt
The rest will ne'er come in, if he be out.
There's no such sport, as sport by sport o'er-thrown.
To make theirs ours, and ours none but our own:
So shall we stay, mocking intended game;
And they, well mock'd, depart away with shame.
[Trumpets sound within.
Boyet. The trumpet sounds; be mask'd, the maskers come. [The ladies mask.

Enter the King, Biron, Longaville, and Du-main, in Russian habits, and masked; Moth, Musicians, and Attendants.

Moth. All hail, the richest beauties on the earth!
Biron. Beauties no richer than rich taffata.
Moth. A holy parcel of the fairest dames,
[The Ladies turn their backs to him.
That ever turn'd their—backs—to mortal views!
Biron. Their eyes, villain, their eyes.
Moth. That ever turn'd their eyes to mortal views! Out—
Boyet. True; out, indeed.
Moth. Out of your favours, heavenly spirits,
Not to behold—
[vouchsafe,
Biron. Once to behold, rogue.
Moth. Once to behold with your sun-beamed eyes,—with your sun-beamed eyes—
Boyet. They will not answer to that epithet;
You were best call it daughter-beamed eyes.
Moth. They do not mark me, and that brings me out.
[rogue.
Biron. Is this your perfectness? begone, you Ros. What would these strangers? know their minds, Boyet:
If they do speak our language, 'tis our will
That some plain man recount their purposes:
Know what they would.
Boyet. What would you with the princess?
Bir. Nothing but peace and gentle visitation.
Ros. What would they, say they?
Boy. Nothing but peace and gentle visitation.
Ros. Why, that they have; and bid them so be gone.
Boyet. She says, you have it, and you may be gone.
K. Say to her, we have measur'd many miles
To tread a measure with her on this grass.
Boyet. They say that they have measur'd many a mile,
To tread a measure with you on this grass.
Ros. It is not so; ask them how many inches
Is in one mile: If they have measur'd many,
The measure then of one is easily told. [miles.
Boyet. If, to come hither you have measur'd
And many miles; the princess bids you tell,
How many inches do fill up one weary
Kirk. Tell her, we measure them by weary steps.
Boyet. She hears herself.
Ros. How many weary steps,
Of many weary miles you have o'ergone,
Are number'd in the travel of one mile?
Prin. We number nothing that we spend for
Our duty is so rich, so infinite,
[you;
That we may do it still without accompl.
Vouchsafe to show the sunshine of your face.
That we, like savages, may worship it.
Ros. My face is but a moon, and clouded too.
K. Blessed are clouds, to do as such clouds do!
Vouchsafe, bright moon, and these thy stars,
to shine.
(Those clouds remov'd,) upon our wat'ry eyne.
Ros. O vain petitioner! beg a greater matter;,
Thou now request'st but moonshine in the water.
King. Then, in our measure do but vouchsafe
one change;
Thou bid'st me beg; this begging is not strange.
Ros. Play, music, then; nay, you must do it soon.
[Music plays.
Not yet; no dance; thus change I like the moon.
King. Will you not dance! How come you thus estrang'd?
[Chang'd.
Ros. You took the moon at full; but now she's King. Yet still she is the moon, and I the man.
The musick plays; vouchsafe some motion to it.
Ros. Our ears vouchsafe it.
King. But your legs should do it.
Ros. Since you are strangers, and come here by chance,
We'll not be nice: take hands;—we will not
King. Why take we hands then? [dance.
Ros. Only to part friends:—
Court'sy, sweet hearts; and so the measure ends.
K. More measure of this measure; be not nice.
Ros. We can afford no more at such a price.
King. Prize you yourselves; What buys your company?
Ros. Your absence only.
King. That can never be,
Ros. Then cannot we be bought; and so adieu;,
Twice to your visor, and half once to you!
K. If you deny to dance, let's hold more chat.
Ros. In private then.
King. I am best pleas'd with that.
[They converse apart.
Bir. White handed mistress, one sweet word
with thee.
P. Honey, and milk, and sugar; there is three.
Biron. Nay then, two treys, [an if you grow so nice,]
Metheglin, wort, and malmsey; —Well run, dice.
There's half a dozens sweets.
1 Threes. 2 A drink of honey and water.
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

SC. II.

Kath. What, was your visor made without a tongue?
Prin. Twenty adieus, my frozen Muscovites.—Are these the breed of wits so wonder'd at?
Boy. Tapers they are, with your sweet breaths puff'd out.
Prin. O poverty in wit, kingly poor-flout! Will they not, think you, hang themselves to-night?
Or ever, but in visors, show their faces? This pert Birőn was out of countenance quite. Ros. O! they were all in lamentable cases! The king was weeping-ripe for a good word.
Prin. Birőn did swear himself out of all suit. Mar. Dunain was at my service, and his sword:
No pulse, quoth I; my servant straight was mute.
K. Lord Longaville said, I came o'er his heart;
And straw you, what he call'd me?
Prin. Qualm, perhaps.
Kath. Yes, in good faith.
Prin. Go, sickness, as thou art! Ros. Well, better wits have worn plain statutecaps.
But will you hear? the king is my love sworn.

P. And quick Birőn hath plighted faith to me.
Kath. And Longaville was for my service born.
Mar. Dunain is mine, as sure as bark on tree.
Boy. Madam, and pretty mistresses, give ear:
Immediately they will again be here.
In their own shapes; for it can never be,
They will digest this harsh indignity.
Prin. Will they return?
Boyet. They will, they will, heaven knows;
And leap for joy, though they are lame with blows:
[repair,
Therefore, change favours; and, when they Blow like sweet roses in this summer air.
Prin. How blow? how blow? speak to be understood.
B. Fair ladies, mask'd, are roses in their bud:
Dismask'd, their damask sweet communion
Are angels vailing clouds, or roses blown. [shown,
Prin. Avault, perplexity! What shall we do,
If they return in their own shapes to woo?
Ros. Good madam, if by me you'll be advis'd,
Let's mock them still, as well known, as disguis'd:
Let us complain to them what fools we were, Disguis'd like Muscovites, in shapeless gear;
And wonder what they were; and to what end Their shallow shows, and prologue vilely penned, And their rough carriage so ridiculous,
Should be presented at our tent to us.
B. Ladies, withdraw; the gallants are at hand.
Prin. Whip to our tents, as roses run over land.
[Exeunt Princess, Ros., Kath., and Maria.

Enter the King, Biron, Longaville, and
Dunain, in their proper habits.

Kath. Fair sir, heaven save you! Where is the princess?
Boy. Gone to her tent: Please it, your majesty, Command me any service to her thither? [word.
K. That she vouchsafe me audience for one
Boyet. I will, and so will she, I know, my lord.

[Exeit.

Bir. This fellow picks up wit, as pigeons peas;
And utters it again when Jove doth please:
He is wit's pedlar; and retails his wares
At wakes, and wassels, meetings, markets, fairs;
He can carve too, and lisp: Why, this is he,
That kiss'd away his hand in courtesy;
This is the ape of form, monster the nice,
That, when he plays at tables, chides the dice
In honourable terms; nay, he can sing
A mean, most meanly; and, in ushering,
Mend him who can: the ladies call him, sweet;
The stairs, as he treads on them, kiss his feet:
This is the flower that smiles on every one,
To show his teeth as white as whale's bone:
And consciences, that will not die in debt,
Pay him the due of honey-tongued Boyet.
K. A blister on his sweet tongue, with my heart,
That put Armado's page out of his part!

Enter the Princess, ushered by Boyet; Rosaline,
Maria, Katherine, and Attendants.

Biron. See where it comes!—Behaviour, what wert thou,
Till this man show'd thee? and what art thou
K. All hail, sweet madam, and fairtime of day!

1 Trick. 2 The French adverb of negation.
3 Better wits may be found among citizens.
4 Whale tooth.
Prin. Fair, in all hail, is foul as I conceive.
K. Construe my speeches better, if you may.
P. Then wish me better, I will give you leave.
King. We came to visit you; and purpose now
To lead you to our court: vouchsafe it then.
Prin. This field shall hold me; and so hold your vow:
Nor heaven, nor I delight in perjur'd men.
K. Rebuke me not for that which you provoke;
The virtue of your eye must break my oath.
Prin. You nick-name virtue: vice you should have spoke;
For virtue's office never breaks men's truth.
Now, by my maiden honour, yet as pure
As the unsullied lily, I protest,
A world of torments though I should endure,
I would not yield to be your house's guest;
So much I hate a breaking-cause to be
Of heavenly oaths, vow'd with integrity.
King. O, you have liv'd in desolation here,
Unseen, unvisited, much to our shame.
Prin. Not so, my lord; it is not so, I swear;
We have had pastimes here, and pleasant
A mess of Russians left us but of late. [game;
King. How, madam? Russians?
Prin. Ay, in truth, my lord;
Trim gallants, full of courtship, and of state.
Ros. Madam, speak true:—It is not so, my lord;
My lady, (to the manner of the days,)
In courtesy, gives undeserving praise.
We four, indeed, confronted here with four
In Russian habit; here they stay'd an hour,
And talk'd apace; and in that hour, my lord,
They did not bless us with one happy word.
I dare not call them fools; but this I think,
When they are thirsty, fools would fain have drink.
Biron. This jest is dry to me—Fair, gentle, sweet,
Your wit makes wise things foolish; when we
With eyes best seeing heaven's fiery eye, [greet
By light we lose light: Your capacity
Is of that nature, that to your huge store
Wisely things seem foolish, and rich things but
Ros. This proves you wise and rich; for in my Biron. I am a fool, and full of poverty. [eye.—
Ros. But that you take what doth to you belong.
It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue.
Biron. O, I am yours, and all that I possess.
Ros. All the fool mine!
Biron. I cannot give you less.
Ros. Which of the visors was it that you wore?
demand you this?
Ros. There, then, that visor; that superfluous
That hid the worse, and show'd the better face.
King. We are descried: they'll mock us now downright.
Dum. Let us confess, and turn it to a jest.
Prin. Amaz'd, my lord? Why looks your highness sad?
Ros. Help, hold his brows! he'll swoon!
Why look you pale?
Sea-sick, I think, coming from Muscovy.
Biron. Thus pour the stars down plagues for perjury.
Can any face of brass hold longer out?

1 Times.

Herestand I, lady; dart thy skill at me; [flout;
Bruise me with scorn, confound me with a
Thrust thy sharp wit quite through my ignorance;
Cut me to pieces with thy keen conceit;
And I will wish thee never more to dance,
Nor never more in Russian habit wait.
O! never will I trust to speeches ped'd,
Nor to the motion of a school-boy's tongue;
Nor never come in visor to my friend;
Nor woo in rhyme, like a blind harper's
Taffata phrases, silken terms precise, [song;
Three-pil'd hyperboles, spruce affectation,
Figures pedantical; these summer-fies
Have blown me full of maggot ostentation;
I do forswear them: and I here protest
By this white glove (how white the hand, heaven knows!)
Henceforth my wooing mind shall be express'd
In russet yeas, and honest kersey noes:
And, to begin, girl,—so heaven help me, la!—
My love to thee is sound, sans crack or flaw.
Ros. Sans sans, I pray you.

Biron. Yet I have a trick
Of the old rage:—bear with me, I am sick;
I'll leave it by degrees. Soft, let us see:—
Write, heaven have mercy on us, on those three;
They are infected, in their hearts it lies;
They have the plague, and caught it of your eyes:
These lords are visited; you are not free,
For the Lord's tokens on you do I see. [us.
Ros. No, they are free, that gave these tokens to
B. Our states are forfeit, seek not to undo us.
Ros. It is not so: For how can this be true,
That you stand forfeit, being those that sue?
B. Peace; for I will not have to do with you.
Ros. Nor shall not, if I do as I intend.
B. Speak for yourselves, my wit is at an end.
King. Teach us, sweet madam, for our rude transgression
Some fair excuse.

Prin. The fairest is confession.

Were you not here, but even now, disguis'd?
King. Madam, I was,
Prin. And were you well advis'd?
King. I was, fair madam.
Prin. When you then were here,
What did you whisper in your lady's ear?
King. That more than all the world I did respect her.
Prin. When she shall challenge this, you will reject her.
King. Upon mine honour, no.
Prin. Peace, peace, forbear;
Your oath once broke, you force! not to forswear.
King. Despise me, when I break this oath of mine.
Prin. I will; and therefore keep it:—Rosaline,
What did the Russian whisper in your ear?
R. Madam, he swore, that he did hold me
As precious eye-sight; and did value me
Above this world: adding thereto, moreover,
That he would wed me, or else die my lover.
P. Heaven give thee joy of him! the noble
Most honourably doth uphold his word. [lord
King. What mean you, madam? by my life, my troth,
I never swore this lady such an oath.
Ros. By heaven you did; and to confirm it plain You gave me this: but take it, sir, again.
K. My faith, and this, the princess I did give: I knew her by this jewel on her sleeve.
Prin. Pardon me, sir, this jewel did she wear; And lord Biron, I thank him, is my dear:— What; will you have me, or your pearl again?
Biron. Neither of either; I remit both twain. I see the trick on’t;—Here was a consent,4 (Knowing aforehand of our merriment),
To dash it like a Christmas comedy: [Zany,2 Some carry-tale, some please-man, some slight Some mumble-news,4 some trencher-knight, some Dick,—
That smiles his cheek in years; and knows the trick To make my lady laugh, when she’s dispos’d—
Told our intents before: which once disclos’d, The ladies did change favours; and then we, Following the signs, wou’d but the sign of she. Now, to our perjury to add more terror, We are again forsworn; in will, and error. Much upon this it is:—And might not you,
[To Boyet. Forestall our sport, to make us thus untrue?
And laugh upon the apple of her eye? And stand between her back, sir, and the fire, Holding a trencher, jesting merrily! You leer upon me, do you? there’s an eye, Wounds like a leaden sword.
Boyet. Full merrily
Hath this brave manage, this career, been run.
Biron. Lo, he is tilting straight! Peace; I have done.

Enter Costard.
Welcome, pure wit! thou partest a fair fray.
Cost. O, sir, they would know,
Whether the three worthies shall come in, or no.
Biron. What, are there but three?
Cost. No, sir; but it is varia fine,
For every one pursuants three.
Biron. And three times thrice is nine.
Cost. Not so, sir; under correction, sir; I hope, it is not so: You cannot beg us, sir, I can assure you, sir; we know what we know:— I hope, sir, three times thrice, sir,— Biron. Is not nine.
Cost. Under correction, sir, we know whereas until it doth amount.
B. By Jove, I alway’s took three threes for nine.
Cost. O, sir, it were pity you should get your living by reckoning, sir.
Biron. How much is it?
Cost. O, sir, the parties themselves, the actors, sir, will show whereuntil it doth amount: for my own part, I am, as they say, but to perfect one man,—e’en one poor man; Pompion, the great, sir.
Biron. Art thou one of the worthies?
Cost. It pleased them, to think me worthy of Pompion the great: for mine own part, I know not the degree of the worthy; but I am to stand for him.

1 Conspiracy. 2 Buffoon. 3 Tale-bearer. 4 Measure.

Biron. Go, bid them prepare.
Cost. We will turn it finely off, sir; we will take some care.
Exit Costard.
King. Biron, they will shame us, let them not approach.
Biron. We are shame-proof, my lord; and 'tis some policy,
To have one show worse than the king’s and his company.
King. I say, they shall not come. [now; Prin. Nay, my good lord, let me o’er-rule you That sport best pleases, that doth least know how: Where zeal strives to content, and the contents Die in the zeal of which it presents.
Their form confounded makes most form in mirth;
[Birth. When great things labouring perish in their
Bir. A right description of our sport, my lord.
Enter Armado.
Arm. Anointed, I implore so much expense of thy royal sweet breath, as will utter a brace of words.
[Armado converses with the King, and de-
Delivers him a paper.
That’s all one, my fair, sweet, honey monarch: for, I protest, the schoolmaster is exceeding fantastical; too, too vain; too, too vain: But we will put it, as they say, to fortuna delle guerra. I wish you the peace of mind, most royal couplement! [Exit Armado.
King. Here is like to be a good presence of worthies: He presents Hector of Troy; the swain, Pompey the great; the parish curate, Alexander; Armado’s page, Hercules; the pedant, Judas Machabeus: And if these four worthies in their first show thrive, [further five. These four will change habits, and present the Biron. There is five in the first show.
King. You are deceiv’d, ’tis not so.
Biron. The pedant, the braggart, the hedge-priest, the fool, and the boy:—
Abate a throw at novan1; and the whole world again.
[vein. Cannot pick out five such, take each one in his King. The ship is under sail, and here she comes again.
[Seats brought for the King, Princess, &c.
Pageant of the Nine Worthies.

Enter Costard arm’d for Pompey.
Cost. I Pompey am,—
Boyet. You lie, you are not he.
Cost. I Pompey am,—
Boyet. With libbard’s head on knee.
Biron. Well said, old mocker; I must needs be friends with thee.
C. I Pompey am, Pompey surmam’d the big,— Dum. The great. [great; Cost. It is great, sir;—Pompey surmam’d the
That oft in field, with target and shield, did make my foe to sweat:
And, travelling along this coast, I have come by chance;
[of France. And lay my arms before the feet of this sweet lass If your ladyship would say, Thanks Pompey, I had done.
1 Game with dice. 2 Leopard.
Prin. Great thanks, great Pompey.
Cost. Tis not so much worth; but, I hope, I was perfect: I made a little fault in great.
Biron. My hat to a halfpenny, Pompey proves the best worthy.

Enter Nathaniel arm'd, for Alexander.
Nath. When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander,
By east, west, north, and south, I spread my conquering might:
My 'scutcheon plain declares that I am Alisander,
Boyet. Your nose says, no, you are not; for it stands too right. [Alexander.
P. The conqueror is dismay'd. Proceed, good Nath. When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander;—
B. Most true, 'tis right; you were so, Alisander.
Biron. Pompey the great—
Cost. Your servant, and Costard.
Biron. Take away the conqueror, take away Alisander.
Cost. O, sir, [To Nath.] you have overthrown Alisander the conqueror! You will be scraped out of the painted cloth for this. A conqueror, and afeard to speak! run away for shame, Alisander. [Nath. retires.] There, an't shall please you; a foolish mild man; an honest man, look you, and soon dash'd! He is a marvellous good neighbour, in sooth; and a very good bowler; but, for Alisander, alas, you see, how 'tis—a little o'er-parted.—But there are worthies a-coming will speak their mind in some other sort.

Prin. Stand aside, good Pompey.

Enter Holofernes arm'd, and Moth arm'd, for Hercules.
Hol. Great Hercules is presented by this imp,
Whose club kill'd Cerberus, that three-headed canus;
And when he was a babe, a child, a shrimp,
Thus did he strange serpents in his mans
Quoniam, he seemeth in minority.
Ergo, I come with this apology. —
Keep some state in thy exit, and vanish.

[Exit Moth.

Dum. Judas Machabeus clipt, is plain Judas.
Hol. I will not be put out of countenance.
Biron. Because thou hast no face.
Hol. What is this?
Boyet. A citron head.
Dum. The head of a bodkin.
Biron. A death's face in a ring.
I. The face of an old Roman coin, scarce seen.
Boyet. The pumel of Caesar's faithfulion.
Dum. The carv'd-bone face on a flask.
Biron. St George's half-cheek in a brooch.
Dum. Ay, in a brooch of lead.
B. Ay, and worn in the cap of a tooth-drawer:
And now, forward; for we have put thee in countenance.
Hol. You have put me out of countenance.
Biron. False; we have given thee faces.
Hol. But you have out-face'd them all.

1 Called.

Biron. An thou wert a lion, we would do so.
Boyet. Therefore, as he is, an ass, let him go.

[Exit Holofernes.

Enter Armado arm'd, for Hector.
Biron. Hide thy head, Achilles; here comes Hector in arms.
Dum. Though my mock's come home by me, I will now be merry.
King. Hector was but a Trojan in respect of Boyet. But is this Hector? [this.
D. I think, Hector was not so clean-timber'd.
Long. His leg is too big for Hector.
Dum. More calf, certain.
Boyet. No; he is best indued in the small.
Biron. This cannot be Hector.
Dum. He's a painter, for he makes faces.
A. The armipotent Mars, of lances the mighty,
Gave Hector a gift,—
Dum. A gilt nutmeg.
Biron. A lemon.
Long. Stuck with cloves.
Dum. No, cloven.
Arm. Peace!
The armipotent Mars, of lances the mighty,
Gave Hector a gift, the heir of Ilion; [yea
A man so breath'd, that certain he would fight,
From morn till night, out of his pavilion.
I am that flower,—
That mint.
Long. That columbine.
Arm. Sweet lord Longaville, rein thy tongue.
Long. I must rather give it the rein; for it runs against Hector.
Dum. Ay, and Hector's a greyhound.
Arm. The sweet war-man is dead; sweet chucks, beat not the bones of the buried: when he breath'd, he was a man.—But I will forward with my device: Sweet royalty, [To the Princess.] be now on me the sense of hearing.

[Bir. whispers Costard.
P. Speak, brave Hector; we are much delighted.
Arm. I do adore thy sweet grace's slipper.
Boyet. Loves her by the foot.
Arm. This Hector far surmounted Hannibal. —
C. The party is gone, fellow Hector, she is gone.
Arm. Dost thou infamize me among potentates? thou shalt die.
Cost. Then shall Hector be hanged, for Pompey that is dead by him.
Dum. Most rare Pompey!
Biron. Renowned Pompey!
Biron. Greater than great, great, great, great Pompey! Pompey the huge!
Dum. Hector trembles.
Biron. Pompey is moved.—More Ates! more Ates; stir them on! stir them on!
Dum. Hector will challenge him.
Biron. Ay, if he have no more man's blood in him than will sup a flea.
Arm. By the north pole, I do challenge thee.
Cos. I will not fight with a pole, like a northern man; I'll slash; I'll do it by the sword; — I pray you, let me borrow my arms again.
Dum. Room for the incensed worthies.
Cost. I'll do it in my shirt.
Dum. Most resolute Pompey.

1 The goddess of discord.
Arm. Gentlemen and soldiers, pardon me; I will not combat in my shirt.

Dum. You may not deny it, Pompey hath made the challenge.

Arm. Sweet bloods, I both may and will.

Biron. What reason have you for’t?

Arm. The naked truth of it is, I have no shirt, I go woolward for penance.

Boyet. True, and it was enjoined him in Rome for want of linen.

Enter Mercde.

Mer. Heaven save you, madam!

Prin. Welcome, Mercde.

But that thou interruptest our merriment.

Mer. I am sorry, madam; for the news I bring, Is heavy in my tongue. The king your father—

Prin. Dead, for my life.

Mer. Even so; my tale is told.

B. Worthies, away; the scene begins to cloud.

A. For mine own part, I breathe free breath; I have seen the day of wrong through the little hole of discretion, and I will right myself like a soldier.

[Exeunt Worthies.

King. How fares your majesty?

Prin. Boyet, prepare; I will away to-night.

King. Madam, not so; I do beseech you, stay.

P. Prepare, I say. —I thank you, gracious lords, For all your fair endeavours; and entreat, Out of a new-sad soul, that you vouchsafe In your rich wisdom, to excuse or hide, The liberal1 opposition of our spirits: If over-boldly we have borne ourselves In the converse of breath, your gentleness Was guilty of it. —Farewell, worthy lord! A heavy heart bears not an humble tongue: Excuse me so, coming so short of thanks For my great suit so easily obtain’d.

King. The extreme parts of time extremely All cause to the purpose of his speed; [form And often, at his very loose, decides That which long process could not arbitrate: And though the morning brow of progeny Forbid the smiling courtesy of love, The holy suit which fain it would convince; Yet, since love’s argument was first on foot, Let not the cloud of sorrow justle it From what it purpos’d; since, to wall friends lost, Is not by much so wholesome, profitable, As to rejoice at friends but newly found.

P. I understand you not, my griefs are double.

Bir. Honest plain words best pierce the ear of grief:—

And by these badges understand the king. For your fair sakes have we neglected time, Play’d foul play with our oaths; your beauty, ladies, Hath much deform’d us, fashioning our humours Even to the opposed trend of our intents: And what in us hath seem’d ridiculous,— As love is full of unbecitting strains; All wanton as a child, skipping, and vain; Form’d by the eye, and, therefore like the eye Full of strange shapes, of habits, and of forms, Varying in subjects as the eye doth roll To every varied object in his glance:

Which party-coated presence of loose love Put on by us, if, in your heavenly eyes Have misbecom’d our oaths and gravities, Those heavenly eyes, that look into these faults, Suggested us to make: Therefore, ladies, Our love being yours, the error that love makes Is likewise yours; we to ourselves prove false, By being once false for ever to be true To those that make us both,—fair ladies, you; And even that falsehood, in itself a sin, Thus purifies itself, and turns to grace.

P. We have receiv’d your letters, full of love; Your favours, the embassadors of love; And, in our maiden council, rated them At courtship, pleasant jest, and courtesy, As bombast, and as lining to the time: But more devout than this, in our respects, Have we not been; and therefore met your loves In their own fashion, like a merriment.

Dum. Our letters, madam, show’d much more Long. So did our looks, [than jest.

Ros. We did not quote1 them so.

King. Now, at the latest minute of the hour, Grant us your loves.

Prin. A time, methinks, too short To make a world-without-end bargain in: No, no, my lord, your grace is perjur’d much; Full of dear guiltiness; and therefore this,— If for my love (as there is no such cause) You will do aught, this shall you do for me: Your oath I will not trust; but go with speed To some forlorn and naked hermitage, Remote from all the pleasures of the world; There stay, until the twelve celestial signs Have brought about their annual reckoning; If this austere insociable life Change not your offer made in heat of blood, If frosts, and fasts, hard lodging, and thinweeds,2 Nip not the gaudy blossoms of your love, But that it bear this trial, and last love; Then, at the expiration of the year, Come challenge, challenge me by these deserts, And, by this virgin palm, now kissing thine, I will be thine; and, till that instant, shut My woeful self up in a mourning house; Raining the tears of lamentation, For the remembrance of my father’s death. If this thou do deny, let our hands part; Neither entitled in the other’s heart.

King. If this, or more than this, I would deny, To flatter up these powers of mine with rest, The sudden hand of death close up mine eye! Hence ever then my heart is in thy breast. Bir. And what to me, my love? and what to me? R. You must be purged too, your sins are rank; You are attaint3 with faults and perjury; Therefore, if you my favour mean to get, A twelvemonth shall you spend, and never rest, But seek the weary beds of people sick.

Dum. But what to me, my love? but what to me? K. A wife!—A beard, fair health, and honesty; Whose three-fold love I wish you all these three. Dum. O, shall I say, I thank you, gentle wife? K. Not so, my lord;—a twelvemonth and a day I’ll mark no words that smooth-fac’d wooers say: Come when the king doth to my lady come. Then, if I have much love, I’ll give you some.

1 Regard. 2 Clothing. 3 Stained.

M
D. I'll serve thee true and faithfully till then.
K. Yet swear not, lest you be forsworn again.
Long. What says Maria?
Mar. At the twelvemonth's end,
I'll change my black gown for a faithful friend.
J. I'll stay with patience; but the time is long.
Mar. The liker you; few taller are so young.
Bir. Studies, my lady? mistress, look on me.
Behold the window of my heart, mine eye,
What humble suit attends thy answer there;
Impose some service on me for thy love.
Ros. Oft have I heard of you, my lord Birón,
Before I saw you: and the world's large tongue
Proclaims you for a man replete with mocks;
Full of comparisons and wounding flouts;
Which you on all estates will execute,
That lie within the mercy of your wit:
To weed this wormwood from your fruitful brain;
And, therewithal, to win me, if you please,
(Without the which I am not to be won,
You shall this twelvemonth term from day to day
Visit the speechless sick, and still converse
With groaning wretches; and your task shall be,
With all the fierce endeavour of your wit,
To enforcing the painest to be smile.

B. To move wild laughter in the throat of
It cannot be; it is impossible: [death?
Mirth cannot move a soul in agony. [spirit,
Ros. Why, that's the way to choke a gibing
Whose influence is begot of that loose grace,
Which shallow laughing hearers give to fools:
A jest's prosperity lies in the ear
Of him that hears it, never in the tongue
Of him that makes it; then, if sickly ears,
Deaf'd with the clamours of their own dear groans,
Will hear your idle scorns, continue then,
And I will have you, and that fault withal;
But, if they will not, throw away that spirit,
And I shall find you empty of that fault,
Right joyful of your reformation.
Biron. A twelvemonth? well, belfast what will
I'll jest a twelvemonth in an hospital. [befal,
Prin. Ay, sweet my lord: and so I take my leave.
[To the King.
K. No, madam: we will bring you on your way.
Bir. Our wooling doth not end like an old play;
Jack hath not Jill: these ladies' courtesy
Might well have made our sport a comedy.
K. Come, sir, it wants a twelvemonth and a
And then 'twill end. [day,
Biron. That's too long for a play.

Enter Armado.

Arm. Sweet majesty, vouchsafe me.—
Prin. Was not that Hector?
Dum. The worthy knight of Troy.
Arm. I will kiss thy royal finger and take leave: I am a votary; I have vowed to Jaque-netta to hold the plough for her sweet love three years. But, most esteemed greatness, will you hear the dialogue that the two learned men have compiled, in praise of the owl and the cuckoo? it should have followed in the end of our show.

King. Call them forth quickly, we will do so.
Arm. Holla! approach.

Enter Holofernes, Nathaniel, Moth, Costard, and others.

This side is this, winter; this Ver, the spring;
the one maintain'd by the owl, the other by the cuckoo. Ver, begin.

SONG.

I.

Spring. When daisies pied, and violets blue,
And lady-smocks all silver-white,
And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue,
Do paint the meadows with delight,
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mock's married men, for thus sings he,
Cuckoo;
Cuckoo, cuckoo.—O word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!

II.

Winter. When icicles hang by the wall,
And merry larks are ploughmen's clocks,
When turtles tread, and rooks, and daws,
And maidens bleach their summer smocks,
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mock's married men, for thus sings he,
Cuckoo;
Cuckoo, cuckoo.—O word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!

III.

When all aloud the wind doth blow,
And coughing drowns the parson's saw,
And birds sit brooding in the snow,
And Marian's nose looks red and raw,
When roasted crabs kiss in the bowl,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,
To-who;
Tu-whit, to-who, a merry note.
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

When all aloud the wind doth blow,

And Marian's nose looks red and raw,
When roasted crabs kiss in the bowl,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,
To-who;

While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

Arm. The words of Mercury are harsh after the songs of Apollo. You, that way; we, this way.
[Exeunt.

1 Variegated. 2 Scum. 3 Wild apples.
Scene.—Partly at Venice, and partly at Belmont, the seat of Portia, on the Continent.

To think on this; and shall I lack the thought, That such a thing, bechan'd, would make me sad?

But, tell not me; I know Antonio Is sad to think upon his merchandise.
\textit{Ant.} Believe me, no: I thank my fortune for it, My ventures are not in one bottom trusted, Nor to one place; nor is my whole estate Upon the fortune of this present year: Therefore, my merchandise makes me not sad.
\textit{Salan.} Why then you are in love.
\textit{Ant.} Fie, fie!
\textit{Salan.} Not in love neither? Then let's say, you are sad,

Because you are not merry: and 'twere as easy For you, to laugh, and leap, and say, you are merry, Because you are not sad. Now, by two-headed Janus,

Nature hath fram'd strange fellows in her time: Some that will evermore peep through their eyes, And laugh, like parrots, at a bag-piper; And other of such singular aspect, That they'll not show their teeth in way of smile, Though Nestor swear the jest be laughable.

Enter Bassanio, Lorenzo, and Gratiano.

\textit{Salan.} Here comes Bassanio, your most noble Gratiano, and Lorenzo: Fare you well; [kinsman, We leave you now with better company. [merry, \textit{Salar.} I would have staid till I had made you If worthier friends had not prevented me.
\textit{Ant.} Your worth is very dear in my regard. I take it, your own business calls on you, And you embrace the occasion to depart.
\textit{Salar.} Good morrow, my good lords.
\textit{Bass.} Good signiors both, when shall we laugh? Say, when?
You grow exceeding strange: Must it be so?
\textit{Salar.} We'll make our pleasures to attend on \textit{Exeunt} Salarino and Salanio. [yours.
\textit{Lor.} My lord Bassanio, since you have found Antonio, We two will leave you: but, at dinner-time, I pray you, have in mind where we must meet.
Bass. I will not fail you.

Gra. You look not well, signior Antonio;
You have too much respect upon the world:
They lose it, that do buy it with much care.
Believe me, you are marvellously chang'd.

A. I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano;
A stage, where every man must play a part,
And mine a sad one.

Gra. Let me play the Fool:
With mirth and laughter let old wrinkles come;
And let my liver rather heat with wine,
Than my heart cool with mortifying groans.
Why should a man, whose blood is warm within,
Sit like his grandsire cut in alabaster?
Sleep when he wakes? and creep into the jaundice
By being peevish? I tell thee what, Antonio,—
I love thee, and it is my love that speaks;
There are a sort of men, whose visages
Do cream and mantle, like a standing pond;
And do a wilful stillness entertain,
With purpose to be dress'd in an opinion
Of wisdom, gravity, profound conceit;
As who should say, I am Sir Oracle,
And, when I open my lips, let no dog bark!
O, my Antonio, I do know of these,
That therefore only are reputed wise,
For saying nothing; who, I am very sure, [ears,
If they should speak, would almost dam those
Which, hearing them, would call their brothers,
I'll tell thee more of another this time: [fools.
But fish not, with this melancholy bait,
For this fool's gudgeon, this opinion.—
Come, good Lorenzo,—Fare ye well, a while;
I'll end my exhortation after dinner. [time
Lor. Well, we will leave you then till dinner
I must be one of these same dumb wise men,
For Gratiano never let me speak.

G. Well, keep me company but two years more,
Thou shalt not know the sound of thine own tongue.

Ant. Farewell! I'll grow a talker for this gear. [Exeunt Gratiano and Lorenzo.

Bass. Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing, more than any man in all Venice: His reasons are as two grains of wheat hid in two bushels of chaff: you shall seek all day ere you find them: and, when you have them, they are not worth the search.

Ant. Well; tell me now, what lady is this same
To whom you swore a secret pilgrimage,
That you to-day promis'd to tell me of?

Bass. 'Tis not unknown to you, Antonio,
How much I have disabled mine estate,
By something showing a more swelling port
Than my faint means would grant continuance:
Nor do I now make mean to be abridg'd
From such a noble rate; but my chief care
Is, to come fairly off from the great debts,
Wherein my time, something too prodigal,
Hath left me gag'd: To you, Antonio,
I owe the most, in money, and in love;
And from your love I have a warranty
To unburthen all my plots, and purposes,
How to get clear of all the debts I owe.

Ant. I pray you, good Bassanio, let me know it;
And, if it stand, as you yourself still do,
Within the eye of honour, be assured, 1 Silence.

My purse, my person, my extremest means,
Lie all unlock'd to your occasions.

Bass. In my school-days, when I had lost one
I shot his fellow of the self-same flight [shaft
The self-same way, with more advised watch,
To find the other forth; and by advent'ring both,
I oft found both: I urge this childhood proof,
Because what follows is pure innocence.
I owe you much; and, like a wilful youth,
That which I owe is lost; but if you please
To shoot another arrow that self way
Which you did shoot the first, I do not doubt,
As I will watch the aim, or to find both,
Or bring your latter hazard back again,
And thankfully rest debtor for the first.

Ant. You know me well; and herein spend but
To wind about my love with circumstance; [time,
And, out of doubt, you do me now more wrong,
In making question of my uttermost,
Than if you had made waste of all I have:
Then do but say to me what I should do,
That in your knowledge may by me be done,
And I am prest unto it: therefore, speak.

Bass. In Belmont is a lady richly left,
And she is fair, and, fairer than that word,
Of wond'rous virtues; sometimes from her eyes
I did receive fair speechless messages:
Her name is Portia; nothing undervalued
To Cato's daughter, Brutus' Portia.
Nor is the world wide ignorant of her worth;
For the four winds blow in from every coast
Renowned suitors: and her sunny locks
Hang on her temples like a golden fleece;
Which makes her seat of Belmont, Caltho's;
And many Jasons come in quest of her. [strand,
O my Antonio, had I but the means
To hold a rival place with one of them,
I have a mind presages me such thrift,
That I should questionless be fortunate.

Ant. Thou know'st, that all my fortunes are at Nor have I money, nor commodity [sea;
To raise a present sum: therefore go forth,
Try what my credit can in Venice do;
That shall be rack'd, even to the uttermost,
To furnish thee to Belmont, to fair Portia.
Go presently inquire, and so will I,
Where money is; and I no question make,
To have of my trust, or for my sake. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.

BELMONT. A ROOM IN PORTIA'S HOUSE.

Enter Portia and Nerissa.

Por. By my troth, Nerissa, my little body is a- weary of this great world.

Ner. You would be, sweet madam, if your miseries were in the same abundance as your good fortunes are: And yet, for aught I see, they are as sick, that surfeit with too much, as they that starve with nothing: It is no mean happiness, therefore, to be seated in the mean; superfluity sooner by white hairs, but competency lives longer.

Por. Good sentences, and well pronounced.

Ner. They would be better, if well followed.

Por. If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men’s cottages, prince’s palaces. It is a good divine that follows his own instructions; I can easily teach twenty what were good to be done, than be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching. But this reasoning is not in the fashion to choose me a husband:—O me, the word choose! I may neither chose whom I would, nor refuse whom I dislike; so is the will of a living daughter cur’d by the will of a dead father:—Is it not hard, Nerissa, that I cannot choose one, nor refuse none?

Ner. Your father was ever virtuous; and holy men, at their death, have good inspirations; therefore, the lottery, that he hath devised in these three chests, of gold, silver, and lead, (whereof who chooses his meaning, chooses you,) will, no doubt, never be chosen by any rightly, but one who you shall rightly love. But what warmth is there in your affection towards any of these princely suitors that are already come?

Por. I pray thee, over-name them: and as thou namest them, I will describe them; and, according to my description, level at my affection.

Ner. First, there is the Neapolitan prince.

Por. Ay, that’s a colt, indeed, for he doth nothing but talk of his horse; and he makes it a great appropration to his own good parts, that he can shoe him himself.

Ner. Then, is there the county Palatine.

Por. He doth nothing but frown; as who should say, An if you will not have me, choose; he hears merry tales, and smiles not: I fear he will prove the weeping philosopher when he grows old, being so full of unmanly sadness in his youth. I had rather be married to a death’s head with a bone in his mouth, than to either of these. Heaven defend me from these two!

Ner. How say you by the French lord, monsieur Le Bon?

Por. Heaven made him, and therefore let him pass for a man. In truth, I know it is a sin to be a mocker: But, he! why, he hath a horse better than the Neapolitan’s; a better bad habit of frowning than the Count Palatine: he is every man in no man: if a thrrostle sing, he falls straight a capering; he will fence with his own shadow: If I should marry him, I should marry twenty husbands: If he would despise me, I would forgive him; for if he love me to madness, I shall never requite him.

Ner. What say you then to Faulconbridge, the young baron of England?

Por. You know, I say nothing to him; for he understands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latin, French, nor Italian; and you will come into the court and swear, that I have a poor pennyworth in the English. He is a proper man’s picture; but alas! who can converse with a dumb show? How oddly he is suited! I think he bought his doublet in Italy, his round hose in France, his bonnet in Germany, and his behaviour every where.

Ner. What think you of the Scottish lord, his neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charity in him; for he borrowed a box of the ear of the Englishman, and swore he would pay him again, when he was able: I think the Frenchman became his surety, and sealed under for another.

Ner. How like you the young German, the duke of Saxony’s nephew?

Por. Very vily in the morning, when he is sober; and most vily in the afternoon, when he is drunk: when he is best, he is a little worse than a man; and when he is worst, he is little better than a beast: an the worst fall that ever fell, I hope I shall make shift to go without him.

N. If he should offer to choose, and choose the right casket, you should refuse to perform your father’s will, if you should refuse to accept him.

Por. Therefore, for fear of the worst, I pray thee set a deep glass of Rhenish wine on the contrary casket; for, if the devil be within, and that temptation without, I know he will choose it. I will do any thing, Nerissa, ere I will be married to a sponge.

Ner. You need not fear, lady, the having any of these lords; they have acquainted me with their determinations: which is, indeed, to return to their home, and to trouble you with no more suit; unless you may be won by some other sort than your father’s imposition, depending on the caskets.

Por. If I live to be as old as Sibylla, I will die as chaste as Diana, unless I be obtained by the manner of my father’s will: I am glad this parcel of wooers are so reasonable; for there is not one among them but I dote on his very absence, and I wish them a fair departure.

Ner. Do you not remember, lady, in your father’s time, a Venetian, a scholar, and a soldier, that came hither in company of the Marquis of Montferrat?

Por. Yes, yes, it was Bassanio; as I think, so was he called.

Ner. True, madam; he of all the men that ever my foolish eyes looked upon, was the best deserving a fair lady.

P. I remember him well; and I remember him worthy of thy praise.—How now! what news?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. The four strangers seek for you, madam, to take their leave: and there is a fore-runner come from a fifth, the prince of Morocco; who brings word, the prince, his master, will be here to-night.

Por. If I could bid the fifth welcome with so good heart as I can bid the other four farewell, I should be glad of his approach: if he have the condition of a saint, and the complexion of a devil, I had rather he should shrive me than wive me. Come, Nerissa.—Sirrah, go before.—While we shut the gate upon one woe, another knocks at the door.

Scene II.—Venice. A Public Place.

Enter Bassanio and Shylock.

Shy. Three thousand ducats,—well.
Bass. Ay, sir, for three months.
Shy. For three months,—well.
Bass. For the which, as I told you, Antonio shall be bound.
SHAKESPEARE'S DRAMATIC WORKS.

ACT I.

Well then, your bond; and, let me see,—But Methought, you said, you neither lend nor bor-
Upon advantage. [row, Ant.]
I do never use it.

Shy. When Jacob graz'd his uncle Lebán's
This Jacob from our holy Abraham was [sheep,
(As his wise mother wrought in his behalf.)
The third possessor; ay, he was the third.

Ant. And what of him? did he take interest?
S. No, not take interest; no, as you would say,
Directly interest: mark what Jacob did.
When Leban and himself were compromis'd,
That all the earnings which were streak'd, and
Should fall as Jacob's hire, [pied,
The skilful shepherd peel'd me certain wands,
And stuck them up before the fulsome ewes;
Who, then conceiving, did in eaning time
Fall party colour'd lambs, and those were Jacob's.
This was a way to thrive, and he was blest;
And thrift is blessing, if men steal it not.

Ant. This was a venture, sir, that Jacob serv'd
A thing not in his power to bring to pass, [for;
But away'd, and fashion'd, by the hand of heaven.
Was this inserted to make interest good?
Or is your gold and silver, ewes and rams?

Shy. I cannot tell; I make it breed as fast:—
But note me, signior.

Ant.
Mark you this, Bassanio,
The devil can cite Scripture for his purpose.
An evil soul, producing holy witness,
Is like a villain with a smiling cheek;
A goodly apple rotten at the heart;
O, what a goodly outside falsehood hath!
Shy. Three thousand ducats,—'ts a good round sum.

[rate.
Three months from twelve, then let me see the
A. Well, Shylock, shall we be beholden to you?
Shy. Signior Antonio, many a time and oft,
In the Rialto you have rated me
About my monies, and my usances.
Still have I borne it with a patient shrug;
For suffrance is the badge of all our tribe:
You call me—misbeliever, cut-throat dog,
And spit upon my Jewish gaberdine,
And all for use of that which is mine own.
Well then, it now appears, you need my help:
Go to then; you come to me, and you say,
Shylock, we would have monies; You say so;
You, that did void your rheum upon my beard,
And foot me, as you spurn a stranger car
Over your threshold; monies is your suit.
What should I say to you? Should I not say,
Hath a dog money? is it possible,
A car can lend three thousand ducats? or Shall I bend low, and in a bondman's key,
With bated breath, and whispering humbleness,
Say this,—
Fair sir, you spit on me on Wednesday last;
You spurr'd me such a day; another time
You call'd me—dog; and for these courtesies
I'll lend you thus much monies.

Ant. I am as like to call thee so again,
To spit on thee again, to spurn thee too.
If thou wilt lend this money, lend it not
As to thy friends; (for when did friendship take
A breed for barren metal of his friend?)
But lend it rather to thine enemy:
Who if he break, thou may'st with better face
Exact the penalty.

Shy. Why, look you, how you storm!
I would be friends with you, and have your love,
Forget the shame that you have stain'd me with,
Supply your present wants, and take no doit
Of usance for my monies, and you'll not hear me;
This is kind I offer.

Ant. This were kindness.

Shy. This kindness will I show:
Go with me to a notary, seal me there
Your single bond; and, in a merry sport,
If you repay me not on such a day,
In such a place, such sum, or sums, as are Express'd in the condition, let the forfeit
Be nominated for an equal pound
Of your fair flesh, to be cut off and taken
In what part of your body pleaseth me.

Ant. Content, in faith; I'll seal to such a bond,
And say, there is much kindness in the Jew.

Bass. You shall not seal to such a bond for me,
I'll rather dwell in my necessity.

Ant. Why, fear not, man, I will not forfeit it;
Within these two months, that's a month before
This bond expires, I do expect return
Of thrice three times the value of this bond.

S.O.father Abraham, what these Christians are;
Whose own hard dealings teaches them suspect
The thoughts of others! Pray you, tell me this;
If he should break his day, what should I gain
By the exaction of the forfeiture?
A pound of man's flesh, taken from a man,
Is not so estimable, profitable neither,
As flesh of muttons, beews, or goats. I say
To buy his favour, I extend this friendship;
If he will take it, so; if not, adieu;
And, for my love, I pray you, wrong me not.

Ant. Yes, Shylock, I will seal unto this bond.

Shy. Then meet me forthwith at the notary's;
Give him direction for this merry bond,
And I will go and pursue the ducats straight;
See to my house, left in the fearful guard
Of an unthrift knave; and presently
I will be with you. [Exit.

Ant. His thee, gentle Jew.

This Hebrew will turn Christian; he grows kind.

Bass. I like not fair terms, and a villain's mind.

Ant. Come on; in this there can be no dismay,
My ships come home a month before the day.

[Exit.

Act Second.

SCENE I.

BELMONT. A Room in Portia's House.

Flourish of Cornets. Enter the Prince of Morocco and his Train; Portia, Nerissa, and other of her Attendants.

Mor. Mislike me not for my complexion,
The shadow'd livery of the burnish'd sun,
To whom I am a neighbour, and near bred.
Bring me the fairest creature northward born,
Where Phoebus' fire scarce thaws the icicles,

1 Smallest coin. 2 Fearful to Shylock.

And let us make incision for your love,
To prove whose blood is reddest, his, or mine.
I tell thee, lady, this aspect of mine
Hath fear'd the valiant; by my love, I swear,
The best regarded virgins of our clime
Have lov'd it too: I would not change this hue,
Except to steal your thoughts, my gentle queen.

Por. In terms of choice I am not solely led
By nice direction of a maiden's eyes:
Besides, the lottery of my destiny
Bars me the right of voluntary choosing:
But, if my father had not scanted me,
And hedg'd me by his wit, to yield myself
His wife, who wins me by that means I told you,
Yourself, renown'd prince, then stood as fair,
As any com'er I have look'd on yet,
For my affection.

Mor. Even for that I thank you; Therefore, I pray you, lead me to the caskets,
To try my fortune. By this scinitar,—
That slew the Sophy, and a Persian prince,
That won three fields of sultan Solyman,—
I would out-stare the sternest eyes that look,
Out-brave the heart most daring on the earth,
Pluck the young sucking cubs from the she-bear,
Yea, mock the lion when he roars for prey,
To win thee, lady; But, alas the while!
If Hercules, and Lichas, play at dice
Which is the better man, the greater throw
May turn by fortune from the weaker hand:
So is Alcides beaten by his page;
And so may I, blind fortune leading me,
Miss that which one unworthier may attain,
And die with grieving.

Por. You must take your chance;
And either not attempt to choose at all,
Or swear, before you choose,—if you choose
Never to speak to lady afterward [wrong,
In way of marriage; therefore be advis'd.

Mor. Nor will not; come, bring me unto my chance.

Por. First, forward to the temple; after dinner
Your hazard shall be made.

Mor. Good fortune then! [Corns.]

To make me bless'd or cursed among men.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—VENICE. A STREET.

Enter Launcelot Gobbo.

Launc. Certainly my conscience will serve me to run from this Jew, my master: The fiend is at mine elbow; and tempts me, saying to me,
Gobbo, Launcelot Gobbo, good Launcelot, or good Gobbo, or good Launcelot Gobbo, use your legs, take the start, run away: My conscience says
—No; take heed, honest Launcelot; take heed, honest Gobbo; or, as aforesaid, honest Launcelot Gobbo; do not run; worn running with thy heels: Well, the most courageous fiend bids me pack; via] says the fiend; away! says the fiend; rouse up a brave mind, says the fiend, and run. Well, my conscience, hanging about the neck of my heart, says very wisely to me,— my honest friend, Launcelot, being an honest man's son, budge not; budge, says the fiend;
1 The Eastern custom of lovers cutting themselves for their mistresses.
2 Terrified.
3 Straitened.
Enter old Gobbo, with a basket.

Gob. Master, young man, you, I pray you; which is the way to Master Jew's?

Lawn. [Aside.] O heavens, this is my true-begotten father! who, being more than sand-blind, high-gravel blind, knows me not:—I will try conclusions with him.

Gob. Master, young gentleman, I pray you, which is the way to master Jew's?

Lawn. Turn up on your right hand, at the next turning, but, at the next turning of all, on your left; marry, at the very next turning, turn of no hand, but turn down indirectly to the Jew's house.

Gob. 'Twill be a hard way to hit. Can you tell me whether one Launcelot, that dwells with him, dwell with him, or no?

Lawn. Talk you of young master Launcelot?—Mark me now: [Aside.] now will I raise the waters:—Talk you of young master Launcelot?

Gob. No master, sir, but a poor man's son; his father, though I say it, is an honest exceeding poor man, and, God be thanked, well to live.

Lawn. Well, let his father be what he will, we talk of young master Launcelot.

G. Your worship's friend, and Launcelot, sir.

Lawn. But I pray you ergo, old man, ergo, I beseech you; Talk you of young master Launcelot?

G. Of Launcelot, an't please your mastership.

Lawn. Ergo, master Launcelot; talk not of master Launcelot, father; for the young gentleman (according to fair sons and fortunes, and such odd sayings, the sisters three, and such branches of learning), is indeed deceased.

Gob. Marry, God forbid! the boy was the very staff of my age, my very prop.

Lawn. Do I look like a cudgel, or a hovel-post, a staff, or a prop?—Do you know me, father?

Gob. Alack the day, I know you not, young gentleman; but, I pray you, tell me, is my boy alive or dead?

Lawn. Do you not know me, father?

Gob. Alack, sir, I am sand-blind, I know you not.

Lawn. Nay, indeed, if you had your eyes, you might fall of the knowing me: it is wise father, that knows his own child. Well, old man, I will tell you news of your son: Give me your blessing: truth will come to light; murder cannot be hid long, a man's son may; but, in the end, truth will out.

Gob. Pray you, sir, stand up, I am sure, you are not Launcelot, my boy.

1 Exeunt.

Lawn. Pray you, let's have no more fooling about it, but give me your blessing; I am Launcelot, your boy that was, your son that is, your child that shall be.

Gob. I cannot think, you are my son.

Lawn. I know not what I shall think of that: but I am Launcelot, the Jew's man; and, I am sure, Margery, your wife, is my mother.

Gob. Her name is Margery, indeed; I'll be sworn, if thou be Launcelot, thou art mine own flesh and blood. What a beast hast thou got! thou hast got more hairon thy chin, than Dobbin my thill-horse has on his tail.

Lawn. It should seem, then, that Dobbin's tail grows backward; I am sure he had more hair on his tail, than I have on my face, when I last saw him.

Gob. How art thou changed! How dost thou and thy master agree? I have brought him a present: How 'gree you now?

Lawn. Well, well; but for mine own part, as I have set up my rest to run away, so I will not rest till I have run some ground:—my master's a very Jew: Give him a present! give him a halter: I am famish'd in his service; you may tell every finger I have with my ribs. Father, I am glad you are come; give me your present to one master Bassanio, who, indeed, gives rare new livories; if I serve not him, I will run as far as there is any ground.—O rare fortune! here comes the man;—to him, father; for I am a Jew, if I serve the Jew any longer.

Enter Bassanio, with Leonardo, and other Followers.

Bass. You may do so;—but let it be so hasted, that supper be ready at the farthest by five of the clock: See these letters deliver'd: put the livories to making: and desire Gratiano to come anon to my lodging. [Exit a Servant.

Lawn. To him, father.

Gob. God bless your worship!

B. Gramercy; Wouldst thou aught with me?

Gob. Here's my son, sir, a poor boy,—

Lawn. Not a poor boy, sir, but the rich Jew's man; that would, sir, as my father shall specify,—

Gob. He hath a great infection, sir, as one would say, to serve—

Lawn. Indeed, the short and the long is, I serve the Jew, and I have a desire, as my father shall specify,—

Gob. His master and he (saving your worship's reverence), are scarce cetera-cousins;—

Lawn. To be brief, the very truth is, that the Jew having done me wrong, doth cause me, as my father, being I hope, an old man, shall fructify unto you,—

Gob. I have here a dish of doves, that I would bestow upon your worship; and my suit is,—

Lawn. In very brief, the suit is impertinent to myself, as your worship shall know by this honest old man; and, though I say it, though an old man, yet, poor man, my father.

Bass. One speak for both:—What would you?

Lawn. Serve you, sir.

Gob. This is the very defect of the matter, sir.

1 Shaft-horse. 2 Fourth cousins.
SCENE III.—A ROOM IN SHYLOCK'S HOUSE.

Enter Jessica and Launcelot.

Jes. I am sorry, thou wilt leave my father so: Our house is sad, but thou, a merry devil, Didst rob it of some taste of tediousness: But fare thee well; there is a ducat for thee. And, Launcelot, soon at supper shalt thou see Lorenzo, who is thy new master's guest: Give him this letter; do it secretly, And so farewell; I would not have my father See me talk with thee.

Laun. Adieu!—tears exhibit my tongue.— Most beautiful pagan,—most sweet Jew! If a Christian do not play the knave, and get thee, I am much deceiv'd: But, adieu! these foolish drops do somewhat drown my manly spirit; adieu! [Exit.

Jes. Farewell, good Launcelot.— Allack, what heinous sin it is in me, To be asham'd to be my father's child! But though I am a daughter to his blood, I am not to his manners: O Lorenzo, If thou keep promise, I shall end this strife; Become a Christian, and thy loving wife. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—A STREET.

Enter Gratiano, Lorenzo, Salarino, and Salanio.

Lor. Nay, we will slink away in supper-time; Disguise us at my lodging, and return All in an hour.

Gra. We have not made good preparation.

Sala. We have not spoke us yet of torch-bearers.

Salan. Tis vile, unless it may be quaintly order'd, And better, in my mind, not undertook.

Lor. Tis now but four o'clock; we have two hours To furnish us:

[Exit Launcelot, with a Letter.

Friend Launcelot, what's the news?

Lor. An it shall please you to break up this; it shall seem to signify.

Lor. I know the hand: in faith, 'tis a fair hand: And whiter than the paper it writ on, Is the fair hand that writ it.

Gra. Love-news, in faith.

Lor. By your leave, sir.

Gra. Whither goest thou?

Gra. Nay, but I bar to-night; you shall not Enter our house, unless we bid you; For what we do to-night, it is a secret. [Exeunt Jas and Laun.

Gra. And I must to Lorenzo, and the rest; But we will visit you at supper-time. [Exeunt.

1 Braided. 2 Free. 3 Sober demeanour.
If e'er the Jew her father come to heaven,
It will be for his gentle daughter's sake;
And never dare misfortune cross her foot,
Unless she do it under this excuse,—
That she is issue to a faithless Jew.
Come, go with me; peruse this, as thou goest:
Fair Jessica shall be my torch-bearer. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Before Shylock's House.

Enter Shylock and Launcelot.

Shy. Well, thou shalt see, thy eyes shall be thy judge,
The difference of old Shylock and Bassanio:—
What, Jessica!—thou shalt not gormandize,
As thou hast done with me:—What, Jessica!—
And sleep and snore, and rend apparel out;—
Why, Jessica, I say!

Laun. Why, Jessica!

Laun. Your worship was wont to tell me, I could do nothing without bidding.

Enter Jessica.

Jes. Call you? What is your will?

Shy. I am bid forth to supper, Jessica;
There are my keys:—But wherefore should I go?
I am not bid for love; they flatter me:
But yet I'll go in hate, to feed upon
The prodigal Christian.—Jessica, my girl,
Look to my house:—I am right loth to go;
There is some ill a-brewing towards my rest,
For I did dream of money-bags to-night.

Laun. I beseech you, sir, go; my young master doth expect your reproach.

Shy. So do I his.

Laun. And they have conspired together,—I will not say, you shall see a masque; but if you do, then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a bleeding on Black-Monday last, at six o'clock i' the morning.

Jessica:

Shy. What! are these masques? Hear you me, Lock up my doors: and when you hear the drum,
And the vile squeaking of the wry-neck'd life,
Clamber not you up to the casements then,
Nor thrust your head into the public street,
To gaze on Christian fools with varnish'd faces:
But stop my house's ears, I mean my casements;
Let not the sound of shallow fooperry enter
My sober house. —By Jacob's staff, I swear
I have no mind of feasting forth to-night:
But I will go.—Go you before me, sirrah;
Say, I will come.

Laun. I will go before, sir.

Mistress, look out at window, for all this;
There will come a Christian by,
Will be worth a Jewess' eye. [Exit Laun.

S. What says that fool of Hagar's offspring, ha?

Jes. His words were, Farewell, mistress: nothing else.

[Feeder.

Shy. The patch is kind enough; but a huge
Snail-slow in profit, and he sleeps by day.
More than the wild-cat; drones have not with me;
Therefore I part with him; and part with him
To one that would have him here to waste
His borrowed purse.—Well, Jessica, go in;
Perhaps, I will return immediately;

1 (Approach.)

2 Fellow.

Do, as I bid you,
Shut doors after you: Fast bind, fast find:
A proverb never stale in th' weedy mind. [Exit.

Jes. Farewell: and if my fortune be not crost,
I have a father, you a daughter, lost. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—The Same.

Enter Gratiano and Salarino, masked.

Gra. This is the pent-house,1 under which Desir'd us to make stand. [Lorenzo Salar. His hour is almost past.

Gra. And it is marvel he out-dwells his hour,
For lovers ever run before the clock.

Salar. O, ten times faster Venus' pigeons fly
To seal love's bonds new made, than they are
To keep obliged faith unforfeited!

[wont,

Gra. That ever holds: Who riseth from a feast,
With that keen appetite that he sits down?
Where is the horse that dott unread again
His tedious measures with the unbat'd fire
That he did pace them first? All things that are,
Are with more spirit chased than enjoy'd.

How like a younker, or a prodigal,
The scarfed bark puts from her native bay.
How like the prodigal doth she return;
With over-weather'd ribs, and ragged sails.

Enter Lorenzo.

Salar. Here comes Lorenzo:—more of this hereafter;

[abode;

Lor. Sweet friends, your patience for my long
Not I, but my affairs, have made you wait;
When you shall please to play the thieves for wives,
I'll watch as long for you then.—Approach;
Here dwells my father Jew:—Ho! who's within?

Enter Jessica, above, in Boy's clothes.

Gra. Who are you? Tell me for more certainty,
Albeit I'll swear that I do know your tongue.

Lor. Lorenzo, and thy love.

Jes. Lorenzo, certain; and my love, indeed;
For who love I so much? And now who knows,
But you, Lorenzo, whether I am yours?

Lor. Heaven, and thy thoughts, are witness thou art. [pains.

Jes. Here, catch this casket, it is worth the
I am glad 'tis night, you do not look on me,
For I am much ashamed of my exchange:
But love is blind, and lovers cannot see

The pretty follies that themselves commit:
For if they could, Cupid himself would blush
To see me thus transformed to a boy.

L. Descend, for you must be my torch-bearer.

J. What! must I hold a candle to my shame?
They in themselves, good sooth, are too too light.
Why, 'tis an office of discovery, love;
And I should be obscured.

Lor. So are you, sweet,

[shad.

Even in the lovely garnish of a boy.

But come at once;

For the close night doth play the runaway,
And we are staid for at Bassanio's feast.

Jes. I will make fast the doors, and gild myself
With some more ducats, and be with you straight.

[Exit from above.

Gra. Now, by my hood, a Gentile, and no Jew.

1 Shed.
Lor., Beshrew me, but I love her heartily: For she is wise, if I can judge of her; And fair she is, if that mine eyes be true; And true she is, as she hath prov'd herself; And therefore, like herself, wise, fair, and true, Shall she be placed in my constant soul.

Enter Jessica, below.

What, art thou come?—On, gentlemen, away; Our masquing mates by this time for us stay.

[Exit with Jessica and Salarino.]

Enter Antonio.

Ant. Who's there?

Gra. Signior Antonio?

Ant. Fie, fie, Gratiano! where are all the rest? 'Tis nine o'clock; our friends all stay for you:—

No masque to-night: the wind is come about,
Bassanio presently will go aboard:
I have sent twenty out to seek for you.

Gra. I am glad on't; I desire no more delight,
Than to be under sail, and gone to-night.[Exeunt.

SCENE VII.

BELMONT. A ROOM IN PORTIA'S HOUSE.

Flourish of Cornets. Enter Portio, with the Prince of Morocco, and both their Trains.

Por. Go, draw aside the curtains, and discover
The several caskets to this noble prince—
Now make your choice.

Mor. The first, of gold, who this inscription bears:
[desire.

Who chooseth me, shall gain what many men
The second, silver, which this promise carries:—
Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he deserves.
This third, dull lead, with warning all as blunt:—
Who chooseth me, must give and hazard all he
How shall I know if I do choose the right?[hath.

Por. The one of them contains my picture, prince;
If you choose that, then I am yours withal.

Mor. Some god direct my judgment! Let me
I will survey the inscriptions back again: [see,
What says this leaden casket? [hath. Who chooseth me, shall yet as much as he desires.
As much as he deserves—Pause there, Morocco, And weigh thy value with an even hand;
If thou best rated by thy estimation, Thou dost deserve enough; and yet enough
May not extend so far as to the lady; And yet to be afraid of my deserving,
Were but a weak disabling of myself.
As much as I deserve!—Why, that's the lady: I do in birth deserve her, and in fortunes, In graces, and in qualities of breeding; But more than these, in love I do deserve.
What if I stray'd no further, but chose here?—
Let's see once more this saying grav'd in gold: Who chooseth me, shall gain what many men desire.

Why, that's the lady: all the world desires her:

From the four corners of the earth they come,
To kiss this shrine, this mortal breathing saint.
The Hyrcanian deserts, and the vasty wilds
Of wide Arabia, are as through-fares now,
For princes to come view fair Portia:
The watery kingdom, whose ambitious head
Spits in the face of heaven, is no bar
To stop the foreign spirits; but they come,
As o'er a brook, to see fair Portia.
One of these three contains her heavenly picture. Is't like, that lead contains her? 'Twere a sin To think so base a thought; it were too gross To rib her cerecloth in the obscure grave, Or shall I think, in silver she's immured, Being ten times undervalued to try'd gold? O sinful thought! Never so rich a gem Was set in worse than gold. They have in England A coin that bears the figure of an angel Stamped in gold; but that's insculp'd upon; But here an angel in a golden bed Lies all within.—Deliver me the key: Here do I choose, and thrive I as I may! [there, Por. There, take it, prince, and if my form lie Then I am yours. [He unlocks the golden casket. Mor. What have we here? A carson death, within whose empty eye There is a written scroll; I'll read the writing.

All that glisters is not gold,
Often have you heard that told:
Many a man his life hath sold,
But my outside to behold:
Gilded tombs do worms infold,
Had you been as wise as bold,
Young in limbs, in judgment old,
Your answer had not been inscriv'd:
Fare you well; your suit is cold.

Cold, indeed; and labour lost:
Then, farewell, heat; and, welcome, frost.—
Portio, adieu! I have too griev'd a heart
To take a tedious leave: thus losers part.[Exit. Por. A gentle riddance:—Draw the curtains, go:—

Let all of his complexion choose me so. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—VENICE. A STREET.

Enter Salarino and Salanio.

Salar. Why, man, I saw Bassanio under sail; With him is Gratiano gone along; And in their ship, I am sure, Lorenzo is not.

Salan. The villain Jew with outrides rais'd the duke; Who went with him to search Bassanio's ship.

Salar. He came too late, the ship was under sail; But there the duke was given to understand, That in a gondola were seen together Lorenzo and his amorous Jessica; Besides, Antonio certify'd the duke, They were not with Bassanio in his ship.

Salan. I never heard a passion so confus'd, So strange, outrageous, and so variable, As the dog Jew did utter in the streets: My daughter! O my ducats!—O my daughter! Fleed with a Christian!—O my Christian ducats— Justice! the law! my ducats, and my daughter! A sealed bag, two sealed bags of ducats,

And wish'd in silence, that it were not his, [hear;

Bassanio told him, he would make some speed

Of his return; he answer'd—Do not so.

Slubber 2 not business for my sake, Bassanio,

But stay the very riper of the time;

And for the Jew's bond, which he hath of me,

Let it not enter in your mind of love:

Be merry; and employ your chiefest thoughts

To courtship, and such fair ostens 3 of love

As shall conveniently become you there;

And even there, his eye being big with tears,

Turning his face, he put his hand behind him,

SCENE IX.

BELMONT. A ROOM IN PORTIA'S HOUSE.

Enter Nerissa, with a Servant.

Ner. Quick, quick, I pray thee, draw the curtain straight:

The prince of Arragon hath ta'en his oath,

And comes to his election presently.

Flourish of Cornets. Enter the Prince of Arragon, Portia, and their Trains.

Por. Behold, there stand the caskets, noble prince:

If you choose that wherein I am contain'd,

Straight shall our nuptial rites be solemniz'd;

But if you fail, without more speech, my lord,

You must begin from hence immediately.

Ar. I am enjoind by oath to observe three

First, never to unfold to any [things:

Which casket 'twas I chose; next, if I fail

Of the right casket, never in my life

To woo a maid in way of marriage; lastly,

If I do fail in fortune of my choice,

Immediately to leave you and be gone.

P. To these injunctions every one doth swear,

That comes to hazard for my worthless self.

Ar. And so have I address'd me: Fortune now

To my heart's hope!—Gold, silver, and base lead.

Who chooseth me, must give and hazard all he

You shall look fairer, ere I give, or hazard. [hath:

What says the golden chest? ha! let me see:—

Who chooseth me, shall gain what many men desire.

[meant

What many men desire—That many may be

by the foul multitude, that choose by show,

Not learning more than the fond eye doth teach:

Which prises not to the interior, but, like the mantles,

Builds in the weather on the outward wall,

Even in the force and road of casualty.

I will not choose what many men desire,

Because I will not jump 1 with common spirits,

And rank me with the barbarous multitudes.

Why, then to thee, thou silver treasure house;

Tell me once more what title thou dost bear;

Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves;

And well said too; For who shall go about

To cozen 2 fortune, and be honourable

Without the stamp of merit? Let none presume

To wear an undeserved dignity.

O, that estates, degrees, and offices, [honour

Were not deriv'd corruptly! and that clear

Were purchas'd by the merit of the wearer!

How many then should cover that stand bare?

How many be commanded, that command?

How much low peasantry would then be glean'd

From the true seed of honour? and how much honour

Pick'd from the chaff and ruin of the times,

To be new varnish'd? Well, but to my choice:

Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves;

I will assume desert;—Give me a key for this,

And instantly unlock my fortunes here. [there.

Por. Too long a pause for that which you find:

A. What's here? the portrait of a blinking idiot,

Presenting me a schedule! I will read it,

How much unlike art thou to Portia!

How much unlike my hopes, and my deservings!

Who chooseth me shall have as much as he de-

Did I deserve no more than a fool's head? [serves.

Is that my prize? are my deserts no better?

Por. To offend, and judge, are distinct offices,

And of opposed natures.

Ar. What is here?

The fire seven times tried this:

Seven times tried that judgment is,

That did never choose amiss:

Some there be, that shadows kiss:

Such have but a shadow's bliss:

There be fools alive, I wis; 5

Silver'd o'er; and so was this,

Take what wife you will to bed,

I will ever be your head:

So begone, sir, you are sped.

Still more fool I shall appear,

By the time I linger here:

With one fool's head I came to woo,

But I go away with two.

Sweet, adieu! I'll keep my oath,

Patiently to bear my wroth.

[Exeunt Arragon, and Train.

Por. Thus hath the candle sing'd the moth.

O these deliberate fools! when they do choose,

They have the wisdom by their wit to lose.

1 Agree. 2 Beguile. 3 Know.
Enter a Servant.

Serv. Where is my lady?

Por. Come, draw the curtain, Nerissa.

Enter Salanio and Salarino.

Salan. Now, what news on the Rialto?

Salar. Why, yest it lives there uncheck'd, that Antonio hath a ship of rich lading wrick'd on the narrow seas; the Goodwins, I think they call the place; a very dangerous flat, and fatal, where the carcasses of many a tall ship lie buried, as they say, if my gossip report be an honest woman of her word.

Salan. I would she were as lying a gossip in that as ever knapp'd ginger, or made her neighbours believe she went for the death of a third husband: But it is true,—without any slips of prolixity, or crossing the plain highway of talk,—that the good Antonio, the honest Antonio,—O that I had a title good enough to keep his name company!—

Salar. Come, the full stop.

Salan. Ha,—what say'st thou?—Why the end is, he hath lost a ship.

Salar. I would it might prove the end of his losses!

Salan. Let me say amen betimes, lest the devil cross my prayer; for here he comes in the likeness of a Jew.—

Enter Shylock.

How now, Shylock? What news among the merchants?

Shy. You knew, none so well, none so well as you, of my daughter's flight.

Salar. That's certain; I, for my part, knew the tailor that made the wings she flew withal.

Salan. And Shylock, for his own part, knew the bird was fledged.

Shy. My own flesh and blood to rebel!

Salar. There is more difference between thy flesh and hers, than between jet and ivory: more

1 Salutations. 2 Gallant.

between your bloods, than there is between red wine and Rhenish:—But tell us, do you hear whether Antonio have had any loss at sea or no?

Shy. There I have another bad match: a bankrupt, a prodigal, who dare scarce show his head on the Rialto:—a beggar, that used to come so smug upon the mart;—let him look to his bond: he was wont to call me usurer;—let him look to his bond: he was wont to lend money for a Christian courtesy:—let him look to his bond.

Salar. Why, I am sure, if he forfeit, thou wilt not take his flesh: What's that good for?

Shy. To bait fish withal; if it will feed nothing else, it will feed my revenge. He hath disgraced me, and hindered me of half a million; laughed at my losses, mocked at my gains, scorned my nation, thwarted my bargains, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies; and what's his reason? I am a Jew: Had not a Jew eyes? hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? fed with the same bread, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer, as a Christian is? If you prick us, do we not bleed? if you tickle us, do we not laugh? if you poison us, do we not die? and if you wrong us, shall we not revenge? if we are like you in the rest, we will resemble you in that. If a Jew wrong a Christian, what is his humility? revenge; If a Christian wrong a Jew, what should his sufferance be by Christian example? why, revenge. The villainy you teach me, I will execute; and it shall go hard, but I will better the instruction.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Gentlemen, my master Antonio is at his house, and desires to speak with you both.

Salar. We have been up and down to seek him.

Enter Tubal.

Shy. How now, Tubal, what news from Genoa? hast thou found my daughter?

Tub. I often came where I did hear of her, but cannot find her.

Shy. Why, there, there, there! a diamond gone, cost me two thousand ducats in Frankfort! The curse never fell upon our nation till now; I never felt it till now:—two thousand ducats in that; and other precious, precious jewels. I would, my daughter were dead at my foot, and the jewels in her ear! would she were heard at my foot, and the ducats in her coffin! No news of them?—Why, so:—and I know not what's spent in the search: Why, thou loss upon loss! the thief gone with so much, and so much to find the thief; and no satisfaction, no revenge; nor ill luck stirring, but what lights o' my shoulders; no sighs, but o' my breathing; no tears, but o' my shedding.

Tub. Yes, other men have ill luck too; Antonio, as I heard in Genoa,—

Tub. —hath an argosy cast away, coming from Tripolis.
SHAKESPEARE'S I

Tub. I spoke with some of the sailors that escaped the wreck.

Shy. Is it true? is it true?

Tub. Thou dost not Consider, good Tubal:—Good news, good news; ha! ha!—Where? in Genoa?

Shy. I thank thee, good Tubal:—Good news, good news; ha! ha!—Where? in Genoa?

Tub. Your daughter spent in Genoa, as I heard, one night, fourscore ducats.

Shy. Thou stick'st a dagger in me:—I shall never see my gold again: Fourscore ducats at a sitting! fourscore ducats.

Tub. There came divers of Antonio's creditors in my company to Venice, that swear he cannot choose but break.

Shy. I am very glad of it: I'll plague him; I'll torture him; I am glad of it.

Tub. One of them showed me a ring, that he had of your daughter for a monkey.

Shy. Out upon her! Thou torturest me, Tubal: it was my torqueos; I had it of Leah, when I was a bachelor: I would not have given it for a wilderness of monkeys.

Tub. But Antonio is certainly undone.

Shy. Nay, that's true, that's very true: Go, Tubal, fee me an officer, bespeak him a fortnight before: I will have the heart of him, if he forfeit; for were he out of Venice, I can make what merchandise I will; Go, go, Tubal, and meet me at our synagogue; Go, good Tubal; at our synagogue, Tubal. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.

BELMONT. A ROOM IN PORTIA'S HOUSE.

Enter Bassanio, Portia, Gratiano, Nerissa, and Attendants. The caskets are set out.

Por. I pray you, tarry; pause a day or two, before you hazard; for in choosing wrong, I lose your company; therefore, forbear a while: There's something tells me (but it is not love), I would not lose you; and you know yourself, Hate counsels not in such a quality; But lest you should not understand me well, (And yet a maiden hath no tongue but thought,) I would detain you here some month or two, before you venture for me. I could teach you, How to choose right, but then I am forsworn; So will I never be: so you may miss me, But if you do, you will make me wish a sin That I had been forsworn: Beshrew your eyes, They have o'er-look'd me, and divided me; One half of me is yours; the other half yours, My own, I would say; but if mine, then yours, And so all yours: O! these naughty times Put bars between the owners and their rights; And so, though yours, not yours.—Prove it so, Let fortune bear the blame of it,—not I. I speak too long: but 'tis to peize the time; To eke it, and to draw it out in length, To stay you from election.

Bass. Let me choose;

Por. For, as I am, I live upon the rack. Bassanio? then confess What treason there is mingled with your love. Bass. None, but that ugly treason of mistrust, Which makes me fear the enjoying of my love; There may as well be amity and life

'Tween snow and fire, as treason and my love. Por. Ay, but I fear, you speak upon the rack, Where men enforced do speak any thing. Bass. Promise me life, and I'll confess the Por. Well then, confess and live. [truth. Bass. Confess and love, Had been the very sum of my confession: O happy torment, when my torturer Doth teach me answers for deliverance! But let me to my fortune and the caskets. Por. Away then: I am lock'd in one of them; If you do love me, you will find me out. — Nerissa, and the rest, stand all aloof.— Let musick sound while he doth make his choice, Then, if he lose, he makes a slave-like end, Fading in musick: that the comparison May stand more proper, my eye shall be the stream, And wat'ry death-bed for him: He may win; And what is musick then? then musick is Even as the flourish when true subjects bow To a new-crowned monarch: such it is, As are those dulcet sounds in break of day, That creep into the dreaming bridegroom's ear, And summon him to marriage. Now he goes, With no less presence, but with much more love, Than young Alcides, when he did redeem The virgin tribute paid by howling Troy To the sea-monster: I stand for sacrifice, The rest aloof are the Dardanian wives, With beare d visages, come forth to view The issue of the exploit. Go, Hercules! [may Live thou, I live:—With much much more dis I view the fight, than thou that mak'st the fray. Musick, whilst Bassanio comments on the caskets to himself.

SONG.

1. Tell me, where is fancy bred, Or in the heart or in the head? How begot, how nourished?

Reply. It is engender'd in the eyes, With gazing fed; and fancy dies In the cradle where it lies: Let us all ring fancy's knell; I'll begin it,—Ding, dong, bell.

All. Ding, dong, bell.

Bass.—So may the outward shows be least themselves; The world is still decry'd with ornament, In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt, But, being season'd with a gracious voice, Obscures the show of evil? In religion, What dangerous error, but some sober brow Will bless it, and approve it with a text, Hiding the grossness with fair ornament? There is no vice so simple, but assumes Some mark of virtue on his outward parts. How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false As stairs of sand, wear upon their chins The beards of Hercules, and frowning Mars; Who, inward search'd, have livres white as milk? And these assume but valour's countenance, To render them redoubted. Look on beauty, And you shall see 'tis purchas'd by the weight; Which therein works a miracle in nature,
Making them lightest that wear most of it:
So are those crisped1 snaky golden locks,
Which make such wanton gambols with the wind,
Upon supposed fairness, often known.
To be the dowry of a second head,
The skull that bred them, in the sepulchre.
Thus ornament is but the gullet2 shore
To a most dangerous sea; the beauteous scarf
Veiling an Indian beauty; in a word,
The seeming truth which cunning times put on
To entrap the wisest. Therefore, thou gaudygold,
Hard food for Midas, I will none of thee:
Nor none of thee, thou pale and common drudge
'Tween man and man; but thou, thou meagre lead, [ought,
Which rather threat'nest than dost promise
Thy plainness moves me more than eloquence,
And here choose I: Joy be the consequence!
Por. How all the other passions fleet to air,
As doubtless thoughts and rash embrac'd despair,
And shudd'ring fear and green-eyed jealousy.
O love, be moderate, allay thy ecstazy,
In measure rein thy joy, scant this excess;
I feel too much thy blessing, make it less,
For fear I surfeit!

Bass. What find I here?
[Opening the leaden casket.
Fair Portia's counterfeit? What demi-god
Hath come so near creation? Move these eyes!
Or whether, riding on the balls of mine,
Seem they in motion? Here are sever'd lips,
Parted with sugar breath; so sweet a bar (hairs
Should sunder such sweet friends: Here in her
The painter plays the spider; and hath woven
A golden mesh to entrap the hearts of men,
Faster than gnats in cobwebs: But her eyes,—
How could he see to do them? having made one,
Metlinks, it should have power to steal both his,
And leave itself unfurnished: Yet look, how far
The substance of my praise doth wrong this shaft,
In underprizing it, so far this shadow [does Both limb behind the substance.—Here's the scroll,

The continent and summary of my fortune.

You that choose not by the view,
Chance as fair and choose as true!
Since this fortune falls to you,
Be content and seek no new.
If you be well pleased with this,
And hold your fortune for your bliss,
Turn you where your lady is,
And claim her with a loving kiss.

A gentle scroll.—Fair lady, by your leave;
[Kissing her.

I come by note, to give and to receive.
Like one of two contending in a prize,
That thinks he hath done well in people's eyes,
Hearing applause and universal shout,
Giddy in spirit, still gazing, in a doubt
Whether those peals of praise be his or no:
So, thrice fair lady, stand I, even so;
As doubtful whether what I see be true,
Until confirm'd, sign'd, ratified by you.

Por. You see me, lord Bassanio, where I stand,
Such as I am, though, for myself alone,
I would not be ambitious in my wish,
1 Curled.
2 Treacherous.

To wish myself much better; yet, for you,
I would be trebled twenty times myself;
A thousand times more fair, ten thousand times
More rich;
That only to stand high on your account,
I might in virtues, beauties, livings, friends,
Exceed account: but the full sum of me
Is sum of something; which, to term in gross,
Is an unlesson'd girl, unschool'd, unpractis'd:
Happy in this, she is not yet so old
But she may learn; and happier than this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learn;
Happiest of all, is, that her gentle spirit
Commits itself to yours to be directed,
As from her lord, her governor, her king.
Myself, and what is mine, to you, and yours
Is now converted; but now I was the lord
Of this fair mansion, master of my servants,
Queen o'er myself; and even now, but now,
This house, these servants, and this same myself,
Are yours, my lord; I give them with this ring;
Which, when you part from, lose, or give away,
Let it press the ruin of your love,
And be my vantage to exclaim on you.

Bass. Madam, you have bereft me of all words,
Only my blood speaks to you in my veins:
And there is such confusion in my powers,
As, after some oration fairly spoke
By a beloved prince, there doth appear
Among the buzzing pleased multitude;
Where every something, being blent together,
Turns to a wild of nothing, save of joy;
Express'd and not express'd: But when this ring
Parts from this finger, then parts life from hence;
O, then be bold to say, Bassanio's dead.

Ner. My lord and lady, it is now our time,
That have stood by, and seen our wishes prosper,
To cry, good joy; Good joy, my lord and lady!
Gra. My lord Bassanio, and my gentle lady,
I wish you all the joy that you can wish;
For, I am sure, you can wish none from me;
And, when your honours mean to solemnize
The bargain of your faith, I do beseech you,
Even at that time, I may be married too.

B. With all my heart, so thou canst get a wife.
G. I thank your lordship; you have got me one
My eyes, my lord, can look as swift as yours:
You saw the mistress, I beheld the maid;
You lov'd, I lov'd; for intermission
No more pertains to me, my lord, than you.
Your fortune stood upon the caskets there;
And so did mine too, as the matter falls:
For wooling here, until I sweat again;
And swearing, till my very roof was dvy
With oaths of love; at last,—if promise last,—
I got a promise of this fair one here,
To have her love, provided that your fortune
Achiev'd her mistress.

Por. Is this true, Nerissa?
Ner. Madam, it is, so you stand pleas'd withal.
Bass. And do you, Gratiano, mean good faith?
Gra. Yes, faith, my lord. [marriage.
Bass. Our feast shall be much honour'd in your Gra. But who comes here? Lorenzo, and his
What, my old Venetian friend, Salerio? [inidel.

Enter Lorenzo, Jessica, and Salerio.
Bass. Lorenzo and Salerio, welcome hither;
If that the youth of my new interest here
Have power to bid you welcome:—By your leave,
I bid my very friends and countrymen,
Sweet Portia, welcome.

Por. So do I, my lord;
They are entirely welcome.

L. I thank your honour:—For my part, my lord,
My purpose was not to have seen you here;
But meeting with Salerio by the way,
He did entreat me past all saying nay,
To come with him along.

Saler. I did, my lord,
And I have reason for it. Signior Antonio
Commends him to you. [Gives Bassanio a letter."

Bas. Ere I ope this letter,
I pray you tell me how my good friend doth.

Saler. Not sick, my lord, unless it be in mind;
Nor well, unless in mind: his letter there
Will show you his estate. [come.

Gra. Nerissa, cheer you stranger; bid her well-
Your hand, Salerio; What's thenewes from Venice?
How doth that royal merchant, good Antonio?
I know, he will be glad of our success;
We are the Jasons, we have won the fleece.

Saler. Would you had won the deece that he hath lost!

[Paper.

P. There are some shrewd contents in you same
That steal the colour from Bassanio's cheek;
Some dear friend dead; else nothing in the world
Could turn so much the constitution
Of any constant man. What, worse and worse?—
With leave, Bassanio; I am half yourself,
And I must freely have the half of anything
That this same paper brings you.

Bass. O sweet Portia,
Here are a few of the unpleasant'st words,
That ever blotted paper! Gentle lady,
When I did first impart my love to you,
I freely told you, all the wealth I had
Ran in my veins, I was a gentleman;
And then I told you true: and yet, dear lady,
Raising myself at nothing, you shall see
How much I was a braggart: When I told you,
My state was nothing, I should then have told you
That I was worse than nothing; for, indeed,
I have engag'd myself to a dear friend,
Engag'd my friend to his mere enemy,
To feed my means. Here is a letter, lady;
The paper as the body of my friend,
And every word in it a gaping wound,
Issuing life-blood.—But is it true, Salerio?
Have all his ventures failed? What, not one hit?
From Tripolis, from Mexico, and England,
From Lisbon, Barbary, and India?
And not one vessel 'scape the dreadful touch
Of merchant-marring rocks?

Saler. Not one, my lord.
Besides, it should appear, that if he had
The present money to discharge the Jew,
He would not take it: never did I know
A creature, that did bear the shape of man,
So keen and greedy to confound a man;
He plies the duke at morning, and at night;
And doth impeach the freedom of the state,
If they deny him justice: twenty merchants,
The duke himself, and the magnificoes
Of greatest port, have all persuaded with him;

But none can drive him from the envious plea
Of forfeiture, of justice, and his bond. [swear.

Por. Is thine offer, dear friend, that is thus in

B. The dearest friend to me, the kindest man,
The best condition'd and unwearied spirit
In doing courtesies; and one in whom
The ancient Roman honour more appears
Than any that draws breath in Italy.

Por. What sum owes he the Jew?

Bass. For me, three thousand ducats.

Por. What, no more?
Pay him six thousand, and deface the bond;
Double six thousand, and then treble that,
Before a friend of this description
Shall lose a hair through my Bassanio's fault.
First, go with me to church, and call me wife:
And then away to Venice for your friend;
For never shall you lie by Portia's side
With an unquiet soul. You shall have gold
To pay the petty debt twenty times over;
When it is paid, bring your true friend along:
My maid Nerissa, and myself, mean time,
Will live as maids and widows. Come, away;
For you shall hence upon your wedding-day:
Did your friends welcome, show a merry cheer!
Since you are dear bought, I will love you dear,—
But let me hear the letter of your friend.

Bass [Reads.] Sweet Bassanio, my ships have all miscarried, my creditors grow cruel, my estate is very low, my bond to the Jew is forfeit: and since, in paying it, it is impossible I should live, all debts are cleared between you and I, if I might but see you at my death: notwithstanding, use your pleasure: if your love do not persuade you to come, let not my letter.

Por. O love, despacht all business, and be gone.
Bass. Since I have your good leave to go away,
I will make haste: but till I come again,
No bed shall e'er be guilty of my stay,
No rest betwixt us twain.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—VENICE. A STREET.

Enter Shylock, Salanio, Antonio, and Gaoler.

Shy. Gaoler, look to him:—Tell not me of mercy;

This is the fool that lent out money gratis:—
Gaoler, look to him.

Ant. Hear me yet, good Shylock.
S. I'll have my bond; speak not against my bond;
I have sworn an oath, that I will have my bond:
Thou call'st me dog, before thou hast'd a cause:
But, since I am a dog, beware my fangs:
The duke shall grant me justice. —I do wonder,
Thou naughty gaoler, that thou art so fond
To come abroad with him at his request.

Ant. I pray thee, hear me speak. [speak.
S. I'll have my bond: I will not hear thee
I'll have my bond; and therefore speak no more.

1 Grandees. 1 Face. 2 Foolish.
I'll not be made a soft and dull-eyed fool,
To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield
To Christian intercessors. Follow not;
I'll have no speaking; I'll have my bond.
[Exit Shylock.

Salan. It is the most impenetrable cur
That ever kept with men.

Ant. Let him alone;
I'll follow him no more with bootless prayers.
He seeks my life; his reason well I know;
I oft deliver'd from his forfeitures
Many that have at times made loan to me,
Therefore he hates me.

Salan. I am sure the duke
Will never grant this forfeiture to hold.
Ant. The duke cannot deny the course of law;
For the commodity that strangers have
With us in Venice, if it be denied,
Will much impeach the justice of the state;
Since that the trade and profit of the city
Consisteth of all nations. Therefore, go:
These griefs and losses have so bated me,
That I shall hardly spare a pound of flesh
To-morrow to my bloody creditor.—
Well, gaoler, on,—Pray God, Bassanio come
To see me pay his debt, and then I care not!
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

BELMONT. A ROOM IN PORTIA'S HOUSE.

Enter Portia, Nerissa, Lorenzo, Jessica, and Balthazar.

L. Madam, although I speak in your presence,
You have a noble and a true conceit
Of god-like amity; which appears most strongly
In bearing thus the absence of your lord.
But if you knew to whom you show this honour,
How true a gentleman you send relief,
How dear a lover of my lord your husband,
I know, you would be prouder of the work,
Than customary bounty can enforce you.
Por. I never did repent for doing good,
Nor shall not now: for in companions
That do converse and waste the time together,
Whose souls do bear an equal yoke of love,
There must be needs a like proportion
Of lineaments, of manners, and of spirit;
Which makes me think, that this Antonio,
Being the bosom lover of my lord,
Must needs be like my lord: if it be so,
How little is the cost I have bestow'd,
In purchasing the semblance of my soul
From out the state of hellish cruelty?
This comes too near the praising of myself;
Therefore, no more of it: hear other things.—
Lorenzo, I commit into your hands
The husbandry and manage of my house,
Until my lord's return; for mine own part,
I have toward heaven breath'd a secret vow,
To live in prayer and contemplation,
Only attended by Nerissa here,
Until her husband and my lord's return:
There is a monastery two miles off,
And there we will abide. I do desire you,
Not to deny this imposition.
The which my love, and some necessity,
Now lays upon you.

Lor. Madam, with all my heart;
I shall obey you in all fair commands.
Por. My people do already know my mind,
And will acknowledge you and Jessica
In place of lord Bassanio and myself.
So fare you well, till we shall meet again.
Lor. Fair thoughts, and happy hours, attend on you.
Jes. I wish your ladyship all heart's content.
Por. I thank you for your wish, and am well pleas'd
To wish it back on you; fare you well, Jessica.—
[Exeunt.

Now, Balthazar,
As I have ever found thee honest, true,
So let me find thee still: Take this same letter,
And use thou all the endeavour of a man,
In speed to Padua; see thou render this
Into my cousin's hand, doctor Bellario;
And, look what notes and garments he doth give thee,
Bring them, I pray thee, with imagin'd speed
Unto the transect, to the common ferry
Which trades to Venice: waste no time in words,
But get thee gone; I shall be there before thee.
Balt. Madam, I go with all convenient speed.
[Exeunt.

Por. Come on, Nerissa; I have work in hand,
That you yet know not of: we'll see our husbands,
Before they think of us.
Ner. Shall they see us?
Por. They shall, Nerissa; but in such a habit,
That they shall think we are accomplished
With what we lack. I'll hold thee any wager,
When we are both accoutred like young men,
I'll prove the prettier fellow of the two,
And wear my dagger with the braver grace;
And speak, between the change of man and boy,
With a reed voice; and turn two mincing steps
Into a manly stride; and speak of frays,
Like a fine bragging youth; and tell quaint lies,
How honourable ladies sought my love,
Which I denying, they fell sick and died;
I could not do withal:—then I'll repent,
And wish, for all that, that I had not kill'd them;
And twenty of these puny lies I'll tell,
That men shall swear, I have discontinued school
Above a twelvemonth:—I have within my mind
A thousand raw tricks of these bragging Jacks
Which I will practise.
But come, I'll tell thee all my whole device,
When I am in my coach, which stays for us
At the park gate; and therefore haste away,
For we must measure twenty miles to-day.
[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A GARDEN.

Enter Lorenzo, Jessica, and Launcelot.

Lor. Go in, sirrah; bid them prepare for dinner.
Laun. That is done, sir; they have all stomachs.
Lor. What a wit-snapper are you? then bid them prepare dinner.
Laun. That is done too, sir; only, cover is the word.
I know my duty.
Lor. Yet more quarrelling with occasion! Wilt thou show the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant! I pray thee, understand a plain man in his plain meaning: go to thy fellows; bid them cover the table, serve in the meat, and we will come in to dinner.

Lawn. For the table, sir, it shall be served in; for the meat, sir, it shall be covered; for your coming in to dinner, sir, why, let it be as humorous and conceits shall govern. [Exit Launcelot.

L. O dear discretion, how his words are suited! The fool hath planted in his memory An army of good words; And I do know A many fools, that stand in better place, Garnish’d like him, that for a tricksy word Defy the matter. How cheer’s’t thou, Jessica? And now, good sweet, say thy opinion, How dost thou like the lord Bassanio’s wife? Jes. Past all expressing: It is very meet, The lord Bassanio live an upright life; For, having such a blessing in his lady, He finds the joys of heaven here on earth; And, if on earth he do not mean it, It is reason he should never come to heaven. Why, if two gods should play some heavenly match, And on the wager lay two earthly women, And Portia one, there must be something else Pun’d with the other; for the poor rude world Hath not her fellow.

Lor. Even such a husband Hast thou of me, as she is for a wife. Jes. Nay, but ask my opinion too of that. Lor. I will anon; first, let us go to dinner. Jes. Nay, let me praise you, while I have a stomach.

Lor. No, pray thee, let it serve for table-talk; Then, howsoever thou speakest, ’mong other I shall digest it. [Exit.

Jes. Well, I’ll set you forth. [Exeunt.

Act Fourth.

SCENE I.—VENICE. A COURT OF JUSTICE.

Enter the Duke, the Magnificoes, Antonio, Bassanio, Gratiano, Salarino, Salanio, and others.

Duke. What, is Antonio here?

Ant. Ready, so please your grace. [answer

Duke. I am sorry for thee; thou art come to A stony adversary, an inhuman wretch Uncapable of pity, void and empty From any dram of mercy.

Ant. I have heard, Your grace hath ta’en great pains to qualify His rigorous course; but since he stands obdule And that no lawful means can carry me [rate, Out of his envy’s reach, I do oppose My patience to his fury; and am arm’d To suffer, with a quietness of spirit, The very tyranny and rage of his.

Duke. Go one, and call the Jew into the court. S. He’s ready at the door: he comes, my lord.

Enter Shylock.

Duke. Make room, and let him stand before our face.— Shylock, the world thinks, and I think so too, That thou but lead’st this fashion of thy malice To the last hour of act; and then, ’tis thought, Thou’lt show thy mercy, and remorse, more Than is thy strange apparent cruelty: [strange] And where thou now exact’st the penalty, (Which is a pound of this poor merchant’s flesh,) Thou wilt not only lose the forfeiture, But touch’d with human gentleness and love, Forgive a moiety of the principal; Glancing an eye of pity on his losses, That have of late so huddled on his back; Enough to press a royal merchant down, And pluck commiseration of his state From brassy bosoms, and rough hearts of flint. From stubborn Turks, and Tartars, never train’d To offices of tender courtesy.

We all expect a gentle answer, Jew. [purpose

Shy. I have possess’d your grace of what I And by my holy Sabbath have I sworn, To have the due and forfeit of my bond: If you deny it, let the danger light Upon your charter, and your city’s freedom. You’ll ask me, why I rather choose to have A weight of carrion flesh, than to receive Three thousand ducats: I’ll not answer that: But, say, it is my humour; Is it answer’d? What if my house be troubled with a rat, And I be pleas’d to give ten thousand ducats To have it ban’d? What, are you answer’d yet? Some men there are, love not a gaping pig; Some, that are mad, if they behold a cat;— As there is no firm reason to be render’d, Why he cannot abide a gaping pig; Why he, a harmless necessary cat; So can I give no reason, nor I will not, More than a lodg’d hate, and a certain loathing, I bear Antonio, that I follow thus A losing suit against him. Are you answer’d? [Bass. This is no answer, thou unfeeling man, To excuse the current of thy cruelty. [answer

Shy. I am not bound to please thee with my [B. Do all men kill the things they do not love? S. Hates any man the thing he would not kill? B. Every offence is not a hate at first. Shy. What, wouldst thou have a serpent sting thee twice? [Jew: Jew:}

Ant. I pray you, think you question with the You may as well go stand upon the beach, And bid the main flood bate his usual height; You may as well use question with the wolf, Why he hath made the ewe bleat for the lamb; You may as well forbid the mountain pines To wag their high tops, and to make no noise, When they are fretted with the gusts of heaven; You may as well do anything most hard, As seek to soften that (than which what’s harder?) His Jewish heart:—Therefore, I do beseech you, Make no more offers, use no further means, But, with all brief and plain convenience, Let me have judgment, and the Jew his will.

B. For thy three thousand ducats here are six. Shy. If every ducat in six thousand ducats Were in six parts, and every part a ducat, I would not draw them, I would have my bond. Duke. How shalt thou hope for mercy, rend’ring none? [wrong? Shy. What judgment shall I dread, doing no You have among you many a purchas’d slave, 1 Pity. 2 Poisoned.
Which, like your asses, and your dogs, and mules,
You use in abject and in slavish parts,
Because you bought them:—Shall I say to you,
Let them be free, marry them to your heirs?
Why sweat they under burdens? let their beds
Be made as soft as yours, and let their palates
Be season’d with such viands? You will answer,
The slaves are ours:—So do I answer you:
The pound of flesh, which I demand of him,
Is dearly bought, is mine, and I will have it:
If you deny me, fie upon your law!
There is no force in the decrees of Venice:
I stand for judgment: answer; shall I have it?
Duke. Upon my word, I may dismiss this
Unless Bellario, a learned doctor, [court,
Whom I have sent for to determine this,
Come here to-day.
Salar. My lord, here stays without
A messenger with letters from the doctor,
New come from Padua.
Duke. Bring us the letters; Call the messenger.
Bass. Good cheer, Antonio! What, man?
courage yet! [all,
The Jew shall have my flesh, blood, bones, and Ere thou shalt lose for me one drop of blood.
Ant. I am a tainted weaver of the flock,
Meetest for death; the weakest kind of fruit
Drops earliest to the ground, and so let me
You cannot better be employ’d, Bassanio,
Than to live still, and write mine epitaph.

Enter Nerissa, dressed like a Lawyer’s Clerk.
Duke. Came you from Padua, from Bellario?
Ner. From both, my lord: Bellario greets your grace. [Pre-sents a letter.
B. Why dost thou wear thy knife so earnestly?
Sky. To cut the forfeiturer from that bankrupture there.
Jew. Gra. Not on thy sole, but on thy soul, harsh!
Thou makst thy knife keen: but no metal can,
No, not the hangman’s axe, bear half the keenness
Of thy sharp envy. Can no prayers pierce thee?
S. No, none that thou hast wit enough to make.
Gra. O, be thou curst, inexorable dog!
And for thy life let justice be accus’d.
Thou almost makst me waver in my faith,
To hold opinion with Pythagoras,
That souls of animals infuse themselves
Into the trunks of men: thy currish spirit Govern’d a wolf, who, hang’d for human slaughter,
Even from the gallows did his fell soul fleat.
And, whilst thou lay’st in thy unhallow’d dam,
Infus’d itself in thee; for thy desires
Are wolfish, bloody, starv’d, and ravenous.
Sky. Till thou canst rail the seal from off my bond,
Thou but offend’st thy lungs to speak so loud:
Repair thy wit, good youth, or it will fall
To curseless ruin.—I stand here for law.
Duke. This letter from Bellario doth command
A young and learned doctor to our court:—
Where is he?
Ner. He attendeth here hard by,
To know your answer, whether you will admit him.
Duke. With all my heart:—some three or four of you,
Go give him courteous conduct to this place.—

Mean time, the court shall hear Bellario’s letter.
[Clerk reads.] Your grace shall understand, that, at the receipt of your letter, I am very sick:
but in the instant that your messenger came, in loving visitation was with me a young doctor of Rome; his name is Balthasar: I acquainted him with the cause in controversy between the Jew and Antonio the merchant: we turned over many books together: he is furnish’d with my opinion; which, better’d with his own learning (the greatness whereof I cannot enough commend), comes with him at my importance, to fill up your grace’s request in my stead. I beseech you, let his lack of years be no impediment to let him ack a reverend estimation: for I never knew so young a body with so old a head. I leave him to your gracious acceptance, whose trial shall better publish his commendation.
D. You hear the learned Bellario, what he writes:
And here, I take it, is the doctor come.—

Enter Fortia, dressed like a Doctor of Laws.
Give me your hand: Came you from old Bellario?
Por. I did, my lord.
Duke. You are welcome: take your place.
Are you acquainted with the difference
That holds this present question in the court?
Por. I am informed thoroughly of the cause.
Which is the merchant here, and which the Jew?
D. Antonio and old Shylock, both stand forth.
Por. Is your name Shylock?
Shy. Shylock is my name.
P. Of a strange nature is the suit you follow;
Yet in such rule, that the Venetian law
Cannot impugn you as you do proceed.—
[To Antonio.] You stand within his danger;
do you not?
Ant. Ay, so he says.
Por. Do you confess the bond?
Ant. I do.
Por. Then must the Jew be merciful.
Shy. On what compulsion must I? tell me that.
Por. The quality of mercy is not strained;
It dropeth, as the gentle rain from heaven,
Upon the place beneath: it is twice bless’d;
If it blesseth him that gives, and him that takes:
’Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes
The crowned monarch better than his crown:
His sceptre shows the force of temporal power,
The attribute to awe and majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;
But mercy is above his scepter’s sway,
It is enthroned in the hearts of kings,
It is an attribute to God himself;
And earthly power doth then show likest God’s
When mercy seasons justice. Therefore, Jew,
Though justice be thy plea, consider this:—
That, in the course of justice, none of us
Should see salvation; we do pray for mercy:
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The deeds of mercy. I have spoke thus much,
To mitigate the justice of thy plea;
Which, if thou follow, this strict court of Venice
Must needs give sentence ‘gainst the merchant
there.

Shy. My deeds upon my head! I crave the law,
The penalty and forfeit of my bond.
Por. Is he not able to discharge the money?
Bass. Yes, here I tender it for him in the court;
Yea, twice the sum: if that will not suffice,
I will be bound to pay it ten times o'er,
On forfeit of my hands, my head, my heart:
If this will not suffice, it must appear [you,
That malice bears down truth. And beseech
Wrest once the law to your authority;
To do a great right, do a little wrong;
And curb this cruel devil of his will.
Por. It must not be: there is no power in
Can alter a decree established: [Venice
'Twill be recorded for a precedent;
And many an error, by the same example,
Will rush into the state; it cannot be.
S. A. Daniel come to judgment! yea a Daniel!—
O wise young judge, how do I honour thee?
Por. I pray you, let me look upon the bond.
Shy. Here 'tis, most reverend doctor, here it is.
Por. Shylock, there's thrice thy money offered thee.
S. An oath, an oath, I have an oath in heaven:
Shall I lay perjury upon my soul?
No, not for Venice.
Por. Why, this bond is forfeit;
And lawfully by this the Jew may claim
A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off
Nearest the merchant's heart:—Be merciful;
Take thrice thy money; bid me tear the bond.
Shy. When it is paid according to the tenour;
It doth appear you are a worthy judge;
You know the law, your exposition
Hath been most sound: I charge you by the law,
Whereof you are a well-deserving pillar,
Proceed to judgment: by my soul I swear,
There is no power in the tongue of man
To alter me; I stay here on my bond.
Ant. Most heartily I do beseech the court
To give the judgment.
Por. Why then, thus it is.
You must prepare your bosom for his knife:
Shy. O noble judge! O excellent young man!
Por. For the intent and purpose of the law
Hath full relation to the penalty,
Which here appeareth due upon the bond.
Shy. 'Tis very true: O wise and upright judge!
How much more elder art thou than thy looks?
Por. Therefore, lay bare your bosom.
Shy. Ay, his breast; so says the bond:—Doth it not, noble judge?
Nearest his heart, these are the very words.
Por. It is so. Are there balance here to weigh
The flesh?
Shy. I have them ready. [charge
Por. Have by some surgeon, Shylock, on your
To stop his wounds, lest he do bleed to death.
Shy. Is it so nominated in the bond?
Por. It is not so expressed: But what of that?
'Twere good you do so much for charity.
Shy. I cannot find it; 'tis not in the bond.
P. Come, merchant, have you anything to say?
A. But little; I am arm'd, and well prepar'd:
Give me your hand, Bassanio; fare you well;
Grieve not that I am fallen to this for you;
For herein fortune shows herself more kind
Than is her custom: it is still her use,
To let the wretched man out-live his wealth
To view with hollow eye, and wrinkled brow,
An age of poverty; from which lingering penance
Of such a misery doth she cut me off.
Commend me to your honourable wife;
Tell her the process of Antonio's end,
Say, how I lov'd you, speak me fair in death;
And, when the tale is told, bid her be judge,
Whether Bassanio had not once a love.
Repent not you that you shall lose your friend,
And he repents not that he pays your debt;
For if the Jew do cut but deep enough,
I'll pay it instantly with all my heart.
Bass. Antonio, I am married to a wife,
Which is as dear to me as life itself;
But life itself, my wife, and all the world,
Are not with me esteem'd above thy life:
I would lose all, ay, sacrifice them all
Here to this devil, to deliver you.
Por. Your wife would give you little thanks for that,
If she were by, to hear you make the offer.
Gra. I have a wife, whom, I protest, I love;
I would she were in heaven, so she could
Entreat some power to change this curish Jew.
Ner. 'Tis well you offer it behind her back;
The wish would make else an unquiet house.
Shy. These be the Christian husbands: I have a daughter;
'Would, any of the stock of Barrabas
Had been her husband, rather than a Christian!
[Aside,
We trifle time; I pray thee, pursue sentence.
Por. A pound of that same merchant's flesh is thine;
The court awards it, and the law doth give it.
Shy. Most rightful judge!
Por. And you must cut this flesh from off his breast;
The law allows it, and the court awards it.
Shy. Most learned judge!—A sentence; come, prepare.
Por. Tarry a little;—there is something else.
This bond doth give thee here no jot of blood;
The words expressly are a pound of flesh;
Take then thy bond, take thou thy pound of flesh;
But, in the cutting it, if thou dost shed
One drop of Christian blood, thy lands and goods
Are, by the laws of Venice, confiscate
Unto the state of Venice.
Gra. O upright judge!—Mark, Jew;—O learned judge!
Shy. Is that the law?
Por. Thyself shall see the act:
For, as thou urg'est justice, be assur'd,
Thou shalt have justice, more than thou desir'st.
Gra. O learned judge!—Mark, Jew;—a learned judge!
S. I take this offer then;—pay the bond thrice,
And let the Christian go.
Bass. Here is the money.
Por. Soft;
The Jew shall have all justice;—soft!—no
He shall have nothing but the penalty. [haste;—
Gra. O Jew! an upright judge, a learned judge!
P. Therefore, prepare thee to cut off the Shed thou no blood; nor cut thou less, nor more,
But just a pound of flesh: if thou tak'as't more,
Or less, than a just pound,—be it but so much For.
Why, this bond is forfeit,
And lawfully by this the Jew may claim
A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off.
Nearest the merchant's heart: be merciful,
Take thrice thy money: bid me tear the bond. p. 196.
As makes it light, or heavy, in the substance, Or the division of the twentieth part Of one poor scruple; nay, if the scale do turn But in the estimation of a hair,—
Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate.

Gra. A second Daniel! a Daniel, Jew!

Now, infidel, I have thee on the hip.

For. Why doth the Jew pause? take thy forfeit.

Shy. Give me my principal, and let me go.

Bass. I have it ready for thee; here it is.

For. He hath refus’d it in the open court;
He shall have merely justice, and his bond—

Gra. A Daniel, still say I; a second Daniel—
I thank thee, Jew, for teaching me that word.

Shy. Shall I not have barely my principal?

For. Thou shalt have nothing but the forfeit,
To be so taken as thy peril, Jew.

Shy. Why then the devil give him good of it!
I’ll stay no longer question.

For. Tarry, Jew;
The law hath yet another hold on you.
It is enacted in the laws of Venice,—
If it be prov’d against an alien,
That by direct, or indirect attempts,
He seek the life of any citizen,
The party, ’gainst the which he doth contrive,
Shall seize one half his goods: the other half
Comes to the privy coffer of the state;
And the offender’s life lies in the mercy
Of the duke only, ’gainst all other voice.
In which predicament, I say, thou stand’st:
For it appears by manifest proceeding,
That, indirectly, and directly too,
Thou hast contriv’d against the very life
Of the defendant: and thou hast incur’d
The danger formerly by me reheard.
Down, therefore, and beg mercy of the duke.

Gra. Beg, that thou mayst have leave to hang thyself;
And yet, thy wealth being forfeit to the state,
Thou hast not left the value of a cord;
Therefore thou must be hang’d at the state’s charge.

Duke. That thou shalt see the difference of our I pardon thee thy life before thou ask it; [spirit, For half thy wealth, it is Antonio’s:
The other half comes to the general state, Which humbleness may drive into a fine.

For. Ay, for the state; not for Antonio.

Shy. Nay, take my life and all, pardon not that:
You take my house, when you do take the prop
That doth sustain my house: you take my life,
When you do take the means whereby I live.

For. What mercy can you render him, Antonio?

Gra. A halter gratis; nothing else, I hope.

Ant. So please my lord the duke, and all the court,
To quit the fine for one half of his goods;
I am content, so he will let me have
The other half in use,—to render it,
Upon his death, unto the gentleman
That lately stole his daughter:
Two things provided more—that for this favour HE presently become a Christian:
The other, that he do record a gift,
Here in the court, of all he dies possess’d
Unto his son Lorenzo, and his daughter.

Duke. He shall do this; or else I do recant.
The pardon, that I late pronounced here.

For. Art thou contented, Jew, what dost thou
Shy. I am content.

[say?

For. Clerk, draw a deed of gift.

Shy. I pray you, give me leave to go from hence:
I am not well; send the deed after me,
And I will sign it.

Duke. Get thee gone, but do it.

Gra. In christening thou shalt have two godfathers,
[more, Had I been judge, thou shouldst have had ten
To bring thee to the gallows, not to the font.

[Exeunt Shylock.

Duke. Sir, I entreat you home with me to dinner.

For. I humbly do desire your grace of pardon;
I must away this night toward Padua,
And it is meet, I presently set forth. [not.

Duke. I am sorry that your leisure serves you
Antonio, gratify this gentleman;
For, in my mind, you are much bound to him.

[Exeunt Duke, Magnificoes, and Train.

Bass. Most worthy gentleman, I and my friend,
Have by your wisdom been this day acquitted
Of grievous penalties; in lieu whereof,
Three thousand ducats, due unto the Jew,
We freely cope your courteous pains withal.

Ant. And stand indebted, over and above,
In love and service to you evermore.

For. He is well paid, that is well satisfied;
And I, delivering you, am satisfied,
And therein do account myself well paid:
My mind was never yet more mercenary.
I pray you, know me, when we meet again;
I wish you well, and so I take my leave.

Bass. Dear sir, of force I must attempt you further;
Take some remembrance of us, as a tribute,
Not as a fee; grant me two things, I pray you,
Not to deny me, and to pardon me.

P. You press me far, and therefore I will yield.
Give me your gloves, I’ll wear them for your sake;

And, for your love, I’ll take this ring from
Do not draw back your hand: I’ll take no more;
And you in love shall not deny me this.

Bass. This ring, good sir,—alas, it is a triffe;
I will not shame myself to give you this.

For. I will have nothing else but only this;
And now, methinks, I have a mind to it.

Bass. There’s more depends on this, than on the value.
The dearest ring in Venice will I give you,
And find it out by proclamation:
Only for this, I pray you, pardon me.

For. I see, sir, you are liberal in offers:
You taught me first to beg; and now, methinks,
You teach me how a beggar should be answer’d.

B. Good sir, this ring was given me by my
And, when she put it on, she made me vow,[wife:
That I should neither sell, nor give, nor lose it.

P. That ‘scuse serves many men to save their
An if your wife be not a mad woman, [gifts;
And know how well I have deserved this ring,
She would not hold out enemy for ever.
For giving it to me. Well, peace be with you!

[Exeunt Portia and Nerissa.
SCENE II.—A STREET.

Enter Portia and Nerissa.

Por. Inquire the Jew’s house out, give him this deed, and let him sign it: we’ll away to-night, and be a day before our husbands’ home: this deed will be well welcome to Lorenzo.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Fair sir, you are well overtaken: my lord Bassanio, upon more advice, hath sent you here this ring; and doth entreat your company at dinner.

Por. This ring I do accept most thankfully, and so, I pray you tell him; furthermore, I pray you show my youth old Shylock’s house.

Gra. That will I do.

Ner. Sir, I would speak with you:—[To Portia.] I’ll see if I can get my husband’s ring, which I did make him swear to keep for ever.

Por. Thou may’st I warrant: we shall have old swearing, that they did give the rings away to men; but we’ll outface them, and outwear them too. Away, make haste; thou know’st where I will tarry.

Ner. Come, good sir, will you show me to this house? [Exeunt.

ACT FIFTH.

SCENE I.

BELMONT. AVENUE TO PORTIA’S HOUSE.

Enter Lorenzo and Jessica.

Lor. The moon shines bright:—In such a night, when the sweet wind did gently kiss the trees, and they did make no noise; and such a night, Troilus, methinks, mounted the Trojan walls, and sigh’d his soul toward the Grecian tents, where Crassid lay that night.

Jes. In such a night, did Thisbe fearfully o’ertrip the dew; and saw the lion’s shadow ere himself, and ran dismay’d away.

Lor. In such a night, stood Dido with a willow in her hand, upon the wild sea-banks, and waw’d her love to come again to Carthage.

In such a night, Medea gather’d the enchanted herbs that did renew old Jason.

Lor. In such a night, did Jessica steal from the wealthy Jew; and with an unthrift love did run from Venice, as far as Belmont.

Jes. And in such a night, did young Lorenzo swear he lov’d her well; stealing her soul with many vows of faith, and ne’er a true one.

Lor. And in such a night, did pretty Jessica, like a little shrew, slander her love, and he forgave it her.

Jes. I would out-night you, did no body come: but, hark, I hear the footing of a man.

Enter Stephano.

Ste. Who comes so fast in silence of the night?

Lor. A friend. [you, friend? L. A friend? what friend? your name, I pray. Steph. Stephano is my name; and I bring word, my mistress will before the break of day be here at Belmont: she doth stray about by holy crosses, where she kneels and prays for happy wedlock hours.

Lor. Who comes with her?

Ste. None, but a holy hermit, and her maid.

I pray you, is my master yet return’d?

Lor. He is not, nor we have not heard from him. But go we in, I pray thee, Jessica, and ceremoniously let us prepare some welcome for the mistress of the house.

Enter Launcelot.

Laun. Sola, sola, wo ha, ho, sola! Lor. Who calls?

Laun. Sola! did you see master Lorenzo, and mistress Lorenzo? sola, sola!

Lor. Leave hollaing, man; here.

Laun. Sola! where? where?

Lor. Here.

Laun. Tell him, there’s a post came from my master, with his horn full of good news; my master will be here ere morning. [Exit. Lor. Sweet soul, let’s in, and there expect their coming.

And yet no matter:—Why should we go in? My friend Stephano, signify, I pray you, within the house, your mistress is at hand; and bring your musick forth into the air. —[Exit Stephano.

How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank! Here will we sit, and let the sounds of musick creep in our ears; soft stillness, and the night, become the touches of sweet harmony.

Sit, Jessica: look, how the floor of heaven is thick inlaid with patines of bright gold; there’s not the smallest orb, which thou beholdst, but in his motion like an angel sings, still quiring to the young-ey’d cherubins! Such harmony is in immortal souls; but, whilst this muddy venture of decay doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.

Enter Musicians.

Come, ho, and wake Diana with a hymn;
With sweetest touches pierce your mistress' ear,
And draw her home with musick.

Jes. I am never merry, when I hear sweet musick.

Lor. The reason is, your spirits are attentive:
For do but note a wild and wanton herd,
Or race of youthful, and unhandled colts,
Fething mad bounds, bellowing, and neighing loud,
Which is the hot condition of their blood;
If they but hear perchance a trumpet sound,
Or any air of musick touch their ears,
You shall perceive them make a mutual stand,
Their savage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze,
By the sweet power of musick: Therefore, the poet
Did feign that Orpheus drew trees, stones, and Since nought so stockish, hard, and full of rage,
But musick for the time doth change his nature:
The man that hath no musick in himself,
Nor is not mov'd with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils:
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus:
Let no such man be trusted.—Mark the musick.

Enter Portia and Nerissa, at a distance.

Por. That light we see, is burning in my hall.
How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughtly world.

Ner. When the moon shone, we did not see the candle.

Por. So doth the greater glory dim the less:
A substitute shines brightly as a king,
Until a king be by; and then his state
Empties itself, as doth an inland brook
Into the main of waters. Musick! hark!

Ner. It is your musick, madam, of the house.

Por. Nothing is good, I see, without respect;
Methinks, it sounds much sweeter than by day.

Ner. Silence bestows that virtue on it, madam.

Por. The crow doth sing as sweetly as the lark,
When neither is attended; and, I think,
The nightingale, if she should sing by day,
When every goose is cackling, would be thought
No better a musician than the wren.
How many things by season season'd are
To their right praise and true perfection!—
Peace, ho! the moon sleeps with Endymion,
And would not be awak'd!

Lor. That is the voice.
Or I am much deceiv'd, of Portia.

Por. He knows me, as the blind man knows
By the bad voice. [The cuckoo.

Lor. Dear lady, welcome home.

Por. We have been praying for our husbands' welfare,
Which speed, we hope, the better for our words;
Are they return'd?

Lor. Madam, they are not yet;
But there is come a messenger before,
To signify their coming.

Por. Go in, Nerissa,
Give order to my servants, that they take
No note at all of our being absent hence;
Nor you, Lorenzo;—Jessica, nor you.

[A flourish on a trumpet.

I. Your husband is at hand, I hear his trumpet:
We are no tell-tales, madam; fear you not.

Por. This night, methinks, is but the daylight
It looks a little paler; 'tis a day,
Such as the day is when the sun is hid.

Enter Bassanto, Antonio, Gratiano, and their followers.

Bass. We should hold day with the Antipodes,
If you would walk in absence of the sun.

Por. Let me give light, but let me not be light;
For a light wife doth make a heavy husband,
And never be Bassanio so for me;
You are welcome home, my lord.

B. I thank you, madam: give welcome to my
This is the man, this is Antonio, [friend,—
To whom I am so infinitely bound. [him.

P. You should in all sense be much bound to
For, as I hear, he was much bound for you.

Ant. No more than I am well acquainted of.

Por. Sir, you are very welcome to our house:
It must appear in other ways than words,
Therefore, I scant this breathing courtesy.

[Gratiano and Nerissa seem to talk apart.

G. By yonder moon, I swear, you do me wrong:
In faith, I gave it to the judge's clerk.

Por. A quarrel, ho, already? what's the matter?

Gra. About a hoop of gold, a paltry ring
That she did give me; whose posy was
For all the world, like cutler's poetry:
Upon a knife, Love me, and leave me not.

Ner. What talk you of the posy, or the value?
You swore to me, when I did give it you,
That you would wear it till your hour of death;
And that it should lie with you in your grave:
Though not for me, yet for your vehement oaths,
You should have been respective, and have kept it.

Gave it a judge's clerk!—but well I know,
The clerk will ne'er wear hair on his face, that
Gra. He will, if he live to be a man. [had it.

Ner. Ay, if a woman live to be a man.

Gra. Now, by this hand, I gave it to a youth,—
A kind of boy; a little scrubbed boy,
No higher than thyself, the judge's clerk;
A prating boy, that begg'd it as a fee;
I could not for my heart deny it him.

P. You were to blame, I must be plain with you,
To part so slightly with your wife's first gift;
A thing stuck on with oaths upon your finger,
And riveted so with faith upon your flesh.
I gave my love a ring, and made him swear
Never to part with it; and here he stands;
I dare be sworn for him, he would not leave it,
Nor pluck it from his finger, for the wealth
That the world masters. Now, in faith, Gratiano,
You give your wife too unkind a cause of grief;
An' twere to me, I should be mad at it.

Bass. Why, I were best to cut my left hand off,
And swear, I lost the ring defending it. [Aside.

Gra. My lord Bassanio gave his ring away
Unto the judge that begg'd it, and indeed,
Deserv'd it too; and then the boy his clerk,
That took some pains in writing, he begg'd mine:
And neither man, nor master, would take aught
But the two rings.

1 Spare. 3 Formerly inscribed on knaves by aqua.
2 Verbal. 4 Particular. [fortis.
Por. What ring gave you, my lord? Not that, I hope, which you receiv’d of me. Bass. If I could add a lie unto a fault, I would deny it; but you see my finger Hath not the ring upon it, it is gone. Por. Even so void is your false heart of truth. By heaven, I will ne’er come in your bed Until I see the ring. Ner. Nor I in yours, Till I again see mine. Bass. Sweet Portia, If you did know to whom I gave the ring, If you did know for whom I gave the ring, And would conceive for what I gave the ring, And how unwillingly I left the ring, When nought would be accepted but the ring, You would abate the strength of your displeasure. Por. If you had known the virtue of the ring, Or half her worthiness that gave the ring, Or your own honour to contain the ring, You would not then have parted with the ring. What man is there so much unreasonable, If you had pleas’d to have defended it With any terms of zeal, wanted the modesty To urge the thing held as a ceremony? Nerissa teaches me what to believe; I’ll die for’t, but some woman had the ring. B. No, by mine honour, madam, by my soul, No woman had, but a civil doctor, Which did refuse three thousand ducats of me, And begg’d the ring; the which I did deny him, And suffer’d him to go displeas’d away; Even he that had held up the very life Of my dearest friend. What should I say, sweet I was enforc’d to send it after him? [lady? I was beset with shame and courtesy; My honour would not let ingratitude So much besmear it: Pardon me, good lady; For, by these blessed candles of the night, Had you been there, I think, you would have begg’d The ring of me to give the worthy doctor. Por. Let not that doctor e’er come near my house: Since he hath got the jewel that I lov’d, And that which you did swear to keep for me, I will become as liberal as you: I’ll not deny him anything I have, Know him I shall, I am well sure of it: Lie not a night from home; watch me, like If you do not, if I be left alone. [Argus: Now, by mine honour, which is yet my own, I’ll have that doctor for my bedfellow. Ner. And this clerk; therefore, be well advis’d, How you do leave me to mine own protection. Gra. Well, do you so; let not me take him then. Ant. I am the unhappy subject of these quarrels. Por. Sir, grieve not you; You are welcome notwithstanding.

Bass. Portia, forgive me this enforced wrong; And in the hearing of these many friends, I swear to thee, even by thine own fair eyes, Wherein I see myself,— Por. Mark you but that In both mine eyes he doubly sees himself: In each eye, one,—swear by your double self, And there’s an oath of credit. Bass. Nay, but hear me; Pardon this fault, and by my soul I swear, I never more will break an oath with thee. Ant. I once did lend my body for his wealth; Which, but for him that had his husband’s ring, Had quite miscarried: I dare be bound again, My soul upon the forfeit, that your lord Will never more break faith advisedly. P. Then you shall be his surety: Give him this; And bid him keep it better than the other. Ant. Here, lord Bassanio, swear to keep this ring. Bass. By heaven, it is the same I gave the doctor. Por. I had it of him.—You are all amazed: Here is a letter, read it at your leisure; It comes from Padua, from Bellario; There you shall find, that Portia was the doctor; Nerissa there, her clerk: Lorenzo here Shall witness, I set forth as soon as you, And but even now returned; I have not yet Enter’d my house.—Antonio, you are welcome; And I have better news in store for you, Than you expect; unseal this letter soon; There you shall find, three of your argosies Are richly come to harbour suddenly: You shall not know by what strange accident I chanced on this letter.

Ant. I am dumb. B. Were you the doctor, and I knew you not? Sweet doctor, you shall be my bedfellow; When I am absent, then lie with my wife. Ant. Sweet lady, you have given me life, and living; For here I read for certain, that my ships Are safely come to road. Por. How now, Lorenzo? My clerk hath some good comforts too for you, Ner. Ay, and I’ll give them him without a fee.— There do I give to you, and Jessica, From the rich Jew, a special deed of gift, After his death, of all he died possess’d of. Lor. Fair ladies, you drop manna in the way Of starved people. Por. It is almost morning, And yet, I am sure, you are not satisfied Of these events at full: Let us go in; And charge us there upon interrogatories, And we will answer all things faithfully.

[Exeunt.]

Act First.

SCENE I.

AN ORCHARD, NEAR OLIVER'S HOUSE.

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Orl. As I remember, Adam, it was upon this fashion bequeathed me: By will, but a poor thousand crowns; and, as thou say'st, charged my brother, on his blessing, to breed me well: and there begins my sadness. My brother Jaques he keeps at school, and report speaks goldenly of his profit; for my part, he keeps me rustically at home, or, to speak more properly, stays me here at home unkept: For call you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth that differs not from the stalling of an ox? His horses are bred better: for, besides that they are fair with their feeding, they are taught their manage, and to that end riders dearly hired; but I, his brother, gain nothing under him but growth; for the which his animals on his dunghills are as much bound to him as I. Besides this nothing that he so plentifully gives me, the something that nature gave me, his countenance seems to take from me: he lets me feed with his hinds, bars me the place of a brother, and, as much as in him lies, mines my gentility with my education. This is it, Adam, that grieves me; and the spirit of my father, which I think is within me, begins to mutiny against this servitude: I will no longer endure it, though yet I know no wise remedy how to avoid it.

Enter Oliver.

Adam. Yonder comes my master, your brother.

Orl. Go apart, Adam, and thou shalt hear how he will shake me up.

Orl. Now, sir, what make you here?

Orl. Marry, sir, I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poor unworthy brother of yours, with idleness.

1 Playing on the double meaning of the word,—a worthless fellow—and a man of low extraction.
OLE. And what wilt thou do? beg, when that is spent? Well, sir, get you in: I will not long be troubled with you: you shall have some part of your will: I pray you, leave me.

OLE. I will no further offend you than becomes me for my good.

OLE. Get you with him, you old dog.

Adam. Is old dog my reward? most true, I have lost my teeth in your service.—God be with my old master! he would not have spoke such a word.

[Exeunt Orlando and Adam.

OLE. Is it even so? begin you to grow upon me? I will physick your rankness, and yet give no thousand crowns neither. Hola, Dennis!

Enter Dennis.

Den. Calls your worship?

OLE. Was not Charles, the duke's wrestler, here, to speak with me?

Den. So please you, he is here at the door, and importunes access to you.

OLE. Call him in. [Exit Dennis.]—Twill be a good way; and to-morrow the wrestling is.

Enter Charles.

Cha. Good morrow to your worship.

OLE. Good monsieur Charles!—what's the new news at the new court?

Cha. There's no news at the court, sir, but the old news: that is, the old duke is banished by his younger brother the new duke; and three or four loving lords have put themselves into voluntary exile with him, whose lands and revenues enrich the new duke; therefore he gives them good leave to wander.

OLE. Can you tell, if Rosalind, the duke's daughter, be banished with her father?

C. O, no; for the duke's daughter, her cousin, so loves her,—being ever from their cradles bred together,—that she would have followed her exile, or have died to stay behind her. She is at the court, and no less beloved of her uncle than his own daughter; and never two ladies loved as they do.

OLE. Where will the old duke live?

Cha. They say he is already in the forest of Arden, and a many merry men with him; and there they live like the old Robin Hood of England: they say, many young gentlemen flock to him every day; and fleet the time carelessly, as they did in the golden world.

OLE. What, you wrestle to-morrow before the new duke?

Cha. Marry, do I, sir; and I came to acquaint you with a matter. I am given, sir; secretly to understand, that your younger brother, Orlando, hath a disposition to come in disguise'd against me to try a fall: To-morrow, sir, I wrestle for my credit; and he that escapes me without some broken limb, shall acquit him well. Your brother is but young and tender; and, for your love, I would be loth to foil him, as I must for my own honour, if he come in: therefore out of my love to you, I came hither to acquaint you withal; that either you might stay him from his intendment, or break such disgrace well as he shall run into; in that it is a thing of his own search, and altogether against my will.

OLE. Charles, I thank thee for thy love to me, which thou shalt find I will most kindly requite. I had myself notice of my brother's purpose herein, and have by underhand means laboured to dissuade him from it; but he is resolute. I'll tell thee, Charles,—it is the stubbornest young fellow of France; full of ambition, an envious emulator of every man's good parts, a secret and villainous contriver against me, his natural brother; therefore use thy discretion; I had as lief thou didst break his neck as his finger: And thou wert best look to't; for if thou dost him any slight disgrace, or if he do not mightily grace himself on thee, he will practice against thee by poison, entrap thee by some treacherous device, and never leave thee till he hath ta'en thy life by some indirect means or other; for, I assure thee, and almost with tears I speak it, there is not one so young and so villainous this day living. I speak but brotherly of him; but should I anatomi him to thee as he is, I must blush and weep, and thou must look pale and wonder.

Cha. I am heartily glad, I came hither to you: If he come to-morrow, I'll give him his payment: If ever he go alone again, I'll never wrestle for prize more: And so, heaven keep your worship!

[Exit.

OLE. Farewell, good Charles.—Now will I stir this gamester? I hope I shall find an end of him; for my soul, yet I know not why, hates nothing more than he. Yet he's gentle; never school'd and yet learned; full of noble device; of all sorts enchantingly beloved; and, indeed, so much in the heart of the world, and especially of my own people, who best know him, that I am altogether misprised; but it shall not be so long; this wrestler shall clear all; nothing remains, but that I kindle the boy thither, which now I'll go about.

[Exit.

SCENE II.

A LAWN BEFORE THE DUCK'S PALACE.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Cel. I pray thee, Rosalind, sweet my coz, be merry.

Ros. Dear Celia, I show more mirth than I am mistress of: and would you yet I were merrier? Unless you could teach me to forget a banished father, you must not learn me how to remember any extraordinary pleasure.

Cel. Herein, I see, thou Lovest me not with the full weight that I love thee: if my uncle, thy banished father, had banish'd thy uncle, the duke my father, so thou hast been still with me, I could have taught my love to take thy father for mine; so wouldst thou, if the truth of thy love to me was so righteously temper'd as mine is to thee.

Ros. Well, I will forget the condition of my estate, to rejoice in yours.

Cel. You know, my father hath no child but I, nor none is like to have; and, truly, when he dies, thou shalt be his heir: for what he hath taken away from thy father perforce, I will render thee again in affection; by mine honour, I will; and when I break that oath, let me turn

1 Design.

Enter Touchstone.

Cel. No? When nature hath made a fair creature, may she not by fortune fall into the fire?—Though nature hath given us wit to float at fortune, hath not fortune sent in this fool to cut off the argument?

Ros. Indeed, there is fortune too hard for nature; when fortune makes nature's natural the cutter off of nature's wit.

Cel. Peradventure, this is not fortune's work neither, but nature's: who perceiving our natural wits too dull to reason of such goddesses, hath sent this natural for our whetstone: for always the dullness of the fool is the whetstone of his wits.—How now, wit? whither wander you?

Touch. Mistress, you must come away to your father.

Cel. Were you made the messenger?

Touch. No, by mine honour; but I was bid to come for you.

Ros. Where learned you that oath, fool?

Touch. Of a certain knight, that swore by his honour they were good pancakes, and swore by his honour the mustard was naught: now, I'll stand to it, the pancakes were naught, and the mustard was good; and yet was not the knight forsworn.

Cel. How prove you that, in the great heap of your knowledge?

Ros. Ay, marry; now unmuzzle your wisdom.

Touch. Stand you both forth now: stroke your chins, and swear by your beards that I am a knave.

Cel. By our beards, if we had them, thou art.

Touch. By my knavery, if I had it, then I were: but if you swear by that that is not, you are not forsworn: no more was this knight, swearing by his honour, for he never had any; or if he had, he had sworn it away, before ever he saw those pancakes or that mustard.

Cel. Pr'ythee, who is 't that thou mean'st?

Touch. One that old Frederick your father loves.

Cel. My father's love is enough to honour him.

Enough! speak no more of him; you'll be whip'd for taxation, one of these days.

Touch. The more pity that fools may not speak wisely, what wise men do foolishly.

Cel. By my troth, thou say'st true: for since the little wit, that fools have, was silenced, the little foolery, that wise men have, makes a great show. Here comes monsieur Le Beau.

Enter Le Beau.

Ros. With his mouth full of news.

Cel. Which he will put on us, as pigeons feed their young.

Ros. Then shall we be news-cramm'd.

Cel. All the better; we shall be the more marketable. Bon jour, monsieur Le Beau: What's the news?

Le Beau. Fair princess, you have lost much good sport.

Cel. Sport? Of what colour?

Le Beau. What colour, madam? How shall I answer you?

Ros. As wit and fortune will.

Touch. Or as the destinies decree.

Cel. Well said; that was laid on with a trowel. Le Beau, You amaze me, ladies; I would have told you of good wrestling, which you have lost the sight of.

Ros. Yet tell us the manner of the wrestling.

Le Beau. I will tell you the beginning, and, if it please your ladyships, you may see the end; for the best is yet to do; and here, where you are, they are coming to perform it.

Cel. Well,—the beginning, that is dead and buried.

Le Beau. There comes an old man, and his three sons—

Cel. I could match this beginning with an old tale.

Le Beau. Three proper young men, of excellent growth and presence:—

Ros. With bills on their necks.—Be it known unto all men by these presents,—

Le Beau. The eldest of the three wrestled with Charles, the duke's wrestler; which Charles in a moment threw him, and broke three of his ribs, that there is little hope of life in him: so he served thesecond, and the third: Yonder they lie; the poor old man, their father, making such pitiful dole over them, that all the beholders take their part with weeping.

Ros. Alas!

Touch. But what is the sport, monsieur, that the ladies have lost?

Le Beau. Why, this that I speak of.

Touch. Thus men may grow wiser every day! it is the first time that I ever heard, breaking of ribs was sport for ladies.

Cel. Or I, I promise thee.

Ros. But is there any else longs to see this broken musick in his sides? is there yet another dothes upon rib-breaking? Shall we see this wrestling, cousin?

Le Beau. You must, if you stay here; for here is the place appointed for the wrestling, and they are ready to perform it.

Cel. Yonder, sure, they are coming: Let us now stay and see it.

1 Scandal.
Flourish. Enter Duke Frederick, Lords, Orlando, Charles, and Attendants.

Duke F. Come on; since the youth will not be entreated, his own peril on his forwardness.

Ros. Is yonder the man?

Le Beau. Even he, madam.

Cel. Alas, he is too young: yet he looks successfully.¹

Duke F. How now, daughter, and cousin? are you crept hither to see the wrestling.

Ros. Ay, my liege! so please you give us leave.

Duke F. You will take little delight in it, I can tell you, there is such odds in the men: In pity of the challenger's youth, I would fain dissuade him, but he will not be entreated: Speak to him, ladies; see if you can move him.

Cel. Call him hither, good monsieur Le Beau.

Duke F. Do so; I'll not be by.

[Enter Duke goes apart.]

Le Beau. Monsieur the challenger, the princesses call for you.

Orl. I attend them, with all respect and duty.

Ros. Young man, have you challenged Charles the wrestler?

Orl. No, fair princess; he is the general challenger: I come but in, as others do, to try with him the strength of my youth.

Cel. Young gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your years: You have seen cruel proof of this man’s strength; if you saw yourself with your eyes, or knew yourself with your judgment, the fear of your adventure would counsel you to a more equal enterprise. We pray you, for your own sake, to embrace your own safety, and give over this attempt.

Ros. Do, young sir; your reputation shall not therefore be misprised: we will make it our suit to the duke, that the wrestling might not go forward.

Orl. I beseech you, punish me not with your hard thoughts; wherein I confess me much guilty, to deny so fair and excellent ladies anything. But let your fair eyes, and gentle wishes, go with me to my trial: wherein if I be foiled, there is but one shame that was never gracious; if killed, but one death that is willing to be so; I shall do my friends no wrong, for I have none to lament me: the world no injury, for in it I have nothing; only in the world I fill up a place, which may be better supplied when I have made it empty.

Ros. The little strength that I have, I would it were with you.

Cel. And mine, to eke out hers.

Ros. Fare you well. Pray heaven, I be deceived in you!

Cel. Your heart's desires be with you.

Cha. Come, where is this young gallant, that so desirous to lie with his mother earth?

Orl. Ready, sir.

Duke F. You shall try but one fall.

Cha. No, I warrant your grace; you shall not entreat him to a second, that have so mightily persuaded² him from a first.

Orl. You mean to mock me after; you should not have mocked me before; but come your ways.

Ros. Now, Hercules be thy speed, young man! Cel. I would I were invisible, to catch the strong fellow by the leg.

[Charles and Orlando wrestle.]

Ros. O excellent young man!

Cel. If I had a thunderbolt in mine eye, I can tell who should down.

[Charles is thrown. Shout.]

Duke F. No more, no more.

Orl. Yes, I beseech your grace; I am not yet well breathed.

Duke F. Bear him away. [Charles is borne out.]

What is thy name, young man?

Orl. Orlando, my liege; the youngest son of Sir Rowland de Bois.

Duke F. I would thou hadst been son to some man else.

The world esteem'd thy father honourable, But I did find him still mine enemy; so, deed, Thou shouldst have better pleas'd me with this Hadst thou descended from another house.

But fare thee well; thou art a gallant youth; I would thou hadst told me of another father.

[Exeunt Duke Fred., Train, and Le Beau. Cel. Were I my father, coz, would I do this?

Orl. I am more proud to be Sir Rowland's son, His youngest son; and would not change that

To be adopted heir to Frederick. [calling,

Ros. My father lov'd Sir Rowland as his soul,

And all the world was of my father's mind:

Had I before known this young man his son, I should have given him tears unto entreaties,

Ere he should thus have ventur'd.

 Cel. Gentle cousin,

Let us go thank him, and encourage him:

My father's rough and envious disposition

Sticks in my heart. - Sir, you have well deserving,

If you do keep your promises in love,

But justly, as you have exceeded promise,

Your mistress shall be happy.

Ros. Gentleman,

[Giving him a chain from her neck.

Wear this for me; one out of suits with fortune;

That could give more, but that her hand lacks

Shall we go, coz?

[means.]

Cel. Ay; - Fare you well, fair gentleman.

O. Can I not say I thank you? My better parts Are all thrown down; and that which herestands Is but a quittance, a mere lifeless block.

Ros. He calls us back: My pride fell with my fortunes:

I'll ask him what he would: - Did you call, sir? -

Sir, you have wrestled well, and overthrown More than your enemies.

Cel. Will you go, coz?

Ros. Have with you: - Fare you well.

[Exeunt Rosalind and Celia.

Orl. What passion hangs these weights upon my tongue?

I cannot speak to her, yet she urg'd conference.
To leave this place: Albeit you have deserv'd
High commendation, true applause, and love:
Yet such is now the duke's condition,
That he misconstrues all that you have done.
The duke is humorous; what he is, indeed,
More suits you to conceive, than me to speak of.
I, thank you, sir; and pray you tell me this;
Which of the two was daughter of the duke,
That here was at the wrestling?

Le Beau. Neither his daughter, if we judge
by manners;
But yet, indeed, the shorter is his daughter:
The other is daughter to the banish'd duke,
And here detain'd by her usurping uncle,
To keep his daughter company; whose loves
Are dearer than the natural bond of sisters,
But I can tell you, that of late this duke
Hath ta'en displeasure 'gainst his gentle niece;
Grounded upon no other argument,
But that the people praise her for her virtues,
And pity her for her good father's sake:
And, 'on my life, his malice 'gainst the lady
Will suddenly break forth.—Sir, fare you well,
Hereafter, in a better world than this,
I shall desire more love and knowledge of you.

Ros. I rest much bounden to you; fare you well.

[Exit Le Beau.]

Thus must I from the smoke into the smoother;
From tyrant duke, unto a tyrant brother:
But heavenly Rosalind! [Exit.]

SCENE III.—A ROOM IN THE PALACE.

Enter Celio and Rosalind.

Cel. Why, cousin; why, Rosalind;—Cupid, have mercy!—Not a word?

Ros. Not one to throw at a dog.

Cel. No, thy words are too precious to be cast away upon curs, throw some of them at me;
come, lame me with reasons.

Ros. Then there were two cousins laid up; when the one should be lamed with reasons, and the other mad without any.

Cel. But is all this for your father?

Ros. No, some of it for my father's child; O,
how full of briars is this working-day world!
C. They are but burs, cousin, thrown upon thee in holiday foolery; if we walk not in the trodden paths, our very petticoats will catch them.

Ros. I could shake them off my coat; these burs are in my heart.

Cel. Hem them away.

Ros. I would try; if I could cry hem, and have him.

Cel. Come, come, wrestle with thy affections.

Ros. O, they take the part of a better wrestler than myself.

Cel. O, a good wish upon you!—But, turning these jests out of service, let us talk in good earnest: Is it possible, on such a sudden, you should fall into so strong a liking with old Sir
Rowland's youngest son?

Cel. The duke my father lov'd his father dearly.

Cel. Doth it therefore ensue, that you should love his son dearly? By this kind of chase, I should hate him, for my father hated his father dearly; yet I hate not Orlando.

1 Disposition.

Ros. No; hate him not for my sake. [well? Cel. Why should I not? doth he not deserve
R. Let me love him for that; and do you love him, because I do:—Look, here comes the duke.
Cel. With his eyes full of anger.

Enter Duke Frederick, with Lords.

Duke F. Mistress, despatch you with your
And get you from our court. [safest haste,
Ros. Me, uncle?

Duke F. You, cousin;
Within these ten days if that thou be'st found
So near our public court as twenty miles,
Thou diest for it.

Ros. I do beseech your grace,
Let me the knowledge of my fault bear with me:
If with myself I hold intelligence,
Or have acquaintance with mine own desires;
If that I do not dream, or be not frantick,
(As I do trust I am not,) then, dear uncle,
Never, so much as in a thought unborn,
Did I offend your highness.

Duke F. Thus do all traitors;
If their purgation did consist in words,
They are as innocent as grace itself:—
Let it suffice, that I trust thee not.
R. Yet your mistrust cannot make me a traitor;
Tell me whereon the likelihood depends.

Duke F. Thou art thy father's daughter, there's enough. [dukedom;

Ros. So was I, when your highness took his
So was I, when your highness banish'd him;
Treason is not inherited, my lord;
Or, if we did derive it from our friends,
What's that to me? my father was no traitor;
Then, good my liege, mistake me not so much,
To think my poverty is treacherous.

Cel. Dear sovereign, hear me speak.

Duke F. Ay, Celio; we stay'd her for your sake.
Else had she with her father rang'd along.

Cel. I did not then entreat to have her stay,
It was your pleasure, and your own remorse;
I was too young to that time to value her,
But now I know her: if she be a traitor,
Why so am I; we still have slept together;
Rose at an instant, learned, played, eat together;
And whereas he went, like Juno's swans,
Still we went coupled, and inseparable.

Duke F. She is too subtle for thee; and her
Her very silence, and her patience, [smoothness,
Speak to the people, and they pity her.
Thou art a fool; she robs thee of thy name;
And thou wilt show more bright, and seem more virtuous,
When she is gone: then open not thy lips;
Firm and irrevocable is my doom
Which I have pass'd upon her; she is banish'd.

Cel. Pronounce that sentence then on me, my
I cannot live out of her company. [liege;

Duke F. You are a fool: — You, niece, provide yourself;

If you out-stay the time, upon mine honour,
And in the greatness of my word, you die.

[Exeunt Duke Frederick and Lords.

Cel. O my poor Rosalind! whither wilt thou go?
Wilt thou change fathers? I will give thee mine,
I charge thee, be not thou more griev'd than I am.
Ros. I have more cause.

1 Compassion.
The seasons' difference: as, the icy fang,
And churlish chiding of the winter's wind;
Which when it bites and blows upon my body,
Even till I shrink with cold, I smile, and say,—
This is no flattery: these are counsellors
That feelingly persuade me what I am.
Sweet are the uses of adversity;
Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in his head;
And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Find tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in every thing.

Ami. I would not change it: Happy is your grace,
That can translate the stubbornness of fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a style.

Duke S. Come, shall we go and kill us venison?
And yet it irks me, the poor dappled fools,—
Being native burghers of this desert city,—
Should in their own confines, with forked heads,
Have their round haunches got'd.

1 Lord. Indeed, my lord, The melancholy Jaques grieves at that;
And, in that kind, swears you do more usurp
Than doth your brother that hath banish'd you.
To-day, my lord of Amiens, and myself,
Did steal behind him, as he lay along
Under an oak, whose antique root peeps out
Upon the brook that brawls along this wood:
To the which place a poor sequester'd stag,
That from the hunter's aim had ta'en a hurt,
Did come to languish; and, indeed, my lord,
The wretched animal heav'd forth such groans,
That their discharge did stretch his leather coat
Almost to bursting; and the big round tears
Cours'd one another down his innocent nose
In piteous chase: and thus the hairy fool
Much marked of the melancholy Jaques,
Stood on the extremest verge of the swift brook,
Augmenting it with tears.

Duke S. But what said Jaques? Did he not moralize this spectacle?

1 Lord. O, yes, into a thousand smiles.
First, for his weeping in the needless stream;
Poor deer, quoth he, thou mak'st a testament
As worldlings do, giving thy swan of more
To that which had too much: Then, being alone,
Left and abandoned of his velvet friends;
'Tis right, quoth he; thus misery doth part

The flux of company: Anon, a careless herd,
Full of the pasture, jumps along by him,
And never stays to greet him; Ay, quoth Jaques,
Sweep on, you fat and greasy citizens;
'Tis just the fashion: Wherefore do you look Upon that poor and broken bankrupt there?
Thus most invectively he pierceth through
The body of the country, city, court,
Yea, and of this our life: swearing, that we
Are mere usurpers, tyrants, and what's worse
To fright the animals, and to kill them up,
In their assign'd and native dwelling-place.

Duke S. And did you leave him in this contemplation?

2 Lord. We did, my lord, weeping and com-
Upon the sobbing deer.

Duke S. Show me the place;
I love to cope him in these sullen fits. For then he's full of matter.

2 Lord. I'll bring you to him straight. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A ROOM IN THE PALACE.
Enter Duke Frederick, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke F. Can it be possible, that no man saw it cannot be: some villains of my court [them] are of consent and sufferance in this.

1 Lord. I cannot hear of any that did see her. The ladies, her attendants of her chamber, saw her a-bed; and, in the morning early, they found the bed both bare and bare of their mistress.

2 Lord. My lord, the roynish down, at whom so oft your grace was wont to laugh, is also missing. Hesperia, the princess' gentlewoman, confesses, that she secretly o'erheard your daughter and her cousin much commend The parts and graces of the wrestler That did but lately foil the sinewy Charles; And she believes, wherever they are gone, That youth is surely in their company.

Duke F. Send to his brother; fetch that gallant hitler;
If he be absent, bring his brother to me, I'll make him find him: do this suddenly; And let not search and inquisition quail To bring again these foolish runaways. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—BEFORE OLIVER'S HOUSE.
Enter Orlando and Adam, meeting.

Orl. Who's there?

Ad. What! my young master?—O, my gentle O, my sweet master, O you memory! (master, Of old Sir Rowland! why, what make you here? Why are you virtuous? Why do people love you? And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant? Why should you be so fond to overcome The bony prizer of the humorous duke? Your praise is come too swiftly home before you. Know you not, master, to some kind of men Their graces serve them but as enemies! No more do yours; your virtues, gentle master, Are sanctified and holy traitors to you. O, what a world is this, when what is comely Envenoms him that bears it.

Orl. Why, what's the matter?

Adam. O unhappy youth, Come not within these doors; within this roof The enemy of all your graces lives: Your brother—(no, no brother; yet the son— Yet not the son;—I will not call him son— Of him I was about to call his father.) Hath heard your praises; and this night he means To burn the lodging where you used to lie, And you within it; if he fall of that, He will have other means to cut you off: I overheard him, and his practices. This is no place, this house is but a butchery: Abhor it, fear it, do not enter it. [me go?

Orl. Why, whither, Adam, wouldst thou have A. No matter whither, so you come not here. Orl. What, wouldst thou have me go and beg my food?

1 Encounter. 8 Flag. 5 Improvident.
2 Scourvy. 4 Memorial.

SCENE IV.—THE FOREST OF ARDEN.
Enter Rosalind in boy's clothes, Celia drest like a Shepherdess, and Touchstone.

Ros. O Jupiter! how weary are my spirits! Touch. I care not for my spirits, if my legs were not weary. Ros. I could find in my heart to disgrace my man's apparel, and to cry like a woman: but I must comfort the weaker vessel, as doublet and hose ought to show itself courageous to petticoat: therefore, courage, good Aliena. C. I pray you, bear with me; I can go no further. Touch. For my part I had rather bear with you than bear you: yet I should bear no cross, if I did bear you: for, I think, you have no money in your purse.

Ros. Well, this is the forest of Arden. Touch. Ay, now am I in Arden: the more fool I; when I was at home I was in a better place; but travellers must be content. Ros. Ay, be so, good Touchstone:—Look you, 1 Money stamped with a cross. who comes here; a young man and an old, in solemn talk.

Enter Corin and Silvius.

Cor. That is the way to make hers scorn you still.

S. O Corin, that thou knew'st how I do love her!

Cor. I partly guess; for I have lov'd her ere now.

Sil. No, Corin, being old thou canst not guess;

Though in thy youth thou wast as true a lover

As ever sigh'd upon a midnight pillow:

But if thy love were ever like to mine,

(Assure I think did never man love so,) How many actions most ridiculous

Hast thou been drawn to by thy fantasy?

Cor. Into a thousand that I have forgotten.

Sil. O, thou didst then ne'er love so heartily:

If thou remember'st not the slightest folly

That ever love did make thee run into,

Thou hast not lov'd:

Or if thou hast not sat as I do now,

Wearing thy hearer in thy mistress' praise,

Thou hast not lov'd:

Or if thou hast not broke from company,

Abruptly, as my passion now makes me,

Thou hast not lov'd; O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe!

[Exit Silvius.

Ros. Alas, poor shepherd! searching of thy wound,

I have by hard adventure found my own.

Touch. And I mine: We, that are true lovers, run into strange capers; but as all is mortal in nature,

so is all nature in love mortal in folly.

Ros. Thou speak'st wiser than thou art: whereof Touch. Nay, I shall never be, 'ware of mine own wit, till I break my shins against it.

Ros. Jove! Jove! this shepherd's passion

Is much upon my fashion.

Touch. And mine; but it grows something stale with me.

Cel. I pray you, one of you question yond man,

If he for gold will give us any food;

I faint almost to death.

Touch. Holla; you, clown!

Ros. Peace, fool, he's not thy kinsman.

Cor. Who calls?

Touch. Your betters, sir.

Cel. Else are they very wretched.

Ros. Peace, I say:-

God even to you, friend.

Cor. And to you, gentle sir, and to you all.

Ros. I pray thee, shepherd, if that love, or gold,

Can in this desert plate buy entertainment,

Bring us where we may rest ourselves, and feed:

Here's a young maid, with travail much oppress'd,

And faints for succour.

Cor. Fair sir, I pity her,

And wish for her sake, more than for mine own,

My fortunes were more able to relieve her:

But I am shepherd to another man,

And do not shear the fleeces that I graze;

My master is of churlish disposition,

And little reck's to find the way to heaven

By doing deeds of hospitality:

Besides, his cote, his flocks, and bounds of feed,

Are now on sale, and at our sheppcoate now,

By reason of his absence, there is nothing

That you will feed on: but what is, come see,

And in my voice most welcome shall you be.

Ros. What is he that shall buy his flock and pasture?

Cor. That young swain that you saw here but

That little cares for buying any thing.

Ros. I pray thee, if it stands with honesty,

Buy thou the cottage, pasture, and the flock,

And thou shalt have to pay for it of us. [place,

Cel. And we will mend thy wages: I like this

And willingly could waste my time in it.

Cor. Assuredly, the thing is to be sold;

Go with me; if you like upon report,

The soil, the profit, and this kind of life,

I will your very faithful feeder be,

And buy it with your gold right suddenly.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—THE SAME.

Enter Amiens, Jaques, and others.

SONG.

Ami. Under the greenwood tree,

Who loves to lie with me,

And tune his merry note,

Unto the sweet bird's throat,

Come hither, come hither, come hither;

Here shall he see

No enemy,

But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. More, more, I pr'ythee, more.

Ami. It will make you melancholy, monsieur Jaques.

Jaq. I thank it. More, I pr'ythee, more.

I can suck melancholy out of a song, as a weasel sucks eggs: More, I pr'ythee, more.

Ami. My voice is ragged; I know, I cannot please you.

Jaq. I do not desire you to please me, I do desire you to sing: Come, more; another stanza:

Call you them stanzas?

Ami. What you will, monsieur Jaques.

Jaq. Nay, I care not for their names; they owe me nothing: Will you sing?

A. More at your request, than to please myself.

Jaq. Well then, if ever I thank any man, I'll thank you; but that they call compliment, is like the encounter of two dog-apes; and when a man thanks me heartily, methinks, I have given him a penny, and he renders me the beggarly thanks. Come, sing; and you that will not, hold your tongues.

Ami. Well, I'll end the song.—Sirs, cover the while; the duke will drink under this tree;

—he hath been all this day to look you.

Jaq. And I have been all this day to avoid him.

He is too disputable for my company; I think of as many matters as he; but I give heaven thanks, and make no boast of them.

Come, warble, come.

SONG.

Who doth ambition shun, [All together here,

And loves to live & the sun,

Seeking the food he eats,

And pleas'd with what he gets,

Come hither, come hither, come hither;

Here shall he see

No enemy,

But winter and rough weather.

[Exeunt.

1 Cares.

1 Rough.

2 Disputations.
Good morrow, fool, quoth I: No, sir, quoth he,
Call me not fool, till heaven hath sent me fortune:
And then he drew a dial from his poke;
And looking on it with lack-lustre eye,
Says, very wisely, It is ten o'clock;
Thus may we see, quoth he, how the world goes:
'Tis but an hour age, since it was nine;
And after an hour more, 'twill be eleven;
So, and from hour to hour, we rise and rise,
And then from hour to hour, we rot and rot,
And thereby hangs a tale. When I did hear
The motley fool thus moral on the time,
My lungs began to row like chanticleer,
That fools should be so deep contemplative;
And I did laugh, sans intermission,
An hour by his dial.—O noble fool!
A worthy fool! motley's the only wear.
Duke S. What fool is this?
Jaq. O worthy fool!—One that hath been courtier;
And says, if ladies be but young, and fair,
They have the gift to know it: and in his brain,—
Which is as dry as the remainder bisket
After a voyage,—he hath strange places cram'd
With observation, the which he vents
In mangled forms;—O, that I were a fool!
I am ambitious for a motley coat.
Duke S. Thou shalt have one.
Jaq. It is my only suit;
Provided, that you weed your better judgments
Of all opinion that grows rank in them,
That I am wise. I must have liberty
Withal, as large a charter as the wind,
To blow on whom I please; for so fools have;
And they that are most galled with my folly,
They must much laugh: And why, sir, must they
The why is plain as way to parish church: [so?
He, that a fool doth very wisely hit,
Doth very foolishly, although he smart,
Not to seem senseless of the bob2; if not,
The wise man's folly is anatomiz'd
Even by the squad'ring glasses of the fool.
Invest me in my motley; give me leave
Tospeak my mind, and I will through and through Cleanse the foul body of the infected world,
If they will patiently receive my medicine.
Duke S. Fie on thee! I can tell what thou wouldst do.
Jaq. What, for a counter, would I do, but good?
Duke S. Most mischievous fool slip, in chiding
For thou thyself hast been a libertine. [sin:
Jaq. Why, who cries out on pride,
That can therin tax any private party?
Doth it not show as hugely as the sea,
Till that the very means do ebb?
What woman in the city do I name,
When that I say, The city-woman bears
The cost of princes on unworthy shoulders?
Who can come in, and say, that I mean her,
When such a one as she, such is her neighbour?
Or what is he of basest function,
That says, his bravery is not on my cost,
[Thinking that I mean him,) but therein suits
His folly to the mettle of my speech?
There then; How, what then? Let me see wherein
My tongue hath wrong'd him: if it do him right,
Then he hath wrong'd himself; if he be free,

1 Made up of discords.
2 Party-colour.
3 Blow.
8 Finery.

SCENE VI.—The Same.
Enter Orlando and Adam.

Adam. Dear master, I can go no further: O,
I die for food! Here lie I down, and measure out my grave. Farewell, kind master, Orl. Why, how now, Adam! no greater heart in thee? Live a little; comfort a little; cheer ythysel a little; If this uncoth forest yield any thing savage, I will either be food for it, or bring it for food to thee. Thy conceit is nearer death than thy powers. For my sake, be comfortable; hold death awhile at the arm's end: I will here be with thee presently; and if I bring thee not something to eat, I'll give thee leave to die: but if thou diest before I come, thou art a mocker of my labour. Well said! thou look'st cheerly;
and I'll be with thee quickly.—Yet thou liest in the bleak air: come, I will bear thee to some shelter; and thou shalt die not for lack of a dinner, if there live any thing in this desert.
Cheerly, good Adam! [Exeunt severally.

SCENE VII.—The Same.

A Table set out. Enter Duke Senior, Amiens,
Lords, and others.

Duke S. I think he be transform'd into a beast;
For I can no where find him like a man.
1 Lord. My lord, he is but even now gone hence;
Here was he merry, hearing of a song.
Duke S. If he, compact of jars, grow musical,
We shall have shortly discord in the spheres:—
Go, seek him; tell him, I would speak with him.

Enter Jaques.

1. L. He saves my labour by his own approach.
Duke S. Why, how now, monsieur! what a life, is this,
That your poor friends must woo your company?
What! you look merrily.
Jaq. A fool, a fool!—I met a fool i'th' forest,
A motley fool;—a miserable world!—
As I do live by food, I met a fool;
Who laid him down and bask'd him in the sun,
And rail'd on lady Fortune in good terms,
In good set terms,—and yet a motley fool.

1 Made up of discords.
Why then, my taxing like a wild goose flies,
Unclaim'd of any man.—But who comes here?

Enter Orlando, with his sword drawn.

Orl. Forbear, and eat no more.

Jaq. Why, I have eat none yet.
Orl. Nor shalt not, till necessity be serv'd.

Jaq. Of what kind should this cock come of?
Duke S. Art thou thus bolden'd, man, by thy distress;
Or else a rude despiser of good manners,
That in civility thou seem'st so empty?

Orl. You touch'd my vein at first; the thorny point
Of bare distress hath ta'en from me the show
Of smooth civility: yet am I inland bred,
And know some nurture: But forbear, I say:
He dies, that touches any of this fruit,
Till I and my affairs are answered.

Jaq. An you will not be answered with reason,
I must die. [shall force

Du. S. What would you have? Your gentleness
More than your force move us to gentleness.

Orl. I almost die for food, and let me have it.

Duke S. Sit down and feed, and welcome to our table.

O. Speak you so gently? Pardon me, I pray
I thought that all things had been savage here;
And therefore put I on the countenance
Of stern commandment: But whate'er you are,
That in this desert inaccessible,
Under the shade of melancholy boughs,
Expand and neglect the creeping hours of time;
If ever you have look'd on better days;
If ever been where bards have knoll'd to church;
If ever sat at any good man's feast;
If ever from your eyelids wip'd a tear,
And know what 'tis to pity, and be pitied;
Let gentleness my strong enforcement be:
In the which hope, I blush, and hide my sword.

Du. S. True is it we have seen better days.
And with all holy bell been knoll'd to church;
And sat at good men's feasts; and wiped our eyes
Of drops that sacred pity hath engender'd:
And therefore sit you down in gentleness,
And take upon command what help we have,
That to your wanting may be minister'd.

Orl. Then, but forbear your food a little while,
Whiles, like a doe, I go to find my fawn,
And give it food. There is an old poor man,
Who after me hath many a weary step
Limp'd in pure love; till he be first suffic'd,— Oppress'd with two weak evils, age and hun-
I will not touch a bit. [ger,—

Duke S. Go find him out.
And we'll nothing waste till you return.

Orl. I thank ye; and be bless'd for your good comfort! [Exit.

Duke S. Thou seest, we are not all alone un-
This wide and universal theatre [happy:
Presents more woeful pageants than the scene
Wherein we play in.

Jaq. All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players:
They have their exits, and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages. At first, the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms:

And then, the whining school-boy, with his satchel,
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school: And then, the lover;
Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow: Then, a soldier;
Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard,
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation [justice:
Even in the cannon's mouth: And then, the
In fair round belly, with good capon lin'd,
With eyes severe, and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances,
And so he plays his part: The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon;
With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side;
His youthful hose well sav'd, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound: Last scene of all
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness, and mere oblivion:
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans every thing.

Re-enter Orlando, with Adam.

Duke S. Welcome: set down your venerable
And let him feed. [burden,

Orl. I thank you most for him.

Adam. So had you need;
I scarce can speak to thank you for myself.

Du. S. Welcome,fall to: I will not trouble you
As yet, to question you about your fortunes:—
Give us some musick; and, good cousin, sing.

Amiens sings.

SONG.

I.

Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
Thou art not so unkind
As men's ingratitude:
Thy tooth is not so keen,
Because thou art not seen.
Although thy breath be rude.

Heigh, ho! sing, heigh, ho! unto the green holly;
Most friendship is feigning, most loving more
Then heigh, ho, the holly! [jolly:
This life is most jolly.

II.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
That dost not bite so nigh
As benefits forgot:
Though thou the waters warp,
Thy sting is not so sharp.
As friend remember'd not,

Heigh, ho! sing, heigh, ho! etc.

Duke S. If that you were the good Sir Rowland's son,—
As you have whisper'd faithfully, you were;
And as mine eye doth his effigies witness
Most truly lim'd, and living in your face,—
Be truly welcome hither: I am the duke;
That lov'd your father: The residue of your fortune
Go to my cave and tell me.—Good old man,
Thou art right welcome as thy master is:

1 Trite. 2 Remembering.
Support him by the arm.—Give me your hand, And let me all your fortunes understand. [Exit.

Act Third.

SCENE I.—A ROOM IN THE PALACE.

Enter Duke Frederick, Oliver, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke F. Not see him since? Sir, sir, that cannot be:
But were I not the better part made mercy,
I should not seek an absent argument
Of my revenge, thou present: But look to it;
Find out thy brother, wheresoe'er he is;
Seek him with candle; bring him dead or living,
Within this twelvemonth, or turn thou no more
To seek a living in our territory.

[thine,
Thy lands, and all things that thou dost call
Worth seizure, doth seize into our hands;
Till thou canst quit thee by thy brother's mouth,
Of what we think against thee.

O, O, that thy highness knew my heart in Never lov'd my brother in my life. [this!

Du. F. More villain thou.—Well, push him out
And let my officers of such a nature [of doors;
Make an extent 1 upon his house and lands:
Do this expeditiously, 2 and turn him going.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—THE FOREST.

Enter Orlando, with a paper.

O. Hang there, my verse, in witness of my love: [survey
And thou, thrice-crowned queen of night,
With thy chaste eye, from thy pale sphere above,
Thy huntress' name, that my full life doth sway,
O Rosalind! these trees shall be my books,
And in their barks my thoughts I'll character;
That every eye, which in this forest looks,
Shall see thy virtue witness'd every where.
Run, run, Orlando; carve, on every tree,
The fair, the chaste, and unexpressive she. [Exit.

Enter Corin and Touchstone.

Cor. And how like you this shepherd's life, master Touchstone?

Touch. Truly, shepherd, in respect of itself, it is a good life; but in respect that it is a shepherd's life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it very well; but in respect that it is private, it is a very vile life. Now in respect it is in the fields, it pleaseth me well; but in respect it is not in the court, it is tedious. As it is a spare life, look you, it fits my humour well; but as there is no more plenty in it, it goes much against my stomach. Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd?

Cor. No more, but that I know, the more one sickens, the worse at ease he is; and that he that wants money, means, and content, is without three good friends:—that the property of rain is to wet, and fire to burn: That good pasture makes fat sheep; and that a great cause of the night, is lack of the sun: That he, that hath learned no wit by nature nor art, may complain of good breeding, or comes of a very dull kindred. Touch. Such a one is a natural philosopher. Wast ever in court, shepherd?

Cor. No, sir; I am a true labourer; I earn that I eat, get that I wear; owe no man hate, envy no man's happiness; glad of other men's good, content with my barn: and the greatest of my pride is, to see my ewes graze, and my lambs suck.—Here comes young master Ganymede, my new mistress's brother.

Enter Rosalind, reading a paper.

Ros. From the east to western Ind,
       No jewel is like Rosalind,
       Her worth, being mounted on the wind,
Through all the world bears Rosalind.
       All the pictures, fairest liv'd,
       Are but black to Rosalind.
       Let no face be kept in mind,
       But the fair of Rosalind.

Touch. I'll rhyme you so, eight years together; dinners and suppers, and sleeping hours excepted: it is the right butter-woman's rank to market.

Ros. Out, fool!

Touch. For a taste:

If a hart do lack a hind,
Let him seek out Rosalind.
If the cat will after kind,
So, be sure, will Rosalind.
They that reap must shoe and bind;
Then to cart with Rosalind.
Sweetest nut hath costest rind,
Such a nut is Rosalind.

This is the very false gallop of verses; Why do you infect yourself with them?

Ros. Peace, you dull fool; I found them on a tree.

Touch. Truly the tree yields bad fruit.

Ros. I'll graft it with you, and then I shall graft it with a medlar: then it will be the earliest fruit in the country: for you'll be rotten ere you be half ripe, and that's the right virtue of the medlar.

Touch. You have said; but whether wisely or no, let the forest judge.

Enter Celia, reading a paper.

Ros. Peace!

Cec. Here comes my sister, reading; stand aside.

Ros. Why should this desert silent be?
       For it is unpeopled? No;
       Tongues I'll hang on every tree.
       That shall civil sayings show.
Some, how brief the life of man!
Runs his erring pilgrimage;
That the stretching of a span
Buckles in his sun of age.
Some, of violated vows
Twixt the souls of friend and friend:
But upon the fairest boughs
Or at every sentence's end,
Will I Rosalinda write;
Teaching all that read, to know
The quintessence of every sprite.
Heaven would in little show.

1 Delineated. 2 Elegant.
Therefore, heaven nature charg'd
That one body should be fill'd
With all graces wide enlarg'd:
Nature presently distil'd
Helen's cheeks, but not her heart;
Cleopatra's majesty;
Atalanta's better part;
Sad Lucretia's modesty.
Thus Rosalind of many parts
By heavenly synod was devis'd;
Of many faces, eyes, and hearts,
To have the touch's dearest prize'd.
Heaven would that she these gifts should have,
And I to live and die her slave.

Ros. O most gentle Jupiter!—what tedious homily of love you wearied your parishioners withal, and never cry'd, Have patience, good people!

Cel. How now! back friends:—Shepherd, go off a little:—Go with him, sirrah.

Touch. Come, shepherd, let us make an honourable retreat; though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage.

[Execunt Corin and Touchstone.
Cel. Did'st thou hear these verses?
Ros. O yes, I heard them all, and more too;
for some of them had in them more feet than the verses would bear.

Cel. That's no matter; the feet might bear the verses.

Ros. Ay, but the feet were lame, and could not bear themselves without the verse, and therefore stood lamely in the verse.

Cel. But didst thou hear, without wondering how thy name should be hang'd and carved upon these trees?

Ros. I was seven of the nine days out of the wonder, before you came; for look here what I found on a palm tree: I was never so be-rhymed since Pythagoras' time, that I was an Irish rat, which I can hardly remember.

Cel. Trow you, who hath done this?
Ros. Is it a man?

Cel. And a chain, that you once wore, about his neck: Change you colour?
Ros. I pr'ythee, who?
Cel. O lord, lord! it is a hard matter for friends to meet; but mountains may be removed with earthquakes, and so encounter.

Ros. Nay, but who is it?
Cel. Is it possible?

Ros. Nay, I pray thee now, with most petitionary vehemence, tell me who it is.

Cel. O wonderful, wonderful, and most wonderful wonderful, and yet again wonderful, and after that out of all whooping!

Ros. Good my complexion! dost thou think, though I am carispian'd like a man, I have doubled and hose in my disposition? One inch of delay more is a South-sea-off discovery. I pr'ythee, tell me, who is it? quickly, and speak apace: I would thou could'st stammer, that thou might'st pour this concealed man out of thy mouth, as wine comes out of narrow-mouth'd bottle; either too much at once, or none at all.
I pr'ythee take the cork out of thy mouth, that

I may drink thy tidings.—What manner of man?
Is his head worth a hat, or his chin worth a beard?

Cel. Nay, he hath but a little beard.

Ros. Why, let me stay the growth of his beard,
if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

Cel. It is young Orlando; that tripp'd up the wruster's heels, and your heart, both in an instant.

Ros. Nay, no mocking; speak sad brow, and
Cel. I' faith, coz, 'tis he.

[true maid.

Ros. Orlando.

Cel. Orlando.

Ros. Alas the day! what shall I do with my doublet and hose?—What did he, when thou saw'st him? What said he? How look'd he?
Wherein went he? What makes he here? Did he ask for me? Where remains he? How parted he with thee? and when shalt thou see him again?
Answer me in one word.

C. You must borrow me Garagantua's 4 mouth first: 'tis a word too great for any mouth of this age's size: To say, ay, and no, to these particular, is more than to answer in a catechism.

Ros. But doth he know that I am in this forest, and in man's apparel? Looks he asfreshly as he did the day he wrestled?

Cel. It is as easy to count atomies, 5 as to resolve the propositions of a lover:—but take a taste of my finding him, and relish it with a good observance, I found him under a tree, like a dropp'd acorn.

Ros. It may well be call'd Jove's tree, when it drops forth such fruit.

Cel. Give me audience, good madam,

Ros. Proceed.

Cel. There lay he, stretch'd along like a wounded knight.

Ros. Though it be pity to see such a sight, it well becomes the ground.

Cel. Cry, holla! to thy tongue, I pr'ythee; it swears very unseasonably. He was furnish'd like a horse more water.

Ros. O ominous! he comes to kill my heart.

Cel. I would sing my song without a burden:
though bring'st me out of tune.

Ros. Do you not know I am a woman? when I think, I must speak. Sweet, say on.

Enter Orlando and Jaques.

Cel. You bring me out:—Soft! comes he not here?

Ros. 'Tis he; sink by, and note him.

[Enter Corin and Touchstone.

Cel. And a chain, that you once wore, about his neck: Change you colour?

[Enter Orlando and Jaques.

Cel. You bring me out:—Soft! comes he not
here?

Ros. 'Tis he; sink by, and note him.

[Enter Corin and Touchstone.

Cel. You bring me out:—Soft! comes he not
here?

Ros. 'Tis he; sink by, and note him.

[Enter Corin and Touchstone.

Cel. You bring me out:—Soft! comes he not
here?

Ros. 'Tis he; sink by, and note him.

[Enter Corin and Touchstone.

Cel. You bring me out:—Soft! comes he not
here?

Ros. 'Tis he; sink by, and note him.

[Enter Corin and Touchstone.

Cel. You bring me out:—Soft! comes he not
here?

Ros. 'Tis he; sink by, and note him.

[Enter Corin and Touchstone.

Cel. You bring me out:—Soft! comes he not
here?

Ros. 'Tis he; sink by, and note him.

[Enter Corin and Touchstone.

Cel. You bring me out:—Soft! comes he not
here?

Ros. 'Tis he; sink by, and note him.

[Enter Corin and Touchstone.

Cel. You bring me out:—Soft! comes he not
here?
Ros. With a thief to the gallows; for though he go as softly as foot can fall, he thinks himself too soon there.

Orl. Who stays it still whereabouts?

Ros. With lawyers in the vacation: for they sleep between term and term, and then they perceive not how time moves.

Orl. Where dwell you, pretty youth?

Ros. With this shepherdess, my sister; here in the skirts of the forest.

Orl. Are you a native of this place?

Ros. As the rabbit, that you see dwell where she is kindled.

Orl. Your accent is something finer than you could purchase in so removed a dwelling.

Ros. I have been told of many: but, indeed, an old religious uncle of mine taught me to speak, who was in his youth an inland man; one that knew courtship too well, for there he fell in love. I have heard him read many lectures against it; and I thank fortune, I am not a woman, to be touch’d with so many giddy offences as he hath generally tax’d their whole sex withal.

Orl. Can you remember any of the principal evils, that he laid to the charge of women?

Ros. There were none principal; they were all like one another, as half-pence are: every one fault seeming monstrous, till his fellow fault came to match it.

Orl. I pr’ythee recount some of them.

Ros. No; I will not cast away my physic, but on those that are sick. There is a man haunts the forest, that abuses our young plants with carving Rosalind on their barks; hangs odes upon hawthorns, and elegies on brambles; all, forsooth, defying the name of Rosalind: if I could meet that fancymonger, I would give him some good counsel, for he seems to have the quotidian of love upon him.

Orl. I am he that is so love-shaked; I pray you, tell me your remedy.

Ros. There is none of my uncle’s marks upon you: he taught me how to know a man in love; in which cage of rushes, I am sure, you are not prisoner.

Orl. What were his marks?

Ros. A lean cheek; which you have not: a blue eye, and sunken; which you have not: an unquestionable spirit; which you have not: a beard neglected; which you have not:—but I pardon you for that; for, simply, your having in beard is a younger brother’s revenue:—Then your hose should be ungarter’d, your bonnet unbundled, your sleeve unbudded, your shoe untied, and every thing about you demonstrating a careless desolation. But you are no such man; you are rather point-device in your accoutrements; as loving yourself, than seeming the lover of any other.

Orl. Fair youth, I would I could make thee believe I love.

Ros. Me believe it? you may as soon make her that you love believe it; which, I warrant, she is apter to do, than to confess she does: that is one of the points in the which women still give the lie to their consciences. But, in good sooth, are you

1 Moral sentences in the mouths of figures on old tapestry.
2 Seven-night = a week.
he that hangs the verses on the trees, wherein Rosalind is so admired?

Orl. I swear to thee, youth, by the white hand of Rosalind, I am that he, that unfortunate he.

Rosal. But are you so much in love as your rhymes speak?

Orl. Neither rhyme nor reason can express how much.

Rosal. Love is merely a madness; and, I tell you, deserves as well a dark house and a whip, as madmen do; and the reason why they are not so punish'd and cured, is, that the lunacy is so ordinary, that the whippers are in love too: Yet I profess curing it by counsel.

Orl. Did you ever cure any so?

Rosal. Yes, one; and in this manner. He was to imagine me his love, his mistress; and I set him every day to woo me: At which time would I, being but a moonish youth, grieve, be effeminate, changeable, longing, and liking; proud, fantastical, apish, shallow, inconstant, full of tears, full of smiles; for every passion something, and for no passion truly any thing, as boys and women are for the most part catttle of this colour; would now like him, now loath him; then entertain him, then forswear him; now weep for him, then laugh at him, that I draw my suitor from his inad humour of love, to a living humour of madness; which was, to forswear the full stream of the world, and to live in a nook merely monastic: And thus I cured him; and this way will I take upon me to wash your liver as clean as a sound sheep's heart, that there shall not be one spot of love in't.

Orl. I would not be cured, youth.

Rosal. I would cure you, if you would but call me Rosalind, and come every day to my cote, and woo me.

Orl. Now by the faith of my love, I will; tell me where it is.

Rosal. Go with me to it, and I'll show it you; and, by the way, you shall tell me where in the forest you live: Will you go?

Orl. With all my heart, good youth.

Rosal. Nay, you must call me Rosalind:—Come, sister, will you go? [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—THE SAME.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey; Jaques at a distance, observing them.

Touch. Come apace, good Audrey; I will fetch up your goats, Audrey: And how, Audrey, am I the man yet? Doth my simple feature content you?

Aud. Your features! what features?

Touch. I am here with thee and thy goats, as the most capricious poet, honest Ovid, was among the Goths.

Jaq. [Aside.] O knowledge ill-inhabited! worse than Jove in a thatch'd house!

Touch. When a man's verses cannot be understood, nor a man's good wit seconded with the forward child, understanding, it strikes a man more dead than a great reckoning in a little room:—Truly, I would the gods had made thee poetical.

Aud. I do not know what poetical is: Is it honest in deed, and word? Is it a true thing?

Touch. No, truly; for the truest poetry is the most feigning; and lovers are given to poetry; and what they swear in poetry, may be said, as lovers, they do feign.

Aud. Do you wish, then, that the gods had made me poetical?

Touch. I do, truly: for thou swearest too, thou art honest; now, if thouwert a poet, I might have some hope thou didst feign.

Aud. Would you not have me honest?

Touch. No, truly, unless thouwert hard-favour'd: for honesty coupled to beauty, is to have honey a sauce to sugar.

Jaq. [Aside.] A material fool!

Aud. Well, I am not fair; and therefore I pray the gods make me honest!

Touch. Truly, and to cast away honesty upon a foul slut, were to put good meat into an unclean dish.

Aud. I am not a slut, though I thank the gods I am foul.]

Touch. Well, praise be the gods for thy foulness! sluttishness may come hereafter. But be as it may be, I will marry thee: and to that end, I have been with Sir Oliver Mar-text, the vicar of the next village; who hath promised to meet me in this place of the forest, and to couple us.

Jaq. [Aside.] I would fain see this meeting.

Aud. Well, the gods give us joy!

Touch. Amen. A man may, if he were of a fearful heart, stagger in this attempt; for here we have no temple but the wood, no assembly but horn-beasts. But what though? Courage! As horns are odious, they are necessary. It is said,—Many a man knows no end of his gods: right well many a man has good horns, and knows not how to cure them. Well, that is the downfall of his wife; 'tis none of his own getting. Horns? Even so,—Poor men alone. —No, no; the noblest deer hath them as huge as the rascal. Is the single man therefore blessed? No: as a wall'd town is more worthier than a village, so is the forehead of a married man more honourable than the bare brow of a bachelor: and by how much defence is better than no skill, by so much is a horn more precious than to want.

Enter Sir Oliver Mar-text.

Here comes Sir Oliver:—Sir Oliver Mar-text, you are well met: Will you despatch us here under this tree, or shall we go with you to your chapel?

Sir Oli. Is there none here to give the woman? Touch. I will not take her on gift of any man.

Sir Oli. Truly, she must be given, or the marriage is not lawful.

Jaq. [Discovering himself.] Proceed, proceed; I'll give her.

Touch. Good even, good master What ye call? How do you, sir? You are very well met: I am very glad to see you:—Even a toy in hand here, sir:—Nay; pray be cover'd.

Jaq. Will you be married, motley?

Touch. As the ox hath his bow,² sir, the

2 Lean deer.
3 The art of fencing.
4 Yoke.
Enter Corin.

Cor. Mistress, and master, you have oft enquired,
After the shepherd that complain’d of love;
Who you saw sitting by me on the turf,
Praising the proud disdainful shepherdess
That was his mistress.

Cel. Well, and what of him?
Cor. If you will see a pageant truly play’d,
Between the pale complexion of true love
And the red glow of scorn and proud disdain,
Go hence a little, and I shall conduct you,
If you will mark it.

Ros. O, come, let us remove;
The sight of lovers feedeth those in love:—
Bring us unto this sight, and you shall say
I’ll prove a busy actor in their play. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—ANOTHER PART OF THE FOREST.

Enter Silvius and Phebe.

Sil. Sweet Phebe, do not scorn me; do not,
Phebe:
Say, that you love me not; but say not so
In bitterness: The common executioner, Whose heart the accustomed sight of death
makes hard,
Falls not the axe upon the humble neck,
But first begs pardon: Will you sterner be
Than he that dies and lives by bloody drops?

Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Corin, at a distance.

Phe. I would not be thy executioner;
I fly thee, for I would not injure thee.
Thou tellst me, there is murder in mine eye:
’Tis pretty, sure, and very probable, [things,
That eyes,—that are the frailst and softest
Who shut their coward gates on atomies,—
Should be call’d tyrants, butchers, murderers!
Now I do frown on thee with all my heart:
And, if mine eyes can wound, now let them
kill thee:
Now counterfeits to swoon; why now fall down;
Or, if thou canst not, 0, for shame, for shame,
Lie not, to say mine eyes are murderers.
Now show the wound mine eye hath made in thee:
Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remains
Some scar of it; lean but upon a rush,
The cicatrice and capable impressure [eyes,
Thy palm some moment keeps: but now mine
Which I have darted at thee, hurt thee not;
Nor, I am sure, there is no force in eyes
That can do hurt.

Sil. O dear Phebe,
If ever, (as that ever may be near,
You meet in some fresh cheek the power of fancy)
Then shall you know the wounds invisible
That love’s keen arrows make.

Phe. But, till that time,
Come not thou near me; and, when that time
Afflict me with thy mocks, pity me not; [comes,
As, till that time, I shall not pity thee.

Ros. And why, I pray you? [Advancing.
Who might be thy mother,
That you insult, exult, and all at once,
Over the wretched? What though you have more beauty,
(As, by my faith, I see no more in you
Than without candle may go dark to bed.)
Must you be therefore proud and pitiful?
Why, what means this? Why do you look on me?
I see no more in you, than in the ordinary
Of nature’s sale-work:—Od’s my little life!
I think, she means to tangle my eyes too:—
No, faith, proud mistress, hope not after it;
'Tis not your inky brows, your black silk hair,
Your bugle eye-balls, nor your cheek of cream,
That can entame my spirits to your worship.
You foolish shepherd, wherefore do you follow her,
Like foggy south, puffing with wind and rain?
You are a thousand times a proper man,
Than she a woman:—'Tis such fools as you,
That make the world full of ill-favoured children:
'Tis not her glass, but you that flatters her;
And out of you she sees herself more proper,
Than any of her lineaments can show her.—
But, mistress, know yourself; down on your knees,
And thank heaven, fasting, for a good man’s love:
For I must tell you friendly in your ear,—
Sell when you can; you are not for all markets:
Cry the man mercy; love him; take his offer;
Foul is most foul, being foul to be a scoffer.
So take her to thee, shepherd; fare you well.

Phe. Sweet youth, I pray you chide a year together;
I had rather hear you chide, than this man woo.

Ros. He’s fallen in love with her foulness, and she’ll fall in love with my anger: If it be so, as fast as she answers thee with frowning looks, I’ll sauce her with bitter words.—Why look you so upon me?

Phe. For no ill will I bear you.

Ros. I pray you, do not fall in love with me,
For I am falser than vows made in wine:
Besides, I like you not: if you will know my house,
'Tis at the tuft of olives, here hard by:—
Will you go, sister?—Shepherd, ply her hard:—
Come, sister:—Shepherdess, look on him better,
And be not proud: though all the world could see,
None could be so abus’d in sight as he.
Come to our flock.

[Exeunt Rosalind, Celia, and Corin.

Phe. Dead shepherd! I now find thy saw of might;
Who ever lov’d, that lov’d not at first sight?—

Sil. Sweet Phebe,—

Phe. Ha! what say’st thou, Silvius?

Sil. Sweet Phebe, pity me.

Phe. Why, I am sorry for thee, gentle Silvius.

Sil. Wherever sorrow is, relief would be;
If you do sorrow at my grief in love,
By giving love, your sorrow and my grief
Were both extermin’d.

Phe. Thou hast my love: Is not that neigh-
Sil. I would have you. [burlily]

Phe. Why, that were covetousness.

Silvius, the time was, that I hated thee;
And yet it is not, that I bear thee love:
But, since that thou canst talk of love so well,
Thy company, which erst was irksome to me,
I will endure; and I’ll employ thee too:

1 Proverb. 2 From Marlowe’s ‘Hero and Leander.’

But do not look for further recompense,
Than thine own gladness that thou art employ’d.

Sil. So holy, and so perfect is my love,
And I in such a poverty of grace,
That I shall think it a most plenteous crop
To glean the broken ears after the man
That the main harvest reaps: lose now and then
A scatter’d smile, and that I’ll live upon.

Phe. Know’st thou the youth that spoke to me ere while?

Sil. Not very well, but I have met him oft;
And he hath bought the cottage, and the bounds,
That the old carlot once was master of.

P. Think not I love him, though I ask for him;
'Tis but a peevish boy:—yet he talks well:—
But what care I for words? yet words do well,
When he that speaks them pleases those that
It is a pretty youth:—not very pretty:—[hearn.
But, sure, he’s proud; and yet his pride becomes him:
He’ll make a proper man: the best thing in him
Is his complexion; and faster than his tongue
Did make offence, his eye did heal it up.
He is not tall; yet for his years he’s tall:
His leg is but so so; and yet 'tis well:
There was a pretty redness in his lip:
A little riper and more lusty red
Than that mixed in his cheek; ’twas just the difference
Betwixt the constant red, and mingled damask.
There be some women, Silvius, had they mark’d
In parcels as I did, would have gone near [him
To fall in love with him: but, for my part,
I love him not, nor hate him not; and yet
I have more cause to hate him than to love him:
For what had he to do to chide at me?
Hesaid, mine eyes were black, and my hair black;
And, now I am remember’d, scorn’d at me:
I marvel, why I answer’d not again:
But that’s all one; omission is no quittance,
I’ll write to him a very taunting letter,
And thou shalt bear it: Wilt thou Silvius?

Sil. Phebe, with all my heart.

Phe. I’ll write it straight;
The matter’s in my head, and in my heart:
I will be bitter with him, and passing short:
Go with me, Silvius.

[Exeunt.

Act Fourth.

SCENE I.—THE SAME.

Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Jaques.

Jaq. I prythee, pretty youth, let me be better acquainted with thee.

Ros. They say you are a melancholy fellow.

Jaq. I am so; I do love it better than laughing.

Ros. Those that are in extremity of either, are abominable fellows; and betray themselves to every modern censure, worse than drunkards.

Jaq. Why, ’tis good to be sad and say nothing.

Ros. Why then, 'tis good to be a post.

Jaq. I have neither the scholar’s melancholy, which is emulation; nor the musician’s, which is fantastical; nor the courtier’s, which is proud;
or the soldier’s, which is ambitious; nor the

1 Rattle. 2 Silly.
Ros. A traveller! By my faith, you have great reason to be sad: I fear, you have sold your own lands, to see other men's; then, to have seen much, and to have nothing, is to have rich eyes and poor hands.

Jaq. Yes, I have gained my experience.

Enter Orlando.

Ros. And your experience makes you sad: I had rather have a fool to make me merry, than experience to make me sad; and to travel for.

Orl. Good day, and happiness, dear Rosalind!

Jaq. Nay, then, farewell, an you talk in blank verse. [Exit.

Ros. Farewell, monsieur traveller; Look, you lisp, and wear strange suits; disable all the benefits of your own country; be out of love with your nativity, or I will scarce think you have swam in a gondola. -Why, how now, Orlando! where have you been all this while? You a lover? -An you serve me such another trick, never come in my sight more.

Orl. My fair Rosalind, I come within an hour of my promise.

Ros. Break an hour's promise in love? He that will divide a minute into a thousand parts, and break but a part of the thousandth part of a minute in the affairs of love, it may be said of him, that Cupid hath clapp'd him o' the shoulder, but I warrant him heart whole.

Orl. Pardon me, dear Rosalind.

Ros. Nay, an you be so tardy, come no more in my sight; I had as lief 3 be woo'd of a snail.

Orl. Of a snail?

Ros. Ay, of a snail; for though he comes slowly, he carries his house on his head; a better jointure, I think, than you can make a woman: Besides, he brings his destiny with him.

Orl. What's that?

Ros. Why, horns.

Orl. Virtue is no horn-maker; and my Rosalind is virtuous.

Ros. And I am your Rosalind.

Cel. It pleases him to call you so; but he hath a Rosalind of a better leer than you.

Ros. Come, woo me, woo me; for now I am in a holiday humour, and like enough to consent; What would you say to me now, an I were your very very Rosalind?

Orl. I would kiss, before I spoke.

Ros. Nay, you were better speak first; and when you were gravelled 4 for lack of matter, you might take occasion to kiss.

Orl. How, if the kiss be denied?

Ros. Then she puts you to entreaty, and there begins new matter.

Orl. Who could be out, being before his beloved mistress?

Ros. Marry, that should you, if I were your mistress.

Orl. What, of my suit?

Ros. Out of your suit. Am not I your Rosalind?

Orl. I take some joy to say you are, because I would be talking of her.

Ros. Well, in her person, I say—I will not have you.

Orl. Then, in mine own person, I die.

Ros. No, faith, die by attorney. The poor world is almost six thousand years old, and in all this time there was not any man died in his own person, widelocset, in a love cause. Troilus had his brains dashed out with a Grecian club; yet he did what he could to die before; and he is one of the patterns of love. Leander, he would have lived many a fair year, though Hero had turned nun, if it had not been for a hot midsommer night: for, good youth, he went but forth to wash him in the Hellespont, and being taken with the cramp, was drowned; and the foolish chroniclers of that age found it was—Hero of Sestos. But these are all lies; men have died from time to time, and worms have eaten them, butnotforlove.

Orl. I would not have my right Rosalind of this mind; for, I protest, her frown might kill me.

Ros. By this hand, it will not kill a fly: But come, now I will be your Rosalind in a more coming-on disposition; and ask me what you will, I will grant it.

Orl. Then love me, Rosalind.

Ros. Yes, faith will I, Fridays, and Saturdays, and all.

Orl. And wilt thou have me?

Ros. Ay, and twenty such.

Orl. What say'st thou?

Ros. Are you not good?

Orl. I hope so.

Ros. Why then, can one desire too much of a good thing?—Come, sister, you shall be the priest, and marry us.—Give me your hand, Orlando:—

What do you say, sister?

Orl. Pray thee, marry us.

Cel. I cannot say the words.

Ros. You must begin,—Will you, Orlando,—

Cel. Go to: Will you, Orlando, have to wife this Rosalind?

Orl. I will.

Ros. Ay, but when?

Orl. Why now; as fast as she can marry us.

Ros. Then you must say,—I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

Orl. I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

Ros. I might ask you for your commission; but,—I do take thee, Orlando, for my husband: There a girl goes before the priest; and, certainly, a woman's thought runs before her actions.

Orl. So do all thoughts; they are winged.

Ros. Now tell me how long you would have her, after you have married her.

Orl. For ever and a day.

Ros. Say a day, without the ever: No, no, Orlando; men are April when they woo, December when they wed: maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives. I will be more jealous of thee than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen; more clamorous than a parrot against rain; more new-fangled than an ape; more giddy than a monkey: I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the fountain, and I will do that when you are disposed to be merry; I will laugh like a hyen, and that when thou art inclined to sleep.

Orl. But will my Rosalind do so? Ros. By my life, she will do as I do. Orl. O, but she is wise. Ros. Or else she could not have the wit to do this: the wiser, the wayward: Make the doors upon a woman's wit, and it will out at the case- ment; shut that, and 'twill out at the key-hole; stop that, 'twill fly with the smoke out at the chimney.

Orl. A man that had a wife with such a wit, he might say,—'Wit whither will?
Ros. You shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue. Orl. For these two hours, Rosalind, I will leave thee. [hours. Ros. Ay, go your ways, go your ways:—I knew what you would prove; my friends told me as much, and I thought no less:—that flattering tongue of yours won me:—'tis but one cast away, and so,—come, death.——Two o'clock is your hour?
Orl. Ay, sweet Rosalind.
Ros. By my troth, and in good earnest, and by all pretty oaths that are not dangerous, if you break one jot of your promise, or come one minute behind your hour, I will think you the most pathetical break-promise, and the most hollow lover, and the most unworthy of her you call Rosalind, that may be chosen out of the gross hand of the unfaithful: therefore, beware my censure, and keep your promise.

Orl. With no less religion, than if thou wert indeed my Rosalind: So adieu.

Ros. Well, time is the old justice that examines all such offenders, and let time try: Adieu. [Exit Orlando.

Cel. You have simply mis'd our sex in your love prate: we must have your doublet and hose plucked over your head, and show the world what the bird hath done to her own nest.

Ros. O coz, coz, coz, my pretty little coz, that thou did'st know how many fathom deep I am in love! But it cannot be sounded; my affection hath an unknown bottom, like the bay of Portugal.

Cel. Or rather, bottomless; that as fast as you pour affection in, it runs out.

Ros. No, that same wicked boy of Venus, that was begot of thought, conceived of spleen, and born of madness; that blind rascally boy, that abuses every one's eyes, because his own are out, let him be judge, how deep I am in love:—I'll tell thee, Aliena, I cannot be out of the sight of Orlando: I'll go find a shadow, and sigh till he come.

Cel. And I will sleep. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Forest.
Enter Jaques and Lords, in the habit of Foresters.

Jaq. Which is he that killed the deer?

1 Lord. Sir, it was I.

2 Lord. Yes, sir.

Jaq. Sing it: 'tis no matter how it be in tune, so it make noise enough.

J. Let's present him to the duke, like a Roman conqueror; and it would do well to set the deer's horns upon his head, for a branch of victory:—Have you no song, forester, for this purpose?

2 Lord. Yes, sir.

Jaq. Take thou no scorn, to wear the horn; It was a crest ere thou wast born.}

1. Thy father's father wore it; 2. And thy father bore it:

All. The horn, the horn, the lusty horn, Is not a thing to laugh to scorn. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Forest.
Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ros. How say you now? Is it not past two o'clock? and here much Orlando!

Cel. I warrant you, with pure love, and troubled brain, he hath ta'en his bow and arrows, and is gone forth—to sleep: Look, who comes here.

Enter Silvius.

Sil. My errand is to you, fair youth;—My gentle Phebe bid me give you this. [Giving a letter.

I know not the contents; but, as I guess, By the stern brow, and wapish action Which she did use as she was writing of it, It bears an angry tenour: pardon me, I am but as a guiltless messenger.

R. Patience herself would startle at this letter, And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: She says, I am not fair; that I lack manners; She calls me proud; and, that she could not love me Were man as rare as phoenix; Od's my will! Her love is not the bare that I do hunt; Why writes she so to me?—Well, shepherd, well, This is a letter of your own device.

Sil. No, I protest, I know not the contents; Phebe did write it.

Ros. Come, come, you are a fool, And turn'd into the extremity of love, I saw her hand: she has a leathern hand, A freestone-colour'd hand; I verily did think That her old gloves were on, but 'twas her hands; She has a housewife's hand; but that's no matter; I say, she never did invent this letter; This is a man's invention, and his hand.

Sil. Sure it is hers.

Ros. Why, 'tis a boisterous and cruel style, A style for challengers; why she defies me, Like Turk to Christian: woman's gentle brain Could not drop forth such giant-rude invention, Such Ethiop words, blacker in their effect [letter Than in their countenance:—Will you hear the Sil. So please you, for I never heard it yet; Yet heard too much of Phebe's cruelty. R. She Phebes me: Mark how the tyrant writes. Art thou god to shepherd turn'd, [Reads That a maiden's heart hath burn'd?— Can a woman rail thus?
Within an hour; and, pacing through the forest,
Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancy,
Lo, what befell! he threw his eye aside,
And, mark, what object did present itself!
Under an oak, whose boughs were moss'd with age,
And high top bared with dry antiquity,
A wretched ragged man, o'ergrown with hair,
Lay sleeping on his back: about his neck
A green and gilded snake had wreathed itself,
Who with her head, nimble in threats, approach'd
The opening of his mouth; but suddenly
Seeing Orlando, it unlink'd itself,
And with indented glides did slip away
Into a bush: under which bush's shade
A lioness, with udders all drawn dry, [watch,
Lay coaxing head on ground, with cat-like
When the sleeping man should stir; for 'tis
The royal disposition of that beast,
To prey on nothing that doth seem as dead:
This seen, Orlando did approach the man,
And found it was his brother, his elder brother.

Oli. I have heard him speak of that same brother,
And he did render him the most unnatural
That liv'd 'mongst men.

Oli. And well he might so do,
For well I know he was unnatural.

Ros. But to Orlando:—Did he leave him there,
Food to the suck'd and hungry lioness?
O. Twice did he turn his back, and purpos'd so:
But kindness, nobler ever than revenge,
And nature, stronger than his just occasion,
Made him give battle to the lioness,
Who quickly fell before him; in which hurtling
From miserable slumber I awak'd.

Col. Are you his brother?

Ros. Was it you he rescu'd?
C. Was't you that did so oft contrive to kill him?
Oli. 'Twas I; but 'tis not I: I do not blame
To tell you what I was, since my conversion
So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am.

Ros. But for the bloody napkin?

Oli. By and by.
When from the first to last, betwixt us two,
Tears our recollections had most kindly bath'd,
As, how I came into that desert place;—
In brief, he led me to the gentle duke,
Who gave me fresh array, and entertainment,
Committing me unto my brother's love;
Who led me instantly unto his cave.
There stripp'd himself, and here upon his arm
The lioness had torn some flesh away, [faint'd,
Which all this while had bled; and now he
And cry'd, in fainting, upon Rosalind.
Brief, I recover'd him; bound up his wound;
And, after some small space, being strong at
He sent me hither, stranger as I am, [heart;
To tell this story, that you might excuse
His broken promise, and to give this napkin,
Dry'd in his blood, unto the shepherd youth
That he in sport doth call his Rosalind.

Col. Why now how, Ganymede? sweet Ganymede?

[Orlando faints.
O. Many will swoon whey they do look on blood.
Col. There is more in it:—Cousin—Ganymede!
Oli. Look, he recovers.

Ros. I would, I were at home.
Act Fifth.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey.

Touch. We shall find a time, Audrey; patience, gentle Audrey.

Aud. Faith, the priest was good enough, for all the old gentleman's saying.

Touch. A most wicked Sir Oliver, Audrey, a most vile Mar-text. But Audrey, there is a youth here in the forest lays claim to you.

Aud. Ay, I know who 'tis; he hath no interest in me in the world: here comes the man you mean.

Enter William.

Touch. It is meat and drink to me to see a clown; By my troth, we that have good wits, have much to answer for; we shall be flattering; we cannot hold.

Will. Good even, Audrey.

Aud. Good even, William.

Will. And good even to you, sir.

Touch. Good even, gentle friend: Cover thy head, cover thy head; nay, pr'ythee, be covered.

How old are you, friend?

Will. Five and twenty, sir.

Touch. A ripe age: Is thy name William?

Will. William, sir.

Touch. A fair name; Wast born i' the forest here?

Will. Ay, sir.

Touch. Art rich?

Will. Faith, sir, so so.

Touch. So, so, is good, very good, very excellent good:—and yct it is not; it is but so, so. Art thou wise?

Will. Ay, sir, I have a pretty wit.

Touch. Why, thou say'st well. I do now remember a saying; The fool doth think he is wise, but the wise man knows himself to be a fool. The heathen philosopher, when he had a desire to eat a grape, would open his lips when he put it into his mouth; meaning thereby, that grapes were made to eat, and lips to open. You do love this maid?

Will. I do, sir.

Touch. Give me your hand: Art thou learned?

Will. No, sir.

Touch. Then learn this of me; To have, is to have: For it is a figure in rhetorick, that drink, being poured out of a cup into a glass, by filling the one doth empty the other: For all your writers do consent, that ipse is he; now you are not ipse, for I am he.

Will. Which he, sir?

Touch. He, sir, that must marry this woman: Therefore, you clown, abandon,—which is in the vulgar, leave,—the society,—which in the boorish is company,—of this female,—which in the common is,—woman, which together's, abandon the society of this female; or, clown, thou perishest; or, to thy better understanding, diest; to wit, I kill thee, make thee away, translate thy life into death, thy liberty into bondage: I will deal in poison with thee, or in bastinado, or in steel; I will bandy with thee in faction; I will o'er-run thee with policy; I will thee a hundred and fifty ways; therefore tremble, and depart.

Aud. Do, good William.

Will. Rest you merry, sir.

[Exit.

Enter Corin.

Cor. Our master and mistress seek you; come, away, away.

Touch. Trip, Audrey, trip, Audrey;—I attend, I attend.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter Orlando and Oliver.

Ori. Is't possible, that so little acquaintance you should like her? that, but seeing, you should love her? and, loving, woo; and, wooing, she should grant? and will you persuade her to marry her?

Oli. Neither call the giddiness of it in question, the poverty of her, the small acquaintance, my sudden wooing, nor her sudden consenting; but say with me, I love Aliena; say with her, that she loves me; consent with both, that we may enjoy each other; it shall be to your good; for my father's house, and all the revenue that was old Sir Rowland's, will I estate you, and here live and die a shepherd.

Enter Rosalind.

Ori. You have my consent. Let your wedding be to-morrow; thither will I invite the duke, and all his contented followers: Go you, and prepare Aliena; for, look you, here comes my Rosalind.

Ros. God save you, brother.

Oli. And you, fair sister.

Ros. O, my dear Orlando, how it grieves me to see thee wear thy heart in a scarf.

Ori. It is my arm.

Ros. I thought, thy heart had been wounded with the claws of a lion.

Ori. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a lady.

Ros. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeited to swoon, when he showed me your handkerchief?

Ori. Ay, and greater wonders than that.

Ros. O, I know where you are:—Nay, 'tis true; there was no anything so sudden, but the fight of two rams, and Cesar's thronasional brag— I came, saw, and overcame: For your brother and my sister no sooner met, but they looked; no sooner looked, but they loved; no sooner loved, but they sighed; no sooner sighed, but they asked one another the reason; no sooner knew the reason, but they sought the remedy: and in these degrees have they made a pair of stairs to marriage: they are in the very wrath of love, and they will together; clubs cannot part them.

Orl. They shall be married to-morrow, and I will bid the duke to the nuptial. But, O, how tetter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes! By so much the more shall I to-morrow be at the height of heart-heaviness, by how much I shall think my brother happy,
in having what he wishes for.

Ros. Why then, to-morrow I cannot serve your turn for Rosalind?

Orl. I can live no longer by thinking.
Ros. I will weary you no longer then with idle talking. Know of me then (for now I speak to some purpose), that I know you are a gentleman of good conceit: I speak not this, that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge, insumuch, I say, I know you are; neither do I labour for a greater esteem than may in some little measure draw a belief from you, to do yourself good, and not to grace me. Believe then, if you please, that I can do strange things:
I have, since I was three years old, conversed with a magician, most profound in this art. If you do love Rosalind so near the heart as your gesture cries it out, when your brother marries Aliena, shall you marry her: I know into what straits of fortune she is driven; and it is not impossible to me, if it appear not inconvenient to you, to set her before your eyes to-morrow, human as she is, and without any danger.

Orl. Speakest thou in sober meanings?
Ros. By my life, I do; which I tender dearly, though I say I am a magician: Therefore, put you in your best array, bid your friends; for if you will be married to-morrow, you shall; and to Rosalind, if you will.

Enter Silvius and Phebe.

Phe. Youth, you have done me much ungentle-ness,
To show the letter that I writ to you.
Ros. I care not, if I have: it is my study,
To seem despitful and ungentle to you:
You are there followed by a faithful shepherd;
Look upon him, love him; he worships you.
Phe. Good shepherd, tell this youth what 'tis to love.
Sil. It is to be all made of sighs and tears;—
And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganymede.
Orl. And I for Rosalind.
Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of fantasy,
All made of love, and all made of wishes;
All adoration, duty, and observance,
All humbleness, all patience, and impatience,
All purity, all trial, all observance;—
And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And so am I for Ganymede.
Orl. And so am I for Rosalind.
Ros. And so am I for no woman.

Sil. [To Rosalind.] If this be so, why blame
you me to love you?

Orl. [To Phebe.] If this be so, why blame you
me to love you?

Sil. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?
Ros. Who do you speak to, why blame you
me to love you?

Orl. To her, that is not here, nor doth not hear.
Ros. Pray you, no more of this: 'tis like the howling of Irish wolves against the moon.—I will help you, [To Silvius.] if I can:—I would love you, [To Phebe.] if I could.—To-morrow meet me all together.—I will marry you, [To Phebe.] if ever I marry woman, and I'll be married to-morrow:—I will satisfy you, [To Orlando.] if ever I satisfied man, and you shall be married to-morrow:—I will content you, [To Silvius.] if what please you contents you, and you shall be married to-morrow. — As you [To Orlando.] love Rosalind, meet;—as you [To Silvius.] love Phebe, meet;—and as I love no woman, I'll meet.—So, fare you well; I have left you commands.

Sil. I'll not fail, if I live.

Phe. Nor I.

Orl. Nor I.

[Execunt.

SCENE III.—THE SAME.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey.

Touch. To-morrow is the joyfull day, Audrey;
to-morrow will be we married.

Aud. I do desire it with all my heart: and hope it is not dishonest desire, to desire to be a woman of the world. Here comes two of the banished duke's pages.

Enter two Pages.

1 Page. Well met, honest gentlemen.

Touch. By my troth, well met: Come, sit, sit, and a song.

2 Page. We are for you: sit i' the middle.

1 Page. Shall we clap into't roundly, without hawking, or saying we are horace; which are the only prologue to a bad voice?

2 Page. And both in a tune, like two gipsies on a horse.

Song.

I.
It was a lover, and his lass,
With a key, and a no, and a hey nonina,
That over the green corn-field did pass,
In the spring time, the only pretty rank time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding;
Sweet lovers love the spring.

1 A married woman.
II.
This carol they began that hour,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonio,
How that a life was but a flower
In spring time, &c.

III.
And therefore take the present time,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonio;
For love is crowned with the prime
In spring time, &c.

Touch. Truly, young gentleman, though there was no greater matter in the ditty, yet the note was very untuneable.

1 Page. You are deceived, sir; we kept time, we lost not our time.

Touch. By my troth, yes; I count it but time lost to hear such a foolish song. Come, Audrey. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—ANOTHER PART OF THE FOREST.
Enter Duke Senior, Amiens, Jaques, Orlando, Oliver, and Celia.

Duke S. Dost thou believe, Orlando, that the Can do all this that he hath promised? [boy
Orl. I sometimes do believe, and sometimes do not;
Astho those that they hope, and know they fear.

Enter Rosalind, Silvius, and Phebe.

Ros. Patience once more, whiles our compact is urg'd:—

[To the Duke.] You say, if I bring in your Rosalind, you will bestow her on Orlando here? [lind, Duke S. That would I, had I kingdoms to give with her.

Ros. [To Orlando.] And you say, you will have her when I bring her?

Orl. That would I, were I of all kingdoms king.

Ros. [To Phebe.] You say, you'll marry me, if I be willing?

Phe. That will I, should I die the hour after.

Ros. But, if you do refuse to marry me, You'll give yourself to this most faithful shepherd. So is the bargain.

[To Silvius.] You say, that you'll have Phebe, if she will?

Sil. Though to have her and death were both one thing. [even.

Ros. I have promis'd to make all this matter Keep you your word, O duke, to give your daughter:—
You yours, Orlando, to receive his daughter;—Keep your word, Phebe, that you'll marry me; Or else, refusing me, to wed this shepherd:—Keep your word, Silvius, that you'll marry her, If she refuse me:—and from hence I go, To make these doubts all even.

[Exeunt Rosalind and Celia.

Duke S. I do remember in this shepherd-boy Some lively touches of my daughter's favour. Orl. My lord, the first time that I ever saw him, Methought he was a brother to your daughter; But, my good lord, this boy is forest-born: And hath been tutor'd in the rudiments

Of many desperate studies by his uncle, Whom he reports to be a great magician, Obscured in the circle of this forest.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey.

Jaq. There is, sure, another flood toward, And these couples are coming to theark! Here comes a pair of very strange beasts, which in all tongues are called fools.

Touch. Salutation and greeting to you all!

Jaq. Good my lord, bid him welcome: This is the motley-minded gentleman, that I have so often met in the forest: he hath been a courtier, he swears.

Touch. If any man doubt that, let him put me to my purgation. I have trod a measure; I have flattered a lady; I have been politic with my friend, smooth with mine enemy; I have undone three tailors; I have had four quarrels, and like to have fought one.

Jaq. And how was that ta'en up?

Touch. 'Faith, we met, and found the quarrel was upon the seventh cause.

Jaq. How seventh cause?—Good my lord, like this fellow.

Duke S. I like him very well.

Touch. Sir; I desire you of the like. I press in here, sir, amongst the rest of the country folks, to swear, and to forswear; according as marriage binds, and blood breaks: A poor virgin, sir, an ill-favoured thing, sir, but mine own; a poor humour of mine, sir, to take that no man else will: Rich honesty dwells like a miser, sir, in a poor-house; as your pearl, in your foul oyster.

Duke S. By my faith, he is very swift and sententious.

Touch. According to the fool's bolt, sir.

Jaq. But, for the seventh cause; how did you find the quarrel on the seventh cause?

Touch. Upon a lie seven times removed:—

Bear your body more seeming, Audrey:—as thus, sir. I did dislike the cut of a certain courtier's beard; he sent me word, if I said his beard was not cut well, he was in the mind it was: This is called the Retort courteous. If I sent him word again, it was not well cut, he would send me word, he cut it to please himself: This is called the Quip modest. If, again, it was not well cut, he disabled my judgment: This is call'd the Reply curt'rous. If again, it was not well cut, he would answer, I spake not true: This is call'd the Reproof valiant. If again, it was not well cut, he would say, I lie: This is call'd the Countercheck quarrelsome: and to the Lie circumstantial, and the Lie direct.

Jaq. And how oft did you say, his beard was not well cut?

Touch. I durst go no further than the Lie circumstantial, nor he durst not give me the Lie direct; and so we measured swords and parted.

Jaq. Can you nominate in order now the degrees of the lie?

Touch. O sir, we quarrel in print, by the book; as you have books for good manners: I will name you the degrees. The first, the Retort courteous; the second, the Quip modest; 1 Fearful. 2 Concealed. 3 A stately dance.
the third, the Reply churlish; the fourth, the Reproof valiant; the fifth, the Countercheck quarrelsome; the sixth, the Lie with circumstance; the seventh, the Lie direct. All you may avoid but the lie direct; and you may avoid that too, with an If. I knew when seven justices could not take up a quarrel; but when the parties were met themselves, one of them thought but of an If, as If you said so, then I said so; and they shook hands, and swore brothers. Your If is the only peace-maker; much virtue in If.

Jaques. Is not this a rare fellow, my lord? he's as good as any thing, and yet a fool.

Duke S. He uses his folly like a stalking-horse, and under the presentation of that he shoots his wit.

Enter Hymen, leading Rosalind in woman's clothes; and Celia.

Still Music.

Hymn. Then is there mirth in heaven,
When earthly things made even Atone together.
Good duke, receive thy daughter,
Hymen from heaven brought her,
Yea, brought her hither;
That thou mightst join her hand with his,
Whose heart within her bosom is.

Ros. [To Duke S.] To you I give myself, for
I am yours.
[To Orlando.] To you I give myself, for I am Duke S. If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter.
Orl. If there be truth in sight, you are my
Phe. If sight and shape be true, [Rosalind.
Why then,—my love, adieu!]

Ros. [To Duke S.] I'll have no father, if you be not he:
[To Orlando.] I'll have no husband, if you be
not he:
[To Phebe.] Nor ne'er wed woman, if you be not she.

Hymn. Peace, ho! I bar confusion:
'Tis I must make conclusion
Of these most strange events:
Here's eight that must take hands,
To join in Hymen's bands,
If truth holds true contents,
You and you no cross shall part:
[To Orlando and Rosalind.
You and you are heart in heart:
[To Oliver and Celia.
You [To Phebe.] to his love must accord,
Or have a woman to your lord:
You and you are sure together,
[To Touchstone and Audrey.
As the winter's cold fare weather,
Whiles a wedlock-hymn we sing,
Feed yourselves with questioning:
That reason wonder may diminish,
How thus we met, and these things finish.

Song.
Wedding is great Juno's crown;
O blessed bond of board and bed!
'Tis Hymen peoples every town;
High wedlock then be honour'd:

1 Acqueisconco.

Honour, high honour and renown,
To Hymen, god of every town!

Duke S. O my dear niece, welcome thou art
to me;
Even daughter, welcome in no less degree.

Phe. [To Silvius.] I will not eat my word, now
thou art mine;
Thy faith my fancy to thee doth combine.

Enter Jaques de Bois.

Jaques. Let me have audience for a word, or two;
I am the second son of old Sir Rowland,
That bring these tidings to this fair assembly:—
Duke Frederick, hearing how that every day
Men of great worth resort'd to this forest,
Address'd a mighty power! which were on foot;
In his own conduct, purposely to take
His brother here, and put him to the sword:
And to the skirts of this wild wood he came;
Where, meeting with an old religious man,
After some questions with him, was converted
Both from his enterprize, and from the world:
His crown bequeathing to his banish'd brother,
And all their lands restor'd to them again
That were with him exil'd; This to be true,
I do engage my life.

Duke S. Welcome, young man;
Thou offer'st fairly to thy brothers' wedding:
To one, his lands withheld: and to the other,
A land itself at large, a potent dukedom.
First, in this forest, let us do those ends
That here were well begun, and well begot:
And after, every of this happy number, [us,
That have endur'd shrewd days and nights with
Shall share the good of our returned fortune,
According to the measure of their states.
Meantime, forget this new-fall'n dignity,
And fall into our rustick revelry:—
[all,
Play, musick; and you brides and bridgrooms
With measure heap'd in joy, to the measures fall.
Jaques, Sir, by your patience; if I heard you
The duke hath put on a religious life, [rightly,
And thrown into neglect the pompous court?
Jaques. To him will I: out of these converts
There is much matter to be heard and learned.— [To Duke S.] You to your former honour I bequeth;
Your patience, and your virtue, well deserves
it:—
[doth merit:—
You [To Orlando.] to a love, that your true faith
You [To Oliver.] to your land, and love, and great allies:—
You [To Sil.] to a long and well deserved bed:—
And you [To Touchstone.] to wrangling, for thy loving voyage
[pleasures;
Is but for two months victual'd.—So to your
I am for other than for dancing measures.
Duke S. Stay, Jaques, stay.
Jaques. To see no pastime, I:—what you would have I'll stay to know at your abandon'd cave, [Exit.
Duke S. Proceed, proceed: we will begin these rites,
And we do trust they'll end, in true delights.

[Music.]
Epilogue.

Ros. It is not the fashion to see the lady the epilogue: but it is no more unhandsome, than to see the lord the prologue. If it be true, that good wine needs no bush, 'tis true, that a good play needs no epilogue: Yet to good wine do they use good bushes; and good plays prove the better by the help of good epilogues. What a case am I in then, that am neither a good epilogue, nor can not insinuate with you in the behalf of a good play? I am not furnished like a beggar, therefore to beg will not become me: my way is, to conjure you; and I'll begin with the women. I charge you, O women, for the love you bear to men, to like as much of this play as pleases them:
and so I charge you, O men, for the love you bear to women (as I perceive by your simpering, none of you hate them), that between you and the women, the play may please. If I were a woman
I would kiss as many of you as had beards that pleased me, and complexions that liked me: and,
I am sure, as many as have good beards, or good faces, will, for my kind offer, when I make curts'y, bid me farewell. [Exeunt.

Bertram in the Florentine War.

Lords, attending on the King; Officers, Soldiers,
&c., French and Florentine.

Scene.—Partly in France, and partly in Tuscany.

Act First.

Scene I.—Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Bertram, the Countess of Rousillon,
Helena, and Lafeu, in mourning.

Countess. In delivering my son from me, I b early a second husband.

Ber. And I, in going, madam, weep o'er my father's death anew: but I must attend his majesty's command, to whom I am now in ward, evermore in subjection.

Laf. You shall find of the king a husband, madam:—you, sir, a father: He that so gen-early is at all times good, must of necessity hold his virtue to you; whose worthiness would stir it up where it wanted, rather than lack it where there is such abundance.

Count. What hope is there of his majesty's amendment?

Laf. He hath abandoned his physicians, madam: under whose practices he hath percutted time with hope; and finds no other adhance in the process but only the losing of hope by time.

Count. This young gentlewoman had a father,

1 Dressed.

(O, that had! how sad a passage 'tis!) whose skill was almost as great as his honesty; had it stretched so far, would have made nature immortal, and death should have play for lack of work. 'Would, for the king's sake, he were living!
I think, it would be the death of the king's disease. [madam?] Laf. How called you the man you speak of,
C. He was famous, sir, in his profession, and it was his great right to be so: Gerard de Narbon.
Laf. He was excellent, indeed, madam; the king very lately spoke of him, admiringly, and mourningly; he was skilful enough to have lived still, if knowledge could be set up against mortality.—Was this gentlewoman the daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Count. His sole child, my lord; and bequeathed to my overlooking. I have those hopes of her good, that her education promises; her dispositions she inherits, which make fair gifts fairer;
for where an unclean mind carries virtuous qualities, there commendations go with pity, they are virtues and traitors too: in her they are the better for their simplicity; she derives her honesty, and achieves her goodness.

Laf. Your commendations, madam, get from her tears.

1 That I liked.
Look bleak in the cold wind; withal, full oft we see
Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.

Par. Save you, fair queen.

Hel. And you, monarch. — You're for the court.

There shall your master have a thousand loves,
A mother, and a mistress, and a friend,
A phoenix, captain, and an enemy,
A guide, a goddess, and a sovereign,
A counsellor, a traitress, and a dear;
His humble ambition, proud humility,
His jarring concord, and his discord dulcet,
His faith, his sweet disaster; with a world
Of pretty, fond, adoptive Christendoms,
That blushing Cupid gossips. Now shall he—
I know not what he shall; — God send him well! —
The court's a learning-place; — and he is one—
Par. What one, I faith?

Hel. That I wish well. — 'Tis pity——
Par. What's pity?

Hel. That wishing well had not a body in't,
Which might be felt: that we, the poorer born,
Whose lesser stars do shut us up in wishes,
Might with effects of them follow our friends,
And shew what we alone must think; which never Returns us thanks.

Enter a Page.

Par. Little Helen, farewell: If I can remember thee, I will think of thee at court.

Hel. Monsieur Parolles, you were born under a charitable star.

Par. Under Mars, I.

Hel. I especially think, under Mars.

Par. Why under Mars?

Hel. The wars have so kept you under, that you must needs be born under Mars.

Par. When he was predominant.

Hel. When he was retrograde, I think, rather.

Par. Why think you so?

Hel. You go so much backward, when you fight.

Par. That's for advantage.

Hel. So just running away, when fear proposes the safety: But the composition, that your valour and fear makes in you, is a virtue of a good wing, and I like the wear well.

Par. I am so full of businesses, I cannot answer thee acutely: I will return perfect courtier: in the which, my instruction shall serve to naturalize thee, so thou wilt be capable of a courtier's counsel, and understand what advice shall thrust upon thee; else thou diest in thine unthankfulness, and thine ignorance makes thee away: farewell. Remember thy friends: get thee a good husband, and use him as he uses thee: so farewell. [Exit.

Hel. Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie,
Which we ascribe to heaven: the fated sky
Gives us free scope; only, doth backward pull
Our slow designs, when we ourselves are dull.
What power is it, which mounts my love so high,
That makes me see, and cannot feed mine eye?
The mightiest space in fortune nature brings
To join like likes, and kiss like native things, Impossible be strange attempts, to those 1 Congenial.

Enter Parolles.

One that goes with him: I love him for his sake;
And yet I know him a notorious liar,
Think him a great way fool, solely a coward;
Yet these fix'd evils sit so fit in him,
That they take place, when virtue's steely bones
1 Peculiarity of feature. 2 Countenance.
That weigh their pains in sense; and do suppose,
What hath been cannot be: Who ever strove
To show her merit, that did miss her love?
The king's disease—my project may deceive me,
But my intents are fix'd, and will not leave me.

[Exit.

SCENE II.

PARIS. A ROOM IN THE KING'S PALACE.

Flourish of Cornets. Enter the King of France with letters; Lords and others attending.

King. The Florentines and Senoys¹ are by the ears;
Having fought with equal fortune, and continue
A braving war.

1 Lord. So 'tis reported, sir.

King. Nay, 'tis most credible; we have received a certainty, vouch'd from our cousin Austria,
With caution, that the Florentine will move us
For speedy aid; wherein our dearest friend
Prejudicates the business, and would seem
To have us make denial.

1 Lord. His love and wisdom,
Approv'd so to your majesty, may please
For ampest credence.

King. He hath arm'd our answer,
And Florence is denied before he comes:

Yet, for our gentlemen, that mean to see
The Tuscan service, freely have they leave
To stand on either part.

2 Lord. It may well serve
A nursery to our gentry, who are sick
For breathing and exploit.

King. What's he comes here?

Enter Bertram, Lofeu, and Parolles.

1 Lord. It is the Count Rousillon, my good lord,
Young Bertram.

King. Youth, thou bear'st thy father's face;
Frank nature, rather curious than in haste, [parts
Hath well compos'd thee. Thy father's moral Mayst thou inherit too! Welcome to Paris.

Ber. My thanks and duty are your majesty's.

K. I would I had that corporal soundness now
As when thy father, and myself, in friendship
First try'd our soldiership! He did look far Into the service of the time, and was
Discipl'd of the bravest: he lasted long;
But on us both did haggis age steal on,
And wore us out of act. It much repairs me
To talk of your good father: In his youth
He had the wit, which I can well observe
To-day in our young lords; but they may jest,
Till their own scorn return to them unnoticed,
Ere they can hide their levity in honour.
So like a courtier, contempt nor bitterness
Were in his pride or sharpness; if they were,
His equal had awak'd them; and his honour,
Clock to itself, knew the true minute when
Exception bid him speak, and, at this time,
His tongue obey'd his hand: who were below him
He us'd as creatures of another place;
And bow'd his eminent top to their low ranks,
Making them proud of his humility,
In their poor praise he humbled: Such a man
Might be a copy to these younger times;

¹ Siennese.

Which, follow'd well, would demonstrate them
But goers backward. [now

Ber. His good remembrance, sir,
Lies richer in your thoughts, than on his tomb;
So in approval lives not his epitaph,
As in your royal speech.

King. 'Would I were with him! He would always say,
(Methinks, I hear him now; his plausible words
He scatter'd not in ears, but grafted them,
To grow there, and to bear,)—Let me not live,—
Thus his good melancholy oft began,
On the catastrophe and heel of Pastime,
When it was out,—let me not live, quoth he,
After my frame lacks oil, to be the stuff
Of younger spirits, whose apprehensive senses
All but new things disdain; whose judgments are Mere fathers of their garments; whose constancies
Expire before their fashions:—This he wish'd:
I, after him, do after him wish too,
Since I, nor wax, nor honey, can bring home,
I quickly were dissolved from my hive,
To give some labourers room.

2 Lord. You are lov'd, sir;
They, that least lend it you, shall lack you first.

K. I fill a place, I know't.—If how long is't, count,
Since the physician at your father's died?

He was much fam'd.

Ber. Some six months since, my lord.

King. If he were living, I would try him yet;—
Lend me an arm; the rest have worn me out
With several applications: nature and sickness
Debate it at their leisure. Welcome, count;
My son's no dearer.

Ber. Thank your majesty.

[Exeunt. Flourish.

SCENE III.—ROUSILLON. A ROOM IN THE COUNTRESS'S PALACE.

Enter Countess, Steward, and Clown.

Count. I will now hear: what say you of this gentlewoman?

Stew. Madam, the care I have had to even your content,² I wish might be found in the calender of my past endeavours; for then we wound our modesty, and make foul the clearness of our descrygings, when of ourselves we publish them.

Count. What does this knave here? Get you gone, sirrah: The complaints, I have heard of you, I do not all believe: 'tis my slowness, that I do not: for, I know, you lack not folly to commit them, and have ability enough to make such knaveryes yours.

Clo. 'Tis not unknown to you, madam, I am a poor fellow.

Count. Well, sir.

Clo. No, madam, 'tis not so well, that I am poor; though many of the rich perish: But, if I may have your ladyship's good will to go to the world,² Isbel the woman and I will do as we may.

Count. Wilt thou needs be a beggar?

Clo. I do beg your good will in this case.

Count. In what case?

Clo. In Isbel's case, and mine own. Service is no heritage: and, I think, I shall never have the ² Approval.  2 Act to your desires. ³ To be married.
blessing of God, till I have issue; for, they say, bearm's are blessings.

Co. Tell me thy reason why thou wilt marry.

Clo. My poor body, madam, requires it: I am driven on by the flesh; and he must needs go, that the devil drives.

Count. Is this all your worship's reason?

Clo. Faith, madam, I have other holy reasons, such as they are.

Count. May the world know them?

Clo. I have been, madam, a wicked creature; as you and all flesh and blood are: and, indeed, I do marry, that I may repent.

Co. Thy marriage, sooner than thy wickedness.

Clo. I am out of friends, madam; and I hope to have friends for my wife's sake.

Co. Such friends are thin enemies, knave.

Cl. You are shallow, madam; e'en great friends.

Count. Get you gone, sir; I'll talk with you more anon.

Stew. May it please you, madam, that he bid Helen come to you; of her I am to speak.

Count. Sirrah, tell my gentlewoman, I would speak with her; Helen I mean.

Clo. [Singing.] Was this fair face the cause,
Quoth she,
Why the Grecians sacked Troy?
Fond done, done fond,
Was this king Priam's joy?
With that she sighed as she stood,
With that she sighed as she stood,
And gave this sentence then;
Among nine bad if one be good,
Among nine bad if one be good.
There's yet one good in ten.

Count. What, one good in ten? you corrupt the song, sirrah.

Clo. One good woman in ten, madam; which is a purifying o' the song: 'Would Fortune serve the world so all the year! we 'd find no fault with the tythe-woman. One in ten quoth a' an we might have a good woman born but every blazing star, or at an earthquake, 'twould mend the lottery well; a man may draw his heart out, ere he pluck one.

Count. You'll be gone, sir knave, and do as I command you?

Clo. That man should be at woman's command, and yet no hurt done!—Though honesty be no puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the surmise of humility over the black gown of a big heart.—I am going forsooth: the business is for Helen to come hither. [Exit Clown.

Count. Well, now.

Stew. I know, madam, you love your gentlewoman entirely.

Count. Indeed, I do; her father bequeathed her to me; and she herself, without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much love as she finds; there is more owing her, than is paid; and more shall be paid her, than she'll demand.

Stew. Madam, I was very late more near her than, I think, she wished me: alone she was, and did communicate to herself, her own words to her own ears: she thought, I dare vow for her, they touched not any stranger sense. Her matter was, she loved your son: Fortune, she said, was no goddess, that had put such difference betwixt their two estates; Love, no god, that would not extend his might, only where qualities were level: Diana, no queen of virgins, that would suffer her poor knight to be surprised, without rescue, in the first assault, or ransom afterwards: This she delivered in the most bitter touch of sorrow, that c' e I heard virgin exclaim in: which I held my duty, speedily to acquaint you withal; sithence, in the loss that may happen, it concerns you something to know it.

Count. You have thrashed this honestly; keep it to yourself: many lik'd to hear me of this before, which hung so tottering in the balance, that I could neither believe, nor misdoubt: Pray you, leave me; stall this in your bosom; and I thank you for your honest care: I will speak with you further anon. [Exit Steward.

Enter Helena.

C. Even so it was with me, when I was young: If we are nature's, these are ours; this thorn Doth to our rose of youth rightly belong;

Our blood to us, this to our blood is born;
It is the show and seal of nature's truth,
Where love's strong passion is impress'd in
By our remembrances of days foregone; [youth:
Such were our faults:—or then we thought them
Her eye is sick on't; I observe her now. [none.

Hel. What is your pleasure, madam?

Count. You know, Helen, I am a mother to you.

Hel. Mine honourable mistress.

Count. Nay, a mother;
Why not a mother? When I said, a mother,
Methought you saw a serpent: What's in mother,
That you start at it? I say, I am your mother:
And put you in the catalogue of those
That were enwormed mine: 'Tis often seen,
Adoption strives with nature; and choice breeds
A native slip to us from foreign seeds;
You ne'er oppress'd me with a mother's groan,
Yet I express to you a mother's care:—
Gramercy, maiden! does it curd thy blood,
To say, I am thy mother? What's the matter,
That this distemper'd messenger of wet,
The many-colour'd Iris, rounds thine eye?
Why?—that you are my daughter?

Hel. That I am not.

Count. I say, I am your mother.

Hel. Pardon, madam;
The Count Roussillon cannot be my brother:
I am from humble, he from honour'd name;
No note upon my parents, his all noble;
My master, my dear lord he is; and I
His servant live, and will his vassal die:
He must not be my brother.

Count. Nor I your mother?

Hel. You are my mother, madam: 'Would you were (So that my lord, your son, were not my brother,)
Indeed, my mother!—or were you both our mothers,
So I were not his sister: Can't no other,
But I, your daughter, he must be my brother?

Count. Yes, Helen, you might be my daughter-in-law;
I hope you mean it not! daughter, and mother

1 Children, 2 Foolishly.
So strive upon your pulse: What, pale again?
My fear hath catch’d your fondness: Now I see
The mystery of your loneliness, and find
Your salt tears’ head.2 Now to all sense ‘tis gross,
You love my son; invention is ash’d.
Against the proclamation of thy passion,
To say thou dost not: therefore tell me true;
But tell me then, ‘tis so:—for, look, thy cheeks
Confess it, one to the other; and thine eyes
See it so grossly shewn in thy behaviour,
That in their kind they speak it; only sin
And perversity tie thy tongue,
That truth should be suspected: Speak, is’t so?
If it be so, you have wound a goodly clue:
If it be not, forswear’t: how’er, I charge thee,
As heaven shall work in me for thine avail,
To tell me truly.

Hel. Good madam, pardon me!
Count. Do you love my son?
Hel. Your pardon, noble mistress!
Count. Love you my son?
Hel. Do not you o’er him, madam?
Count. Go not about; my love hath in’t a bond,
Whereof the world takes note: come, come, disclose
The state of your affection; for your passions
Have to the full appear’d.

Hel. Then, I confess,
Here on my knee, before high heaven and you,
That before you, and next unto high heaven,
I love your son:—
My friends were poor, but honest; so’s my love.
Be not offended; for it hurts not him,
That he is lov’d of me: I follow him not
By any token of presump’tuous suit;
Nor would I have him, till I do deserve him;
Yet never know how that desert should be.
I know I love in vain, strive against hope;
Yet, in this captious and intenible sieve,
I still pour in the waters of my love,
And lack not to lose still: thus, Indian-like,
Religious in mine error, I adore
The sun, that looks upon his worshipper,
But knows of him no more. My dearest madam,
Let not your hate encounter with my love,
For loving where you do: but, if yourself,
Whose aged honour cites a virtuous youth,
Did ever, in so true a flame of liking,
Wish chastely, and love dearly, that your Dian
Was both herself and love; O then, give pity
To her, whose state is such, that cannot choose
But lend and give, where she is sure to lose;
That seeks not to find that her search implies,
But, riddle-like, lives sweetly where she dies.
Co. Had you not lately an intent, speak truly,
To go to Paris?

Hel. Madam, I had.
Count. Wherefore? tell true.
Hel. I will tell true; by grace itself, I swear.
You know, my father left me some prescriptions
Of rare and prov’d effects, such as his reading,
And manifest experience, had collected
For general sovereignty; and that he will’d me
In heartful reserve to bestow them
As notes, whose faculties inclusive were
More than they were in note:4 amongst the rest,
There is a remedy, approv’d, set down,
To cure the desperate languishes, whereof
The king is render’d lost.

Count. This was your motive
For Paris, was it? speak.
*H. My lord your son made me to think of this;
Else Paris, and the medicine, and the king,
Had, from the conversation of my thoughts,
Haply, been absent then.

Count. But think you, Helen,
If you should tender your supposed aid,
He would receive it? He and his physicians
Are of a mind; he, that they cannot help him;
They, that they cannot help: How shall they
A poor unlearned virgin, when the schools,[credit
Embowell’d of their doctrine,] have left off
The danger to itself?

Hel. There’s something hints,
More than my father’s skill, which was the great-
Of his profession, that his good receipt est
Shall, for my legacy, be sanctified
Honour
By the luckiest stars in heaven: and, would your
But give me leave to try success, I’d venture
The well-lost life of mine on his grace’s cure,
By such a day, and hour.

Count. Dost thou believe’t?
Hel. Ay, madam, knowingly.
Love. Co. Why, Helen, thou shalt have my leave, and Means, and attendants, and my loving greetings
To those of mine in court; I’ll stay at home,
And pray God’s blessing into thy attempt:
Be gone to-morrow; and be sure of this.
What I can help thee to, thou shalt not miss.
[Exit.]

Act Second.

SCENE I.

PARI S. A ROOM IN THE KING’S PALACE.

Flourish. Enter King, with young Lords taking leave for the Florentine war; Bertram, Parolles, and Attendants.

King. Farewell, young lord, these warlike principles
[ farewell:—
Do not throw from you:— and you, my lord,
Share the advice betwixt you; if both gain all,
The gift doth stretch itself as ‘tis receiv’d,
And is enough for both.
1* Lord.* It is our hope, sir,
After well-enter’d soldiers, to return
And find your grace in health.

King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart
Will not confess he owes⁵ the malady
That doth my life besiege. Farewell, younglords;
Whether I live or die, be you the sons
Of worthy Frenchmen: let higher Italy
(Those bated, that inherit but the fall
Of the last monarchy⁶) see, that you come
Not too in honour, but to wed; when [seek,
The bravest questant shrinks, find what you
That fame may cry you loud; I say, farewell.
2* Lord.* Health, at your bidding, serve your majesty!

King. Those girls of Italy, take heed of them:
1* Skill.* 2* Haa.* 3* The Roman empire.* 4* Seeker.*
They say, our French lack language to deny,
If they demand: beware of being captives,
Before you serve.

Both. Our hearts receive your warnings.

King. Farewell. — Come hither to me.

[The King retires to a couch.

1 Lord. O my sweet lord, that you will stay behind us!

Par. 'Tis not his fault; the spark —

Par. Most admirable: I have seen those wars.

Ber. I am commanded here, and kept a coil with —

Too young, and the next year, and 'tis too early.

Par. An thy mind stand to it, boy, steal away

Ber. I shall stay here [bravely.

Creaking my shoes on the plain masonry,
Till honour be bought up, and no sword worn,
But one to dance with! By heaven, I'll steal away.

1 Lord. There's honour in the theft.
Par.

2 Lord. I am your accessory; and so farewell.
Ber. I grow to you, and our parting is a tortured body.

1 Lord. Farewell, captain.

2 Lord. Sweet monsieur Parolles!

Par. Noble heroes, my sword and yours are kin. Good sparks and lustrious, a word, good metals: — You shall find in the regiment of the Spirit, one Captain Spurio, with his cicatrice, an emblem of war, here on his sinister cheek; it was this very sword entrenched it: say to him, I live; and observe his reports for me.

2 Lord. We shall, noble captain.

Par. Mars dote on you for his novices!

[Exeunt Lords.] What will you do?

Ber. Stay; the king. — [Seeing him rise.

Par. Use a more spacious ceremony to the noble lords; you have restrained yourself within the list of too cold an audience; be more expressive to them: For they wear themselves in the cap of the time, there, do muster true gait, eat, speak, and move under the influence of the most received star; and though the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed; after them, and take a more dilated farewell.

Ber. And I will do so.

Par. Worthy fellows; and like to prove most sinewy sword-men.

[Exeunt Bertram and Parolles.

Enter Laffew.

Laff. Pardon, my lord [Kneeling.] for me and my tiding.

King. I'll fee thee to stand up.

Laff. Then here's a man
Stands, that has brought his pardon. I would, you
Had kneel'd my lord, to ask me mercy; and
That, at my bidding, you could so stand up.

King. I would I had; so I had broke thy pate,
And ask'd thee mercy for't.

Laff. Goodfaith, across.

But, my good lord, 'tis thus; Will you be cur'd
Of your infirmity?

King. No.

Laff. O, will you eat

No grapes, my royal fox? yes, but you will,
My noble grapes, an if my royal fox
Could reach them: I have seen a medicine,
That's able to breathe life into a stone;
Quicken a rock, and make you dance canary,
With spritefully fire and motion; whose simple
Is powerful to raise king Pepin, nay, [touch
To give great Charlemain a pen in his hand,
And write to her a love-line.

King. What her is this?

Laff. Why, doctor she: My lord, there's one arriv'd,

[Exeunt Laffew, and Laffew with Helena.

Laff. Nay, come your ways.

King. This haste hath wings indeed.

Laff. Nay, come your ways;
This is his majesty, say your mind to him:
A traitor you do look like; but such traitors
His majesty seldom fears: I am Cressid's uncle,
That dare leave two together; fare you well.

[Exit. Laffew.

King. Now, fair one, does your business follow us?

Hel. Ay, my good lord. Gerard de Narbon was
My father; in what he did profess, well found.

King. I knew him.

Hel. The rather will I spare my praises towards him;
Knowing him, is enough. On his bed of death
Many receipts he gave me; chiefly one,
Which, as the dearest issue of his practice,
And of his old experience the only darling,
He bade me store up, as a triple eye,
Safer than mine own two, more dear; I have so:
And, hearing your high majesty is touch'd
With that malignant cause wherein the honour
Of my dear father's gift stands chief in power,
I come to tender it, and my appliance,
With all bound humbleness.

King. We thank you, maiden,
But may not so credulous of cure,—
When our most learned doctors leave us; and
The congregated college have concluded
That labouring art can never ransom nature
From her inable estate,—I say we must not
So stain our judgment, or corrupt our hope,
To prostitute our past-cure malady
To empricks; or to dissever so

1 A female physician. 2 Pandars. 3 Third. 4 Well based. 6 Unaided.
Our great self and our credit, to esteem
A senseless help, when help past sense we deem.

King. I cannot give thee less, to be call'd grateful:
Thou thought'st to help me; and such thanks
As one near death to those that wish him live:
But what at full I know, thou know'st no part;
I knowing all my peril, thou no art.

Hel. What I can do, can do no hurt to try,
Since you set up your rest 'gainst remedy:
He that of greatest works is finisher,
Oft does them by the weakest minister:
So holy writ in babes hath judgment shown,
When judges have been babes, Great floods have flown
From simple sources; and great seas have dried,
When miracles have by the greatest been denied.
Oft expectation fails, and most oft there
Where most it promises; and oft it hits,
Where hope is coldest, and despair most sits.

King. I must not hear thee; fare thee well,
kind maid;
Thy pains not us'd, must by thyself be paid;
Proffers, not took, reap thanks for their reward.

Hel. Inspired merit so by breath is bard'd:
It is not so with him that all things knows,
As 'tis with us that square our guess by shows:
But most it is presumption in us, when
The help of heaven we count the act of men.
Dear sir, to my endeavours give consent;
Of heaven, not me, make an experiment.
I am not an impostor, that proclaim
Myself against the level of mine ain;
But know I think, and think I know most sure,
My art is not past power, nor you past cure.

K. Art thou so confident? Within what space
Hop'st thou my cure?

Hel. The greatest grace lending grace,
Ere twice the horses of the sun shall bring
Their fiery torcher; his diurnal ring;
Ere twice in murk and occidental damp
Moist Hesperus hath quench'd his sleeply lamp;
Or four and twenty times the pilot's glass
Hath told the thievish minutes how they pass;
What is infirm from the sound part shall fly,
Health shall live free, and sickness freely die.

King. Upon thy certainty and confidence,
What dar'st thou venture?

Hel. Tax of impudence,—
And of rash boldness, a divulged shame,—
Traduc'd by odious ballads; my maiden's name
Scar'd otherwise; no worse of worst extended,
With vilest torture let my life be ended.

King. Methinks, in thee some blessed spirit doth speak;
His powerful sound, within an organ weak:
And what impossibility would slay
In common sense, sense saves another way.
Thy life is dear; for all, that life can rate
Worth name of life, in thee hath esteem;
Youth, beauty, wisdom, courage, virtue, all
That happiness and prime can happy call:
Thou this to hazard, needs must intimate
Skill infinite, or monstrous desperate.

Sweet practiser, thy physick I will try;
That ministers thine own death, if I do.

Hel. If I break time, or finch in property
Of what I spoke, unpractis'd let me die;
And well deserv'd: Not helping, death's my fee;
But, if I help, what do you promise me?

King. Make thy demand.

Hel. But will you make it even?

King. Ay, by my sceptre and my hopes of heaven.

[hand,
Hel. Then shall thou give me, with thy kingly
What husband in thy power I will command:
Exempted be from me the arrogance
To choose from forth the royal blood of France;
My low and humble name to propagate
With any branch or image of thy state:
But such a one, thy vassal, whom I know
Is free for me to ask, thee to bestow.

K. Here is my hand; the promises observ'd,
Thy will by my performance shall be serv'd,
So make the choice of thine own time; for I,
Thy resolv'd patient, on thee still rely.
More should I question thee, and more I must;
Though more to know, could not be more to trust;

From whence thou can'st, how tended on.—But Unquestion'd welcome, and undoubted blest.—
Give me some help here, ho!—If thou proceed
As high as word, my deed shall match thy deed.

[Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—ROUSILLON. A ROOM IN THE COUNTLESS'S PALACE.

Enter Countess and Clown.

Count. Come on, sir; I shall now put you to the height of your breeding.

Clo. I will show myself highly fed, and slowly taught: I know my business is but to the court.

Count. To the court! why, what place make you special, when you put off that with such contempt? But to the court.

Clo. Truly, madam, if nature have lent a man any manners, he may easily put it off at court;
he that cannot make a leg, put off his cap, kiss his hand, and say nothing, has neither leg, hands, lip, nor cap; and, indeed, such a fellow, to say precisely, were not for the court: but, for me,
I have an answer will serve all men.

Co. Will your answer serve fit to all questions?

Clo. As fit as ten groats for the hand of an attorney, as a pancake for Shrove-Tuesday, or a morris for May-day.

Count. Have you, I say, an answer of such fitness for all questions?

Clo. From below your duke, to beneath your constable, it will fit any question.

Count. It must be an answer of most monstrous size, that must fit all demands.

Clo. But a trifle neither, in good faith, if the learned should speak truth of it: here it is,
and all that belongs to't: Ask me, if I am a courtier;
it shall do you no harm to learn.

Count. To be young again, if we could: I will be a fool in question, hoping to be the wiser by your answer. I pray you, sir, are you a courtier?

Clo. O, sir,—There's a simple putting off;
—more, more, a hundred of them.

230 SHAKESPEARE'S DRAMATIC WORKS. ACT II.
Count. Sir, I am a poor friend of yours, that loves you.

Clo. O, sir.—Thick, thick, spare not me.

Count. I think, sir, you can eat none of this homely meat.

Clo. O, sir.—Nay, put me to't, I warrant you.

Count. You were lately whipped, sir, as I Clo. O, sir.—Spare not me.

[thought.] Count. Do you cry, O, Sir, at your whipping, and spare not me? Indeed, your O, Sir, is very sequent to your whipping; you would answer very well to a whipping, if you were but bound to't.

Clo. I ne'er had worse luck in my life, in my —O, Sir; I see, things may serve long, but not serve ever.

Count. I play the noble housewife with the time, to entertain it so merrily with a fool.

Clo. O, sir.—Why, 'tis serves well again.

Co. An end, sir, to your business: Give Helen And urge her to a present answer back: [this, Commend me to my kinsmen, and my son; This is not much.

Clo. Not much commendation to them.

Count. Not much employment for you; You understand me?

SCENE III.

PARIS. A ROOM IN THE KING'S PALACE.

Enter Bertram, Lafew, and Parolles.

Laf. They say, miracles are past; and we have our philosophical persons, to make modern and familiar things, supernatural and causeless. Hence is it, that we make trifles of terrors; ensconcing ourselves into seeming knowledge, when we should submit ourselves to an unknown fear.

Par. Why,'tis the rarest argument of wonder, that hath shot out in our latter times.

Ber. And so 'tis.

Laf. To be relinquished of the artists.—

Par. So I say; both of Galen and Paracelsus.

L. Of all the learned and authentic fellows,—

Par. Right, so I say.

Laf. That gave him out inurable,—

Par. Why, there's; so say I too.

Laf. Not to be helped,—

Par. Right: as 'twere, a man assured of an—

Laf. Uncertain life, and sure death.

Par. Just, you say well; so would I have said.

Laf. I may truly say, it is a novelty to the world. [showing.]

Par. It is: indeed, if you will have it in you shall read it in—What do you call there?—

Laf. A showing of a heavenly effect in an earthly actor.

P. That's it I would have said; the very same.

Laf. Why, your dolphin is not lustier: 'fore me I speak in respect—

Par. Nay, 'tis strange, 'tis very strange, that is the brief and the tedious of it: and he is of a most factorious spirit, that will not acknowledge it to be the —

---

1 Ordinary.
2 Authoritative.
3 The Dauphin.
4 Wicked.

Laf. Very hand of heaven.

Par. Ay, so I say.

Laf. In a most weak—

Par. And debile minister, great power, great transcendence: which should, indeed, give us a further use to be made, than alone the recovery of the king, as to be—

Laf. Generally thankful.

Enter King, Helena, and Attendants.

Par. I would have said it; you say well.

Here comes the king.

Laf. Lustick, as the Dutchman says: I'll like a mad the better, whilst I have a tooth in my head: Why, he's able to lead her a coranto. 3

Par. Is not this Helen?

Laf. I think so.

King. Go, call before me all the lords in court.—

[Exit an Attendant.

Sit, my preserver, by thy patient's side; And with this healthful hand, whose banish'd Thou hast repeal'd, a second time receive [sense The confirmation of my promise's gift, Which but attends thy naming.

Enter Several Lords.

Fair maid, send forth thine eye: this youthful parcel Of noble bachelors stand at my bestowing. O'er whom both sovereign power and father's I have to use: thy frank election make; [voice Thou hast power to choose, and they none to forsake. [mistress Helena To each of you one fair and virtuous fall, when love please—marry, to each, but one! Laf. I'd give you Curtal, and his furniture, My mouth no more were broken than these And write as little-beard. [boys', King. Peruse them well: Not one of those but had a noble father.

Hel. Gentlemen, [health.

Heaven hath through me restor'd the king to All. We understand it, and thank heaven for you.

H. I am a simple maid; and therein wealthiest. That, I protest, I simply am a maid:— Please it your majesty, I have done already: The blushes in my cheeks thus whisper me, We blush that thou shouldest choose; but be refus'd.

Let the white death sit on thy cheek for ever; We'll ne'er come there again.

King. Make choice; and, see, Who shuns thy love, shuns all his love in me. Hel. Now, Dian, from thy altar do I fly; And to imperial Love, that god most high, Do my sighs stream—Sir, will you hear my suit? 1 Lord. And grant it.

Hel. Thanks, sir; all the rest is mute.

Laf. I had rather be in this choice, than throw ames-ace for my life.

Hel. The honour, sir, that flames in your fair Before I speak, too threateningly replies: [eyes, Love make your fortunes twenty times above Her that so wishes, and her humble love.

2 Lord. No better, if you please.

1 Feeble. 2 Sprightly dance. 3 A double ace.
4 A docked horse.

---
Hel. My wish receive,
Which great love grant! and so I take my leave.
Laf. Do all they deny her? An they were sons of mine, I'd have them whipped.
Hel. Be not afraid [To a Lord.] that I your hand should take;
I'll never do you wrong for your own sake;
Blessing upon your vows! and in your bed,
Find fairer fortune, if you ever wed!
Laf. These boys are boys of ice, they'll none have her.
H. You are too young, too happy, and too good.
4 Lord. Fair one, I think not so.
L. There's some grape yet,—I am sure thy father drank wine. —But if thou be'st not an ass, I am a youth of fourteen; I have known thee already.
Hel. I dare not say, I take you; [To Bertram.] but I give Me and my service, ever whilst I live,
Into your guiding power.—This is the man.
King. Why then, young Bertram, take her,
she's thy wife.
Ber. My wife, my liege? I shall beseech your In such a business give me leave to use
The help of mine own eyes.
King. Know'st thou, Bertram,
What she has done for me?
Ber. Yes, my good lord;
But never hope to know why I should marry her.
King. Thou know'st she has rais'd me from my sickly bed.
Ber. But follows it, my lord, to bring me down
Must answer for your rising? I know her well;
She had her breeding at my father's charge:
A poor physician's daughter my wife!—Disdain
Rather corrupt me ever! [which King.]Tis only title thou disdain'st in her, the;
I can build up. Strange is it that our bloods,
Of colour, weight, and heat, pour'd all together,
Would quite confound distinction, yet stand off
In differences so mighty: If she be
All that is virtuous, (save what thou dislik'st,
A poor physician's daughter,) thou dislik'st,
Of virtue for the name: but do not so:
From lowest place when virtuous things proceed,
The place is dignified by the doer's deed:
Where great additions still swell, and virtue none,
It is a dropped honour: good alone
Is good, without a name; virility is so:
The property by what it is should go,
Not by the title. She is young, wise, fair;
In these to nature she's immediate heir;
And these breed honour: that is honour's scorn,
Which challenges itself as honour's born,
And is not like the sire: Honour's best thrive,
When rather from our acts we them derive
Than our foregoers: the mere word's a slave,
Debauch'd on every tomb; on every grave,
A lying trophy, and as off is dumb,
Where dust, and deep oblivion, is the tomb
Of honour'd bones indeed. What should be said?
If thou canst like this creature as a maid,
I can create the rest: virtue, and she,
Is her own dowry; honour and wealth from me,
Ber. I cannot love her, nor will strive to do't.
King. Thou wrong'st thyself, if thou shouldst strive to choose.

1 Titles.

H. That you are well restor'd, my lord, I'm
Let the rest go.

K. My honour's at the stake; which to defeat,
I must produce my power: Here, take her hand,
I would scornful, unworthy this good gift;
That dost in vile misprision1 shackle up
My love and her desert; that canst not dream,
We, poising us in her defective scale,
Shall weigh the beam: that wilt not know,
It is in us to plant thine honour, where
We please to have it grow: Check thy contempt:
Obey our will, which travaills in thy good:
Believe not thy disdain, but presently
Do thine own fortunes that obedience right
Which both thy duty owes, and our power claims;
Or I will throw thee from my care for ever,
Into the staggerers, and the careless lapse [bate,
Of youth and ignorance: both my revenge and Loosing upon thee in the name of justice,
Without all terms of pity: Speak; thine answer.
Ber. Pardon, my gracious lord: for I submit
My fancy to your eyes: When I consider,
What great creation, and what dole of honour,
Flies where you bid it, I find, that she, which late
Was in my nobler thoughts most base, is now
The praised of the king; who, so ennobled,
Is, as 'twere, born so.

King. Take her by the hand,
And tell her, she is thine: to whom I promise
A counterpoise; if not to thy estate,
A balance more replete.

Ber. I take her hand.
K. Good fortune, and the favour of the king,
Smile upon this contract; whose ceremony
Shall seem expedient on the new-born brief.
And be perform'd to-night: the solemn feast
Shall more attend upon the coming space,
Expecting absent friends. As thou lov'st her,
Thy love's to me religious; else, does err.

[Exeunt King, Bertram, Helena, Lords, and Attendants.

Laf. Do you hear, monsieur? a word with you.
Par. Your pleasure, sir?
Laf. Your lord and master did well to make his recantation.
Par. Recantation?—my lord?—my master?
Laf. Ay; Is it not a language, I speak?
Par. A most harsh one; and not to be understood without bloody succeeding. My master?
L. Are you companion to the Count Rousillon?
P. To any count; to all counts; to what is man.
Laf. To what is count's man; count's master is of another style.
Par. You are too old, sir; let it satisfy you,
you are too old.
Laf. I must tell thee, sirrah, I write man; to which title age cannot bring thee.
Par. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.
Laf. I did think thee, for two ordinaries,2 to be a pretty wise fellow; thou didst make tolerable vent of thy travel: it might pass: yet the scars, and the banneters,3 about thee, did manifoldly dissuade me from believing thee a vessel of too great a burden. I have now found thee; when I lose thee again, I care not: yet art thou good for nothing but taking up; and that thou art scarce worth.

1 Contempt. 2 Twice at dinner. 3 Flaga.
Par. Had'st thou not the privilege of antiquity upon thee. —

Laf. Do not plunge thyself too far in anger, lest thou hasten thy trial; which if — mercy on thee for a hen! So my good window of lattice, fare thee well: thy casement I need not open, for I look through thee. Give me thy hand.

Par. My lord, you give me most egregious indignity.

Laf. Ay, with all my heart; and thou art worthy of it.

Par. I have not, my lord, deserved it.

Laf. Yes, good faith, every dram of it; and I will not bate thee a scruple.

Par. Well, I shall be wiser.

Laf. E'en as soon as thou canst, for thou hast to pull at a snare of the contrary. If ever thou be'st bound in thy scarf, and beaten, thou shalt find what it is to be proud of thy bondage. I have a desire to hold my acquaintance with thee, or rather my knowledge; that I may say, in the default,1 he is a man I know.

Par. My lord, you do me most insupportable vexation.

Laf. For doing I am past; as I will by thee, in what motion age will give me leave. [Exit. Par. Well, thou hast a son shall take this disgrace off me; scurvy, old lord! — Well, I must be patient; there is noettering of authority. I'll beat him, by my life, if I can meet him with any convenience; and he were double and double a lord. I'll have no more pity of his age, than I would have of — I'll beat him, as if I could but meet him again.

Re-enter Lofeu.

Laf. Sirrah, your lord and master's married, there's news for you; you have a new mistress.

Par. I most uncongenially beseech your lordship to make some reservation of your wrongs: He is my good lord: whom I serve above, is my master.

Laf. The devil it is, that's thy master. Why dost thou garter up thy arms of this fashion? dost make hose of thy sleeves; do other servants so? By mine honour, if I were but two hours younger, I'd beat thee; methinks, thou art a general offence, and every man should beat thee. I think, thou wast created for men to breathe2 themselves upon thee.

Par. This is hard and undeserved measure, my lord.

Laf. Go to, sir; you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernel out of a pomegranate; you are a vagabond, and no true traveller: you are more saucy with lords, and honourable personages, than the heraldry of your birth and virtue gives you commission. You are not worth another word, else I'd call you knave. I leave you.

[Exit.]

Enter Bertram.

Par. Good, very good; it is so then. — Good, very good; let it be concealed a while.

Ber. Undone, and forfeited to cares for ever!

Par. What is the matter, sweet-heart?

Ber. O my Paroles, they have married me:—

1 At need.

2 Exercise.

Although before the solemn priest I have sworn, I'll to the Tuscan wars and never bed her.

P. Frances is a dog hole, and yet no more merits The tread of a man's foot: to the war!

B. There's letters from my mother; what the I know not yet. [Import is.

Par. Ay, that would be known; To the wars, my boy, to the wars!

He wears his honour in a box unseen,

That hugs his kicky-wicky,1 here at home;

Which should sustain the board and high curvet Of Mars's fiery steed: To other regions;

France is a stable; we that dwell in't jades;

Therefore to the war!

Ber. It shall be so: I'll send her to my house,

Acquaint my mother with my hate to her,

And wherefore I am fled; write to the king

That which I durst not speak: His present gift

Shall furnish me to those Italian fields,

Where noble fellows strike: War is no strife,

To the dark2 house, and the detested wife.

Par. Will this capricio hold in thee, art sure?

Ber. Go with me to my chamber, and advise me,

I'll send her straight away: To-morrow

I'll to the wars, she to her single sorrow.

Par. Why, these balls bound; there's noise in it. — 'Tis hard;

A young man, married, is a man that's marr'd:

Therefore away, and leave her bravely: go;

The king has done you wrong; but, hush! 'tis so.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV. — ANOTHER ROOM IN THE SAME.

Enter Helena and Clown.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly: Is she well? Clo. She is not well; but yet she has her health: she's very merry; but yet she is not well: but thanks be given, she's very well, and wants nothing i' the world; but yet she is not well?

Hel. If she be very well, what does she ail, that she's not very well?

Clo. Truly, she's very well, indeed, but for two things.

Hel. What two things?

Clo. One, that she's not in heaven, whither God send her quickly! the other, that she's in earth, from whence God send her quickly!

Enter Paroles.

Par. Bless you, my fortunate lady!

Hel. I hope, sir, I have your good will to have mine own good fortunes.

Par. You had my prayers to lead them on: and to keep them on, have them still. — O, my knife! How does my old lady?

Clo. So that you had her wrinkles, and I her money, I would she did as you say.

Par. Why, I say nothing.

Clo. Marry, you are the wiser man; for many a man's tongue shakes out his master's undoing: To say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is to be a great part of your title; which is within a very little of nothing.

Par. Away, thou'rt a knave.

Clo. You should have said, sir, before a knave

1 Cant term for wife.

2 Gloomy.
thou art a knave; that is, before me thou art a knave: this had been truth, sir.

Par. Go to, thou art a witty fool, I have found thee.

Clo. Did you find me in yourself, sir? or were you taught to find me? The search, sir, was profitable; and much fool may you find in you, even to the world's pleasure, and the increase of laughter.

Par. A good knave, faith, and well fed.—Madam, my lord will go away to-night;
A very serious business calls on him.

The great prerogative and rite of love,
Which, as your due, time claims, he does acknowledge,
But puts it off by a compelled restraint; [ledge;
Whose want, and whose delay, is strewed with sweets,
Which they distil now in the curbed time,
To make the coming hour overflow with joy,
And pleasure drown the brim.

Hel. What's his will else?
Par. That you will take your instant leave o' the king,
And make this haste as your own good proceed—
Strengthen'd with what apology you think [ing,
May it make it probable."

Hel. What more commands he?
Par. That, having this obtain'd, you presently Attend his further pleasure.

Hel. In everything I wait upon his will.
Par. I shall report it so.

Hel. I pray you.—Come, sirrah.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter Laffeu and Bertram.

Laf. But I hope, your lordship thinks not him a soldier.

Ber. Yes, my lord, and of very valiant approbation.

Laf. You have it from his own deliverance.

Ber. And by other warranted testimony.

Laf. Then my dial goes not true; I took this lark for a bunting.

Ber. I do assure you, my lord, he is very great in knowledge, and accordingly valiant.

Laf. I have then sinned against his experience, and transgressed against his valour; and my state that way is dangerous, since I cannot yet find in my heart to repent. Here he comes; I pray you, make us friends, I will pursue the amity.

Enter Parolles.

Par. [To Ber.] These things shall be done, sir.

Laf. Pray you, sir, who's his tailor?

Par. Sir?

Laf. O, I know him well: Ay, sir; he, sir, is a good workman, a very good tailor.

Ber. [Aside to Parolles.] Is she gone to the king?

Par. She is.

Ber. Will she away to-night?

Par. As you'll have her.

Ber. I have writ my letters, caged them in my treasure,
Given order for our horses; and to-night,
When I should take possession of the bride,—

1 Necessity.

Laf. A good traveller is something at the latter end of a dinner; but one that lies three thirds, and uses a known truth to pass a thousand nothings with, should be once heard, and thrice beaten.—Heaven save you, captain.

Ber. Is there any unkindness between my lord and you, monsieur?

Par. I know not how I have deserved to run into my lord's displeasure.

Laf. You have made shift to run into 't, boots and spurs all, and like him that leaped into the custard; and out of it you'll run again, rather than suffer question for your residence.

B. It may be, you have mistaken him, my lord.

Laf. And shall so do ever, though I took him at his prayers. Fare you well, my lord; and believe this of me, there can be no kernel in this light nut; the soul of this man is clothes: trust him not in matter of heavy consequence: I have kept of them tame, and know their natures.—Farewell, monsieur! I have spoken better of you, than you have or will deserve at my hand; but we must do good against evil.

[Exit.

Par. An idle lord, I swear.

Ber. I think so.

Par. Why, do you not know him?

Ber. Yes, I do know him well; and common speech
Gives him a worthy pass. Here comes my clog.

Enter Helena.

Hel. I have, sir, as I was commanded from you,
Spoke with the king, and have procured his leave
For present parting; only, he desires
Some private speech with you.

Ber. I shall obey his will.

You must not marvel, Helena, at my course,
Which holds not colour with the time, nor does
The ministration and required office
On my particular: prepar'd I was not
For such a business; therefore am I found
So much unsettled: This drives me to entreat you,
That presently you take your way for home;
And rather muse, than ask, why I entreat you:
For my respects are better than they seem;
And my appointments have in them a need,
Greater than shows itself, at the first view,
To you that know them not. This to my mother.

[Giving a letter.

'Twill be two days ere I shall see you; so
I leave you to your wisdom.

Hel. Sir, I can nothing say
But that I am your most obedient servant.

Ber. Come, come, no more of that.

Hel. And ever shall
With true observance seek to eke out that,
Wherein toward me my homely stars have fail'd to equal my great fortune.

Ber. Let that go:
My haste is very great: Farewell; lie home.
Hel. Pray, sir, your pardon.

Ber. Well, what would you say?

Hel. I am not worthy of the wealth I owe; 1
Nor dare I say, 'tis mine; and yet it is;
But, like a timorous thief, most fain would steal
What law does vouch mine own.

1 Posses.
Act Third.

SCENE I.

FLORENCE. A ROOM IN THE DUKE'S PALACE.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, attended; two French Lords, and others.

Duke. So that, from point to point, now have you heard The fundamental reasons of this war; Whose great decision hath much blood let forth, And more thirsts after.

Duke. Therefore we marvel much, our cousin France Would, in so just a business, shut his bosom Against our borrowing prayers.

Duke. Good my lord, The reasons of our state I cannot yield, But like a common and an outward man, That the great figure of a council frames By self-unable motion: therefore dare not Say what I think of it; since I have found Myself in my uncertain grounds to fail As often as I guess'd.

Duke. Be it his pleasure.

2. L. But I am sure, the younger of our nature, That surfeit on their ease, will, day by day, Come here for physic.

Duke. Welcome shall they be; And all the honours, that can fly from us, Shall on them settle. You know your places well; When better fall, for your avails they fell: To-morrow on the field. [Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—ROUSILON. A ROOM IN THE COUNTESS'S PALACE.

Enter Countess and Clown.

Count. It hath happened all as I would have had it, save, that he comes not along with her. Clo. By my troth, I take my young lord to be a very melancholy man.

Count. By what observation, I pray you? Clo. Why, he will look upon his boot, and sing; mend the ruff, and sing; ask questions, and sing; pick his teeth, and sing: I know a man that had this trick of melancholy, sold a goodly manor for a song.

Count. Let me see what he writes, and when he means to come. [Opening a letter.

Clo. I have no mind to Isbel, since I was at 1 At the top of the boot.

Count. What have we here? Clo. E'en that you have there. [Exit.

Count. [Reads.] I have sent you a daughter-in-law: she hath recovered the king, and undone me. I have wedded her, not bedded her; and sworn to make the not eternal. You shall hear, I am run away; know it, before the report come. If there be breadth enough in the world, I will hold a long distance.

My duty to you.
Your unfortuniate son,

BERTRAM.

This is not well, rash and unbridled boy, To fly the favours of so good a king; To pluck his indignation on thy head, By the misprision of a maid too virtuous For the contempt of empire.

Re-enter Clown.

Clo. O madam, yonder is heavy news within, between two soldiers and my young lady.

Count. What is the matter?

Clo. Nay, there is some comfort in the news, some comfort; your son will not be kill'd so soon as I thought he would.

Count. Why should he be kill'd?

Clo. So say I madam, if he run away, as I hear he does. Here they come, will tell you more; for my part, I only hear, your son was run away.

[Exit Clown.

Enter Helena and two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Save you, good madam.

Hel. Madam, my lord is gone, for ever gone.

2 Gent. Do not say so. [tlemen,—

Count. Think upon patience. —Pray you, gen- men, I have felt so many quirks of joy and grief, That the first face of neither, on the start, [you? Can woman me unto't: —Where is my son, I pray 2 Gent. Madam, he's gone to serve the Duke of Florence?

We met him thitherward; from thence we came, And after some despatch in hand at court, Thither we bend again. [passport. Hel. Look on this letter, madam; here's my [Reads.] When thou canst get the ring upon my finger, which never shall come off, and show me a child begotten of thy body, that I am father to, then call me husband: but in such a then I write a never.

This is a dreadful sentence.

Count. Brought you this letter, gentlemen? 1 Gent. Ay, madam; And, for the contents' sake, are sorry for our pain.

Count. I pr'ythee, lady, have a better cheer; If thou engrossest all the griefs are thine, Thou robbst me of a joy: He was my son; But I do wash his name out of my blood, And thou art all my child.—Towards Florence 2 Gent. Ay, madam. [is he?
Count. And to be a soldier?
2 Gent. Such is his noble purpose; and, believ't,
The duke will lay upon him all the honour,
That good convenience claims.
1 Gent. Ay, madam, with the swiftest wing of
Hel. [Reads.] Till I have no wife, I have no-thing in France.
'Tis better.
Count. Find you that there?
Hel. Ay, madam.
1 Gent. 'Tis but the boldness of his hand, hapy
His heart was not consenting to. [which Count. Nothing in France, until he have nowife!
There's nothing here that is too good for him,
But only she; and she deserves a lord,
That twenty such rude boys might tend upon,
And call her hourly, mistress. Who was with him?
1 Gent. A servant only, and a gentleman
Which I have sometime known.
Count. Paroles, was't not?
1 Gent. Ay, my good lady, he.
Co. A very tainted fellow, and full of wicked-
My son corrupts a well-deriv'd nature [ness.
With his inducement.
1 Gent. Indeed, good lady,
The fellow has a deal of that, too much,
Which holds him much to have.
Count. You are welcome, gentlemen,
I will entreat you, when you see my son,
To tell him, that his sword can never win
The honour that he loses: more I'll entreat you
Written to bear along.
2 Gent. We serve you, madam,
In that and all your worthiest affairs.
Count. Not so, but as we change our courtesies,
Will you draw near?
[Exit Countess and Gentlemen.
H. Till I have nowife, I have nothing in France.
Nothing in France, until he has no wife!
Thou shalt have none, Rousillon, none in France,
Then hast thou all again. Poor lord! is 't I
That chase thee from thy country, and expose
Those tender limbs of thine to the event
Of the none-sparing war? and is it I [thou
That drive thee from the sportive court, where
Was shot at with fair eyes, to be the mark
Of smoky muskets? O you leaden messengers,
That ride upon the violent speed of fire,
Fly with false aim; move the still-piercing air,
That sings with piercing, do not touch my lord!
Whoever shoots at him, I set him there;
Whoever charges on his forward breast,
I am the cau'tif, that do hold him to it;
And though I kill him not, I am the cause
His death was so effect'd: better 'twere
I met the ravin lion when he roard
With sharp constraint of hunger; better 'twere
That all the miseries, which nature owes,
Were mine at once: No, come thou home, Rousil-
Whence honour but of danger wins a scar, [lon,
As oft it loses all; I will be gone;
My being here it is that holds thee hence:
Shall I stay here to do't? no, no, although
The air of paradise did fan the house,
And angels off'd all: I will be gone:
That pitiful rumour may report my flight.
Scene V.

Without the Walls of Florence.

Aucket aroff. Enter an old Widow of Florence, Diana, Violenta, Mariana, and other Citizens.

Wid. Nay, come; for if they do approach the city, we shall lose all the sight.

Dla. They say, the French count has done most honourable service.

Wid. It is reported that he has taken their greatest commander; and that with his own hand he slew the duke's brother. We have lost our labour; they are gone a contrary way: hark! you may know by their trumpets.

Mar. Come, let's return again, and suffice ourselves with the report of it. Well, Diana, take heed of this French earl! the honour of a maid is her name; and no legacy is so rich as honesty.

Wid. I have told my neighbour, how you have been solicited by a gentleman his companion.

Mar. I know that knave; hang him! one Pardes: a filthy officer he is in those suggestions for the young earl. —Beware of them, Diana: their promises, enticements, oaths, tokens, and all these engines, are not the things they go under: many a maid hath been seduced by them; and the misery is, example, that so terrible shows in the wreck of maidenhead, cannot for all that dissuade succession, but that they are lined with the twigs that threaten them. I hope, I need not to advise you further; but, I hope, your own grace will keep you where you are, though there were no further danger known, but the modesty which is so lost.

Dla. You shall not need to fear me.

Enter Helena, in the dress of a Pilgrim.

Wid. I hope so. —Look, here comes a pilgrim. I know she will lie at my house: this, they send one another: I'll question her. —God save you, pilgrim! Whither are you bound?

Hel. To Saint Jaques le grand.

Where do the palmers lodge, I do beseech you?

Wid. At the Saint Francis here, beside the port.

Hel. Is this the way?

Wid. Ay, marry, is it. —Hark you! [A March after off.] They come this way: —If you will tarry, holy Sir, till the troops come by, [pilgrim, I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd;]

The rather, for, I think, I know your hostess As ample as myself.

Hel. Is it yourself?

Wid. If you shall please so, pilgrim.

H. I thank you, and will stand upon your leisure.

Wid. You came, I think, from France?

Hel. I did so.

Wid. Here you shall see a countryman of That has done worthy service. [yours, Hel.]

Hel. His name, I pray you.

1 Temptations. 2 Pilgrims.

D. The Count Rousillon: Know you such a one?

H. But by the car, that hears most nobly Of his face I know not. [him: Dla.

Whatso'er he is,

He's bravenly taken here. He stole from France,

An 'tis reported, for the king had married him

Against his liking: Think you it is so?

H. Ay, surely, mere the truth; I know his lady.

Dla. There is a gentleman, that serves the Reports but coarsely of her. [count, Hel.]

What's his name?

Dla. Monsieur Parolles.

Hel. O, I believe with him.

In argument of praise, or to the worth

Of the count himself, she is too mean

To have her name repeated; all her deserving

Is a reserved honesty, and that

I have not heard examin'd.

Dla. Alas, poor lady!

'Tis a hard bondage, to become the wife

Of a detesting lord.

Wid. A right good creature: wheresoe'er she is.

Her heart weighs sadly: this young maid might

A shrewd turn, if she pleased. [do her Hel.]

How do you mean?

May be, the amorous count solicits her

In the unlawful purpose.

Wid. He does, indeed;

And broke with all that can in such a suit

Corrupt the tender honour of a maid:

But she is arm'd for him, and keeps her guard

In honestest defence.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, a Party of the Florentine Army, Bertram and Parolles.

Mar. The gods forbid else!

Wid. So, now they come: —That is Antonio, the duke's eldest son;

That, Escalus.

Hel. Which is the Frenchman?

Dla. He;

That with the plume: 'tis a most gallant fellow;

I would, he lov'd his wife: if he were honester,

He were much goodlier: —Is't not a handsome-

gentleman?

Hel. I like him well.

Dla. 'Tis pity, he is not honest: Yond's that same knave,

That leads him to these places; were I his lady,

I'd poison that vile rascal.

Hel. — Which is he?

Dla. That Jack-an-apes with scarfs: Why is he melancholy?

Hel. Perchance he's hurt i' the battle.

Par. Lose our drum! well.

Mar. He's shrewdly vexed at something:

Look, he has spied us.

Wid. Marry, hang you!

Mar. And your courtesy, for a ring-carder! [Exeunt Bert., Par., Off., and Soldiers.

Wid. The troop is past: Come, pilgrim, I will bring you Where you shall host: of enjoined penitents

There's four or five, to great Saint Jaques bound,

Already at my house.

Hel. — I humbly thank you:

Please it this matron, and this gentle maid,
SCENE VI.—Camp before Florence.

Enter Bertram, and the two French Lords.

1 Lord. Nay, good my lord, put him to't; let him have his way.

2 Lord. If your lordship find him not a hiding, hold me no more in your respect.

1 Lord. On my life, my lord, a bubble.

B. Do you think I am so far deceived in him?

1 Lord. Believe it, my lord, in mine own direct knowledge, without any malice but to speak of him as my kinsman; he's a most notable coward, an infinite and endless liar, an hourly promise-breaker, the owner of no one good quality worthy your lordship's entertainment.

2 Lord. It were fit you knew him; lest, reposing too far in his virtue, which he hath not, he might at some great and trusty business, in a main danger, fail you.

Ber. I would, I knew in what particular action to try him.

2 Lord. None better than to let him fetch off his drum, which you hear him so confidently undertake to do.

1 Lord. I, with a troop of Florentines, will suddenly surprise him; such I will have, whom I am sure, he knows not from the enemy: we will bind and hoodwink him so, that he shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the leaguer of the adversaries, when we bring him to our tents: Be but your lordship present at his examination; if he do not, for the promise of his life, and in the highest compulsion of base fear, offer to betray you, and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the forfeit of his soul upon oath, never trust my judgment in anything.

2 Lord. O, for the love of laughter, let him fetch his drum; he says he has a stratagem for't: when your lordship sees the bottom of his success in't, and to what metal this counterfeit lump of ore will be melted, if you give him not John Drum's entertainment, your inclining cannot be removed. Here he comes.

Enter Parolles.

1 Lord. O, for the love of laughter, hinder not the humour of his design; let him fetch off his drum in any hand.

Ber. How now, monsieur? this drum sticks sorely in your disposition.

2 Lord. A plague on't, let it go; 'tis but a drum.

Par. But a drum! Is't but a drum? A drum so lost!—There was an excellent command! to charge in with our horse upon our own wings, and to rend our own soldiers.

2 Lord. That was not to be blamed in the command of the service; it was a disaster of war that Caesar himself could not have prevented, if he had been there to command.

A coward. 2 Entrenchments.

Ber. Well, we cannot greatly condemn our success; some dishonour we had in the loss of that drum; but it is not to be recovered.

Par. It might have been recovered.

Ber. It might, but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recovered: but that the merit of service is seldom attributed to the true and exact performer, I would have that drum or another, or his facles. 1

Ber. Why, if you have a stomach to't, monsieur, if you think your mystery in stratagem can bring this instrument of honour again into its native quarter, be magnanimous in the enterprise, and go on; I will grace the attempt for a worthy exploit; if you speed well in it, the duke shall both speak of it, and extend to you what further becomes his greatness, even to the utmost syllable of your worthiness.

P. By the hand of a soldier, I will undertake it.

Ber. But you must not now slumber in it.

Par. T'll about it this evening: and I will presently, pen down my dilemmas, encourage myself in my certainty, put myself into my mortal preparation, and, by midnight, look to hear further from me.

Ber. May I be bold to acquaint his grace, you are gone about it?

Par. I know not what the success will be, my lord; but the attempt I vow.

Ber. I know thou art valiant; and, to the possibility of thy soldiership, will subscribe for thee. Farewell.

Par. I love not many words. [Exit.

1 Lord. No more than a fish loves water: Is not this a strange fellow, my lord? that so confidently seems to undertake this business, which he knows is not to be done.

2 Lord. You do not know him, my lord, as we do: certain it is, that he will steal himself into a man's favour, and, for a week, escape a great deal of discoveries; but when you find him out, you have him ever after.

Ber. Why, do you think, he will make no need at all of this, that so seriously he does address himself unto?

1 Lord. None in the world; but return with an invention, and clap upon you two or three probable lies: but we have almost embossed his; you shall see his fall to-night; for, indeed, he is not for your lordship's respect.

2 Lord. We'll make you some sport with the fox, ere we case him. 3 He was first smoked by the old lord Lafaye: when his disguise and he is parted, tell me what a sprat you shall find him; which you shall see this very night.

1 Lord. I must go look my twigs; he shall be caught.

Ber. Your brother, he shall go along with me.

1 Lord. As't please your lordship: I'll leave you. [Exit.

B. Now will I lead you to the house, and shew you the lass I spoke of. [You

2 Lord. But, you say, she's honest.

Ber. That's all the fault: I spoke with her but once, And found her wondrous cold; but I sent her By this same oxcornb that we have i'the wind, 1

Here lies. 2 Enclosed. 3 Skin him.
Tokens and letters which she did re-send;
And this is all I have done; She's a fair creature;
Will you go see her?
2 Lord.
   With all my heart, my lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.

FLORENCE. A ROOM IN THE WIDOW'S HOUSE.

Enter Helena and Widow.

Hel. If you misdoubt me that I am not she,
I know not how I shall assure you further,
But I shall lose the grounds I work upon.
W. Though my estate be fallen, I was well born,
Nothing acquainted with these businesses,
And would not put my reputation now
In any staining act.

Hel. Nor would I wish you,
First give me trust, the count he is my husband;
And, what to your sworn counsel I have spoken,
Is so, from word to word; and then you cannot,
By the good aid that I of you shall borrow,
Err in bestowing it.

Wid. I should believe you; For you have show'd me that, which well ap-
You are great in fortune. [proves

Hel. Take this purse of gold,
And let me buy your friendly help thus far,
Which I will over-pay, and pay again,
When I have found it. The count he woos your daughter,
Lays down his wanton siege before her beauty,
Resolves to carry her; let her, in fine, consent,
As we'll direct her how 'tis best to bear it,
Now his important blood will nought deny
That she'll demand: A ring the country² wears,
That downward hath succeeded in his house,
From son to son, some four or five descents
Since the first father wore it: this ring he holds
In most rich choice; yet in his idle fire,
To buy his will, it would not seem too dear,
How'er repented after.

Wid. Now I see
The bottom of your purpose.

Hel. You see it lawful then: It is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Desires this ring; appoints him an encounter:
In fine, delivers me to fill the time,
Herself most chastely absent: after this,
To marry her, I'll add three thousand crowns
To what is past already.

Wid. I have yielded;
Instruct my daughter how she shall persèver,
That time and place, with this deceipt so lawful,
May prove coherent. Every night he comes
With musicks of all sorts, and songs compo'd
To her unworthiness: It nothing steads us,
To chide him from our caves; for he persists,
As if his life lay on't.

Hel. Why then to-night
Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act;
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. [Exeunt.

Act Fourth.

SCENE I.—WITHOUT THE FLORENTINE CAMP.

Enter first Lord, with five or six Soldiers in ambush.

1 Lord. He can come no other way but by this hedge corner: When you sally upon him, spoke what terrible language you will; though you understand it not yourselves, no matter:
for we must not seem to understand him;
unless some one among us, whom we must produce for an interpreter.

1 Sold. Good captain, let me be the interpreter.

1 Lord. Art not acquainted with him? knows he not thy voice?

1 Sold. No sir, I warrant you.

1 Lord. But what linsy-woolsy hast thou to speak to us again?

1 Sold. Even such as you speak to me.

1 Lord. He must think us some band of strangers i' the adversary's entertainment.¹
Now he hath a smack of all neighbouring languages; therefore we must every one be a man of his own fancy, not to know what we speak one to another; so we seem to know, is to know straight our purpose: chough's² language, gabble enough, and good enough. As for you, interpreter, you must seem very politick. But couch, ho! here he comes; to beguile two hours in a sleep, and then to return and swear the lies he forges.

Enter Parolles.

Par. Ten o'clock: within these three hours
'twill be time enough to go home. What shall I say I have done? It must be a very plausible invention that carries it: They begin to smoke me; and disgusted have of late knocked too often at my door. I find, my tongue is too fool-hardy; but my heart hath the fear of Mars before it, and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

1 Lord. [Aside.] This is the first truth that e'er thine own tongue was guilty of.

Par. What devil should move me to undertake the recovery of this drum; being not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had no such purpose? I must give myself some hurts, and say, I got them in exploit: Yet slight ones will not carry it: They will say, Came you off with so little? and great ones I dare not give.
Wherefore? what's the instance?² Tongue, I must put you into a butter-woman's mouth, and buy another of Bajazet's mule, if you prattle me into these perils.

1 Lord. [Aside.] Is it possible, he should know what he is, and be that he is?

Par. I would the cutting of my garments would serve the turn; or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

1 Lord. [Aside.] We cannot afford you so.
Par. Or the baring of my beard; and to say,
it was in stragam.

1 Lord. [Aside.] 'Twould not do.
Par. Or to drown my clothes, and say, I was stripped.

ACT III.

SCENE I.

FLORENCE. A ROOM IN THE WIDOW'S HOUSE.

Enter Bertram and Diana.

Ber. They told me, that your name was Fon-

Dio. No, my good lord, Diana. [fretful.

Ber. Titled goddess; And worth it, with addition! But, fair soul, In your fine frame hath love no quality? If the quick fire of youth light not your mind, You are no maiden, but a monument: When you are dead, you should be such a one

As you are now, for you are cold and stern; And now you should be as your mother was, Before yourself was born.

Dio. She then was honest.

Ber. So should you be.

Dio. No:

My mother did but duty; such, my lord, As you owe to your wife.

Ber. No more of that! I pray thee, do not strive against my vows: I was compell'd to her; but I love thee By love's own sweet constraint, and will for ever Do thee all rights of service.

Dio. Ay, so you serve us, Till we serve you: but when you have our roses, You barely leave our thorns to wound ourselves, And mock us with our bareness.

Ber. How have I sworn? D. "Tis not the many oaths that make the truth; But the plain single vow, that is vow'd true, What is not holy, that we swear not by, But take the Highest to witness: Then, pray you, tell me, If I should swear by Jove's great attributes, I lov'd you dearly, would you believe my oaths, When I did love you ill? this has no holding, To swear by him whom I profess to love, oaths That I will work against him: Therefore, your Are words and poor conditions; but unseal'd; At least, in my opinion.

Ber. Change it, change it;

Be not so holy-cruel: love is holy;

And my integrity ne'er knew the crafts,

That you do charge men with: Stand no more off,

But give thyself into my sick desires,

Whom then recover: say, thou art mine, and ever

My love, as it begins, shall so perservé.

D. I see, that men make hopes, in such affairs,

That we'll forsake ourselves. Give me that ring.

Ber. I'll lend it thee, my dear, but have no

To give it from me.

[power

Dio. Will you not, my lord?

Ber. It is an honour longing to our house,

Bequeathed down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy i' the world

In me to lose.

Dio. Mine honour's such a ring:

My chastity's the jewel of our house,

Bequeathed down from many ancestors;

Which were the greatest obloquy i' the world

In me to lose: Thus your own proper wisdom

Brings in the champion honour on my part,

Against your vain assault.

Ber. Here, take my ring:

My house, mine honour, yea, my life be thine, And I'll be bid by thee. [chamber window: Dio. When midnight comes, knock at my door,

I'll order take, my mother shall not hear, Now will I charge you in the band of truth, Remain then but an hour nor speak to me: My reasons are most strong; and you shall know them,

When back again this ring shall be deliver'd:

And on your finger, in the night I'll put

Another ring; that, what in time proceeds,

May token to the future our past deeds.

Adieu, till then; then fall not: You have won A wife of me, though there my hope be done,
SCENE III.—THE FLORENTINE CAMP.

Enter the two French Lords, and two or three Soldiers.

1 Lord. You have not given him his mother's letter?

2 L. I have delivered it an hour since: there is something in't that stings his nature: for, on the reading it, he changed almost into another man.

1 Lord. He has much worthy blame laid upon him, for shaking off so good a wife, and so sweet a lady.

2 Lord. Especially he hath incurred the everlasting displeasure of the king, who had even tuned his bounty to sing happiness to him. I will tell you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly with you.

1 Lord. When you have spoken it, 'tis dead, and I am the grave of it.

2 L. If he hath perverted a young gentlewoman here in Florence, of a most chaste renown; he hath given her his monumental ring, and thinks himself made in the unchaste composition.

1 Lord. Now, heaven delay our rebellion; as we are ourselves, what things are we!

2 Lord. Merely our own traitors. And as in the common course of all treasons, we still see them reveal themselves, till they attain to their abhorred ends; so he, that in this action contrives against his own nobility, in his proper stream o'erflows himself.

1 Lord. Is it not meant confoundedly in us, to be trumpeters of our unlawful intents? We shall not then have his company to-night?

2 Lord. Not till after midnight.

1 Lord. That approaches apace: I would gladly have him see his company anatomised; that he might take a measure of his own judgments, wherein so curiously he had set this counterfeit.

2 Lord. We will not meddle with him till he come; for his presence must be the whip of the other.

1 Lord. In the meantime, what hear you of these wars?

2 Lord. I hear, there is an overture of peace.

1 Lord. Nay, I assure you, a peace concluded.

2 Lord. What will Count Rousillon do then? will he travel higher, or return again into France?

1 Lord. I perceive, by this demand, you are not altogether of his council.

2 Lord. Let it be forbid, sir! so should I be a great deal of his act.

1 Lord. Sir, his wife, some two months since fled from his house; her pretence is a pilgrimage to Saint Jaques le grand; which holy undertaking, with most austere sanctimony, she accomplished: and, there residing, the tenderness of her nature became as a prey to her grief; in fine, made a groan of her last breath, and now she sings in heaven.

1 Decentful. 2 Beguile.

2 Lord. How is this justified?

1 Lord. The stronger part of it by her own letter which makes her story true, even to the point of her death: her death itself, which could not be her office to say, is come, was faithfully confirmed by the rector of the place.

2 Lord. Hath the count all this intelligence?

1 Lord. Ay, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of the verity.

2 Lord. I am heartily sorry, that he'll be glad of this.

1 Lord. How mightily sometimes we make us comforts of our losses!

2 Lord. And how mightily, some other times, we drown our gain in tears! The great dignity, that his valour hath here acquired for him, shall at home be encountered with a shame as ample.

1 Lord. The web of our life is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together; our virtues would be proud, if our faults whipped them not; and our crimes would despair, if they were not cherish'd by our virtues.—

Enter a Servant.

How now? where's your master?

Serv. He met the duke in the street, sir, of whom he hath taken a solemn leave; his lordship will next morning for France. The duke hath offered him letters of commendation to the king.

2 Lord. They shall be no more than needful there, if they were more than they can commend.

Enter Bertram.

1 Lord. They cannot be too sweet for the king's tarteness. Here's his lordship now. How now, my lord, is't not after midnight?

Ber. I have to-night despatched sixteen businesses, a month's length a-piece, by an abstract of success: I have cong'd with the duke, done my adieu with his nearest; buried a wife, mourned for her: writ to my lady mother I am returning; entertained my convoy; and, between these main parcels of despatch, effected many nicer needs; the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

2 Lord. If the business be of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your lordship.

Ber. I mean, the business is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter: But shall we have this dialogue between the fool and the soldier?—Come, bring forth this counterfeit module; he has deceived me, like a double-meaning prophet.

2 Lord. Bring him forth: [Exeunt Soldiers.] he has sat in the stocks all night, poor gallant knave.

Ber. No matter; his heels have deserved it, in usurping his spurs so long. How does he carry himself?

1 Lord. I have told your lordship already;

1 Model. 2 Knight's spurs.
the stocks carry him. But, to answer you as you would be understood; he weeps: he hath confessed himself to Morgan, whom he supposes to be a friar, from the time of his remembrance, to this very instant disaster of his sitting i' the stocks: And what think you he hath confessed?
Ber. Nothing of me, has he?
2 Lord. His confession is taken, and it shall be read to his face: if your lordship be in't, as I believe you are, you must have the patience to hear it.

Re-enter Soldiers, with Parolles.

Ber. A plague upon him! muffled! he can say nothing of me; hush! hush!
1 Lord. Hoodman comes.—Porto tartarossa.
1 Sold. He calls for the tortures; What will you say without 'em?
Par. I will confess what I know without constraint; if he pinch me like a pasty, I can say no more.
1 Sold. Bosco chirimurco.
2 Lord. Dobhibito chitourmuroch.
1 Sold. You are a merciful general:—Our general bids you answer to what I shall ask you out of a note.
Par. And truly, as I hope to live.
1 Sold. First demand of him how many horses the Duke is strong. What say you to that?
Par. Five or six thousand; but very weak and unserviceable: the troops are all scattered, and the commanders very poor rogues, upon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to live.
1 Sold. Shall I set down your answer so?
Par. Do; I' ll take my oath on't, how and which way you will.
Ber. All's one to him. What a past-saving slave is this!
1 Lord. You are deceived, my lord; this is monsieur Parolles, the gallant militarist, (that was his own phrase,) that had the whole theoric of war in the knot of his scarf, and the practice in the chape of his dagger.
2 Lord. I will never trust a man again, for keeping his sword clean; nor believe he can have every thing in him, by wearing his apparel neatly.
1 Sold. Well, that's set down.
Par. Five or six thousand horse, I said.—I will say true,—or thereabouts, set down,—for I' ll speak truth.
1 Lord. He's very near the truth in this.
Ber. But I con him no thanks for't, in the nature he delivers it.
Par. Poor rogues, I pray you say.
1 Sold. Well, that's set down.
Par. I humbly thank you, sir: a truth's a truth, the rogues are marvellous poor.
1 Sold. Demand of him, of what strength they are afoot. What say you to that?
Par. By my troth, sir, if I were to live this present hour, I will tell true. Let me see: Spurio a hundred and fifty, Sebastian so many, Corambus so many, Jaques so many; Guiliano, Cosmo, Lodowick, and Grattii, two hundred fifty each: mine own company, Chitopher, Varmond, Bentii, two hundred and fifty each: so that the

1 Seaboard point

muster-file, rotten and sound, upon my life, amounts not to fifteen thousand poll; half of which dare not shake the snow from off their cossacks, lest they shake themselves to pieces.
Ber. What shall be done to him?
1 Lord. Nothing, but let him have thanks, Demand of him my conditions, and what credit I have with the duke.
1 Sold. Well, that's set down. You shall demand of him, whether one Captain Dummian be 't the camp, a Frenchman; what his reputation is with the duke, what his valour, honesty, and expertise in wars; or whether he thinks it were not possible, with well-weighting sums of gold, to corrupt him to a revolt. What say you to this? what do you know of it?
P. I beseech you: let me answer to the particular of the interrogatories: Demand them singly.
1 Sold. Do you know this Captain Dummian?
Par. I know him: he was a butcher's prentice in Paris, from whence he was whipped for ill conduct. [Dummian lifts up his hand in anger.
Par. Nay, by your leave, hold your hands; though I know, his brains are forfeit to the next tile that falls.
1 Sold. Well, is this captain in the Duke of Florence's camp?
Par. Upon my knowledge, he is, and lousy.
1 Lord. Nay, look not so upon me; we shall hear of your lordship anon.
1 Sold. What is his reputation with the duke?
Par. The duke knows him for no other but a poor officer of mine; and write to me this other day, to turn him out o' the band: I think I have his letter in my pocket.
1 Sold. Marry, we'll search.
Par. In good sadness, I do not know; either it is there, or it is upon a file, with the duke's other letters in my tent.
1 Sold. Here 'tis; here's a paper? Shall I read it to you?
Par. I do not know if it be it or no.
Ber. Our interpreter does it well.
1 Lord. Excellently.
1 S. Din. The count's a fool and full of gold.—
Par. That is not the duke's letter, sir; that is an advertisement to a proper maid in Florence, one Diana, to take heed of the allurements of one Count Roussillon, a foolish idle boy: I pray you, sir, put it up again.
1 Sold. Nay, I'll read it first, by your favour.
Par. My meaning in't, I protest, was very honest in the behalf of the maid: for I knew the young count to be a dangerous and lascivious boy.
Ber. Abominable, both sides rogue!
1 Sold. When he sweats oaths, bid him drop gold and take it;
After he scores, he never pays the score:
Half won, is match well made; match, and well make it;
He never pays after debts, take it before;
And say, a soldier, Dian, told thee this.
Men are to melt with, boys are not to kiss:
For count of this, the count's a fool, I know it, Who pays before, but not when he does owe it.
Thine, as he vowed to thee in thine ear,

Parolles.

1 Horseman's loose coat. 2 Disposition. 3 Associate.
SC. III. ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

Ber. He shall be whipped through the army, with this rhyme in his forehead.

2 Lord. This is your devoted friend, sir, the manifold linguist, and this armipotent soldier.

Ber. I could endure any thing before but a cat, and now he's a cat to me.

1 Sold. I perceive, sir, by the general's looks, we shall be fain to hang you.

Par. My life, sir, in any case; not that I am afraid to die: but that, my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of nature: let me live, sir, in a dungeon, 'tis the stocks, or any where, so I may live.

1 Sold. We'll see what may be done, so you confess freely; therefore, once more to this Captain Dumnay: You have answered to his reputation with the duke, and to his valour: What is his honesty?

Par. He will steal, sir, an egg out of a cloister. He professes not keeping of oaths; in breaking them, he is stronger than Hercules. He will lie, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a fool: drunkenness is his best virtue. I have but little more to say, sir, of his honesty; he has every thing that an honest man should not have; what an honest man should have, he has nothing.

1 Lord. I begin to love him for this.

Ber. For this description of thine honesty? A plague upon him for me, he is more and more a cat.

1 Sold. What say you to his expertise in war?

Par. Faith, sir, he has led the drum before the English tragedians,—to belie him, I will not,—and more of his soldiership I know not; except, in that country, he had the honour to be the officer at a place there called Mile-end, to instruct for the doubling of files: I would do the man what honour I can, but of this I am not certain.

1 Lord. He hath out-villained villainy so far, that the rarity redeems him.

Ber. A plague on him! he's a cat still.

1 Sir. His qualities being at this poor price, I need not ask you, if gold will corrupt him to revolt.

Par. Sir, for a quart d'eau he will sell the fee-simple of his salvation, the inheritance of it; and cut the entail from all remainders, and a perpetual succession for it perpetually.

1 Sold. What's his brother, the other captain Dumnay?

2 Lord. Why does he ask him of me?

1 Sold. What's he?

Par. 'En a crow of the same nest; not altogether so great as the first in goodness, but greater a great deal in evil. He excels his brother for a coward, yet his brother is reputed one of the best that is: In a retreat he outruns any lackey; marry, in coming on he has the crapat.

1 Sold. If your life be saved, will you undertake to betray the Florentine?

Par. Ay, and the captain of his horse, Count Roussillon.

1 Sold. I'll whisper with the general, and know his pleasure.

Par. [Aside.] I'll no more drumming; a plague of all drums! Only to seem to deserve well, and to beguile the supposition of that lascivious young boy, the count, have I run into this danger.

1 Mighty. The fourth of a French crown. 3 Opinion.

gener. Yet, who would have suspected an ambush where I was taken.

1 Sold. There is no remedy, sir, but you must die: the general says, you, that have so traitorously discovered the secrets of your army, and made such pestiferous reports of men very nobly held, can serve the world for no honest use: therefore you must die. Come, headsman, off with his head.

Par. O sir; let me live, or let me see my death.

1 Sold. That shall you, and take your leave of all your friends. [Unmuffling him.

So, look you about you; Know you any here?

Ber. Good morrow, noble captain.

2 Lord. Bless you, Captain Parolles.

1 Lord. Save you, noble captain.

2 Lord. Captain, what greeting will you to my lord Lafen? I am for France.

1 Lord. Good captain, will you give me a copy of the sonnet you write to Diana in behalf of the Count Roussillon? an I were not a very coward, I'd compel it of you; but fare you well.

[Exeunt Bertrum, Lords, &c.

1 Sold. You are undone, captain: all but your scar, that has a knot on't yet.

Par. Who cannot be crushed with a plot?

1 Sold. If you could find out a country where but women were that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent nation. Fare you well, sir; I am for France too; we shall speak of you there.

[Exit.

P. Yet am I thankful; if my heart were great, 'Twould burst at this; Captain I'll be no more; But I will eat and drink, and sleep as soft
As captain shall: simply the thing I am Shall make me live. Who knows himself a brag- Let him fear this; for it will come to pass, [gurt, That every bragrat shall be found an ass. Rust, sword! cool, blushes! and, Parolles, live Safest in shame! being fooled, by foolery thrive? There's place, and means, for every man alive. I'll after them.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.

FLORENCE. A ROOM IN THE WIDOW'S HOUSE.

Enter Helena, Widow, and Diana.

Hel. That you may well perceive I have not wrong'd you,
One of the greatest in the Christian world Shall be my surety; 'fore whose throne, 'tis need-Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneel: [ful,
Time was I did him a desired office,
Dear almost as his life; which gratitude Through flinty Tartar's bosom would peep forth,
And answer thanks: I duly am inform'd
His grace is at Marseilles; to which place
We have convenient convoy. You must know,
I am supposed dead: the army breaking,
My husband hies him home; where, heaven aid-
And by the leave of my good lord the king, (ing,
We'll be, before our welcome.

Wid. Gentle madam,
You never had a servant, to whose trust
Your business was more welcome.

Hel. Nor you, mistress,
Ever a friend, whose thoughts more truly labour
To recompense your love; doubt not, but heaven
Hath brought me up to be your daughter's
As it hath fated her to be my motive (dower,
And help to a husband. 'O strange men!
But more of this hereafter:——You, Diana,
Under my poor instructions yet must suffer
Something in my behalf.

Dio.

Let death and honesty
Go with your impositions; I am yours,
Upon your will to suffer.

Hel.

Yet, I pray you,——[mer,
But with the word, the time will bring on sum-
When briars shall have leaves as well as thorns,
And be as sweet as sharp. We must away;
Our waggon is prepar'd, and time revives us:
All's well that ends well: still the fine's the crown;

What'er the course, the end is the renown.

Exeunt.

Scene V.—Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Countess, Lai.ou, and Clown.

Laf. No, no, no, your son was misled with a snipt-taffata fellow there; whose villainous safron3 would have made all the unback'd and doughty youth of a nation in his colour; your doughty daughter-in-law been alive at this hour;
and your son here at home, more advanced by the king, than by that red-tailed humble-bee I speak of.

Count. I would, I had not known him! it was the death of the most virtuous gentlewoman that ever nature had praise for creating: if she had cost me the dearest groans of a mother, I could not have owed her a more rooted love.

Laf. 'Twas a good lady, 'twas a good lady:
we may pick a thousand salads, ere we light on such another herb.

Clo. Indeed, sir, she was the sweet-marjoram of the salad, or, rather, the herb of grace.4

Leaf. They are not salad-herbs, you knave, they are nose-herbs.

Clo. I am no great Nebuchadnezzar; sir; I have not much skill in grass.

Leaf. Go thy ways, I begin to be a-weary of thee, and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy ways; let my horses be well looked to, without any tricks.

Clo. If I put any tricks upon 'em, sir, they shall be jades' tricks; which are their own right by the law of nature. [Exit.

Leaf. A shrewd knave, and an unhappy.5

Count. So he is. My lord, that's gone, made himself much sport out of him; by his authority he remains here, which he thinks is a patent for his sauciness; and, indeed, he has no pace, but runs where he will.

Leaf. I like him well; 'tis not amiss: and I was about to tell you. Since I heard of the good lady's death, and that my lord your son was upon his return home, I moved the king
my master, to speak in the behalf of my daughter:
which in the minority of them both, his majesty, out of a self-gracious remembrance, did first propose: his highness hath promised me to do it; and, to stop up the displeasure he hath conceived against your son, there is no fitter matter. How does your ladyship like it?

Count. With very much content, my lord, and I wish it happily effected.

L. His highness comes post from Marseilles, of as able body as when he numbered thirty; he will be here to-morrow, or I am deceived by him that in such intelligence hath seldom failed.

Count. It rejoices me, that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I have letters, that my son will be here to-night: I shall beseech your lordship, to remain with me till they meet together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking, with what manner's I might safely be admitted.

Count. You need but plead your honourable privilege.

Laf. Lady, of that I have made a bold chart;
but, I thank my God, it holds yet.

Re-enter Clown.

Clo. O madam, yonder's my lord your son with a patch of velvet on's face: whether there be a scar under it, or no, the velvet knows: but 'tis a goodly patch of velvet: his left cheek is a cheek of two pile and a half, but his right cheek is worn bare.

Laf. A scar nobly got, or a noble scar, is a good lively of honour! so, belike, is that.

Clo. But it is your carbonado1 face.

Laf. Let us go see your son, I pray you; I long to talk with the young noble soldier.

C. Faith, there's a dozen of 'em, with delicate fine hats, and most courteous feathers, which bow the head, and nod at every man. [Exit.

Act Fifth.

Scene I.—Marseilles. A Street.

Enter Helena, Widow, and Diana, with two Attendants.

H. But this exceeding posting, day and night,
Must wear your spirits low: we cannot help it;
But since you have made the days and nights as
To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs, [one,
Be bold, you do so grow in my requisit,
As nothing can unroot you. In happy time——

Enter a gentle Astringer.2

This man may help me to his majesty's ear,
If he would spend his power.—God save you, sir.

Gent. And you.

Hel. Sir, I have seen you in the court of France.

Gent. I have been sometimes there.

Hel. I do presume, sir, that you are not fallen
From the report that goes upon your goodness;
And therefore, goaded with most sharp oce-
Which irks my nature by, I put you to fraud.
The use of your own virtues, for which
I shall continue thankful.

Gent. What's your will?

Hel. That it will please you
To give this poor petition to the king;
And aid me with that store of power you have,
To come into his presence.

1 Scared like meat for the gridiron.
2 A gentleman falconer.
SCENE I.—THAT PART OF THE KING'S COUNCIL.

Gent. The king's not here.

Hel. Not here, sir?

Gent. Not, indeed.
He hence removed last night, and with more Than is his use. [Exeunt Gent.]

[Trumpets sound.]

Par. It lies in you, my lord, to bring me in some grace, for you did bring me out.

L. Out upon thee, knave! [Trumpets sound.]
The king's coming, I know by his trumpets.—Sirrah, inquire further after me; I had talk of you last night; though you are a fool and a knave, you shall eat; go to, follow.

Par. I praise heaven for you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—ROUSILLON.—THE INNER COURT OF THE COUNTESS'S PALACE.

Enter Clown and Parolles.

Par. Good monsieur Lavatch, give my lord Lafeu this letter; I have, ere now, sir, been better known to you, when I have held familiarity with fresher clothes; but I am now, sir, muddied in fortune's coat, and smell somewhat of her strong displeasure.

Clo. Truly, fortune's displeasure is but sluttish, if it smell so strong as thou speakest of: Look, here he comes himself.

Enter Lafeu.

Here is a pur of fortune's, sir, or of fortune's cat (but not a musk-cat), that has fallen into the unclean fishpond of her displeasure, and, as he says, is muddied withal: Pray you, sir, use the carp as you may; for he looks like a poor, decayed, ingenuous, foolish, rascally knave. I do pity his distress in my smiles of comfort, and leave him to your lordship. [Exit Clown.

Par. My lord, I am a man whom fortune hath cruelly scratched.

Laf. And what would you have me to do? 'tis too late to pare her nails now. Wherein have you played the knave with fortune, that she should scratch you, who of herself is a good lady, and would not have knaves thrust long under her? There's a quart d'ecu for you: Let the justices make you and fortune friends: I am for other business.

Par. I beseech your honour, to hear me one single word.

Laf. You beg a single penny more: come, you shall ha' ; save your word.

Par. My name, my good lord, is Parolles.

Laf. You beg more than one word then.—Give me your hand:—How does your drum?

Par. O my good lord, you were the first that found me.

Laf. Was I, in sooth? and I was the first that lost thee.

King. We lost a jewel of her: and our esteem! Was made much poorer by it, but your son, As mad in folly, lack'd the sense to know Her estimation home. Count. 'Tis past my liege: And I beseech your majesty to make it Natural rebellion, done 't the blaze of youth; When oil and fire, too strong for reason's force, O'erbears it, and burns on.

King. My honour'd lady, I have forgiven and forgotten all; Though my revenges were high bent upon him, And watch'd the time to shoot.

Laf. This I must say,—But first I beg my pardon,—The young lord Did to his majesty, his mother, and his lady, Offence of mighty note; but to himself The greatest wrong of all: he lost a wife, Whose beauty did astonish the survey [tive; Of richest eyes; whose words all ears took cap., Whose dear perfection, hearts that scorn'd to serve, Humbly call'd mistress.

King. Praise what is lost, Makes the remembrance dear.—Well, call him hither;—We are reconcil'd, and the first view shall kill All repetition:—Let him not ask our pardon; The nature of his great offence is dead, And deeper than oblivion do we bury The incensing relics of it: let him approach, A stranger, no offender; and inform him, So 'tis our will he should.

Gent. I shall, my liege. [Exit Gentleman.

Laf. What says he to your daughter? have you spoke? [highness.

King. All that he is hath reference to your [Exit Laf.

King. Then shall we have a match. I have letters sent me, That set him high in fame.

Enter Bertram.

Ber. He looks well on't.

King. I am not a day of season, 4 For thou mayst see a sunshine and a halt In me at once: But to the brightest beams Distracted clouds give way; so stand thou forth, The time is fair again.

Ber. My high repented blains, Dear sovereign, pardon to me.

1 Regard. 2 Fully. 3 Recollection. 4 i.e., Of uninterrupted rain.
King. All is whole; Not one word more of the consumed time. Let's take the instant by the forward top: For we are old, and on our quick'st decreas The inaudible and noiseless foot of time Steals ere we can effect them: You remember The daughter of this lord?

Ber. Admirably, my liege; at first I stuck my choice upon her, ere my heart Durst make too bold a herald of my tongue: Where the impression of mine eye infixing, Contempt his scornful perspective did lend me, Which warp'd the line of every other favour; Scorn'd a fair colour, or express'd it sto'n; Extended or contracted all proportions, To a most hideous object: Thence it came, [self, That she, whom all men prais'd, and whom my Since I have lost, have lov'd, was in mine eye The dust that did offender.

King. Well excus'd: That thou didst love her, strikes some scores away From the great compt: But love, that comes too Like a remorseful pardon slowly carried, [late, To the great sender turns a sour offence, Crying, That's good that's gone: our rash faults Make trivial price of serious things we have, Not knowing them, until we know their grave: Oft our displeasures, to ourselves unjust, Destroy our friends, and after weep their dust: Our own love waking cries to see what's done, While shameful hate sleeps out the afternoon. Be this sweet Helen's knell, and now forget her. Send forth your amorous token for fair Maudlin: The main consents are had; and here we'll stay To see our widower's second marriage-day.

Count. Which better than the first, O dear heaven, bless!

Or, ere they meet, in me, O nature, cease!

Laf. Come on, my son, in whom my house's name Must be digested, give a favour from you, To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter, To make quick'ning joy. —By my old beard, And every hair that's on't, Helen, that's dead, Was a sweet creature; such a ring as this, The last that ere I took her leave at court, I saw upon her finger.

Ber. Hers it was not.

King. Now, pray you let me see it; for mine eye, While I was speaking, oft was fast'en'd to't. —This ring was mine; and, when I gave it Helen, 1 I bade her, if her fortunes ever stood Necessity to help, that by this token I would relieve her: Had you that craft, to reave Of what should steal her most?

Ber. My gracious sovereign, Howe'er it pleases you to take it so, The ring was never hers.

Count. Son, on my life, I have seen her wear it; and she reckon'd it At her life's rate.

Laf. I am sure, I saw her wear it.

B. You are deceiv'd, my lord, she never saw it: In Florence was it from a casement thrown me, Wrapp'd in a paper, which contain'd the name Of her that threw it: noble she was, and thought
ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL

King. The heavens have thought well on thee, Lafeu, To bring forth this discovery.—Seek these suitors:— Go, speedily, and bring again the count. [Exeunt Gentleman, and some Attendants. I am afraid, the life of Helen, lady, Was foully snatch’d.
Count. Now, justice on the doors!
Enter Bertram, guarded.
King. I wonder, sir, since wives are monsters to you, And that you fly them as you swear them lordship, Yet you desire to marry.—What woman’s that?
Re-enter Gentleman, with Widow, and Diana.
Dia. I am, my lord, a wretched Florentina, Derived from the ancient Capulet; My suit, as I do understand, you know, And therefore know how far I may be pitied.
Wid. I am her mother, sir, whose age and honour Both suffer under this complaint we bring, And both shall cease, without your remedy,
King. Come hither, count: Do you know these women?
Ber. My lord, I neither can, nor will deny But that I know them; Do they charge me further?
Dia. Why do you look so strange upon your wife?
Ber. She’s none of mine, my lord.
Dia. If you shall marry, You give away this hand, and that is mine; You give away heaven’s vows, and those are mine; You give away myself which is known mine; For I by vow am so embodiéd yours, That she, which marries you, must marry me, Either both, or none.
Laf. [To Bertram.] Your reputation comes too short for my daughter; you are no husband for her.
Ber. My lord, this is a fond and desperate creature, Whom sometime I have laugh’d with; let your highness Lay a more noble thought upon mine honour, Than for to think that I would sink it here.
King. Sir, for my thoughts, you have them ill to friend, Till your deeds gain them; Fairer prove your honour, Than in my thought it lies!
Dia. Good my lord, Ask him upon his oath, if he does think He had my honour.
King. What say’st thou to her?
Ber. She’s impudent, my lord; And was a common gamester to the camp.
Dia. He does me wrong, my lord; if I were so, He might have bought me at a common price: Do not believe him: O, behold this ring, Whose high respect, and rich validity, Did lack a parallel; yet, for all that,
---

He gave it to a commoner o’ the camp,
If I be one.
Count. He blushes, and ’tis it;
Of six preceding ancestors, that gem Conferr’d by testament to the sequent issue, Hath it been ow’d and worn. This is his wife: That ring’s a thousand proofs.
King. Methought, you said, You saw one here in court could witness it.
Dia. I did, my lord, but loath am to produce So bad an instrument; his name’s Parolles.
Laf. I saw the man to-day, if man he be.
King. Find him, and bring him hither.
Ber. What of him?
He’s quoted for a most perfidious slave, With all the spots o’ the world tax’d and de-bosh’d; Whose nature sickens, but to speak a truth: Am I or that, or this, for what he’ll utter, That will speak any thing?
King. She hath that ring of yours.
Ber. I think, she has; certain it is, I lik’d her. She knew her distance, and did angle for me, Madding my eagerness with her restraint, As all impediments in fancy’s course Are motives of more fancy; and, in fine, Her insult coming with her modern grace; Subdued me to her rate; she got the ring; And I had that, which any inferior might At market-price have bought.
Dia. I must be patient: You, that turn’d off a first so noble wife, May justly diet me. I pray you yet, (Since you lack virtue, I will lose a husband,) Send for your ring, I will return it home, And give me mine again.
Ber. I have it not.
King. What ring was yours, I pray you?
Dia. Sir, much like The same upon your finger.
King. Know you this ring? this ring was his of late.
Dia. And this it was I gave him, being a-bed.
K. The story then goes false, you threw it him, Out of a casement.
Dia. I have spoke the truth.
Enter Parolles.
Ber. My lord, I do confess, the ring was hers. K. You boggle shrewdly, every feather starts you.
Dia. Ay, my lord.
K. Tell me, sirrah, but tell me true, I charge you, Not fearing the displeasure of your master, (Which, on your just proceeding, I’ll keep off,) By him, and by this woman here, what know you?
Par. So please your majesty, my master hath been an honourable gentleman; tricks he hath had in him, which gentlemen have.
King. Come, come, to the purpose: Did he love this woman?
Par. Faith, sir, he did love her; But how?
King. How, I pray you?
---

1 Debauched.  3 Solicitation.  5 Vexatiously.
2 Love.  4 Accomplishments.
Par. He did love her, sir, as a gentleman loves a woman.

King. How is that?

Par. He loved her, sir, and loved her not.

King. As thou art a knave, and no knave:—What an equivocal companion is this?

Par. I am a poor man, and at your majesty's command.

Laf. He's a good drum, my lord, but a naughty orator.

Dia. Do you know he promised me marriage?

Par. 'Tis faith, I know more than I'll speak.

K. But wilt thou not speak all thou know'st?

Par. Yes, so please your majesty; I did go between them, as I said; but more than that, he loved her—indeed he was mad for her, and talked of Satan, and of limbo, and of furies, and I know not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed; and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things that would derive me ill to speak of, therefore I will not speak what I know.

King. Thou hast spoken all already, unless thou canst say they are married: But thou art too fine in thy evidence: therefore stand aside.

—This ring, you say, was yours?

Dia. Ay, my good lord.

King. Where did you buy it? or who gave it you?

Dia. It was not given me, nor I did not buy it.

King. Who lent it you?

Dia. It was not lent me neither.

King. Where did you find it then?

Dia. I found it not.

K. If it were yours by none of all these ways, How could you give it him?

Dia. I never gave it him.

Laf. This woman's an easy glove, my lord; she goes off and on at pleasure.

King. This ring was mine, I gave it my first wife.

Dia. It might be yours or hers for aught I know.

King. Take her away, I do not like her now; To prison with her, and away with him. Unless thou tell'st me where thou hadst this ring,

Thou diest within this hour.

Dia. I'll never tell you.

King. Take her away.

Dia. I'll put in ball, my liege.

K. I think thee now some common customer, Wherefore hast thou accus'd him all this while?

Dia. Because he's guilty, and he is not guilty; He knows I am no maid, and he'll swear to't: I'll swear I am a maid, and he knows not. Great king, I am no strumpet, by my life; I am either maid, or else this old man's wife.

[Pointing to Laf.]

K. She does abuse our ears; to prison with her.

Dia. Good mother, fetch my bail.—Stay, royal sir;—[Exit Widow.

The jeweller, that owes the ring, is sent for, And he shall surely me. But for this lord, Who hath abus'd me, as he knows himself, Though yet he never harm'd me, here I quit him:

He thinks himself, my bed he hath defil'd; But 'twas his wife who then became with child: And now behold the meaning.

Re-enter Widow, with Helena.

King. Is there no exorcist Beguiles the true office of mine eyes?

K. Is't real, that I see?

Hel. No, my good lord;

'Tis but the shadow of a wife you see,

The name, and not the thing.

Ber. Both, both; O, pardon!

Hel. O, my good lord, when I was like this maid,

I found you wondrous kind. There is your ring, And, look you, here's your letter; This it says, When from my finger you can get this ring, And are by me with child, &c.—This is done: Will you be mine, now you are doubly won? Ber. If she, my liege, can make me know this clearly,

I'll love her dearly, ever, ever dearly.

Hel. If it appear not plain, and prove untrue, Deadly divorce step between me and you:—O, my dear mother, do I see you living?

Laf. Mine eyes smell onions, I shall weep anon:—[To Parolles.] Good Tom Drum, lend me a handkerchief: So, I thank thee: wait on me home, I'll make sport with thee: Let thy courtesies alone, they are scurrvy ones.

King. Let us from point to point this story know,

To make the even truth in pleasure flow:—

[To Diana.] If thou be'st yet a fresh uncorrupted flower,

Choose for thy husband, and I'll pay thy dower;

For I can guess, that, by thy honest aid, Thou keepest a wife, herself, thyself a maid. —Of that, and all the progress, more and less, Resolvedly more leisure shall express: All yet seems well; and if it end so meet, The bitter past, more welcome is the sweet.

[Flourish. Advancing.

The king's a beggar, now the play is done: All is well ended, if this suit be won, That you express content; which we will pay, With stripe to please you, day executing day: Ours be your patience then, and yours our parts: Your gentle hands lend us, and take our hearts.

[Exeunt.]

INDUCTION.

SCENE I.—BEFORE AN AIIEHOUSE ON A HEATH.

Enter Hostess and Sly.
Sly. I'll thee; you in faith.
Host. A pair of stocks, you rogue!
Sly. Y'de a bagage; the Sles are no rogues:
Look in the chronicles, we came in with Richard Conqueror. Therefore Pucas pallabris; let the world slide; Sessa! Host. You will not pay for the glasses you have burst?
Sly. No, not a denier: Go by, says Jeronimy; Go to thy cold bed, and warne thee.
Host. I know my remedy; I must go fetch the thirdborough.[2][Exit. Sly. Third or fourth or fifth borough, I'll answer him by law: I'll not budge an inch, boy; let him come, and kindly.
[Lies down on the ground, and falls asleep.
Wind Horns. Enter a Lord from hunting, with Huntsmen and Servants.
Lord. Huntsman, I charge thee, tender well my hounds:
Brach! Merriman,—the poor cur is embossed,— And couple Clowder with the deep-mouth'd brach.
Saw'st thou not, boy, how Silver made it good At the hedge corner, in the coldest fault? I would not lose the dog for twenty pound.
1 Hun. Why, Belman is as good as he, my lord; He cried upon it at the merest loss, And twice to-day pick'd out the dullest scent: Trust me, I take him for the better dog.
Lord. Thou art a fool; if Echo were as fleet, I would esteem him worth a dozen such. But sup them well, and look unto them all; To-morrow I intend to hunt again.
1 Hun. I will, my lord.
Lord. What's here? one dead, or drunk? See, doth he breathe?
2 Hun. Be quiet, sir; a small French coin.
1 Few words. A Constable.

2 Hun. He breathes, my lord: Were he not warm'd with ale,
This were a bed but cold to sleep so soundly.
Lord. O monstrous beast! How like a swine he lies!
Grim death, how foul and loathsome is thine image!
Sirs, I will practise on this drunken man.— What think you, if he were convey'd to bed, Wrapp'd in sweet clothes, rings put upon his A most delicious banquet by his bed, [fingers, And brave attendants near him when he wakes, Would not the beggar then forget himself?
1 Hun. Believe me, lord, I think he cannot choose.
[He wake'd.
2 Hun. It would seem strange unto him when Lord. Even as a flattering dream, or worthless fancy.
Then take him up, and manage well the jest: Carry him gently to my fairest chamber, And hang it round with all my wanton pictures: Balm his foul head with warm distilled waters, And burn sweet wood to make the lodging sweet: Procure me musick ready when he wakes, To make a dulcet and a heavenly sound; And if he chance to speak, be ready straight, And, with a low submissive reverence, Say,—What is it your honour will command? Let one attend him with a silver bason, Full of rose-water, and bestrew'd with flowers; Another bear the ewer, the third a diaper, And say,—Will't please your lordship cool your Some one be ready with a costly suit, [hands; And ask him what apparel he will wear; Another tell him of his hounds and horse, And that his lady mourns at his disease: Persuade him that he hath been lunatick; And, when he says he is,—say that he dreams, For he is nothing but a mighty lord. This do, and do it kindly, gentle sirs; It will be pastime passing excellent. If it be husbanded with modesty.
1 Part.

1 Hu. My lord, I warrant you, we'll play our [Moderation.
As he shall think, by our true diligence,
He is no less than what we say he is.
L. Take him up gently, and to bed with him;
And each one to his office when he wakes.—

[Some bear out Sly. A trumpet sounds.]
Sirrah, go see what trumpet 'tis that sounds:

[Exit Servant.]

Delike, some noble gentleman; that means,
Travelling some journey, to reprove him here. —

Re-enter a Servant.

How now? who is it?
Serv. An it please your honour,
Players that offer service to your lordship,
Lord. Bid them come near:—

[Enter Players.]

Now, fellows, you are welcome.
1 Play. We thank your honour,
Lord. Do you intend to stay with me to-night?
2 Play. So please your lordship to accept our duty. [member,
Lord. With all my heart.—This fellow I re-
Since once he play'd a farmer's eldest son;—
Twas where you wou'd the gentlewoman so well;
I have forgot your name; but sure that part
Was aptly fitted, and naturally perform'd.
1 P. I think, 'twas Soto that your honour means.
Lord. 'Tis very true;—thou didst it excellent.
Well, you are come to me in happy time;
The rather, for I have some sport in hand,
Wherein your cunning can assist me much.
There is a lord will hear you play to-night:
But I am doubtful of your modesties;
Lost, over-eying of his odd behaviour,
(For yet his honour never heard a play).
You break into some merry passion,
And so offend him; for I tell you, sirs,
If you should smile, he grows impatient.
1 Play. Fear not, my lord; we can contain our
We have the very antick in the world. [selves,
Lord. Go, sirrah, take them to the buttery,
And give them friendly welcome every one:
Let them want nothing that my house affords. —

[Exit Servant and Players.]

[To a Servant.] Sirrah, go you to Bartholomew
my page,
And see him dress'd in all suits like a lady:
That done, conduct him to the drunkard's cham-
And call him—madam, do him obeisance, [ber,
Tell him from me (as he will win my love),
He bear himself with honourable pretension,
Such as he hath observ'd in noble ladies
Unto their lords, by them accomplished:
Such duty to the drunkard let him do,
With soft low tongue, and lowly courtesy;
And say—What is't your honour will command,
Wherein your lady, and your humble wife,
May show her duty, and make known her love?
And then—with kind embraces, tempting
kisses,
And with declining head into his bosom,—
Bid him shed tears, as being overjoy'd
To see her noble lord res'tor'd to health,
Who, for twice seven years, hath esteem'd him
No better than a poor and losethome beggar:
And if the boy have not a woman's gift,
To rain a shower of commanded tears.

1 Behaviour.

An onion will do well for such a shift;
Which in a napkin being close convey'd,
Shall in despite enforce a watery eye.
See this despatch'd with all the haste thou canst;
Anon I'll give thee more instructions. —

[Exit Servant.]

I know, the boy will well usurp the grace,
Voice, gait, and action of a gentlewoman:
I long to hear him call the drunkard, husband;
And how my men will stay themselves from laughter,
When they do homage to this simple peasant,
I'll in to counsel them: haply my presence
May well abate the over-merry spleen, Which otherwise would go into extremes.

SCENE II.

A BEDCHAMBER IN THE LORD'S HOUSE.

Sly is discovered in a rich night-gown, with Attendants; some with apparel, others with bosom, ever, and other appurtenances. Enter Lord, dressed like a Servant.

Sly. For heaven's sake, a pot of small ale.
1 Serv. Will't please your lordship, drink a cup of sack?

2 Serv. Will't please your honour, taste of these conserves?

[day?

3 S. What raiment will your honour wear to-Sly, I am Christopher Sly; call not me—honour, nor lordship; I never drank sack in my life;
and if you give me any conserves, give me conserves
of beef: Ne'er ask me what raiment I'll wear;
for I have no more doublets than backs, no more stockings than legs, nor no more shoes than feet;
nay, sometimes, more feet than shoes, or such shoes as my toes look through the over-leather.

Lord. Heaven cease this idle humour in your
O, that a mighty man of such descent, [honour,
Of such possessions, and so high esteem,
Should be infus'd with so foul a spirit!

Sly. What, would you make me mad? Am not
I Christopher Sly, old Sly's son of Burton-heath; by birth a pedlar, by education a card-maker, by transmutation a bear-herd, and now by present profession a tinker? Ask Marian Hacket, the fat ale-wife of Wincot, if she know me not: if she say I am not fourteen pence on the score for sheer ale, score me up for the lyingest knave in Christendom. What, I am not bestraught; — Here's:

1 S. O, this it is that makes your lady mourn.

2 Serv. O, this it is that makes your servants droop.

[house,

Lord. Hence comes it that your kindred shun
As beaten hence by your strange lunacy.
O, noble lord, bethink thee of thy birth;
Call home thy ancient thoughts from banishment,
And banish hence these abject lowly dreams:
Look how thy servants do attend on thee,
Each in his office ready at thy beck.
Wilt thou have music? hark! Apollo plays,

[Music.

And twenty caged nightingales do sing:
Or wilt thou sleep? we'll have thee to a couch,
Softer and sweeter than the lustful bed
On purpose trimm'd up for Seniramis.

1 Humour. 2 Distracted.
Say, thou wilt walk; we will bestrew the ground;
Or wilt thou ride? thy horses shall be trapp'd,
Their harness studded all with gold and pearl.
Dost thou love hawking? thou hast hawks will
Above the morning lark; Or wilt thou hunt? [sigh
Thy hounds shall make the welkin answer them,
And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth,
1 Serv. Say, thou wilt course; thy greyhounds
As breathed stags, ay, fleeter than the roe.
2 Serv. Dost thou love pictures? we will fetch thee straight,
Adonis, painted by a running brook:
And Cytherea all in sedges hid; [breath,
Which seem to move and wanton with her
Even as the waving sedges play with wind,
3 Serv. Or Daphne, roaming through a thorny wood; [bleeds;
Scratching her feet that one shall swear she
And at that sight shall sad Apollo weep,
So workmanly the blood and tears are drawn.
Lord. Thou art a lord, and nothing but a lord,
Though just a lady far more beautiful,
Than any woman in the waning age. [them.
1 Serv. And till the hers that she hath shed for Like envious floods, o'er's ever lovely face,
She was the fairest creature in the world;
And yet she is inferior to none.
Sly. Am I a lord, and have I such a lady?
Or do I dream! or have I dream'd till now?
I do not sleep; I see, I hear, I speak;
I smell sweet savours, and I feel soft things;—
Upon my life, I am a lord, indeed;
And not a tinker, nor Christopher Sly.—
Well, bring our lady hither to our sight;
And once again, a pot 'o the smallest ale.
2 Serv. Will't please your mightiness to wash your hands?
[Servants present an ever, basin, and napkin.
O, how we joy to see your wit restor'd!
O, that once more you knew but what you are!
These fifteen years you have been in a dream;
Or, when you wak'd, so wak'd as if you slept.
Sly. These fifteen years! by my fay, a goodly
But did I never speak of all that time? [nap.
1 Serv. O, yes, my lord; but very idle words;—
For though you lay here in this goodly chamber,
Yet would you say, ye were beaten out of door;
And rual upon the hostess of the house;
And say, you would present her at the feet, 2
Because she brought stone jugs and no seal'd quarts; [Hacket.
Sometimes you would call out for Cicely.
Sly. Ay, the woman's maid of the house.
3 Serv. Why, sir, you know no house, nor no such maid;
Nor no such men, as you have reckon'd up,—
As Stephen Sly, and old John Naps of Greece,
And Peter Turf, and Henry Pimpernell;
And twenty more such names and men as these,
Which never were, nor no man ever saw.
Sly. Now, Lord be thanked for your good
All. Amen. [amends!
Sly. I thank thee; thou shalt not lose by it.

Enter the Page, as a lady, with Attendants.
Page. How fares my noble lord?
1 Vault of heaven. 2 Court-house.
Sly. Marry, I fare well; for here is cheer enough. Where is my wife? [her?
P. Here, noble lord; What is thy will with Sly. Are you my wife, and will not call me husband? [man.
My men should call me—lord; I am your good-Page. My husband and my lord, my lord and
I am your wife in all obedience. [husband;
Sly. I know it well:—What must I call her?
Lord. Madam.
Sly. Alice madam, or Joan madam? [ladies.
Lord. Madam, and nothing else; so lords call Sly. Madam wife, they say that I have dream’d and slept
Above some fifteen year and more.
Page. Ay, and the time seems thirty unto me.

Enter a Servant.
Se. Your honour's players, hearing your amends—
Are come to play a pleasant comedy. [ment.
For so your doctors hold it very meet;
Seeing too much sadness hath congeal'd your
And melancholy is the nurse of frenzy, [blood.
Therefore, they thought it good you hear a play,
And frame your mind to mirth and merriment,
Which bars a thousand harms, and lengthens life.
Sly. Marry, I will; let them play it: Is not a commonly! a Christmas gambol, or a tumbling-trick?
Page. We, no, my good lord; it is more pleasing stuff.
Sly. What, household stuff?
Page. It is a kind of history.
Sly. Well, we'll see't: Come, madam wife, sit by my side, and let the world slip; we shall ne'er be younger.
[They sit down.

Act First.

SCENE I.—PADUA. A PUBLIC PLACE.

Enter Lucentio and Tranio.

Luc. Tranio, since—for the great desire I had
To see fair Padua, nursery of arts,—
I am arriv'd for fruitful Lombardy,
The pleasant garden of great Italy;
And by my father's love and leave, am arm'd
With his good will, and thy good company,
Most trusty servant, well approv'd in all;
Here let us breathe, and happily institute
A course of learning, and ingenious studies.
Pisa, renowned for grave citizens,
Gave me my being, and my father first,
A merchant of great traffick through the world.
Vincentio, come of the Bentivolli,
Vincentio, his son, brought up in Florence,
It shall become, to serve all hopes conceiv'd,
To deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds:
And therefore, Tranio, for the time I study,
Virtue, and that part of philosophy
Will I apply, that treats of happiness
By virtue specially to be achiev'd.
Tell me thy mind: for I have Pisa left,
And am to Padua come: as he that leaves
A shallow splash, to plunge him in the deep,
And with satiety seeks to quench his thirst.

Tranio. I would have you carry a gentle master mine,
1 Comedy. 2 Intellectual. 3 Pardon me.
I am in all affected as yourself;
Glad that you thus continue your resolve,
To suck the sweets of sweet philosophy.
Only, good master, while we do admire
This virtue, and this moral discipline,
Let's be no sticks, nor no stocks, I pray;
Or so devot to Aristotle's checks,
As Ovid be an outcast quite abjur'd:
Talk logick with acquaintance that you have,
And practise rhetoric in your common talk:
Musick and poesy use to quicken you;
The mathematicks and the metaphysicks,
Fall to them as you find your stomach serves you:
No profit grows, where is no pleasure ta'en;—
In brief, sir, study what you most affect.

L. Gramercies, Tranio, well dost thou advise.
If, Blondello, thou wert come ashore,
We could at once put us in readiness;
And take a lodging fit to entertain
Such friends, as time in Padua shall beget.
But stay a while: What company is this?
T. Master, some show, to welcome us to town.

Enter Baptista, Katharina, Bianca, Gremio, and Hortensio. Lucentio and Tranio stand aside.

Bap. Gentlemen, impotence me no further,
For now I firmly am resolv'd you know;
That is,—not to bestow my youngest daughter,
Before I have a husband for the elder:
If either of you both love Katharina,
Because I know you well, and love you well,
Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.

G. To court her rather: She's too rough for me:—
There, there Hortensio, will you any wife?
Kath. [To Bap.] I pray you, sir, is it you will To make a stole of me among these mates?
H. Mates, maid? how mean you that? no mates for you,
Unless you were of gentler, milder mould.
Kath. I faith, sir, you shall never need to fear;
I wis, it is not half way to her heart:
But, if it were, doubt not her care should be
To comb your noddle with a three-legg'd stool,
And paint your face, and use you like a fool.

Hor. From all such devils, heaven deliver us!

Gre. And me too.

Tra. Hush, master! here is some good pastime toward;
That wench is stark mad, or wonderful froward.

Luc. But in the other's silence I do see Maid's mild behaviour and sobriety.

Peace, Tranio. [fall.]

Tra. Well said, master; mum! and gaze your
Bap. Gentlemen, that I may soon make good
What I have said,—Bianca, get you in
And let it not displease thee, good Bianca;
For I will love thee ne'er the less, my girl.

Kath. A pretty peat! 'tis best
Put finger in the eye,—an she knew why.
Bian. Sister, content you in my discontent.—
Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe.—
My books and instruments shall be my com-
On them to look, and practise by myself. [pury;
Luc. [Aside.] Hark, Tranio! thou mayst hear
Minerva speak.

Hor. Signior Baptista, will you be so strange?

Sorry am I, that our good will effects
Bianca's grief.

Gre. Why will you mew her up,
Signior Baptista, for this fiend of hell,
And make her bear the peneance of her tongue?

Bap. Gentlemen, content ye; I am resolv'd:—
Go in, Bianca. [Exit Bianca.

And, for I know, she taketh most delight
In musick, instruments and poetry,
Schoolmasters will I keep within my house
Fit to instruct her youth.—If you, Hortensio,
Or signior Gremio, you,—know any such,
Prefer them hither; for to cunning men
I will be very kind, and liberal
To mine own children in good bringing up;
And so farewell. Katharina, you may stay;
For I have more to commune with Bianca. [Exit.

K. Why, and I trust, I may go too; May I not?
What shall I be appointed hours; as though belike,
I knew not what to take, and what to leave? [Exit.

Gre. Your gifts are so good, hero is none will hold you.
Our love is so great, Hortensio, but we may blow our nails together, and fast it fairly out; our cake's dough on both sides.

 Farewell, my lord, for the love I bear my sweet Bianca, if I can by any means light on a fit man, to teach her that wherein she delights, I will wish him to her father.

Hor. So will I, signior Gremio: But a word,
I pray. Though the nature of our quarrel yet never brook'd parle, know now, upon advice; it toucheth us both,—that we may yet again have access to our fair mistress, and be happy rivals in Bianca's love,—to labour and effect one thing

Gre. What's that, I pray? [specially.

Hor. Marry, sir, to get a husband for her
Gre. A husband! a devil. [sister.

Hor. I say, a husband.

Gre. I say, a devil: Think'st thou, Hortensio, though her father be very rich, any man is so very a fool to be married to her?

Hor. Tush, Gremio, though it pass your patience, and mine, to endure her loud alarms, why, man, there be good fellows in the world, an a man could light on them, would take her with all faults, and money enough.

Gre. I cannot tell; but I had as lief take her dowry with this condition,—to be whipped at the high-cross, every morning.

Hor. Faith as you say, there's small choice in rotten apples. But, come; since this bar in law makes us friends, it shall be so forth friendly maintained,—till by helping Baptista's eldest daughter to a husband, we set his youngest free for a husband, and then have to't afresh. —Sweet Bianca!—Happy man be his dole! How say you, signior Gremio?

Gre. I am agreed: and 'would I had given him the best horse in Padua to begin his wooling, that would thoroughly woo her, wed her, and rid the house of her. Come on.

[Exeunt Gremio and Hortensio.

Tra. [Advancing.] I pray, sir, tell me,—is it possible
That love should of a sudden take such hold?
Luc. O Tranio, till I found it to be true,
I never thought it possible, or likely;
But see! while idly I stood looking on,
I found the effect of love in idleness:—
And now in plainness do confess to thee,—
That art to me as secret, and as dear,
As Anna to the queen of Carthage was,— Tranio, I burn, I pine, I perish, Tranio,
If I achieve not this young modest girl!

Counsel me, Tranio, for I know thou canst;
Assist me, Tranio, for I know thou wilt.

Tr. Master, it is no time to chide you now;
Affection is not rated from the heart.
If love have touch’d you, thought remains but
Red time to captum quem minimo:—
(See—
L. Gramercies, lad; go forward: this contents;
The rest will comfort, for thy counsel’s sound.

Tr. Master, you look’d so longly on the maid,
Perhaps you mark’d not what’s the pith of all,
O, yes, I saw sweet beauty in her face,
Such as the daughter of Agenor had,
That made great Jove to humble her hand,
When with his knees he kiss’d the Cretan strand.

Tr. Saw you no more? mark’d you not, how her sister
Began to scold; and raise up such a storm,
That mortal ears might hardly endure the din?
Luc. Tranio, I saw her coral lips to move,
And with her breath she did perfume the air;
Sacred, and sweet, was all I saw in her.

Tr. Nay, then, ’tis time to stir him from his pray, awake, sir; if you love the maid, trance.
Bend thoughts and wits to achieve her. Thus it
Her elder sister is so curst and shrewd, stands:
That till the father rid his hands of her,
Master, your love must live a maid at home;
And therefore has he close mew’d her up,
Because she shall not be annoy’d with suitors.

Luc. Ah, Tranio, what a cruel father’s he!
But art thou not advis’d, he took some care
To get her cunning schoolmasters to instruct her?
Tr. Ay, marry, am I, sir; and now ’tis plotted.

Luc. I have it, Tranio.

Tr. Master, for my hand,
Both our inventions meet and jump in one.

Luc. Tell me thine first.

Tr. You will be schoolmaster,
And undertake the teaching of the maid:
That’s your device.

Luc. It is: May it be done?
T. Not possible; for who shall bear your part,
And be in Padua here Vincentio’s son? friends;
Keep house, and ply his book; welcome his Visit his countrymen, and banquet them?

Luc. Basta; content thee; for I have it full.
We have not yet been seen in any house;
Nor can we be distinguished by our faces,
For man, or master: then it follows thus:—
Thou shalt be master, Tranio, in my stead,
Keep house, and port, and servants, as I should:
I will some other be; some Florentine,
Some Neapolitan, or mean man of Pisa.
’Tis hatch’d, and shall be so;—Tranio, at once
Uncase thee; take my colour’d hat and cloak;
When Biondello comes, he waits on thee;
But I will charm him first to keep his tongue.

Tr. So had you need. [They exchange habits.]

Enter Biondello.

Here comes the rogue.—Sirrah, where have you been?

Bion. Where have I been? Nay, how now, where Master, has my fellow Tranio stol’n your clothes?
Or you stol’n his? or both? pray, what’s the news?

Luc. Sirrah, come hither; ’tis no time to jest,
And therefore frame your manners to the time.
Your fellow Tranio here, to save my life,
Puts my apparel and my countenance on,
And for my escape have put on his;
For in a quarrel, since I came ashore,
I kill’d a man, and fear I was describ’d:
Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes,
While I make way from hence to save my life:
You understand me?

Bion. I, sir, ne’er a whit.

Luc. And not a jot of Tranio in your mouth;
Tranio is chang’d into Lucentio.

Bion. The better for him; Would I were so too!

Tr. So would I, boy, to have the next wish after.—

That Lucentio indeed had Baptista’s youngest daughter.

[—I advise
But, sirrah,—not for my sake, but your master’s,
You use your manners discreetly in all kind of companies:
When I am alone, why, then I am Tranio;
But in all places else, your master Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio, let’s go:—
One thing more rests, that thyself execute:—
To make one among these woosers: If thou ask me why,
Sufficeth, my reasons are both good and weighty.

[Exeunt.

1 Serv. My lord, you nod; you do not mind the play.

Sly. Yes, by Saint Anne, do I. A good matter, surely: Comes there any more of it?

Page. My lord, ’tis but begun.

Sly. ’Tis a very excellent piece of work, madam lady: ’Would, ’twere done!

SCENE II.—Before Hortensio’s House.

Enter Petruchio and Grumio.

Pet. Verona, for a while I take my leave,
To see my friends in Padua; but, of all,
My best beloved and approved friend,
Hortensio; and, I trow, this is his house:—
Here, sirrah Grumio: knock, I say.

Gru. Knock, sir! whom should I knock? is there any man has rebused your worship?

Pet. Villain, I say, knock me here soundly.

Gru. Knock you here, sir? why, sir, what am I, sir, that I should knock you here, sir.

1 Since.
Pet. Villain, I say, knock me at this gate, And rap me well, or I'll knock your knave's pate.

Gru. My master is grown quarrelsome: I should knock you first, And then I know after who comes by the worst.

Pet. Will it not be? 'Faith, sirrah, an you'll not knock, I'll wring it. I'll try how you can sol, fa, and sing it.

[He wrings Grumio by the ears.

Gru. Help, masters, help! my master is mad.

P. Now, knock when I bid you: sirrah! villain!

Enter Hortensio.

Hor. How now? what's the matter?—My old friend Grumio! and my good friend Petruchio!—How do you all at Verona?

Pet. Signior Hortensio, come you to part the fray? Con tutto il core bene trovato,¹ may I say.

Hor. Alla nostra casa bene venuto,² Molto honorato signor mio Petruchio. [quarrel.
Rise, Grumio, rise; we will compound this

Gru. Nay, 'tis no matter, what he 'leges in Latin.—If this be not a lawful cause for me to leave his service,—Look, sir, he bid me knock him, and rap him soundly, sir: Well, was it fit for a servant to use his master so; being, perhaps (for aught I see), two-and-thirty,—a pip out? [first, Whom, 'twould to heaven I had well knock'd at Then had not Grumio come by the worst.

Pet. A senseless villain—Good Hortensio, I bade the rascal knock upon your gate, And could not get him for my heart to do it.

Gru. Knock at the gate?—O heavens! Spake you not these words plain—Sire, knock me here, [soundly? Rap me here, knock me well, and knock me And come you now with—knocking at the gate?

Pet. Sirrah, be gone, or talk not, I advise you.

H. Petruchio, patience; I am Grumio's pledge: Why, this a heavy chance 'twixt him and you; Your ancient, trusty, pleasant servant Grumio. And tell me now, sweet friend,—what happy gale Blows you to Padua here, from old Verona?

Pet. Such wind as scatters young men through the world, To seek their fortunes further than at home, Where small experience grows. But, in a few, Signior Hortensio, thus it stands with me:— Antonio, my father, is deceased; And I have thrust myself into this maze, Haply to wive, and thrive, as best I may: Crowns in my purse I have, and goods at home, And so am come abroad to see the world.

H. Petruchio, shall I then come roundly to thee, And wish thee to a shrewd ill-favour'd wife? Thou'lt thank me but a little for my counsel: And yet I'll promise thee she shall be rich, And very rich;—but thou'lt not too much my friend, And I'll not wish thee to her.

P. Signior Hortensio, 'twixt such friends as we, Few words suffice: and therefore, if thou know One rich enough to be Petruchio's wife, (As wealth is burden of my wooing dance,) Be she as foul as was Florentius' love, As old as Sybil, and as curst and shrewd As Socrates' Xantippe, or a worse, She moves me not, or not removes, at least, 1 With all the heart, welcome, 2 To our house welcome.

Affection's edge in me; were she as rough As are the swelling Adriatic seas; I come to wive it wealthily in Padua; If wealthily, then happily in Padua.

Gru. Nay, look you, sir, he tells you flatly what his mind is: Why, give him gold enough and marry him to a puppet, or an aglet baby;¹ or an old tot with ne'er a tooth in her head: why nothing comes amiss, so money comes withal.

H. Petruchio, since we have stepp'd thus far I will continue that I broach'd in jest. [iii, I can, Petruchio, help thee to a wife With wealth enough, and young, and beauteous: Brought up as best becomes a gentlewoman: Her only fault (and that is fault enough,) Is,—that she is intolerably curst, And shrewd, and ruffian; so beyond all measure, That, were my state far worse than it is, I would not wed her for a mine of gold.

Pet. Hortensio, peace! thou know'st not gold's effect:— Tell me her father's name, and 'tis enough; For I will board her, though she chide as loud As thunder, when the clouds in autumn crack.

Hor. Her father is Baptista Minola, An affable and courteous gentleman: Her name is Katharina Minola, Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue.

P. I know her father, though I know not her; And he knew my deceased father well:— I will not sleep, Hortensio, till I see her; And therefore let me be thus bold with you, To give you over at this first encounter, Unless you will accompany me thither.

Gru. I pray you, sir, let him go while the humour lasts. 'O my word, an she knew him as well as I do, she would think scolding would do little good upon him: She may, perhaps, call him half a score knaves, or so: why, that's nothing; an he begin once, he'll rai in his footstraps.² I'll tell you what, sir,—an she stand him but a little, he will throw a figure in her face, and so disfigure her with it, that she shall have no more eyes to see withal than a cat: You know him not, sir.

Hor. Tarry, Petruchio, I must go with thee; For in Baptista's keep my treasure is: He hath the jewel of my life in hold, His youngest daughter, beautiful Bianca; And her withholds from me, and other more Suitors to her, and rivals in my love: Supposing it a thing impossible, (For those defects I have before rehears'd,) That ever Katharina will be woo'd, Therefore this order³ hath Baptista en:— That none shall have access unto Bianca, Till Katharine the curst have got a husband.

Gru. Katharine the curst: A title for a maid, of all titles the worst. H. Now shall my friends and Petruchio do me grace; And offer me, disguis'd in sober robes, To old Baptista as a schoolmaster. Well seen! in musick, to instruct Bianca: That so I may by this device, at least, Have leave and leisure to make love to her, And, unsuspected, court her by herself.

Enter Gremio; with him Lucentio disguised, with books under his arm.

Gru. Here's no knavery! See; to beguile the old folks, how the young folks lay their heads together! Master, master, look about you: Who goes there? ha!

Hor. Peace, Gremio; 'tis the rival of my love.—Petruchio, stand by a while.

Gru. A proper stripping, and an amorous. [They retire.

Gru. O, very well; I have persuaded the note. Hark you, sir; I'll have them very fairly bound; All books of love, see that at any hand; And see you read no other lectures to her; You understand me,—over and beside Signior Baptista's liberality, [too, I'll mend it with a largess;—Take your papers And let me have them very well perfum'd. For she is sweeter than perfumce itself. To whom they go. What will you read to her? Luc. Whate'er I read to her, I'll plead for you, As for my patron, (stand you so assur'd,) As firmly as yourself were still in place; Yea, and (perhaps-) with more successful words Than you, unless you were a scholar, sir. Gru. O this learning! what a thing it is! Gru. O this woodcock! what an ass it is!

H. Gremio, mum!—Save you, signior Gremio!

Gru. And you're well met, signior Hortensio, Trow you,

Whither I am going?—To Baptista Minola. I promised to inquire carefully About a schoolmaster for fair Bianca:
And, by good fortune, I have lighted well
On this young man: for learning and behaviour,
Fit for her turn; well read in poetry, And other books,—good ones I warrant you.

Hor. 'Tis well; and I have met a gentleman, Hath promised me to help me to another, A fine musician, to instruct our mistress; So shall I no whit be behind in duty To fair Bianca, so belov'd of me.

Gru. Belov'd of me,—and that my deeds shall prove.

Gru. [Aside.] And that his bags shall prove.

H. Gremio, 'tis now no time to vent our love: Listen to me, and if you speak me fair, I'll tell you news indifferent good for either. Here is a gentleman, whom by chance I met, Upon agreement from us to his liking, Will undertake to woo curst Katherine; Yea, and to marry her, if her dowry please.

Gru. So said, so done, is well;—

Hortensio, have you told him all her faults?

Pet. I know; she is an icksome brawling scold; If that be all, masters, I hear no harm. [man? Gru. No, say'st me so, friend? What country?

Pet. Born in Verona, old Antonio's son; My father dead, my fortune lives for me; And I do hope good days, and long, to see.

Gru. O, sir, such a life, with such a wife, were strange:

But, if you have a stomach, 'tis I pray you; You shall have me assisting you in all. But will you woo this wild-cat?

Pet. Will I live?

Gru. [Aside.] Will he woo her? ay, or I'll hang her.

Pet. Why came I hither, but to that intent? Think you, a little din can daunt mine ears?

Have I not in my time heard lions roar?

Have I not heard the sea, pulfed up with winds, Rage like an angry boar, chafed with sweat? Have I not heard great ordinance in the field, And heaven's artillery thunder in the skies? Have I not in a pitched battle heard [clang Loud harums, neighing steeds, and trumpets? And do you tell me of a woman's tongue;

That gives not half so great a blow to the ear, As will a chestnut in a farmer's fire?

Tush! tush! fear boys with bugs.1 Gru. [Aside.] For he fears none.

Gru. Hortensio, hark?

This gentleman is happily arriv'd,

My mind presumes, for his own good, and yours.

Hor. I promised we would be contributors, And bear his charge of wooling, whatso'ever.

Gru. And so we will; provided, that he win her.

Gru. [Aside.] I would, I were as sure of a good dinner.

Enter Tranio, bravely apparel'd; and Biondello.

Tra. Gentlemen, save you! If I may be bold, Tell me, I beseech you which is the readiest way To the house of signior Baptista Minola?

Gru. He that has the two fair daughters:— [Aside to Tranio.] is't he you mean?

Tra. Even he. Biondello!

Gru. Hark you, sir; You mean not her to—[Aside.] Perhaps, him and her, sir; What have you to do?

P. No other that chides, sir, at any hand, I pray. Tra. I love no chiders, sir;—Biondello, let's Luc. [Aside.] Well begun, Tranio. [away.

Hor. Sir, a word ere you go;—

Are you a suitor to the maid you talk of, yea, or Tran. And if I be, sir, is it any offence? [no? Gru. No; if, without more words, you will get you hence.

Tra. Why, sir, I pray, are not the streets as free For me, as for you?

Gru. But so is not she.

Tra. For what reason, I beseech you?

Gru. For this reason, if you'll know,— That she's the choice love of signior Gremio. H. That she's the chosen of signior Hortensio. Tra. Softly, my masters! if you be gentlemen, Do me this right,—hear me with patience. Baptista is a noble gentleman, To whom my father is not all unknown; And, were his daughter fairer than she is, She may more suitors have, and me for one. Fair Leda's daughter had a thousand wooers; Then well one more may fair Bianca have: And so she shall; Lucentio shall make one, Though Paris came, in hope to speed alone.

Gru. What! this gentleman will out-talk us all.

Luc. Sir, give him head; I know he'll prove a jadec.

P. Hortensio, to what end are all these words? Hor. Sir, let me be so bold as to ask you, Did you yet ever see Baptista's daughter? Tra. No sir; but hear I do, that he hath two.

1 Bugbear.
The one as famous for a scolding tongue, As is the other for beauteous modesty.
Pet. Sir, sir, the first’s for me; let her go by.
Gre. Yea, leave that labour to great Hercules;
And let it be more than Alcides’ twelve.
Pet. Sir, understand you this of me, in sooth:—
The youngest daughter, whom you hearken for,
Her father keeps from all access of suitors;
And will not promise her to any man,
Until the elder sister first be wed:
The younger then is free, and not before.
Tra. If it be so, sir, that you are the man
Must steal us all, and me among the rest;
An if you break the ice, and do this feat,—
Achieve the elder, set the younger free
For our access,—whose hap shall be to have her,
Will not so graceless be, to be ingrate.
H. Sir, you say well, and well you do conceive;
And since you do profess to be a suitor,
You must, as we do, gratify this gentleman,
To whom we all rest generally beholden.
Tra. Sir, I shall not be slack: in sign whereof
Please ye may contrive this afternoon,
And quaff carouses to our mistress’ health;
And do as adversaries do in law,—
Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends.
Gru. Bion. O excellent motion! Fellows, let’s be gone.
Hor. The motion’s good indeed, and be it so;—
Petruchio, I shall be your ben venuto. [Exit.

Act Second.

Scene I. — A Room in Baptista’s House.

Enter Katharine and Bianca.

Bian. Good sister, wrong me not, nor wrong yourself,
To make a bondmaid and a slave of me:
That I disdain; but for these other gawks,
Unbind my hands, I’ll pull them off myself,
Or, what you will command me, will I do,
So well I know my duty to my elders.
Kath. Of all thy suitors, here I charge thee, tell Whom thou lov’st best: see thou dissemble not.
Bian. Believe me, sister, of all the men alive,
I never yet beheld that special face
Which I could fancy more than any other.
Kath. Minion, thou liest; Is’t not Hortensio?
Bian. If you affects him, sister, here I swear,
I’ll plead for you myself, but you shall have him.
Kath. O then, belike, you fancy riches more;
You will have Gremio to keep you fair.
Bian. Is it for him you do eny me so?
Nay, then you jest; and now I well perceive,
You have but jested with me all this while,
I prythee, sister Kate, untie my hands.
Kath. If that be jest, then all the rest was so.
[Strikes her.

Enter Baptista.

Bap. Why, how now, dame! whence grows
this insolence?———
Bianca, stand aside;—poor girl! she weeps:—
Go ply thy needle: meddle not with her.—
1 Welcome.
2 Trinkets.
3 Aim at

---

For shame, thou hilding! of a devilish spirit,
Why dost thou wrong her that did ne’er wrong thee?
When did she cross thee with a bitter word?
K. Her silence flouts me, and I’ll be reveng’d.
[Flies after Bianca.
Bap. What, in my sight,—Bianca, get thee in.
[Exit Bianca.

Kath. Will you not suffer me? Nay, now I see,
She is your treasure, she must have a husband;
I must dance barefoot on her wedding-day.
Talk not to me; I will go sit and weep,
Till I can find occasion of revenge. [Exit Kath.
Bap. Was ever gentleman thus griev’d as If
But who comes here?

Enter Gremio, with Lucentio in the habit of a mean man; Petruchio, with Hortensio as a musician; and Tranio, with Blondello bearing a lute and books.

Gre. Good-morrow, neighbour Baptista.
Bap. Good-morrow, neighbour Gremio: save you, gentlemen!

---

Cunning in musick, and the mathematicks,
To instruct her fully in those sciences,
Whereof, I know, she is not ignorant:
Accept of him, or else you do me wrong:
His name is Licio, born in Mantua.

Bap. You’re welcome, sir; and he, for your good sake:
But for my daughter Katharine,—this I know,
She is not for your turn, the more my grief.
Pet. I see, you do not mean to part with her;
Or else you like not of my company.
Bap. Mistake me not, I speak but as I find.
Whence are you, sir? what may I call your name?
Pet. Petruchio is my name; Antonio’s son,
A man well known throughout all Italy.
Bap. I know him well: you are welcome for his sake.

Gre. Saving your tale, Petruchio, I pray,
Let us, that are poor petitioners, speak too:
Baccare! you are marvellous forward.

Pet. O, pardon me, signior Gremio; I would fain be doing. [wooing.
Gre. I doubt it not, sir; but you will curse your Neighbour, this is a gift very grateful, I am sure of it. To express the like kindness myself, that have been more kindly beheld to you than any, I freely give unto you this young scholar
1 A worthless woman.
2 Mocks.

---
[Presenting Lucentio.] that hath been long studying at Rheims: as cunning in Greek, Latin, and other languages, as the other in musick and mathematicks: his name is Cambio; pray, accept his service.

Bap. A thousand thanks, signior Gremio; welcome, good Cambio.—But, gentle sir, [To Tranio.] methinks you walk like a stranger: May I be so bold to know the cause of your coming?

Tra. Pardon me, sir, the boldness is mine own; That, being a stranger in this city here, Do make myself a suitor to your daughter, Unto Blanca, fair, and virtuous. Nor is your firm resolve unknown to me, In the preferment of the eldest sister: This liberty is all that I request,— That, upon knowledge of my parentage, I may have welcome amongst the rest that woo, And free access and favour as the rest, And, toward the education of your daughters, I here bestow a simple instrument, And this small packet of Greek and Latin books: If you accept them, then their worth is great. Bap. Lucentio is your name? Of whence, I pray? Tra. Of Pisa, sir; son to Vincenio. Bap. A mighty man of Pisa; by report I know him well: you are very welcome, sir,— Take you [To Hor.] the lute, and you [To Luc.] the set of books, You shall go see your pupils presently. Holla, within! Enter a Servant.

Sirrah, lead [both, These gentlemen to my daughters; and tell them These are their tutors; bid them use them well. [Exit Servant, with Hortensio, Lucentio, and Blondetto.

We will go walk a little in the orchard, And then to dinner. You are passing welcome, And so I pray you all to think yourselves,
P. Signior Baptista, my business asketh haste, And every day I cannot come to woo You knew my father well; and in him, me, Left solely heir to all his lands and goods, Which I have better'd rather than decreased; Then tell me,—if I get your daughter's love, What dowry shall I have with her to wife? Bap. After my death, the one half of my lands, And, in possession, twenty thousand crowns.

Pet. And, for that dowry, I'll assure her Of her widowhood,—be it that she survive me,— In all my lands and leases whatsoever: Let specialities be therefore drawn between us, That covenants may be kept on either hand. B. Ay, when the special thing is well obtained, This is,—her love; for that is all in all. P. Why, that is nothing; for I tell you, father, I am as peremptory as she proud-minded; And where two raging fires meet together, They do consume the thing that feeds their fury: Though little fire grows great with little wind, Yet extreme gusts will blow out fire and all: So I to her, and so she yields to me: For I am rough, and woo not like a babe. Bap. Well may'st thou woo, and happy be thy speed! But be thou arm'd for some unhappy words.

Pet. Ay, to the proof; as mountains are for winds, That shake not, though they blow perpetually. Re-enter Hortensio, with his head broken.

Bap. How now, my friend? why dost thou look so pale?

Hor. For fear, I promise you, if I look pale. Bap. What, will my daughter prove a good musician?

Hor. I think, she'll sooner prove a soldier: Iron may hold with her, but never lutes. [lute? Bap. Why, then thou canst not break her to the H. Why, no; for she hath broke the lute to me. I did but tell her, she mistook her frets, And bow'd her hand to teach her fingering; When, with a most impatient devilish spirit, Frets, call you these? quoth she: I'll frame with them: And, with that word, she struck me on the head, And through the instrument my pate made way; And there I stood amazed for a while, As on a pillow, looking through the lute While she did call me,—rascal fiddler, And—twangling Jack; with twenty such vile As she had studied to misuse me so. [terms,

Pet. Now, by the world, it is a lusty wench; I love her ten times more than e'er I did: O, how I long to have some chat with her! Bap. Well, go with me, and be not so discomfited: Proceed in practice with my younger daughter: She's apt to learn, and thankful for good turns.— Signior Petruchio, will you go with us; Or shall I send my daughter Kate to you?

Pet. I pray you do; I will attend her here,— [Exeunt Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, and Hortensio. And woed her with some spirit when she comes. Say, that she rail: Why, then I'll tell her plain, She sings as sweetly as a nightingale: Say, that she frown: I'll say, she looks as clear As morning roses newly wash'd with dew: Say, she be mute, and will not speak a word; Then I'll commend her volubility, And say,—she uttereth piercing eloquence: If she do bid me pack, I'll give her thanks, As though she bid me stay by her a week; If she deny to wed, I'll crave the day [ried.— When I shall ask the banns, and when be mar- But here she comes; and now, Petruchio, speak. Enter Katharina.

Good-morrow, Kate; for that's your name, I hear.

Kath. Well have you heard, but something hard of hearing; They call me—Katharine, that do talk of me. Pet. You lie, in faith; for you are called plain Kate, And bonny Kate, and sometimes Kate the curst; But Kate, the prettiest Kate in Christendon, Kate of Kate-Hall, my super-dainty Kate, For dainties are all cates; and therefore, Kate, Take this of me, Kate of my consolation;— Hearing thy mildness prais'd in every town, Thy virtues spoke of, and thy beauty sounded, (Yet not so deeply as to thee belongs,) Myself am mov'd to woo thee for my wife.

1 Stops.
Kath. Mov’d! in good time; let him that mow’d you hit her,
Remove you hence; I knew you at the first,
You were a moveable.
Pet. Why, what’s a moveable?
Kath. A joint-stool.
Pet. Thou hast hit it: come, sit on me.
Kath. Asses are made to bear, and so are you.
Pet. Alas, good Kate! I will not burden thee;
For, knowing thee to be but young and light,—
K. Too light for such a swain as you to catch;
And yet as heavy as my weight should be.
Pet. Should be? should be buzzed.
Kath. Well ta’en, and like a buzzard.
Pet. O, slow-winged turtle! shall a buzzard take thee?
Kath. Ay, for a turtle; as he takes a buzzard.
Pet. Come, come, you wisp; i’ faith you are too angry.
Kath. If I be waspish, best beware my sting.
Pet. My remedy is then to pluck it out.
Kath. Ay, if the fool could find it where it lies.
Pet. Who knows not where a wasp doth wear his sting?

In his tail.
K. In his tongue.
Pet. Whose tongue?
K. Yours if you talk of tails; and so farewell.

Good Kate; I am a gentleman.
Kath. That I’ll try. [Striking him.
Pet. I swear I’ll cuff you, if you strike again.
Kath. So may you lose your arms:
If you strike me, you are no gentleman;
And if no gentleman, why, then no arms.
Kath. What is your crest? a coxcomb;
Pet. A combsless cock, so Kate will be my hen.
K. No cock of mine, you crow too like a craven.
Pet. Nay, come, Kate, come; you must not look so sour.
Kath. It is my fashion, when I see a crab.
Pet. Why here’s no crab: and therefore look not sour.
Kath. There is, there is.
Pet. Then show it me.

Kath. Had I a glass, I would.
Pet. What, you mean my face?
Kath. Well aim’d of such a young one.
Pet. Now, by saint George, I am too young for Kath. Yet you are witherd. [you.
Pet. ’Tis with cares.
Kath. I care not.
Pet. Nay, hear you, Kate: in sooth, you ’scape not so.
Kath. I chaste you, if I tarry; let me go.
Pet. No, not a whit; I find you passing gentle.
’Twas told me, you were rough, and coy, and
And now I find report a very liar; [sullen,
For thou art pleasant, gamersome, passing courteous;
[flowers:
But slow in speech, yet sweet as spring-time
Thou canst not frown, thou canst not look askance,
Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will;
Nor hast thou pleasure to be cross in talk;
But thou with mildness entertain’st thy wooers.
With gentle conference, soft and affable.

Why does the world report, that Kate doth limp?
O slanderous world! Kate, like the hazel twig,
Is straight and slender; and as brown in hue
As hazel-nuts, and sweeter than the kernels.
O, let me see thee walk: thou dost not halt.
K. Go, fool, and whom thou keep’st command.
Pet. Did ever Dian so become a grove,
As Kate this chamber with her princely gait?
O, be thou Dian, and let her be Kate;
And then let Kate be chaste, and Dian sportful!
K. Where did you study all this goodly speech?
Pet. It is extempore, from my mother-wit.
Kath. A witty mother! witless else her son.
Pet. Am I not wise?
Kath. Yes, keep you warm.
Pet. Marry, so I mean, sweet Katherine,
And therefore, setting all this chat aside, [ed
Thus in plain terms:—Your father hath consented—
That shall be my wife; your dowry’d gone on;
And, will you, nill you, I will marry you.
Now, Kate, I am a husband for your turn;
For, by this light, whereby I see thy beauty,
(Thy beauty, that doth make me like thee well,) Thou must be married to no man but me:
For I am he, am born to tame you, Kate;
And bring you from a wild-cat to a Kate
Conformable, as other household Kates.
Here comes your father; never make denial;
I must and will have Katherine to my wife.

Re-enter Baptista, Gremio, and Tranio.
Bap. Now,
Signior Petruchio: How speed you with
My daughter?
Pet. How but well, sir? how but well?
It were impossible I should speed amiss.
Bap. Why, how now, daughter Katharine? in your dumps?
K. Call you me, daughter? now I promise you,
You have show’d a tender fatherly regard,
To wish me wed to one half lunatick;
A mad-cap ruffian, and a swearing Jack,
That thinks with oaths to face the matter out.
P. Father, ’tis thus,—yourself and all the world,
That talk’d of her, have talk’d amiss of her;
If she be curst, it is for policy:
For she’s not froward, but modest as the dove;
She is not hot, but temperate as the morn;
For patience she will prove a second Grisell;
And Roman Lucrece for her chastity: [gather,
And to conclude,—we have ’greed so well to-
That upon Sunday is the wedding-day.
Kath. I’ll see thee hanged on Sunday first.
Gre. Hark, Petruchio! she says she’ll see thee hang’d first.

Tr. Is this your speeding? nay, then, good night our part!
[myself;
Pet. Be patient, gentlemen; I choose her for
If she and I be pleas’d, what’s that to you?
’Tis bargain’d ’twixt us twin, being alone,
That she shall still be curst in company.
I tell you ’tis incredible to believe
How much she loves me: O, the kindest Kate!—
She hung about my neck; and kiss on kiss
She vied so fast, protest ing oath on oath,
That in a twink she won me to her love.
Give me thy hand, Kate: I will unto Venice.
1 Perverre.
2 Pressed.
To buy apparel 'gainst the wedding-day:
Provide the feast, father, and bid the guests;
I will be sure, my Katherine shall be fine.
B. I know not what to say; give me your hands;
Heaven send you joy, Petruchio! 'tis a match.

Gre. Tra. Amen, say we; we will be witnesses.
Pet. Father, and wife, and gentlemen, adieu;
I will to Venice, Sunday comes space:—
We will have rings, and things, and fine array;
And kiss me, Kate, we will be married o' Sunday.
[Exeunt Pet. and Kath., severally.]

Gre. Was ever match clapp'd up so suddenly?

Bap. Faith, gentlemen, now I play a merchant's part,
And venture madly on a desperate mart.

Tra. 'Twas a commodity lay fretting by you:
'Twill bring you gain, or perish on the seas.

Bap. The gain I seek is—quiet in the match.

Gre. No doubt but he hath got a quiet catch.
But now, Baptista, to your younger daughter;—
Now is the day we long have looked for;
I am your neighbour, and was suitor first.
Tra. And I am one, that love Bianca more Than words can witness, or your thoughts can guess.

G. Youngling! thou canst not love so dearly as I.

Gre. But thin de doth dry.

Skir. Stand back; 'tis age that nourisheth.

Tra. But youth in ladies' eyes that flourisneth.

Bap. Content you, gentlemen; I'll compound this strife:
'Tis deeds must win the prize; and he, of both
That can assure my daughter greatest dower
Shall have Bianca's love.—
Say, signior Gremio, what can you assure her?
G. First, as you know, my house within the
Is richly furnished with plate and gold; [city
Basons, and ewers, to have her dainty hands;
My hangings all of Tyrian tapestry:
In ivory coffers I have stuff'd my crowns;
In cypress chests my arras, counterpoints, [Costly apparel, tents and canopies,
Fine linen, Turkey cushions, boss'd with pearl,
Valance2 of Venice gold in needle-work,
Pewter and brass, and all things that belong
To house, or housekeeping: then, at my farm,
I have a hundred milch-kine to the pail,
Six score fat oxen standing in my stalls,
And all things answerable to this portion.
Myself am struck in years, I must confess;
And, if I die to-morrow, this is hers,
If whilst I live, she will be only mine.

Tra. That, only, came well in—Sir, list to me;
I am my father's heir, and only son:
If I may have your daughter to my wife,
I'll leave her houses three or four as good,
Within rich Pisa walls, as any one
Old signior Gremio has in Padua;
Besides two thousand ducats by the year,
Of fruitful land, all which shall be her jointure.—

What have I pluck'd you, signior Gremio?

Gre. Two thousand ducats by the year, of land!
My land amounts not to so much in all:
That she shall have; besides an argosy;
That now is lying in Marseilles' road:—

1 Counterpanes.  2 A large merchant-ship.

What, have I chok'd you with an argosy?

Tra. Gremio, 'tis known, my father hath no less Than three great-argosies; besides two gal-llasses,!
And twelve tight gallyes: these I will assure her,
And twice as much, whate'er thou offer'st next.

Gre. Nay, I have offer'd all, I have no more;
And she can have no more than all I have;
If you like me, she shall have me and mine.

Tra. Why, then the maid is mine from all the
By your firm promise; Gremio is out-vied.
[world.

Bap. I must confess, your offer is the best:
And, let your father make her the assurance,
She is your own; else, you must pardon me:
If you should die before him where's her dower?

Gre. That's but a cavil; he is old, I young.

Gre. And may not young men die, as well as

Bap. Well, gentlemen, [old?
I am thus resolv'd;—On Sunday next you know,
My daughter Katherine is to be married;
Now, on the Sunday following, shall Bianca
Be bride to you, if you make this assurance;
If not, to signior Gremio:
And so, I take my leave, and thank you both.
[Exit.

G. Adieu, good neighbour.—Now I fear thee not;
Sirrah, young gamester, your father were a fool
To give thee all, and in his waning age,
Set foot under thy table: Tut! a toy!
An old Italian fox is not so kind, my boy.
[Exit.

Tra. A vengeance on your crafty wether'd
Yet I have faced it with a card of ten. [hide!
'Tis in my head to do my master good:—
I see no reason, but suppos'd Lucentio
Must get a father, call'd—suppos'd Vincentio:
And that's a wonder; fathers, commonly,
Do get their children; but, in this case of wooling,
A child shall get a sire, if I fail not of my cunning.
[Exit.

Act Third.

SCENE I.—A ROOM IN BAPTISTA'S HOUSE.

Enter Lucentio, Hortensio, and Bianca.

Luc. Fiddler, forebear; you grow too forward,
Have you so soon forgot the entertainment [sir:
Her sister Katherine welcome'd you withal.

Hor. But, wrangling pedant, this is
The patroness of heavenly harmony;
Then give me leave to have prerogative;
And when in musick we have spent an hour,
Your lecture shall have leisure for as much.

Luc. Preposterous ass! that never read so far
To know the cause why musick was ordain'd!
Was it not to refresh the mind of man,
After his studies, or his usual pain?
Then give me leave to read philosophy,
And while I pause serve in your harmony.

H. Sirrah, I will not bear these braves of thine.

B. Why, gentlemen, you do me double wrong,
To strive for that which resteth in my choice:
I'll not be tied to hours, nor 'pointed times,
But learn my lessons as I please myself.
And, to cut off all strife, here sit we down:—
Take you your instrument, play you the whites;
His lecture will be done, ere you have tun'd.

1 Ship worked both with sails and oars.
2 Merry person.
Hor. You'll leave his lecture when I am in tune? [To Bianca.]—Hortensio retires.
Luc. That will be never; tune your instrument.
Bian. Where left we last?
Luc. Here, madam:
Hac igitur Simeo: hic est Sigeia tellus:
Hic steterat Priami regia celsa sentis.
Bian. Construe them.
Luc. Hac igitur, as I told you before,—Simeo,
I am Lucentio,—hic est, son unto Vincentio
Of Pisa,—Sigeia tellus, disguised thus to get your love;—Hic steterat, and that Lucentio that comes a wooing,—Priami, is my man Tranio, —regia, bearing my port,—celsa sentis, that we might beguile the old pantaloon.
Hor. Madam, my instrument’s in tune.
[Returning.
Bian. Let’s hear:— [Hortensio plays.
O fye! the treble jars.
Luc. Split in the hole, man, and tune again.
Bian. Now let me see if I can construe it:
Hac igitur Simeo, I know you not;—hic est
Sigeia tellus, I trust you not;—Hic steterat
Priami, take heed he hear us not;—regia, presume not;—celsa sentis, despair not.
Hor. Madam, ’tis now in tune.
Luc.
All but the bass.
Hor. The bass is right; ’tis the base knave that
How fiery and forward our pedant is! [jars.
Now, for my life, the knave doth court my love:
Pedascula, I’ll watch you better yet.
Bian. In time I may believe, yet I mistrust.
Luc. Mistrust it not; for sure, Aeacides
Was Ajax,—called so from his grandfather.
Bian. I must believe my master; else I promise
I should be arguing still upon that doubt: (you,
But let it rest.—Now, Licio, to you:—
Good masters, take it not unkindly, pray,
That I have been thus pleasant with you both.
Hor. You may go walk, [To Lucentio.] and give me leave awhile:
My lessons make no music in three parts.
Luc. Are you so formal, sir? well, I must wait,
And watch withal; for, but I be deceiv’d,
Our fine musician groweth amorous. [Aside.
Hor. Madam, before you touch the instrument,
To learn the order of my fingering,
I must begin the rudiments of art;
To teach you gamut in a briefer sort,
More pleasant, pitiful, and effectual,
Than hath been taught by any of my trade:
And there it is in writing, fairly drawn.
Bian. Why, I am past my gamut long ago.
Hor. Yet read the gamut of Hortensio.
Bian. [Reads.] Cauem ut, I am, the ground of all accord.
A re, to plead Hortensio’s passion;
B mi, Bianca, take him for thy lord,
C fa ut, that loves with all affection;
D sol re, one cliff, two notes have I;
E la mi, show pity, or I die.
Call you this—gamut? tut! I like it not:
Old fashions please me best: I am not so nice,
To change true rules for odd inventions.
[Enter a Servant.
Serv. Mistress, your father prays you leave your books,
hat and an old jerkin; a pair of boots that have been candle-cases, one buckled, another laced; an old rusty sword t' en out of the town armory, with a broken hilt and chapeless; with two broken points: His horse hipped with an old buttony saddle, the stirrups of no kindred; besides, possessed with the glanders, and like to mose in the chine; troubled with the lampass, infected with the fashions, full of wind-galls, sped with spavins, railed with the yellows, past cure of the fives, stark spoiled with the staggerers, begnawn with the bots; swayed in the back, and shoulder-shotten; ne'er leg'd before, and with a half-checked bit, and a head-stall of sheep's leather; which, being restrained to keep him from stumbling, hath been often burst, and now repaired with knots: one girt six times pieced, and a woman's crupper of velure, which hath two letters for her name, fairly set down in studs, and here and there pieced with pack-thread.

Bap. Who comes with him?

Bion. O, sir, his lackey, for all the world a caparisoned like the horse; with a linen stock on one leg, and a kersey boot-hose on the other, garmented with a red and blue list: an old hat, and The humour of forty fancies pricked in't for a feather: a monster, a very monster in apparel; and not like a Christian footboy, or a gentleman's lackey.

Tra. 'Tis some odd humour pricks him to this fashion;

Yet oftentimes he goes but mean apparel'd.

Bap. I am glad he is come, howsoe'er he comes.

Bion. Why, sir, he comes not.

Bap. Didst thou not say, he comes?

Bion. Who? that Petrucho came?

Bap. Ay, that Petrucho came.

Bion. No, sir; I say, his horse comes with him on his back.

Bap. Why, that's all one.

Bion. Nay, by saint James, I hold you a penny, A horse and a man is more than one, and yet not many.

Enter Petrucho and Grumio.

Pet. Come, where be these gallants? who is

Bap. You are welcome, sir. [at home]

Pet. And yet I come not well.

Bap. And yet you hate not.

Tra. Not so well apparell'd

As I wish you were.

Pet. Were it better I should rush in thus, But where is Kate? where is my lovely bride?— How does my father?—Gentles, methinks you And wherefore gaze this goodly company? from: As if they saw some wondrous monument, Some comit, or unusual prodigy? [day:

Bap. Why, sir, you know this is your wedding— First were we said, fearing you would not come; Now sadden, that you come so unprovided. Fye! doff this habit, shame to your estate, An eye-sore to our solemn festival.

Tra. And tell us, what occasion of import Hath all so long detain'd you from your wife, And sent you hither so unlike yourself?

Pet. Tedium it were to tell, and harsh to hear; Sufficeth, I am come to keep my word,

1 Velvet. 2 Stocking.

Though in some part enforced to digress; Which, at more leisure, I will so excuse As you shall well be satisfied withal.

But, where is Kate? I stay too long from her; The morning wears, 'tis time we were at church. Tra. See not your bride in these uneventful Go to my chamber, put on clothes of mine, [robes;

Pet. Not I, believe me; thus I'll visit her.

Bap. But thus, I trust, you will not marry her.

Pet. Good sooth, even thus; therefore have done with words:

To me she's married, not unto my clothes: Could I repair what she will wear in me, As I can change these poor accoutrements, 'Twere well for Kate, and better for myself. But what a fool am I, to chat with you, When I should bid good-morrow to my bride, And seal the title with a lovely kiss? [Exeunt Petrucho, Grumio, and Biondello.

Tra. He hath some meaning in his mad attire: We will persuade him, be it possible, To put on better ere he go to church.

Bap. I'll after him, and see the event of this.

[Exit.

Tra. But, sir, to her love concerneth us to add Her father's liking: Which to bring to pass, As I before imparted to your worship, I am to get a man,—whate'er he be, It skills I not much; we'll fit him to our turn,— And he shall be Vincentio of Pisa; And make assurance, here in Padua, Of greater sum than I have promised. So shall you quietly enjoy your hope, And marry sweet Bianca with consent.

Luc. Were it not that my fellow-schoolmaster Doth watch Bianca's steps so narrowly, 'Twere good, methinks, to steal our marriage; Which once perform'd, let all the world say,—no, I'll keep mine own, despite of all the world.

Tra. That by degrees we mean to look into, And watch our vantage in this business: We'll over-reach the grey-beard, Gremio; The narrow-prying father, Minola; The quain musician, amorous Licio; All for my master's sake, Lucentio.—

Re-enter Gremio.

Signior Gremio, came you from the church?

Gre. As willingly as e'er I came from school.

Tra. And is the bride and bridegroom coming home? [deed.

Gre. A bridegroom, say you? 'tis a groom, in A grumbling groom, and that the girl shall find.

Gre. Why, he's a devil, a devil, a very fiend. Tut! she's a lamb, a dove, a fool to him. I'll tell you, Sir Lucentio: When the priest Should ask—if Katherine should be his wife, Ay, by gods-woman, quoth he; and soreso loud, That, all amaz'd, the priest let fall the book: And, as he stoop'd again to take it up, The mad-brain bridegroom took him such a cuff, That down fell priest and book, and book and Now take them up, quoth he, if any list. [priest;

Tra. What said the wench, when he arose again? Gre. Trembled and shook: for why, he stamp'd, and swore,

1 Matters. 2 Dainty.
As if the vicar meant to cozen him.
But after many ceremonies done,
He calls for wine:—A health, quoth he; as if
He had been abroad carousing to his mates
After a storm:—Quaff'd off the muscadel,
And threw the sops all in the sexton's face;
Having no other reason,—
But that his beard grew thin and hungerly,
And seemed to ask him sops as he was drinking.
This done, he took the bride about the neck;
And kiss'd her lips with such a clamorous smack,
That, at the parting, all the church did echo.
I, seeing this, came thence for very shame;
And, after me, I know the rout is coming;
Such a mad marriage never was before:
Hark, hark! I hear the minstrels play. [Music.]

Enter Petruccio, Katharina, Bianca, Baptista, Hortensio, Grumio, and Train.

P. Gentlemen and friends, I thank you for your

I know, you think to dine with me to-day, [pains:

And have prepared great store of wedding cheer;

But so it is, my haste doth call me hence,

And therefore here I mean to take my leave.

Bap. Is't possible, you will away to-night?

Pet. I must away to-day, before night come:—

Make it no wonder; if you knew my business,

You would entreat me rather go than stay,

And, honest company, I thank you all,

That have beheld me give away myself

To this most patient, sweet, and virtuous wife:

Dine with my father, drink a health to me;

For I must hence, and farewell to you all.

Tru. Let us entreat you stay till after dinner.

Pet. It may not be.

Gru. Let me entreat you.

Pet. It cannot be.

Kath. Let me entreat you.

Pet. I am content.

Kath. Are you content to stay?

Pet. I am content you shall entreat me stay?

But yet not stay, entreat me how you can.

Kath. Now, if you love me, stay.

Gru. Ay, sir, they be ready; the oats have eaten the horses.

Kath. Nay, then,

Do what thou canst, I will not go to-day;

No, nor to-morrow, nor till I please myself.

The door is open, sir, there lies your way,

You may be jogging, whilst your boots are green;

For me, I'll not be gone, till I please myself:—

'Tis like you'll prove a jolly surly groom,

That take it on you at the first so roundly.

P. O, Kate, content thee; pr'ythee be not angry.

Kath. I will be angry; What hast thou to do?

Father, be quiet: he shall stay my leisure.

Gru. Ay, marry, sir: now it begins to work.

K. Gentlemen, forward to the bridal dinner.—

I see, a woman may be made a fool,

If she had not a spirit to resist. [mand:—

Pet. They shall go forward, Kate, at thy com-

Obey the bride, you that attend on her:

Go to the feast, revel, and dominer,

Be mad, and merry,—or go hang yourselves;

But for my bonny Kate, she must with me.

Nay, look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret;

I will be master of what is mine own:

She is my goods, my chattels; she is my house,

My household stuff, my field, my barn,

My horse, my ox, my ass, my anything;

And here she stands, touch her whoever dare;

I'll bring my action on the proudest he

That stops my way in Padua.—Grumio,

Draw forth thy weapon; we're beset with thieves;

Rescue thy mistresse, if thou be a man:—

Fear not, sweet wench, they shall not touch thee,

I'll buckle thee against a million. [Kate:]

[Exeunt Petruccio, Katharina, and Grumio.

Bap. Nay, let them go, a couple of quiet ones.

Gre. Went they not quickly, I should die with laughing.

Tru. Of all mad matches, never was the like!

L. Mistress, what's your opinion of your sister?

B. That being mad herself, she's madmated.

Gre. I warrant him, Petruccio is Kate,

Bap. Neighbours and friends, though bride and bridegroom wants

You know, there wants no junks at the feast:—

Lucentio, you shall supply the bridegroom's

T. Shall sweet Bianca practise how to bride it?

Bap. She shall, Lucentio.—Come, gentlemen,

let's go.

[Exeunt.

Act Fourth.

SCENE I.

A HALL IN PETRUCHIO'S COUNTRY HOUSE.

Enter Grumio.

Gru. Fie, fie, on all tired jades, on all mad masters! and all foul ways! Was ever man so beaten? was ever man so rayed? was ever man so weary? I am sent before to make a fire, and they are coming after to warm them. Now, I were not a little pot, and soon hot, my very lips might freeze to my teeth, ere I should come by a fire to thaw me:—But, I, with blowing the fire, shall warm myself; for, considering the weather, a taller man than I will take cold.

Holla, hoa! Curtis!

Enter Curtis.

Curt. Who is that calls so coldly?

Gru. A piece of ice: If thou doubt it, thou mayst slide from my shoulder to my heel, with no greater a run but my head and my neck. A fire, good Curtis.

Curt. Is my master and his wife coming,

Grumio?

Gru. O, ay, Curtis, ay: and therefore fire, fire; cast on no water.

Curt. Is she so hot a shrew as she's reported?

G. She was, good Curtis, before this frost; but, thou know'st, winter tames man, woman, and beast; for it hath tamed my old master, and my new mistress, and myself, fellow Curtis.

C. Away, you three-inch fool! I am no beast.

Gru. Am I but three inches? why, thy horn is a foot; and so long am I, at the least. But TAMING OF THE SHREW.

SC. I.

1 An old song. 2 Drinking measures. 3 Bemired.

wilt thou make a fire, or shall I complain on thee to our mistress, whose hand (she being now at hand) thou shalt soon feel, to thy cold comfort, for being slow in thy hot office?

Curt. I pray thee, good Grumio, tell me, How goes the world?

Gru. A cold world, Curtis, in every office but thine; and, therefore, fire; Do thy duty, and have thy duty; for my master and mistress are almost frozen to death.

Curt. There's fire ready: And therefore, good Grumio, the news?

Gru. Why, Jack boy! ho boy! and fire; for I have caught extreme cold. Where's the cook? is supper ready, the house trimmed, rushes strewn; cobwebs swept; the serving-men in their new fustian; their white stockings, and every officer his wedding-garment on? Be the jacks fair within, the jills fair without? the carpets laid, and everything in order?

C. All ready; and therefore, I pray thee, news?

Gru. First, know, my horse is tired; my master and mistress fallen out.

Curt. How?

Gru. Out of their saddles into the dirt; And thereby hangs a tale.

Curt. Let's ha', good Grumio.

Gru. Lend thine ear.

Curt. Here.

Gru. [Striking him.] There.

Curt. This is to feel a tale, not to hear a tale.

Gru. And therefore 'tis called a sensible tale: and this cuff was but to knock at your ear, and beseech listening. Now I begin: Improvis, we came down a foul hill, my master riding behind my mistress:—

Curt. Both on one horse?

Gru. What's that to thee?

Curt. Why, a horse.

Gru. Tell thou the tale: But hadst thou not crossed me, thou should'st have heard how her horse fell, and she under her horse; thou should'st have heard in how miry a place: how she was bemoled; how he left her with the horse upon her; how he beat me because her horse stumbled; how she waded through the dirt to pluck him off me; how he swore; how she prayed—that never prayed before; how I cried; how the horses ran away; how her bridle was burst; how I lost my crupper;—with many things of worthy memory; which now shall die in oblivion, and thou return unexperienced to thy grave.

Curt. By this reckoning, he is more shrew than she.

Gru. Ay; and that, thou and the proudest of you all shall find, when he comes home. But what talk I of this?—call forth Nathaniel, Joseph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter, Sugarsop, and the rest; let their heads be sleekly combed, their blue coats brushed, and their garters of an indifferency; let them curtsey with their left legs; and not presume to touch a hair of my master's horse-tail, till they kiss their hands. Are they all ready?

Curt. They are.

Gru. Call them forth.

Curt. Do you hear, ho! you must meet my master, to countenance my mistress.

Gru. Why, she hath a face of her own.

Curt. Who knows not that?

Gru. Thou, it seems; that call for company to countenance her.

Curt. I call them forth to credit her.

G. Why, she comes to borrow nothing of them.

Enter several Servants.

Nath. Welcome home, Grumio.

Phil. How now, Grumio?

Jos. What, Grumio!

Nich. Fellow Grumio!

Nath. How now, old lad?

Gru. Welcome, you;—how now, you;—what, you;—fellow, you— and thus much for greeting. Now, my spruce companions, is all ready and all things neat?

Nath. All things are ready: How near is our master?

Gru. E'en at hand, alighted by this; and therefore be not,—silence! I hear my master.

Enter Petruchio and Katharina.

Pet. Where be these knives? What, no man at door,

To hold my stirrup, nor to take my horse!

Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Philip?

All Serv. Here, here, sir; here, sir.

Pet. Here, sir! here, sir! here, sir, here, sir!—You logger-headed and unpolish'd grooms! What, no attendance? no regard? no duty?

Where is the foolish knave I sent before?

Gru. Here, sir; as foolish as I was before.

P. You peasant swain! you mait-horse drudge! Did I not bid thee meet me in the park, And bring along these rascal knives with thee? G. Nathaniel's coat, sir, was not fully made, And Gabriel's pumps were all unpink'd; the There was no link1 to colour Peter's hat, heel; And Walter's dagger was not come from sheathing:

[Gregory;

There were none fine, but Adam, Ralph, and The rest were ragged, old, and beggarly; Yet, as they are, here they come to meet you.

P. Go, rascals, go, and fetch my supper in.—

[Servants.]

[Sings.] Where is the life that late I led—

Where are those—Sit down, Kate, and wel- Soud, sound, sound, sound!2 [come.]

Re-enter Servants with supper.

Why, when, I say?—Nay, good sweet Kate, be merry. Off with my boots, you rogues, you villains: When?

[Sings.] It was the friar of orders gray, As he forth walked on his way:—

Out, out, you rogue! you pluck my foot awry: [Strikes him.] Take that, and mend the pluck- ing off the other.——

Bemerry, Kate:—Some water, here; what, ho!—

Where's my spaniel Troilus?—Sirrah, get you hence,

And bid my cousin Ferdinand come hither:—

[Exit Servant.

One, Kate, that you must kiss, and be acquainted with.——

1 Pitch torch. 2 Indicating weariness.
Where are my slippers?—Shall I have some water?

Come, Kate, and wash, and welcome heartily—

[Servant lets the ever fall.

You villain! will you let it fall? [Strikes him.

K. Patience, I pray you;'twas a fault unwill-

Come, Kate, sit down; I know you have a stomach.

Will you give thanks, sweet Kate; or else shall

What is this? mutton?

1 Serv. Ay.

Pet. Who brought it?

1 Serv. I.

Pet. 'Tis burnt; and so is all the meat:

What dogs are these?—Where is the rascal cook?

How dress you, villains, bring it from the dresser,

And serve it thus to me that love it not?

There, take it to you, trenchers, cups, and all:

[Throws the meat, &c., about.

You needless joltheades, and unmanner'd slaves!

What, do you grumble? I'll be with you straight.

Kath. I pray you, husband, be not so disquiet;

The meat was well, if you were so contented.

P. I tell thee, Kate, 'twas burnt and dried

And I expressly am forbid to touch it, [away;

For it engenders choler, planteth anger;

And better 'twere, that both of us did fast,

Since of ourselves, ourselves are cholerick,—

Than feed it with such over-roasted flesh.

Be patient; to-morrow it shall be mended,

And, for this night, we'll fast for company:

Come, I will bring thee to thy bridal chamber.

[Exeunt Petruchio, Katharina, and Curtis.

Nath. [Advancing.] Peter, didst ever see the Peter.

He kills her in her own humour, [like?

Re-enter Curtis.

Gru. Where is he?

Curt. In her chamber,

Making a sermon of contumacy to her: [soul,

And rails, and swears, and rates; that she, poor

Knows not which way to stand, to look, to speak;

And sits as one new-risen from a dream.

Away, away! for he is coming hither. [Exeunt.

Re-enter Petruchio.

Pet. Thus have I politically begun my reign,

And 'tis my hope to end successfully:

My falcon now is sharp, and passing empty;

And, till she stoop, she must not be full-gorg'd,

For then she never looks upon her lure.

Another way I have to man my haggard,

To make her come, and know her keeper's call,

That is,—to watch her, as we watch these kites,

That bate, and beat, and will not be obedient.

She eat no meat to-day, nor none shall eat;

Last night she slept not, nor to-night she shall

As with the meat, some undeserved fault [not: I'll find about the making of the bed;

And here I'll fling the pillow, there the bolster,

This way the coverlet, another way the sheets:—

Ay, and amid this hurly, I intend

That all is done in reverend care of her;

And, in conclusion, she shall watch all night:

And, if she chance to nod, I'll rail and brawl,

And with the clamour keep her still awake.

This is the way to kill a wife with kindness;

And thus I'll curb her mad and headstrong humour:

He that knows better how to tame a shrew,

Now let him speak; 'tis charity to shew. [Exit.

SCENE II.

PADUA. BEFORE BAPTISTA'S HOUSE.

Enter Tranio and Hortensio.

Tra. Is't possible, friend Licio, that Bianca

Doth fancy any other but Lucentio?

I tell you, sir, she bears me fair in hand.

Hor. Sir, to satisfy you in what I have said,

Stand by, and mark the manner of his teaching.

[They stand aside.

Enter Bianca and Lucentio.

L. Now, mistress, profit you in what you read?

B. What, master; read you? first resolve me that.

Luc. I read that I profess, the art of love.

B. And may you prove, sir, master of your art?

Luc. While you, sweet dear, prove mistress of my heart.

[They retire.

Hor. Quick proceeders, marry! Now, tell me,

You that dost swear that your mistress Bianca
 Lov'd none in the world so well as Lucentio.

T. Of spiteful love! unconstant womankind;—

I tell thee, Licio, this is wonderful.

Hor. Mistake no more: I am not Licio,

Nor a musician as I seem to be;

But one that scorn to live in this disguise,

For such a one as leaves a gentleman,

And makes a god of such a cullion:

Know, sir, that I am call'd—Hortensio.

Tra. Signior Hortensio, I have often heard

Of your entire affection to Bianca;

And since mine eyes are witness of her lightness,

I will with you,—if you be so contented,—

Forswear Bianca and her love for ever.

Hor. See how they kiss and court,—Signior

Lucentio,

Here is my hand, and here I firmly vow—

Never to woo her more; but to forswear her,

As one unworthy all the former favours

That I have fondly flatter'd her withal.

T. And here I take the like unfeigned oath,—

Ne'ertomarrywithherthoughshewouldeatreat.

Fie on her! see how beastly she doth court him.

Hor. 'Would, all the world, but he, had quite forsworn!

For me, that I may surely keep mine oath,

I will be married to a wealthy widow,

Ere three days pass; which hath as long Iov'd me,

As I have lov'd this proud disdainful haggard:

And so farewell, signior Lucentio.—

Kindness in women, not their beauteous looks,

Shall win my love:—and so I take my leave,

In resolution as I swore before.

[Exit Horten.—Lucen. and Bian. advance.

T. Mistress Bianca, bless you with such grace

As losweth to a lover's blessed case!

Nay, I have taken you napping, gentle love;

And have forswwern you, with Hortensio.

Bian. Tranio, you jest! But have you both forsworn me?

Tra. Mistress, we have.

1 Despicable fellow. 2 Hawk.
Luc. Then we are rid of Licio.

Tra. He'll have a widow now,
That shall be woo'd and wedded in a day.

Bian. Heaven give him joy!

Tra. Ay, and he'll tame her.

Bian. He says so, Tranio.

Tra. 'Tis gone unto the taming-school.

Bian. The taming-school! what is there such a place?

Tra. Ay, mistress, and Petruchio the master;
That teacheth tricks eleven and twenty long,—
To tame a shrew, and charm her chattering tongue.

Enter Biondello, running.

Bion. O master, master, I have watch'd so long
That I'm dog-weary; but at last I spied
An ancient angel coming down the hill,
Will serve the turn.

Tra. What is he, Biondello?

Bion. Master, a merchant, or a pedant,
I know not what; but formal in apparel,
In gait and countenance surely like a father.

Luc. And what of him, Tranio?

Tra. If he be credulous, and trust my tale,
I'll make him glad to seem Vincentio;
And give assurance to Baptista Minola,
As if he were the right Vincentio.

Take in your love, and then let me alone.

[Exeunt Lucentio and Bianca.

Enter a Pedant.

Ped. God save you, sir!

Tra. And you, sir! you are welcome.

Travel you far on, or are you at the furthest?

Ped. Sir, at the furthest for a week or two:
But then up further; and as far as Rome;
And so to Tripoli, if heaven lend me life.

Tra. What countryman, I pray?

Ped. Of Mantua.

Tra. Of Mantua, sir?—marry, heaven forbid!
And come to Padua, careless of your life?

P. My life, sir! how, I pray? for that goes
Tra. 'Tis death for any one in Mantua [hard.
To come to Padua; know you not the cause?
Your ships are staid at Venice; and the duke
(For private quarrel 'twixt your duke and him)
Hath publish'd and proclaimed it openly:
'Tis marvelous; but that you're but newly come,
You might have heard it else proclaimed about.

Ped. Alas, sir, it is worse for me than so;
For I have bills for money by exchange
From Florence, and must here deliver them.

Tra. Well, sir, to do you courtesy,
This will I do, and this will I advise you;—
First, tell me, have you ever been at Pisa?

Ped. Ay, sir, in Pisa I have often been;
Pisa, renowned for brave citizens.

Tra. Among them, know you one Vincentio?

Ped. I know him not, but I have heard of him;
A merchant of incomparable wealth.

Tra. He is my father, sir; and, sooth to say,
In countenance somewhat doth resemble you.

Bion. [Aside.] As much as an apple doth an oyster, and all one.

Tra. To save your life in this extremity,
This favour will I do you for his sake;
And think it not the worst of all your fortunes,

—Messenger. 2 A merchant or a schoolmaster.

That you are like to Sir Vincentio.
His name and credit shall you undertake,
And in my house you shall be friendly lodg'd;—
Look, that you take upon you as you should;
You understand me, sir;—so shall you stay
Till you have done your business in the city:
If this be courtesy, sir, accept of it.

Ped. O, sir, I do; and will repute you ever
The patron of my life and liberty.

Tra. Then go with me, to make the matter
This, by the way, I let you understand; [good.
My father is here look'd for every day.
To pass assurance of a dower in marriage
'Twixt me and one Baptista's daughter here:
In all these circumstances I'll instruct you:
Go with me, sir, to clothe you as becomes you.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A ROOM IN PETRUCCIO'S HOUSE.

Enter Katharina and Grumio.

Gru. No, no, forsooth: I dare not for my life.
Kath. The more my wrong, the more his spite
What, did he marry me to famish me? [appears:
Beggars, that come unto my father's door,
Upon entreaty, have a present alms;
If not, elsewhere they meet with charity:
But I,—who never knew how to entreat,—
Nor never needed that I should entreat,
Am starv'd for meat, giddy for lack of sleep;
With oaths kept waking, and with brawling fed;
And that which spites me more than all these
He does it under name of perfect love; [wants,
As who should say,—if I should sleep, or eat,
'Twere deadly sickness, or else present death.—
I pr'ythee go, and get me some repast;
I care not what, so it be wholesome food,
Gru. What say you to a neat's foot?
K. 'Tis passing good; I pr'ythee let me have it.
Gru. I fear it is too choleric a meat:—
How say you to a fat tripe, finely broil'd?
Kath. I like it well; good Grumio, fetch it me.
Gru. I cannot tell; I fear 'tis choleric.
What say you to a piece of beef, and mustard?
Kath. A dish that I do love to feed upon.
Gru. Ay, but the mustard is too hot a little.
Kath. Why, then the beef, and let the mustard rest.

[mustard,
Gru. Nay, then I will not; you shall have the
Or else you get no beef of Grumio. [will.
Kath. Then both, or one, or any thing thou
Gru. Why then the mustard without the beef.
Kath. Go, get thee gone, thou false deluding slave,

[Beats him.
That feed'st me with the very name of meat:
Sorrow on thee, and all the pack of you,
That triumph thus upon my misery!
Go, get thee gone, I say.

Enter Petruchio, with a dish of meat; and Horten.

Pet. How fares my Kate? What, sweeting, all amoret?

Hor. Mistress, what cheer?
Kath. Faith as cold as can be.

Pet. Pluck up thy sprits, look cheerfully upon me.

Here, love; thou seeest how diligent I am,
To dress thy meat thyself, and bring it thee;

[Sets the dish on a table.]
I am sure, sweet Kate, this kindness merits thanks.

What, not a word? Nay then, thou lovest it not;
And all my pains is sorted to no proof:—
Here, take away this dish.

Kath. 'Pray you, let it stand.
Pet. The poorest service is repaid with thanks;
And so shall mine before you touch the meat.
Kath. I thank you, sir.

Hor. Signor Petruchio, fye! you are to blame!
Come, mistress Kate, I'll bear you company.

Pet. [Aside.] Eat it up all, Hortensio, if thou lov'st me.

Much good do it unto thy gentle heart!
Kate, eat apiece:—And now, my honey love,
Will we return unto thy father's house;
And revel it as bravely as the best,
With silken coats, and caps, and golden rings,
With ruffs and cuffs, and farthingales, and things;
With scarfs, and fans, and double change of bravery,

[Knavery.

With amber bracelets, beads, and all this What, hast thou din'd? The tailor stays thy leisure, To deck thy body with his ruffing treasure.

Enter Tailor.

Come, tailor, let us see these ornaments; Enter Haberdasher.

Lay forth the gown.—What news with you, sir?

Kab. Here is the cap your worship did bespeak.

Pet. Why, this was moulded on a perringer? Why, 'tis a cockle, or a walnutshell, A knack, a toy, a trick, a baby's cap; Away with it, come, let me have a bigger.

Kath. I'll have no bigger; this doth fit the time, And gentlewomen wear such caps as these.

P. When you are gentle, you shall have one too, And n'till them.

Hor. [Aside.] That will not be in haste.

K. Why, sir, I trust, I may have leave to speak; And speak I will; I am no child, no babe; Your better have endur'd me say my mind; And, if you cannot, best you stop your ears. My tongue will tell the anger of my heart; Or else my heart, concealing it, will break: And rather than it shall, I will be free Even to the uttermost, as I please, in words.

Pet. Why, thou say'st true; it is a paltry cap, A custard-coffin, a bubble, a silken pie: I love thee well, in that thou lik'st it not.

Kath. Love me, or love me not, I like the cap; And it I will have, or I will have none.

Pet. Thy gown? why, ay,—Come, tailor, let us O mercy, see what masking stuff is here! [See't. What's this? a sleeve? 'tis like a demi-canon: What! up and down, card'd like an apple-tart? Here's snap, and nip, and cut, and slash, and Like to a censer in a barber's shop:—[Slash. Why, what, tailor, call'st thou this?

Hor. [Aside.] I see, she's like to have neither cap nor gown.

Tai. You bid me make it orderly and well, According to the fashion, and the time.

Pet. Marry, and did; but if you be remember'd, I did not bid you mar it to the time, Go, hop me over every kennel home, For you shall hop without my custom, sir: I'll none of it; hence, make your best of it.

Kath. I never saw a better-fashion'd gown, More quaint,3 more pleasing, nor more commendable;
Belike, you mean to make a puppet of me.

Pet. Why, true; he means to make a puppet of thee.

Tai. She says, your worship means to make a puppet of her.

Pet. O monstrous arrogance! Thou liest, Thou thread, thou thimble,
Thou yard, three quarters, half-yard, quarter, nail,
Thou fca, thou nit, thou winter cricket thou:— Brav'd in mine own house with a skin of thread! Away thou rag, thou quantity, thou remnant: Or I shall so bemete thee with thy yard, As thou shalt think on prating whilst thou liv'st! I tell thee, I, that thou hast marr'd her gown.

Tai. Your worship is deceiv'd; the gown is made Just as my master had direction:

Grunio gave order how it should be done.

Gru. I gave him no order, I gave him the stuff.

Tai. But how did you desire it should be made?

Gru. Marry, sir, with needle and thread.

Tai. But did you not request to have it cut?

Gru. Thou hast faced many things.

Tai. I have.

Gru. Face not me; thou hast brav'd many men; brave not me: I will neither be faced nor brav'd. I say unto thee,—I bid thy master cut the gown; but I did not bid him cut it to pieces: ergo, thou liest.

Tai. Why, here is the note of the fashion to testify.

Pet. Read it.

G. The note lies in his throat, if he says I said

Tai. Imprint, a loose-bodied gown: [so.

Gru. Master, if ever I said loose-bodied gown, sew not up the skirts of it, and beat me to death with a bottom of brown thread: I said, a gown.

Tai. With a small compassed cap;

Gru. I confess the cape.

Tai. With a trunk sleeve:—

Gru. I confess two sleeves.

Tai. The sleeves curiously cut.

Pet. Ay, there's the villainy.

Gru. Error! the bill, sir; error! the bill. I commanded the sleeves should be cut out, and sewed up again; and that I'll prove upon thee, though thy little finger be armed in a thimble.

Tai. This is true, that I say; an I had thee in place where, thou should'st know it.

Gru. I am for thee straight: take thou the bill, give me thy mete-yard,3 and spare not me.

Hor. Grammercy, Grumio! he shall have no odds.

Pet. Well, sir, in brief, the gown is not for me.

Gru. You are i' the right, sir.

Pet. [Aside.] Hortensio, say thou wilt see the tailor paid:—

Go, take it hence; be gone and say no more.

1 Elegant. 2 Be-measure. 3 Measuring-yard.
H. Tailor, I’ll pay thee for thy gown to-morrow. Take no unkindness of his hasty words: Away, I say; commend me to thy master.

[Exit Tailor.

Pet. Well, come, my Kate; we will unto thy father’s, Even in these honest mean habitments; Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor: For ‘tis the mind that makes the body rich; And as the sun breaks through the darkest Sohonoour peereth in the meanest habit. [clouds, What, is the jay more precious than the lark, Because his feathers are more beautiful? Or is theadderbetter than the eel, Because his painted skin contents the eye? O, no, good Kate; neither art thou the worse For this poor furniture, and mean array. If thou account’st it shame, lay it on me: And therefore frolick; we will henceforth, To feast and sport us at thy father’s house, Go, call my men, and let us straight to him; And bring our horses unto Long-lane end, There will we mount, and thither walk on foot. — Let’s see; I think ‘tis now some seven o’clock, And well we may come there by dinner-time. Kath. I dare assure you, sir, ’tis almost two; And ’twill be supper time, ere you come there.

Pet. It shall be seven, ere I go to horse: Look, what I speak, or do, or think to do, You are still crossing it. — Sir, let’s alone: I will not go to-day; and ere I do, It shall be some o’clock I say it is.

Hor. Why, so! this gallant will command the sun.

SCENE IV.

PADUA. BEFORE BAPTISTA’S HOUSE.

Enter Tranio, and the Pedant dressed like Vincentio.

Tra. Sir, this is the house: Please it you, that I call?

Ped. Ay, what else? and but I be deceived, Signior Baptista may remember me, Near twenty years ago, in Genoe, where We were lodgers at the Pegasus.

Tra. ’Tis well; And hold your own, in any case, with such Austerity as ‘longeth to a father.

Enter Biondello.

P. I warrant you: But, sir, here comes your ’Twere good, he were school’d. [boy, Tranio. Fear you not him. Sirrah, Biondello, Now do your duty thoroughly, I advise you; Imagine ’twere the right Vincentio.

Bion. Tut! fear not me. [tista? T. But hast thou done thy errand to Bap.-l. I told him that your father was at Venice; And that you look’d for him this day in Padua.

Tra. Thou’rt a tall fellow; hold thee that to drink. [sir.— Here comes Baptista: —set your countenance.

Enter Baptista and Lucentio.

Signior Baptista, you are happily met:— Sir, [To the Pedant.]

This is the gentleman I told you of; I pray you, stand good father to me now, Give me Bianca for my patronymity.

Ped. Soft, son!—

Sir, by your leave; having come to Padua To gather in some debts, my son Lucentio Made me acquainted with a weighty cause Of love between your daughter and himself: And,—for the good report I hear of you; And for the love he beareth to your daughter And she to him,—to stay him not too long, I am content, in a good father’s care, To have him match’d; and,—if you please to No worse than I, sir,—upon some agreement, Me shall you find most ready and most willing With one consent to have her so bestowed; For curious! I cannot be with you, Signior Baptista, of whom I hear so well.

Bap. Sir, pardon me in what I have to say: — Your plainness, and your shortness, please me Right true it is, your son, Lucentio here, [well. Doth love my daughter, and she loveth him, Or both resemble deeply their affections: And therefore, if you say no more than this, That like a father you will deal with him, And pass my daughter a sufficient dower, The match is fully made, and all is done: Your son shall have my daughter with consent.

Tra. I thank you, sir. Where then do you know best, We be afflied, and such assurance ta’en, As shall with either part’s agreement stand?

Bap. Not in my house, Lucentio; for, you know Pitchers have ears, and I have many servants: Besides, old Grumio is heark’ning still; And, happily, we might be interrupted.

Tra. Then at my lodging, an it like you, sir: There doth my father lie; and there, this night, We’ll pass the business privately and well: Send for your daughter by your servant here, My boy shall fetch the scrivener presently. The worst is this,—that at so slender warning, You’re like to have a thin and slender pitance.

Bap. It likes me well; — Cambio, hee you home, And bid Bianca make her ready straight; And, if you will, tell what hath happened:— Lucentio’s father is arriv’d in Padua, And how she’s like to be Lucentio’s wife.

L. I pray the gods she may with all my heart!

T. Dally not with the gods, but get thee gone. Signior Baptista, shall I lead the way? Welcome! one mess is like to be your cheer: Come, sir, we’ll better it in Pisa.

Bap. [Exit Tranio, Pedant, and Baptista.

L. Cambio. —

Bion. What sayst thou, Biondello? Bion. You saw my master wink and laugh upon you?

L. Biondello, what of that? Bion. Faith nothing: but he has left me here behind, to expound the meaning or moral of his signs and tokens.

L. I pray thee moralize them. Bion. Then thus. Baptista is safe, talking with the deceiving father of a deceitful son. L. And what of him?

1 Scrupulous. 2 Convey. 3 Betrothed. 4 Iaply.
Bion. His daughter is to be brought by you to the supper.

Luc. And then?

Bion. The old priest at Saint Luke's church is at your command at all hours.

Luc. And what of all this?

Bion. I cannot tell; except they are busied about a counterfeit assurance: Take your assurance of her, sum privilegio ad imprimitendum sol ens: to the church;—take the priest, clerk, and some sufficient honest witnesses: (to say, If this be not what you look for, I have no more But, bid Bianca farewell for ever and a day.

[Going.

Luc. Hear'st thou, Biondello?

Bion. I cannot tarry: I knew a girl married in an afternoon as she went to the garden for parsley to stuff a rabbit; and so may you, sir; and so adieu, sir. My master hath appointed me to go to Saint Luke's, to bid the priest be ready to come against you with your appendix.

[Exit.

SCENE V.—A PUBLIC ROAD.

Enter Petruchio, Katharina, and Hortensio.

Pet. Come on; once more toward our father's house.

[moon!

Good Kate, how bright and goodly shines the Kath. The moon! the sun! it is not moon-light now.

Pet. I say, it is the moon that shines so bright. Kate. I know, it is the sun that shines so bright.

P. Now, by my mother's son, and that's myself, It shall be moon, or star, or what I list, Or ere I journey to your father's house: Go on, and fetch our horses back again.— Evermore cross'd, and cross'd; nothing but cross'd!

Hor. Say as he says, or we shall never go.

K. Forward, I pray, since we have come so far, And be it moon, or sun, or what you please: And if you please to call it a rush candle, Henceforth I vow it shall be so for me.

Pet. I say, it is the moon.

Kath. I know it is.

Pet. Nay, then you lie; it is the blessed sun. K. Then, God be blessed, it is the blessed sun:— But sun it is not, when you say it is not; And the moon changes, even as your mind. What you will have it nam'd, even that it is; And so it shall be, so, for Katharine.

Hor. Petruchio, go thy ways, the field is won.

Pet. Well, forward, forward: thus the bowl should run, And not unluckily against the bias— But soft; what company is coming here?

Enter Vincentio, in a travelling dress.

[To Vincentio.] Good morrow, gentle mistress: where away?—

Tell me, sweet Kate, and tell me truly too, Hast thou beheld a fresher gentlewoman? Such war of white and red within her cheeks!

What stars do spangle heaven with such beauty,
As those two eyes become that heavenly face?—
Fair lovely maid, once more good day to thee:—
Sweet Kate, embrace her for her beauty's sake.

Hor. 'A will make the man mad, to make a woman of him.

K. Young budding virgin, fair, and fresh, and Whither away, or where is thy abode? [sweet,
Happy the parents of so fair a child;
Happier the man, whom favourable stars
Allot thee for his lovely bed-fellow! [mad:
Pet. Why, how now, Kate! I hope thou art not
This is a man, old, wrinkled, faded, wither'd;
And not a maiden, as thou say'st he is,
Kath. Pardons, old father, my mistaking eyes,
That have been so bedazzled with the sun,
That every thing I look on seemeth green:
Now, I perceive, thou art a reverend father;
Pardon, I pray thee, for my mad mistaking.

Pet. Do, good old grandsire; and, withal, makes known
Which way thou travellest: if along with us,
We shall be joyful of thy company.

Vin. Fair sir,—and you my merry mistress,—
That with your strange encounter much amaz'd me;

[Fls: My name is call'd—Vincentio; my dwelling—
And bound I am to Padua; there to visit
A son of mine, which long I have not seen.

Pet. What is his name?

Vin. Lucentio, gentle sir.

Pet. Happily met; the happier for thy son.

And now by law, as well as reverend age,
I may entitle thee—my loving father;

The sister to my wife, this gentlewoman,
Thy son by this hath married: Wonder not,
Nor be not grieve'd; she is of good esteem,
Her dowry wealthy, and of worthy birth,
Beside, so qualified as may beseem
The spouse of any noble gentleman.

Let me embrace with old Vincentio:
And wander we to see thy honest son,
Who will of thy arrival be full joyous.

V. But is this true? or is it else your pleasure,
Like pleasant travellers, to break a jest
Upon the company you overtake?

Hor. I do assure thee, father, so it is.

Pet. Come, go along, and see the truth hereof;
For our first merriment hath made thee jealous.

[Exeunt Petruchio, Katharina, and Vincentio.

H. Well, Petruchio, this hath put me in heart.

Have to my widow; and if she be froward,
Then hast thou taught Hortensio to be un-toward.

[Exit.

Act Fifth.

SCENE I.

PADUA. BEFORE LUCENTIO'S HOUSE.

Enter on one side Biondello, Lucentio, and Bianca; Gremio walking on the other side.

D. Softly and swiftly, sir; for the priest is ready.

Luc. I fly, Biondello: but they may chance to need thee at home, therefore leave us.
Enter Petruccio, Katharina, Vincentio, and Attendants.

P. Sir, here's the door, this is Lucentio's house; My father's bears more toward the market-place; Thither must I, and here I leave you, sir.

V. You shall not choose but drink before you go;
I think, I shall command your welcome here,
And by all likelihood, some cheer is toward.

[Knocks.

Gre. They're busy within, you were best knock louder.

Enter Pedant above, at a window.

Ped. What's he, that knocks as he would beat down the gate?

Vin. Is signior Lucentio within, sir? [within.

Ped. He's within, sir, but not to be spoken
Vin. What if a man bring him a hundred pound or two, to make merry within!

Ped. Keep your hundred pounds to yourself;
he shall need none, so long as I live.

Pet. Nay, I told you, your son was beloved in Padua.—Do you hear, sir?—to leave frivolous circumstances,—I pray you, tell signior Lucentio, that his father is come from Pisa, and is here at the door to speak with him.

Ped. Thou liest; his father is come from Pisa, and here looking out at the window.

Vin. Art thou his father?

Ped. Ay, sir; so his mother says, if I may believe her.

Pet. Why, how now, gentlemen! [To Vincen.

why, this is flat knavery, to take upon you another man's name.

Ped. Lay hands on the villain; I believe 'a means to cozen somebody in this city under my countenance.

Re-enter Biondello.

Bion. I have seen them in the church together: But who is here? mine old master Vincentio? now we are undone, and brought to nothing.

Vin. [Seeing Bion.] Come hither, crack-Bion. I hope, I may choose, sir. [hemp.2

Vin. Come hither, you rogue: What, have you forgot me?

Bion. Forgot you? no, sir: I could not forget you, for I never saw you before in all my life.

Vin. What, you notorious villain, didst thou never see thy master's father, Vincentio?

Bion. What, my old, worshipful old master? yes, marry, sir; see where he looks out of the window.

Vin. Is't so, indeed? [Beats Biondello

Bion. Help, help, help! here's a madman will murder me.

[Exit.

Ped. Help, son! help, signior Baptista! [Exit, from the window.

Pet. Pr'ythee, Kate, let's stand aside, and see the end of this controversy. [They retire.

Re-enter Pedant below; Baptista, Tranio, and Servants.

Tra. Sir, what are you, that offer to beat my servant?

Vin. What am I, sir? say what are you, sir?

—O immortal gods! O fine villain! A silken doublet! a velvet hose! a scarlet cloak! and a copatrain hat!—O, I am undone! I am undone! While I play the good husband at home, my son and my servant spend all at the university.

Tra. How now! what's the matter?

Bap. What, is the man lunatick?

Tra. Sir, you seem a sober ancient gentleman by your habit, but your words show you a madman: Why, sir, what concerns it you, if I wear pearl and gold? I thank my good father, I am able to maintain it.

Vin. Thy father? O, villain! he is a sailmaker in Bergano.

Bap. You mistake, sir; you mistake, sir: Pray, what do you think is his name?

Vin. His name? as if I knew not his name: I have brought him up ever since he was three years old, and his name is—Tranio.

Ped. Away, away, mad ass! his name is Lucentio! and he is mine only son, and heir to the lands of me, signior Vincentio.

Vin. Lucentio: O, he hath murdered his master!—Lay hold on him, I charge you, in the duke's name:—O, my son, my son!—tell me, thou villain, where is my son Lucentio?

Tra. Call forth an officer:—[Enter one with an Officer. Carry this mad knave to the gaol:— Father Baptista, I charge you, see that he be forthcoming.

Vin. Carry me to the gaol!

Gre. Stay, officer; he shall not go to prison.

Bap. Talk not, signior Gremio; I say he shall go to prison.

Gre. Take heed, signior Baptista, lest you be cheated in this business; I dare swear, this is the right Vincentio.

Ped. Swear, if thou darest.

Gre. Nay, I dare not swear it.

Tra. Then thou wert best say, that I am not Lucentio.

Gre. Yes, I know thee to be signior Lucentio.

P. Away with the dotard; to the gaol with him.

V. Thus strangers may be hated and abused:— O monstrous villain!

Re-enter Biondello, with Lucentio, and Bianca.

Bion. O, we are spoiled, and—Yonder he is; deny him,orswear him, or else we are all undone.

Luc. [Kneeling.] Pardon, sweet father.

Bion. [Kneeling.] Pardon, dear father.

Bap. How hast thou offended?—Where is Lucentio?

Luc. [Here's Lucentio, Right son unto the right Vincentio; That have by marriage made thy daughter mine, While counterfeit supposes blear'd thine eye.2

Gre. Here's packing,3 with a witness, to de-ceive us all!

1 With a conical crown. 2 Dimmed thine eyes. 3 Tricking.
Vin. Where is that villain Tranio,
That face' d and braved me in this matter so?
Bap. Why, tell me, is not this my Cambio?
Bian. Cambio is chang' d into Lucentio.
L. Love wrought these miracles. Bianca's love
Made me exchange my state with Tranio,
While he did bear my countenance in the town;
And happily I have arriv'd at last
Unto the wished haven of my bliss:—
What Tranio did, myself enforc'd him to;
Then pardon him, sweet father, for my sake.
Vin. I'll slit the villain's nose, that would have sent me to the gaol.
Ba. [To Luc.] But do you hear, sir? Have you married my daughter without asking my goodwill?
Vin. Fear not, Baptist; we will content you;
goto; But I will in, to be revenged for this villainy. [Exit.
B. And I, to sound the depth of this knavery. [Ex.
Luc. Look not pale, Bianca; thy father will not frown. [Exeunt Luc. and Bian.
Gre. My cake is dough: But I'll in among the rest:
Out of hope of all,—but my share of the feast. [Ex.

SCENE II.—A ROOM IN LUCENTIO’S HOUSE.
A Banquet set out. Enter Baptist, Vincenzo,
Grelio, the Pedant, Lucentio, Bianca, Petruchio, Katharina, Hortensio and Widow, Tranio, Biondello, Grelio, and others.
L. At last, though long, our jarring notes agree,
And time it is, when raging war is done,
To smile at 'scapes and perils overblown.—
My fair Bianca, bid my father welcome,
While I with self-same kindness welcome thine—
Brother Petruchio,—sister Katharina,—
And thou, Hortensio, with thy loving widow,
Feast with the best, and welcome to my house;
My banquet is to close our stomachs up,
After our great good cheer. Pray you, sit down,
For now we sit to chat, as well as eat.
[They sit at table.
Pet. Nothing but sit and sit, and eat and eat!
Ba. Padua affords this kindness, son Petruchio.
Pet. Padua affords nothing but what is kind.
Hor. For both our sakes, I would that word were true.
P. Now for my life, Hortensio fears his widow.
Wid. Then never trust me if I be afeard.
Pet. You are sensible, and yet you miss my sense; I mean, Hortensio is afeard of you.
Wid. He that is giddy, thinks the world turns round.
1 Implying disappointment.

Kath. He that is giddy, thinks the world turns
I pray you, tell me what you meant by that.
W. Your husband, being troubled with a shrew,
Measures my husband's sorrow by his woe:
And now you know my meaning.
Kath. A very mean meaning.
Wid. Right, I mean you.
Kath. And I am mean, indeed, respecting you.
Pet. To her Kate!
Hor. To her, widow!

P. A hundred marks, my Kate does put her
B. How likes Grenio these quick-witted folks?
Gre. Believe me, sir, they butt together well.
Bian. Head, and butt? an hasty-bodied Would say, your head and butt were head and horn.

V. Ay, mistress bride, hath that awaken'd Bian. Ay, but not frightened me; therefore I'll sleep again.

Pet. Nay, that you shall not; since you have
Have at you for a bitter jest or two.
Bia. Am I your bird? I meanto shift my bush,
And then pursue me as you draw your bow:—
You are welcome all.

[Exeunt Bianca, Katharina, and Widow.

Pet. She hath prevented me.—Here, signior Tranio,
This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not;
Therefore a health to all that shot and miss'd.

Tro. O, sir, Lucentio slipp'd me like his greyhound,
Which runs himself, and catches for his master.
P. A good swift smile, but something curriish.
T. 'Tis well, sir, that you hunted for yourself;
'Tis thought, your deer does hold you at a bay.
Bap. O ho, Petruchio, Tranio hits you now.
Luc. I thank thee for that girl, good Tranio.
Hor. Confess, confess, hath he not hit you here?
Pet. 'A has a little gall'd me, I confess;
And as the jest did glance away from me,
'Tis ten to one it main'd you two outright.
Bap. Now, in good sadness, son Petruchio,
I think thou hast the veriest shrew of all.
Pet. Well, I say—no: and therefore, for assurance,
Let's each one send unto his wife; [anee,
And he, whose wife is most obedient
To come at first when he doth send for her,
Shall win the wager which we will propose.
Hor. Content:—What is the wager?
Luc. Twenty crowns.

Pet. Twenty crowns!
I'll venture so much on my hawk, or hound,
But twenty times so much upon my wife.

Luc. A hundred then.
Hor. Content.
Pet. A match; 'tis done.

Hor. Who shall begin?
Luc. That will L. Go, Biondello, bid your mistress come to me.
Bian. I go.

[Exit.
Bap. Son, I will be you. Half, Bianca comes.
Luc. I'll have no halves: I'll bear it all myself.

Re-enter Biondello.

How now! what news?

Bion. Sir, my mistress sends you word

1 Sarcasm.
That she is busy, and she cannot come.

Pet. How! she is busy, and she cannot come! Is that an answer?

Gre. Ay, and a kind one too: Pray heaven, sir, your wife send you not a worse. Pet. I hope, better. [wife Hor. Sirrah, Biondello, go, and entreat my To come to me forthwith. [Exit Biondello. Pet. Nay, then she must needs come. Hor. I am afraid, sir, Do what you can, yours will not be entreated.

Re-enter Biondello.

Now, where's my wife? [hand; B. She says, you have some goodly jest in She will not come; she bids you come to her. Pet. Worse, and worse; she will not come! Intolerable, not to be endur'd! [O vile, Sirrah, Grumio, go to your mistress; Say, I command her come to me. [Exit Grumio. Hor. I know her answer. Pet. What? Hor. She will not come.

P. The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Enter Katharina.

Bap. Now, by my holidame, here comes Katharina? [me? K. What is your will, sir, that you send for P. Where is your sister, and Hortensio's wife? Kath. They sit conferring by the parlour fire. Pet. Go fetch them hither; if they deny to come, [bands: Swing me they soundly forth unto their hus- Away, I say, and bring them hither straight. [Exit Katharina. Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talk of a wonder. Hor. And so it is; I wonder what it bodes. P. Marry, peace it bodes, and love and quiet life, An awful rule, and right supremacy; [happy. And, to be short, what not, that's sweet and Bap. Now fair befal thee, good Petruchio! The wager thou hast won; and I will add Unto their losses twenty thousand crowns; Another dowry to another daughter, For she is chang'd, as she had never been. Pet. Nay, I will win my wager better yet; And show more sign of her obedience, Her new-built virtue and obedience.

Re-enter Katharina, with Bianca and Widow.

See, where she comes; and brings your froward wives As prisoners to her womanly persuasion.— Katharina, that cap of yours becomes you not: Off with that bauble, throw it under foot. [Kath. pulls off her cap, and throws it down. Wid. Well! let me have a cause to sigh, Till I be brought to such a silly pass! Bian. Fie! what a foolish duty call you this? Luc. I would, your duty were as foolish too: The wisdom of your duty, fair Bianca, [time. Hath cost me an hundred crowns since supper- B. The more fool you, for laying on my duty. Pet. Katharina, I charge thee, tell these headstrong women [bands: What duty they do owe their lords and hus-

Wid. Come, come, you're mocking; we will have no telling.

Pet. Come on, I say; and first begin with her. Wid. She shall not.

P. I say, she shall; and first begin with her.

Kath. Fie, fie! unknit that threatening un- kind brow;

And dart not scornful glances from those eyes, To wound thy lord, thy king, thy governor; It blots thy beauty, as frosts bite the meads; Confounds thy fame, as whirlwinds shake fair And in no sense is meet, or amiable. [buds, A woman mov'd, is like a fountain troubled, Muddy, ill-seeing, thick, bereft of beauty; And, while it is so, none so dry or thirsty Will deign to sip, or touch one drop of it. Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper, Thy head, thy sovereign; one that cares for thee, And for thy maintenance: commits his body To painful labour, both by sea and land; To watch the night in storms, the day in cold, While thou liest warm at home, secure and safe; And craves no other tribute at thy hands, But love, fair looks, and true obedience; — Too little payment for so great a debt. Such duty as the subject owes the prince, Even such, a woman oweth to her husband: And when she's froward, peevish, sullen, sour, And not obedient to his honest will, What is she, but a foul contending rebel, And graceless traitor to her loving lord? I am ashamed, that women are so simple To offer war, where they should kneel for peace: Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway, When they are bound to serve, love, and obey. Why are our bodies soft, and weak, and smooth, Unapt to toil and trouble in the world; But that our soft conditions and our hearts, Should well agree with our external parts? Come, come, you froward and unable worms! My mind hath been as big as one of yours, My heart as great; my reason, haply more To banter word for word, and frown for frown: But now, I see our lances are but straws; [pare,— Our strength as weak, our weakness past com- That seeming to be most, which we least are. Then vail your stomachs, for it is no boast; And place your hands below your husband's foot: In token of which duty, if he please, My hand is ready, may it do him ease.

Pet. Why, there's a wench! — Come on, and kiss me, Kate. [hat.

L. Well, go thy ways, old lad; for thou shalt Vin. 'Tis a good hearing, when children are toward. [froward. Luc. But a harsh hearing, when women are Pet. Come, Kate, we'll to bed: — We three are married, but you two are sped. [To Lucentio.] Twas I won the wager, though you hit the white: And, being a winner, God give you good night! [Execut Petruchio and Kath. Hor. Now go thy ways, thou hast tam'd a curst shrew.

Luc. 'Tis a wonder, by your leave, she will be tam'd so. [Execut.

SCENE I.—SICILIA. AN ANTECHAMBER IN LEONTES' PALACE.

Enter Camillo and Archidamus.

Arch. If you shall chance, Camillo, to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my services are now on foot, you shall see, as I have said, great difference betwixt our Bohemia and your Sicilia.

Cam. I think, this coming summer, the king of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the visitation which he justly owes him.

Arch. Wherein our entertainment shall shame us, we will be justified in our loves: for, indeed,—

Cam. 'Beseech you,—

Arch. Verily, I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge: we cannot with such magnificence—in so rare—I know not what to say.——We will give you sleepy drinks: that your senses, un-intelligent of our insufficiency, may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

Cam. You pay a great deal too dear, for what's given freely.

Arch. Believe me, I speak as my understanding instructs me, and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

Cam. Sicilia cannot show herself over-kind to Bohemia. They were trained together in their childhoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection, which cannot choose but branch now. Since their more mature dignities, and royal necessities, made separation of their society, their encounters, though not personal, have been royally attornied,1 with interchange of gifts, letters, loving embassies; that they have seemed to be together, though absent; shook hands, as over a vast; and embraced, as it were, from the ends of opposed winds. The heavens continue their loves!

Arch. I think, there is not in the world either malice, or matter, to alter it. You have an unspeakable comfort of your young prince Mamilius; it is a gentleman of the greatest promise, that ever came into my note.

Cam. I very well agree with you in the hopes of him: it is a gallant child; one that, indeed, physicists2 the subject, makes old hearts fresh: they, that went on crutches ere he was born, desire yet their life, to see him a man.

Arch. Would they else be content to die?

Cam. Yes: if there were no other excuse why they should desire to live.

Arch. If the king had no son, they would desire to live on crutches till he had one. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A ROOM OF STATE IN THE PALACE.

Enter Leontes, Polixenes, Hermione, Mamilius, Camillo, and Attendants.

Pol. Nine changes of the wat’ry star have been The shepherd’s note, since we have left our throne Without a burden: time as long again Would be fill’d up, my brother, with our thanks; And yet we should for perpetuity, Go hence in debt: And therefore, like a cipher, Yet standing in rich place, I multiply, With one we thank you, many thousands more That go before it.

Leon. Stay your thanks awhile; And pay them when you part.

Pol. Sir, that’s to-morrow. I am question’d by my fears, of what may chance, Or breed upon our absence: That may blow No sneaking winds at home, to make us say, 1 Wide waste. 2 Assuages trouble in. 3 Nipping.

1 By proxy.
This is put forth truly! Besides, I have stay'd To tire your royalty.

Leon. We are tougher, brother, Than you can put us to.

Pol. No longer stay.

Leon. One seven-night longer.

Pol. Very sooth, to-morrow.

Leon. We'll part the time between's then: I'll no gainsaying. [And in that Pol. Press me not, 'beseech you so: There is no tongue that moves, none, none 't the world, So soon as yours, could win me: so it should now, Were there necessity in your request, although 'Twere needful I denied it. My affairs Do even drag me homeward: which to hinder, Were, in your love, a whip to me; my stay, To you a charge, and trouble: to save both, Farewell, our brother.

Leon. Tongue-tied, our queen? speak you. H. I had thought, sir, to have held my peace, until You had drawn oaths from him, not to stay. You, sir, Charge him too coldly: Tell him, you are sure, All in Bohemia's well: this satisfaction The by-gone day proclaim'd; say this to him, He's beat from his best ward. Leon. Well said, Hermione. H. To tell, he longs to see his son, were strongest; But let him say so then, and let him go; But let him say so, and he shall not stay, We'll thwack him hence with distaffs.—

[To Polixenes.] Yet of your royal presence I'll adventure The borrow of a week. When at Bohemia You take my lord, I'll give him my commission, To let 1 him there a month, behind the gest 2 Prefix'd for his parting: yet, good deed, 3 Leontes, I love thee not a jar 4 of the clock behind What lady she her lord.—You'll stay?

Pol. No, madam. Hermione, my dearest, thou never spok'st To better purpose.

Her. Never.

Leon. Never, but once.

Her. What? have I twice said well? when was't before? [Make us I pr'ythee, tell me: Cram us with praise, and As fast as tame things: One good deed, dying tongueless, Slaughters a thousand, waiting upon that. Our praises are our wages: You may ride us, With one soft kiss, a thousand furlongs, ere With spur we heat an acre. But to the goal:— My last good deed was, to entreat his stay; What was my first? it has an elder sister, Or I mistake you: O, would her name were Grace But once before I spoke to the purpose: When? Nay, let me have't, I long.

Leon. Why, that was when Three crabbed months had sour'd themselves to death, Ere I could make thee open thy white hand, And clap thyself my love; then didst thou utter, I am yours for ever.

Her. It is Grace, indeed.— [Twice: Why, lo you now, I have spoke to the purpose The one for ever ear'd a royal husband; The other, for some while a friend. [Giving her hand to Polixen. Leon. [Aside.] Too hot, too hot: To mingle friendship far, is mingling bloods. I have tremor cordis 5 on me:—my heart dances; But not for joy,—not joy.—This entertainment May a free face put on: derive a liberty 1 Trembling of the heart.
From heartiness, from bounty, fertile bosom,
And well become the agent: it may, I grant;
But as now they are, making practis'd smiles,
As in a looking-glass; and then to sigh, as 'twere
The morn of the deer; O, that is entertain'd
My bosom likes not, nor my brows. — Mamillius,
Art thou my boy?

Mam. Ay, my good lord.

Leon. I fecks? [thy nose?—
Why that's my bawcock. What, hast smutch'd
They say, it's a copy out of mine. Come, captain,
We must be neat; not neat, but cleanly, captain:
And yet the steer, the heifer, and the calf,
Are all call'd, neat. Still virgaling.

[Observing Polinesen and Hermione.

Upon his palm? — How now, you wanton calf?
Art thou my calf?

Mam. Yes, if you will, my lord.

Leon. Thou want'st a rough push, and the shoots that I have,
To be well like me: — yet, they say we are Almost as like as eggs; women say so,
That will say anything; but were they false?
As o'er-died blocks, as wind, as waters; false
As dice arc to be wish'd, by one that fixes
No bourn'st to twixt his and mine; yet were it true
To say this boy were like me. — Come, sir page, Look on me with your welkin' eye: Sweet villain! [be?
Most dear'st! my collop! — Can thy dam? — may't
Affection? thy intention? stabs the centre;
Thou dost make possible, things not so held,
Communicat'st with dreams; — [How can this
With what's unreal thou co-active art, [be?—
And fellow'st nothing: Then 'tis very credent,
Thou may'st co-join with something; and thou dost:
(And that beyond commission; and I find it,) And that to the infection of my brws,
And hardening of my brows.

Pol. What means Sicilia?

Her. He something seems unsettled.

Pol. How, my lord?

What cheer? how is 't with you, best brother?

Her. You look, As if you held a brow of much distraction: Are you mov'd, my lord?

Leon. No, in good earnest. — How sometimes nature will betray its folly, Its tenderness, and make itself a partner To harder bosoms! Looking on the lines Of my boy's face, methoughts, I did recoil Twenty-three years: and saw myself unbreech'd, In my green velvet coat; my dagger muzzled, Lest it should bite its master, and so prove, As ornaments oft do, too dangerous. How like, methought, I then was to this kernal, This squash, — this gentleman: — Mine honest Will you take eggs for money? — [friend,

Mam. No, my lord, I'll fight.

Leon. You will? why, happy man be his done! — My brother,

5 Budding horns.
6 Boundary.

Are you so fond of your young prince, as we Do seem to be of ours?

Pol. If at home, sir,
He's all my exercise, my mirth, my matter:
Now my sworn friend, and then mine enemy;
My parasite, my soldier, statesman, all:
He makes a July's day short as December;
And, with its varying childhness, cure in me
Thoughts that would thicke my blood.

Leon. So stands this squire Of'd with me: We two will walk, my lord, And leave you to your graver steps—Hermione, How thou love'st us, shew in our brother's well-Let what is dear in Sicily be cheap; [come; Next to thyself, and in my young rover, he's Apparent to my heart.

Her. If you would seek us,
We are your's; the garden: Shall't attend you there? — [be found,

Leon. To your own bents dispose you: you'll Be you beneath the sky: — I am angling now, Though you perceive me not how I give line. Go to, go to! [Aside. Observing Pol. and Her.] How she holds up the neb, the bill to him, And arms her with the boldness of a wife. To her allowing husband! Gone already. — [Exeunt Polinesen, Hermione, and Attendants.

Go, play, boy, play; thy mother plays, and I Play too; but so disgrace'd a part, whose issue Will hiss me to my grave; contempt and clomour Will be my knell. — Go, play, boy, play; — There have been,

Or I am much decev'd, cuckoldes are now;
And many a man there is, even at this present,
Now, while I speak this, holds his wife by the arm, That little thinks she's false: Should all despair, That have revolted wives, the tenth of mankind Would hang themselves: but many a thousand of us Have the disease and feel't not. — How now,

Mam. I am like you, they say. — [boy?

Leon. Why, that's some comfort. —

What! Camillo there?

Cam. Ay, my good lord.

Leon. Go play, Mamillius; thou'rt an honest man; —

[Exit Mamillius.

Camillo, this great sir will yet stay longer.
C. You had much ado to make his anchor hold,
When you cast out it still came home.

Leon. Didst note it?

Cam. He would not stay at your petitions; His business more material: [made

Leon. Didst perceive it? They're herewith me already; whispering round—Sicilia is a so faith; 'Tis far gone, [ing. When I shall gust it last. — How can't, Camillo, That he did stay?

Cam. At the good queen's entreaty.

Leon. At the queen's be: good should be per- But so is it, is it not. Was this taken [tinent; By any understanding pate but thine? Nor thy conceit is soaking, will draw in More than the common blocks: — not noted, is't, But of the finer natures? by some several

Bohemia stays here longer. [stand

Leon. Ha?
Cam. Stays here longer.

Leon. Ay, but why?
C. To satisfy your highness, and the entreaties
Of our most gracious mistress.

Leon. Satisfy
The entreaties of your mistress?—satisfy?
Let that suffice. I have trusted thee, Camillo,
With all the nearest things to my heart, as well
My chamber-councils; wherein, priest-like, thou
Hast cleans'd my bosom: I from thee departed
Thy penitent reformed: but we have been Deceiv'd in thy integrity, deceiv'd
In that which seems so.
Cam. Be it forbid, my lord!
L. To bide upon't:—Thou art not honest: or,
If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a coward;
Which hopes2 honesty behind, restraining

A servant, grafted in my serious trust, [counted
And therein negligent; or else a fool,
That seest a game play'd home, the rich stake
And tak'st it all for jest. [drawn,

Cam. My gracious lord,
I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful;
In every one of these no man is free,
But that his negligence, his folly, fear,
Amongst the infinite doings of the world,
Sometime puts forth: In your affairs, my lord,
If ever I were wilful-negligent,
It was my folly; if industriously
I play'd the fool, it was my negligence
Not weighing well the end; if ever fearful
To do a thing, where I the issue doubted,
Whereof the execution did cry out
Against the non-performance, 'twas a fear
Which oft affects the wisest: these, my lord,
Are such allow'd infirmities, that honesty
Is never free of. But, beseech your grace,
Be plainer with me; let me know my trespass
By its own visage: if I then deny it,
'Tis none of mine.

Leon. Have not you seen, Camillo,
(But that's past doubt: you have) or heard
(For, to a vision so apparent, rumour
Cannot be mute,) or thought (for cogitation
Resides not in that man, that does not think it,) My wife is slippery? If thou wilt confess, (Or else be impudently negative,
To have nor eyes, nor ears, nor thought,) then say,
My wife's a woman that deserves a name
Too rank to mention: say it, and justify it.

Cam. I would not be a staider-by, to hear
My sovereign mistress clouded so, without
My present vengeance taken: 'Shrew my heart,
You never spoke what did become you less
Than this: which to reiterate, were sin
As deep as that, though true.

Leon. Is whispering nothing?
Is leaning check to check? Is meeting noses?
Kissing with inside lips? stopping the career
Of laughter with a sigh? (a note inoffensive
Of breaking honesty;) wishing clocks more swift?

Hours, minutes? noon, midnight? and all eyes blind
With the pin and web,1 but theirs, theirs only,
That would unseen be wicked? is this nothing?
Why, then the world, and all that's in't, is nothing;
The covering sky is nothing; Bohemia nothing;
My wife is nothing; nor nothing have these
If this be nothing.

[nothings,
Cam. Good my lord, be cured
Of this diseas'd opinion, and betimes;
For 'tis most dangerous.

Leon. Say, it be: 'tis true.
Cam. No, no, my lord.
Leon. It is; you lie, you lie:
I say, thou liest, Camillo, and I hate thee;
Pronounce thee a gross lout: a mindless slave:
Or else a hovering temporizer, that
Canst with thine eyes at once see good and evil,
Inclining to them both: Were my wife's liver
Infected as her life, she would not live
The running of one glass.

Cam. Who does infect her?
Leon. Why he, that wears her like her medal,
About his neck, Bohemia: Who—if I [hang
Had servants true about me, that bare eyes
To see alike mine honour as their profits,
Their own particular thrifts,—they would do that
Which should undo more doing: Ay, and thou,
His cup bearer,—whom I from meager form [see
Have bench'd, and rear'd to worship; who may'st Plainly, as heaven sees earth, and earth sees heaven.

How I am galled,—thou might'st bespice a cup,
To give mine enemy a lasting wink;
Which draught to me were cordial.

Cam. Sir, my lord,
I could do this: and that with no rash potion,
But with a fingering dram, that should not work
Maliciously like poison; But I cannot Believe this crack to be in my dread mistress,
So sovereignly being honourable.
I have lov'd thee,—
Leon. Make 't thy question, and go rot!
Dost think, I am so muddy, so unsettled,
To appoint myself in this vexation? sufly
The purity and whiteness of my sheets,
Which to preserve, is sleep; which being spotted,
Is goads, thorns, nettles, tails of wasps?
Give scandal to the blood c'the prince my son,
Who, do think, is mine, and love as mine;
Without ripe moving to't? Would I do this?
Could man so blench?2

Cam. I must believe you, sir,
I do: and will fetch off Bohemia for't:
Provided, that when he's remov'd, your highness
Will take again your queen, as yours at first;
Even for your son's sake: and, thereby, for sealing
The injury of tongues, in courts and kingdoms
Known and allied to yours.

Leon. Thou dost advise me,
Even so as I mine own course have set down:
I'll give no blemish to her honour, none.

Cam. My lord,
Go then; and with a countenance as clear
As friendship wears at feasts, keep with Bohemia
And with your queen: I am his cupbearer;

1 Disorders of the eye. 2 Shrink.

1 Inferiors. 2 Hamstrings.
If from me he have wholesome beverage,
Account me not your servant.
Leon. This is all;
Do't, and thou hast the one half of my heart;
Do't not, thou split'st thine own.
Cam. I'll do't, my lord.
Leon. I will seem friendly, as thou hast advis'd me. [Exit.
Cam. O miserable lady!—But, for me,
What case stand I in? I must be the poisoner
Of good Polixenes: and my ground to do't
Is the obedience to a master; one,
Who, in rebellion with himself, will have
All that are his, so too.—To do this deed,
Promotion follows: If I could find example
Of thousands, that had struck anointed kings,
And flourish'd after, I'd not do': but since
Nor brass nor stone, nor parchment, bears not Let villainy itself forswear't. I must [one,
Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is certain
To me a break-neck. Happy star, reign now!
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter Polixenes.

Pol. This is strange, methinks,
My favour here begins to warp. Not speak?—
Good-day, Camillo.
Cam. Hail, most royal sir!
Pol. What is the news i' the court!
Cam. None rare, my lord.
Pol. The king hath on him such a countenance,
As he had lost some province, and a region,
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now I met him
With customary compliment; when he,
Wafting his eyes to the contrary, and falling
A lip of much contempt, speeds from me: and
So leaves me, to consider what is breeding,
That changes thus his manners.
Cam. I dare not know, my lord.
P. How! dare not? do not. Do you know, and
Be intelligent to me? 'Tis thereabouts; [dare not
For, to yourself, what you do know, you must;
And cannot say, you dare not. Good Camillo,
Your chang'd complexions are to me a mirror,
Which shows me mine chang'd to: for I must be
A party in this alteration, finding Myself thus alter'd with it.
Cam. There is a sickness
Which puts some of us in distemper; but
I cannot name the disease; and it is caught
Of you that yet are well.
Pol. How? caught of me?
Make me not sighted like the basilisk: [better
I have look'd on thousands, who have spelt the
By my regard, but kill'd none so. Camillo,—
As you are certainly a gentleman; thereto

Our gentry, than our parents' noble names,
In whose success we are gentle, I beseech you,
If you know aught which does behave my know-
Thereof to be inform'd, imprison it not [ledge
In ignorant concealment.
Cam. I may not answer.
Pol. A sickness caught of me, and yet I well!
I must be answer'd.—Dost thou hear, Camillo,
I conjure thee, by all the parts of man, [least
Which honour does acknowledge,—whereof the

1 Succession.
2 Well born.

Is not this suit of mine,—that thou declare
What incidency thou dost guess of harm
Is creeping toward me; how far off, how near;
Which way to be prevented, if to be;
If not, how best to bear it.
Cam. Sir, I'll tell you;
Since I am charg'd in honour, and by him
That I think honourable: Therefore, mark my counsel;
Which must be even as swiftly follow'd, as
I mean to utter it; or both yourself and me
Cry, lost, and so good night.
Pol. On, good Camillo.
Cam. I am appointed him to murder you.
Pol. By whom, Camillo?
Cam. By the king.
Pol. For what?
C. He thinks, nay, with all confidence he
As he had seen't, or been an instrument [swears,
To vice you to't,—that you have touch'd his Forbiddenly.
[queen
Pol. O, then my best blood turn
To an infected jelly; and my name
Be yok'd with his, that did betray the best!
Turn then my freshest reputation to
A savour, that may strike the dullest nostril
Where I arrive; and my approach be shunn'd,
Nay, hated too, worse than the greatest infection
That e'er was heard, or read!
Cam. Swear his thought over
By each particular star in heaven, and
By all their influences, you may as well
Forbid the sea for to obey the moon,
As or, by oath, remove, or counsel, shake
The fabric of his folly; whose foundation
Is pit'd upon his faith, and will continue
The standing of his body.
Pol. How should this grow?
Cam. I know not: but, I am sure, 'tis safer to Avoid what's grow'n, than question how 'tis born.
If therefore you dare trust my honesty,—
That lies enclosed in this trunk, which you Shall bear along impaw'd,—away to-night.
Your followers I will whisper to the business;
And will, by two's, and three's, at several posterns,
Clear them o' the city: For myself, I'll put
My fortunes to your service, which are here
By this discovery lost. Be not uncertain;
For, by the honour of my parents, I
Have utter'd truth: which if you seek to prove,
I dare not stand by; nor shall you be safer
Than one condemn'd; by the king's own mouth,
Is execution sworn.

Thereon
Pol. I do believe thee:
I saw his heart in his face. Give me thy hand;
Be pilot to me, and thy places shall Still neighbour mine: My ships are ready, and
My people did expect my hence departure
Two days ago.—This jealousy
Is for a precious creature: as she's rare,
Must it be great; and, as his person's mighty,
Must it be violent; and as he does conceive
He is dishonour'd by a man which ever Profess'd to him, why, his revenges must
In that be made more bitter. Fear o'ershades me,
Good expedion be my friend, and comfort [ing
The gracious queen, part of his theme, but noti-

Of his ill-ta'en suspicion! Come, Camillo; I will respect thee as a father, if Thou bear'st my life off hence: Let us avoid. Cam. It is in mine authority to command The keys of all the posterns: Please your highness To take the urgent hour: come, sir, away. [Exeunt.

Act Second.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter Hermione, Mamilius, and Ladies.

Her. Take the boy to you: he so troubles me, "Tis past enduring.

1 Lady. Come, my gracious lord, Shall I be your play-fellow?

Mam. No, I'll none of you. 1 Lady. Why, my sweet lord?

Mam. You'll kiss mehard; and speak to me as I were a baby still.—I love you better. [if 2 Lady. And why so, my good lord? Mam. Not for because Your brows are blacker; yet black brows, they say, Become some women best; so that there be not Too much hair there, but in a semi-circle, Or half-moon made with a pen.

2 Lady. Who taught you this?

M. I learn'd it out of women's faces.—Pray now What colour are your eyebrows?

1 Lady. Blue, my lord. 2 Lady. Nay, that's a mock; I have seen a lady's nose That has been blue, but not her eyebrows.

2 Lady. Hark ye; we shall Present our services to a fine new prince, One of these days; and then you'd wanton with us If we would have you.

1 Lady. Good time encounter her! Her. What wisdom stirs amongst you? Come, sir, now I am for you again: Pray you sit by us, And tell's a tale.

Mam. Merry, or sad, shall't be! Her. As merry as you will.

Mam. A sad tale's best for winter: I have one of sprites and goblins.

Her. Let's have that, sir. Come on, sit down:—Come on, and do your best To fright me with your sprites: you're powerful Mam. There was a man— [at it. Her. Nay, come, sit down; then on. Mam. Dwelt by a church-yard;—I will tell it You crickets shall not hear it. [softly. Her. Come on then, And give't me in mine ear.

Enter Leontes, Antigonus, Lords, and others. Leon. Was he met there? his train? Camillo with him? [never 1 Lord. Behind the tuft of pines I met them; Saw I men scour so on their way: I ey'd them Even to their ships.

Leon. How bless'd am I, In my just censure? in my true opinion?— Alack, for lessor knowledge! How accur'd, In being so blest!—There may be in the cup 1 Judgment.

A spider steep'd, and one may drink, depart, And yet partake no venom; for his knowledge Is not infected: but if one present The abhorr'd ingredient to his eye, make known How he hath drunk, he cracks his gorge, his sides, With violent hefts!—I have drank, and seen the spider.

Camilo was his help in this, his pander:— There is a plot against my life, my crown; All's true that is mistrusted:—that false villain, Whom I employed, was pre-employ'd by him: He has discover'd my design, and I Remain a pinch'd thing? yea, a very trick For them to play at will:—Howcame the posterns So easily open?

1 Lord. By his great authority; Which often hath no less prevail'd than so, On your command, Leon. I know't not well.— Give me the boy; I am glad, you did not nurse him: Though he does bear some signs of me, yet you Have too much blood in him.

Her. What is this? sport?

L. Bear the boy hence, he shall not come away with him: for 'tis Polixenes [her; Has made thee thus.

Her. But I'd say, he had not, And, I'll be sworn, you would believe my saying, Howe'er you lean to the Nayward.

Leon. You, my lords, Look on her, mark her well; be but about To say, she is a goodly lady, and The justice of your hearts will thereto add, 'Tis pity she's not honest, honourable: Praise her but for this her without-door form, (Which, on my faith, deserves high speech,) and straight The shrug, the hum, or ha; these petty brands, That calumnys doth use:—O, I am out, That mercy does; for calumnys will sear[2] [ha's, Virtue itself:—These shrugs, these hums, and When you have said, she's goodly, come between, Ere you can say she's honest: But be it known, From him that has most cause to grieve it should She's an adulteress. [be, Her. Should a villain say so, The most replenish'd villain in the world, He were as much more villain: you, my lord, Do but mistake.

Leon. You have mistook, my lady, Polixenes for Leontes: O thou thing, Which I'll not call a creature of thy place, Lest barbarism, making me the precedent, Should a like language use to all degrees, And mannerly distinguishment leave out Betwixt the prince and beggar!—I have said, She's an adulteress: I have said with whom: More, she's a traitor; and Camillo is A federary with her; and one that knows What she should shame to know herself; She's even as bad as those That vultures give bold'st titles, ay and privy To this their late escape.

Her. No, by my life, Privity to none of this: How will this grieve you, When you shall come to clearer knowledge, that 1 Hearings. 2 Puppet. 3 Brand. 4 Confederate.
You thus have publish'd me? Gentle, my lord, You scarce can right me throughly then, to say You did mistake.

Leon. No, no; if I mistake

In those foundations which I build upon, The centre is not big enough to bear A school-boy's top. — Away with her to prison: He, who shall speak for her, is afar off guilty,1 But,2 that he speaks.

Her. There's some ill planet reigns: I must be patient, till the heavens look With an aspect more favourable. Good my lords, I am not prone to weeping, as our sex Commonly are; the want of which vain dew, Perchance, shall dry your pities: but I have That honourable grief lodg'd here, which burns Worse than tears drown: 'Beseech you all, my lords, With thoughts so qualified as your charities Shall best instruct you, measure me; — and so The king's will be perform'd!

Leon. [To the Guards.] Shall I be heard? - Her. Who is that goes with me? — 'Beseech your highness, My women may be with me; for, you see, My plight requires it. Do not weep, good fools; There is no cause: when you shall know your mistress Has deserv'd prison, then abound in tears, As I come out: this action, I now go on, Is for my better grace. — Adieu, my lord: I never wish'd to see you sorry; now, I trust, I shall. — My women, come; you have Leon. Go do our bidding; hence. [Leaves.

[Exeunt Queen and Ladies.

1 Lord. 'Beseech your highness, call the queen again.

A. Becertain what you do, sir; lest your justice Prove violence; in the which three great ones Yourself, your queen, your son. [Suffer, 1 Lord. For her, my lord, — I dare my life lay down, and will do't, sir, Please you to accept it, that the queen is spotless I' the eyes of heaven, and to you; I mean, In this which you accuse her.

Ant. If it prove She's otherwise, I'll keep my stables where I lodge my wife: I'll go in couples with her; Than when I feel, and see her, no further trust For every woman in the world is false, [Her; If she be.

Leon. Hold your peace.

1 Lord. Good my lord, — Ant. It is for you we speak, not for ourselves: You are abus'd, and by some putter on3; Would I knew the villain.

Leon. Cease; no more. You smell this business with a sense as cold As is a dead man's nose: I see't and feel't As you feel doing thus; and see withal The instruments that feel.

Ant. If it be so, We need no grave to bury honesty; There's not a grain of it, the face to sweeten Of the whole dungy earth.

Leon. What! lack I credit? 1 Lo. I had rather you did lack, than I, my lord, 1 Partly guilty. 2 In. 3 Instigator.

Upon this ground: and more it would content me To have her honour true, than your suspicion; Be blam'd for't how you might.

Leon. Why, what need we Commune with you of this? but rather follow Our forceful instigation? Our prerogative Call not your counsels; but our natural goodness Imparts this: which, — if you (or stupid, Or seeming so in skill,) cannot, or will not, Relish as truth, like us; inform yourselves, We need no more of your advice: the matter, The loss, the gain, the ordering on't, is all Properly ours.

Ant. And I wish, my liege, You had only in your silent judgment tried it, Without more overture.

Leon. How could that be? Either thou art most ignorant by age, Or thou wert born a fool. Camillo's flight, Added to their familiarity, (Which was as gross as ever touch'd conjecture, That lack'd sight only, nought for approbation,1 But only seeing, all other circumstances Made up to the deed,) doth push on this proceed - Yet, for a greater confirmation, [Ing: (For, in an act of this importance, 'twere Most piteous to be wild,) I have despatch'd in To sacred Delphos, to Apollo's temple, [post, Cleomenes and Dion, whom you know Of stuff it's sufficiency:2 Now, from the oracle They will bring all; whose spiritual counsel had, Shall stop or spur me. Have I done well?

1 Lord. Well done, my lord.

Leon. Though I am satisfied, and need no more Than what I know, yet shall the oracle Give rest to the minds of others: such as he, Whose ignorant credulity will not Come up to the truth: So have we thought it good, From our free person she should be confin'd; Lest that the treachery of the two, fled hence, Be left her to perform. Come, follow us; We are to speak in publick: for this business Will raise us all.

Ant. [Aside.] To laughter, as I take it, If the good truth were known. [Exeunt.

Scene II.—The Outer Room of a Prison.

Enter Paulina and Attendants.

Paul. The keeper of the prison,— call to him:— [Exit an Attendant. Let him have knowledge who I am. — Good lady! No court in Europe is too good for thee, What dost thou then in prison?—Now, good sir, Re-enter Attendant, with the Keeper.

You know me, do you not? Keep. For a worthy lady, And one whom much I honour.

Paul. Pray you, then, Conduct me to the queen.

Keep. I may not, madam; to the contrary I have express commandment.

Paul. Here's ado, To lock up honesty and honour from The access of gentle visitors! — Is it lawful, 1 Proof. 2 Of abilities more than enough.
Pray you, to see her women? any of them?

Emilia?

Keep. So please you, madam, to put Apart these your attendants, I shall bring Emilia forth.

Paul. I pray now, call her.

Withdraw yourselves. [Exit Attend.]

Keep. And, madam, I must be present at your conference.

Paul. Well, be it so, pr'ythee. [Exit Keeper.]

Here's such ado to make no stain a stain,
As passes colouring.

Re-enter Keeper, with Emilia.

Dear gentlewoman, how fares our gracious lady?

Emil. As well as one so great, and so forlorn,
May hold together: On her frights and griefs,
(Which never tender lady hath borne greater.)
She is, something before her time, deliver'd.

Paul. A boy!

Emil. A daughter, and a goodly babe,
Lusty, and like to live: the queen receives
Much comfort in't: says, My poor prisoner,
I am innocent as you.

Paul. I dare be sworn:—

These dangerous unsafe lunés1 of the king!
Be shrew'd them to

He must be told on't, and he shall: the office
Becomes a woman best; I'll take'nt upon me;
If I prove honey-mouth'd let my tongue blisteer;
And never to my red-look'd anger be
The trumpet any more: Pray you, Emilia,
Command my best obedience to the queen;
If she dares trust me with her little babe,
I'll shew't the king, and undertake to be
Her advocate to th' loudest: We do not know
How he may soften at the sight of the child;
The silence often of pure innocence
Persuades, when speaking fails.

Emil. Most worthy madam, Your honour, and your goodness, is so evident,
That your free undertaking cannot miss
A thriving issue; there is no lady living,
So meet for this great errand: Please your lady-
To visit the next room, I'll presently [ship
Acquaint the queen of your most noble offer;
Who, but to-day, hammer'd of this design;
But durst not tempt a minister of honour,
Lest she should be denied.

Paul. Tell her, Emilia,
I'll use that tongue I have: if wit flow from it,
As boldness from my bosom, let it be doubted
I shall do good.

Emil. Now be you blest for it! [nearer.
I'll to the queen: Please you, come something
K. Madam, if't please the queen to send the
I know not what I shall incur, to pass it, [babe,
Having no warrant.

Paul. You need not fear it, sir:
The child was prisoner to the womb; and is,
By law and process of great nature, thence Free'd and enfranchis'd: not a party to
The anger of the king; nor guilty of,
If any be, the trespass of the queen.

Keep. I do believe it.

Paul. Do not you fear: upon
Mine honour, I will stand 'twixt you and danger. [Exit.

SCENE III.—A ROOM IN THE PALACE.

Enter Leon, Antigonus, Lords, and other
Attendants.

L. Nornight, nor day, no rest: In's but weakness.
To bear the matter thus; mere weakness, if
The cause were not in being;—part o' the cause,
She, the adu'tress;—for the harlot king
Is quite beyond mine arm, out of the blank
And level of my brain, plot-proof: but she
I can hook to: Say, that she were gone,
Given to the fire, a moiety of my rest
Might come to me again.—Who's there?

1. Att. [Advancing.] My lord?

Leon. How does the boy?

1. Att. He took good rest to-night:
'Tis hop'd, his sickness is discharg'd.

Leon. To see,

His nobleness!

Conceiving the dishonour of his mother,
He straight declin'd, droop'd, took it deeply;
'Fasten'd and fix'd the shame on't in himself;
'Threw off his spirit, his appetite, his sleep, lgo
And downright languish'd.—Leave me so late!—
See how he fares. [Exit Attend.]—Fie, fie! no thought of him;
The very thought of my revenges that way
Recoil upon me; in himself too mighty;
And in his parties, his alliance.—Let him be,
Until a time may serve; for present vengeance,
Take it on her. Camillo and Polixenes
Laugh at me; make their pastime at my sorrow:
They should not laugh if I could reach them; nor Shall she, within my power.

Enter Paulina, with a Child.

1. Lord. You must not enter.

P. Nay, rather, good my lords, be secon'd to me:
Fear you his tyrannous passion more, alas,
Than the queen's life? a gracious innocent soul;
More free, than he is jealous.

Ant. That's enough.

1. Att. Madam, he hath not slept to-night;
None should come at him. [commanded
Paul. Not so hot, good sir; I come to bring him sleep. 'Tis such as you,—
That creep like shadows by him, and do sigh
At each his needless heaving,—such as you
Nourish the cause of his awakening: I
Do come with words as med'cinal as true;
Honest, as either; to purge of that humour,
That presses him from sleep.

Leon. What noise there, ho? P. No noise, my lord; but needful conference,
About some gossips for your highness.

Leon. How?—

Away with that audacious lady: Antigonus,
I charg'd thee, that she should not come about
I knew, she would. [me;
Ant. I told her so, my lord,
On your displeasure's peril, and on mine,
She should not visit you.

Leon. What, canst not rule her? Paul. From all dishonesty, he can; in this, (Unless he take the course that you have done, Commit me, for committing honour,) trust it,
He shall not rule me.
Ant.  Lo you now; you hear!
When she will take the rein, I let her run;
But she'll not stumble.

Paul.  Good my liege, I come,—
And, I beseech you, hear me, who profess
Myself your loyal servant, your physician,
Your most obedient counsellor; yet that dare
Less appear so, in comforting your evils,
Than such as most seem yours:—I say, I come
From your good queen.

Leon.  Good queen!
Paul.  Good queen, my lord, good queen: I say good queen;
And would by combat make her good, so were I
A man, the worst about you.

Force her hence.

Paul.  Let him, that makes but trifles of his eyes,
First hand me: on mine own accord, I'll off;
But first, I'll do my errand.—The good queen,
For she is good, hath brought you forth a daugh-
Here 'tis; commends it to your blessing. [ter; [Shouting.

Leon.  Out!

A mankind witch! Hence with her, out o' door:
A most intelliging bawl!

Paul.  Not so:
I am as ignorant in that, as you
In so entitling me: and no less honest
Than you are mad; which is enough, I'll warrant,
As this world goes, to pass for honest.

Leon.  Traitors!
Will you not put her cut? Give her the bastard:—
[To Ant.] Thou, dotard, thou art woman-tir'd, unrosted
By thy dame Partlet here,—take up the bastard;
Take up, I say; give't to thy crone.

Paul.  For ever
Unvenerable be thy hands, if thou
Tak'st up the princess, by that forced baseness
Which lie has put upon't!

Leon.  He dreads his wife.
Paul.  So, I would, you did; then, 'twere past all You'd call your children yours. [doubt,
Leon.  A nest of traitors!
Ant.  I am none, by this good light.
Paul.  Nor I; nor any,
But one, that's here; and that's himself: for he
The sacred honour of himself, his queen's,
His hopeful son's, his babe's, betrays to slander,
Whose sting is sharper than the sword's; and will (For as the case now stands, it is a curse [not He cannot be compell'd to't,) once remove
The root of his opinion, which is rotten,
As ever oak, or stone, was sound.

Leon.  A callat,
Of boundless tongue; who late hath beat her husband,
And now baits me!—This brat is none of mine;
It is the issue of Polixenes:
Hence with it; and, together with the dam,
Commit them to the fire.

Paul.  It is yours;
And, might we lay the old proverb to your charge,
So like you, 'tis the worse.—Behold, my lords,
Although the print be little, the whole matter
And copy of the father: eye, nose, lip,
1 Abetting.  3 Masculine.  5 Old woman.  [Hon.
2 Meanest.  4 Henpecked.  6 Under the base designa-
It shall not neither.—[To Antigonus.] You, sir, come you hither; you that have been so tenderly officious with lady Margery, your midwife, there, to save this bastard's life: for 'tis a bastard, so sure as this beard's grey, what will you ad— to save this brat's life? [ventures.]

Ant. Any thing, my lord, that my ability may undergo, and nobleness impose; at least thus much; I'll pawn the little blood which I have left, to save the innocent: anything possible. Le. It shall be possible; Swear by this sword, 1 thou wilt perform my bidding.

Ant. I will, my lord. Leon. Mark, and perform it: (seest thou?) for of any point it's not only be— [the fall death to thyself, but to thy lord, and his wife; whom, for this time we pardon. We enjoyn thee, as thou art legible to us, that thou carry this remote bastard hence, and that thou bear it to some remote and desert place, quite out of our dominions; and that there thou leave it, without more mercy, to its own protection, and favour of the climate. As by strange fortune it came to us, I do in justice charge thee, on thy soul's peril, and thy body's torture,—that thou commend it strangely to some place, where chance may nurse, or end it: take it up. Ant. I swear to do this, though a present death had been more merciful.—Come on, poor babe: some powerful spirit instruct the kites and ravens to be thy nurses! Wolves, and bears, they say, casting their savageness aside, have done like offices of pity. —Sir, be prosperous in more than this deed doth require! and bless—against this cruelty, fight on thy side. [ing. Poor thing, condemned to loss! [Ex. with the child.

Leon. No, I'll not rear another's issue. 1 Attent. Please your highness, posts, from those you sent to the oracle, are come. An hour since; Cleomenes and Dion, being well arry'd from Delphos, are both landed, hastening to the court. 1 Lord. So please you, sir, their speed hath been beyond account. Leon. Twenty-three days they have been absent? 'Tis good speed; fore—The great Apollo suddenly will have [tells, the truth of this appear. Prepare you, lords; summon a session, that we may arraign our most disloyal lady: for as she hath been publicly accus'd, so shall she have a just and open trial. While she lives, my heart will be a burden to me. Leave me; and think upon my bidding. [Exeunt.]

Dion. I shall report, for most it caught me, the celestial habits, (Methinks, I so should term them,) and the reverence of the grave weavers. O, the sacrifice! [rence how ceremonious, solemn, and unearthly it was I the offering!

Cleo. But, of all, the burst and the ear-deafening voice of the oracle, Kin to Jove's thunder, so surpriz'd my sense, that I was nothing.

Dion. If the event of the journey prove as successful to the queen,—O, be't so!—as it hath been to us, rare, pleasant, speedy, the time is worth the use on't.

Cleo. Great Apollo turn all to the best! These proclamations, so forcing faults upon Hermione, I little like.

Dion. The violent carriage of it will clear, or end, the business: when the oracle thus (by Apollo's great divine seal'd up,) shall the contents discover, something rare, even then, will rush to knowledge. —Go, fresh horses; and gracious be the issue! [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A COURT OF JUSTICE. Leontes, Lords, and Officers, appear properly seated.

Leon. The sessions (to our great grief, we pronounce,) even push'd against our heart: the party tried, the daughter of a king; our wife; and one of us too much below'd. —Let us be clear'd of being tyrannous, since we so openly proceed in justice; which shall have due course, even to the guilt, or the purgation. —Produce the prisoner. Offi. It is his highness' pleasure, that the queen appear in person here in court. —Silence!

Hermione is brought in, guarded; Paulina and Ladies attending.

Leon. Read the indictment. Offi. Hermione, queen to the worthy Leontes, king of Sicilia, thou art here accused and arraigned of high treason, in committing adultery with Polixenes, king of Bohemia; and conspiring with Camillo to take away the life of our sovereign lord the king, thy royal husband; the pretence whereof is being by circumstances partly laid open, thou, Hermione, contrary to the faith and allegiance of a true subject, didst counsel and aid them, for their better safety to fly away by night.

Her. Since what I am to say, must be but that which contradicts my accusation; and the testimony on my part, no other but what comes from myself; it shall scarce to say, Not guilty; mine integrity, [boots me being counted falsehood, shall, as I express it, be so receiv'd. But thus,—if powers divine behold our human actions (as they do,) I doubt not then, but innocence shall make false accusation blush, and tyranny tremble at patience. —You, my lord, best know, 1 Design.
(Who least will seem to do so,) my past life
Hath been as continent, as chaste, as true,
As I am now unhappy; which is more
Than history can pattern, though devil'sd,
And play'd to take spectators: For behold me,—
A fellow of the royal bed, which owe!
A molley of the throne, a great king's daughter,
The mother to a hopeful prince,—here standing
To praise and talk for life, and honour, 'fere
Who please to come and hear. For life, I prize it
As I weigh grief, which I would spare: for
'Tis a derivate from me to mine, [honour,
And only that I stand for. I appeal
To your own conscience, sir, before Polixenes
Came to your court, how I was in your grace,
How merited to be so; since he came,
With what encounter so uncourteous I
Have strain'd to appear thus: if one jot beyond
The bound of honour; or, in act, or will,
That way inclining; harden'd be the hearts
Of all that hear me, and my near'st of kin
Cry, Fie upon my grave!

Leon. I ne'er heard yet,
That any of these bolder vices wanted
Less impudence to gainsay what they did,
Than to perform it first.
Her. That's true enough;
Though, 'tis a saying, sir, not due to me.
Leon. You will not own it.
Her. More than mistress of,
Which comes to me in name of fault, I must not
At all acknowledge. For Polixenes
(With whom I am accus'd,) I do confess,
I lov'd him, as in honour he requir'd;
With such a kind of love, as might become
A lady like me; with a love, even such,
So, and no other, as yourself commanded:
Which not to have done, I think, had been in me
Both disobedience and ingratitude.
To you, and toward your friend; whose love had spoke,
Even since it could speak, from an infant, freely,
That it was yours. Now, for conspiracy,
I know not how it tastes; though it be dish'd
For me to try how: all I know of it
Is, that Camillo was an honest man;
And, why he left your court, the gods them-
Wotting no more than I, are ignorant. [seizes,
Leon. You knew of his departure, as you know
What you have underta'en to do in his absence.
Her. Sir,
You speak a language that I understand not:
My life stands in the level of your dreams,
Which I'll lay down.
Leon. Your actions are my dreams;
You had a bastard by Polixenes, [shame,
And I but dream'd it:—As you were past all (Those of your fact² are so,) so past all truth:
Which to deny, concerns more than avails³:
For as
Thy brat hath been cast out, like to itself,
No father owning it (which is, indeed,
More criminal in thee, than it,) so thou
Shalt feel our justice; in whose easiest passage,
Look for no less than death.
Her. Sir, spare your threats;
The bug,⁴ which you would fright me with, I seek.

To me can life be no commodity:
The crown and comfort of my life, your favour
I do give lost: for I do feel it gone,
But know not how it went: My second joy,
And first-fruit of my body, from his presence,
I am barr'd, like one infectious: My third com-
Starr'd most unluckily, is from my breast, [fort,
The innocent milk in its innocent mouth,
Haled out to murder: Myself on every post
Proclaim'd a strumpet; With immodest hatred,
The child-bed privilege denied, which 'longs
To women of all fashion:—Lastly, hurried
Here to this place, I the open air, before
I have got strength of limit. Now, my liege,
Tell me what blessings I have here alive,
That I should fear to die? Therefore, proceed.
But yet, hear this; mistake me not:—No life,
I prize it not a straw:—but for mine honour
(Which I would free,) if I shall be contam'd⁵
Upon surmises; all proofs sleeping else,
But what your jealousies awake; I tell you,
'Tis rigour, and not law.—Your honours all,
I do refer me to the oracle;
Apollo be my judge.

1 Lord. This your request
Is altogether just: therefore, bring forth,
And in Apollo's name, his oracle.

[Exeunt certain Officers
Her. The emperor of Russia was my father
O, that he were alive, and here beholding
His daughter's trial! that he did but see
The features of my misery; yet with eyes
Of pity, not revenge!

Re-enter Officers with Cleomenes and Dion.
Off. You here shall swear upon this sword of
That you, Cleomenes and Dion, have [justice
Been both at Delphos; and from thence have brought
This seal'd up oracle, by the hand deliver'd
Of great Apollo's priest: and that, since then,
You have not dar'd to break the holy seal,
Nor read the secrets in't.

Cleo. Dion. All this we swear.
Leon. Break up the seals and read.
Off. [Reads.] Hermione is chaste, Polixenes blameless, Camillo a true subject, Leontes a jealous tyrant, his innocent babe truly begotten; and the king shall live without an heir, if that, which is lost, be not found.

Lords. Now blessed be the great Apollo!
Her. Praise.
Leon. Hast thou read truth?
Off. Ay, my lord; even so
As it is here set down.
Leon. There is no truth at all i' the oracle:
The sessions shall proceed; this is mere falsehood.

Enter a Servant, lastily.
Serv. My lord the king, the king!—
Leon. What is the business?
Serv. O sir, I shall be hated to report it:
The prince your son, with mere conceit and fear
Of the queen's speed,² is gone.
Leon. How! gone?
Serv. Is dead.

1 Customary strength.
2 Of the event of the trial.
WINTER'S TALE.

L. Apollo's angry; and the heavens themselves Do strike at my injustice. [Her. faints.] How now there?

Paul. This news is mortal to the queen:—Look And see what death is doing. [down, Leon. Take her hence: Her heart is but o'ercharged; she will recover.— I have too much belief'd mine own suspicion: — Beseech you, tenderly apply to her Some remedies for life.—Apollo, pardon [Exit Paulina and Ladies, with Herm.]

My great profaneness against thine oracle!— I'll recollect me to Polixenes; New woo my queen; recall the good Camillo; Whom I proclaim a man of truth, of mercy: For, being transported by my jealousies To bloody thoughts and to revenge, I chose Camillo for the minister, to poison My friend Polixenes: which had been done, But that the good mind of Camillo tardied My swift command, though with death, and with Reward, did threaten and encourage him, Not doing it, and being done: he, most humane, And fill'd with honour, to my kingly guest Unclasp'd my practice; quit his fortunes here, Which you knew great; and to the certain hazard Of all incertainties himself commended, No richer than his honour:—How he glisters Thorough my rust! and how his piety Does my deeds make the blacker!

Re-enter Paulina.

Paul. Woe the while: O, cut my face; lest my heart, cracking it, Break too!

1 Lord. What fit is this, good lady? P. What studied tormentors, tyrant, hast form'd me? What wheels? racks? fires? What playing? boiling In leads, or olls? what old, or newer torture Must I receive; whose every word deserves To taste of thy worst? Thy tyranny Together working with thy jealousies,— Fancies too weak for boys, too green and idle For girls of nine!—O, think, what they have done, And then run mad indeed! stark mad! for all Thy bygone fooleries were but spices of it. That thou betray'st Polixenes, 'twas nothing; That did but show thee, of a fool, inconstant, And horribly ungrateful: nor was't much, Thou wouldst have poison'd good Camillo's To have him kill a king; poor trespasses, [honour, More monstrous standing by; whereof I reckon The casting forth to crow thy baby daughter, To be or none or little; though a devil Would have shed water: out of fire ere done't. Nor is't directly laid to thee, the death Of the young prince, whose honourable thoughts [Thoughts high for one so tender,) cleft the heart That could conceive, a gross and foolish sire Blemish'd his gracious dam: this is not, no, Laid to thy answer: But the last,—O, lords, When I have said, cry, woe! the queen, the queen, The sweetest, dearest, creature's dead; and ven Not drop'd down yet. [gage for't

1 Lord. The higher powers forbid! Paul. I say, she's dead; I'll swear't: if word, nor oath,

1 Tears.

Preval not, go and see: if you can bring Tincture, or lustre, in her lip, her eye, Heat outwardly, or breath within, I'll serve you As I would do the gods.—But, O, thou tyrant! Do not repent these things for they are heavier Than all thy woes can stir: therefore betake thee To nothing but despair. A thousand knees Ten thousand years together, naked, fasting, Upon a barren mountain, and still winter In storm perpetual, could not move the gods To look that way thou wert.

Leon. Go on, go on: Thou canst not speak too much: I have deserv'd All tongues to talk their bitterness.

1 Lord. Say no more; Howe'er the business goes, you have made fault I the boldness of your speech.

Paul. I am sorry for't; All faults Imake, when I shall come to know them, I do repent: Alas, I have show'd too much The rashness of a woman: he is touch'd [help, To the noble heart.—What's gone, and what's past Should be past grief: Do not receive affliction At my petition, I beseech you; rather Let me be punish'd, that have minded you Of what you should forget. Now, good my liege, Sir, royal sir, forgive a foolish woman: The love I bore your queen,—lo, fool again!— I'll speak of her no more, nor of your children; I'll not remember you of my own lord, Who is lost too: Take your patience to you, And I'll say nothing.

Leon. Thou didst speak but well, When most the truth, which I receive much better Than to be pitied of thee. Pr'ythee, bring me To the dead bodies of my queen and son: One grave shall be for both; upon them shall The causes of their death appear, unto Our shame perpetual: Once a day I'll visit The chapel where they lie; and tears shed there Shall be my recreation: So long as Nature will bear up with this exercise, So long I daily vow to use it. Come, And lead me to these sorrows. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.

BOHEMIA. A DESERT COUNTRY NEAR THE SEA.

Enter Antigonus, with the Child; and a Mariner.

Ant. Thou art perfect, I then our ship hath The deserts of Bohemia? [touch'd upon Mar. Ay, my lord, and fear We have landed in ill time: the skies look grimly, And threaten present blusters. In my conscience, The heavens with that we have in hand are angry, And frown upon us. [aboard: Ant. Their sacred wills be done!—Go, get Look to thy bark; I'll not be long, before I call upon thee.

Mar. Make your best haste; and go not Too far! the land: 'tis like to be loud weather, Besides, this place is famous for the creatures Of prey, that keep upon't. Ant. Go thou away; I'll follow instantly.

1 Assured.
Mar. I am glad at heart
To be so rid o' the business. [Exit.
Ant. Come, poor babe:—
I have heard, (but not believ'd,) the spirits of the dead
May walk again: if such thing be, thy mother
Appear'd to me last night; for ne'er was dream
So like a waking. To me comes a creature,
Sometimes her head on one side, some another;
I never saw a vessel of like sorrow,
So fill'd, and so becoming: in pure white robes,
Like very sanctity, she did appear;
My cabin where I lay: thrice bow'd before me;
And gasping to begin some speech, her eyes
Became two spouts: the fury spent, anon
Did this break from her: Good Antigonus,
Since fate, against thy better disposition,
Hath made thy person for the thrower-out
Of my poor babe, according to thin oath,—
Places remote enough are in Bohemia,
There weep, and leave it crying; and, for the
Is counted lost for ever, Perdita, [babe
I pray thee, call'! for this ungentle business,
Put on thee by my lord, thou never shalt see
Thy wife Paulina more:—and so, with shrieks,
She melted into air. Affrighted much,
I did in time collect myself; and thought
This was so, and no slumber. Dreams are toys:
Yet, for this once, yea, superstitiously,
I will be squared by this. I do believe,
Hermione hath suffer'd death; and that
Apollo would, this being indeed the issue
Of king Polixenes, it should here be laid,
Either for life, or death, upon the earth
Of its right father.—Blossom, speed thee well! [Laying down the Child.
There lie; and there thy character! there these; [Laying down a bundle.
Which may, if fortune please, both breed thee, pretty,
[wretch
And still rest thine. —The storm begins:—Poor
That, for thy mother's fault, art thus expos'd
To loss, and what may follow!—Weep, I cannot,
But my heart bleeds: and most accur'd am I,
To be by oath enjoin'd to this.—Farewell!
The day frowns more and more; thou art like to
A lullaby too rough: I never saw [have
The heavens so dim by day. A savage clamour?—
Well may I get aboard!—This is the chase;
I am gone for ever. [Exit, pursued by a Bear.
Enter an old Shepherd.
Shep. I would there were no age between ten and three and twenty; or that youth would sleep out the rest: for there is nothing in the between but wronging the ancient, stealing, fighting.—Hark you now!—Would any but these boiled brains of nineteen, and two and twenty, hunt this weather? They have scared away two of my best sheep; which, I fear, the wolf will sooner find, than the master: if any where I have them, 'tis by the sea-side, browsing on ivy. Good luck, ans 'tbe thy will? what have we here? [Taking up the Child.] Mercy on's, a barne; a very pretty barne! A pretty one;
a very pretty one: I'll take it up for pity: Yet I'll tarry till my son come; he hollers but even now. Whoa, ho ha! 1
1 History. 2 Child.

Enter Clown.
Clo. Hilloa, ico!
Shep. What, art so near? if thou 'lt see a thing to talk on when thou art dead and rotten, come hither. What ailest thou, man?
Clo. I have seen two such sights, by sea and by land;—but I am not to say, it is a sea, for it is now the sky; betwixt the firmament and it, you cannot thrust a bodkin's point.
Shep. Why, boy, how is it?
Clo. I would you did but see how it chafes, how it rages, how it takes up the shore! but that's not to the point: O, the most piteous cry of the poor souls! sometimes to see 'em, and not to see 'em: now the ship boring the moon with her main-mast; and anon swallowed with yest and froth, as you'd thrust a cork into a hogshead. And then for the land service.—To see how the bear tore out his shoulder-bone;
how he cried to me for help, and said his name was Antigonus, a nobleman:—But to make an end of the ship,—to see how the sea flap-dragoned it:—but, first, how the poor souls roared, and the sea mocked them—and how the poor gentleman, roared, and the bear mocked him, both roaring louder than the sea or weather.
Shep. 'Name of mercy, when was this, boy?
Clo. Now, now; I have not winked since I saw these sights: the men are not yet cold under water, nor the bear half dined on the gentleman: he's at it now.
Shep. Would I had been by, to have helped the old man!
Clo. I would you had been by the ship side, to have helped her; there your charity would have lacked footing. [Aside.
Shep. Heavy matters! heavy matters! but look thee here, boy. Now bless thyself; thou met'st with things dying, I with things new born.
Here's a sight for thee: look thee, a bearing-cloth 2 for a squire's child! Look thee here:
take up, take up, boy; open't. So, let's see:
It was told me, I should be rich by the fairies:
this is some changeling:—open't:—What's within, boy?
Clo. You're a made old man; if the sins of your youth are forgiven you, you're well to live.
Gold! all gold!
Shep. This is fairy gold, boy, and 'twill prove so: up it with it, keep it close; home, home, the next way. We are lucky, boy; and to be so still, requires nothing but secrecy.—Let my sheep go:—Come, good boy, the next way home.
Clo. Go you the next way with your findings;
I'll go see if the bear be gone from the gentleman, and how much he hath eaten; they are never curst, 3 but when they are hungry: if there be any of him left, I'll bury it.
Shep. That's a good deed; If thou mayst discern by that which is left of him, what he is, fetch me to the sight of him.
Clo. Marry, will I; and you shall help to put him 't the ground.
Shep. 'Tis a lucky day, boy; and we'll do good deeds on't. [Exeunt.
1 Swallowed.
2 The mantle in which a child was carried to be
3 Mischievous.
Act Fourth.

Enter Time, as Chorus.

Time. I.—that please some, try all; both joy and terror,
Of good and bad; that make, and unfold error,—
Now take upon me, in the name of Time,
To use my wings. Impute it not a crime,
To me, or my swift passage, that I slide
O'er sixteen years, and leave the growth untired
Of that wide gap: since it is in my power
To o'erthrow law, and in one self-born hour
To plant and o'erwhelm custom: Let me pass
The same I am, ere ancient'st order was,
Or what is now received: I witness to
The times that brought them in; so shall I do
To the freshest things now reigning; and make
The glistering of this present, as my tale [stale
Now seems to it. Your patience this allowing,
I turn my glass; and give my scene such growing,
As you had slept between. Leontes leaving
The effects of his foul jealousies; so grieving,
That he shuts up himself; imagine me,
Gentle spectators, that I now may be
In fair Bohemia; and remember well,
I mentioned a son of the king's, which Florizel
I now name to you; and with speed so pace
To speak of Perdita, now grown in grace
Equal with wound'ring: What of her ensued,
I list not prophecy; but let Time's news
Be known, when 'tis brought forth:—a shepherd's daughter,
And what to her adheres which follows after,
Is the argument of Time: Of this allow,
If ever you have spent time worse ere now;
If never yet, that time himself doth say,
He wishes earnestly, you never may. [Exit.

SCENE I.—BOHEMIA. A ROOM IN THE PALACE OF POLIXENES.

Enter Polixenes and Camillo.

Pol. I pray thee, good Camillo, be no more important: 'tis a sickness, denying thee any thing; a death, to grant this.

Cam. It is fifteen years since I saw my country: though I have, for the most part, been aired abroad, I desire to lay my bones there. Besides, the penitent king, my master, hath sent for me: to whose feeling sorrows I might be some allay, or I o'erworn to think so; which is another spur to my departure.

Pol. As thou lov'st me, Camillo, wipe not out the rest of thy services, by leaving me now: the need I have of thee, thine own goodness hath made; better not to have had thee, than thus to want thee; thou, having made the businesses, which none, without thee, can sufficiently manage, must either stay to execute them thyself, or take away with thee the very services thou hast done: which if I have not enough considered, (as too much I cannot,) to be more thankful to thee, shall be my study; and my profit therein, the heaping friendships. Of that fatal country, Sicilia, pr'ythee speak no more: whose very naming punishes me with the re-membrane of that penitent, as thou cal'st him, and reconciled king, my brother: whose loss of his most precious queen, and children, are even now to be a fresh lamented. Say to me, whom saw'st thou the prince Florizel, my son? Kings are no less unhappy, their issue not being gracious, than they are in losing them, when they have approved their virtues.

Cam. Sir, it is three days since I saw the prince: What his happier affairs may be, are to me unknown: but I have, missingly, noted, he is of late much retired from court; and is less frequent to his princely exercises, than formerly he hath appeared.

Pol. I have considered so much, Camillo; and with some care; so far, that I have eyes under my service, which look upon his remoteness: from whom I have this intelligence: That he is seldom from the house of a most homely shepherd: a man, they say, that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbours, is grown into an unspeakable estate.

Cam. I have heard, sir, of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare note; the report of her is extended more, than can be thought to begin from such a cottage.

Pol. That's likewise part of my intelligence. But, I fear the angle that plucks our son thither. Thou shalt accompany us to the place: where we will, not appearing what we are, have some question with the shepherd; from whose simplicity, I think it not uneasy to get the cause of my son's resort thither. Pr'ythee, be my present partner in this business, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicilia.

Cam. I willingly obey your command.

Pol. My best Camillo!—We must disguise ourselves. [Exeunt.
Enter Clown.

Clo. Let me see,—Every 'leven wether—tods; every tod yields—pound and odd shilling; fifteen hundred shorn,—What comes the wool to?

Aut. [Aside.] If the springe hold, the cock's mine.

Clo. I cannot do't without counters.—Let me see; what am I to buy for our sheep-shearing feast? Three pound of sugar; five pound of currants; rice—What will this sister of mine do with rice? But my father hath made her mistress of the feast, and she lays it on. She hath made me four-and-twenty nosegays for the shearmen: three-man song-men all, and very good ones; but they are most of them means and bases. I must have suflon, to colour the warden pie; mace, dates, none; that's out of my note: nutmegs, seven; a race, or two, of ginger; but that I may beg:—four pound of prunes, and as many of raisins o' the sun.

Aut. O, that ever I was born!

[Grovelling on the ground]

Aut. O help me, help me! pluck but off these rags; and then, death, death!

Clo. Alack, poor soul! thou hast need of more rags to lay on thee, rather than have these off.

Aut. O, sir, the loathsomeness of them offends me more than the stripes I have received; which are mighty ones and millions.

Clo. Alas, poor man! a million of beating may come to a great matter.

Aut. I am robbed, sir, and beaten; my money and apparel ta'en from me, and these detestable things put upon me.

Clo. What, by a horse-man, or a foot-man?

Aut. A foot-man, sweet sir, a foot-man.

Clo. Indeed, he should be a foot-man, by the garments he hath left with thee; if this be a horse-man's coat, it hath seen very hot service. Lend me thy hand, I'll help thee: come, lend me thy hand.

[Helping him up]

Aut. O! good sir, tenderly, oh!

Clo. Alas, poor soul.

Aut. O, good sir, softly, good sir: I fear, sir, my shoulder-blade is out.

Clo. How now? canst stand?

Aut. Softly, dear sir; [Picks his pocket.] good sir, softly: you ha' done me a charitable office.

Clo. Dost lack any money? I have a little money for thee.

Aut. No, good sweet sir; no, I beseech you, sir: I have a kinsman not past three quarters of a mile hence, unto whom I was going; I shall there have money, or any thing I want; Offer me no money, I pray you; that kills my heart.

Clo. What manner of fellow was he that robbed you?

Aut. A fellow, sir, that I have known to go about with trol-ny-dames: I knew him once a servant of the prince: I cannot tell, good sir, for which of his virtues it was, but he was certainly whipped out of the court.

C. His vices, you would say; there's no virtue whipped out of the court: they cherish it, to make it stay there; and yet it will no more but abide.

Aut. Vices I would say, sir. I know this man well: he hath been since an ape-bearer; then a process-server, a bailiff; then he married a tinker's wife within a mile where my land and living lies; and, having flown over many knavish professions, he settled only in rogue: some call him Autolycus.

Clo. Out upon him! Prig, for my life, prig: he haunts wakes, fairs, and bear-baitings.

Aut. Very true, sir; he, sir, he; that's the rogue, that put me into this apparel.

Clo. Not a more cowardly rogue in all Bohemia: if you had but looked big, and spit at him, he'd have run.

Aut. I must confess to you, sir, I am no fighter: I am false of heart that way; and that he knew, I warrant him.

Clo. How do you now?

Aut. Sweet sir, much better than I was; I can stand, and walk: I will even take my leave of you, and pace softly towards my kinsman's.

Clo. Shall I bring thee on the way?

Aut. No, good-faced sir; no, sweet sir.

Clo. Then fare thee well; I must go buy spices for our sheep-shearing.

Aut. Prosper you, sweet sir!—[Exit Clown.]

Your purse is not hot enough to purchase your spice. I'll be with you at your sheep-shearing too: If I make not this cheat bring out another, and the shearmen prove sheep, let me be unravelled, and my name put in the book of virtue!

Jog on, jog on, the foot-path way,

And merrily hent the stile-a;

A merry heart goes all the day,

Your sad tires in a mile-a

SCENE III.—A SHEPHERD'S COTTAGE.

Enter Florizel and Perdita.

F. These you unusual weeds to each part of you
Do give a life: no shepherdess; but Flora,
Peering in April's front. This your sheep-shear-
Is as a meeting of the petty gods, [ing
And you the queen on't.

Per. Sir, my gracious lord,
To chide at your extremes,6 it does not become me;
O, pardon, that I name them: your high self,
The gracious marko' the land, you have obscur'd
With a swain's wearing; and me, poor lowly maid,
Most goddess-like prank'd up: But that our
In every mess have folly, and the feeders [feasts
Digest it with a custom, I should blush
To see you so attir'd; sworn, I think,
To show myself a glass.

Flo. I bless the time,
When my good falcon made her flight across
Thy father's ground.

Per. Now Jove afford you cause!
To me, the differences forges dread; your greatness
[ tremble
Hath not been us'd to dread. Even now I
To think, your father, by some accident,
Should pass this way, as you did: O, the fates!
How would he look, to see his work, so noble,
Viledly bound up? What would he say? Or how

3 Slingers in three parts. game of pigeon-holes.
4 Tenors.
Should I, in these my borrow’d flantas, behold
The sternness of his presence?

Flo. Apprehend

Nothing but jollity. The gods themselves,
Humbling their deities to love, have taken
The shapes of beasts upon them: Jupiter
Became a bull, and bellow’d; the green Neptune
A ram, and bleated; and the fire-ro’d god,
Golden Apollo, a poor humble swain,
As I see now: Their transformations
Were never for a piece of beauty rarer:
Nor in a way so chaste: since my desires
Run not before mine honour.

Per. O but, dear sir,
Your resolution cannot hold, when ’tis
Oppos’d, as it must be, by the power of the king:
One of these two must be necessities,
Which then will speak; that you must change this
Or I my life.

Flo. Thou dearest Perdita,
With these fore’d thoughts, Ipry’thee, darken not
The mirth o’ the feast: Or I’ll be thine, my fair,
Or not my father’s: for I cannot be Mine own, or any thing to any, if
I be not thine: to this I am most constant,
Though destiny say, no. Be merry, gentle;
Strangle such thoughts as these, with any thing
That you behold the while. Your guests are coming:
Lift up your countenance: as it were the day
Of celebration of that nuptial, which
We two have sworn shall come.

Per. O lady fortune,
Stand you auspicious!

Enter Shepherd, with Polixenes and Camillo, disguis’d; Clown, Mopsa, Dorcas, and others.

Flo. See, your guests approach.
Address yourself to entertain them sprightly,
And let’s be red with mirth.

Shep. Fie, daughter! when my old wife liv’d, upon

This day, she was both pantler, butler, cook;
Both dame and servant: welcom’d all; serv’d all:
Would sing her song, and dance her turn; now
At upper end o’ the table, now, ’t the middle; here,
On his shoulder, and his: her face o’ fire
With labour; and the thing, she took to quench it,
She would to each one sip: You are retir’d,
As if you were a feasted one, and not
The hostess of the meeting: Pray you, bid
These unknown friends to us welcome: for it is
A way to make us better friends, more known.
Come, quench your bluses; and present yourself
That which you are, mistress o’ the feast: Come
And bid us welcome to your sheep-shearing, [on,
As your good flock shall prosper.

Per. To Pol.] Welcome, sir! It is my father’s will, I should take on the hostess-ship o’ the day;—[To Camillo.] You’re welcome, sir! Give me those flowers there, Dorcas.—Reverend sirs,

For you there’s rosemary, and rue; these keep Seeming, and savour, all the winter long:
Grace, and remembrance, be to you both,
And welcome to our shearing!

Pol. Shepherdess,

(A fair one are you,) well you fit our ages
With flowers of winter.

Per. Sir, the year growing ancient.—
Not yet on summer’s death, nor on the birth
Of trembling winter,—the fairest flowers o’ the season
Are our carnations, and streak’d gillyflowers,
Which some call nature’s bastards: of that kind
Our rustic garden’s barren; and I care not
To get slips of them.

Pol. Wherefore, gentle maiden, Do you neglect them? Per. For I have heard it said,
There is an art, which, in their piedness, shares
With great creating nature.

Pol. *Say, there be; Yet nature is made better by no mean, But nature makes that mean: so, ’er that art, Which you say, adds to nature, is an art That nature makes. You see, sweet maid, we A gentle scion to the wildest stock; marry And make conceive a bark of baser kind By bud of nobler race; This is an art Which does mend nature,—change it rather: but The art itself is nature.

Per. So it is.

Pol. Then make your garden rich in gilly—And do not call them bastards.

Flo. *I’ll not put The dibble*² in earth to set one slip of them: No more than, were I painted, I would wish This youth should say, ’twere well.—Here’s flowers for you;

Hot lavender, mints, savory, marjoram;
The marigold, that goes to bed with the sun,
And with him rises weeping; these are flowers
Of middle summer, and, I think, they are given
To men of middle age: You are very welcome.

Cam. I should leave grazing, were I of your And only live by gazing.

Flo. Out, alas! You’d be so lean, that blasts of January Would blow you through and through.—Now, my fairest friend,

I would I had some flowers o’ the spring, that Become your time of day,—O Proserpine,
For the flowers now, that frightened, thou let’st fall
From Dis’s waggon? daffodils,
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty; violet dim
But sweeter than the lisp of Juno’s eyes,
Or Cytherea’s breath; pale primroses,
That die unmarried, ere they can behold
Bright Phoebus in his strength; bold oxlips and
The crown imperial; lilys of all kinds,
The flower-de-luce being one! O, these, I lack,
To make you garlands of; and my sweet friend,
To straw him o’er and o’er.—Come, take your Meltiinks, I play as I have seen them do flowers;
In Whitson’ pastoral: sure, this robe of mine Does change my disposition.

Flo. What you do,
Still betters what is done. Whenyou speak, sweet,
I’d have you do it ever: when you sing,
I’d have you buy and sell so; so give alms;
Pray so; and, for the ordering your affairs,
To sing them too: When you do dance, I wish you

1 Various colours. 2 Pointed instrument. 3 Pluto.
A wave o' the sea, that you might ever do
Nothing but that; move still, still so, and own
No other function: Each your doing,
So singular in each particular,
Crowns what you are doing in the present deeds,
That all your acts are queens.

Per. O Doricles,
Your praises are too large; but that your youth,
And the true blood, which fairly peeped through it,
Do plainly give you out an unstan'd shepherd;
With wisdom I might fear, my Doricles,
You wou'd me the false way.

Flo. I think, you have
As little skill to fear, as I have purpose
To put you to't. — But, come; our dance, I pray:
Your hand, my Perdita: so turtles pair,
That never mean to part.

Per. I'll swear for 'em.
Pol. This is the prettiest low-born lass, that ever [seems,
Ran on the green-sward: nothing she does, or
But smacks of something greater than herself;
Too noble for this place.

Cam. He tells her something,
That makes her blood look out: Good sooth, she
The queen of curds and cream. [is

Clo. Come on, strike up.

Dor. Mopsa must be your mistress.

Clo. Not a word, a word; we stand upon our manners.—
Come, strike up. [Musick.

Here a dance of Shepherds and Shepherdesses.

Pol. Pray, good shepherd, what [daughter?
Fair swain is this, which dances with your Shep. They call him Doricles; and he boasts
To have a worthy feeding: but I have it [himself
Upon his own report, and I believe it;
He looks like sooth: He says, he loves my daughter;
I think so too; for never gaz'd the moon
Upon the water, as he'stand, and read,
As 'twere, my daughter eyes: and, to be plain,
I think, there is not half a kiss to choose,
Who loves another best.

Pol. She dances fealty. [Shep.
Shep. So she does anything; though I report
That should be silent: if young Doricles [it
Do light upon her, she shall bring him that
Which he not dreams of.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. O master, if you did but hear the pedler at the door, you would never dance again after a tabor and pipe; no, the bagpipe could not move you:
he sings several tunes, faster than you'll tell money;
he utters them as he had eaten ballads, and all men's ears grew to his tunes.

Clo. He could never come better: he shall come in: I love a ballad but even too well: if it be doleful matter, merrily set down; or a very pleasant thing indeed, and sung lamentably.

Serv. He hath songs, for man, or woman, of all sizes; no milliner can so fit his customers with gloves.

Pol. This is a brave fellow.

1 Tract of pasturage. 2 Truth. 3 Neatly.

Clo. Believe me, thou talk'st of an admirable conceited fellow. Has he any unbridled wares? [1 Serv. He hath ribands of all the colours 't the rainbow; points more than all the lawyers in Bohemia can learnedly handle, though they come to him by the gross; inkle, caddisses, 2 cambricks, lawns: why, he sings them over,
as they were gods or goddesses.

Clo. Prythee, bring him in; and let him approach singing.

Per. Forewarn him, that he use no scurrilous words in his tunes.

Clo. You have of these pedlers, that have more in 'em than you'd think, sister.

Per. Ay, good brother, or go about to think.

Enter Autolycus, singing.

Lawn, as white as driven snow;
Cyprus, black as'er was crow;
Gloves, as sweet as damask roses;
Masks for faces, and for noses;
Bugle bracelet, necklace amber,
Perfume for a lady's chamber:
Golden quoifs, and stomachers,
For my lads to give their dears;
Pins and poking-sticks of steel; 2
What maids lack from head to heel;
Come, buy of me, come; come buy, come buy;
Buy, lads, or else your lasses cry;
Come, buy, &c.

Clo. If I were not in love with Mopsa, thou should'st take no money of me; but being enthrall'd as I am, it will also be the bondage of certain ribands and gloves.

Mop. I was promis'd them against the feast;
but they come not too late now.

Clo. Have I not told thee, how I was cozened by the way, and lost all my money?

Aut. And, indeed, sir, there are cozeners abroad: therefore it behoves men to be wary.

Clo. Fear not thou, man, thou shalt lose nothing here.

Aut. I have so, sir: for I have about me many parcels of charge.

Clo. What hast here? ballads?

Mop. Pray now, buy some: I love a ballad in print, a-life; for then we are sure they are true.

Aut. Here's a ballad of a fish that appeared upon the coast, on Wednesday the fourscore of April, forty thousand fathom above water, and sung this ballad against the hard hearts of maids: it was thought, she was a woman, and was turn'd into a cold fish. The ballad is very pitiful, and true.

Dor. Is it true, think you?

Aut. Five justices' hands at it; and witnesses, more than my pack will hold.

Clo. Lay it by: Another.

Aut. This is a merry ballad; but a very pretty
Mop. Let's have some merry one. [one.

Aut. Why this is a passing merry one; and goes to the tune of Two maids woeing a man:
there's scarce a maid westward, but she sings it;
it 'tis in request, I can tell you.

Mop. We can both sing it; if thou 'lt bear a part thou shalt hear; 'tis in three parts.

1 Plain goods. 2 For adjusting the plaits of ruffs.
3 Kind of tape.
Dor. We had the tune on a month ago.

_Aut._ I can bear my part; you must know, 'tis my occupation: have at it with you.

SONG.

_A._ Get you hence, for I must go;
Where, it fits not you to know.
_D._ Whither? M. O, whither? D. Whither?
M. It becomes thy oath full well,
Thou to me thy secrets tell:
_D._ Me too, let me go whither.
M. Or thou go'st to the grange, or will:
_D._ If to either, thou dost ill.
D. Thou hast sworn my love to;
M. Thou hast sworn it more to me:
Then, whither go'st? say, whither?

_Clo._ We'll have this song out anon by ourselves; My father and the gentleman are in sad talk, and we'll not trouble them: Come, bring away thy pack after me. Girls, I'll buy for you both,—Pedlar, let's have the first choice.—Follow me, girls.

_Aut._ [Aside.] And you shall pay well for 'em.

_Will you buy any tape,
Or lace for your cope,
My dainty duck, my dear-a?
Any silk, any thread,
Any toys for your head,
Of the new'st and fin'st, fin'st wear-a?
Come to the pedlar;
Money's a meddler,
That doth utter all men's wear-a._

[Exeunt Clown, Autolycus, Dorcas, and Mopsa.

Enter a Servant.

_Serv._ Master, there is three carters, three shepherds, three neat-herds, three swine-herds that have made themselves all men of hair; they call themselves salters: and they have a dance which the wenches say is a gallimaufry of gambols, because they are not in't; but they themselves are o' the mind, it will please plentifully.

_Shep._ Away! we'll none o'nt; here has been too much humble folly here already:—I know, sir, we weary you.

_Pol._ You weary those that refresh us: Pray, let's see these three fours of herdsmen.

_Serv._ One three of them, by their own report, sir, hath danced before the king; and not the worst of the three, but jumps twelve foot and a half by the squire.6

_Sh._ Leave your prating; since these good men are pleased, let them come in; but quickly now.

_Serv._ Why, they stay at door, sir. [Exit.

Re-enter Servant, with twelve Rusticks habited like Satyrs. They dance, and then exeunt.

_Pol._ O, father, you'll know more of that hereafter.—

_Is it not too far gone?—"Tis time to part them. —He's simple, and tells much. [Aside.]—How now, fair shepherd?

Your heart is full of something, that does take 1 Serious. 3 Satyrs. 5 Foot-rule.
2 Soil. 4 Medley.

Your mind from feasting. Sooth, when I was And handed love, as you do, I was wont [young, To load my she with knacks: I would have ransack'd The pedler's silken treasury, and have pour'd it To her acceptance; you have let him go, And nothing marted1 with him: if your lass Interpretation should abuse; and call this Your lack of love, or bounty: you were straited For a reply, at least, if you make a care Of happy holding her.

_Flo._ Old sir, I know She prizes not such trifles as these are: The gifts, she looks from me, are pack'd and lock'd Up in my heart; which I have given already, But not delivered.—O, hear me breathe my life Before this ancient sir, who, it should seem, Hath sometime lov'd: I take thy hand, this hand, As soft as dove's down, and as white as it; Or Ethiopian's tooth, or the fant's snow, That's bolted2 by the northern blasts twice o'er.

_Pol._ What follows this?—

How prettily the young swain seems to wash The hand, was fair before! I have put you out;—

But to your protestation; let me hear What you profess.

_Flo._ Do, and be witness to'.

_Pol._ And this my neighbour too?

_Flo._ And he, and more Than he, and men; the earth, the heavens, and all:

That,—were I crown'd the most imperial mo- Thereof most worthy; were I the fairest youth That ever made eye swerve; had force, and knowledge, More than was ever man's,—I would not prize Without her love; for her, employ them all; Command them, and condemn them, to her Or to their own perdition. [service, _Pol._ Fairly offer'd.

_Cam._ This shows a sound affection.

_Shep._ But, my daughter, Say you the like to him?

_Per._ I cannot speak So well, nothing so well; no, nor mean better: By the pattern of mine own thoughts I cut out The purity of his.

_Shep._ Take hands, a bargain:——

And, friends unknown, you shall bear witness I give my daughter to him, and will make [to't: Her portion equal his.

_Flo._ O, that must be I the virtue of your daughter: one being dead, I shall have more than you can dream of yet; Enough then for your wonder: But, come on, Contract us 'fore these witnesses.

_Shep._ Come, your hand:

And, daughter, yours.

_Pol._ Soft, swain, awhile, 'beseech you; Have you a father?

_Flo._ I have: But what of him?

_Pol._ Knows he of this?

_Flo._ He neither does, nor shall.

_Pol._ Methinks, a father Is, at the nuptial of his son, a guest

1 Trafficked. 2 The sieve used to separate flour from bran is called a bolting-cloth.
That best becomes the table: Pray you, once
Is not your father grown incapable [more;]
Of reasonable affairs? is he not stupid [hear?]
With age and altering rheums? Can he speak?
Know man from man? dispute his own estate?!
Lies he not bed-ridden? and again does nothing,
But what he did being childish?

Flo. No, good sir;
He has his health, and ampler strength, indeed,
Than most have of his age.

Pol. By my white beard,
You offer him, if this be so, a wrong
Something unphilial: Reason, my son
Should choose himself a wife; but as good reason,
The father (all whose joy is nothing else
But fair posterity,) should hold some counsel
In such a business.

Flo. I yield all this;
But, for some other reasons, my grave sir,
Which 'tis not fit you know, I not acquaint
My father of this business.

Pol. Let him know't.

Flo. He shall not.

Flo. No, he must not.
S. Lethim, my son; he shall not need to grieve
At knowing of thy choice.

Flo. Mark our contract.

Pol. Mark your divorce, young sir,
[Discovering himself.

Whom son I dare not call; thou art too base
To be acknowledg'd: Thou a sceptre's heir,
That thus affright' a sheep-hook!—Thou old traitor,
I am sorry, that, by hanging thee, I can but Shorten thy life one week.—And thou, fresh piece
Of excellent witchcraft; who, of force must know
The royal fool thou cop'st with:—

Shep. O, my heart!

Pol. I' ll have thy beauty scratch'd with briars,
And made [boy,
More homely than thy state.—For thee, fond
If I may ever know, thou dost but sigh,
That thou no more shalt see this knack (as never
I mean thou shalt,) we'll bar thee from success-

Not hold thee of our blood, no not our kin.
Far than Deucalion off:—Mark thou my words;
Follow us to the court.—Thou churl, for this time,
Though full of our displeasure, yet we free thee
From the dead blow of it.—And you, enchant-

Worthy enough a herdsmen; yea, him too,
That makes himself, but for our honour therein,
Unworthy thee,—if ever, henceforth, thou
These rural latches to his entrance open,
I will devise a death as cruel for thee,
As thou art tender to't. [Exit.

Per. Even here undone!
I was not much afeard: for once or twice,
I was about to speak; and tell him plainly,
The self-same sun, that shines upon his court,
Hides not his visage from our cottage, but Looks on alike.—[To Florizel.] Wilt please you, sir, begone?

I told you, what would come of this: Beseech you,
1 Talk over his affairs.

Of your own state take care: this dream of mine,—
Being now awake, I'll queen it no inch further,
But milk my ewes, and weep.

Cam. Why, how now, father?
Speak ere thou diest.

Shep. I cannot speak, nor think,
Nor dare to know that which I know.—[To Florizel.] O, sir,
You have undone a man of fourscore three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet; yea,
To die upon the bed my father died,
To lie close by his honest bones: but now
Some hangmen must put on my shroud, and lay me
Where no priest shovels-in dust.—[To Perdita.]
O wretched girl! [adventure
That knew'st this was the prince, and wouldst
To mingle faith with him.—Undone! undone!
If I might die within this hour, I have liv'd
To die when I desire. [Exit.

Flo. Why look you so upon me?
I am but sorry, not afeard?—delay'd,
But nothing alter'd:—What I was, I am;
More straining on, for plucking back; not fol-
My leash unwillingly. [lowing

Cam. Gracious my lord,
You know your father's temper: at this time
He will allow no speech,—which, I do guess,
You do not purpose to him;—and as hardly
Will he endure your sight as yet, I fear:
Then, till the fury of his highness settle,
Come not before him.

Flo. I not purpose it.

I think, Camillo.

Cam. Even he, my lord.

P. How often have I told you, 'twould be thus?
How often said, my dignity would last
But till 'twere known?

Flo. It cannot fail, but by
The violation of my faith; And then
Let nature crush the sides o' the earth together,
And mar the seeds within!—Lift up thy looks:
From my succession wipe me, father! I Am heir to my affection.

Cam. Be advis'd.

Flo. I am; and by my fancy! if my reason
Will thereto be obedient, I have reason;
If not, my senses, better pleas'd with madness,
Do bid it welcome.

Cam. This is desperate, sir.

Flo. So call it: but it does fulfil my vow:
I needs must think it honesty. Camillo,
Not for Bohemia, nor the pomp that may
Be thereat glean'd; for all the sun sees, or
The close earth worms, or the profound seas hide
In unknown fathoms, will I break my oath
To this my fair below'd: Therefore, I pray you,
As you have ever been my father's friend,
When he shall miss me, (as, in faith, I mean not
To see him any more,) cast your good counsels
Upon his passion; Let myself and fortune,
Tug for the time to come. This you may know
And so deliver,—I am put to sea
With her, whom here I cannot hold on shore;
And, most opportune to our need, I have
A vessel rides fast by, but not prepared
For this design. What course I mean to hold,

WINTER'S TALE.

Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor Concern me the reporting:

Cam. O, my lord,
I would your spirit were easier for advice,
Or stronger for your need.

Flo. Hark, Perdita.—[Takes her aside.

[To Camillo.] I'll hear you by and by.

Cam. He's irremovable,
Iresolvy'd for flight: Now were I happy, if
His going I could frame to serve my turn;
Save him from danger, do him love and honour;
Purchase the sight again of dear Sicilia,
And that unhappy king, my master, whom
I so much thirst to see.

Flo. Now, good Camillo,
I am so fraught with curious business, that
I leave out ceremony. [Going.

Cam. Sir, I think,
You have heard of my poor services, i' the love
That I have borne your father?

Flo. Very nobly
Have you deserv'd: it is my father's music,
To speak your deeds; not little of his care
To have them recompens'd as thought on.

Cam. Well, my lord,
If you may please to think I love the king; (is
And, through him, what is nearest to him, which
Your gracious self; embrace but my direction,
(If your more ponderous and settled project
May suffer alteration,) on mine honour [ing
I'll point you where you shall have such receiv-
As shall become your highness; where you may Enjoy your mistress; (from the whom, I see,
There's no disjunction to be made, but
As heavens forefend! your ruin;) marry her;
And (with my best endeavours, in your absence,) Your discontenting, father strive to qualify,
And bring him up to liking.

Flo. How, Camillo,
May this, almost a miracle, be done?
That I may call thee something more than man,
And, after that, to trust thee.

Cam. Have you thought on
A place, whereto you'll go?

Flo. Not any yet:
But as the unthought-on accident is guilty
To what we wildly do; so we profess
Ourselves to be the slaves of chance, and files
Of every wind that blows.

Cam. Then list to me:
This follows,—if you will not change your pur-
But undergo this flight:—Make for Sicilia; [pose,
And there present yourself, and your fair prin-
(For so, I see, she must be,) for Leontes; [cess
She shall be habited, as it becomes
The partner of your bed. Methinks, I see
Leontes, opening his free arms, and weeping
His welcomes forth: asks thee, the son, for giveness.

As'twere i' the father's person: kisses the hands
Of your fresh princess: o'er and o'er divides him
'Twixt his unkindness and his kindness: the one
He chides to hell, and bids the other grow,
Faster than thought, or time.

Flo. Worthy Camillo,
What colour for my visitation shall I
Hold up before him?

Cam. Sent by the king your father
To greet him, and to give him comforts. Sir,
The manner of your bearing towards him, with
What you, as from your father, shall deliver,
Things known betwixt us three, I'll write you
down;
The which shall point you forth at every sitting,
What you must say; that he shall not perceive,
But that you have your father's bosom there,
And speak his very heart.

Flo. There is some sap in this.

Cam. A course more promising
Than a wild dedication of yourselves [taint,
To unpath'd waters, undream'd shores; most cer-
To misery's enough: no hope to help you;
But, as you shake off one, to take another:
Nothing so certain as your anchors: who
Do their best office, if they can but stay you
Where you'll be loath to be: Besides, you know,
Prosperity's the very bond of love;
Whose fresh complexion and whose heart to-
Affliction alters. [gether

Per. One of these is true:
I think, affliction may subdue the check,
But not take in the mind.

Cam. Yea, say you so?
There shall not, at your father's house, these
Be born another such. [seven years,

Flo. My good Camillo,
She is as forward of her breeding, as
I' the rear of birth.

Cam. I cannot say, 'tis pity
She lacks instructions; for she seems a mistress
To most that teach.

Per. Your pardon, sir, for this:
I'll blush you thanks.

Flo. My prettiest Perdita.—

But, O, the thorns we stand upon!—Camillo,—
Preserver of my father, now of me:
The medicine of our house! how shall we do?
We are not furnish'd like Bohemia's son;
Nor shall appear in Sicily——

Cam. My lord,
Fear none of this: I think, you know, my for-
Do all lie there: it shall be so my care [tunes
To have you royally appointed, as if
The scene you play, were mine. For instance, sir,
That you may know you shall not want,—one

[They talk aside.

Enter Autolycus.

Aut. Ha, ha! what a fool honesty is! and Trust, his sworn brother, a very simple gentleman!
I have sold all my trinkery: not a counterfeit stone, not a riband, glass, pomander, brooch, table-book, ballad, knife, tape, glove, shoe-tye, bracelet, horn-ring, to keep my pack from fasting: they throng who should buy first; as if my trinkets had been hallowed, and brought a benedciction to the buyer; by which means I saw whose purse was best in picture; and, what I saw, to my good use, I remember. My clown (who wants but something to be a reasonable man,) grew so in love with the song, that he would not

ACT IV.

Of this escape, and whither they are bound;
Wherein, my hope is, I shall so prevail,
To force him after: in whose company
I shall review Sicilia; for whose sake
I have a woman's longing.

Flo. Fortune speed us!—
Thus we set on, Camillo, to the sea-side.

Camillo. The swifter speed, the better.

[Exeunt Florizel, Perdita, and Camillo.

Aut. I understand the business, I hear it: To have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a cut-purse: a good nose is requisite also, to smell out work for the other senses. I see, this is the time that the unjust man doth thrive. What an exchange had this been, without boot? what a boot is here, with this exchange? Sure, the gods do this year converse at us, and we may do any thing extemporise. The prince himself is about a piece of iniquity; stealing away from his father, with his clog at his heels: If I thought it were not a piece of honesty to acquaint the king withal, I would do: I hold it the more knavery to conceal it; and therein am I constant to my profession.

Enter Clown and Shepherd.

Aside, aside;—here is more matter for a hot brain: Every lane's end, every shop, church, session, hanging, yields a careful man work.

Clo. Nay, but hear me.

Camillo. Nay, but hear me.

Shep. Go to them.

Camillo. She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood has not offended the king; and, so, your flesh and blood is not to be punished by him. Show those things you found about her. This being done, let the law go whistle; I warrant you.

Shep. I will tell the king all, every word, yen, and his son's pranks too; who, I may say, is no honest man neither to his father, nor to me, to go about to make him the king's brother-in-law.

Camillo. Indeed, brother-in-law was the furthest off you could have been to him; and then your blood had been the dearer, by I know how much an ounce.

Aut. [Aside.] Very wisely; puppies!

Shep. Well; let us to the king; there is that in this farde, will make him scratch his beard.

Aut. [Aside.] I know not what impediment this complaint may be to the flight of my master.

Camillo. Tray heartily he be at palace.

Aut. [Aside.] Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance;—Let me pocket up my peller's beard. — [Takes off his false beard.] How now, rusticks? whither are you bound?

Shep. To the palace, an it like your worship.

Aut. Your affairs there? what? with whom? the condition of that farde, the place of your dwelling, your names, your ages, of what having, breeding, and any thing that is fitting to be known, discover.

Camillo. We are but plain fellows, sir.

1 Bundle.

2 Estate.

1 Jackdaws.

2 Something over and above.
Aut. A lie; you are rough: Let me have no lying; it becomes none but tradesmen, and they often give us the lie; but we pay them for it with stamped coin, not stabbing steel; therefore they do not give us the lie.

Clo. Your worship had like to have given us one, if you had not taken yourself with the manner. 1

Shep. Are you a courtier, an't like you, sir? Aut. Whether it like me, or no, I am a courtier. Seest thou not the air of the court, in these enfoldings? hath not my gait in it, the measure of the court? receives not thy nose court-odour from me? reflect I not on thy baseness, court-contempt? Think'st thou, for that I insinuate, or toze2 from thee thy business, I am therefore no courtier? I am courtier cap-a-pè; and one that will either push on, or pluck back thy business there: whereupon I command thee to open thy affair.

Shep. My business, sir, is to the king. Aut. What advocate hast thou to him? Shep. I know not, an't like you. Clo. Advocate's the court-word for a pheasant; say, you have none.

Shep. None, sir; I have no pheasant, cock nor hen.

Aut. How bless'd are we, that are not simple men! Yet nature might have made me these are, Therefore I'll not disdain.

Clo. This cannot be but a great courtier.

Shep. His garments are rich, but he wears them not handsomely.

Clo. He seems to be the more noble in being fantastic; a great man, I'll warrant; I know, by the picking on't teeth.

Aut. The fardel there? what's i' the fardel? Wherefore that box?

Shep. Sir, there lies such secrets in this fardel, and box, which none must know but the king: and which he shall know within this hour, if I may come to the speech of him.

Aut. Age, thou hast lost thy labour.

Shep. Why, sir?

Aut. The king is not at the palace; he is gone aboard a new ship to purge melancholy, and air himself: For if thou be'st capable of things serious, thou must know, the king is full of grief.

Shep. So 'tis said, sir; about his son, that should have married a shepherd's daughter.

Aut. If that shepherd be not in hand-fast, let him fly; the curses he shall have, the tortures he shall feel, will break the back of man, the heart of monster.

Clo. Think you so, sir?

Aut. Not he alone shall suffer what wit can make heavy, and vengeance bitter; but those that are germane 3 to him, though removed fifty times, shall all come under the hangman: which though it be great pity, yet it is necessary. An old sheep-whistling rogue, a ram-tender, to offer to have his daughter come into grace! Some say, he shall be stoned; but that death is too soft for him, say I: Draw our throne into a sheep-cote! all deaths are too few, the sharpest too easy.

1 In the fact. 2 CaJole. 3 Related.

Clo. Has the old man e'er a son, sir, do you hear, an't like you, sir?

Aut. He has a son, who shall be flayed alive; then, 'moined over with honey, set on the head of a wasp's nest; then stand, till he be three quarters and a dram dead: then recovered again with aquavitae, or some other hot infusion: then, raw as he is, and in the hottest day prognostication proclaims, 1 shall he be set against a brick-wall, the sun looking with a southward eye upon him; where he is to behold him, with flies blown to death. But what talk we of these traitory rascals, whose miseries are to be smiled at, their offences being so capital? Tell me (for you seem to be honest plain men,) what you have to the king: being something gently considered, 2 I'll bring you where he is abroad, tender your persons to his presence, whisper him in your beards; and, if it be in man, besides the king, to effect your suits, here is the man shall do it.

Clo. He seems to be of great authority: close with him, give him gold; and though authority be a stubborn bear, yet he is oft led by the nose with gold: show the inside of your purse to the outside of his hand, and no more ado: Remember stoned and flayed alive.

Shep. An't please you, sir, to undertake the business for us, here is that gold I have: I'll make it as much more; and leave this young man in pawn, till I bring it you.

Aut. After I have done what I promised?

Shep. Ay, sir.

Aut. Well, give me the moiety;—Are you a party in this business?

Clo. In some sort, sir; but though my case be a pitiful one, I hope I shall not be flayed out of it.

Aut. O, that's the case of the shepherd's son: Hang him, he'll be made an example.

Clo. Comfort, good comfort: we must to the king, and show our strange sights; he must know, 'tis none of your daughter nor my sister; we are gone else. Sir, I will give you as much as this old man does, when the business is performed; and remain, as he says, your pawn, till it be brought you.

Aut. I will trust you. Walk before toward the sea side; go on the right hand; I will but look upon the hedge, and follow you.

Clo. We are blessed in this man, as I may say; even blessed.

Shep. Let's before, as he bids us: he was provided to do us good. [Exeunt Shep. and Clown.

Aut. If I had a mind to be honest, I see, fortune would not suffer me; she drops booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occasion; gold, and a means to do the prince my master good; which, who knows how that may turn back to my advancement? I will bring these two moles, these blind ones, aboard him: if he think it fit to shore them again, and that the complaint they have to the king concerns him nothing, let him call me rogue, for being so far officious; for I am proof against that title, and what shame else belongs to: To him will I present them, there may be matter in it. [Exit.

Act Fifth.

SCENE I.

SICILIA. A ROOM IN THE PALACE OF LEONTES.

Enter Leontes, Cleomenes, Dion, Paulina, and others.

Cleo. Sir, you have done enough, and have perform'd
A saint-like sorrow: no fault could you make,
Which you have not redeem'd; indeed paid down
More penitence than done trespass: At the last,
Do, as the heavens have done; forget your evil;
With them, forgive yourself.

Leon. Whilst I remember
Her, and her virtues I cannot forget,
My blemishes in them; and so still think of
The wrong I did myself: which was so much,
That heirless it hath made my kingdom; and Destroy'd the sweet'st companion, that e'er man
Bred his hopes out of.

Paul. True, too true, my lord:
If, one by one, you wedded all the world,
Or, from the all that are, took something good,
To make a perfect woman; she you kill'd,
Would be unparallel'd.

Leon. I think so. Kill'd!
She I kill'd? I did so: but thou strik'st me
Sorely, to say I did; it is as bitter
Upon thy tongue, as in my thought: Now,
Say so but seldom. [good now,
Cleo. Not at all, good lady:
You might have spoken a thousand things that
Would have done the time more benefit, and grac'd
Your kindness better.

Paul. You are one of those,
Would have him wed again.

Dion. If you would not so,
You pity not the state, nor the remembrance
Of his most sovereign dame: consider little,
What dangers, by his highness' fall of issue,
May drop upon his kingdom, and devour
Incurant lookers-on. What were more holy,
Than to rejoice, the former queen is well?
What holier, than,—for royalty's repair,
For present comfort and for future good,—
To bless the bed of majesty again
With a sweet fellow to't?

Paul. There is none worthy,
Respecting her that's gone. Besides, the gods
Will have fulfill'd their secret purposes:
For has not the divine Apollo said,
Is't not the tenour of his oracle,
That king Leontes shall not have an heir,
Till his lost child be found? which, that shall
Is all as monstrous to our human reason,
As my Antigonus to break his grave,
And come again to me; who, on my life,
Did perish with the infant. 'Tis your counsel,
My lord should to the heavens be contrary.
Oppose against their wills.—Care not for issue;

[To Leontes.

The crown will find an heir; Great Alexander
Left his to the worthiest; so his successor
Was like to be the best.

Leon. Good Paulina,—

Who hast the memory of Hermione,
I know in honour.—O, that ever I
Had squar'd me to thy counsel!—then, even now,
I might have look'd upon my queen's full eyes;
Have taken treasure from her lips,—

Paul. And left them
More rich, for what they yielded.

Leon. Thou speak'st truth. [worse,
No more such wives; therefore, no wife: one
And better us'd, would make her sainted spirit
Again possess her corps; and, on this stage,
(Where we offenders now appear,) soul-vex'd
Begin, And why to me?

Paul. Had she such power,
She had just cause.

Leon. She had; and would incense me
To murder her I married.

Paul. I should so;
Were I the ghost that walk'd, I'd bid you mark
Her eye; and tell me, for what dull part in't
You chose her: then I'd shrick, that open ears
Should rift' to hear me; and the words that Should be, Remember mine.

Leon. Stars, very stars,
And all eyes else dead coals!—fear thou no wife,
I'll have no wife, Paulina.

Paul. Will you swear
Never to marry, but by my free leave?

Leon. Never, Paulina; so be bless'd my spirit!
P. Then, good my lords, bear witness to his Cleo. You tempt him over-much. [oath.
Paul. Unless another,
As like Hermione as is her picture,
Afront's his eye.

Cleo. Good madam,—

Paul. I have done.
Yet, if my lord will marry,—if you will, sir,
No remedy, but you will; give me the office
To choose you a queen: she shall not be so young
As was your former; but she shall be such,
As, walk'd your first queen's ghost, it should take
To see her in your arms.

Leon. My true Paulina,
We shall not marry, till thou bidd'st us.

Paul. That
Shall be, when your first queen's again in breath;
Never till then.

Enter a Gentleman.

G. One that gives out himself prince Florizel, Son of Polixenes, with his prince (she
The fairest I have yet beheld,) desires access
To your high presence.

Leon. What with him? he comes not
Like to his father's greatness; his approach,
So out of circumstance, and sudden, tells us,
'Tis not a visitation fram'd, but forc'd
By need, and accident. What train?

Cent. But few,
And those but mean.

Leon. His princess, say you, with him?
G. Ay; the most peerless piece of earth, I think,
That e'er the sun shone bright on.

Paul. O Hermione,
As every present time doth boast itself
Above a better; gone; so must thy grave
Give way to what's seen now. Sir, you yourself

Leon. Go, Cleomenes: Yourself, assisted with your honour'd friends, Bring them to our embracement.—Still 'tis strange, [Exeunt Cleomenes, Lords, and Gentlemen. He thus should steal upon us.

Paul. Had our prince, (Jewel of children,) seen this hour, he had pair'd Well with this lord; there was not full a month Between their births.

Leon. Pr'ythee, no more: thou know'st, He dies to me again, when talk'd of: sure, When I shall see this gentleman, thy speeches Will bring me to consider that, which may Unfurnish me of reason.—They are come.—

Re-enter Cleomenes, with Florizel, Perdita, and Attendants.

Your mother was most true to wedlock, prince; For she did print your royal father off, Conceiving you: Were I but twenty-one, Your father's image is so hit in you, His very air, that I should call you brother, As I did him; and speak of something, wildly By us perform'd before. Most dearly welcome! And your fair princess, goddess! — O, alas! I lost a couple, that 'twixt heaven and earth Might thus have stood, begettng wonder, as You, gracious couple, do! and then I lost (All mine own folly,) the society, Amity too, of your brave father; whom, Though bearing misery, I desire my life Once more to look upon.

Flo. By his command Have I here touch'd Sicilia; and from him Give you all greetings, that a king, at friend, Can send his brother: and, but infirmity (Which waits upon worn times,) hath something His wish'd ability, he had himself [seiz'd, The lands and waters 'twixt your throne and his Measur'd, to look upon you; whom he loves (He bade me say so,) more than all the scepters, And those that bear them, living.

Leon. O, my brother, (Good gentleman) the wrongs I have done thee, Afresh within me; and these thy offices, [stir So rarely kind, are as interpreters Of my behind-hand slackness!—Welcome hither, As is the spring to the earth. And hath he too Expos'd this paragon to the fearful usage (At least, ungentle,) of the dreadful Neptune, To greet a man, not worth her pains; much less The adventure of her person?

Flo. She came from Libya.

Leon. Where the warlike Smalus, That noble honour'd lord, is fear'd, and lov'd? Flo. Most royal sir, from thence: from him, whose daughter His tears proclaim'd his, parting with her: thence [Cross'd, (A prosperous south-wind friendly,) we have To execute the charge my father gave me, For visiting your highness: My best train I have from your Sicilian shores dismiss'd; Who for Bohemia bend, to signify Not only my success in Libya, sir, But my arrival, and my wife's, in safety Here, where we are.

Leon. The blessed gods Purge all infection from our air, whilst you Do climate here! You have a holy father, A graceful gentleman; against whose person, So sacred as it is, I have done sin:

For which the heavens, taking angry note, Have left me issueless; and your father's bless'd; (As he from heaven merits it,) with you, Worthy his goodness. What might I have been, Might I a son and daughter now have look'd on, Such goodly things as you?

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Most noble sir, That which I shall report, will bear no credit, Were not the proof so nigh. Please you, great Bohemia greets you from himself, by me: [Sir, Desires you to attach 1 his son: who has (His dignity and duty both cast off,) Fled from his father, from his hopes, and with A shepherd's daughter.

Leon. Where's Bohemia? speak. Lord. Here in the city; I now came from him: I speak amazedly; and it becomes My marv'l, and my message. To your court Whiles he was hast'ning, (in the chase, it seems, Of this fair couple,) meets he on the way The father of this seeming lady, and Her brother, having both their country quitted With this young prince.

Flo. Camillo has betray'd me; Whose honour, and whose honesty, till now, Endur'd all weathers.

Lord. 2 Jay't so, to his charge; He's with the king your father.

Leon. Who? Camillo? Lo. Camillo, sir; I spake with him; who now Has these poor men in question. 2 Never saw I Wretches so quake: they kneel, they kiss the earth: Forswear themselves as often as they speak: Bohemia stops his ears, and threatens them With divers deaths in death.

Per. O, my poor father! — The heaven set spies upon us, will not have Our contract celebrated.

Leon. You are married? Flo. We are not, sir, nor are we like to be; The stars, I see, will kiss the valleys first: — The odds for high and low's alike. 3 1 Arrest. 2 Examination. 3 A quibble on the false dice.

Leon. My lord,
Is this the daughter of a king?
Flo. She is,
When once she is my wife.
Leon. That once, I see, by your good father's Will come on very slowly. I am sorry, [speed,
Most sorry, you have broken from his liking,
Where you were tied in duty: and as sorry,
Your choice is not so rich in worth as beauty,
That you might well enjoy her.
Flo. Dear, look up:
Though fortune, visible an enemy,
Should chase us, with my father; power no jot
Hath she, to change our loves.—Beseech you, sir,
Remember since you ow'd no more to time
Than I do now: with thought of such affections,
Step forth mine advocate; at your request,
My father will grant precious things, as trifles.
Leon. Would he so do, I'd beg your precious
Which he counts but a trifle. [mistress,
Paul. Sir, my liege,
Your eye hath too much youth in't: not a month
'Tore your queen died, she was more worth such
Than what you look on now. [gazes,
Leon. I thought of her,
Even in these looks I made.—[To Florizel.] But your petition
Is yet unanswer'd: I will to your father;
Your honour not o'erthrown by your desires,
I am a friend to them, and you: upon which errand
I now go toward him; therefore, follow me,
And mark what way I make: Come, good my lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—BEFORE THE PALACE.

Enter Autolycus and a Gentleman.

Aut. Beseech you, sir, were you present at this relation?

1 Gent. I was by at the opening of the fardel, heard the old shepherd deliver the manner how he found it: whereupon, after a little amazed-ness, we were all commanded out of the chamber; only this methought I heard the shepherd say, he found the child.

Aut. I would most gladly know the issue of it.
1 Gent. I make a broken delivery of the business:—But the changes I perceived in the king, and Camillo, were very notes of admiration:
they seemed almost, with staring on one another,
to fear the cases of their eyes; there was speech in their dumbness, language in their very gesture; they looked, as they had heard of a world ransomed, or one destroyed: A notable passion of wonder appeared in them: but the wisest holder, that knew no more but seeing, could not say, if the importance 1 were joy, or sorrow;
but in the extremity of the one, it must needs be.

Enter another Gentleman.

Here comes a gentleman, that, happily, knows more; The news, Rogero?

2 Gent. Nothing but bonfires: The oracle is fulfilled; the king's daughter is found: such a deal of wonder is broken out within this hour, that ballad-makers cannot be able to express it.

1 The thing imported.

Enter a third Gentleman.

Here comes the lady Paulina's steward; he can deliver you more.—How goes it now, sir? this news, which is called true, is so like an old tale, that the verity of it is in strong suspicion: Has the king found his heir?

3 Gent. Most true; if ever truth were pregnant by circumstance: that which you hear, you'll swear you see, there is such unity in the proofs.
The mantle of queen Hermione:—her jewel about the neck of it:—the letters of Antigonus, found with it, which they know to be his character:—
the majesty of the creature, in resemblance of the mother:—the affection 1 of nobleness, which nature shows above her breeding,—and many other evidences, proclaim her, with all certainty, to be the king's daughter. Did you see the meeting of the two kings?

2 Gent. No.

3 Gent. Then have you lost a sight, which was to be seen, cannot be spoken of. There might you have beheld one joy crown another; so, and in such manner, that it seemed, sorrow wept to take leave of them; for their joy waded in tears.
There was casting up of eyes, holding up of hands; with countenance of such distraction, that they were to be known by garment, not by favour. 2 Our king, being ready to leap out of himself for joy of his found daughter; as if that joy were now become a loss, cries, O, thy mother, thy mother! then asks Bohemia forgiveness;
then embraces his son-in-law; then again worries his daughter, with clipping 3 her; how he thanks the old shepherd, who stands by, like a weather-beaten conduit of many kings' reigns.
I never heard of such another encounter, which lines report to follow it, and undoes description to do it.

2 Gent. What, pray you, became of Antigonus, that carried hence the child?

3 Gent. Like an old tale still: which will have matter to rehearse, though credit be asleep, and not an ear open: He was torn to pieces with a bear: this avouches the shepherd's son; who has not only his innocence (which seems much) to justify him, but a handkerchief, and rings,
of his, that Paulina knows.

1 Gent. What became of his bark, and his followers?

3 Gent. Wreck'd, the same instant of their master's death; and in the view of the shepherd:
sO that all the instruments, which aided to expose the child, were even then lost, when it was found. But, O, the noble combat, that, 'twixt joy and sorrow, was fought in Paulina! She had one eye declined for the loss of her husband;
another elevated that the oracle was fulfilled:
She lifted the princess from the earth: and so locks her in embracing, as if she would pin her to her heart, that she might no more be in danger of losing.

1 Gent. The dignity of this act was worth the audience of kings and princes; for by such was it acted.

3 Gent. One of the prettiest touches of all, and that which angled for mine eyes (caught thewater, though not the fish) was, when at the relation of the queen's death, with the manner how she came to it (bravely confessed, and lamented by the king,) how attentiveness wounded his daughter: till, from onesign of dolore to another, she did, with an alas! I would fain say, bleed tears; for I am sure, my heart wept blood. Who was most marble there, changed colour; some swooned, all sorrowed: if all the world could have seen it, the woe had been universal.

1 Gent. Are they returned to the court?

3 Gent. No: the princess hearing of her mother's statute, which is in the keeping of Paulina,—a piece many years in doing, and now newly performed by that rare Italian master, Julio Romano; who, had he himself eternity, and could put breath into his work, would beguile nature of her custom, so perfectly he is her ape: he so near to Hermione hath done Hermione, that, they say, one would speak to her, and stand in hope of answer: thither with all greediness of affection, are they gone; and there they intend to sup.

2 Gent. I thought she had some great matter there in hand; for she hath privately, twice or thrice a day, ever since the death of Hermione, visited that removed house. Shall we thither, and with our company piece the rejoicing?

1 Gent. Who would be thence, that has the benefit of access? every wink of an eye, some new grace will be born: our absence makes us unthrifty to our knowledge. Let's along.

[Exeunt Gentlemen.

Aut. Now, had I not the dash of my former life in me, would preferment drop on my head. I brought the old man and his son aboard the prince; told him, I heard him talk of a fardel, and I know not what: but he at that time, over-fond of the shepherd's daughter, (so he then took her to be,) who began to be much sea-sick, and himself little better, extremity of weather continuing, this mystery remained undiscovered. But 'tis all one to me: for had I been the finder-out of this secret, it would not have relished among my other discords.

[Enter Shepherd and Clown.

Shep. Come, boy; I am past more children; but thy sons and daughters will be all gentlemen born.

Clo. You are well met, sir: You denied to fight with me this other day, because I was no gentleman born: See you these clothes? say, you see them not, and think me still no gentleman born, you were best say, these robes are not gentlemen born. Give me the lie; do; and try whether I am not now a gentleman born.

Aut. I know, you are now, sir, a gentleman born.

Clo. Ay, and have been so any time these four Shep. And so have I, boy. [hours.

Clo. So you have:—but I was a gentleman born before my father: for the king's son took me by the hand, and called me, brother: and then the two kings called my father, brother; and then the prince, my brother, and the princess, my sister, called my father, father; and so we wept: and there was the first gentleman-like tears that ever we shed.

Shep. We may live, son, to shed many more.

Clo. Ay, or else 'twere hard luck, being in so preposterous estate as we are.

Aut. I humbly beseech you, sir, to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your worship, and to give me your good report to the prince my master.

Shep. Pr'ythee, son, do; for we must be gentle, now we are gentlemen.

Clo. Thou wilt amend thy life?

Aut. Ay, an it like your good worship.

Clo. Give me thy hand: I will swear to the prince, thou art as honest a true fellow as any is in Bohemia.

Shep. You may say it, but not swear it.

Clo. Not swear it, now I am a gentleman? Let boors and franklins say it, I'll swear it.

Shep. How if it be false, son?

Clo. If it be ne'er so false, a true gentleman may swear it, in the behalf of his friend:—And I'll swear to the prince, thou art a tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt not be drunk; but I know, thou art no tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt be drunk, but I'll swear it: and I would, thou wouldst be a tall fellow of thy hands.

Aut. I will prove so, sir, to my power.

Clo. Ay, by any means prove a tall fellow: If I do not wonder, how thou darest venture to be drunk, not being a tall fellow, trust me not.

—Hark! the kings and the princes, our kindred, are going to see the queen's picture. Come, follow us, we'll be thy good masters. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A ROOM IN PAULINA'S HOUSE.

Enter Leoncis, Polixenæ, Florizel, Perdita, Camillo, Paulina, Lords, and Attendants.

L. O grave and good Paulina, the great con-
That I have had of thee! [fort

Paul. What, sovereign sir, I did not well, I meant well: All my services, You have paid home; but that you have vouchsaf'd [tracted
With your crown'd brother, and these your con-
Heirs of your kingdom, my poor house to visit, It is a surplus of your grace, which never My life may last to answer.

Leon. O Paulina,
We honor you with trouble: But we came To see the statue of our queen: your gallery Have we pass'd through, not without much con-
In many singularities; but we saw not [tent That which my daughter came to look upon, The statue of her mother.

Paul. As she liv'd peerless,
So her dead likeness, I do well believe, Excels whatever yet you look'd upon, Or hand of man hath done; therefore I keep it Lonely, apart: But here it is: prepare To see the life as lively mock'd, as ever [well.

Still sleep mock'd death: behold; and say, 'tis [Paulina undraws a Curtain and discovers a Statue.]
I like your silence, it the more shows off
Your wonder: But yet speak;—first, you, my Comes it not something near? [liege,
Leon. Her natural posture!—
Chide me, dear stone; that I may say, indeed,
Thou art Hermione: or, rather, thou art she,
In thy not chiding; for she was as tender,
As infancy, and grace. —But yet, Paulina,
Hermione was not so much wrinkled; nothing
So aged, as this seems.
Pol. O, not by much.
Pa. So much the more our carver's excellence;
Which lets go by some sixteen years, and makes
As she liv'd now. [her
Leon. As now she might have done,
So much to my good comfort, as it is Now piercing to my soul. O, thus she stood,
Even with such life of majesty, (warm life,
As now it coldly stands,) when first I woo'd her!
I am ashamed: Does not the stone rebuke me,
For being more stone than it? —O, royal piece,
There's magic in thy majesty; which has
My evils conjur'd to rememberance; and
From thy admiring daughter took the spirits,
Standing like stone with thee!
Per. And give me leave;
And do not say, 'tis superstition, that
I kneel, and then implore her blessing.—Lady,
Dear queen, that ended when I but began,
Give me that hand of yours, to kiss.
Paul. O, patience;
The statue is but newly fix'd, the colour's
Not dry.
Cam. My lord, your sorrow was too sore laid
Which sixteen winters cannot blow away, [on
So many summers, dry: scarce any joy
Did ever so long live; no sorrow,
But kill'd itself much sooner.
Pol. Dear my brother,
Let him, that was the cause of this, have power
To take off so much grief from you, as he
Will piece up in himself.
Paul. Indeed, my lord,
If I had thought the sight of my poor image
Would thus have wrought you, (for the stone is I'd not have show'd it. [mine.]
Leon. Do not draw the curtain.
Paul. No longer shall you gaze on't; lest your May think anon, it moves. [fancy
Leon. Let be, let be,
Would I were dead, but that, methinks already—
What was he that did make it? —See, my lord,
Would you not deem it breath'd? and that those Did verily bear blood? [veins
Pol. Masterly done:
The very life seems warp upon her lip.
Leon. The fixture of her eye has motion in't,
As we are mock'd with art.
Paul. I'll draw the curtain;
My lord's almost so far transported, that He'll think anon, it lives.
Leon. O sweet Paulina,
Make me to think so twenty years together;
No settled sense of the world can match
The pleasure of that madness. Let's alone.
Pa. I am sorry, sir, I have thus far stirr'd you:
I could afflict you further. [but Leon. Do, Paulina;
For this affliction has a taste as sweet
As any cordial comfort.—Still, methinks,
There is an air comes from her: What fine chisel!
Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man mock
For I will kiss her. [me,
Paul. Good my lord, forbear:
The ruddiness upon her lip is wet;
You'll mar it, if you kiss it; stain your own
With oily painting: Shall I draw the curtain?
Leon. No, not these twenty years.
Per. So long could I Stand by, a looker on.
Paul. Either forbear,
Quit presently the chapel; or resolve you
For more amazement: If you can behold it,
I'll make the statue move indeed; descend,
And take you by the hand; but then you'll think,
(Which I protest against,) I am assisted
By wicked powers.
Leon. What you can make her do,
I am content to look on: what to speak
I am content to hear? for 'tis as easy
To make her speak, as move.
Paul. It is requireth
You do awake your faith: Then, all stand still;
Or those, that think it is unlawful business
I am about, let them depart.
Leon. Proceed;
No foot shall stirr.
Paul. Musick; awake her: strike. [Musick.
'Tis time; descend; be stone no more: approach:
Strike all that look upon with marvel. Come;
Till fill your grave up: stir; nay, come away;
Bequeath to death your numbness, for from him
Dear life redeems you. —You perceive she stirs:
[Hermitone comes down from the pedestal.
Start not: her actions shall he holy, as,
You hear, my spell is lawful: do not shun her,
Until you see her die again; for then
You kill her double: Nay, present your hand:
When she was young, you wo'd her; now, in
Is she become the suitor. [age,
Leon. O, she's warm! [Embracing her.
If this be magic, let it be an Lawful as eating.
Pol. She embraces him.
Cam. She hangs about his neck;
If she pertain to life, let her speak too.
Pol. Ay, and make't manifest where she has
Or, how stolen from the dead? [liv'd,
Paul. That she is living,
Were it but told you, should be hoisted at
Like an old tale; but it appears, she lives
Though yet she speak not, Mark a little while,— Please you to interpose, fair madam; kneel,
And pray your mother's blessing.—Turn, good
Our Perdita is found. [lady;
[Presenting Perdita, who kneels to Hermione.
Her. You gods, look down,
And from your sacred vials pour your graces
Upon my daughter's head! —Tell me, mine own,
Where hast thou been preserv'd? where liv'd?
how found
Thy father's court? for thou shalt hear, that I,— Knowing by Paulina, that the oracle
Gave hope thou wast in being,—have preserv'd
Myself, to see the issue.
Paul. There's time enough for that;
Lest they desire, upon this push, to trouble Your joys with like relation.—Go together, You precious winners all; your exultation Partake to every one. I, an old turtle, Will wing me to some wither’d bough; and there My mate, that’s never to be found again, Lament till I am lost.

Leon. O peace, Paulina; Thou shouldst a husband take by my consent, As I by thine, a wife; this is a match, And made between’s by vows. Thou hast found mine; But how, is to be question’d: for I saw her, As I thought, dead; and have, in vain, said many A prayer upon her grave: I’ll not seek far (For him, I partly know his mind,) to find thee,

An honourable husband:—Come, Camillo, And take her by the hand: whose worth, and honesty, Is richly noted; and here justified By us a pair of kings.—Let’s from this place,— What?—Look upon my brother:—both your pardons, That e’er I put between your holy looks My ill suspicion.—This your son-in-law, (ing,) And son unto the king, (whom heavens direct-) Is troth-plight to your daughter,—Good Paulina, Lead us from hence; where we may leisurely Each one demand, and answer to his part Perform’d in this wide gap of time, since first We were disserver’d: Hastily lead away.

[Exeunt.

SCENE I.—A HALL IN THE DUKE’S PALACE.

Enter Duke, Ægeon, Gaoler, Officers, and other Attendants.

ÆGE. Proceed, Solinus, to procure my fall, And, by the doom of death, end woes and all. Duke. Merchant of Syracuse, plead no more; I am not partial to infringe our laws: The enmity and discord, which of late Sprung from the rancorous outrage of your duke To merchants, our well-dealing countrymen,— Who, wanting gilders to redeem their lives, Have seal’d his rig’rous statutes with their bloods, Excludes all pity from our threat’ning looks, For, since the mortal and intestine jars ’Twixt thy sedulous countrymen and us, It hath in solemn synods been decreed, Both by the Syracusans and ourselves, To admit no traffic to our adverse towns: Nay, more, If any born at Ephesus, be seen At any Syracusan marts and fairs; Again, If any Syracusan born, Come to the bay of Ephesus, he dies,
SHAKESPEARE'S DRAMATIC WORKS.

ACT I.

From whom my absence was not six months old, Before herself (almost at fainting under The pleasing punishment that women bear,) Had made provision for her following me, And soon, and safe, arrived where I was. There she had not been long, but she became A joyful mother of two goodly sons; And which was strange, the one so like the other, As could not be distinguished but by names. That very hour, and in the self-same inn, A poor mean woman was delivered Of such a burden, male twins, both alike: Those, for their parents were exceeding poor, I bought, and brought up to attend my sons. My wife, not meanly proud of two such boys, Made daily motions for our home return; Unwilling I agreed; alas, too soon. We came abroad: A league from Epidamnum had we sail'd, Before the always wind-obeying deep Gave any tragic instance of our harm: But longer did we not retain much hope; For what obscured light the heavens did grant Did but convey unto our fearful minds A doubtful warrant of immediate death; Which, though myself would gladly have em-Yet the incessant weepings of my wife, (brac'd, Weeping before for what she saw must come, And piteous plainings of the pretty babes, That mourn'd for fashion, ignorant what to fear, For'd me to seek delays for them and me, And this it was,—for other means was none.— The sailors sought for safety by our boat, And left the ship, then sinking-ripe, to us: My wife, more careful for the elder born, Had fasten'd him unto a small spare mast, Such as seafaring men provide for storms; To him one of the other twins was bound, Whilst I had been like heedful of the other. The children thus dispos'd, my wife and I, Fixing our eyes on whom our care was fix'd, Fasten'd ourselves at either end the mast; And floating straight, obedient to the stream, Were carried towards Corinth, as we thought. At length, another ship had seiz'd on us; And, knowing whom it was their hap to save, Gave helpful welcome to their shipwreck'd guests; And would have reft the fishers of their prey, Had not their bark been very slow of sail, And therefore homeward did they bend their course.— Thus have you heard me sever'd from my bliss; That by misfortunes was my life prolong'd, To tell sad stories of my own mishaps.

D. And, for the sake of them thou sorrowest Do me the favour to dilate at full [for, What hath befall'n of them, and thee, till now.

Æge. My youngest boy, and yet my eldest At eighteen years became inquisitive [care, After his brother; and importun'd me, That his attendant, (for his case was like, Reft of his brother, but retain'd his name,) Might bear him company in the quest of him: Whom whilst I labou'rd of a love to see I hazarded the loss of whom I lov'd.

Five summers have I spent in furthest Greece, Roaming clean 1 through the bounds of Asia, And, coasting homeward, came to Ephesus; Hopeless to find, yet loth to leave unsought, Or that, or any place that harbours men, But here must end the story of my life; And happy were I in my timely death, Could all my travels warrant me they live.

D. Hapless Ægeon, whom the fates have mark'd To bear the extremity of divine mishap! Now, trust me, were it not against our laws, Against my crown, my oath, my dignity, Which princes, would they, may not disannul, My soul should such an advocate for thee. But, though thou art adjudged to the death, And passed sentence may not be recall'd, But, to our honour's great disparagement, Yet will I favour thee in what I can: Therefore, merchant, I'll limit thee this day To seek thy help by beneficial help; Try all the friends thou hast in Ephesus; Beg thou, or borrow, to make up the sum, And live; if not, thou art doom'd to die: — Goaler, take him to thy custody.

Gool. I will, my lord. [wend. 2

Æge. Hopeless, and helpless, dost Ægeon But to procrastinate his lifeless end. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A PUBLIC PLACE.

Enter Antipholus and Dromio of Syracuse, and a Merchant.

M. Therefore, give out, you are of Epidamnum Lest that your goods too soon be confiscate. This very day, a Syracusan merchant Is apprehended for arrival here; And, not being able to buy out his life, According to the statute of the town, Dies ere the weary sun set in the west. There is your money that I had to keep. [host, Ant. S. Go bear it to the Centaur, where we And stay there, Dromio, till I come to thee. Within this hour it will be dinner-time: Till that I'll view the manners of the town, Peruse the traders, gaze upon the buildings, And then return, and sleep within mine inn;
For with long travel I am stiff and weary, Get thee away. [word,
Dro. S. Many a man would take you at your And go indeed, having so good a mean. [Exit Dro. S.
Ant. S. A trusty villain, sir; that very oft, When I am dull with care and melancholy, Lightens my humour with his merry jests. What, will you walk with me about the town, And then go to my inn, and dine with me? Mer. I am invited, sir, to certain merchants, Of whom I hope to make much benefit; I crave your pardon. Soon, at five o'clock, Please you, I'll meet with you upon the mart, And afterwards consort you till bed-time; My present business calls me from you now. Ant. S. Farewell till then: I will go lose myself, And wander up and down, to view the city. Mer. Sir, I commend you to your own content. [Exit Merchant. Ant. S. He that commends me to mine own content, Commends me to the thing I cannot get, I to the world am like a drop of water, That in the ocean seeks another drop; Who, falling there to find his fellow forth, Unseen, inquisitive, confounds himself; So I, to find a mother, and a brother, In quest of them, unhappy, lose myself.

Enter Dromio of Ephesus.
Here comes the almanack of my true date,— What now? How chance, thou art return'd so soon? [too late:
Dro. E. Return'd so soon! rather approach'd The capon burns, the pig falls from the spit; The clock has struck twelve upon the bell, My mistress made it one upon my cheek: She is so hot, because the meat is cold; The meat is cold, because you come not home; You come not home, because you have no stomach; You have no stomach, having broke your fast; But we, that know what 'tis to fast and pray, Are penitent for your default to-day. Ant. S. Stop in your wind, sir; tell me this, I pray;
Where have you left the money that I gave you? Dro. E. O,—sixpence, that I had o' Wednesday last, To pay the saddler for my mistress' crupper;— The saddler had it, sir, I kept it not. Ant. S. I am not in a sportive humour now: Tell me, and dally not, where is the money? We being strangers here, how dar'st thou trust So great a charge from thine own custody? Dro. E. I pray you, jest, sir, as you sit at dinner: I from my mistress come to you in post; If I return, I shall be post indeed; For she will score your fault upon my pate. Methinks, your maw, like mine, should be your clock, And strike you home without a messenger. Ant. S. Come, Dromio, come, these jests are out of season; Reserve them till a merrier hour than this: Where is the gold I gave in charge to thee?

Dro. E. To me, sir? why you gave no gold to me, Ant. S. Come on, sir knave, have done your foolishness, And tell me, how thou hast dispos'd thy charge. Dro. E. My charge was but to fetch you from the mart Home to your house, the Phoenix, sir, to dinner; My mistress, and her sister, stay for you. Ant. S. Now, as I am a Christian, answer me, In what safe place you have bestow'd my money; Or I shall break that merry sconce of yours, That stands on tricks when I am undispos'd: Where is the thousand marks thou hast of me? D. E. I have some marks of yours upon my pate, Some of my mistress' marks upon my shoulders, But not a thousand marks between you both. If I should pay your worship those again, Perchance, you will not bear them patiently. Ant. S. Thy mistress' marks! what mistress, slave, hast thou? Dro. E. You worship's wife, my mistress at the Phoenix: She that doth fast, till you come home to dinner, And prays, that you will hie you home to dinner, Ant. S. What, wilt thou flout me thus unto my face, Being forbid? There, take you that, sir knave. Dro. E. What mean you, sir? for heaven's sake, hold your hands; Nay, an you will not, sir, I'll take my heels.

[Exit Dromio E.
Ant. S. Upon my life, by some device or other, The villain is o'er-raught of all my money. They say, this town is full of cozenage; As, nimble jugglers, that deceive the eye, Disguised cheaters, prating mountebanks, And many such like liberties of sin; If it prove so, I will be gone the sooner. I'll to the Centaur, to go seek this slave; I greatly fear my money is not safe. [Exit.

Act Second.
SCENE I.—A PUBLIC PLACE.

Enter Adriana and Luciana.
A. Neither my husband, nor the slave return'd, That in such haste I sent to seek his master! Sure, Luciana, it is two o'clock.
Luc. Perhaps, some merchant hath invited him, And from the mart he's somewhere gone to dine— Good sister, let us dine, and never fret: [sigh. A man is master of his liberty: Time is their master; and, when they see time, They'll go, or come: if so be, patient, sister. A. Why should their liberty than ours be more? L. Because their business still lies out o' door. ADR. Look, when I serve him so, he takes it ill. LUC. O, know, he is the bride of your will. ADR. There's none but asses will be bridled so. L. Why headstrong liberty is lash'd with woe. There's nothing situate under heaven's eye, But hath his bound, in earth, in sea, in sky: The beasts, the fishes, and the winged fowls, Are their males' subject, and at their controls:

1 Head. 2 Mock. 3 Over-reached. 4 Cheats.
Men, more divine, the masters of all these,
Lords of the wide world, and wild wat'ry seas,
Indued with intellectual sense and souls,
Of more pre-eminence than fish and fowls,
Are masters to their females, and their lords:
Then let your will attend on their accords.

Adr. This servitude makes you to keep unwed.
Luc. Not this, but troubles of the marriage bed.
Adr. But were you wedded, you would bear some sway.

Luc. Ere I learn love, I'll practise to obey.
Adr. How if your husband start some other where?

Luc. Till he come home again, I would forbear.

Adr. Patience, unmov'd, no marvel though she pause;
They can be meek, that have no other cause.
A wretched soul, bruised with adversity,
We bid be quiet, when we hear it cry;
But were we burden'd with like weight of pain,
As much, or more, we should ourselves complain:
So thou, that hast no unkind mate to grieve thee,
With urging helpless patience 'sthrill relieve
But if thou live to see like right bereft, [me:
This fool-begg'd patience in thee will be left.

Luc. Well, I will marry one day, but to try:
Here comes your man, now is your husband nigh.

Enter Dromio of Ephesus.

Adr. Say, is your tardy master now at hand?
Dro. E. Nay, he is at two hands with me, and that my two ears can witness.

Adr. Say, didst thou speak with him? know'st thou his mind?
Dro. E. Ay, ay, he told his mind upon mine ear:
He shrew his hand, I scarce could understand it.
Luc. Spake he so doubtfully, thou could'st not feel his meaning?
Dro. E. Nay, he struck so plainly, I could too well feel his blows; and withal so doubtfully, that I could scarce understand them.

Adr. But say, I pr'ythee, is he coming home?
It seems, he hath great care to please his wife.

Dro. E. Why, mistress, sure my master is stark
When I desir'd him to come home to dinner, [mad:
He ask'd me for a thousand marks in gold.
'Tis dinner-time, quoth I; My gold, quoth he:
Your meat doth burn, quoth I; My gold, quoth he:
Will you come home? quoth I; My gold, quoth he:
Where is the thousand marks I gave thee, villain?
The pig, quoth I, is burned; My gold, quoth he:
My mistress, sir, quoth I; Hang up thy mistress;
I know not thy mistress; out on thy mistress!

Luc. Quoth who?

Dro. E. Quoth my master:
I know, quoth he, no house, no wife, no mistress:
So that my errand, due unto my tongue,
I thank him, I bear home upon my shoulders;
For, in conclusion, he did beat me there, [home.

Adr. Go back again, thou slave, and fetch him
Dro. E. Go back again, and be newbeaten home;
For heaven's sake, send some other messenger.
A. Back, slave, or I will break thy pate across.
Dro. E. And he will blast that cross with other
Between you I shall have a holy head, [beating:
Adr. Hence, prating peasant; fetch thy master home.

1 Stand under.

Dro. E. Am I so round with you, as you with
That like a football you do spurn me thus? [me,
You spurn me hence, and he will spurn me hither:
If I last in this service, you must case me in leather.

[Exit.
Luc. Fie, how impatientness lowereth in your face.
Adr. His company must do his minions grace,
Whilst I at home starve for a merry look,
Hath homely age the alluring beauty took
From my poor cheek? then he hath wasted it:
Are my discourses dull? barren my wit?
If volatile and sharp discourse be marry'd,
Unkindness blunts it more than marble hard.
Do their gay vestments his affections bait?
That's not my fault, he's master of my state:
What ruins are in me, that can be found
By him not ruin'd? then is he the ground
Of my defeatures? My decay'd fair
A sunny look of his would soon repair;
But, too unruly deer, he breaks the pale,
And feeds from home; poor I am but his stale.

Luc. Self-arming jealousy!—fie, beat it hence,
Adr. Unfeeling fools can with such wrongs dis-
I know his eye doth homage otherwhere; [pense,
Or else, what lets 4 it but he would be here?
Sister, you know, he promis'd me a chain:—
Would that alone, alone he would detain,
So he would keep fair quarter with his bed!
I see, the jewel best enamelled,
Will lose his beauty; and though gold bides still,
That others touch, yet often touching will Wear gold: And so no man, that hath a name,
But falsehood and corruption doth it shame.
Since that my beauty cannot please his eye,
I'll weep what's left away, and weeping die.

Luc. How many fond fools serve mad jealousy!

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—THE SAME.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse.

Ant. S. The gold, I gave to Dromio, is laid up
Safe at the Centaur; and the heedful slave
Is wander'd forth, in care to seek me out
By computation, and mine host's report,
I could not speak with Dromio, since at first
I sent him from the mart: See, here he comes.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.

How now, sir? is your merry humour alter'd?
As you love strokes, so jest with me again.
You know no Centaur, you receiv'd no gold?
Your mistress sent to have me home to dinner?
My house was at the Phenix? Wast thou mad,
That thus so madly thou didst answer me?

Dro. S. What answer, sir? when speake I such a word?

Ant. S. Even now, even here, not half an hour
D. S. I did not see you since you sent me hence,
Home to the Centaur, with the gold you gave me.
Ant. S. Villain, thou didst deny the gold's receipt;
And told'st me of a mistress and a dinner;
For which, I hope, thou felt'st I was displeas'd.
Dro. S. I am glad to see you in this merry vein:
What means this jest? I pray you master, tell me.

Ant. S. Yea, dost thou jeer, and flout me in the teeth?

1 Alteration of features. 2 Beauty. 3 Pretended wife. 4 Hinders.
Think'st thou I jest? Hold, take thou that, and that.

_Dro._ S. Hold, sir, for heaven's sake: now your jest is earnest:

Upon what bargain did you give it me?

_Ant._ S. Because that I familiarly sometimes

Do use you for my fool, and chat with you,

Your sauciness will jest upon my love,

And make a common of my serious hours, [sport:

When the sun shines, let foolish gnats make

But creep in crankies, when he hides his beams.

If you will jest with me, know my aspect,

And fashion your demeanour to my looks,

Or I will beat this method in your sconce.

_Dro._ S. Sconce, call you it? so you would leave battering, I had rather have it a head: an you use these blows low, I must get a sconce for my head, and insconce it too; or else I shall seek my wit in my shoulders. But, I pray, sir, why am I beaten?

_Ant._ S. Dost thou not know?

_Dro._ S. Nothing, sir; but that I am beaten.

_Ant._ S. Shall I tell you why?

_Dro._ S. Ay, sir, and wherefore; for, they say, every why hath a wherefore.

_Ant._ S. Why, first,—for fpouting me: and then, wherefore,—

For urging it a second time to me.

_Dro._ S. Was there ever any man thus beaten out of season?

When, in the why, and the wherefore, is neither rhyme nor reason?

Well, sir, I thank you.

_Ant._ S. Thank me, sir? for what?

_Dro._ S. Marry, sir, for this something that you gave me for nothing.

_Ant._ S. I'll make you amends next, to give you nothing for something. But say, sir, is it dinner time?

_Dro._ S. No, sir; I think, the meat wants that _Ant._ S. In good time, sir, what's that? [have.

_Dro._ S. Bastling.

_Ant._ S. Well, sir, then 'twill be dry.

_Dro._ S. If it be, sir, I pray you eat none of it.

_Ant._ S. Your reason?

_Dro._ S. Lest it make you choleric, and purchase me another dry bastling.

_Ant._ S. Well, sir, learn to jest in good time; there's a time for all things.

_Dro._ S. I durst have denied that, before you were so choleric.

_Ant._ S. By what rule, sir?

_Dro._ S. Marry, sir, by a rule as plain as the plain bald pate of father Time himself.

_Ant._ S. Let's hear it.

_Dro._ S. There's no time for a man to recover his hair, that grows bald by nature.

_Ant._ S. May he not do it by fine and recovery?

_Dro._ S. Yes, to pay a fine for a peruke, and recover the lost hair of another man.

_Ant._ S. Why is time such a niggard of hair, being, as it is, so plentiful?

_Dro._ S. Because it is a blessing that he bestows on beasts: and what he hath scanted men in hair he hath given them in wit.

_Ant._ S. Why, but there's many a man hath more hair than wit.

_Dro._ S. Not a man of those, but he hath the wit to lose his hair.

_Ant._ S. Why, thou didst conclude hairy men plain dealers without wit.

_Dro._ S. The plainest dealer, the sooner lost:

Yet he loseth it in a kind of jollity.

_Ant._ S. For what reason?

_Dro._ S. For two; and sound ones too.

_Ant._ S. Nay, not sound, I pray you.

_Dro._ S. Sure ones then.

_Ant._ S. Nay, not sure, in a thing fawning.

_Dro._ S. Certain ones then.

_Ant._ S. Name them.

_Dro._ S. The one, to save the money that he spends in tiring; the other, that at dinner they should not drop in his porridge.

_Ant._ S. You would all this time have proved, there is no time for all things.

_Dro._ S. Marry, and did, sir; namely, no time to recover hair lost by nature.

_Ant._ S. But your reason was not substantial, why there is no time to recover.

_Dro._ S. Thus I mend it; Time himself is bald, and therefore, to the world's end, will have bald followers.

_Ant._ S. I knew it would be a bald conclusion; but soft! who wafts us yonder?

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

_Ad._ Ay, ay, Antipholus, look strange and frown:

Some other mistress hath thy sweet aspects,

I am not Adriana, nor thy wife.

The time was once, when thou unurged'st

That never words were music to thine ear, [vow

That never object pleasing in thine eye,

That never touch well-welcome to thy hand,

That never meat sweet-savour'd in thy taste,

Unless I spake, look'd, touch'd, or carv'd to thee.

How comes it now, my husband, oh, how comes it

That thou art then estranged from thyself?

Thyself I call it, being strange to me,

That, undividable, incorporate,

Am better than thy dear self's better part.

Ah, do not tear away thyself from me;

For know, my love, as easy mayst thou fall

A drop of water in the breaking gulph,

And take unmingled thence that drop again,

Without addition, or diminishing,

As take from me thyself, and not me too.

How dearly would it touch thee to the quick,

Shouldst thou but hear I were licentious?

And that this body, consecrate to thee,

By ruffian lust should be contaminatethou

Wouldst thou not spit at me, and spurn at me,

And hurl the name of husband in my face,

And tear the stain'd skin off my harlot brow,

And from my false hand cut the wedding-ring,

And break it with a deep-divoring vow?

Keep then fair temperance and true with thy true

_Ant._ S. Plead you to me, fair dame? I know

In Ephesus I am but two hours old, [you not:

As strange unto your town, as to your talk;

Who, every word by all my wit being scannd,

Want wit in all one word to understand.

Abetting him to thwart me in my mood?

But wrong not that wrong with a more contempt.
Come, I will fasten on this sleeve of thine;
Thou art an elm, my husband, I a vine;
Whose weakness, married to thy stronger state,
Makes me with thy strength to communicate:
If aught possess thee from me, it is dross,
Unsuring ivy, briar, or idle moss;
Who, all for want of pruning, with intrusion
Inflict thy sap, and live on thy confusion.

Sleeping or waking? mad, or well-advis’d?
Known unto these, and to myself disguis’d!
I’ll say as they say, and persévere so,
And in this mist at all adventures go.

Act Third.

Scene I.—The Same.

_Enter Antipholus of Ephesus, Dromio of Ephesus, Angelo, and Balthazar._

_A. E. Good signior Angelo, you must excuse us all;
My wife is shrewish, when I keep not hours:
Say, that I linger’d with you at your shop,
To see the making of her carcanet,1
And that to-morrow will bring it home.
But here’s a villain, that would face me down.
He met me on the mart; and that I beat him,
And charg’d him with a thousand marks in gold,
And that I did deny my wife and house:—
_Thou drunkard, thou, what didst thou mean by this?
_Dro. E. Say what you will, sir, but I know what I know:
That you beat me at the mart, I have your hand to show:
If the skin were parchment, and the blows you gave were ink,
Your own handwriting would tell you what I

Ant. E. What art thou, that keep'st me out from the house I owe?

Dro. E. Let thy master in, Luce.

Luce. Faith, no; he comes too late:
And so tell your master.

Dro. E. O, I must laugh:—
Have at you with a proverb.—Shall I set in my staff?

Luce. Have at you with another: that's,—
When? can you tell?

Dro. S. If thy name be call'd Luce, Luce, thou hast answer'd him well.

Ant. E. Do you hear, you minion? you'll let us in, I hope?

Luce. I thought to have ask'd you.

Dro. S. And you said, no.

Dro. E. So, come, help; well struck; there was blow for blow.

Ant. E. Thou baggage, let me in.

Luce. Can you tell for whose sake?

Dro. E. Master, knock the door hard.

Luce. Let him knock till it ake.

Ant. E. You'll cry for this, minion, if I beat the door down.

Luce. What needs all that, and a pair of stocks in the town?

Dro. S. By my troth, your town is troubled with unruly boys.

Dro. E. They stand at the door, master; bid them welcome hither.

Ant. E. There is something in the wind that we cannot get in.

Dro. E. You would say so, master, if your garments were thin.

Your cake here is warm within; you stand here in the cold:

It would make a man mad as a buck, to be so bought and sold.

Ant. E. Go, fetch me something, I'll break ope the gate.

Dro. S. Break any breaking here, and I'll break your knave's pate.

Since mine own doors refuse to entertain me,
I'll knock elsewhere, to see if they'll disdain me.

Ant. E. Do so; This jest shall cost me some expence.

SCENE II.—THE SAME.

Enter Luciana, and Antipholus of Syracuse.

Luc. And may it be that you have quite forgot
A husband's office? shall, Antipholus, hate,
Even in the spring of love, thy love springs rot?
Shall love, in building, grow so ruinate?

If you did wed my sister for her wealth,
Then, for her wealth's sake, use her with more

Or if you like elsewhere, do it by stealth;

blindness:

Be not thy tongue thy own shame's orator;
Look sweet, speak fair, become disloyalty;
Apparel vice like virtue's harbingers.

tainted;

Ant. S. Sweet mistress, (what your name is else, I know not.
Nor by what wonder you do hit on mine.)
Lest, in your knowledge, and your grace, you

Teach me, dear creature, how to think and speak;
Lay open to my earthly gross conceit,
Smother'd in errors, feeble, shallow, weak.
The folded meaning of your words' deceit.
Against my soul's pure truth why labour you,
To make it wander in an unknown field?
Are you a goddess? would you make me new?
Transform me then, and to your power I'll yield.
But if that I am, then well I know,
Your weeping sister is no wife of mine,
Nor to her bed no homage do I owe;
Far more, far more, to you do I decline.
O, train me not, sweet mermaid, with thy note,
To drown me in thy sister's flood of tears;
Sing, siren, for thyself, and I will dote:
Spread o'er the silver waves thy golden hairs.
Luc. What, are you mad, that you do reason so?
A. S. Not mad, but mated; how I do not know.
Luc. It is a fault that springeth from thy eye.
Ant. S. For gazing on your beams, fair sun, being by.
Luc. Gaze where you should, and that will clear your sight.
Ant. S. As good to wink, sweet love, as look on night.
Luc. Why call you me love? call my sister so.
Ant. S. Thy sister's sister.
Luc. That's my sister.
Ant. S.
It is thyself, mine own self's better part;
1 Light tongued.
2 Means both enamazed and matched (with a wife).

Mine eye's clear eye, my dear heart's dearer heart.
My food, my fortune, and my sweet hope's aim,
My sole earth's heaven, and my heaven's claim.
Luc. All this my sister is, or else should be.
A. S. Call thyself sister, sweet, for I am thee:
Thee will I love, and with thee lead my life;
Thou hast no husband yet, nor I no wife;
Give me thy hand.
Luc. O, soft, sir, hold you still:
I'll fetch my sister, to get her good will.

[Exit Luc.

Enter, from the House of Antipholus of Ephesus, Dromio of Syracuse.

Ant. S. Why, how now, Dromio! where run'st thou so fast?
Dro. S. Do you know me, sir? am I Dromio?
Ant. S. Thou art Dromio, thou art my man, thou art thyself.
Dro. S. I am an ass, I am a woman's man,
and besides myself.
Ant. S. What woman's man? and how besides thyself?
Dro. S. Marry, sir, besides myself, I am due to a woman; one that claims me, one that haunts me, one that will have me.
Ant. S. What claim lays she to thee?
Dro. S. Marry, sir, such claim as you would lay to your horse; and she would have me as a beast; not that I, being a beast, she would have me; but that she, being a very beastly creature, lays claim to me.
Ant. S. What is she?
Dro. S. A very reverend body; ay, such a one as a man may not speak of, without he say,
sir-reverence; I have but lean luck in the match,
and yet she is a wondrous fat marriage.
Ant. S. How dost thou mean, a fat marriage?
Dro. S. Marry, sir, she's the kitchen-wench, and all grease; and I know not what use to put her to, but to make a lamp of her, and run from her in her own light. I warrant, her rags, and the tallow in them, will burn a good winter.
Ant. S. What complexion is she of?
Dro. S. Swart like my shoe, but her face nothing like so clean kept: For why? she sweats, a man may go over shoes in the grime of it.
Ant. S. That's a fault that water will mend.
Dro. S. No, sir, 'tis in grain; Noah's flood could not do it.
Ant. S. What's her name?
Dro. S. Nell, sir;—but her name and three quarters, that is, an ell and three quarters, will not measure her.
Ant. S. Then she bears some breadth?
Dro. S. No longer than from head to foot:
she is spherical, like a globe; I could find out countries in her.
Ant. S. Where stands Scotland?
Dro. S. I found it by the barrenness; hard,
in the palm of the hand.
Ant. S. Where France?
Dro. S. In her forehead; arm'd and reverted, making war against her hair.
Ant. S. Where England?
Dro. S. I look'd for the chalky cliffs, but I could find no whiteness in them: but I guess, it stood in her chin, by the salt rheum that ran between France and it.

Ant. S. Where Spain?

Dro. S. Faith, I saw it not; but I felt it hot in her breath.

Ant. S. Where America? the Indies?

Dro. S. O, sir, upon her nose, all o'er embellish'd with rubies, carbuncles, sapphires, declining their rich aspect to the hot breath of Spain; who sent whole armadas of carracks to be ballast at her nose. To conclude, this drudge, or diviner, laid claim to me; call'd me Dromio; swore, I was assur'd to her; told me what privy marks I had about me, as the mark of my shoulder, the mole in my neck, the great wart on my left arm, that I, amaz'd, ran from her as a witch; and, I think, if my breast had not been made of faith, and my heart of steel, she had transform'd me to a curtail-dog, and made me turn 't the wheel.

Ant. S. Go, sit thee presently, post to the road; And if the wind blow any way from shore, I will not harbour in this town to-night. If any bark put forth, come to the mart, Where I will walk, till thou return to me. If every one know us, and we know none, 'Tis time, I think, to trudge, pack, and be gone.

D. S. As from a bear a man would run for life, So fly I from her that would be my wife. [Exit.]

A. S. There's none but whores do inhabit here; And therefore 'tis high time that I were hence. She, that doth call me husband, even my soul Doth for a wife abhor; but fair sister, Possess'd with such a gentle sovereign grace, Of such enchanting presence and discourse, Hath almost made me traitor to myself: But, lest myself be guilty to self-wrong, I'll stop mine ears against the mermaid's song.

Enter Angelo.

Ang. Master Antipholus.

Ant. S. Ay, that's my name.

Ang. I know it well, sir; Lo, here is the chain; I thought to have ta'en you at the Porcupine: The chain unfinish'd made me stay thus long.

A. S. What is your will that I shall do with this?

Ang. What, please yourself, sir; I have made it for you.

Ant. S. Made it for me, sir! I bespeak it not.

Ang. Not once, nor twice, but twenty times you have: Go home with it and please your wife withal; And soon at supper-time, I'll visit you, And then receive my money for the chain.

Ant. S. I pray you, sir, receive the money now, For fear you ne'er see chain, nor money, more.

Ang. You are a merry man, sir; fare you well.

[Exit.]

A. S. What should I think of this, I cannot tell; But this I think, there's no man is so vain, That would refuse so fair an offer'd chain. I see, a man here needs not live by shifts, When in the streets he meets such golden gifts. I'll to the mart, and there for Dromio stay; If any ship put out, then straight away.

[Exit.]

Act Fourth.

SCENE I.—THE SAME.

Enter a Merchant, Angelo, and an Officer.

Mer. You know, since pentecost the sum is due, And since I have not much importuned you; Nor now I had not, but that I am bound To Persia, and want gliders for my voyage: Therefore make present satisfaction, Or I'll attach you by this officer.

Ang. Even just the sum, that I do owe to you, Is growing to me by Antipholus; And, in the instant that I met with you, He had of me a chain; at five o'clock, I shall receive the money for the same; Pleaseth you walk with me down to his house, I will discharge my bond, and thank you too.

Enter Antipholus of Ephesus, and Dromio of Ephesus.

Off. That labour may you save; see where he comes. [go thaw]

Ant. E. While I go to the goldsmith's house, And buy a rope's end; that will I bestow.

Among my wife and her confederates, For locking me out of my doors by day.— But soft, I see the goldsmith:—get thee gone, Buy thou a rope, and bring it home to me.

Dro. E. I buy a thousand pound a year! I buy a rope! [Exit Dro. E.]

A. E. A man is well holp up, that trusts to you; I promised your presence, and the chain; But neither chain, nor goldsmith, came to me: Belike, you thought our love would last too long, If it were chain'd together; and therefore came not.

A. Saving your merry humour, here's the note. How much your chain weighs to the utmost carat; The fineness of the gold, and chargeful fashion, Which doth amount to three odd ducats more Than I stand debted to this gentleman; I pray you, see him presently discharg'd, For he is bound to sea, and stays but for it.

Ant. E. I am not furnish'd with the present money; Besides, I have some business in the town: Good signior, take the stranger to my house, And with you take the chain, and bid my wife Disburse the sum on the receipt thereof; Perchance I will be there as soon as you.

Ang. Then you will bring the chain to her yourself?

Ant. E. No; bear it with you, lest I come not time enough.

Ang. Well, sir, I will: Have you the chain about you?

Ant. E. An if I have not, sir, I hope you have; Or else you may return without your money.

Ang. Nay, come, I pray you, sir, give me the chain; Both wind and tide stays for this gentleman, And I, to blame, have held him here too long.

Ant. E. Good sir, you use this dalliance, to excuse Your breach of promise to the Porcupine:

1 With tail cut off.

1 Accouring.
I should have chid you for not bringing it, But, like a shrew, you first begin to brawl.

M. The hour steals on; I pray you, sir, despatch.

Ang. You hear, how he importunes me; the Ant. E. Why give it to my wife, and fetch your money.

Ang. Come, come, you know, I gave it you even now;

Either send the chain, or send me by some token.

Ant. E. How you run this humour out of breath:

Come, where’s the chain? I pray you let me see it.

M. My business cannot brook this dalliance; Good sir, say, whe’re you’ll answer me or no;

If not, I’ll leave him to the officer.

[you?

Ant. E. I answer you! What should I answer

Ang. The money that you owe me for the chain.

A. E. I owe you none till I receive the chain.

A. You know, I give it you half an hour since.

Ant. E. You gave me none; you wrong me much to say so.

Ang. You wrong me more, sir, in denying it:

Consider, how it stands upon my credit.

Mer. Well, officer, arrest him at my suit.

Off. I do; and charge you in the duke’s name, to obey me.

Ang. This touches me in reputation:—

Either consent to pay this sum for me,

Or I attach you by this officer.

[exit.

Ant. E. Consent to pay thee that I never had!

Arrest me, foolish fellow, if thou darst.

Ang. Here is thy fee; arrest him, officer;

I would not spare my brother in this case,

If he should scorn me so apparently.

Off. I do arrest you, sir; you hear the suit.

Ant. E. I do obey thee, till I give thee bail:—

But, sirrah, you shall buy this sport so dear

As all the metal in your shop will answer.

Ang. Sir, sir, I shall have law in Ephesus,

To your notorious shame, I doubt it not.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Master, there is a bark of Epidamnum, That stays but till her owner comes aboard,

And then, sir, bears away; our fraughtage, sir, I have convey’d aboard; and I have bought The oil, the balsamum, and aqua-vite.

The ship is in her trim; the merry wind [all,

Blows fair from land: they stay for nourish at

But for their owner, master, and yourself.

Ant. E. How now! a madman! Why, thou peevish sheep.

What ship of Epidamnum stays for me?

D. S. A ship you sent me to, to hire waftage.

Ant. E. Thou drunken slave, I sent thee for a rope;

And told thee to what purpose and what end.

Dro. S. You sent me, sir, for a rope’s end as

You sent me to the bay, sir, for a bark. [soon

A. E. I will debate this matter at more leisure,

And teach your ears to listen with more heed.

To Adriana, villain, hee thee straight:

Give her this key, and tell her, in the desk

That’s cover’d o’er with Turkish tapestry,

There is a purse of ducats; let her send it;

Tell her, I am arrested in the street,

1 Cargo. 2 Silly. 3 Conveyance.

And that shall bail me: he’s thee, slave; be gone.

On, officer, to prison till it come.

[Exeunt Merchant, Angelo, Officer, and Ant. E.

Dro. S. To Adriana! that is where he din’d, Where Dowsabel did claim me for her husband:

Thither I must, although against my will,

For servants must their masters’ minds fulfil.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adr. Ah, Luciana, did he tempt thee so!

Mightst thou perceive austerely in his eye

That he did plead in earnest, yea or no?

Look’d he or red, or pale; or sad or merrily?

What observations mad’st thou in this case,

Of his heart’s meteors tilting in his face?

Luc. First, he denied you in him no right.

Adr. He meant, he did me none; the more my spite.

L. Then swore he, that he was a stranger here.

A. And true he swore, though yet forsworn he

Luc. Then pleaded I for you. [were.

Adr. And what said he?

L. That love I begg’d for you, he begg’d of me.

A. With what persuasion did he tempt thy love?

[move.

Luc. With words that in an honest suit might

First he did praise my beauty; then, my speech.

Adr. Didst speak him fair?

Luc. Have patience, I beseech.

Adr. I cannot, nor I will not, hold me still;

My tongue, though not my heart, shall have his

He is deformed, crooked, old, and sere;[will

Ill-fac’d, worse-bodied, shapeless every where:

Vicious, ungentle, foolish, blunt, unkind;

Stigmatic in making, worse in mind.

L. Who would be jealous then of such a one?

No evil lost is wail’d when it is gone.

Adr. Ah! but I think him better than I say,

And yet would herein others’ eyes were worse;

Far from her nest the lapwing cries away;

My heart prays for him, though my tongue

do curse.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Here, go; the desk, the purse; sweet now, make haste.

Luc. How hast thou lost thy breath?

Dro. S. By running fast.

Adr. Where is thy master, Dromio? is he well?

Dro. S. No, he’s in Tartar limbo,

A devil in an everlasting garment[3 hath him,

One, whose hard heart is button’d up with steel;

A fiend, a fairy, pitiless and rough;

A wolf, nay worse, a fellow all in buff;

A back-friend, a shoulder-clapper, one that countermands the passages of alleys, creeks, and narrow lands.

Adr. Why, man, what is the matter?

Dro. S. I do not know the matter: he is rested on the case.

A. What, is he arrested? tell me, at whose suit?

Dro. S. I know not at whose suit he is arrested, well;

1 Withered. 2 Marked. 3 The officers were clad in buff, which is also a cant expression for a man’s skin.
SC. II. COMEDY OF ERRORS.

But he's in a suit of buff which 'rested him, that can I tell:
Will you send him, mistress, redemption, the money in the desk?

_Adr._ Go fetch it, sister.—This I wonder at,

_Esc. Luciana._

That he, unknown to me, should be in debt:
Tell me, was he arrested on a band? 1

_Dro._ Not on a band, but on a stronger thing;
A chain, a chain; do you not hear it ring?

_Adr._ What, the chain? [gone.

_Dro._ No, no, the bell; 'tis time that I were
It was two ere I left him, and now the clock strikes one.

_A._ The hours come back! that did I never hear.

_Dro._ O yes, if any hour meet a sergeant,
'a turns back for very fear.

_Adr._ As if time were in debt! how fondly dost thou reason?

_Dro._ Time is a very bankrupt, and owes more than he's worth to season. [say,
Nay, he's a thief too: Have you not heard men
That time come stealing on by night and day?
If he be in debt, and theft, and a sergeant in the way,

Hath he not reason to turn back an hour in a day?

_Enter Luciana._

_Adr._ Go, Dromio; there's the money, bear
it straight;
And bring thy master home immediately.—

_Come, sister: I am press'd down with conceit; 2
Conceit my comfort, and my injury. [Exeunt._

SCENE III.—THE SAME.

_Enter Antipholus of Syracuse._

_Ant._ S. There's not a man I meet, but doth salute me
As if I were their well-acquainted friend;
And every one doth call me by my name.
Some tender money to me, some invite me;
Some other give me thanks for kindnesses;
Some offer me commodities to buy:
Even now a tailor call'd me in his shop,
And shew'd me silks that he had bought for me,
And, therewithal, took measure of my body.
Sure, these are but imaginary wiles,
And Lapland sorcerers inhabit here.

_Enter Dromio of Syracuse._

_Dro._ S. Master, here's the gold you sent me for: What, have you got the picture of old Adam new apparel'd?

_Ant._ S. What gold is this? what Adam dost thou mean?

_Dro._ S. Not that Adam, that kept the paradise, but that Adam, that keeps the prison: he that goes in the calf's skin that was kill'd for the prodigal: he that came behind you, sir, like an evil angel, and bid you forsake your liberty.

_Ant._ S. I understand thee not.

_Dro._ S. No? why, 'tis a plain case: he that went like a base-viol, in a case of leather; the man, sir, that, when gentlemen are tired, gives them a fob, and rests them; he, sir, that takes pity on decayed men, and gives them suits of durance;

1 Bond.
2 Fancies.

he that sets up his rest to do more exploits with his mace, than a morris-pike.

_Ant._ S. What! thou mean'st an officer?

_Dro._ S. Ay, sir, the sergeant of the band; he,
that brings any man to answer it, that breaks his band: one that thinks a man always going to bed, and says, _Heaven give you good rest!_

_Ant._ S. Well, sir, there rest in your foolery.
Is there any ship puts forth to-night? may we
be gone?

_Dro._ S. Why, sir, I brought you word an hour since, that the bark Expedition put forth tonight, and then were you hindered by the ser-gent, to tarry for the hoy. 1 Delay: Here are the angels that you sent for, to deliver you.

_Ant._ S. The fellow is distract, and so am I;
And here we wander in illusions;
Some blessed power deliver us from hence!

_Enter a Courtesan._

_Cour._ Well met, well met, master Antipholus,
I see, sir, you have found the goldsmith now;
Is that the chain, you promis'd me to-day?

_Ant._ S. Satan, avoid! I charge thee tempt me.

_Dro._ S. Master, is this this mistress Satan? [not _Ant._ S. It is the devil.

_Dro._ S. Nay, she is worse; and here she comes in the habit of a light wench; they appear to men like angels of light: light is an effect of fire, and fire will burn; _ergo_, light wrenches will burn: Come not near her.

_Cour._ Your man and you are marvellous merry, sir. Will you go with me? We'll mend our dinner here.

_Dro._ S. Master, if you do, expect spoon-meat, or bespeak a long spoon.

_Ant._ S. Why, Dromio?

_Dro._ S. Marry, he must have a long spoon, that must eat with the devil.

_Ant._ S. Avoid then, fiend! what tell'st thou me of supping?

Thou art, as you are all, a sorceress:
I conjure thee to leave me, and be gone.

_C._ Give me the ring of mine you had at dinner,
Or, for my diamond, the chain you promis'd; 1
And I'll be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

_Dro._ S. Some devils ask but the paring of one's
A rush, a hair, a drop of blood, a pin, [nail,
A nut, a cherry-stone: but she, more covetous,
Would have a chain.

Master, be wise; and if you give it her, [fit.
The devil will shake her chain, and fright us with
_C._ I pray you, sir, my ring, or else the chain:
I hope, you do not mean to cheat me so. [go.

_A._ S. A-vaunt thow witch! Come, Dromio, let us

_Dro._ S. Fly pride, says the peacock: Mistress, that you know. [Exeunt _Ant. S._ and _Dro. S._

_Cour._ Now, out of doubt, Antipholus is mad,
Else would he never so demean himself.

A ring he hath of mine worth forty ducats,
And for the same he promis'd me a chain!
Both one, and other, he denies me now.

The reason that I gather he is mad,
(Besides this present instance of his rage,) 1
Is a mad tale, he told to-day at dinner,
Of his own doors being shut against his entrance
Belike, his wife, acquainted with his fits,

1 Small sloop.
On purpose shut the doors against his way.
My way is now to hie home to his house,
And tell his wife, that, being lunatick,
He rush'd into my house, and took perforce
My ring away: This course I fittest choose;
For forty ducats is too much to lose. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—THE SAME.
Enter Antipholus of Ephesus, and an Officer.
A. E. Fear not, man, I will not break away;
I'll give thee, ere I leave thee, so much money
To warrant thee, as I am 'rested for.
My wife is in a wayward mood to-day:
And will not lightly trust the messenger,
That I should be attach'd in Ephesus:
I tell you, 'twill sound harshly in her ears.—

Enter Dromio of Ephesus, with a rope's end.
Here comes my man; I think, he brings the money.
How now, sir? have you that I sent you for?
Dro. E. Here's that, I warrant you, will pay
Ant. E. But where's the money? [them all.]
Dro. E. Why, sir, I gave the money for the rope.
A. E. Five hundred ducats, villain, for a rope?
Dro. E. I'll serve you, sir, five hundred at the rate.
[home.]
Ant. E. To what end did I bid thee hire thee Dro. E. To a rope's end, sir; and to that end am I return'd.
Ant. E. And to that end, sir, I will welcome
you.
[Beating him.] Off. Good sir, be patient.
Dro. E. Nay, 'tis for me to be patient; I am in adversity.
[Off. Good man, hold thy tongue.
Dro. E. Nay, rather persuade him to hold his
Ant. E. Thou senseless villain! [hands.
Dro. E. I would I were senseless, sir, that I might not feel thy blows.
Ant. E. Thou art sensible in nothing but blows, and so is an ass.
Dro. E. I am an ass indeed; you may prove it by my long ears. I have serv'd him from the hour of my nativity to this instant, and have nothing at his hands for my service, but blows: when I am cold, he heats me with beating: when I am warm, he cools me with beating: I am waked with it when I sleep; raised with it, when I sit;
driven out of doors with it, when I go from home;
welcomed home with it, when I return: nay, I bear it on my shoulders, as a beggar war her brat; and, I think, when he hath lamed me, I shall beg with it from door to door.

Enter Adriana, Luciana, and the Court, with Pinch, and others.
Ant. E. Come, go along; my wife is coming yonder.
Dro. E. Mistress, respite femm, respect your end; or rather the prophecy, like the parrot,
 Beware the rope's end.
Ant. E. Wilt thou still talk? [Beats him.
Cour. How say you now, is not your husband
A. E. His incivility confirms no less.—[mad?
Good doctor Pinch, you are a conjurer; 1 Correct them all.
Establish him in his true sense again,
And I will please you what you will demand.
Luc. Alas, how fiery and how sharp he looks?
Court. Mark, how he trembles in his extasy!
Pinch. Give me your hand, and let me feel your pulse. [ear.
Ant. E. There is my hand, and let it feel your
P. I charge thee, Satan, hous'd within this man,
To yield possession to my holy prayers,
And to thy state of darkness he thee straight;
I conjure thee by all the saints in heaven. [mad.
Ant. E. Peace, dotting wizard, peace; I am not
Ad. O, that thou wert not, poor distressed soul!
Ant. E. You minion, you, are these your cus-
Did this companion with a saffron face (tomers?
Revel and feast it at my house to-day,
Whilst upon me the guilty doors were shut,
And I denied to enter in my house?
A. E. O, husband, Heaven doth know, you
'din't at home,
Where 'would you had remain'd until this time,
Free from these slanders, and this open shame!
Ant. E. I din't at home! Thou villain, what say'st thou?
[home.
Dro. E. Sir, sooth to say, you did not dine at Ant. E. Were not my doors lock'd up, and I shut out!
[shut out.
Dro. E. Perdy, your doors were lock'd, and you
A. E. And did she herself revile me there?
D. E. Sans! fable, she herself revil'd you there.
Ant. E. Did not her kitchen-maid rail, taunt, and scorn me?
[scorn'd you.
Dro. E. Curtis, she did; the kitchen-vestal
A. E. And did not I rage depart from thence?
Dro. E. In verity you did,—my bones bear witness.
That since have felt the vigour of his rage.
A. D. Is't good to soothe him in these contraries?
Pinch. It is no shame; the fellow finds his vein,
And, yielding to him, humours well his frenzy.
Ant. E. Thou hast suborn'd the goldsmith to arrest me.
Ad. Alas, I sent you money to redeem you,
By Dromio here, who came in haste for it.
Dro. E. Money by me? heart and good—will you might,
But, surely, master, not a rag of money.
Ant. E. Went'st not thou to her for a purse of ducats?
A. E. He came to me, and I deliver'd it.
Luc. And I am witness with her, that she did.
Dro. E. Heaven and the rope-maker, bear me
witness,
That I was sent for nothing but a rope!
P. Mistress, both man and master is possess'd;
I know it by their pale and deadly looks:
They must be bound, and laid in some dark room.
Ant. E. Say, wherefore didst thou lock me forth
And why dost thou deny the bag of gold? [to-day.
A. D. I did not, gentle husband, lock thee forth.
Dro. E. And, gentle master, I receiv'd no gold;
But I confess, sir, that we were lock'd out.
A. E. Dissembling villain, thou speak'st false in both.
A. E. Dissembling woman, thou art false in all.
And art confederate with a wicked pack,
To make a loathsome abject scorn of me:
1 Without. 2 Certainly.
But with these nails I'll pluck out these false eyes,
That would behold in me this shameful sport.
[Pinch and his Assistants bind Ant. E. and Dro. E.]

A Dr. O, bind him, bind him, let him not come near me.

[Pinch. More company!—the fiend is strong
Luc. Ah me, poor man, how pale and wan he looks!

A E. What, will you murder me? Thou gaoler,
I am thy prisoner; wilt thou suffer them
To make a rescue?
Off. Masters, let him go;
He is my prisoner, and you shall not have him.

Pinch. Go, bind this man, for he is frantic too.

A Dr. What wilt thou do, thou peevish officer?
Hast thou delight to see a wretched man
Do outrage and displeasure to himself?
Off. He is my prisoner; if I let him go,
The debt he owes will be required of me.

A Dr. I will discharge thee, ere I go from thee:
Bearn me forthwith unto his creditor,
And knowing how the debt grows, I will pay it.
Good master doctor, see him safe convey'd
Home to his house.—O most unhappy day!

Ant. E. O most unhappy wanton! [you.
Dro. E. Master, I am here entered in bond for
Ant. E. Out on thee, villain? wherefore dost thou mad me?

Dro. E. Will you be bound for nothing? be mad, good master; cry, the devil. — [talk! L. Heaven help, poor souls, how luely do they
A Dr. Go bear him hence.—Sister, go you with me.

[Exeunt Pinch and Assistants, with Ant. E. and Dro. E.]

Say now, whose suit is he arrested at? [him?
Off. One Angelo, a goldsmith; do you know
A Dr. I know the man: What is the sum he Off. Two hundred ducats. [owes?
A Dr. Say, how grows it due?
Off. Due for a chain, your husband had of him.
A. He did bespeak a chain for me, but had it not.
[day

Cour. When as your husband, all in rage, to-Came to my house, and took away my ring,
(The ring I saw upon his finger, now)
Straight after, did I meet him with a chain.

A Dr. It may be so, but I did never see it:—
Come, gaoler, bring me where the goldsmith is, I long to know the truth hereof at large.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse, with his raper drawn, and Dromio of Syracuse.

L. Heaven, for thy mercy! they are loose again.

A Dr. And come with naked swords; let's call more help.

To have them bound again.
Off. [Exeunt Off., A Dr., and Luc.

A S. I see these witches are afraid of swords.

Dro. S. She, that would be your wife, now ran from you.
[from thence:

Ant. S. Come to the Centaur; fetch our stuff.
I long, that we were safe and sound aboard.

Dro. S. Faith, stay here this night, they will surely do us no harm; you saw, they speak us fair, give us gold: me think, they are such a gentle nation, that but for the mountain of mad flesh that claims marriage of me, I could find in my heart to stay here still, and turn witch.

Ant. S. I will not stay to-night for all the town; Therefore away, to get our stuff aboard.

[Exeunt.

Act Fifth.

SCENE I.—THE SAME.

Enter Merchant and Angelo.

Ang. I am sorry, sir, that I have hinder'd you:
But, I protest, he had the chain of me,
Though most dishonestly he doth deny it.
Mer. How is the man esteem'd here in the city?
Ang. Of very reverend reputation, sir,
Of credit infinite, highly belov'd,
Second to none that lives here in the city:
His word might bear my wealth at any time.
Mer. Speak softly: yonder, as I think, he walks.

Enter Antipholus and Dromio of Syracuse.

Ang. Tisso; and that self-chain about his neck,
Which he forswore, most monstrously, to have.
Good sir, draw near to me, I'll speak to him.
Signior Antipholus, I wonder much
That you would put me to this shame and trouble;
And not without some scandal to yourself,
With circumstance, and oaths, so to deny
This chain, which now you wear so openly:
Besides the charge, the shame, imprisonment.
You have done wrong to this my honest friend;
Who, but for staying on our controversy,
Had hoasted sail, and put to sea to-day:
This chain you had of me, can you deny it?

Ant. S. I think, I had; I never did deny it.
M. Yes, that you did, sir; and forswore it too.
Ant. S. Who heard me to deny it, or forswear it?
Mer. These ears of mine, thou knowest, did hear thee:
Fie on thee, wretch! 'tis pity that thou liv'st
To walk where any honest men resort.

Ant. S. Thou art a villain to impeach me thus;
I'll prove mine honour, and mine honesty
Against thee presently, if thou dar'st stand.

Mer. I dare, and do defy thee for a villain.

[They draw.

Enter Adriana, Lucelana, Courtesan, & others.

A Dr. Hold, hurt him not, for heaven's sake;
he is mad;—
Some get within him, 1 take his sword away;
Bind Dromio too, and bear them to my house.

Dro. S. Run, master, run; for heaven's sake, take a house.

This is some priory;—In, or we are spoil'd.

[Exeunt Ant. S. and Dro. S. to the Priory.

Enter the Abbess.

Abb. Be quiet, people; Wherefore throng you hither?
[ hence:

A Dr. To fetch my poor distracted husband
Let us come in, that we may bind him fast,
And bear him home for his recovery.

1 His guard.
With wholesome syrups, drugs, and holy prayers,
To make of him a formal man again:
It is a branch and parcel of mine oath,
A charitable duty of my order;
Therefore depart, and leave him here with me.

_Adr_. I will not hence, and leave my husband
And ill it doth beseen your holiness,
there;
To separate the husband and the wife.

_Bob_. Be quiet, and depart, though that not have him.

_[Exit Abbess._

_Luc_. Complain unto the duke of this indignity.

_Adr_. Come, go, I will fall prostrate at his feet,
And never rise until my tears and prayers
Have won his grace to come in person hither,
And take perfere my husband from the abess.

_Mer_. By this, I think, the dial points at five:
Anon, I am sure, the duke himself in person
Comes this way to the melancholy vale;
The place of death and sorry execution,
Behind the ditches of the abbey here.

_Ang_. Upon what cause?

_Mer_. To see a reverend Syracusan merchant,
Who put unluckily into this bay
Against the laws and statutes of this town,
Beheaded publickly for his offence.
_[death._

_Ang_. See, where they come; we will behold his
L. Kneel to the duke, before he pass the abbey.

_Enter Duke attended; Ageon bare-headed;
with the Headsman and other Officers._

_Duke_. Yet once again proclaim it publickly,
If any friend will pay the sum for him,
He shall not die, so much we tender him, [bess!
_Adr_. Justice, most sacred duke, against the abbe.

_Duke_. She is a virtuous and a reverend lady;
It cannot be, that she hath done thew wrong.

_Adr_. May it please your grace, Antipholus, my
Who I made lord of me and all had,[husband,—
At your important letters,—this ill day
A most outrageous fit of madness took him;
That desperately he hurried through the street,
(With him his bondman, all as mad as he,)
Doing displeasure to the citizens
By rushing in their houses, bearing thence Rings, jewels, any thing his rage did like.
Once did I get him bound, and sent him home,
Whilst to take order for the wrongs I went,
That here and there his fury had committed.
Anon, I wot not by what strange escape,
He broke from those that had the guard of him;
And, with his mad attendant and himself,
Each one with irreful passion, with drawn swords,
Met us again, and, madly bent on us,
Chas'd us away; till raising of more aid,
We came again to bind them: then they fled
Into this abbey, whither we pursued them;
And here the abbess shuts the gates on us,
And will not suffer us to fetch him out,
Nor send him forth, that we may bear him hence.
Therefore, most gracious duke, with thy command, [help.
_Let him be brought forth, and borne hence for _Duke_. Long since, thy husband serv'd me in
And I to thee engag'd a prince's word, [my wars;
When thou didst make him master of thy bed,
To do him all the grace and good I could.—

1 The theme.
Enter a Servant.

S. O mistress, mistress, shift and save yourself! My master and his man are both broke loose, Beaten the maids a-row; and bound the doctor, Whose beard they have sang into with brands of And ever as it blazed, they threw on him [fire; Great palls of puddled mire to quench the hair: My master preaches patience to him, while His man with scissors nick him like a fool: And sure, unless you send some present help, Between them they will kill the conjurer.

A. Peace, fool, thy master and his man are And that is false thou dost report to us; [here Serv. Mistress, upon my life, I tell you true; I have not breath'd almost since I did see it. He cries for you, and vows, if he can take you, To scourch your face, and to disfigure you: [Cry within. Hark, hark, I hear him, mistress; fly, be gone.

Duke. Come, stand by me, fear nothing: Guard with halberts.

Adr. Ah me, it is my husband! Witness you, That he is borne about invisible: Even now we hous'd him in the abbey here; [son. And now he's there, past thought of human reason.

Enter Antipholus and Dromio of Ephesus. Ant. E. Justice, most gracious duke, oh, grant me justice! Even for the service that long since I did thee, When I bestrid thee, in the wars, and took Deep scars to save thy life; even for the blood That then I lost for thee, now grant me justice.

Ag. Unless the fear of death doth make me I see my son Antipholus, and Dromio. [dote, Ant. E. Justice, sweet prince, against that woman there, She whom thou gav'st to me to be my wife; That hath abus'd and dishonour'd me, Even in the strength and height of injury! Beyond imagination is the wrong, That she this day hath shameless thrown on me. D. Discover how, and thou shalt find me just. Ant. E. This day, great duke, she shut the doors upon me, While she with rascals feasted in my house.

Duke. A grievous fault: Say, woman, didst thou so! [sister,

Adr. No, my good lord;—myself, he, and my To-day did dine together: so befall my soul, As this is false, he burdens me withal! L. Ne'er may I look on day, or sleep on night, But she tells to your highness simple truth!

Ang. O perjur'd woman! They are both for- In this the madman justly chargeth them, [swn. Ant. E. My liege, I am advised what I say; Neither disturb'd with the effect of wine, Nor heady-rash, provok'd with raging ire, Albeit, my wrongs might make one wiser mad. This woman lock'd me out this day from dinner: That goldsmith there, were he not pay'd with Could witness it, for he was with me then; [her, Who parted with me to go fetch a chain, Promising to bring it to the Porcupine, 1 One after another.

Where Balthazar and I did dine together. Our dinner done, and he not coming thither, I went to seek him: in the street I met him; And in his company, that gentleman; [down. There did this perjur'd goldsmith swear me That I this day of him receiv'd the chain, Which, heaven knows, I saw not; for the which, He did arrest me with an officer. I did obey; and sent my peasant home For certain ducats: he with none return'd. Then fairly I bespake the officer. To go in person with me to my house. By the way we met My wife, her sister, and a rabble more Of vile confederates: along with them They brought one Pinch; a hungry, lean-fac'd A mere anatomy, a mountebank, [villain, A thread-bare juggler, and a fortune-teller; A needy, hollow-ey'd, sharp-looking wretch, A living dead man: this pernicious slave, Forsooth, took on him as a conjurer; And, gazing in mine eyes, feeling my pulse, And with no face, as 'twere out-facing me, Cries out I was possess'd: then altogether They fell upon me, bound me, bore me thence; And in a dark and dankish vault at home There left me and my man, both bound together; Till gnawing with my teeth my bonds in sunder, I gain'd my freedom, and immediately Ran hither to your grace; whom I beseech, To give me ample satisfaction For these deep shames and great indignities.

Ang. My lord, in truth, thus far I witness with him; That he dined not at home, but was lock'd out. Du. But had he such a chain of thee, or no? A. He had, my lord; and when he ran in here, These people saw the chain about his neck.

Mcr. Besides, I will be sworn, these ears of mine Heard you confess you had the chain of him, After you first forswore it on the mart, And, thereupon, I drew my sword on you; And then you fled into this abbey here, From whence, I think, you are come by miracle.

A. E. I never came within these abbey walls, Nor ever dixt thou draw thy sword on me; I never saw the chain, so help me heaven! And this is false you burden me withal.

Duke. Why, what an intricate impeach is this? I think, you all have drank of Circe's cup. If here you hous'd him, here he would have been: If he were mad, he would not plead so coldly:— You say he dined at home: the goldsmith here Denies that saying:—Sirrah, what say you?

Dro. E. Sir, he dined with her there, at the Porcupine. [that ring.

Cour. He did; and from my finger snatch'd A. E. 'Tis true, my liege, this ring I had of her. Du. Saw'st thou him enter at the abbey here? Cour. As sure, my liege, as I do see your grace. Du. Why, this is strange:—Go call the abbess I think you are all mated, 2 or stark mad. [hither;

[Exit an Attendant.

Ag. Most mighty duke, you have me speak a Haply I see a friend will save my life, [word: And pay the sum that may deliver me.

Du. Speak freely, Syracusan, what thou wilt. 1 Molst. 2 Confounded.
Dro. E. Within this hour I was his bondman, sir; But he, I thank him, gnaw'd in two my cords; Now am I Dromio, and his man unbound.

Age. I am sure, you both of you remember me.

Dro. E. Ourselves we do remember, sir, by you; For lately we were bound, as you are now. You are not Fich's patient, are you, sir?

Age. Why look you strange on me? you know me well.

Ant. E. I never saw you in my life till now.

Age. Oh! grief hath chang'd me since you saw me last;

And careful hours, with Time's deformed hand
Have written strange defects 1 in my face:
But tell me yet, dost thou not know my voice?

Ant. E. Neither.

Age. Dromio, nor thou?

Dro. E. No, trust me, sir, nor I.

Age. I am sure thou dost.

Dro. E. Ay, sir? but I am sure I do not; and whatsoever a man denies, you are now bound to believe him.

Age. Not know my voice! O, time's extremity!

Hast thou so crack'd and splitted my poor tongue,
In seven short years, that here my only son
Knows not my feeble key of untund'ed cares?
Though now this grained 2 face of mine be hid
In sap-consuming winter's drizzled snow,
And all the conduits of my blood froze up:
Yet hath my night of life some memory,
My wasting lamp some fading glimmer left,
My dull deaf ears a little use to hear:
All these old witnesses (I cannot err)
Tell me, thou art my son Antipholus.

Ant. E. I never saw my father in my life.

Age. But seven years since, in Syracuse, boy,
Thou know'st we parted; but perhaps, my son,
Thou shouldest to acknowledge me in misery.

Ant. E. The duke, and all that know me in the
Can witness with me that it is not so; [city,
I ne'er saw Syracuse in my life.

Duke. I tell thee, Syracuse, twenty years
Have I been patron to Antipholus,
During which time he ne'er saw Syracuse:
I see, thy age and dangers make thee dote.

Enter the ABBEY, with Antipholus Syracuse, and Dromio Syracuse.

Abb. Most mighty duke, behold a man much wrong'd. [All gather to see him.

Ad. I see two husbands, or mine eyes deceave me.

Du. One of these men is Genius to the other; And so of these: Which is the natural man,
And which the spirit? Who desperseth them?

Dr. S. I, sir, am Dromio; command him away.

Dro. E. I, sir, am Dromio; pray let me stay.

Ant. S. A. E. I, sir, am Dromio; art thou not? or else his ghost?

Dro. S. O, my old master? who hath bound him here?

Ab. Whoever bound him, I will loose his bonds
And gain a husband by his liberty:—
Speak, old A. E. I, if thou be'st that man
That hadst a wife once called Amilia,
That bore thee a burden two fair sons:
1 Alteration of features. 2 Furrowed.

O, if thou be'st the same A. E. I, speak,
And speak unto the same Amilia!

Age. If I dream not, thou art Amilia;
If thou art she, tell me where is that son
That floated with thee on the fatal raft?

Abb. By men of Epidamnum, he and I, And the twin Dromio, all were taken up; But, by and by, rude fishermen of Corinth
By force took Dromio and my son from them, And me they left with those of Epidamnum:
What then became of them I cannot tell;
I, to this fortune that you see me in.

Du. Why, here begins his morning story right:
These two Antipholus's, these two so like,
And these two Dromios, one in semblance,—
Besides her urging of her wight at sea,— These are the parents to these children,
Which accidentally are met together.
Antipholus, thou canst from Corinth first.

Ant. S. No, sir, not I; I came from Syracuse.

Duke. Stay, stand apart; I know not which is which.

Ant. E. I came from Corinth, my most gracious lord.

Dro. E. And I with him.

Ant. E. Brought to this town with that most famous warrior,

Duke Menaphon, your most renowned uncle,

Adr. Which of you two did dine with me to

Ant. S. I, gentle mistress. [day!

Adr. And are not you my husband?

Ant. E. No, I say nay to that.

Ant. S. And so do I, yet did she call me so; And this fair gentlewoman, her sister here, Did call me brother,—What I told you then, I hope, I shall have leisure to make good;
If this be not a dream, I see and hear.

Age. That is the chain, sir, which you had of me.

Ant. S. I think it be, sir; I deny it not.

A. E. And you, sir, for this chain, arrested me.

Age. I think I did, sir; I deny it not.

Adr. I sent you money, sir, to be your bail,

By Dromio; but I think he brought it not.

Dro. E. No, none by me.

Ant. S. This purse of ducats I received from

And Dromio my man did bring them me: you, I see, we did still meet each other's man, And I was ta'en for him, and he for me, And thereupon these errors are arose.

A. E. These ducats pawn I for my father here,

Du. It shall not need, thy father hath his life.

Covir. Sir, I must have that diamond from you.

Ant. E. There, it is; and such thanks for my good cheer.

Abb. Renowned duke, vouche safe to take the

To go with us into the abbey here, [pains

And hear at large discoursed all our fortunes:—
And all that are assembled in this place,

That by this sympathized one day's error
Have suffer'd wrong, go, keep us company,
And we shall make full satisfaction.—
Twenty-five years have I but gone in travail
Of you, my sons; nor, till this present hour, My heavy burdens are delivered:—
The duke, my husband, and my children both,

And you the calendars of their nativity,

Go to a gossip's feast, and go with me;

After so long grief, such nativity.
With all my heart, I'll gossip at this feast.

[Duc. Exeunt Duke, Abess, Ægeon, Court, Merchant, Angelo, and Attendants.

Dro. S. Master, shall I fetch your stuff from ship-board?

[Dro. S. has embarked?

Ant. E. Dromio, what stuff of mine hast thou

Dro. S. Your goods that lay at host, sir, in the Centaur.

[Dromio: Ant. S. He speaks to me: I am your master, me, go with us, we'll look to that anon:

embrace Dine, [LOCOM, ITHNESS, DLYNC, S. and E., Adr. and Luc. DRO. S. There is a fat friend at your master's house,

That kitchen'd me for you to-day at dinner;
She now shall be my sister, not my wife.

Dro. E. Methinks you are my glass and not my brother:
I see by you, I am a sweet-faced youth.
Will you walk in to see their gossiping?

Dro. S. Not I, sir; you are my elder.

Dro. E. That's a question: how shall we try it?

Dro. S. We will draw cuts for the senior: till then, lead thou first.

Dro. E. Nay, then thus: [brother:
We came into the world, like brother and
And now let's go hand in hand, not one before another.

[Exeunt.

2 Witch. Upon the heath:

3 Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.

SCENE II.—A Camp near Foret.

Alarum within. Enter King Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain, Lenox, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Soldier.

Dun. What bloody man is that? He can report, As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt The newest state.

Mal. This is the sergeant, Who, like a good and hardy soldier, fought 'Gainst my captivity:—Hail, brave friend! Say to the king the knowledge of the broil, As thou diest leave it.

Sold. Doubtfully it stood; As two spent swimmers, that do cling together, And choke their art, The merciless Macdonwald (Worthy to be a rebel; for, to that, The multiplying villanies of nature Do swarm upon him,) from the western isles.
Of Kernes and Gallowglasses\(^1\) was supplied; And fortune on him smile'd, but all too weak: For brave Macbeth (well he deserves that name,) Disdaining fortune, with his brandish'd steel, Which smok'd with bloody execution, Like valour's minion, Cary'd out his passage, till he fac'd the slave; And ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to him, Till he unseam'd him from the nave to the chaps, And fixed his head upon our battlements.

\[Dun.\] O, valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!

Sold. As whence the sun 'gin his reflexion, Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders break; So from that spring, whence comfort seem'd to Discomfort swells. Mark, king of Scotland, No sooner justice had, with valour arm'd,\(^2\): Compell'd these skipping Kernes to trust their heels; But the Norweyan lord, surveying vantage, With furbish'd arms, and new supplies of men, Began a fresh assault.

\[Dun.\] Dismay'd not this Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?

Sold. Yes; As sparrows, eagles; or the hare, the lion. If I say sooth,\(^3\) I must report they were As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks; So they Doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe: Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds, Or memorize another Golgotha, I cannot tell: But I am faint, my gashes cry for help.

\[Dun.\] So well thy words become thee, as thy wounds; They smack of honour both:—Go, get him surgeons.

[Exit Soldier, attended.

Enter Rosse.]

Who comes here?

Mal. The worthy thane\(^4\) of Rosse.

Len. What a haste looks through his eyes! So should he look, That seems to speak things strange.

Rosse. God save the king!

\[Dun.\] Whence cam'st thou, worthy thane?

Rosse. From Fife, great king, Where the Norweyan banners flout the sky, And fan our people cold.

Norway himself, with terrible numbers, Assisted by that most disloyal traitor The thane of Cawdor, 'gan a dismal conflict: Till that Bellona's bridegroom, lapp'd in proof,\(^4\) Confronted him with self-comparisons, Point against point rebellious, arm 'gainst arm, Curbing his lavish spirit: And, to conclude, The victory fell on us;—

\[Dun.\] Great happiness!

Rosse. That now Sweno, the Norweyan's king, craves composition; Nor would we deign him burial of his men, Till he disbursed, at St Colme's inch, Ten thousand dollars to our general use.

D. No more that thane of Cawdorshall decease

\(^1\) Light and heavy armed troops.

\(^2\) Truth.

\(^3\) Governor.

\(^4\) Defended by armour of proof.
Things that do sound so fair?—I the name of
Are ye fantastical, or that indeed [truth,
Which outwardly ye show! My noble partner
You greet with present grace, and great predict-of noble having, and of royal hope, [tion
That he seems rapt withal; to me you speak not:
If you can look into the seeds of time, [not;
And say, which grain will grow, and which will Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear,
Your favours, nor your hate.
1 Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.
2 Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.
3 Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though thou be so, all hail, Macbeth, and Banquo! [none:
1 Witch. Banquo, and Macbeth, all hail!
M. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me more:
By Siniel's death, I know, I am thane of Glamis:
But how of Cawdor? the thane of Cawdor lives,
A prosperous gentleman; and, to be king,
Stands not within the prospect of belief.
No more than to be Cawdor. Say, from whence
You owe this strange intelligence? or why
Upon this blasted heath you stop our way
With such prophetic greeting?—Speak, I charge
you. [Witches vanish.
Ban. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,
And these are of them:—Whither are they vanish-
'dst? [melted
Macb. Into the air: and what seem'd corporal
As breath into the wind.—Would they had staid!
Ban. Were such things here, as we do speak
Or have we eaten of the insane root, [about?
That takes the reason prisoner?
Macb. Your children shall be kings.
Ban. You shall be king.
Macb. And thane of Cawdor too; went it not so?
B. To theself-same tune and words. Who's here?

Enter Rosse and Angus.
Ros. The king hath happily receiv'd, Macbeth,
The news of thy success: and when he reads
Thy personal voyage in the rebels' flight,
His wonders and his praises do contend,
Which should be thine, or his: Silenc'd with that,
In viewing o'er the rest of the self-same day,
He finds thee in the stout Norvyan ranks,
Nothing afraid of what thyself didst do,
Strange images of death. As thick as tale,²
Come post with post; and every one did bear
Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence,
And pour'd them down before him.
Ang. We are sent,
To give thee, from our royal master, thanks:
To herald thee into his sight, not pay thee.
Rosse. And, for an earnest of a greater honour,
He bade me from him, call thee thane of Cawdor:
In which addition, hail, most worthy thane?
For it is thine.
Ban. What, can the devil speak true?
Macb. The thane of Cawdor lives: Why do you
In borrow'd robes? [dress me
Ang. Who was the thane, lives yet;
But under heavy judgment bears that life
Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was Combin'd with Norway: or did line the rebel

With hidden help and vantage; or that with both
He labour'd in his country's wreck, I know not:
But treasons capital, confess'd and prov'd,
Have overthrown him.
Macb. Glamis, and thane of Cawdor:
The greatest is behind.—Thanks for your pains.—
Do you not hope your children shall be kings,
When those that gave the thane of Cawdor to me,
Promis'd no less to them?
Ban. That, trusted home,
Might yet enkindle you unto the crown,
Besides the thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange:
And oftentimes to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths;
Win us with honest trifles, to betray us
In deepest consequence.—
Cousins, a word, I pray you.
Macb. Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling act
Of the imperial theme.—I thank you, gentlemen.—
This supernatural soliciting!
Cannot be ill; cannot be good:—If fill,
Why hath it given me earnest of success,
Commencing in a truth? I am thane of Cawdor:
If good, why do I yield to that suggestion
Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair,
And make my seated heart knock at my ribs
Against the use of nature? Present fears
Are less than horrible imaginings:
My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastical,
Shakes so my single state of man, that function
Is smother'd in surmise: and nothing is,
But what is not.
Ban. Look, how our partner's rapt.
Macb. If chance will have me king, why,
Chance may crown me,
Without my stir.
Ban. New honours come upon him
Like our strange garments, cleave not to their
But with the aid of use. [mould,
Macb. Come what come may;
Time and the hour² runneth through the roughest day.
B. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.
Macb. Give me your favour:—my dull brain was wrought [pains
With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, your
Are register'd where every day I turn
The leaf to read them.—Let us toward the king;
Think upon what hath chanc'd: and, at more time,
The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak
Our free hearts each to other.
Ban. Very gladly.
Macb. Till then, enough.—Come, friends. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—FORS. A ROOM IN THE PALACE.

Flourish. Enter Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain, Lenox, and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not
Those in commission yet return'd?
Mal. My liege,
They are not yet come back. But I have spoke
With one that saw him die; who did report,
That very frankly he confess'd his treasons;
Implor'd your highness' pardon; and set forth

1 Incitement. 2 Opportunity. 3 Pardon.
SCENE V.

INVERNESS. A ROOM IN MACBETH'S CASTLE.

Enter Lady Macbeth, reading a letter.

Lady M. They met me in the day of success; I owned 1

Cumberland was then held as a fief of the crown of England, and was given as a title to the heir-apparent.

and I have learned by the perfectest report, they have more in them than mortal knowledge. When I burned in desire to question them further, they made me humble airs, into which they vanished. While I stood rapt on the wonder of it, com!1

messes) from the king, who all hailed me, Thane of Cawdor; by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referred me to the coming on of time, with, Hail, king that shall be! This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness; that thou mightest not lose the duties of rejoicing, by being tavorant of what greatness is promised thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt be What thou art promised:—Yet do I fear thy nature;

It is too full o' the milk of human kindness, To catch the nearest way: Thou wouldst be great; Art not without ambition; but without [highly,

The ill using of God's gifts. What thou wouldst That wouldst thou holily; wouldst not play false, And yet wouldst wrongingly win; thou'dst have great Glamis,

That which cries, Thus thou must do, if thou And that which rather thou dost fear to do, Than wisshest should be undone. Hie thee hither, That I may pour my spirits in thine ear: And chastise with the valour of my tongue All that impedes thee from the golden round, Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem To have thee crown'd withall.—What is your tidings?

Enter an Attendant.

Attend. The king comes here to-night.

Lady M. Thou'rt mad to say it: Is not thy master with him? who, wert'so, Would have infor'm'd for preparation.

Attend. So please you, it is true; our thame is One of my fellows had the speed of him; (coming:) Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more Than would make up his message.

Lady M.

Give him tending, He brings great news. The raven himself is hoarse.

[Exit Attendant. That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan Under my battlements. Come, come, yours spirits That to no mortal thoughts, unspeakable here; And fill me, from the crown to the toe, top-full Of direst cruelty! make thine blood, Stop up the access and passage to remorse; That no compunctious visitings of nature Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between The effect, and it! Come to my woman's breasts, And take my milk for gall, you mord'ring minis-

Wherever in your sightless substances [ters, You wait on nature's mischief: Come, thick night, And pall thee in the dunne smoke of hell! That my keen knife see not the wound it makes; Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the dark, To cry, Hold, hold!—Great Glamis! worthy Cawdor!

Enter Macbeth.

Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter! Thy letters have transported me beyond
This ignorant present, and I feel now
The future in the instant.
Macb. My dearest love,
Duncan comes here to-night.
Lady M. And when goes hence?
Macb. To-morrow,—as he purposes.
Lady M. O, never
Shall sun that morrow see!
Your face, my thane, is as a book, where men
May read strange matters:—To beguile the time,
Look like the time; bear welcome in your eye,
Your hand, your tongue: look like the innocent flower,
But be the serpent under it. He that’s coming Must be provided for: and you shall put
This night’s great business into my despatch;
Which shall to all our nights and days to come
Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom.
Macb. We will speak further.
Lady M. Only look up clear;
To alter favour1 ever is to fear:
Leave all the rest to me. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Before the Castle.

Hautboys. Servants of Macbeth attending.

Enter Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain, Banquo,
Lenox, Macduff, Rosse, Angus, and Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat; the air Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself unto our gentle senses.

Ban. This guest of summer,
The temple-haunting martlet,2 does approve,
By his lov’d mansionry, that the heaven’s breath,
Smells woefully here: no juty, frieze, butress,
Nor coigne3 of vantage, but this bird hath made
His pendent bed, and provent cradle; where they
Most breed and haunt, I have observ’d, the air
Is delicate.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Dun. See, see, our honour’d hostess!
The love that follows us, sometime is our trouble,
Which still we thank as love. Herein I teach you,
How you shall bid God yield4 us for your pains,
And thank us for your trouble.

Lady M. All our service
In every point twice done, and then done double.
Were poor and single business, to contend [with Against those honours, deep and broad, where—
Your majesty loads our house: for those of old,
And the late dignities heaped up to them,
We rest your heritors.

Dun. Where’s the thane of Cawdor?
We court’d him at the heels, and had a purpose
To be his purveyor: but he rides well: [him
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath hop’d
To his home before us: fair and noble hostess,
We are your guest to-night.

Lady M. Your servants ever
Have theirs themselves, and what is theirs in compt,5
To make their audit at your highness’ pleasure,
Still to return your own.

Dun. Give me your hand.

1 Countenance. 3 Corner. 5 Reckoning.
2 Swallow. 4 Reward.

Conduct me to mine host; we love him highly,
And shall continue our graces towards him.
By your leave, hostess. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—A Room in the Castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter, and pass over the stage, a Sewer,1 and divers Servants with dishes and services. Then enter Macbeth.

Macb. If it were done, when ‘tis done, then
’twere well
It were done quickly: If the assassination
Could trammel up the consequence, and catch,
With his surcease,2 success; that but this blow
Might be the be-all and the end-all here,
But here, upon this bank and shoal of time,—
We’d jump the life to come.—But, in these cases,
We still have judgment here; that we but teach
Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return
To plague the inventor: This even-handed justice
Commends the ingredients of our poison’d chalice
To our own lips. He’s here in double trust:
First as I am his kinsman and his subject,
Strong both against the deed; then, as his host,
Who should against his murderer shut the door,
Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongued, against
The deep damnation of his taking off:
And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven’s cherubin, hors’d
Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That tears shall drown the wind.—I have no spur
To prick the sides of my intent, but only
Vaulting ambition, which o’erleaps itself,3
And falls on the other.—How now, what news?

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. He has almost supp’d: Why have you left the chamber?

Macb. Hath he ask’d for me?
Lady M. Know you not, he has?
M. We will proceed no further in this business:
He hath honor’d me of late; and I have bought
Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
Which would be worn now in their newest gloss,
Not cast aside so soon.

Lady M. Was the hope drunk,
Wherein you dress’d yourself? hath it slept since?
And wakes it now, to look so green and pale
At what it did a freckle? From this time,
Such I account thy love. Art thou accorded
To be the same in thine own act and valor,
As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou have that
Which thou esteem’st at the ornament of life,
And live a coward in thine own esteem?
Letting I dare not wait upon I would,
Like the poor cat i’ the adage?

Mach. Fry thee, peace:
I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more, is none.

Lady M. What beast was it then
That made you break this enterprise to me?
When you durst do it, then you were a man;

1 So called from his placing the dishes on the table.
2 Cessation. 3 Query, overleaps its sel, i.e. saddle.
And to be more than what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor time, nor place,
Did then adhere, and yet you would make both:
They have made themselves, and that their fitness now
Does unmake you. I have given suck, and know
How tender 'tis, to love the babe that milks me:
I would, while it was smiling in my face,
Have pluck'd my nipple from its boneless gums,
And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn, as you
Have done to this.

Macb. If we should fail,—
Lady M. We fail! But screw your courage to the sticking place,
And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep,
(Whereto the rather shall his day's hard journey Soundly invite him,) his two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wassal so convince,
That memory, the warder of the brain,
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A limbeck only; when in swinish sleep
Their drenched natures lie, as in a death,
What cannot you and I perform upon
The unguarded Duncan? what not upon
His spongy officers; who shall bear the guilt
Of our great quell?

Macb. Bring forth men children only!
For thy undaunted mettle should compose
Nothing but males. Will it not be received,
When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy two
Of his own chamber, and us'd their very daggers,
That they have done't?

Lady M. Who dares receive it other,
As we shall make our griefs and glamour roar
Upon his death?

Macb. I am settled, and bend up
Each corporal agent to this terrible feat.
Away, and mock the time with fairest show:
False face must hide what the false heart doth
know.

Act Second.

SCENE I.—COURT WITHIN MACBETH'S CASTLE.

Enter Banquo and Fleance, and a Servant with a torch before them.

Ban. How goes the night, boy?

Fle. The moon is down; I have not heard the clock.

Ban. And she goes down at twelve.

Fle. I take 't, 'tis later, sir.

Ban. Hold, take my sword:—There's husbandry in heaven, their candles are all out.—Take thee that too.
A heavy summons lies like lead upon me,
And yet I would not sleep: Merciful powers!
Restrain in me the cursed thoughts, that nature
Gives way to in repose!—Give me my sword:—

Enter Macbeth, and a Servant with a torch.

Who's there?

Macb. A friend.

Ban. What, sir, not yet at rest? The king's a-bed:

1 Coher. 2 Intemperance. 3 Overpower. 4 Alembic. 5 Murder. 6 Thrift.

He hath been in unusual pleasure, and
Sent forth great larges to your offices:
This diamond be your wife withal;
By the name of most kind hostess; and shut up
In measureless content.

Macb. Being unprepar'd,
Our will became the servant to defect;
Which else should free have wrought.

Ban. All's well.
I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters:
To you they have show'd some truth.

Macb. I think not of them:
Yet when we can entertain an hour to serve,
Would spend it in some words upon that busi-
If you would grant the time.

Ban. At your kind'st leisure.

Macb. If you shall cleave to my consent,— when 'tis,
It shall make honour for you.

Ban. So I lose none,
In seeking to augment it, but still keep
My bosom franchis'd, and allegiance clear,
I shall be counsel'd.

Macb. Good repose, the while.

Ban. Thanks, sir; The like to you.

[Exit Banquo and Fleance.

Macb. Go, bid thy mistresse, when my drink is ready,
She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed.

[Exit Servant.

Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee:—

I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling, as to sight? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind; a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?
I see thee yet, in form as palpable
As this which now I draw.

Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going;
And such an instrument I was to use.
Mine eyes are made the fools of the other senses,
Or else worth all the rest: I see thee still;
And on thy blade, and dudgeon, 4 gouts of blood,
Which was not so before. —There's no such thing:
It is the bloody business, which informs
Thus to mine eyes. —Now o'er the one half world
Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse
The curtain'd sleep; now witchcraft celebrates
Pale Hecate's offering; and wither'd murder,
Alarum'd by his sentinel, the wolf,
pace,
Whose howl's his watch, thus with his stealthy
With Tarquin's ravishing strides, towards his design
earth,
Moves like a ghost. —Thou sure and firm-set
Hearst not my steps, which way they walk, for fear
Thy very stones prate of my whereabout,
And take the present horror from the time,
Which now suits with it. —Whiles I threat, he lives;
Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives.

[A bell rings.

I go, and it is done; the bell invites me.
Hear it not, Duncan; for it is a knell
That summons thee to heaven, or to hell.

1 Bounty. 3 Concluded. 5 Coagulated drops. 2 Servants' rooms. 4 Haft.
SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk, hath made me bold:
What hath quench'd them, hath given me fire—
Hark!—Peace!
It was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal bellman,
Which gives the stern's goodnight. He is about it:
The doors are open; and the surfeited grooms
Do mock their charge with snores: I have drugg'd their posses,
That death and nature do contend about them,
Whether they live or die.

Macb. [Within.] Who's there?—what, ho!
Lady M. Alack! I am afraid they have awak'd,
And 'tis not done:—the attempt, and not the deed,
Confounds us:—Hark!—I laid their daggers ready,
He could not miss them. —Had he not resembled
My father as he slept, I had done't.—My husband?

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. I have done the deed:—Didst thou not hear a noise?
Lady M. I heard the owl scream, and the Didst thou not speak?
Macb. When?
Lady M. Now.
Macb. As I descended?
Lady M. Ay.
Macb. Hark!—
Who lies 't the second chamber?
Lady M. Donalbain.
Macb. This is a sorry sight.
[Looking on his hands.
Lady M. A foolish thought, to say a sorry sight.
Macb. There's one did laugh in his sleep, and one cried, murder!
[them:
That they did wake each other; I stood and heard
But they did say their prayers, and address'd
Again to sleep,—
[them
Lady M. There are two lodg'd together.
Macb. One cried, God bless us! and, Amen,
the other;
As they had seen me, with these hangman's hands
Listening their fear. I could not say, amen,
When they did say, God bless us.
Lady M. Consider it not so deeply.
Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce,
I had most need of blessing, and amen [amen]
Stuck in my throat.
Lady M. These deeds must not be thought
After these ways; so, it will make us mad.
Macb. Methought I heard a voice cry, Sleep no more!
Macbeth does murder sleep, the innocent sleep;
Sleep, that knits up the strivell'd strains of care,
The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,
Dalm of hurt minds, great nature's second course,
Chief nourisher in life's feast;

Lady M. What do you mean?
Macb. Still it cried, Sleep no more! to all the house:
Glimmerkith murder'd sleep; and therefore Cawdor
Shall sleep no more, Macbeth shall sleep no more!
Lady M. Who was it that thus cried? Why, worthy thane,
You do unbend your noble strength, to think
So brainsickly of things:—Go, get some water,
And wash this filthy witness from your hand,—
Why did you bring these daggers from the place?
They must lie there; Go, carry them; and smear
The sleepy groom with blood.

Macb. I'll go no more:
I am afraid to think what I have done;
Look out again, I dare not.

Lady M. Infirm of purpose! Give me the daggers:
The sleeping and the dead Are but as pictures: 'tis the eye of childhood,
That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed,
I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal,
For it must seem their guilt.

[Exit. Knocking within.

Macb. Whence is that knocking? How is't with me, when every noise appals me?
What hands are here? Ha! they pluck out mine eyes!
Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood Clean from my hand? No; this my hand will rather
The tumultuous seas incarnadine, 1
Making the green—one red.

Re-enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour: but I shame
To wear a heart so white. [Knocking.] I hear a
At the south entry:—retire we to our chamber:
A little water clears us of this deed:
How easy is it then? your constancy
Hath left you unattended.—[Knocking.] Hark! more knocking:
Get on your night-gown, lest occasion call us,
And show us to be watchers:—Be not lost
So poorly in your thoughts.

Macb. To know my deed,—'twere best not know myself. [Knocking.

Wake Duncan with thy knocking! I would thou couldst!

[Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same.

Enter a Porter. [Knocking within.

Enter Macduff and Lenox.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to
That you do lie so late? [bed
For. Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock: and drink, sir, is a great provoker of sleep. Drink equivocates him in a sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him.

Macd. I believe, drink gave thee the lie last night.

For. That it did, sir, i' the very throat o' me:
But I required him for his lie: and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Macd. Is thy master stirring?—
Our knocking has awak'd him; here he comes.

1 Unwrought silk.
Enter Macbeth.

Len. Good-morrow, noble sir!
Macb. Good-morrow, both!
Macb. Is the king stirring, worthy thane?
Macb. Not yet.
Macb. He did command me to call timely on
I have almost slipp’d the hour. [him;
Macb. I’ll bring you to him.
Macb. I know this is a joyful trouble to you;
But yet ’tis one.

Macb. The labour we delight inphysical pain.
This is the door.
Macb. I’ll make so bold to call,
For ’tis my limited2 service. [Exit Macduff.
Len. Goes the king
From hence to-day?
Macb. He does—he did appoint it so.
Len. The night has been unry: Where we lay,
[say,
Our chimneys were blown down; and, as they Lamentings heard in the air; strange screams of
And proppingly, with accents terrible, [death;
Of dire combustion, and confus’d events,
New hatch’d to the woeful time. The obscure bird
Clamour’d the live-long night: some say, the
Was feverous, and did shake. [earth
Macb. ’Twas a rough night.
Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel
A fellow to it.

Re-enter Macduff.

Macb. O horror! horror! horror! Tongue, nor Cannot conceive nor name thee! [heart,
Macb. Len. What’s the matter?
Macb. Confusion now hath made his master-
Most sacrilegious murder hath broke open [piece!
The Lord’s anointed temple, and stole thence
The life o’ the building.
Macb. What is’t you say? the life?
Len. Mean you his majesty? [sight
Macb. Approach the chamber and destroy your
With a new Gorgon:—Do not bid me speak;
See, and then speak yourselves. Awake! awake!
[Exit Macbeth and Lenox.

Ring the alarum bell:—Murder, and treason!
Banquo, and Donalbain! Malcolm! awake!
Shake off this downy sleep, death’s counterfeit,
And look on death itself! Up, up, and see
The great doom’s image!—Malcolm! Banquo!
As from your graves rise up, and walk like
spirits,
To countenance this horror. [Bell rings.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. What’s the business,
That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley
The sleepers of the house? speak, speak, —
Macd. O, gentle lady,
’Tis not for you to hear what I can speak:
The repetition, in a woman’s ear,
Would murder as it fell.—O Banquo! Banquo!

Enter Banquo.

Our royal master’s murderer’d!
Lady M. Woe, alas!
What, in our house!
Ban. Too cruel, any where.—

Dear Duff, I pr’ythee contradict thyself,
And say, it is not so.

Re-enter Macbeth and Lenox.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance,
I had liv’d a blessed time; for, from this instant,
There’s nothing serious in mortality:
All is but toys; renown, and grace is dead:
The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees
Is left this vault to brag of.

Enter Malcolm and Donalbain.

Don. What is amiss?
Macb. You are, and do not know it:
The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood
Is stopp’d; the very source of it is stopp’d.
Macb. Your royal father’s murder’d.
Mal. O! by whom?
Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem’d, had done:
[blood,
Their hands and faces were all badg’d with
So were their daggers, which, unwip’d, we found
Upon their pillows:
They star’d, and were distracted; no man’s life
Was to be trusted with them.
Macb. O, yet I do repent me of my fury,
That I did kill them.

Macb. Wherefore did you so?
Macb. Who can be wise, amaz’d, temperate,
and furious,
Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man.
The expedition of my violent love
Out-ran the pauser reason.—Here lay Duncan,
His silver skin lac’d with his golden blood;
And his gash’d stabs look’d like a breach in nature,
For ruin’s wasteful entrance: there, the mur-
Steep’d in the colours of their trade, their daggers
Unmannerly breach’d with gore: Who could re-
That had a heart to love, and in that heart [frais,
Courage to make his love known?

Lady M. Help me hence, ho!

Macb. Look to the lady.

Mal. Why do we hold our tongues,
That most may claim this argument for ours?
Don. What should be spoken here,
Where our fate, hid within an augre-hole,
May rush and seize us? Let’s away; our tears
Are not yet brew’d.

Mal. Nor our strong sorrow on
The foot of motion.

Ban. Look to the lady:—
[Lady Macbeth is carried out.
And when we have our naked frailties hid,
That suffer in exposure, let us meet,
And question this most bloody piece of work,
To know it further. Fears and scruples shake us:
In the great hand of God I stand; and, thence,
Against the undivulg’d pretence I fight
Of treasonous malice.

Macb. And so do I.

All. So all.

Macb. Let’s briefly put on mainly readiness,
And meet i’ the hall together.

All. Well contented.

[Exit all but Mal. and Don.

Mal. What will you do? Let’s not consort with them:

1 With blood to their hilt.
SCENE IV.—WITHOUT THE CASTLE.

Enter Rosse and an Old Man.

Old M. Threescore and ten I can remember well:
Within the volume of which time, I have seen Hours dreadful, and things strange; but this sore night
Hath trifled former knowings.

Rosse. Ah, good father, [act.
Thou seest the heavens, as troubled with man's Threaten his bloody stage; by the clock, 'tis day,
And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp:
Is it night's predominance, or the day's shame,
That darkness does the face of earth intomb,
When living light should kiss it?

Old M. 'Tis unnatural,
Even like the deed that's done. On Tuesday last
A falcon, towering in her pride of place,
Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at, and killed.

Rosse. And Duncan's horses, (a thing most strange and certain,) Beantous and swift, the minions of their race, Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung out,

[make Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would War with mankind.

Old M. 'Tis said, they eat each other,

Rosse. They did so; to the amazement of mine eyes,

That look'd upon't. Here comes the good Mac-

Enter Macduff.

How goes the world, sir, now?

Macd. Why, see you not?
R. Is it known who did this more than bloody Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain. [deed?
Rosse. Alas, the day:

What good could they pretend 1?

Macd. They were suborn'd:
Malcolm, and Donalbain, the king's two sons,
Are stol'n away and fled; which puts upon them Suspicion of the deed.

Rosse. 'Gainst nature still;
Thriftless ambition, that wilt raven up
Thine own life's means!—Then 'tis most like,
The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.

Macd. He is already nam'd; and gone to
To be invested. [Scone,

Rosse. Where is Duncan's body?

Macd. Carried to Comiles-kill.
The sacred storehouse of his predecessors,
And guardian of their bones.

Rosse. Will you to Scone?

Macd. No, cousin, I'll to Fife.

1 Propose to themselves.

Rosse. Well, I will thither.

Macd. Well, may you see things well done there;—adieu!—

Lest our old robes sit easier than our new!

Rosse. Father, farewell. [those

Act Third.

SCENE I.—Fores. A ROOM IN THE PALACE.

Enter Banquo.

Ban. Thou hast it now, King, Caedow, Glamis,
As the weird women promis'd; and, I fear, [all,
Thou play'dst most fouly for't; yet it was said,
It should not stand in thy posterity;
But that myself should be the root, and father
Of many kings. If there come truth from them,
(As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shone,) Why, by the verities on thee made good,
May they not be my oracles as well,
And set me up in hope? But, hush; no more.

Senet sounded. Enter Macbeth, as King; Lady
Macbeth, as Queen; Lenox, Rosse, Lords,
Ladies, and Attendants.

Macb. Here's our chief guest.
Lady M. If he had been forgotten,
It had been as a gap in our great feast,
And all things unbecoming.

Macb. To-night we hold a solemn supper, sir,
And I'll request your presence.

Ban. Let your highness' Command upon me; to the which, my duties Are with a most indissoluble tie
For ever knit.

Macb. Ride you this afternoon?

Ban. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. We should have else desir'd your good advice [ous,
(Which still hath been both grave and prosper-
In this day's council; but we'll take to-morrow.
Is't far you ride?

Ban. As far, my lord, as will fill up the time
'Twixt this and supper: go not my horse the
I must become a borrower of the night, [better,
For a dark hour or twain.

Macb. Fain not our feast.

Ban. My lord, I will not.

M. We hear, our bloody cousins are bestow'd
In England, and in Ireland; not confessing Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers With strange invention: But of that to-morrow;
When, therewithal, we shall have cause of state,
Cruising us jointly. Hee you to horse: Adieu,
Till you return at night. Goes Fiancée with you?
B. Ay, my good lord: our time doth call upon us.
M. I wish your horses swift and sure of foot;
And so I do commend you to their backs.

Farewell. — [Exit Banquo.

Let every man be master of his time
Till seven at night; to make society
The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourself your,
Till supper-time alone: while then, God be with [Exeunt Lady Macbeth, Lords, Ladies, &c.

Sirrah, a word! Attend those men our pleasure!}
At. They are, my lord, without the palace gate.

Macb. Bring them before us. — [Exit Attent.]

To be thus, is nothing;
But to be safely thus:—Our fears in Banquo
Stick deep; and in his royalty of nature
Reigns that, which would be fear'd: 'Tis much he dares;
And, to that dauntless temper of his mind,
He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour
To act in safety. There is none, but he Whose being I do fear: and, under him,
My genius is rebuk'd; as, it is said, [sisters,
Mark Antony's was by Caesar. He chid the Whom when first they put the name of King upon me,
And bade them speak to him; then, prophet-
They hail'd him father to a line of kings; [like.
Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crown,
And put a barren sceptre in my griepe,
Thence to wrench'd with an unlineal hand,
No son of mine succeeding. If it be so,
For Banquo's issue have I fill'd my mind;
For them the gracious Duncan have I murder'd;
Put rancours in the vessel of my peace
Only for them; and mine own soul betwixt
Given to the common enemy of man,
To make them kings, the seed of Banquo kings!
Rather than so, come, fate, into the list, and champion me to the utterance! 2—Who's
there?—

Re-enter Attendant, with Two Murderers.

Now to the door, and stay there till we call.

[Exit Attendant.

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

1 Mur. It was, so please your highness.

Macb. Well then, now
Have you consider'd of my speeches? Know,
That it was he, in the times past, which held you
So under fortune, which you thought, had been
Our innocent self; this I made good to you, you,
In our last conference; pass'd in probation with How you were borne in hand; how cross'd; the instruments;
Who wrought with them; and all things else, that
To half a soul, and a notion craz'd, [might,
Say, Thus did Banquo.

1 Mur. You made it known to us.

Ma. I did so; and went further, which is now
Our point of second meeting. Do you find
Your patience so predominant in your nature,
That you can let this go? Are you so gospel'd,
To pray for that good man, and for his issue,
Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave,
And beggar'd yours for ever?

1 Mur. We are men, my liege.

Macb. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men;
As hounds, and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels, curs, [cleped

Shoughs, 3 water-rugs, and demi-wolves, are
All by the name of dogs: the valued file 4
Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle,
The house-keeper, the hunter, every one
According to the gift which bounteous nature
Hath in him clos'd; whereby he does receive Particular addition, 6 from the bill
That writes them all alike: And so of men.

1 Defiled. 3 Wolf-dogs. 5 Catalogue. 2 Combat a l'ourante. 4 Called. 6 Description.

Now, if you have a station in the file,
And not in the worst rank of mankind, say it;
And I will put that business in your bosoms,
Whose execution takes your enemy off;
Grapples you to the heart and love of us,
Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
Which in his death were perfect.

2 Mur. I am one, my liege,
Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
Have so incens'd that I am reckless what
I do, to spite the world.

1 Mur. And I another,
So weary with disasters, tugg'd with fortune,
That I would set my life on any chance,
To mend it, or be rid on't.

Macb. Both of you
Know, Banquo was your enemy.

2 Mur. True, my lord.

Macb. So is he mine: and in such bloody dis.
That every minute of his being thrusts [tance,
Against my nearest of life? And though I could
With bare-fac'd power sweep him from my sight,
And bid my will avouch it; yet I must not,
For certain friends that are both his and mine,
Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall
Whom I myself struck down; and thence it is,
That I to your assistance do make love;
Masking the business from the common eye,
For sundry weighty reasons.

2 Mur. We shall, my lord,
Perform what you command us.

1 Mur. Though our lives—

Macb. Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour, at most,
I will advise you where to plant yourselves,
Acquaint you with the perfect spy o' the time,
The moment on't: for't must be done to-night,
And something from the palace; always thought,
That I require a clearness: And with him;
(To leave no rubs, nor botches, in the work.)
Fleance, his son, that keeps him company,
Whose absence is no less material to me
Than is his father's, must embrace the fate
Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart;
I'll come to you anon.

2 Mur. We are resolved, my lord.

Ma. I'll call upon you straight; abide within.
It is concluded:—Banquo, thy soul's flight,
If it find heaven, must find it out to-night.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—ANOTHER ROOM.

Enter Lady Macbeth, and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court?

Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again to-night.

Lady M. Say to the king, I would attend his
For a few words. [leisure

Serv. Madam, I will. [Exit.

Lady M. Nought's had, all's spent,
Where our desire is got without content:
'Tis safer to be that which we destroy,
Than, by destruction, dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter Macbeth.

How now, my lord? why do you keep alone,
Of sorriest 2 fancies your companions making?

1 Because of. 2 Dismal.
Using those thoughts, which should indeed have died
With them they think on? Things without
Should be without regard, what's done, is done.
M. We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it;
She'll close, and be herself, whilst our poor
Remains in danger of her former tooth, [malice
But let \[suffer,
The frame of things disjoint, both the worlds
Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep
In the affliction of these terrible dreams,
That shake us nightly: Better be with the dead,
Whom we, to gain our place, have sent to peace,
Than on the torture of the mind to lie
In restless ecstasy. 2 Duncan is in his grave;
After life's fitful fever, he sleeps well;
Treason has done his worst; nor steel, nor poison,
Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing,
Can touch him further!
Lady M. Come on;
Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks;
Be bright and jovial 'mong your guests to-night.
Mac. So shall I, love; and so, I pray, be you:
Let your remembrance apply to Banquo;
Present him eminence, both with eye and tongue:
Unsafe the while, that we streams;
Must love our honours in these flattering
And make our faces vizards to our hearts,
Disguising what they are.
Lady M. You must leave this.
M. O, full of scorpions is my mind, dear wife!
Thou know'st, that Banquo, and his Fleance, lives.
Lady M. But in them nature's copy's not etern.4
Mac. There's comfort yet; they are assailable;
Then be thou jocund: Ere the bat hath flown
His cloister'd flight; ere, to black Hecate's summons,
The shard-borne beetle, with his drowsy hums,
Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be
A dreadful note.
[done
Lady M. What's to be done?
Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest chuck,
Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seating night,
Skarf up the tender eye of pitiful day;
And, with thy bloody and invisible hand,
Cancel, and tear to pieces, that great bond
Which keeps me pale!—Light thicken; and the Makes wing to the rocky wood:
[crow
Good things of day begin to droop and drowse;
While night's black agents to their prey do rouse.
Thou marvell'st at my words; but hold thee still;
Things, bad begun, make strong themselves by ill:
So, pr'ythee, go with me.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A PARK OR LAWN, WITH A GATE
LEADING TO THE PALACE.

Enter Three Murderers.
1 Mur. But who did bid thee join with us?
2 Mur. He needs not our mistrust: since he
Our offices, and what we have to do, [delivers
To the direction just.
1 Crushed.
2 Agony.
3 As eminent.
4 Scaly wing.
5 Blinding.

1 Mur. Then stand with us,
The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day:
Now spurs the latest traveller apace,
To gain the timely inn; and near approaches
The subject of our watch.
3 Mur. Hark! I hear horses.
Ban. [Within.] Give us a light there, ho!
2 Mur. Then it is he; the rest
That are within the note of expectation,
Already are i' the court.
1 Mur. His horses go about.
3 Mur. Almost a mile: but he does usually,
So all men do, from hence to the palace gate
Make it their walk.

Enter Banquo and Fleance, a Servant with a torch preceding them.
2 Mur. A light! a light!
3 Mur. 'Tis he.
1 Mur. Stand to't.
Ban. It will be rain to-night.
1 Mur. Let it come down. [Assaults Banquo.
Ban. O, treachery! Fly, good Fleance, fly, fly,
Thou may'st revenge. O slave! [fly;
[Dies. Fleance and Servant escape.
3 Mur. Who did strike out the light?
1 Mur. Was't not the way?
3 Mur. There's but one down; the son has fled.
2 Mur. We have lost best half of our affair.
1 Mur. Well, let's away, and say how much is done.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

A ROOM OF STATE IN THE PALACE.

A Banquet prepared. Enter Macbeth, Lady
Macbeth, Rosse, Lenox, Lords, and Attendants.
M. You know your own degrees, sit down: at
And last, the hearty welcome. [first
Lords. Thanks to your majesty.
Macb. Ourself will mingle with society,
And play the humble host.
Our hostess keeps her state; but, in best time,
We will require her welcome.
Lady M. Pronounce it for me, sir, to all our
For my heart speaks, they are welcome. [friends;
Enter First Murderer to the door.
Macb. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks:—
Both sides are even: Here I'll sit i' the midst
Be large in mirth; anon, we'll drink a measure
The table round.—There's blood upon thy face.
Mur. 'Tis Banquo's then.
Mac. 'Tis better thee without, than he within.
Is he despatch'd? [him.
Mur. My lord, his throat is cut; that I did for Mac. Thou art the best o' the cut-throats: Yet he's good,
That did the like for Fleance; if thou didst it,
Thou art the unpareil.
Mur. Most royal sir,
Fleance is 'scap'd.
Macb. Then comes my fit again: I had else been perfect;
Whole as the marble, founded as the rock;
As broad, and general, as the casing air:
Lady M. What! quite unmann'd in folly?
Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.
Lady M. Fie, for shame!
Macb. Blood hath been shed ere now, in the olden time,
Ere human statute pur'd the gentle weal;
Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd
Too terrible for the ear: the times have been,
That, when the brains were out, the man would
And there an end: but now, they rise again,
Idie,
With twenty mortal murders on their crowns,
And push us from our stools: This is more Than such a murder is.
[Strangely]
Lady M. My worthy lord,
Your noble friends do lack you.
Macb. I do forget:—
Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends;
I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To them that know me.
Come, love and health
to all;
Then I'll sit down:——Give me some wine, fill full;——
I drink to the general joy of the whole table.

Ghost rises.
And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss;
Would he were here! to all, and him, we thirst,
And all to all.
Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.
Macb. Avant! and quit my sight! Let the earth hide thee!
Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with!
Lady M. Think of this, good peers,
But as a thing of custom: 'tis no other;
Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.
Macb. What man dare, I dare:
Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,
The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyren tiger,
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves
Shall never tremble: Or, be alive again,
And dare me to the desert with thy sword;
If trembling I inhibit thee, protest me
The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow!
[Ghost disappears.]
Unreal mockery, hence!—Why so;—being gone,
I am a man again.——Pray you, sit still.
Lady M. You have displac'd the mirth, broke the good meeting,
With most admired disorder.
Macb. Can such things be,
And overcome as us like a summer's cloud,
Without our special wonder? You make me
Even to the disposition that I owe,

Strange
When now I think you can behold such sights,
And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine are blanch'd with fear.
Rosse.

What sights, my lord?
Lady M. I pray you, speak not; he grows

Worse and worse:
Question enrages him: at once, good night:——
Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once.
Len.

Good night, and better health

Attend his majesty!

1. e. Good wishes. 2. Forbid. 3. Come over. 4. Possess.
And you all know, security
Is mortal's chiefest enemy.

SONG. [Within.] Come away, come away, &c.
Hark, I am call'd: my little spirit, see,
Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me. [Exit.
1 WITCH. Come, let's make haste; she'll soon be back again.

[Exit.

SCENE VI.—FORE. A ROOM IN THE PALACE.

Enter Lenox and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts,
Which can interpret further: only, I say,
Things have been strangely borne: The gracious Duncan
Was pitied of Macbeth—marry, he was dead:—
And the right-valiant Banquo walk'd too late;
Whom, you may say, if it please you, Fleance
kill'd,

For Fleance fled. Men must not walk too late.
Who cannot want the thought, how monstrous
It was for Malcolm, and for Donalbain,
To kill their gracious father? damned fact!
How it did grieve Macbeth! did he not straight,
In pious rage, the two delinquents tear, [sleep
That were the slaves of drink, and thralls of
Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely too;
For 'twould have angered any heart alive,
To hear the men deny it. So, that I say,
He has borne all things well: and I do think,
That, had he Duncan's sons under his key,
(As, an't please heaven, he shall not,) they should find
What 'twere to kill a father; so should Fleance.
But, peace!—for from broad words, and 'cause he fail'd
His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear,
Macduff lives in disgrace: Sir, can you tell
Where he bestows himself?

Lord. The son of Duncan,
From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth,
Lives in the English court; and is receiv'd
Of the most pious Edward with such grace,
That the malevolence of fortune nothing
Takes from his high respect: Thither Macduff
Is gone to pray the holy king, on his aid
To wake Northumberland, and warlike Siward;
That, by the help of these, (with Him above
To ratify the work,) we may again
Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights;
Free from our feasts and banquet's bloody knifes;
Do faithful homage, and receive free honours,
All which we pine for now: And this report
Hath so exasperate the king, that he Prepares for some attempt of war.

Len. Sent he to Macduff?
Lord. He did: and with an absolute, Sir, not I,
The cloudy messenger turns me his back,
And hums; as who should say, You'll rue the
That clogs me with this answer. [time
Len. And that well might Advise him to a caution, to hold what distance
His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel
Fly to the court of England, and unfold
His message ere he come: That a swift blessing
May soon return to this our suffering country
Under a hand accurs'd!

Lord. My prayers with him! [Exit.
Act Fourth.

SCENE I.—A DARK CAVE. IN THE MIDDLE, A CAULDRON BOILING.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1 Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd.
2 Witch. Thrice; and once the hedge-pig whin'd.
3 Witch. Harper cries:—"Tis time, 'tis time.
1 Witch. Round about the cauldron go; In the poison’d entrails throw.—
Toad, that under coldest stone, Days and nights hast thirty-one Swelter’d venom sleeping got, Boil thou first i’ the charmed pot!
All. Double, double toil and trouble; Fire, burn; and, cauldron, bubble.
2 Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake, In the cauldron boil and bake: Eye of newt, and toe of frog, Wool of bat, and tongue of dog, Adder’s fork, and blind-worm’s sting, Lizard’s leg, and owlet’s wing, For a charm of powerful trouble, Like a hell-broth and bubble. All. Double, double toil and trouble; Fire, burn; and, cauldron, bubble.
3 Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf; Witches’ mummy; maw, and gulf, Of the rav’nd3 salt-sea shark; Root of henloch, digg’d i’ the dark; Liver of blaspheming Jew; Gall of goat, and slips of yew, Sliver’d in the moon’s eclipse; Nose of Turk, and Tartar’s lips: Finger of birth-strangled babe, Ditch-deliver’d by a drab, Make the gruel thick and sib: Add thereto a tiger’s chauldron, For the ingredients of our cauldron. All. Double, double toil and trouble; Fire, burn; and, cauldron, bubble.
2 Witch. Cool it with a baboon’s blood, Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter Hecate.

Hec. O, well done! I commend your pains; And every one shall share i’ the gains. And now about the cauldron sing, Like elves and fairies in a ring, Enchanting all that you put in.

SONG.

Black spirits and white, Blue spirits and grey; Mingle, mingle, mingle, You that mingle may.

2 Witch. By the pricking of my thumbs, Something wicked this way comes: Open locks, whoever knocks.

Enter Macbeth.

M. How now, you secret, black, and midnight What is’t you do? [to hags? All. A deed without a name.
M. I conjure you, by that which you profess, 1 The throat. 2 Ravenous.

(How’er you come to know it,) answer me: Though you unite the winds, and let them fight Against the churches; though the yesty waves Confound and swallow navigation up; [down: Tho’ blazoned corn be lodg’d,1 and trees blown Though castles topple2 on their warders’ heads; Though palaces, and pyramids, do slope Their heads to their foundations; though the treasure Of nature’s germs tumble all together, Even till destruction sicken, answer me To what I ask you.

1 Witch. Speak.
2 Witch. Demand.
3 Witch. We’l answer. 1 Witch. Say, if thou’st rather hear it from Or from our masters? [our mouths, Macb. Call them, let me see them.
2 Witch. Pour in sows’ blood, that hath eaten Her nine farrow; grease, that’s sweaten From the murderer’s gibbet, throw Into the flame.
All. Come, high or low Thyself, and office, deftly4 show.

Thunder. An Apparition of an armed Head rises.

Macb. Tell me, thou unknown power,—
1 Witch. He knows thy thought;
Hear his speech, but say thou nought.
App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth! beware Macduff;
Beware the thane of Fife.—Dismiss me.—Enough. [Descends.

Macb. Whate’er thou art, for thy good caution thanks; [more.
Thou hast harp’d my fear arigeth:—But one word 1 Witch. He will not be commanded: Here’s More potent than the first. [another, Thunder. An Apparition of a bloody Child rises.

Macb. Then live, Macduff: What need I fear Of But yet I’ll make assurance double sure, [thee? And take a bond of fate: thou shalt not live; That I may tell pale-hearted fear, it lies, And sleep in spite of thunder.—What is this, Thunder. An Apparition of a Child crowned, with a tree in his hand, rises.

That rises like the issue of a king; And wears upon his baby brow the round And top of sovereignty? All. Listen, but speak not.
App. Be lion-mettled, proud; and take no care Who chafes, who frets, or where conspirers are: Macbeth shall never vanquish’d be, until Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill Shall come against him. [Descends, Macb. That will never be: Who can impress the forest; bid the tree Unfix his earth-bound root? sweet bodeiments! good!

1 Laid flat. 2 Tumble. 3 Seeds. 4 Dexterously.
Rebellious head, rise never, till the wood
Of Birnam rise, and our high-plac'd Macbeth
Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath
To time, and mortal custom.—Yet my heart
Throbs to know one thing: Tell me, (if your art
Can tell so much,) shall Banquo's issue ever Reign in this kingdom?

All.
Seek to know no more.

Macb. I will be satisfied: deny me this,
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me know:
Why sinks that cauldon! and what noise is this?

[Hautboys.

1 Witch. Show! 2 Witch. Show! 3 Witch. Show!
All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart;
Come like shadows, so depart.

Eight kings appear, and pass over the Stage in order; the last with a glass in his hand;
Banquo following.

Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo;
down! [hair.

Thy crown does scarce mine eyeballs:—And thy Thou other gold-bound bow, is like the first:—
A third is like the former:—Filthy hags!
Why do you show me this?—A fourth?—Start,
eyes!

What! will the line stretch out to the crack of Another yet?—A seventh!—I'll see no more:—
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass,
Which shows me many more; and some I see,
That two-fold balls and treble sceptres carry:
Horrible sight!—Ay, now, I see, 'tis true;
For the blood-bolter't! Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his.—What is this so?

1 Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so;—But why Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?—
Cone, sisters, cheer we up his spirits,
And show the best of our delights;
I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform you antique round:
That this great king may kindly say,
Our duties did his welcome pay.

Macb. Where are they? gone!—Let this pernicious hour
Stand aye accursed in the calendar!—
Come in, without there!

Enter Lenox.

Len. What's your grace's will?

Macb. Saw you the weird sisters?
Len. No, my lord.
Len. Came they not by you?
Len. No, indeed, my lord.
Macb. Infected be the air wherein they ride;
And damn'd, all those that trust them!—I did hear
The galloping of horse: Who was't came by?
Len. 'Tis two or three, my lord, that bring you
Macduff is fled to England. [word,

Fled to England?
Len. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. Time, thou anticipat'st my dread ex
The flighty purpose never is o'ertook, [plots:
Unless the deed go with it: From this moment,
The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now

To crown my thoughts with acts, be'thought and
The castle of Macduff I will surprise; [done;
Thee, his wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls
That trace his line. No boasting like a fool;
This deed I'll do, before this purpose cool:
But no morsels!—Where are these gentlemen?
Come, bring me where they are. [Exit.

SCENE II.

FIFE. A ROOM IN MACDUFF'S CASTLE.

Enter Lady Macduff, her Son, and Rosse.

L. Macd. What had he done, to make him fly the land?

Rosse. You must have patience, madam.

L. Macd. He had none:
His flight was madness: When our actions do
Our fears do make us traitors. [not,
Rosse. You know not,
Whether it was his wisdom or his fear.

L. Macd. Wisdom to leave his wife, to leave his
His mansion, and his titles, in a place [babes,
From whence himself does fly? He loves us not;
He wants the natural touch: for the poor wren,
The most diminutive of birds, will fight,
Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.
All is the fear, and nothing is the love;
As little is the wisdom, where the flight
So runs against all reason.

Rosse. My dearest coz,
I pray you, school yourself: But, for your husband,
He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows
The fits o' the season. I dare not speak much further:
But cruel are the times, when we are traitors,
And do not know ourselves; when we hold rumour
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear;
But float upon a wild and violent sea,
Each way, and move.—I take my leave of you:
Shall not be long but I'll be here again: [ward
Things at the worst will cease, or else climb up
To what they were before.—My pretty cousin,
Blessing upon you!

L. Macd. Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless.

Rosse. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer,
It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort:
I take my leave at once. [Exit Rosse.

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead;

And what will you do now? How will you live?
Son. As birds do, mother.

L. Macd. What, with worms and flies? Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do they.

L. Macd. Poor bird! thou'dst never fear the net, nor line,
The pit-fall, nor the gin.
Son. Why should I, mother? Poor birds they are not set for.
My father is not dead, for all your saying.

L. Macd. Yes, he is dead; how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband?

L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market.
Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.

L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit; and yet I' faith,
With wit enough for thee.
Son. Was my father a traitor, mother?
L. Macd. Ay, that he was.
Son. What is a traitor?
L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.
Son. And be all traitors, that do so?
L. Macd. Every one that does so, is a traitor, and must be hanged.
Son. And must they all be hanged, that swear
L. Macd. Every one. [and lie he]
Son. Who must hang them?
L. Macd. Why, the honest men.
Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools: for there are liars and swearers enough to beat the honest men, and hang up them.
L. Macd. Now, heaven help thee, poor monkey! But how wilt thou do for a father?
Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him: if you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.
L. Macd. Poor pratter! how thou talk'st.

Enter a Messenger.

M. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you known, Though in your state of honour I am perfect. I doubt, some danger does approach you nearly: If you will take a homely man's advice, Be not found here; hence, with your little ones. To fright you thus, methinks, I am too savage; To do worse to you, were fell cruelty, Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you!
I dare abide no longer. [Exit Messenger.]
L. Macd. Whither should I fly?
I have done no harm. But I remember now I am in this earthy world; where, to do harm, Is often laudable: to do good, sometime, Accounted dangerous folly: Why, then, alas! Do I put up that womanly defence, To say, I have done no harm! —What are these faces?

Enter Murderers.

Mur. Where is your husband?
L. Macd. I hope, in no place so unsanctified, Where such as thou mayst find him.
Mur. He's a traitor.
Son. Thou ly'st, thou shag-ear'd villain.
Young fry of treachery?
Son. He has kill'd me, mother;
Run away, I pray you. [Dies.
[Exit Lady Macduff, crying Murder, and pursued by the Murderers.

SCENE III.

ENGLAND. A ROOM IN THE KING'S PALACE.
Enter Malcolm and Macduff.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, Weep our sad bosoms empty.' [and there Macd.
Let us rather
Hold fast the mortal sword; and, like good men, Bestride our downfall'n birthdom: Each new morn, [sorrows
New widows howl; new orphans cry; new Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds As if it felt with Scotland, and yell'd out Like syllable of dolour.

1 Acquainted with your rank.

Macd. What I believe, I'll wait;
What know, believe; and, what I can redress, As I shall find the time to friend, I will.
What you have spoke, it may be so, perchance. This tyrant, whose sole name bistersour tongues, Was once thought honest; you have loved him well;
[something
He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young; but You may deserve of him through me; and wisdom To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb, To appease an angry god.

Mal. I am not treacherous.

Macd. But Macbeth is.
A good and virtuous nature may recoil,2
In an imperial charge. But crave your pardon, That which you are, my thoughts cannot transpose:
Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell:
Though all things foul would bear the brows of Yet grace must still look so. [Grace, Mнд.
I have lost my hopes, Mal. Perchance, even there, where I did find my doubts,
Why in that rawness3 left you wife, and child,
(Those precious motives, those strong notes of Without leave-taking?)—I pray you, [Love, Let not my jealousies be your dishonours,
But mine own safeties: —You may be rightly Whatever I shall think. [Just, Mнд.

Mal. Bleed, bleed, poor country! Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure,
For goodness dares not check thee! wear thou thy wrongs.
Thy title is affier'd! —Fare thee well, lord; I would not be the villain that thou think'st For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp, And the rich East to boot.

Mal. Be not offended; I speak not as in an absolute fear of you. I think our country sinks beneath the yoke: It weeps, it bleeds; and each new day a gash Is added to her wounds: I think, withal, There would be hands uplifted in my right; And here from gracious England, have I offer Of goodies thousands: But, for all this, When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head, Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country Shall have more vices than it had before; More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever, By him that shall succeed.

Mal. What should he be?
Mal. It is myself I mean: in whom I know All the particulars of vice so graft'd, That, when they shall be open'd, black Macbeth Will seem as pure as snow; and the poor state Esteem him as a lamb, being compar'd With my confines less harms.—I grant him bloody, Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful, Sudden,5 malicious, smacking of every sin That has a name; But there's no bottom, none, In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters, Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up The cistern of my lust; and my desire All continent impediments would o'erbear,

1 Befriend. 2 Recede from goodness. 4 Confirmed. 3 Unprepared. 5 Passionate.
That did oppose my will: Better Macbeth
Than such a one to reign.

_Mac._

Boundless intemperance
In nature is a tyranny; it hath been
The untimely emptying of the happy throne,
And fall of many kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours; you may Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hodd-wink.

_Mal._

With this, there grows,
In my most ill-compos'd affection, such
A staunchless avarice, that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands;
Desire his jewels, and this other's house:
And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make me hunger more; that I should forge
Quarrels unjust against the good, and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.

_Mac._

This avarice
Grows with pernicious root; and it hath been
The sword of our slain kings: Yet do not fear;
Scotland hath foysons to fill up your will,
Of your mere own: All these are portable,
With other graces weight'd.

_Mal._

But I have none: The king-becoming grace,
As justice, verity, temperance, stableness,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no relish of them; but abound
In the division of each several crime, [should Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power, I
Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

_Mac._

O Scotland! Scotland!

_Mal._

If such a one be fit to govern, speak:
I am as I have spoken.

_Mac._

Fit to govern?
No, not to live. - O nation miserable,
With an untitled tyrant bloody-scepter'd,
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again?
Since that the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands accur'd,
And does blaspheme his breed? Thy royal father
Was a most sainted king; the queen, that bore
Of her upon her knees than on her feet, [thee,
Died every day she liv'd. Fare thee well;
These evils, thou repeat'st upon thyself,
Have banish'd me from Scotland. - O, my
Thy hope ends here! [breast,

_Mal._

Macduff, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hath from my soul
Wip'd the black scruples, reconcil'd my thoughts
To thy good truth and honour. Devilish Macbeth
By many of these trains hath sought to win me
Into his power; and modest wisdom plucks me
From over-creduulous haste. But God above
Deal between thee and me! for even now
I put myself to thy direction, and Unspeak mine own detraction: here abjure
The taints and blames I laid upon myself,
For strangers to my nature. I am yet
Unknown to woman; never was forsworn;
Scarcely have coveted what was mine own;
At no time broke my faith; would not betray
The devil to his fellow; and delight

No less in truth than life: my first false speaking
Was this upon myself: What I am truly,
Is thine, and my poor country's, to command:
Whither, indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand warlike men,
All ready at a point, was setting forth:
Now we'll together; and the chance of goodness,
Be like our warranted quarrel! Why are you silent?

_Mac._

Such welcome and unwelcome things at
'Tis hard to reconcile.

_Enter a Doctor._

_Mal._

Well; more anon. - Comes the king forth, I pray you?

_Doc._

Ay, sir; there are a crew of wretched souls
That stay 1 his cure: their malady conveys
The great assay of art; but, at his touch,
Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand,
They presently amend.

_Mal._

I thank you, doctor. [Exit Doctor.

_Mac._

What's the disease he means?

_Mal._

'Tis call'd the evil:
A most miraculous work in this good king;
Which often, since my here-remain in England,
I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven,
Himself best knows; but strangely visited peo-
All swon and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye, [ple,
The mere despair of surgery, he cures;
Hanging a golden stamp 2 about their necks,
Put on with holy prayer: and 'tis spoken,
To the succeeding royalty he leaves [true,
The healing benediction. With this strange vir-
He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy;
And sundry blessings hang about his throne,
That speak him full of grace.

_Enter Rosse._

_Mal._

See, who comes here?

_Mal._

My countryman; but yet I know him not.

_Mal._

My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hither.

_Mal._

I know him now: Good heaven, betimes
The means that make us strangers! [Remove _Rosse._

Sirs, Amen.

_Mal._

Stands Scotland where it did?

_Rosse._

Alas, poor country;
Almost afraid to know itself! It cannot [ing,
Recall'd our mother, but ourgrave: where noth-
But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile;
Where sighs, and groans, and shrieks that rent
the air,

Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow
A modern ecstasy 4; the dead man's knell
Is there scarce ask'd, for who; and good men's Expire before the flowers in their caps, [lives
Dying, or ere they sicken.

_Mac._

O, relation,
Too nice, and yet too true!

_Mal._

What is the newest grief?

_Rosse._

Why, well.

_Mal._

And all my children?

_Rosse._

Well, too.

_M._

The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace?

1 Plently. 2 Bearable. 3 Over-hasty credulity.
Rosse. No; they were well at peace, when I did leave them. [goes it?

Macc. Be not a niggard of your speech; How? When I came hither to transport the tidings, Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour Of many worthy fellows that were out: Which was to my belief witness'd the rather, For that I saw the tyrant's power a-foot: Now is the time of help; your eye in Scotland Would create soldiers, make our women fight, To doff their dire distresses.

Macc. Be it their comfort, We are coming thither: gracious England hath Lent us good Siward, and ten thousand men; An older, and a better soldier none That Christendom gives out.

Rosse. Would I could answer This comfort with the like! But I have words That would be hol'd out in the desert air, Where hearing should not latch 2 them.

Macc. What concern they? The general cause? or is it a fee-grief, 3 Due to some single breast?

Rosse. No mind that's honest, But in it shares some woe; though the main part Pertains to you alone.

Macc. If it be mine, Keep it not from me, quickly let me have it.

R. Let not your ears despise my tongue for ever, Which shall possess them with the heaviest That ever yet they heard. [sound, Macc. Humph! I guess at it.

R. Your castle is surpris'd; your wife and babes, Savagely slaughter'd! to relate the manner, Were, on the quarry 4 of these murder'd deer, To add the death of you.

Macc. Merciful heaven!— What, man! ne'er pull your hat upon your brows; Give sorrow words: the grief that does not speak, Whispers the o'er-fraught heart, and bids it Macc. My children too? [break. Rosse. Wife, children, servants, all That could be found.

Macc. And I must be from thence? My wife kill'd too?

Rosse. I have said.

Macc. Be comforted: Let's make us medicines of our great revenge, To cure this deadly grief.

Macc. He has no children.—All my pretty ones? Did you say, all?—O, hell kite!—All? What, all my pretty chickens, and their dam, At one fell swoop?

Macc. Dispute it like a man.

Macc. But I must also feel it as a man: I cannot but remember such things were, [on, That were most precious to me.—Did heaven look And would not take their part? Sinful Macduff, They were all struck for thee! naught that I am, Not for their own demerits, but for mine, [now! Fell slaughter on their souls: Heaven rest them

Macc. Be this the whetstone of your sword: let grief

Convert to anger; blunt not the heart, enrage it.

Macc. I could play the woman with mine eyes,

And braggart with my tongue!—But, gentle heaven, Cut short all intermission; front to front, Bring thou this fiend of Scotland, and myself; Within my sword's length set him; if he 'scape, Heaven forgive him too!

Macc. This tune goes manly. Come, go we to the king; our power is ready; Our lack is nothing but our leave: Macbeth Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above [may: Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer you The night is long that never finds the day.

[Exeunt.

Act Fifth.

SCENE I.

DUNSINANE. A ROOM IN THE CASTLE.

Enter a Doctor of Physick, and a waiting Gentlewoman.

Doc. I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walked?

Gen. Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her night-gown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon it, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed: yet all this while in a most fast sleep.

D. A great perturbation in nature! to receive at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching.—In this slumber agitation, besides her walking, and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her say?

Gen. That, sir, which I will not report after her.

Doc. You may, to me; and 'tis most meet you should.

Gen. Neither to you, nor any one; having no witness to confirm my speech.

Enter Lady Macbeth, with a taper.

Lo you, here she comes! This is her very guise: and, upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her; stand close.

Doc. How came she by that light?

Gen. Why, it stood by her: she has light by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doc. You see, her eyes are open.

Gen. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doc. What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands.

Gen. It is an accustomed action with her, to seem thus washing her hands; I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady M. Yet here's a spot.

Doc. Hark, she speaks: 'I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly.

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say!— One; Two; Why, then 'tis time to do't:— Hell is murky!—Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afear'd? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account?—Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?

1 Dark.
SC. I.

MACBETH.

Doct. Do you mark that?
Lady M. The thane of Fife had a wife; Where is she now?—What, will these hands ne’er be clean?—No more o’that, my lord, no more o’that: you mar all with this starting.
Doct. Go to, go to; you have known what you should not.
Gent. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that: Heaven knows what she has known.
Lady M. Here’s the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh! oh! oh!
Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charged.
Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosom, for the dignity of the whole body.
Doct. Well, well, well,—
Gent. Pray God, it be, sir.
Doct. This disease is beyond my practice: Yet I have known those which have walked in their sleep, who have died holily in their beds.
Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your night-gown; look not so pale: I tell you yet again, Banquo’s buried; he cannot come out of his grave.
Doct. Even so?
Lady M. To bed, to bed; there’s knocking at the gate. Come, come, come, come, give me your hand: What’s done, cannot be undone: To bed, to bed, to bed. [Exit Lady Macbeth.
Doct. Will she go now to bed?
Gent. Directly.

SCENE I.—THE COUNTRY NEAR DUNSinANE.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, Montcler, Cathness, Angus, Lenox, and Soldiers.

Ment. The English power is near, led on by Mal-His uncle Siward, and the good Macduff. Colom, Revenues burn in them: for their dear causes Would, to the bleeding, and the grim alarm, Exite the mortified man.
Ang. Near Birnam wood [coming. Shall we well meet them; that way are they C. WhoknowsifDonalbain bewithhisbrother? Len. For certain, sir, he is not: I have a file Of all the gentry; there is Siward’s son, And many unrough youts, that even now Protest their first of manhood.
Ment. What does the tyrant? Cath. Great Dunsinane, he strongly fortifies: Some say, he’s mad; others, that lesser hate him, Do call it villainy: but, for certain, He cannot buckle his distemper’d cause Within the belt of rule.
Ang. Now does he feel His secret murders sticking on his hands;

Now minutely revolts upbraid his faith-breach: Those he commands, move only in command, Nothing in love: now does he feel his title Hang loose about him, like a giant’s robe Upon a dwarfish thief.

Ment. Who then shall blame His pester’d senses to recoil and start, When all that is within him does condemn Itself for being there?
Cath. Well, march we on, To give obedience where ’tis truly ow’d: Meet we the medicin of the sickly weal? And with him pour we, in our country’s purge, Each drop of us.
Len. Or so much as it needs, To dew the sovereign flower, and drown the Make we our march towards Birnam. [weeds. [Exeunt marching.

SCENE III.

DUNSinANE. A ROOM IN THE CASTLE.

Enter Macbeth, Doctor, and Attendants.

M. Bring me no more reports; let them fly all; Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane, I cannot taint with fear. What’s the boy Malcolm? Was he not born of woman? The spirits that know All mortal consequents, pronounce me thus:
Fear not, Macbeth; no man, that’s born of woman, Shall e’er have power on thee.——Then fly, false And mingle with the English epicsures: [thanes, The mind I sway by, and the heart I bear, Shall never sage with doubt, nor shake with fear.

Enter a Servant.

Thou cream-fac’d loon! where gott’st thou that goose look?
Serv. There is ten thousand——
Macb. Geese, villain?
Serv. Soldiers, sir.
Mac. Go prick thy face, and over-red thy fear, Thou lily-liver’d boy. What soldiers, patch? Death of thy soul! those linon cheeks of thine Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, whey-face?
Serv. The English force, so please you.
Macb. Take thy face hence, — Seyton! — I am sick at heart.
When I behold—Seyton, I say! —This push Will cheer me ever, or disseat me now. I have liv’d long enough: my May of life Is fall’n into the ear, the yellow leaf: And that which should accompany old age, As honour, love, obedience, troop of friends, I must not look to have: but, in their stead, Curses not loud, but deep, mouth honour, breath, Which the poor heart would fain deny, but dare Seyton! —[not.

Enter Seyton.

Sey. What is your gracious pleasure?
Macb. What news more?
Sey. All is confirm’d, my lord, which was reported.
Macb. I’ll fight, till from my bones my flesh Give me my amour. [be hack’d.

1 The physician. 2 Base fellow. 3 Welfare. 4 Unbearded.
Tis not needed yet.
Macb. I'll put it on.
Send out more horses, skirt the country round;
Hang those that talk of fear.—Give me mine armour.

How does your patient, doctor?
Doct. Not so sick, my lord,
As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies,
That keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her of that.
Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas'd;
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow;
Raze out the written troubles of the brain;
And with some sweet oblivious antidote,
Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff,
Which weighs upon the heart?

Doct. Therein the patient
Must minister to himself.
M. Throw physic to the dogs, I'll none of it. —
Come, put mine armour on; give me my staff:
Seyton, send out.—Doctor, the thanes fly from me: —
Come, sir, despatch:—If thou couldst, doctor,
The water of my land, find her disease, [cast
And purge it to a sound and pristine health,
I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.—Pull't off, I say. —
What rhubarb, senna, or what purgative drug,
Would scour these English hence!—Hearest thou of them?

Doct. Ay, my good lord; your royal preparation
Makes us hear something.

Macb. Bring it after me. —
I will not be afraid of death and bane,
Till Birnam forest come to Dunsinane. [Exit.
Doct. Were I from Dunsinane away and clear,
Profit again should hardly draw me here. [Exit.

SCENE IV.

COUNTRY NEAR DUNSIANE. A WOOD IN VIEW.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, Malcolm, old Siward and his Son, Macduff, Montoth, Cathness, Angus, Lenox, Rosse, and Soldiers, marching.

Mal. Cousins, I hope, the days are near at hand
That chamber will be safe.

Ment. We doubt it nothing.
Siw. What wood is this before us?
Ment. The wood of Birnam.
Mal. Let every soldier hew him down a bough,
And bear't before him; thereby shall we shadow
The numbers of our host, and make discovery
Err in report of us.

Sold. It shall be done.
St. We learn nother, but the confident tyrant Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure
Our setting down before't.
Mal. 'Tis his main hope:
For where there is advantage to be given,
Both more and less have given him the revolt:
And none serve with him but constrained things,
Whose hearts are absent too.

Macb. Let our just censures
Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldiership.
I 'gin to be a-weary of the sun,
And wish the estate of the world were now underring the alarum bell:—Blow, wind! come, wrack! At least we'll die with harness on our back.

SCENE VI.—A PLAIN BEFORE THE CASTLE.
Enter, with Drums and Colours, Malcolm, old Siward, Macduff, &c., and their Army, with Boughs.

Mal. Now near enough; your leavy screens throw down, And show like those you are:—You, worthy uncle, Shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son, Lead our first battle; worthy Macduff, and we, Shall take upon us what else remains to do, According to our order.

Siv. Fare you well—
Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night, Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macd. Make all our trumpets speak; give them all breath, Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death.

[Exeunt. Alarum.

SCENE VII.—ANOTHER PART OF THE PLAIN.
Enter Macbeth.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake; I cannot fly, But, bear-like, I must fight the course. —What's That was not born of woman? Such a one [he, Am I to fear, or none.

Enter Young Siward.

Y. Siv. What is thy name?

Macb. Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.

Y. Siv. No; though thou call'st thyself a Than any is in hell.

[Hotter name

Macb. My name's Macbeth.

Y. Siv. The devil himself could not pronounce More hateful to mine ear.

[Exeunt. Alarum.

More fearful.

Y. Siv. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant; with my I'll prove thee speak'st.

[Exeunt. Alarum.

They fight, and young Siward is slain.

Macb. Thou wast born of woman.

But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn, Brandish'd by man that's of a woman born.

[Exeunt. Alarum.

Enter Macduff.

Macb. That way the noise is:—Tyrant, show thy face: If thou be'st a man, and with no stroke of mine, My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me still. I cannot strike at wretched kerns, to whose arms Are hir'd to bear their staves; either thou, Macd. Or else my sword, with an unblunted edge, [both, I'll smite them again unheed. There thou shouldst By this great clatter, one of greatest note [be; Seem bruised: I let me find him, fortune! And more I beg not.

[Exeunt. Alarum.

Enter Malcolm and old Siward.

Siv. This way, my lord:—the castle's gently render'd: The tyrant's people on both sides do fight:

1 Raw foot soldiers, 2 Noised.

The noble thanes do bravely in the war; The day almost itself professes yours, And little is to do.

Mal. We have met with foes That strike beside us.

[Exeunt. Alarum.

Re-enter Macbeth.

Macb. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die On mine own sword? whiles I see lives, the Do better upon them.

[Exeunt. Alarum.

Re-enter Macduff.

Macd. Turn, hell-hound, turn.

Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee: But, get thee back, my soul is too much charg'd With blood of thine already.

Macd. I have no words, My voice is in my sword; thou bloodier villain Than terms can give thee out! [They fight.

Macb. Thou losest labour: As easy mayst thou the intrenchant 1 air With thy keen sword impress, as make me bleed: Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests; I bear a charmed life, which must not yield To one of woman born.

Macd. Despair thy charm; And let the angel, whom thou still hast serv'd, Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb Untimely ripp'd.

Macb. Accursed be that tongue that tells me For it hath cow'd my better part of man! [so, And be these juggling fiends no more belief'd, That paller 2 with us in a double sense; That keep the word of promise to our ear, And break it to our hope. —I'll not fight with Macd. Then yield thee, coward, [thee. And live to be the show and gaze o' the time. We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are, Painted upon a pole: and underwrit, Here may you see the tyrant.

Macb. I'll not yield, To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet, And to be baited with the rabble's curse. Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane, And thou oppos'd, being of no woman born, Yet I will try the last: Before my body I throw my warlike shield: lay on, Macduff: And damn'd be him that first cries, Hold, enough.

[Exeunt fighting.

Mal. I would, the friends we miss were safe arriv'd.

Siv. Some must go off; and yet, by these I see, So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son, Ros. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt: He only liv'd but till he was a man; The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd In the unshrinking station where he fought, But like a man he died.

Siv. Then he is dead?
Ros. Ay, and brought off the field: your cause of sorrow
Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.
Siv. Had he his hurts before?
Ross. Ay, on the front.
Siv. Why then, God's soldier be he!
Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death:
And so his knell is knoll'd.
Mal. He's worth more sorrow,
And that I'll spend for him.
Siv. He's worth no more;
They say he parted well, and paid his score:
So God be with him. --Here comes newer comfort.
Re-enter Macduff, with Macbeth's head on a pole.
Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art: Behold, where stands
The usurper's cursed head: the time is free:
I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl,
That speak my salutation in their minds;
Whose voices I desire aloud with mine,—
Hail, king of Scotland!
All. King of Scotland, hail! [Flourish.
Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of time,
Before we reckon with your several loves, [men,
And make use even with you. My thanes and kinsmen,
Henceforth be ears, the first that ever Scotland,
In such an honour nam'd. What's more to do,
Which would be planted newly with the time,—
As calling home our exiled friends abroad,
That fled the snares of watchful tyranny;
Producing forth the cruel ministers
Of this dead butcher, and his fiend-like queen;
Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands
Took off her life.—This, and what needful else
That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace,
We will perform in measure, time, and place:
So thanks to all at once, and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.
[Flourish. Exit.

Scene.—Sometimes in England, and sometimes in France.

Act First.

Scene I.—Northampton.

A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter King John, Queen Elinor, Pembroke, Essex, Salisbury, and others, with Chatillon.
K. John. Now, say, Chatillon, what would France with us?
Chat. Thus, after greeting, speaks the king of France,
In my behaviour, to the majesty,
The borrow'd majesty of England here.

Eli. A strange beginning;—borrow'd majesty!
K. John. Silence, good mother; hear the embassy.
Chat. Philip of France, in right and true behalf
Of thy deceased brother Geoffrey's son,
Arthur Plantagenet, lays most lawful claim
To this fair island, and the territories;
To Ireland, Poictiers, Anjou, Touraine, Maine;
Desiring thee to lay aside the sword,
Which sways usurpingly these several titles;
And put the same into young Arthur's hand,
Thy nephew, and right royal sovereign.
K. John. What follows, if we disallow of this?
K. John. A good blunt fellow:—Why, being younger born,
Doth he lay claim to thine inheritance?
Bast. I know not why, except to get the land.
But once he slander'd me with bastardy:
But wher' I be as true-begot, or no,
That still I lay upon my mother's head:
But, that I am as well begot, my liege,
Compare our faces, and be judge yourself.
If old Sir Robert did beget us both,
And were our father, and this son like him;—
O old Sir Robert, father, on my knee,
I give heaven thanks, I was not like to thee.
K. John. Why, what a madcap hath heaven lent us here!
Eli. He hath a trick1 of Coeur-de-lion's face,
The accent of his tongue affecteth him:
Do you not read some tokens of my son
In the large composition of this man? [parts,
K. John. Mine eye hath well examined his
And finds them perfect Richard.—Sirrah, speak,
[land?] What doth move you to claim your brother's
D. Because he hath a half-face, like my father:
With that half-face would he have all my land:
A half-faced great2 five hundred pound a year!
R. My gracious liege, when that my father liv'd,
Your brother did employ my father much;
And once despatch'd him in an embassy
To Germany, there, with the emperor,
To treat of high affairstouching that time:
The advantage of his absence took the king,
And in the mean time sojourn'd at my father's;
Where how he did prevail, I shame to speak;
But truth is truth; large lengths of seas and Between my father and my mother lay, (shores
(As I have heard my father speak himself,
When this lusty gentleman was got.)
Upon his death-bed he by will bequeath'd
His lands to me; and took it, on his death,
That this my mother's son, was none of his;
And, if he were, he came into the world
Full fourteen weeks before the course of time.
Then, good my liege, let me have what is mine,
My father's land, as was my father's will.
K. John. Sirrah, your brother is legitimate;
Your father's wife did after wedlock bear him:
And, if she did play false, the fault was hers;
Which fault lies on the hazards of all husbands
That marry wives. Tell me, how if my brother
Had of your father claim'd this son for his?
In sooth, good friend, your father might have kept him:
Insooth, he might: then, if he were my brother's,
My brother might not claim him; nor your father's Being none of his, refuse him: This concludes,—
Your father's heir must have your father's land.
Rob. Shall then my father's will be of no force,
To dispossess that child which is not his?
Bast. Of no more force to dispossess me, sir,
Than was his will to get me, as I think.
Eli. Whether hast thou rather,—be a Faulconbridge,
And like thy brother, to enjoy thy land;
1 Tracing.
2 Sneeringly comparing his meagre visage to the half profile on the silver great.
Or the reputed son of Cœur-de-lion,
Lord of thy presence and no land beside?

Bast. Madam, an if my brother had my shape,
And I had his, Sir Robert his, like him:
And if my legs were two such riding-rods,
My arms such eel-skins stuffed; my face so thin,
That in mine ear I durst not stick a rose,
Lest men should say, Look, where three-far-things goes!

And to his shape, were heir to all this land,
'Would I might never stir from off this place,
I'd give it every foot to have this face;
I would not be Sir Nob in any case.

Eliz. I like thee well; Wilt thou forsake thy fortune,
Bequeath thy land to him, and follow me?
I am a soldier, and now bound to France.

Bast. Brother, take you my hand, I'll take my chance:
Your face hath got five hundred pounds a year;
Yet sell your face for five pence, and, 'tis dear.—

Madam, I'll follow you unto the death.

Eliz. Nay, I would have you go before me this time.

Bast. Our country manners give us betters.

K. John. What is thy name? [way.

Bast. Philip, my liege; so is my name begun

Philip, good old Sir Robert's wife's eldest son.

K. John. From henceforth bear his name

Whose form thou bear'st?

Kneel thou down Philip, but arise more great:

Arise Sir Richard, and Plantagenet.

Bast. Brother, by my mother's side, give me your hand;

My father gave me honour, yours gave land.

Eliz. The very spirit of Plantagenet—

I am thy grandame, Richard; call me so.

Bast. Madam, by chance, but not by truth:

What though? [thy desire.

K. John. Go, Faulconbridge; now hast thou

A landless knight makes thee a landed squire.

Come, madam, and come, Richard; we must speed
For France, for France; for it is more than need.

Bast. Brother, adieu; good fortune come to
For thou was got i' the way of honesty. [thee!

[Exeunt all but the Bastard.

A foot of honour better than I was;
But many a foot of land the worse.

Well, now can I make any Joan a lady:

Good day, Sir Richard,—

And if his name be George, I'll call him Peter;

For new made honour doth forget men's names;

'Tis too respective, and too sociable,

For your conversion. Now your traveller,—

He and his tooth-pick at my worship's mess;

And when my knightly stomach is suff'ced,

Why then I suck my teeth and catechise

My picked man of countries:—

My dear sir,
(Thick, leaning on mine elbow, I begin,

I shall beseech you—That is question now;
And then comes answer like an ABC-book:—

O sir, says answer, at your best command;

At your employment; at your service, sir;
No, sir, says question, I, sweet sir, at yours;

And so, ere answer knows what question would,

(Saving in dialogue of compliment;

And talking of the Alps, and Apennines,

1 Good evening. 2 My travelled top.

The Pyrenean, and the river Po.)

It draws towards supper in conclusion so.

But this is worshipful society,

And fits the mounting spirit, like myself:

And not alone in habit and device,

Exterior form, outward accoutrement;

But from the inward motion to deliver

Sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the age's teeth:

Which, though I will not practise to deceive,

Yet, to avoid deceit, I mean to learn;

For it shall shrew the footsteps of my rising.—

But who comes in such haste, in riding robes?

What woman-post is this? hath she no husband,

That will take pains to blow a horn before her?

Enter Lady Faulconbridge and James Gurney.

O me! it is my mother.—How now, good lady?

What brings you here to court so hastily?

Lady F. Where is that slave, thy brother?

where is he?

That holds in chase mine honour up and down?

Bast. My brother Robert? old Sir Robert's son?

Colbrand the giant, that same mighty man?

Is it Sir Robert's son, that you seek so? [boy.

Lady F. Sir Robert's son! Ay, thou unrevendred

Sir Robert's son: Why scorn'st thou at Sir Robert?

He is Sir Robert's son; and so art thou.

Bast. James Gurney, wilt thou give us leave

Our, Good leave, I, good Philip. [awhile?

Bast. Philip?—sparrow!—James,

There's toys abroad; anon I'll tell thee more.

[Exit Gurney.

Lady F. Hast thou conspired with thy brother too?

That for thine own gain shouldst defend mine honour?

[Knave.

What means this scorn, thou most untoward

Bast. Knight, knight, good mother,—Basilisco like; 3

What! I am dubb'd; I have it on my shoulder.

But, mother, I am not Sir Robert's son;

I have disclaim'd Sir Robert, and my land;

Legitimation, name, and all is gone:

Then, good my mother, let me know my father;

Some proper man, I hope; Who was it, mother?

Lady F. Hast thou denied thyself a Faulconbridge?

Bast. As faithfully as I deny the devil.

Lady F. King Richard Cœur-de-lion was thy father;

By long and vehement suit I was seduced;

Heaven lay not on my transgression to my charge!

Thou art the issue of my great offence,

Which was so strongly urg'd, past my defence.

Bast. Madam, I would not wish a better father.

Some sins do bear their privilege on earth,

And so doth yours; your fault was not your folly;

Needs must you lay your heart at his dispose,—

Subjected tribute to commanding love,—

Against whose fury and unmatched force

The aweful lion could not wage the fight,

Nor keep his princely heart from Richard's hand.

He that perf'rest robs lions of their hearts,

May easily win a woman's.

[Exeunt.
Act Second.

SCENE I.

FRANCE. BEFORE THE WALLS OF ANGERS.

Enter, on one side, the Archduke of Austria; and Forces; on the other, Philip King of France, and Forces; Lewis, Constance, Arthur, and Attendants.

Leu. Before Angiers well met, brave Austria. Arthur, that great fore-runner of thy blood, Richard, that robb’d the lion of his heart, and fought the holy wars in Palestine, By this brave duke came early to his grave: And, for amends to his posterity, At our importance, 1 hither is he come, To spread his colours, boy, in thy behalf; And to rebuke the usurpation Of thy unnatural uncle, English John: Embrace him, love him, give him welcome hither.

Arth. Heaven will forgive you Cour-de-lion’s Therather, that you give his offspring life, (decdn) 2 Shadowing their right under your wings of war: I give you welcome with a powerless hand, But with a heart full of unstained love: Welcome before the gates of Angiers, duke.

Leu. A noble boy! Who would not do thee right?

Aust. Upon thy cheek lay I this zealos kiss, As seal to this indurent of my love; That to my home I will no more return, Till Angiers, and the right thou hast in France, Together with that pale, that white-face’d shore, Whose foot spurs back the ocean’s roaring tides, And coops from other lands her islanders, Even till that England, hedg’d in with the main, The water-walled bulwark, still secure And confident from foreign purposes, Even till that utmost corner of the west Salute thee for her king: till then, fair boy, Will I not think of home, but follow arms.

Const. O, take his mother’s thanks, a widow’s thanks, Till your strong hand shall help to give him strength, To make a more requital to your love.

Aust. The peace of heaven is theirs, that lift their swords In such a just and charitable war.

K. Phi. Well then, to work; our cannon shall Against the brows of this resisting town, Call for our chiefest men of discipline, To call the plots of best advantages:— We’ll lay before this town our royal bones, Wade to the market-place in Frenchmen’s blood, But we will make it subject to this boy.

Const. Stay for an answer to your embassy, Lest unadvised you stain your swords with blood: My lord Chatillon may from England bring That right in peace, which here we urge in war; And then we shall repent each drop of blood, That hot rash haste so indirectly shed.

Enter Chatillon.

K. Phi. A wonder, lady!—lo, upon thy wish, Our messenger Chatillon is arriv’d,— What England says, say briefly, gentle lord,

We coldly pause for thee; Chatillon, speak.

Ch. Then turn your forces from this paltry siege, And stir them up against a mightier task. England, impatient of your just demands, Hath put himself in arms; the adverse winds, Whose leisure I have staid, have given him time To land his legions all as soon as 1: His marches are expedient 2 to this town, His forces strong, his soldiers confident. With him along is come the mother-queen, An 3 Ath, 4 stirring him to blood and strife; With her her niece, the lady Blanch of Spain; With them a bastard of the king deceas’d: And all the unsettled humours of the land,— Rash, inconsiderate, fiery voluntaries, With ladies’ faces, and fierce dragons’ spleens,— Have sold their fortunes at their native homes, Bearing their birthrights proudly on their backs, To make a hazard of new fortunes here. In brief, a braver choice of dauntless spirits, Than now the English bottoms have waft o’er Did never float upon the swelling tide, To do offence and scath 3 in Christendom. The interruption of their churlish drums [Drums beat.

Cuts off more circumstance: they are at hand, To parley, or to fight; therefore, prepare.

K. P. How much unlook’d for this expedition!

Aust. By how much unexpected, by so much We must awake endeavour for defence; For courage mounted with occasion: Let them be welcome then, we are prepar’d.

Enter King John, Elinor, Blanch, the Bastard, Pembroke, and Forces.

K. John. Peace be to France; if France in peace permit Our just and lineal entrance to our own! If not; bleed France, and peace ascend to heaven. Whiles we, God’s wrathful agent, do correct Their proud contempt that beat his peace to heaven.

K. Phi. Peace be to England: if that war From France to England, there to live in peace! England we love: and, for that England’s sake, With burden of our armour hear we sweat: This toll of ours should be a work of thine; But thou from loving England art so far, That thou hast under-wrought his lawful king, Cut off the sequence of posterity, Outfaced infant state, and done a rape Upon the maiden virtue of the crown. Look here upon thy brother Geffrey’s face:— These eyes, these brows, were moulded out of his: This little abstract doth contain that large, Which died in Geffrey; and the hand of time Shall draw this brief 4 into as huge a volume. That Geffrey was thy elder brother born, And this his son; England was Geffrey’s right, And this is Geffrey’s: In the name of God, How comes it then, that thou art call’d a king, When living blood doth in these temples beat, Which owes the crown that thou o’ermasterest?

K. John. From whom hast thou this great commission, France, To draw my answer from thy articles?

1 Expediting. 2 The goddess of revenge. 3 Mischief. 4 Own. 5 Little one.
K. Phi. From that supernal judge, that stirs good thoughts
  In any breast of strong authority,
  To look into the blots and stains of right.
That judge hath made me guardian to this boy:
Under whose warrant, I impeach thy wrong;
And, by whose help, I mean to chastise it.

K. John. Alack, thou dost usurp authority.
K. Phi. Excuse; it is to bea usurping down.
 Elliott. Who is it, thou dost call usurper, France?
 Con. Let me make answer;—thy usurping son.
 Elliott. Out, insolent! thy bastard shall be king:
  That thou mayst be a queen, and check the world!
 Const. My bed was ever to thy son as true,
  As thine was to thy husband; and this boy
    Liker in feature to his father Geoffrey,
Than thou and John in manners; By my soul, I
His father never was so true begot; [think
  It cannot be, an if thou wert his mother.
 Elliott. There's a good mother, boy, that blots thy father.
 Const. There's a good grandam, boy, that would blot thee.

Aust. Peace!

Bost. Hear the crier.

Aust. What art thou?

Bost. One that will play the devil, sir, with
  An 'a may catch thy hide and you alone. [you
  You are the hare of whom the proverb goes,
  Whose valour plucks dead lions by the beard;
  I'll smoke your skin-coat, as I catch you right:
    Sirrah, look to't; I'm faith, I will, I'm faith.

Blanch. O, well did he become that lion's robe,
That did disrobe the lion of that robe!

Bost. It lies as sightly on the back of him,
As great Alcides' shoes upon an ass—
  But, ass, I'll take that burden from your back;
    Or lay on that, shall make your shoulders crack.

Aust. What cracker is this same, that deafts our ears

With this abundance of superfluous breath?

K. Phi. Lewis, determine what we shall do straight.

L. Women and fools, break off your confer-
King John, this is the very sum of all,—[ence
England, and Ireland, Anjou, Touraine, Maine,
In right of Arthur do I claim of thee;
Wilt thou resign them, and lay down thy arms?
K. John. My life as soon:—I do defy thee,
  France.

Arthur of Bretagne, yield thee to my hand;
And, out of my dear love, I'll give thee more
  Than e'er the coward hand of France can win:
Submit thee, boy.

Elliott. Come to thy grandam, child.

Const. Do, child, go to it! grandam, child;
Give grandam kingdom, and it' grandam will Give it a plum, a cherry, and a fig:
There's a good grandam.

Arth. Good my mother, peace!
I would, that I were low laid in my grave;
I am not worth this coil! that's made for me.

Elliott. His mother shames him so, poor boy, he weeps.

[no!

Co. Now shame upon me, whe'er she does, or His grandam's wrongs, and not his mother's shames,

1 Bustle.

Draw those heaven-moving pearls from his poor
Which heaven shall take in nature of a fee;[eyes, Ay, with these crystal beads heaven shall be brib'd
To do him justice, and revenge on you. [earth!

Elliott. Thou monstrous slanderer of heaven and Const. Thou monstrous injurer of heaven and earth!

Call not me slanderer; thou, and thine, usurp
The dominations, royalties, and rights,
Of this oppressed boy: This is thy eldest son's
  Infortune in nothing but in thee; [son,

Thy sins are visited in this poor child.

K. John. Bcldam, have done

Const. I have but this to say,—
  That he's not only plagued for her sin,
  But God hath made her sin and her the plague
On this removed issue, plagui'd for her,
  And with her plague, her sin; his injury
  Her injury, the beadle to her sin;
    All punish'd in the person of this child,
  And all for her; a plague upon her!

Elliott. Thou unadvised scold, I can produce
A will that bars the title of thy son.

Co. Ay, who doubts that? a will! a wicked will;
  A woman's will; a canker'd grandam's will!

K. P. Peace, lady; pause, or be more temper.
It ill beseems this presence, to cry aint! [ate:

To these ill-tuned repetitions.—

Some trumpet summon hither to the walls
These men of Angiers; let us hear them speak,
Whose title they admit, Arthur's or John's.

Trumpet's sound. Enter Citizens upon the Walls.

1 Cit. Who is it that hath warn'd us to the K. Phi. 'Tis France, for England. [walls?

K. John. England, for itself:

You men of Angiers, and my loving subjects,—

K. Phi. You loving men of Angiers, Arthur's subjects,

Our trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle. 2

K. John. For our advantage;—Therefore hear us first.—

These flags of France, that are advanced here
Before the eye and prospect of your town,
Have hither march'd to your endamage:
  The cannons have their bowels full of wrath;
    And ready mounted are they to spit forth
    Their iron indignation 'gainst your walls:
        All preparation for a bloody siege,
And merciless proceeding by these French,
  Confront your city's eyes, your winking gates;
    And, but for our approach, those sleeping stones,
    That as a waist do girdle you about,
By the compulsion of their ordinance
By this time from their fixed beds of lime
Hadh had dishabited, and wide havoc made
For bloody power to rush upon your peace.
But, on the sight of us, your lawful king;
  Who painfully with much expedient march,
Have brought a countercheck before your gates,
To save unscratch'd your city's threatened checks.

Behold, the French, amaz'd, vouclsafe a parle:
And, now, instead of bullets wrapp'd in fire,
To make a shaking fever in your walls,
They shoot but calm words, folded up in smoke,

1 Encouragement.  2 Conference.
To make a faithless error in your ears: Which trust accordingly, kind citizens, And let us, in your king; whose labour'd spirits, Forwaried in this action of swift speed, Crave harbourage within your city walls. K. Pho. When I have said, make answer to us Lo, in this right hand, whose protection, 'tis Most divinely vow'd upon the right Of him it holds, stands young Plantagenet; Son to the elder brother of this man, And king o'er him, and all that he enjoys: For this down-troden equity, we tread In warlike march these grecus before your town; Being no further enemy to you, Than the constraint of hospitable zeal, In the relief of this oppressed child, Religiously provokes. Be pleased then To pay that duty, which you truly owe, To him that owes it; namely, this young prince: And then our arms, like to a muzzled bear, Save in aspect, have all offence seal'd up; Our cannons' malice vially shall be spent Against the invulnerable clouds of heaven; And, with a blessed and unvex'd retire, [brus'd, With unlaback'd swords, and helmets all un], We will bear home that lusty blood again, Which here we came to spout against your town, And leave your children, wives, and you in peace. But if you fondly pass our profiler's offer, 'Tis not the roundrude 8 of your old-fac'd walls Can hide you from our messengers of war: Though all these English, and their discipline, Were harbour'd in their rude circumference. Then, tell us, shall your city call us lord, In that behalf which we have charg'd it? Or shall we give the signal to our rage, And stalk in blood to our possession? 1 Cit. In brief, we are the king of England's subjects; For him, and in his right, we hold this town. K. John. Acknowledge then the king, and let me in. [king, 1 C. That can we not: but he that proves the To him will we prove loyal; till that time, Have we ramm'd up our gates against the world. K. J. Doth not the crown of England prove the And, if not that, I bring you witnesses, [king? Twice fifteen thousand hearts of England To verify our title with their lives. [breed, — K. P. As many, and as well-born as Stand in his face to contradict his claim. [those, 1 Cit. Till you compound whose right is worthiest, We, for the worthiest, hold the right from both. K. J. Then God forgive the sin of all those That to their everlasting residence, [souls, Before the dew of evening fall, shall fleet, In dreadful trial of our Kingdom's king! [arms! K. P. Amen! Amen! — Mount, chevaliers, to East. St. George,—that swing'd th4 the dragon, and e'ver since, Sits on his horseback at mine hostess' door, Teach us some fence! —Sirrah, were I at home, At your den, sirrah, [To Aust.] with your liomess, I'd set an ox-head to your lion's hide, And make a monster of you. Aust. Peace; no more. 1 Worn out. 2 Owns. 3 Circle. 4 Thrashed. 1 Determined.
K. Phi. England, thou hast not sav’d one drop of blood,
In this hot trial, more than we of France;
Rather, lost more: And by this hand I swear,
That sways the earth this climate overlooks,—
Before we will lay down our just-borne arms,
We’ll pull thee down, ’gainst whom these arms we
Or add a royal number to the dead; [bear,
Gracing the scroll, that tells of this war’s loss,
With slaughter coupled to the name of kings.

Bast. Ha, majesty! how high thy glory towers,
When the rich blood of kings is set on fire!
O, now doth death line his death-chaps with steel;
The swords of soldiers are his teeth, his fangs;
And now he feasts, moulding the flesh of men,
In undetermin’d differences of kings.—
Why stand these royal fronts amazed thus?
Cry, havock, kings! back to the stained field,
You equal potens, fiery kindled spirits!
Then let confusion of one part confirm [death!
The other’s peace; till then, blows, blood, and
K. J. Whose party do the townsfolk yet admit?
K. Phi. Speak, citizens, for England, who’s your king?

1. C. The king of England, when we know the king.
[his right.
K. Phi. Know him in us, that here hold up
K. John. In us that are our own great deputy,
And bear possession of our person here;
Lord of our presence, Angiers, and of you.
1. Cit. A greater power than we, denies all this;
And, till it be undoubtedly, we do lock
Our former scruple in our strong-barr’d gates:
King’d of our fears; until our fears resolv’d,
Be by some certain king purg’d and depos’d.

Bast. By heaven these scroyles² of Angiers flout you, kings;
And stand securely on their battlements,
As in a theatre, whence they gape and point
At your industrious scenes and acts of death.
Your royal presences be rul’d by me;
Do like the mutines³ of Jerusalem;
Be friends a while, and both conjunctly bend
Your sharpest deeds of malice on this town:
By east and west let France and England mount
Their battering cannon, charged to the mouths;
Till their soul-fearing clamours have brawl’d
The flinty ribs of this contemptuous city: [down
I’d play incessantly upon these jades,
Even till unfenced desolation
Leave them as naked as the vulgar air.
That done, disserver your united strengths,
And part your mingled colours once again;
Turn face to face, and bloody point to point:
Then, in a moment, fortune shall cull forth
Out of one side her happy minion;
To whom in favour she shall give the day,
And kiss him with a glorious victory.
How like you this wild counsel, mighty states?
Smacks it not something of the policy? [heads
K. John. Now, by the sky that hangs above our
I like it well:—France, shall we knit our powers,
And lay this Angiers even with the ground;
Then, after, fight who shall be king of it?

Bast. An if thou hast the mettle of a king,—
Being wrong’d, as we are, by this peevish town,—
Turn thou the mouth of thy artillery,

As we will ours, against these saucy walls:
And when that we have dash’d them to the ground,
Why, then defy each other; and pell-mell,
Make work upon ourselves, for heaven, or hell.
K. P. Let it be so:—Say, where will you assault?
K. J. We from the west will send destruction
Into this city’s bosom.

Aust. I from the north.
K. Phi. Our thunder from the south,
Shall rain their drift of bullets on this town.

Bas. [Aside.] O prudent discipline! From north to south:
Austria and France shoot in each other’s mouth;
I’ll stir them to it:—Come, away, away! [stay,
1. Cit. Hear us, great kings; vouchsafe a while to
And I shall you peace, and fair-faced league;
Win you this city without stroke, or wound;
Rescue those breathing lives to die in beds,
That here come sacrifices for the field:
Persèver not, but hear me, mighty kings, [hear.
K. J. Speak on, with favour; we are bent to
1. Cit. That daughter there of Spain, the lady Blanch,
is near to England: Look upon the years
Of Lewis the Dauphin, and that lovely maid:
If youthful love should go in quest of beauty,
Where should he find it fairer than in Blanch?
If zealous¹ love should go in search of virtue,
Where should he find it purer than in Blanch?
If love ambitious sought a match of birth,
Whose veins bound richer blood than lady
Such as she is, in beauty, virtue, birth, [Blanch?
is the young Dauphin every way complete:
If not complete, O say, he is not she;
And she again wants nothing, to name want,
If want it be not, that she is not he:
He is the half part of a blessed man,
Left to be finished by such as she;
And she a fair divided excellence,
Whose fullness of perfection lies in him.
O, two such silver currents, when they join,
Do glorify the banks that bound them in: [one,
And two such shores to two such streams made
Two such controlling bounds, shall you be, kings,
To these two princes, if you marry them.
This union shall do more than battery can,
To our fast-closed gates; for, at this match,
With swifter spleen² than powder can enforce,
The mouth of passage shall we fling wide ope,
And give you entrance; but without this match,
The sea enraged is not half so deaf,
Lions more confident, mountains and rocks
More free from motion; no, not death himself
In mortal fury half so peremptory,
As we to keep this city.

Bast. Here’s a stay,
That shakes the rotten carcass of old Death
Out of his rags! Here’s a large mouth, indeed,
That spits forth death, and mountains, rocks, and
And talks familiarly of roaring lions, [seas;
He speaks plain cannon, fire, and smoke, and
He gives the bastinado with his tongue; [bounce;
Our ears are cudgel’d; not a word of his,
But buffets better than a fist of France:
Why! I was never so bethump’d with words,
Since I first call’d my brother’s father, dad.

1. Pious. 2. Speed.
Son, list to this conjunction, make this match;
Give with our niece a dowry large enough:
For by this knot thou shalt so surely tie
Thy now unsur’d assurance to the crown,
That you green boy shall have no sun to ripe
The bloom that promiseth a mighty fruit.
I see a yielding in the looks of France;
Mark, how they whisper: urge them, while their
Are capable of this ambition: [souls
Lest zeal, now melted by the windy breath
Of soft petitions, pity and remorse,
Cool and congeal again to what it was.
1 Cit. Why answer not the double majesties
This friendly treaty of our threaten’d town?
K. Phi. Speak England first, that hath been forward first
To speak unto this city: What say you?
J. K. If that the Dauphin there, thy princely
Can in this book of beauty read, I love, [son,
Her dowry shall we weigh equal with a queen:
For Anjou, and fair Touraine, Maine, Poictiers,
And all that we upon this side the sea
(Except this city now by us besiegd)
Find liable to our crown and dignity,
Shall gild her bridal bed; and make her rich
In titles, honours, and promotions.
As she in beauty, education, blood,
Holds hand with any princess of the world. [face.
K. P. What sayst thou, boy? look in the lady’s
Lew. I do, my lord, and in her eye I find
A wonder, or a wondrous miracle,
The shadow of myself form’d in her eye;
Which, being but the shadow of your son,
Becomes a sun, and makes your son a shadow:
I do protest, I never lov’d myself,
Till now infixed I beheld myself,
Drawn in the flattering table of her eye.

[Whispers with Blanch.
Bast. Drawn in the flattering table of hereye!—
Hang’d in the frowning wrinkle of her brow!—
And quarter’d in her heart!—he doth espy
His own love’s traitor: This is pity now,
That hang’d, and drawn, and quarter’d, there
In such a love, so vile a loth as he. [should be,
Elan. My uncle’s will, in this respect is mine:
If he see aught in you, that makes him like,
That any thing he sees, which moves his liking,
I can with ease translate it to my will;
Or, if you will, (to speak more properly,)
I will enforce it easily to my love.
Further, I will not flatter you, my lord,
That all I see in you is worthy love,
Than this—that nothing do I see in you,
(Though churlish thoughts themselves should be your judge,)
That I can find should merit any hate.

K. John. What say these young ones? What say you, my niece?
Blanch. That she is bound in honour still to do
What you in wisdom shall vouchsafe to say.
K. John. Speak then, prince Dauphin; can you love this lady?
Lew. Nay, ask me if I can refrain from love:
For I do love her most uneffinately. [Maine,
K. John. Then I do give Volquessen, Touraine,
Poictiers, and Anjou, these five provinces,
With her to thee; and this addition more;

Full thirty thousand marks of English coin.—
Philip of France, if thou be pleas’d withal,
Command thy son and daughter to join hands.
K. P. It likes us well;—Young princes, close your hands.

Aust. And your lips too; for, I am well assur’d,
That I did so, when I was first assur’d. 1
K. P. Now, citizens of Angiers, ope your gates,
Let in that amity which you have made;
For at Saint Mary’s chapel, presently,
The rites of marriage shall be solemniz’d,—
Is not the lady Constance in this troop?—
I know, she is not; for this match made up,
Her presence would have interrupted much:—
Where is she and her son? tell me, who knows.

Lew. She is sad and passionate 2 at your highness’ tent.
K. Phi. And, by my faith, this league, that we have made,
Will give her sadness very little cure.—
Brother of England, how may we content
This widow lady? In her right we came:
Which we, Heaven knows, have turn’d another
To our own vantage. [way,
K. John. We will heal up all;
For we’ll create young Arthur duke of Bretagne,
And earl of Richmond; and this rich fair town
We make him lord of.—Call the lady Constance;
Some speedy messenger bid her repair
To our solemnity:—I trust we shall,
If not fill up the measure of her will,
Yet in some measure satisfy her so,
That we shall stop her exclamation.
Go we, as well as haste will suffer us,
To this unlook’d for unprepared pomp.

[Exeunt all but the Bastard.—The Citizens retire from the walls.

Ba. Mad world! mad kings! mad composition!
John, to stop Arthur’s title in the whole,
Hath willingly departed with a part:
And France, (whose armour conscience buckled
Whom zeal and charity brought to the field, [on;
As God’s own soldier,) round’d 3 in the ear
With that same purpose-changer, that sly-devil;
That broker, that still breaks the pate of faith;
That daily break-vow; he that wins of all,
Of kings, of beggars, old men, young men, maids,—
That smooth-faced gentleman, talking commo-
Commodity, the bias of the world; 4[ditly
The world, who of itself is pleas’d 5 well,
Made to run even, upon even ground;
Till this advantage, this vile drawing bias,
This sway of motion, this commodity,
Makes it take head from all indifferency,
From all direction, purpose, course, intent:
And this same bias, this commodity,
Clapp’d on the outward eye of sickle France,
Hath draw’d him from his own determin’d aid,
From a resolv’d and honourable war,
To a most base and vile-concluded peace,—
And why rail I on this commodity?
But for because he hath not woo’d me yet:
Not that I have the power to clutch 6 my hand,
When his fair angel 7 would salute my palm;
But for my hand, as unattempted yet,
Like a poor beggar, rattleth on the rich.

1 Affianced. 2 Mournful. 3 Chasp. 4 Polished. 5 Coin.
Well, whiles I am a beggar, I will rail,
And say,—there is no sin, but to be rich;
And being rich, my virtue then shall be,
To say,—there is no vice but beggary:
Since kings break faith upon commodity,
Gain, bemy lord? for I will worship thee! [Exit.

Act Third.

SCENE I.—The French King’s Tent.

Enter Constanse, Arthur, and Salisbury.

Con. Gone to be married! gone to wear a peace!
False blood to false blood join’d? Gone to be friends!

Shall Lewis have Blanch? and Blanch these pro-
It is not so; thou hast mis-spoke, mis-heard;
Be well advis’d, tell o’er thy tale again:
It cannot be; thou dost but say, ’tis so:
I trust, I may not trust thee; for thy word
Is but the vain breath of a common man:
Believe me, I do not believe thee, man;
I have a king’s oath to the contrary.

Thou shalt be punish’d for thus frightening me,
For I am sick, and capable 1 of fears; [fears:
Oppress’d with wrongs, and therefore full of
A widow, husbandless, subject to fears;
A woman, naturally born to fears;
And though thou now confess, thou didst but jest
With my vex’d spirits, I cannot take a true,
But they will quake and tremble all this day,
What dost thou mean by shaking of thy head?
Why dost thou look so sadly on my son?
What means that hand upon that breast of thine?
Why holds thine eye that lamentable rheum,
Like a proud river peering o’er his bounds?
Be these sad signs confirmers of thy words?
Thou speak again; not all thy former tale,
But this one word; whether thy tale be true.

Sal. As true as, I believe, you think them false
That give you cause to prove my saying true.

Coa. O, if thou teach me to believe this sorrow,
Teach thou this sorrow how to make me die;
And let belief and life encounter so,
As doth the fury of two desperate men,
Which, in the very meeting, fall, and die.—
Lewis marry Blanch! O, boy, then where art thou?
France friend with England! what becomes of me?

Fellow, be gone; I cannot brook thy sight;
This news hath made thee a most ugly man.

Sal. What other harm have I, good lady, done,
But spoke the harm that is by others done?

Con. Which harm within itself so heinous is,
As it makes harmful all that speak of it.

Arth. I do beseech you, madam, be content.

C. If thou, that bid’st me be content, wert grim,
Ugly, and stand’rous to thy mother’s womb,
Full of unpleasing blots, and sightless 2 stains,
Lame, foolish, crooked, swarthy, prodigious,
Patch’d with foul moles, and eye-offending signs,
I would not care, I then would be content;
For then I should not love thee; no, nor thou
Become thy great birth, nor deserve a crown.
But thou art fair; and at thy birth, dear boy!

Nature and fortune join’d to make thee great:
Of nature’s gifts thou may’st with lilies boast,
And with the half-blind rose: but fortune, O!
She is corrupted, chang’d, and won from thee;
She adulterates hourly with thine uncle John;
And with her golden hand hath pluck’d d 2 on France
To tread down fair respect of sovereignty.
Tell me, thou fellow, is not France forsworn?
Envenom him with words; or get thee gone,
And leave those woe alone, which I alone
Am bound to underbear.

Sal. Pardon me, madam, I may not go without you to the kings.

C. Thou may’st, thou shalt, I will not go with thee:
I will instruct my sorrows to be proud;
For grief is proud, and makes his owner stout.
To me, and to the state 1 of my great grief,
Let kings assemble; for my grief’s so great,
That no supporter but the huge firm earth
Can hold it up: here I and sorrow sit;
Here is my throne, bid kings come bow to it.

[She throws herself on the ground.

Enter King John, King Philip, Lewis, Blanch, Elinor, Bastard, Austria, and Attendants.

K. Phi. Tis true, fair daughter; and this blessed
Ever in France shall be kept festival: [day,
To solemnize this day, the glorious sun
Stays in his course, and plays the alchemist;
Turning, with splendour of his precious eye,
The meagre cloudy earth to glittering gold:
The yearly course, that brings this day about,
Shall never see it but a holyday.

Con. A wicked day, and not a holyday!—[Rising.

What hath this day deserv’d; what hath it done:
That it in golden letters should be set.
Among the high tides, in the calendar?
Nay, rather turn this day out of the week;
This day of shame, oppression, perjury:
Or, if it must stand still, let wives with child
Pray, that their burdens may not fall this day,
Lest that their hopes prodigiously be cross’d:
But on this day, let seamen fear no wreck,
No bargains break, that are not this day made:
This day, all things begun come to ill end:
Yea, faith itself to hollow falsehood change!
K. Phi. By heaven, lady, you shall have no cause
To curse the fair proceedings of this day:
Have I not pawn’d to you my majesty?

Con. You have beguil’d me with a counterfeit, Resembling majesty; which, being touched and tried, Prize valueless: You are forsworn, forsworn;
You came in arms to spill mine enemies’ blood,
But now in arms you strengthen it with yours:
The grappling vigour and rough frown of war,
Is cold in amity and painted peace,
And our oppression hath made up this league:
Arm, arm, you heavens, against these perjurd:kings!
A widow cries; be husband to me, heavens!
Let not the hours of this ungodly day
Wear out the day in peace; but, ere sunset,
Set arm’d discord ’twixt these perjur’d kings!
Hear me, O, hear me!

1 Susceptible.
2 Unsightly.
3 Dignity.
KING JOHN.

SC. 1.

Aust. Lady Constance, peace.

C. War! war! no peace! peace is to me a war.

O Lyngoes! O Austria! thou dost shame
That bloody spoil! Thou slave, thou wretch, thou
Thou little valiant, great in villainy! [coward;
Thou ever strong upon the stronger side!
Thou fortune's champion, that dost never fight
But when her humorous ladyship is by
To teach thee safety! thou art perjur'd too;
And sooth'dst up-greatness. What a foolart thou,
A raving fool; to bring and stamp, and swear,
Upon thy party! Thou cold-blooded slave,
Hast thou not spoke like thunder on my side?
A been sworn my soldier? bidding me depend
Upon thy stars, thy fortune, and thy strength?
And dost thou now fall over to my foes?
Thou wear a lion's hide! doff it! for shame,
And hang a calf's skin on those recreant limbs.
A. O, that a man should speak those words to me!

Bast. And hang a calf's skin on those recreant limbs.

Aust. Thou dar'st not say so, villain, for thy life.

Bast. And hang a calf's skin on those recreant limbs.

K. J. We like not this; thou dost forget thyself.

Enter Pandulph.

K. Phi. Here comes the holy legate of the pope.

Pand. Hail, you anointed deputies of heaven!—
To thee, king John, my holy errand is.
I. Pandulph, of fair Milan cardinal,
And from Pope Innocent the legate here,
Do, in his name, religiously demand,
Why thou against the church, our holy mother,
So wilfully dost spurn; and, force perforce,
Keep Stephen Langton, chosen archbishop
Of Canterbury, from that holy see?
This in our foresaid holy father's name,
Pope Innocent, I do demand of thee.

K. John. What earthly name to interrogatories
Can task the free breath of a sacred king?
Thou canst not, cardinal, devise a name
So slight, unworthy, and ridiculous,
To charge me to an answer, as the pope. [land,
Tell him this tale; and from the mouth of Eng-
Add thus much more,—That no Italian priest
Shall tithe or toll in our dominions:
But as we under heaven are supreme head,
So, under him, that great supremacy,
Where we do reign, we will alone uphold,
Without the assistance of a mortal hand:
So tell the pope; all reverence set apart,
To him, and his usurp'd authority.

K. Phi. Brother of England, you blaspheme in this.

[dom.]

K. J. Though you, and all the kings of Christen-
Are led so grossly by this meddling priest,
Dreading the curse that money may buy out;
And, by the merit of vile gold, dross, dust,
Purchase corrupted pardon of a man,
Who, in that sale, sells pardon from himself:
Though you, and all the rest, so grossly led,
This juggling witchcraft with revenue cherish;
Yet let alone, alone do me oppose
Against the pope, and count his friends my foes.

Pand. Then, by the lawful power that I have,
Thou shalt stand curst and excommunicate:

And blessed shall he be, that doth revolt
From his allegiance to an heretic;
And meritorious shall that hand be call'd,
Canoniz'd, and worshipp'd as a saint,
That takes away by any secret course
Thy hateful life.

Con. O, lawful let it be,
That I have room with Rome to curse a while!
Good father cardinal, cry thou, amen,
To my keen curses; for, without my wrong,
There is no tongue hath power to curse him right.
P. There's law and warranty, lady, for my curse.
C. And for mine too; when law can do no right,
Let it be lawful that law bar no wrong;
Law cannot give my child his kingdom here;
For he, that holds his kingdom, holds the law:
Therefore, since law itself is perfect wrong,
How can the law forbid my tongue to curse?

Paud. Philip of France, on peril of a curse,
Let go the hand of that arch-heretick;
And raise the power of France upon his head,
Unless he do submit himself to Rome. [hand.
E. Look'st thou pale, France? do not let go thy
C. Look to that, devil! lest that France repent.

Aust. King Philip, listen to the cardinal.
Ba. And hang a calf's skin on his recreant limbs.

Aust. Well, ruffian, I must pocket up these wrongs.

K. J. Philip, what say'st thou to the cardinal.
Con. What should he say, but as the cardinal?

Lew. Bethink you, father: for the difference
Is, purchase of a heavy curse from Rome,
Or the light loss of England for a friend:
Forego the easier.

Blanch. That's the curse of Rome.

Con. O Lewis, stand fast; the devil tempts thee:
In likeness of a new untrimmed bride. [here, Blanch. The lady Constance speaks not from her faith,
But from her need.

Con. O, if thou grant my need,
Which only lives by the death of faith,
That need must needs infer this principle,——
That faith would live again by death of need;
O, then, tread down my need, and faith mounts
Keep my need up, and faith is trodden down. [up K. John. The king is mov'd, and answers not to this.

Con. O, be remov'd from him, and answer well.

Aust. Do so, king Philip; hang no more in doubt.

Bas. Hang nothing but a calf's skin, most sweet
K. P. I am perplex'd, and know not what to say.
Pan. What canst thou say, but will perplex thee
If thou stand excommunicate, and curse it? [more, K. Phi. Good reverend father, make my person
yours,
And tell me, how you would bestow yourself.
This royal hand and mine are newly knit;
And the conjunction of our inward souls
Married in league, coupled and link'd together
With all religious strength of sacred vows;
The latest breath that gave the sound of words,
Was deep sworn faith, peace, unity, true love,
Between our kingdoms, and our royal selves;
And even before this truce, but now before,—
No longer than we well could wash our hands,
To clap this royal bargain up of peace——
Heaven knows, they were besmear'd and over-stain'd.

With slaughter's pencil, where revenge did paint
The fearful difference of incensed kings:
And shall these hands so lately purg'd of blood,
So newly join'd in love, so strong in both,
Unyoke this seizure, and this kind regret?
Playfast and loose with faith? so jest with heaven,
Make such unconstant children of ourselves,
As now again to snatch our palm from palm;
Unswear faith sworn; and on the marriage bed
Of smiling peace to march a bloody host,
And make a riot on the gentle brow
Of true sincerity! O holy sir,
My reverend father, let it not be so:
Out of your grace, devise, ordain, impose
Some gentle order; and then we shall be bless'd
To do your pleasure, and continue friends.

Pand. All form is formless, order orderless,
Save what is opposite to England's love.
Therefore, to arms! be champion of our church!
Or let the church, our mother, breathe her curse,
A mother's curse, on her revolting son.
France, thou may'st hold a serpent by the tongue,
A cased lion by the mortal paw,
A fasting tiger safer by the tooth, [hold
Than keep in peace that hand which thou dost
K. P. I may disjoin my hand, but not my faith.

Pand. So mak'st thou faith an enemy to faith;
And, like a civil war, sett'st oath to oath,
Thy tongue against thy tongue. O, let thy vow
First made to heaven, first be to heaven per-
That is, to be the champion of our church! form'd;
What since thou swor'st, is sworn against thyself.
And may not be performed by thyself:
For that, which thou hast sworn to do amiss,
Is not amiss when it is truly done;
And being not done, where doing tends to ill,
The truth is then most done not doing it:
The better act of purposes mistook
Is, to mistake again; though indirect,
Yet indirection thereby grows direct,
And falsehood, falsehood cures: as fire cools fire,
Within the scorched veins of one new burn'd.
It is religion, that doth make vows kept;
But thou hast sworn against religion; [swearst;
By what thou swor'st, against the thing thou
And mak'st an oath the surety for thy truth
Against an oath: The truth thou art unsure
To swear, swear only not to be forsworn:
Else, what a mockery should it be to swear?
But thou dost swear only to be forsworn;
And most forsworn, to keep what thou dost swear.
Therefore, thy latter vows, against thy first,
Is in thyself rebellion to thyself:
And better conquest never caus't thou make,
Than arm thy constant and thy nobler parts
Against those giddy loose suggestions:
Upon which better part our prayers come in,
If thou vouchsafe them: but, if not, then know,
The peril of our curses light on thee;
So heavy, as thou shalt not shake them off,
But, in despair, die under their black weight.
Aust. Rebellion, flat rebellion!

Bast. Will it not be?
Will not a calf's skin stop that mouth of thine?
Leu. Father, to arms!
Blanch. Upon thy wedding day?

Against the blood that thou hast married? [men?
What, shall our feast be kept with slaughter'd
Shall braying trumpets, and loud churlish
Be measures to our pomp! [drums,—
O, husband, hear me!—ah, alack, how new
Is husband in my mouth!—even for that name,
Which still this time my tongue did ne'er pro-
Upon my knee I beg, go not to arms [nonce
Against mine uncle.

Const. O, upon my knee,
Made hard with kneeling, I do pray to thee,
Thou virtuous Dauphin, alter not the doom
Fore-thought by heaven.

B. Now shall I see thy love; What motive may
Be stronger with thee than the name of wife?
C. That which upholdeth him that thee upholds,
His honour; O thinether, Lewis, thine honour.
Leu. I muse, thy majesty doth seem so cold,
When such profound respects do pull you on.

Pand. I will denounce a curse upon his head.
K. Phi. Thou shalt not need:—England, I'll fall

Const. O fair return of banish'd majesty!
Leu. O foul revolt of French inconstancy!
K. John. France, thou shalt rue this hour while within this hour.

Bast. Old Time, the clock-setter, that bald sex-
Is it as he will? well then, France shall rue.

Blan. The sun's o'ercast with blood: Fair day,
Which is the side that I must go withal? [faideu!
I am with both: each army hath a hand;
And, in their rage, I having hold of both,
They whirl assunder, and dismember me.

Husband, I cannot pray that thou mayst win;
Uncle, I needs must pray that thou mayst lose;
Father, I may not wish the fortune thine;
Grandam, I will not wish thy wishes thrive:
Whoever wins, on that side shall I lose;
Assured loss, before the match be play'd.

Leu. Lady, with me; with methy fortunes lies.
Blanch. There where my fortune lives, there my life dies.

K. John. Cousin, go draw our puissance 2

together.— [Exit Bastard.

France, I am burn'd up with inflaming wrath;
A rage, whose heat hath this condition,
That nothing can allay, nothing but blood,
The blood, and dearest-valued blood of France.
K. Phi. Thy rage shall burn thee up, and thou shalt turn
To ashes, ere our blood shall quench that fire:
Look to thyself, thou art in jeopardy.
K. John. No more than he that threats. —To arms let's hie!

SCENE II. — PLAINS NEAR ANGERS.

Alarums; Excursions. Enter the Bastard, with Austria's head.

Bast. Now, by my life, this day grows wondrous
Some air rough scolds: -- Philip, make up.
Some air devil hovers in the sky, [hot
And pours down mischief. Austria's head lie
While Philip breathes. [there,

Enter King John, Arthur, and Hubert.

K. J. Hubert, keep this boy:—Philip, make up.
My mother is assailed in our tent,
And t'en, I fear.
KING JOHN.

SCENE III.—THE SAME.

Alarums: Excursions; Retreat. Enter King John, Elinor, Arthur, the Bastard, Hubert, and Lords.

K. John. So shall it be; [To Elinor.] your grace shall stay behind,
So strongly guarded.—[To Arthur.] Cousin, look not sad:
Thy grandam loves thee; and thy uncle will
As dea to thee as thy father was.
Ar. O, this will make my mother die with grief.
K. John. [To the Bastard.] Cousin, away for England; haste before:
And, ere our coming, see thou shake the bags
Of hoarding abots; angels1 imprisonment'd
Set thou at liberty: the fat ribs of peace
Must by the hungry now be fed upon:—
Use our commission in its utmost force.

Bast. Bell, book, and candle shall not drive me back,
When gold and silver beckons me to come on.
I leave your highness:—Grandam, I will pray
(If ever I remember to be holy,)
For your fair safety; so I kiss your hand.
Eli. Farewell, my gentle cousin.
Eli. Come hither, little kinsman; hark, a word.
K. John. Come hither, Hubert. 0 my gentle Hubert,
We owe thee much; within this wall of flesh
There is a soul, counts thee her creditor,
And with advantage means to pay thy love:
And, my good friend, thy voluntary oath
Lives in this bosom, dearly cherished.
Give me thy hand. I had a thing to say,—
But I will fit it with some better time,
By heaven, Hubert, I am almost ashamed
To say what good respect I have of thee.
Hub. I am much bounden to your majesty.
K. John. Good friend, thou hast no cause to say so yet: [slow
But thou shalt have; and creep time ne'er so
Yet it shall come, for me to do thee good.
I had a thing to say,—But let it go:
The sun is in the heaven, and the proud day,
Attended with the pleasures of the world,
Is all too wanton, and too full of gawds,2
To give me audience:—If the midnight bell
Did, with his iron tongue and brazen mouth,
Sound one unto the drowsy race of night;
If this same were a church-yard where we stand,
And thou possessed with a thousand wrongs;
Or if that sordy spirit, melancholy,
Had bak'd thy blood, and made it heavy, thick;
(Which, else, run stickling up and down the veins,
Making that idiot, laughter, keep men's eyes,
And strain their cheeks to idle merriment,
A passion hateful to my purposes;)—
Or if that thou couldst see me without eyes,
Hear me without thine ears, and make reply

1 Gold coins. 2 Ornaments.

Without a tongue, using conceit alone,
Without eyes, ears, and harmful sounds of words;
Then, in despite of brooded watchful day,
I would into thy bosom pour my thoughts:
But, ah, I will not:—Yet I love thee well;
And, by my troth, I think, thou lov'st me well.
H. So well, that what you bid me undertake,
Though that my death were adjunct to my act,
By heaven, I'd do't.
K. John. Do not I know, thou would'st?
Good Hubert, Hubert, Hubert, throw thine eye
On yon young boy; I'd tell thee what, my friend,
He is a very serpent in my way,
And, whereasoe'er this foot of mine doth tread,
He lies before me: Dost thou understand me?
Thou art his keeper.

Hub. And I will keep him so,
That he shall not offend your majesty.
Hub. My lord?
Hub. He shall not live.
I could be merry now: Hubert, I love thee;
Well, I'll not say what I intend for thee;
Remember,—Madam, fare you well:
I'll send those powers o'er to your majesty.
Eli. My blessing go with thee!
K. John. For England, cousin:
Hubert shall be your man, attend on you
With all true duty.—On toward Calais, ho!
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

THE SAME. THE FRENCH KING’S TENT.

Enter King Philip, Lewis, Pandulph, and Attendants.

K. Phi. So, by a roaring tempest on the flood,
A whole armado1 of convicted2 sail
Is scatter’d and disjoin’d from fellowship.
P. Courage and comfort! all shall yet go well.
K. P. What can go well, when we have run so
Are we not beaten! Is not Angiers lost? fill
Arthur ta’en prisoner? divers dear friends slain,
And bloody England into England gone,
O’erbearing interruption, spite of France?
Lew. What he hath won, that hath he fortified:
So hot a speed with such advice dispos’d,
Such temperate order in so fierce a cause,
Doth want example: Who hath read, or heard,
Of any kindred action like to this? [praise
K. P. Well could I bear that England had this
So we could find some pattern of our shame.

Enter Constance.

Look, who comes here! a grave unto a soul;
Holding the eternal spirit, against her will,
In the vile prison of afflicted breath:—
I pr’ythee, lady, go away with me.
Con. Lo, now! now see the issue of your peace!
K. Phi. Patience, good lady! comfort, gentle Constance!
Const. No, I defy all counsel, all redress,
But that which ends all counsel, true redress,
Death, death.—O amiable lovely death!
Ariseth from the couch of lasting night,

1 Fleet. 2 Baffled. 3 Refuse.
Thou hate and terror to prosperity,
And I will kiss thy detestable bones;
And put my eye-balls in thy vauty brows;
And ring these fingers with thy household-worms;
And stop this gap of breath with fulsome dust,
And be a carrion monster like thyself:
Come, grin on me, and I will think thou smil'st,
And bus'le thee as thy wife! Mis'ry's love,
O, come to me.

K. Ph. O fair affliction, peace.

Con. No, no, I will not, having breath to cry:-
O, that my tongue were in the thunder's mouth!
Then with a passion would I shake the world;
And rouse from sleep that fell anatomy,
Which cannot hear a lady's feeble voice,
Which scorns a modern invocation.

P. Lady, you utter madness, and not sorrow.

Const. Thou art not holy to belie me so;
I am not mad: this hair I tear, is mine;
My name is Constance; I was Geoffrey's wife;
Young Arthur is my son, and he is lost:
I am not mad; I would to heaven, I were!
For then, 'tis like I should forget myself:
O, if I could, what grief should I forget!—
Preach some philosophy, to make me mad,
And thou shalt be canoniz'd, cardinal;
For, being not mad, but sensible of grief,
My reasonable part produces reason
How I may be deliver'd of these woes,
And teaches me to kill or hang myself:
If I were mad, I should forget my son;
Or madly think, a babe of clouts were he:
I am not mad; too well, too well I feel
The different plague of each calamity.

K. Phi. Bind up those tresses: O, what love
I see in the fair multitude of those her hairs! [note
Where but by chance a silver drop hath fallen,
Even to that drop ten thousand wiry friends
Do glew themselves in sociable grief;
Like true, inseparable, faithful loves,
Sticking together in calamity.

Const. To England, if you will.

K. PHI. Bind up your hairs.

Const. Yes, that I will; and wherefore will I do it?

I tore them from their bonds: and cried aloud,
O that these hands could so redeem my son,
As they have given these hairs their liberty!
But now I envy at their liberty,
And will again commit them to their bonds,
Because my poor child is a prisoner.
And, father cardinal, I have heard you say,
That we shall see and know our friends in heaven;
If that be true, I shall see my boy again:
For since the birth of Cain, the first male child,
To him that did but yesterday aspire,
There was not such a gracious creature born.
But now will canker sorrow eat my bud,
And chase the native beauty from his cheek,
And he will look as hollow as a ghost;
As dim and meagre as an ague's fit;
And so he'll die; and, rising so again,
When I shall meet him in the court of heaven
I shall not know him: therefore never, never Must I behold my pretty Arthur more.

Pand. You hold too heinous a respect of grief.

Const. He talks to me that never had a son.

K. P. You are as fond of grief, as of your child.

Con. Grief fills the room up of my absent child,
Lies in his bed, walks up and down with me;
Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words,
Remembers me of all his gracious parts,
Stuffs out his vacant garments with his form;
Then have I reason to be fond of grief.
Fare you well: had you such a loss as I,
I could give better comfort than you do.
I will not keep this form upon my head.

[Tearing off her head-dress.

When there is such disorder in my wit.
O lord, my boy, my Arthur, my fair son!
My life, my joy, my food, my all the world!
My widow-comfort, and my sorrow's cure. [Exit.

K. P. I fear some outrage, and I'll follow her.

[Exit.

Lew. There's nothing in this world can make Life as tedious as a twice-told tale, [me joy:
Vexing the dull ear of a drowsy man;
And bitter shame hath spoil'd the sweet world's taste.

That it yields nought but shame and bitterness.

Pand. Before the curing of a strong disease,
Even in the instant of repair and health,
The fit is strongest; evils that take leave,
On their departure most of all show evil;
What have you lost, by losing of this day?

Lew. All days of glory, joy, and happiness.

Pand. If you had won it, certainly you had

No, no: when fortune means to men most good,
She looks upon them with a threatening eye.
'Tis strange, to think how much king John hath
In this which he accounts so clearly won: [lost
Are you not griev'd that Arthur is his prisoner?

Lew. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.

P. Your mind is as youthful as your blood.

Now hear me speak with a prophetick spirit:
For even the breath of what I mean to speak
Shall blow each dust, each straw, each little stub,
Out of the path which shall directly lead [mark.
Thy foot to England's throne; and, therefore John hath seiz'd Arthur; and it cannot be,
That, whiles our life plays in that infant's veins,
The misplic'd John should entertain an hour,
One minute, nay, one quiet breath of rest:
A sceptre snatch'd with an unruly hand,
Must be as boisterously maintain'd as gain'd:
And he that stands upon a slippery place,
Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him up:
That John may stand, then Arthur needs must
So be it, for it cannot be but so.
[fall;
L. But what shall I gain by young Arthur's fall?

P. You, in the right of lady Blanch, your wife,
May then make all the claim that Arthur did.
Lew. And lose it, life and all, as Arthur did.

Pand. How green are you, and fresh in this old world! [you:

John lays you plots; the times conspire with
For he that steeps his safety in true blood,
Shall find but bloody safety, and untrue.
This act, so evilly born, shall cool the hearts
Of all his people, and freeze up their zeal;
That none so small advantage shall step forth.
To check his reign, but they will cherish it:
No natural exhalation in the sky,
No scope of nature, no distemper'd day,
No common wind, no customed event,
But they will pluck away his natural cause,
And call them meteors, prodigies, and signs,
Abortives, presages, and tongues of heaven,
Plainly denouncing vengeance upon John.
L. May be, he will not touch young Arthur's life,
But hold himself safe in his prison.
P. O, sir, when he shall hear of your approach,
If that young Arthur be not gone already,
Even at that news he dies: and then the heart
Of all his people shall revolt from him,
And kiss the lips of unacquainted change;
And pick strong matter of revolt, and wrath,
Out of the bloody fingers' ends of John.
Methinks, I see this hurly! all on foot;
And, O, what better matter breeds for you,
Than I have nam'd! - The bastard Faulconbridge
Is now in England, ransacking the church,
Offending charity: if but a dozen French
Were there in arms, they would be as a call
To train ten thousand English to their side;
Or, as a little snow, tumbled about,
Anon becomes a mountain. O noble Dauphin,
Go with me to the king: 'Tis wonderful,
What may be wrought out of their discontent:
Now that their souls are topful of offence,
For England go; I will wlet on the king.
Lev. Strong reasons make strong actions; Let us go;
If you say, ay, the king will not say, no.
[Exeunt.

Act Fourth.

SCENE I.

NORTHAMPTON. A ROOM IN THE CASTLE.

Enter Hubert and two Attendants.

Hub. Heat me these irons hot: and look thou stand
Within the arras: when I strike my foot
Upon the bosom of the ground, rush forth;
And bind the boy, which you shall find with me,
Fast to the chair: be heedful: hence, and watch.
1 Attend. I hope your warrant will bear out the deed.
Hub. Uncleanly scruples! Fear not you: look to't.
[Exeunt Attendants.

Young lad, come forth; I have to say with you.

Enter Arthur.

Arth. Good-morrow, Hubert.

Hub. Good-morrow, little prince.

Arth. As little prince (having so great a title
To be more prince,) as may be. - You are sad.
Hub. Indeed, I have been merrier.
Arth. Mercy on me!
Methinks, no body should be sad but I:
Yet I remember, when I was in France,
Young gentlemen would be as sad as night,
Only for wantonness. By my christendom,
So I were out of prison and kept sheep,
I should be merry as the day is long;
And so I would be here, but that I doubt
My uncle practises more harm to me:
He is afraid of me, and I of him:
Is it my fault that I was Geoffrey's son?

No, indeed, is't not; And I would to heaven,
I were your son, so you would love me, Hubert.
Hub. [Aside.] If I talk to him with his innoc-cent prate
He will awake my mercy which lies dead:
Therefore, I will be sudden and despatch.
Arth. Are you sick, Hubert? you look pale to-day:
In sooth, I would you were a little sick,
That I might sit all night, and watch with you;
I warrant I love you more than you do me.
H. His words do take possession of my bosom.
Read here, young Arthur, [Showing a paper.]
How now, foolish rheum:
[Aside.
Turning disputeous torture out of door!
I must be brief; lest resolution drop
Out at mine eyes, in tender womanish tears. —
Can you not read it? is it not fair writ?
Arth. Too fairly, Hubert, for so foul effect:
Must you with hot irons burn out both mine eyes!
Hub. Young boy, I must.
Arth. And will you?
Hub.
Arth. And I will.

Arth. Have you the heart? When your head did but ake,
I knit my handkerchief about your brows,
(The best I had, a princess wrought it me,)
And I did never ask it you again:
And with my hand at midnight held your head;
And, like the watchful minutes to the hour,
Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time;
Saying, What lack you? and, Where lies your grief?
Or, What good love may I perform for you?
Many a poor man's son would have lain still,
And ne'er have spoke a loving word to you;
But you at your sick service had a prince.
Nay, you may think my love was crafty love,
And call it cunning: Do, an if you will:
If heaven be pleas'd that you must use me ill,
Why, then you must. — Will you put out mine
eyes?

These eyes, that never did, nor never shall,
So much as frown on you?
Hub.
Arth. I have sworn to do it;
And with hot irons must I burn them out.
A. Ah, none, but in this iron age, would do it!
The iron of itself, though heat red-hot,
Approaching near these eyes, would drink my
And quench his fiery indignation,
[tears.
Even in the matter of mine innocence:
Nay after that consumme away in rust.
But for containing fire to harm mine eye,
Are you more stubborn-hard than hammer'd
An if an angel should have come to me, [iron?
And told me, Hubert should put out mine eyes,
I would not have believ'd no tongue, but Hubert's.
Hub. Come forth.
[Stamps.

Re-enter Attendants, with Cord, Irons, &c.
Do as I bid you do.
Arth. O, save me, Hubert, save me! my eyes
Even with the fierce looks of these bloody men.
Hub. Give me the iron, I say, and bind him here,
Ar. Alas! what need you be so boisterous rough?
I will not struggle, I will stand stone still.
For heaven's sake, Hubert, let me not be bound!
Nay, hear me, Hubert! drive these men away,
And I will sit as quiet as a lamb;
I will not stir, nor wince, nor speak a word,
Nor look upon the iron angrily:
Thrust but these men away, and I'll forgive you,
What's done to thee, I do put me to,
Hub. Go, stand within; let me alone with him.
1 Attend. I am best pleas'd to be from such a deed.

[Exeunt Attendants.]

Arth. Alas! I then have chid away my friend;
He hath a stern look, but a gentle heart:—
Let him come back, that his compassion may Give life to yours.

Hub. Come, boy, prepare yourself.

Arth. Is there no remedy?

Hub. None, but to lose your eyes.

Arth. O heaven!—that there were but a mote
In yours,
A grain, a dust, a gnat, a wand'ring hair,
Any annoyance in that precious sense!
Then, feeling what small things are boist'rons there,
Your vile intent must needs seem horrible.

H. Is this your promise? go to, hold your tongue.

Arth. Hubert, the utterance of a brace of tongues
Must needs want pleading for a pair of eyes:
Let me not hold my tongue; let me not, Hubert!
Or, Hubert, if you will, cut out my tongue,
So I may keep mine eyes; or, spare mine eyes;
Though to no use, but still to look on you!
Lo, by my troth, the instrument is cold,
And would not harm me.

Hub. I can heat it, boy.

Arth. No, in good sooth: the fire is dead with Being create for comfort, to be us'd [grief,
In undeserv'd extremes; see else, yourself;
There is no malice in this burning coal;
The breath of heaven hath blown his spirit out,
And strew'd repentant ashes on his head.

Hub. But with my breath I can revive it, boy.

Ar. And if you do, you will but make it blush,
And glow with shame of your proceedings,
Hubert:

Nay, it, perchance, will sparkle in your eyes;
And, like a dog that is compell'd to fight,
Snatch at his master that doth tarre 2 him on.
All things, that you should use to do me wrong,
Deny their office: only you do lack
That mercy, which fierce fire, and iron, extends,
Creatures of note, for mercy-lacking uses.

Hub. Well, see to live; I will not touch thine eyes
For all the treasure that thine uncle owes: 3
Yet am I sworn, and I did purpose, boy,
With this same very iron to burn them out.

Arth. O, now you look like Hubert! all this
You were disguised. [while

Hub. Peace: no more. Adeu;
Your uncle must not know but you are dead:
I'll fill these dogged spies with false reports.
And, pretty child, sleep double, and secure,
That Hubert, for the wealth of all the world,
Will not offend thee.

Arth. O heaven!—I thank you, Hubert.

Hub. Silence; no more: Goclosely in with me;
Much danger do I undergo for thee. [Ereunt.

1 Crucey. 2 Uige. 3 Owns.

SCENE II.—A ROOM OF STATE IN THE PALACE.

Enter K. John, crowned; Pembroke, Salisbury, and other Lords. The King takes his State.

K. John. Here once again we sit, once again crown'd,
And look'd upon, I hope, with cheerful eyes.

Pem. This once again, but that your highness pleas'd,
Was once superfluous: you were crown'd before,
And that high royalty was ne'er pluck'd off:
The faiths of men ne'er stained with revolt;
Fresh expectation troubled not the land,
With any long'd-for change, or better state.

Sal. Therefore, to be possess'd with double
To guard a title that was rich before, [pomp,
To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue
Unto the rainbow, or with taper-light
To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,
Is wasteful, and ridiculous excess.

Pem. But that your royal pleasure must be
This act is as an ancient tale new told; [done,
And, in the last repeating, troublesome,
Being urged at a time unseasonable.

Sal. In this the antique and well-noted face
Of plain old form is much disfigured:
And, like a shifted wind unto a sail,
It makes the course of thoughts to fetch about:
Startles and frights consideration;
Makes sound opinion sick, and truth suspected,
For putting on so new a fashion'd robe. [well,

Pem. When workmen strive to do better than
They do confound their skill in covetousness:
And, oftentimes, excusing of a fault,
Doth make the fault the worse by the excuse;
As patches, set upon a little breach,
Discredit more in hiding of the fault,
Than did the fault before it was so patch'd.

Sal. To this effect before you were new crown'd,
We breath'd our counsel: but it pleas'd your highness
To overbear it; and we are all well pleas'd;
Since all and every part of what we would,
Doth make a stand at what your highness will.

K. J. Some reasons of this double coronation
I have possess'd you with, and think them strong;
And more, more strong, (when lesser is my fear,) I shall induc you with: Mean time, but ask
What you would have reform'd that is not well;
And well shall you perceive, how willingly
I will both hear and grant you your requests.

P. Then I, (as one that am the tongue of these
To sound 2 the purposes of all their hearts,) Both for myself and them, (but chief of all,
Your safety, for the which myself and them
Bend their best studies,) heartily request
The enfranchisement of Arthur; whose restraint
Doth move the murmuring lips of discontent
To break into this dangerous argument. —
If, what in rest you have, in right you hold,
Why then your fears, (which, as they say, attend
The steps of wrong,) should move you to mew up
Your tender kinship, and to choke his days
With barbarous ignorance, and deny his youth
The rich advantage of good exercise?
That the time's enemies may not have this
To grace occasions, let it be our suit,
That you have bid us ask his liberty;
Which for our goods we do no further ask,
Than whereupon our weal, on you depending,
Counts it your weal, he has his liberty.
K. John. Let it be so; I do commit his youth

Enter Hubert.

To your direction.—Hubert, what news with you?

Pem. This is the man should do the bloody deed;
He show's his warrant to a friend of mine:
The image of a wicked heinous fault
Lives in his eye; that close aspect of his
Does show the mood of a much-troubled breast;
And I do fearfully believe, 'tis done,
What we so fear'd he had a charge to do.
Sal. The colour of the king doth come and go,
Between his purpose and his conscience,
Like heralds 'twixt two dreadful battles set:
His passion is so ripe, it needs must break.
P. And, when it breaks, I fear will issue thence
The foul corruption of a sweet child's death.
K. John. We cannot hold mortality's strong hand:—
Good lords, although my will to give is living,
The suit which you demand is gone and dead:
He tells us, Arthur is deceas'd to-night.
S. Indeed, we fear'd, his sickness was past cure.
P. Indeed we heard how near his death he was,
Before the child himself felt he was sick:
This must be answer'd, either here, or hence.
K. J. Why do you bend so solemn brows on
Think you, I bear the shears of destiny? [me?
Have I commandment on the pulse of life?
Sal. It is apparent foul-play; and 'tis shame,
That greatness should so grossly offer it:
So thrive it in your game! and so farewell.
Pem. Stay yet, lord Salisbury; I'll go with thee,
And find the inheritance of this poor child,
This little kingdom of a forced grave. [isle,
That blood, which ow'd the breadth of all this
Three foot of it doth hold: Bad world the while!
This must not be thus borne; this will break out
To all our sorrows, and ere long, I doubt.
[Exeunt Lords.

K. John. They burn in indignation; I repent;
There is no sure foundation set on blood;
No certain life achiev'd by other's death.——

Enter a Messenger.

A fearful, eye thou hast: Where is that blood,
That I have seen inhabit in those cheeks?
So foul a sky clears not without a storm:
Four down thy weather. How goes all in France?
Mess. From France to England.—Never such a power
For any foreign preparation,
Was levied in the body of a land!
The copy of your speech is learn'd by them;
For, when you should be told they do prepare,
The tidings come, that they are all arriv'd.
K. John. O, where hath our intelligence been drunk?
Where hath its slept? Where is my mother's care?
That such an army could be drawn in France,
And she not hear of it?

1 Owned.

Mess. My liege, her ear
Is stopp'd with dust; the first of April, died
Your noble mother: And, as I hear, my lord,
The lady Constance in a frenzy died.
Three days before: but this from rumour's tongue
I idly heard; if true, or false, I know not.
K. J. Withhold thy speed, dreadful occasion;
O, make a league with me, till I have pleas'd
My discontented peers! — What! mother dead?
How wildly then walks my estate in France!—
Under whose conduct came those powers of France,
That thou for truth giv'st out, are landed here?
Mess. Under the Dauphin.

Enter the Bastard and Peter of Pomfret.

K. John. Thou hast made me giddy
With these ill tidings. — Now, what says the world
To your proceedings? do not seek to stuff
My head with more ill news, for it is full.
Bast. But, if you be afraid to hear the worst,
Then let the worst, unheard, fall on your head.
K. J. Bear with me, cousin; for I was amaz'd
Under the tide; but now I breathe again
Altof the flood; and can give audience
To any tongue, speak it of what it will.
Bast. How I have sped among the clergymen,
The sums I have collected shall express.
But, as I travelled hither through the land,
I find the people strangely fantasied;
Possess'd with rumours, full of idle dreams;
Not knowing what they fear, but full of fear;
And here's a prophet, that I brought with me
From forth the streets of Pomfret, whom I found
With many hundreds treading on his heels;
Towhom he sung, in rudeharsh-sounding rhymes,
That, ere the next Ascension-day at noon,
Your highness should deliver up your crown.
K. John. Thou idle dreamer, wherefore didst thou so?

[so.

Pet. Foreknowing that the truth will fall out
K. J. Hubert, away with him; imprison him;
And on that day at noon, wherein he says,
I shall yield up my crown, let him be hang'd:
Deliver him to safety, and return,
For I must use thee. — O my gentle cousin,
[Exit Hubert, with Peter.

Hear'st thou the news abroad, who are arriv'd?
Bast. The French, my lord; men's mouths are full of it:
Besides, I met lord Bigot, and lord Salisbury,
(With eyes as red as new-enkindled fire)
And others more, going to seek the grave
Of Arthur, who, they say, is kill'd to-night
On your suggestion.
K. John. Gentle kinsman, go,
And thrust thyself into their companies:
I have a way to win their loves again;
Bring them before me.
Bast. I will seek them out.
K. John. Nay, but make haste; the better foot before.
O, let me have no subject enemies,
When adverse foreigners all right my towns
With dreadful pomp of stout invasion!—
Be Mercury, set feathers to thy heels;
And fly, like thought, from them to me again.

1 Safe custody.
Bost. The spirit of the time shall teach me speed.

K. J. Spoke like a spriteful noble gentleman.—
Go after him; for he, perhaps, shall need
Some messenger betwixt me and the peers;
And be thou he.

Mess. With all my heart, my liege.

K. John. My mother dead!

Re-enter Hubert.

Hub. My lord, they say, five moons were seen to-night:
Four fixed; and the fifth did whirl about
The other four, in wondrous motion.

K. John. Five moons?

Hub. Old men, and beldams, in the streets
Do prophesy upon it dangerously: [mouths:
Young Arthur's death is common in their
And when they talk of him they shake their
And whisper one another in the ear; [heads,
And he, that speaks, doth grip the hearer's wrist;
Whilst he, that bears, makes fearful action,
With wrinkled brows, with nods, with rolling eyes.

I saw a smith stand with his hammer, thus,
The whilst his iron did on the anvill cool,
With open mouth swallowing a tailor's news;
Who, with his shears and measure in his hand,
Standing on slippers, (which his nimble haste
Had falsely trust upon contrary feet),
Told of a many thousand warlike French,
That were embattled and rank'd in Kent:
Another lean unwash'd artificer
Cuts off his tale, and talks of Arthur's death.

K. John. Why seek'st thou to possess me with these fears?
Why urgest thou so oft young Arthur's death?
Thy hand hath murder'd him: I had mighty cause [him.
To wish him dead, but thou hadst none to kill

Hub. Had none, my lord! why, did you not provoke me?

K. John. It is the curse of kings, to be attended
By slaves, that take their humours for a warrant
To break within the bloody house of life:
And, on the winking of authority,
To understand a law; to know the meaning
Of dangerous majesty, when, perchance, it frowns
More upon humour than advis'd respect. 1

Hub. Here is your hand and seal for what I did.

K. John. O, when the last account 'twixt heaven and earth
Is to be made, then shall this hand and seal
Witness against us to damnation!
How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds,
Makes deeds ill done! Hadest not thou been by,
A fellow by the hand of nature mark'd,
Quoted, and sign'd, to do a deed of shame,
This murder had not come into my mind:
But, taking note of thy abhor'rd aspect,
Finding thee fit for bloody villainy,
Apt, likeable, to be employ'd in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arthur's death;
And thou, to be endued to a king,
Made it no conscience to destroy a prince.

Hub. My lord,—

K. John. Hadst thou but shook thy head, or made a pause,
When I spake darkly what I purposed;
Or turn'd an eye of doubt upon my face,
As bid me tell my tale in express words;
Deep shame had struck me dumb, made me break off;
And those thy fears might have wrought my fears in
But thou didst understand me by my signs, [me:
And didst in signs again parley with sin:
Yea, without stop, didst let thy heart consent,
And, consequently, thy rude hand to act
The deed which both our tongues held vile to name,—
Out of my sight and never see me more!
My nobles leave me; and my state is brav'd,
Even at my gates, with ranks of foreign powers:
Nay in the body of this fleshly land,
This kingdom, this confinement of blood and breath,
Hostility, and civil tumult reigns
Between my conscience, and my cousin's death.

Hub. Arm you against your other enemies,
I'll make a peace between your soul and you;
Young Arthur is alive: This hand of mine
Is yet a maiden and an innocent hand,
Not painted with the crimson spots of blood.
Within this bosom never enter'd yet
The dreadful motion of a murderous thought,
And you have slander'd nature in my form;
Which, howsoever rude exteriorly,
Is yet the cover of a fairer mind
Than to be butcher of an innocent child.

K. John. Doth Arthur live? O, haste thee to the peers,
Throw this report on their incensed rage,
And make them tame to their obedience!
Forgive the comment that my passion made
Upon thy feature; for my rage was blind,
And foul imaginary eyes of blood
Presented thee more hideous than thou art.
O, answer not; but to my closet bring
The angry lords, with all expedient haste:
I conjure thee but slowly; run more fast.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Before the Castle.

Enter Arthur, on the Walls.

Ar. The wall is high; and yet will I leap down;
Good ground, be pitiful, and hurt me not!—
There's few, or none, do know me; if they did,
This ship-boy's semblance hath disguis'd me
I am afraid; and yet I'll venture it. [quite.
If I get down, and do not break my limbs,
I'll find a thousand shifts to get away:
As good to die, and go, as die, and stay.

[Leaps down.

O me! my uncle's spirit is in these stones:—
Heaven take my soul, and England keep my bones!

[Dies.

Enter Pembroke, Salisbury, and Bigot.

Sal. Lords, I will meet him at Saint Edmund's Bury:
It is our safety, and we must embrace
This gentle offer of the perilous time.

Pe. Who brought that letter from the cardinal?
Sal. The count Melun, a noble lord of France;
Whose private with me, of the Dauphin's love, Is much more general than these lines import.

Lig. To-morrow morning let us meet him then.

Sal. Or, rather then set forward: for 'twill be Two long days' journey, lords, or e'er we meet.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. Once more to-day well met, distemper'd lords!
The king by me requests your presence straight.
Sal. The king hath dispossess'd himself of us;
We will not line his thin bestained cloak
With our pure honours, nor attend the foot
That leaves the print of blood where'er it walks;
Return, and tell him so: we know the worst.

Bast. Whate'er you think, good words, I think, were best.

Sal. Our griefs, and not our manners reason
Bast. But there is little reason in your grief;
Therefore, 'twere reason you had manners now.

Pem. Sir, sir, impatience hath his privilege.
Bast. 'Tis true; to hurt his master, no man else.

Sal. This is the prison: What is he lies here?

[Seeing Arthur.]

Pem. O death, made proud with pure and princely beauty!
The earth hath not a hole to hide this deed.
Sta. Murder, as hating what himself hath done,
Doth lay it open, to urge on revenge.
Big. Or when he doom'd this beauty to a grave,
Found it too precious-princely for a grave.

Sal. Sir Richard, what think you? Have you beheld,
Or have you read, or heard? or could you think?
Or do you almost think, although you see,
That you do see? could thought, without this object,
Form such another? This is the very top,
The height, the crest, or crest unto the crest,
Of murder's arms: this is the bloodiest shame,
The wildest savag'ry, the vilest stroke,
That ever wall-ey'd wrath, or staring rage,
Presented to the tears of soft remorse.²

Pem. All murders past do stand excus'd in this:
And this, so sole, and so unmatchable,
Shall give a holiness, a purity,
To the yet-unbegotten sin of time;
And prove a deadly bloodshed but a jest,
Exampl'd by this hcinous spectacle.

Bast. It is a damned and a bloody work;
The graceless action of a heavy hand,
If that it be the work of any hand.
Sal. If that it be the work of any hand?—
We had a kind of light, what would ensue:
It is the shameful work of Hubert's hand;
The practice and the purpose, of the king:—
From whose obedience I forbid my soul,
Kneeling before this ruin of sweet life,
And breathing to his breathless excellence
The incense of a vow, a holy vow;
Never to taste the pleasures of the world,
Never to be infected with delight,
Nor conversant with ease and idleness,
Till I have set a glory to this hand,
By giving it the worship of revenge.

[words.]

Pem. Big. Our souls religiously confirm thy

---

Enter Hubert.

Hu. Lords, I am hot with haste in seeking you;
Art. Arthur doth live; the king hath sent for you.
Sal. O, he is bold, and blushes not at death:—
Avant. Thou hateful villain, get thee gone!
Hu. I am no villain.
Sal. Must I rob the law? [Drawing his sword.]

Bast. Your words is bright, sir; put it up again.
Sal. Not till I sheath it in a murderer's skin,
Hu. Stand back, lord Salisbury, stand back,
I say:

By heaven, I think, my sword's as sharp as yours:
I would not have you, lord, forget yourself,
Nor tempt the danger of my true defence;
Lest I, by marking of your rage, forget
Your worth, your greatness, and nobility. [man?
Big. Out, dunghill! dars't thou brave a noble—

Hu. Not for my life: but yet I dare defend
My innocent life against an emperor.

Sal. Thou art a murderer.

Hu. Do not prove me so;
Yet, I am none: Whose tongue so'er speaks false,
Not truly speaks; who speaks not truly, lies.
Pem. Cut him to pieces.
Bast. Keep the peace, I say,
S. Stand by, or I shall gall you, Faulconbridge!

Bast. Thouwert better gall the devil, Salisbury:
If thou but frown on me, or stir thy foot,
Or teach thy hasty spleen to do me shame,
I'll strike thee dead. Put up thy sword, betime,
Or I will mail you and your tottering iron.
Big. What wilt thou do, renowned Faulconbridge?
Second a villain, and a murderer? [bridge?

Hu. Lord Digot, I am none.
Big. Who kill'd this prince?
Hu. 'Tis not an hour since I left him well:
I honour'd him, I lov'd him; and will weep
My date of life out, for his sweet life's loss.
S. Trust not those cunning waters of his eyes,
For villainy is not without such rhenum;
And he, long traded in, it makes it seem
Like rivers of remorse and innocency.
Away, with me, all you whose souls abhor
The uncleanly savours of a slaughter-house,
For I am stifled with this smell of sin.
Big. Away, toward Bury, to the Dauphin there.
Pem. There, tell the king, he may inquire us out.

[Execut Lords.]

Bast. Here's a good world!—Knew you of this fair work?
Beyond the infinite and boundless reach
Of mercy, if thou didst this deed of death,
Art thou damn'd, Hubert.

Hu. Do but hear me, sir.
Bast. Ha! I'll tell thee what;
Thou art damn'd as black,—nay, nothing is so black;
Thou art more deep damn'd than prince Lucifer,
There is not yet so ugly a fiend of hell
As thou shalt be, if thou didst kill this child.

Hu. Upon my soul,—
Bast. If thou didst but consent
To this most cruel act, do but despair,
And, if thou wastest a cord, the smallest thread
That ever spider twisted from her womb
Will serve to strangle thee: a rush will be
A beam to hang thee on; or wouldst thou drown thyself.
Put but a little water in a spoon,
And it shall be as all the ocean,
Enough to stifle such a villain up.—
I do suspect thee very grievously.

_Hub._ If I in act, consent, or sin of thought,
Be guilty of the stealing that sweet breath
Which was embounded in this beauteous clay,
Let hell want pains enough to torture me!
I left him well.

_Bast._ Go bear him in thine arms.—
I am amaz'd, methinks; and lose my way
Among the thorns and dangers of this world.—
How easy dost thou take all England up!
From forth this morsel of dead royalty,
The life, the right, and truth of all this realm
Is fled to heaven; and England now is left
To tug and scramble, and to part by the teeth
The unow'd interest of proud swelling state.
Now, for the bare-pick'd bone of majesty,
Doth dogged war bristle his angry crest,
And snarl in the gentle eyes of peace:
Now powers from home, and discontents at home,
Meet in one line; and vast confusion waits
(As doth a raven on a sick-fallen beast,)
The imminent decay of wrested pomp.
Now happy he, whose cloak and cincture can Hold out this tempest. Bear away that child,
And follow me with speed; I'll to the king:
A thousand businesses are brief in hand,
And heaven itself doth frown upon the land.

_[Exeunt._

Act Fifth.

Scene I.—A Room in the Palace.

_Enter King John, Pandulph with the Crown, and Attendants._

_K. J._ Thus have I yielded up into your hand
The circle of my glory.

_Pand._ Take again

_[Giving John the Crown._

From this my hand, as holding of the pope
Your sovereign greatness and authority.
_K. John._ Now keep your holy word: go meet the French;
And from his holiness use all your power
To stop their marches, 'fore we are inflam'd.
Our discontented counties do revolt,
Our people quarrel with obedience;
Swearing allegiance, and the love of soul,
To stranger blood, to foreign royalty.
This inundation of distemper'd humour
Rests upon you only to be qualified.
Then pause not; for the present time's so sick,
That present medicine must be minister'd,
Or overthrow incurable ensues.
_P._ It was my breath that blew this tempest up,
Upon your stubborn usage of the pope:
But, since you are a gentle convert,
My tongue shall hush again this storm of war,
And make fair weather in your blistering land.
On this Ascension-day, remember well,

_[Unown'd._

2 Girdle.

Upon your oath of service to the pope,
Go I to make the French lay down their arms.

_[Exit._

_K. John._ Is this Ascension-day? Did not the prophet
Say, that, before Ascension-day at noon,
My crown I should give off? Even so I have:
I did suppose, it should be on constraint;
But heaven be thank'd, it is but voluntary.

_Enter the Bastard._

_B._ All Kent hath yielded; nothing there holds
But Dover castle; London hath receiv'd, [out
Like a kind host, the Dauphin and his powers:
Your nobles will not hear you, but are gone
To offer service to your enemy;
And wild amazement hurries up and down
The little number of your doubtful friends.
_K. J._ Would not my lords return to me again,
After they heard young Arthur was alive?
_Bast._ They found him dead, and cast into the streets;
An empty casket, where the jewel of life
By some curst hand was robb'd and ta'en away.
_K. J._ That villain Hubert told me he did live.
_Bas._ So, on my soul, he did, for aught he knew.
But wherefore do you droop? why look you sad?
Be great in act, as you have been in thought;
Let not the world see fear, and sad distrust,
Governing the motion of a king's eye:
Be stirring as the time; be fire with fire;
Threaten the threatening, and outface the brow
Of bragging horror: so shall inferior eyes,
That borrow their behaviours from the great,
Grow great by your example, and put on
The dauntless spirit of resolution.
Away; and glister like the god of war,
When he intendeth to become the field;
Show boldness, and aspiring confidence.
What, shall they seek the lion in his den,
And fright him there? and make him tremble there?
O, let it not be said!—Forage, and run
To meet displeasure further from the doors;
And grapple with him, ere he come so nigh.
_K. John._ The legate of the pope hath been with me,
And I have made a happy peace with him;
And he hath promis'd to dismiss the powers
Led by the Dauphin.

_Bast._ O inglorious league! Shall we, upon the footing of our land,
Send fair-play orders, and make compromise,
Insinuation, parley, and base truce,
To arms invasive? Shall a beardless boy,
A cocker'd, silken wanton brave our fields,
And flesh his spirit in a warlike soil,
Mocking the air with colours idly spread,
And find no check? Let us, my liege, to arms;
Perchance, the cardinal cannot make your peace;
Or if he do, let it at least be said,
They saw we had a purpose of defence.

_K. John._ Have thou the ordering of this present time.

_[Know._

_B._ Away then, with good courage; yet, I
Our party may well meet a prouder foe.

_[Exeunt._

1 Pampered.
SCENE II.

A PLAIN NEAR ST EDMUND’S BURY.

Enter, in arms, Lewis, Salisbury, Melun, Pembroke, Bigot, and Soldiers.

Lew. My lord Melun, let this be copied out, and keep it safe for our remembrance; return the precedent to these lords again; that, having our fair order written down, both they, and we, perusing o’er these notes, may know wherefore we took the sacrament, and keep our faiths firm and inviolable.

Sal. Upon our sides it never shall be broken. And, noble Dauphin, albeit we swear a voluntary zeal, and unurg’d faith, to your proceedings; yet, believe me, prince, I am not glad that such a sore of time Should seek a plaster by contemn’d revolt, and heal the inveterate canker of one wound, by making many: O, it grieves my soul, that I must draw this metal from my side to be a widow-maker; O, and there, where honourable rescue, and defence, cries out upon the name of Salisbury: But such is the infection of the time, that, for the health and physic of our right, we cannot deal but with the very hand of stern injustice and confused wrong. — And is’t not pity, O my grievous friends! That we, the sons and children of this isle, were born to see so sad an hour as this; wherein we step after a stranger march Upon her gentle bosom, and fill up Her enemies’ ranks, (I must withdraw and weep Upon the spot of this enforced cause,) to grace the gentry of a land remote, and follow unacknowledged colours here? What here? — O nation, that thou couldst remove! That Neptune’s arms, who clippeth thee about, Would bear thee from the knowledge of thyself, and grasp thee unto a pagan shore; Where these two Christian armies might contemn The blood of malice in a vein of league, [bine And not to spend it so unneighbourly! Lew. A noble temper dost thou show in this; and great affections, wrestlings in thy bosom, Do make an earthquake of nobility, O, what a noble combat hast thou fought, Between compulsion and a brave respect! Let me wipe off this honourable dew, That silverly doth progress on thy cheeks: My heart hath melted at a lady’s tears, Being an ordinary foundation; But this effusion of such manly drops, This shower, blown up by tempest of the soul, Startles mine eyes, and makes me more amaz’d Than had I seen the vail’d top of heaven Figur’d quite o’er with burning meteors. Lift up thy brow, renowned Salisbury, and with a great heart heave away this storm Commit these waters to those baby eyes, That never saw the giant world enrag’d; Nor met with fortune other than at feasts, Full warm of blood, of mirth, of gossiping.

1 The original. 2 Embrace. 3 Of rebellion. 4 For his country.

Come, come; for thou shalt thrust thy hand as Into the purse of rich prosperity, [deep As Lewis himself: — so, nobles, shall you all, That knit your sinews to the strength of mine.

Enter Pandulf, attended.

And even there, methinks an angel spake: Look, where the holy legate comes apace, To give us warrant from the hand of heaven; And on our actions set the name of right, With holy breath.

Pan. Hail, noble prince of France! The next is this, — king John hath reconciled Himself to Rome; his spirit is come in, That so stood out against the holy church, The great metropolis and see of Rome: Therefore thy threatening colours now wind up, And tame the savage spirit of wild war; That, like a lion foster’d up at hand, It may lie gently at the foot of peace, and be no further harmful than in show.

Lew. Your grace shall pardon me, I will not I am too high-born to be propertied, [back To be a secondary at control, or useful serving-man, and instrument, To any sovereign state throughout the world. Your breath first kindled the dead coal of wars, Between this châsis’d kingdom and myself, And brought in matter that should feed this fire; And now ’tis far too huge to be blown out With that same weak wind which incrin’d it. You taught me how to know the face of right, Acquainted me with interest to this land, Yes, thrust this enterprise into my heart; And come you now to tell me, John hath made His peace with Rome? What is that peace to me? I, by the honour of my marriage-bed, After young Arthur, claim this land for mine; And, now it is half-conquer’d, must I back, Because that John hath made his peace with Rome? [borne, Am I Rome’s slave? What penny hath Rome What men provided, what munition sent, To underprop this action? is’t not I, That undergo this charge? who else but I, And such as to my claim are liable, Sweat in this business, and maintain this war? Have I not heard these islanders shout out, Vite le roy! as I have bank’d their towns? Have I not here the best cards for the game, To win this easy match play’d for a crown? And shall I now give o’er the yielded set? No, on my soul, it never shall be said.

Pan. You look but on the outside of this work.

Lew. Outside or inside, I will not return Till my attempt so much be glorified As to my ample hope was promised, Before I drew this gallant head of war, And cul’d these fiery spirits from the world, To outlook conquest, and to win renown Even in the jaws of danger and of death. — [Trumpet sounds.

What lusty trumpet thus doth summon us? Enter the Bastard, attended.

Bast. According to the fair play of the world, Let me have audience; I am sent to speak: —

1 To receive my estate from another’s will. 2 Raised entrenchments against. 3 Outbrave.
My holy lord of Milan, from the king
I come, to learn how you have dealt for him;
And, as you answer, I do know the scope
And warrant limited unto my tongue.

Pand. The Dauphin is too wilful-opposite,
And will not temporize with my entreaties;
He flatly says, he’ll not lay down his arms.

Bast. By all the blood that ever fury breath’d,
The youth says well—Now hear our English king;
For thus his royalty doth speak in me.
He is prepar’d; and reason too, he should:
This apish and unmanly approach,
This harness’d, and unadvised revel,
This unhair’d sauciness, and boyish troops,
The king doth smile at; and is well prepar’d
To whip this dwarfish war, these pigmy arms,
From out the circle of his territories.
That hand, which had the strength, even at your door,
To cudgel you, and make you take the hatch;¹
To dive like buckets, in concealed wells;
To crouch in litter of your stable planks;
To lie, like pawns, lock’d up in chests and trunks;
To hug with swine; to seek sweet safety out
In vaults and prisons; and to thrill and shake,
Even at the crying of your nation’s crow,
Thinking his voice an armed Englishman;
Shall that victorious hand be feebled here,
That in your chambers gave you chastisement?
No! Know the gallant monarch is in arms:
And like an eagle o’er his airy towers,
To souse² an annoyance that comes near his nest. —
And you degenerate, you ingrate revolts,
You bloody Neros, ripping up the womb
Of your dear mother England, blush for shame:
For your own ladies, and pale-visag’d maidens,
Like Amazons, come tripping after drums;
Their thimbles into armed gauntlets change,
Their needls³ to lances, and their gentle hearts
To fierce and bloody inclination.

Lev. There end they brave, ⁴ and turn thy face in peace:
We grant, thou canst outscold us; fare thee well;
We hold our time too precious to be spent
With such a brabller.⁵

Pand. Give me leave to speak.

Bast. No, I will speak.

Lev. We will attend to neither:
Strike up your drums; and let the tongue of war
Plead for our interest, and our being here.

Bast. Indeed, your drums being beaten, will cry out;
And so shall you, being beaten: Do but start
An echo with the clamour of thy drum,
And even at hand a drum is ready brac’d,
That shall reverberate all as loud as thine;
Sound but another, and another shall,
As loud as thine, rattle the welkin’s⁶ ear,
And mock the deep-mouth’d thunder; for at hand
(Nor trusting to this halting legate here, Whom he hath us’d rather for sport than need,) ⁷
Is warlike John; and in his forehead sits
A bare-ribb’d death, whose office is this day
To feast upon whole thousands of the French.

L. Strike up our drums to find this danger out.

Bast. And thou shall find it, Dauphin, do not doubt.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A FIELD OF BATTLE.

Alarums. Enter King John and Hubert.

K. John. How goes the day with us? O, tell me, Hubert.

Hub. Badly, I fear: How fares your majesty?

K. John. This fever, that hath troubled me so Lies heavy on me; O, my heart is sick! [long,

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, your valiant kinsman, Faulconbridge,
Desires your majesty to leave the field;
And send him word by me, which way you go.

K. John. Tell him toward Swinstead, to the abbey there.

Mess. Be of good comfort; for the great supply
That was expected by the Dauphin here,
Are wreck’d three nights ago on Goodwin sands.
This news was brought to Richard but even now:
The French fight coldly, and retire themselves.

K. John. Ah me! this tyrant fever burns me up,
And will not let me welcome this good news.

Set on toward Swinstead: to my litter straight:
Weakness possesseth me, and I am faint.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—ANOTHER PART OF THE SAME.

Enter Salisbury, Pembroke, Bigot, and others.

Sal. I did not think the king so stor’d with friends.

Pem. Up once again; put spirit in the French;
If they miscarry, we miscarry too.

Sal. That misbegotten devil, Faulconbridge,
In spite of spite, alone upholds the day.

Pem. They say, King John, sore sick, hath left the field.

Enter Melun wounded, and led by Soldiers.

Mel. Lead me to the revolts of England here.

Sal. When we were happy, we had other

Pem. It is the Count Melun. [names.

Sal. Wounded to death.

Mel. Fly, noble English, you are bought and Unthread the rude eye of rebellion, [sold;
And welcome home again discarded faith.
Seek out King John, and fall before his feet;
For if the French be lords of this loud day,
He means to recompense the pains you take,
By cutting off your heads: Thus hath he sworn,
And with him, and many more with me,
Upon the altar at St. Edmund’s Bury;
Even on that altar, where we swore to you
Dear amity and everlasting love.

Sal. May this be possible? may this be true?

Mel. Have I not hideous death within my view,
Retaining but a quantity of life;
Which bleeds away, even as a form of wax
Resolved from his figure ’gainst the fire?²
What in the world should make me now deceive,
Since I must lose the use of all deceit?
Why should I then be false, since it is true

1 Lewis. 2 Alluding to the images made by witches.
That I must die here, and live hence by truth? I say again, if Lewis do win the day, He is forsworn, if c'er those eyes of yours Behold another day break in the east: But even this night,—whose black contagious Already smokes about the burning crest (breath Of the old, feeble, and day-wearyed sun,— Even this ill night your breathing shall expire; Paying the fine of rated treachery, Even with a treacherous fine of all your lives, If Lewis by your assistance win the day. Commend me to one Hubert, with your king; The love of him,—and this respect besides, For that my grandsire was an Englishman,— Awakes my conscience to confess all this. In lieu whereof, I pray you bear me hence From forth the noise and rumour of the field; Where I may think the remnant of my thoughts In peace, and part this body and my soul With contemplation and devout desires. Sal. We do believe thee.—And beshrew my But I do love the favour and the form [soul Of this most fair occasion, by the which We will unthread the steps of this our flight; And, like a bated and retired flood, Leaving our rankness and irregular course, Stoop low within those bounds we have o'er-look'd, And calmly run on in obedience, Even to our ocean, to our great king John. My arm shall give thee help to bear thee thence; For I do see the cruel pangs of death [flight: Right in thine eye.—Away, my friends! New And happy newness, I that intends old right. [Exeunt, leading off Melun.

SCENE V.—THE FRENCH CAMP. Enter Lewis and his Train. Lew. The sun of heaven, methought, was loth to set; But stay'd and made the western welkin blush, When the English measur'd backward their own ground, In faint retire: O, bravely came we off, When with a volley of our needless shot, After such bloody toll we bid good night; And wound our tatter'd colours clearly up, Last in the field, and almost lords of it! Enter a Messenger. Mess. Where is my prince, the Dauphin? Lew. Here.—What news? Mess. The Count Melun is slain; the English By his persuasion, are again fall'n off: [lords, And your supply, which you have wish'd so long, Are cast away, and sunk, on Goodwin Sands. L. Ah, foul shrewd news!—Beshrew thy very I did not think to be so sad to-night, [heart: As this hath made me.—Who was he, that said, King John did fly, an hour or two before The stumbling night did part our weary powers? Mess. Whoever spoke it, it is true, my lord. L. Well; keep good quarter, and good care The day shall not be up so soon as I. [to-night: To try the fair adventure of to-morrow. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. AN OPEN PLACE IN THE NEIGHBOURHOOD OF SWINSTEAD ABBEY. Enter the Bastard and Hubert meeting. Hub. Who's there? speak, ho! speak quickly, or I shoot. Bast. A friend:—What art thou? Hub. Of the part of England. Bast. Whither dost thou go? H. What's that to thee? Why may not I demand Of thine affairs, as well as thou of mine? Bast. Hubert, I think. Hub. Thou hast a perfect thought: I will upon all hazards, well believe Thou art my friend, that know'st my tongue so Who art thou? [well: Bast. Who thou wilt: an if thou please, Thou mayst befriend me so much as to think I come one way of the Plantagenets. [night, Hub. Unkind remembrance! thou, and eyeless Have done me shame:—Brave soldier, pardon me, That any accent, breaking from thy tongue, Should 'scape the true acquaintance of mine ear. Bast. Come, come; sans compliment, what news abroad? Hub. Why, here walk I in the black brow of To find you out. [night, Bast. Brief, then; and what's the news? Hub. O, my sweet sir, news fitting to the night, Black, fearful, comfortless, and horrible. Bast. Show me the very wound of this ill news; I am no woman, I'll not swoon at it. Hub. The king, I fear, is poison'd by a monk: I left him almost speechless, and broke out To acquaint you with this evil; that you might, The better arm you to the sudden time Than if you had at leisure known of this. Bast. How did he take it? who did taste to him? Hub. A monk, I tell you, a resolved villain, Whose bowels suddenly burst out: the king Yet speaks, and, peradventure, may recover. B. Who didst thou leave to tend his majesty? Hub. Why, know you not? the lords are all come back, And brought Prince Henry in their company; At whose request the king hath pardon'd them, And they are all about his majesty. B. Withhold thine indignation, mighty heaven! And tempt us not to bear above our power!— I'll tell thee, Hubert, half my power this night, Passing these flats, are taken by the tide, These Lincoln washes have devoured them: Myself, well mounted, hardly have escaped. Away, before, conduct me to the king; I doubt, he will be dead, or e'er I come. [Exeunt.}

SCENE VII. THE ORCHARD OF SWINSTEAD ABBEY. Enter Prince Henry, Salisbury, and Bigot. P. Hen. It is too late; the life of all his blood Is touched corruptibly; and his pure brain, 1 Without.
(Which some suppose the soul's frail dwelling—
Doth by the idle comments that it makes, [house],
Foretell the ending of mortality.

Enter Pembroke.

P. His highness yet doth speak; and holds
That, being brought into the open air, [belief],
It would allay the burning quality
Of that fell poison which assaileth him. [here.]

P. Hen. Let him be brought into the orchard
Doth he still rage? [Exit Bigot.

Pem. He is more patient
Than when you left him; even now he sung.

P. Hen. O vanity of sickness! fierce extremes,
In their continuance will not feel themselves.
Death, having prey'd upon the outward parts,
Leaves them insensible; and his siege is now
Against the mind, the which he pricks and wounds
With many legions of strange fantasies;
Which, in their throng and press to that last hold,
Confound themselves. 'Tis strange, that death should sing.—

I am the cygnet to this pale faint swan,
Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death;
And, from the organ-pipe of frailty, sings
His soul and body to their lasting rest.

Sal. Be of good comfort, prince; for you are born
To set a form upon that indigest
Which he hath left so shapeless and so rude.

Re-enter Bigot and Attendants, who bring in King John in a chair.

K. J. Ay, marry, now my soul hath elbow-room;
It would not out at windows, nor at doors.
There is so hot a summer in my bosom,
That all my bowels crumble up to dust:
I am a scribbled form, drawn with a pen
Upon a parchment; and against this fire
Do I shrink up.

P. Hen. How fares your majesty?

K. John. Poison'd:—ill-fare;—dead, forsook, cast off;
And none of you will bid the winter come,
To thrust his icy fingers in my jaw;
Nor let my kingdom's rivers take their course
Through my burn'd bosom; nor entreat the north
To make his bleak winds kiss my parched lips,
And comfort me with cold:—I do not ask you much,
I beg cold comfort, and you are so strait
And so ingratitude, you deny me that.

P. Hen. O, that there were some virtue in my
That might relieve you! [tears,

K. John. The salt in them is hot.—
Within me is a hell; and there the poison
Is, as a fiend, confin'd to tyrannize
On unreprievable condemned blood.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. O, I am scalced with my violent motion,
And spleen of speed to see your majesty.

K. J. O cousin, thou art come to set mine eye:
The tackle of mine heart is crack'd and burn'd;
And all the shrouds, wherewith my life should
Are turned to one thread, one little hair: [sigh,
My heart hath one poor string to stay it by,
Which holds but till thy news be uttered;

And then all this thou see'st, is but a clod,
And module 1 of confounded royalty.

Bast. The Dauphin is preparing hitherward;
Where heaven he knows how we shall answer
For, in a night, the best part of my power, [him]:
As I upon advantage did remove,
Were in the washes, all unwarily,
Devoured by the unexpected flood.

The King dies.

Sal. You breathe these dead news in as dead an ear.—

My liege! my lord!—But now a king,—now
P. II. Even so must I run on, and even so step,
What surety of the world, what hope, what stay,
When this was now a king, and now is clay!

Bast. Art thou gone so? I do but stay behind,
To do the office for thee of revenge;
And then my soul shall wait on thee to heaven,
As it on earth hath been thy servant still.—

Now, now, you stars, that move in your right spheres,
[faithe; Where be your powers? Show now your mended
And instantly return with me again,
To push destruction, and perpetual shame,
Out of the weak door of our fainting land:
Straight let us seek, or straight we shall be
The Dauphin rages at our very heels. [sought;
S. It seems, you know not then so much as we;
The cardinal Pandulph is within at rest,
Who half an hour since came from the Dauphin;
And brings from him such offers of our peace
As we with honour and respect may take,
With purpose presently to leave this war.

Bast. He will the rather do it, when he sees Ourselves well sworn to our defence.

Sal. Nay, it is in a manner done already;
For many carriages he hath despatch'd
To the sea-side, and put his cause and quarrel
To the disposing of the cardinal;
With whom yourself, myself, and other lords,
If you think meet, this afternoon will post
To consummate this business happily.

B. Let it be so.—And you, my noble prince,
With other princes that may best be spared,
Shall wait upon your father's funeral.

P. H. At Worcester must his body be inter'd;
For so he will'd it.

Bast. Thither shall it then.
And happily may your sweet self put on
The lincolin state and glory of the land!
To whom, with all submission, on my knee,
I do beseech my faithful services,
And true subjection everlastingly.

Sal. And the like tender of our love we make,
To rest without a spot for evermore.

P. Hen. I have a kind soul that would give you thanks,
And knows not how to do it, but with tears.

Bast. O, let us pay the time but needful woe,
Since it hath been beforehand with our griefs.—
This England never did (nor never shall)
Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror,
But when it first did help to wound itself,
Now these her princes are come home again,
Come the three corners of the world in arms, [tue,
And we shall shock them: Nought shall make us
If England to itself do rest but true. [Exeunt.

Act First.

Enter King Richard, attended; John of Gaunt, and other Nobles, with him.

K. Rich. Old John of Gaunt, time-honour'd Lancaster,
Hast thou, according to thy oath and bond, brought hither Henry Hereford, thy bold son? Here to make good the boisterous late appeal, Which then our leisure would not let us hear, Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray? Gaunt. I have, my liege.
K. Rich. Tell me, moreover, hast thou sounded him,
If he appeal the duke on ancient malice; Or worthyly as a good subject should, On some known ground of treachery in him? G. As near as I could sift him on that argu,
On some apparent danger seen in him, [meut,— Aim'd at thy highness; no inveterate malice.
K. Rich. Then call them to our presence; face to face,
And frowning brow to brow, ourselves will hear The accuser, and the accused, freely speak:
[Exeunt some Attendants.

Re-enter Attendants, with Bolingbroke and Norfolk.

Boling. May many years of happy days befall My gracious sovereign, my most loving liege! Nor. Each day still better other's happiness: Until the heavens, envying earth's good hap, Add an immortal title to your crown!
K. Rich. We thank you both: yet one but flatters us,

1 Bond

As well appeareth by the cause you come; Namely, to appeal each other of high treason. Cousin of Hereford, what dost thou object Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray? B. First, (heaven be the record to my speech!) In the devotion of a subject's love, Tendering the precious safety of my prince, And free from other misbegotten hate, Come I appellant to this princely presence.— Now, Thomas Mowbray, do I turn to thee, And mark my greeting well; for what I speak, My body shall make good upon this earth, Or my divine soul answer it in heaven. Thou art a traitor, and a miscreant; Too good to be so, and too bad to live: Since, the more fair and crystal is the sky, The uglier seem the clouds that in it fly. Once more, the more to aggravate the note, With a foul traitor's name stuff I thy throat; And wish, (so please my sovereign,) ere I move What my tongue speaks, my right-drawn sword may prove.

N. Let not my cold words here accuse my zeal: 'Tis not the trial of a woman's war, The bitter clamour of two eager tongues, Can arbitrate this cause betwixt us twain: The blood is hot, that must be cool'd for this, Yet can I not of such tame patience boast. As to be nush'd, and nought at all to say: [me First, the fair reverence of your highness curbs From giving reins and spurs to my free speech: Which else would post, until it had return'd these Terms of treason doubled down his throat, Setting aside his high blood's royalty, And let him be no kinsman to my liege, I do defy him, and I spit at him; Call him—a slanderous coward, and a villain: Which to maintain, I would allow him odds, And meet him, were I tied to run a-foot Even to the frozen ridges of the Alps,
Upon remainder of a dear account,
Since last I went to France to fetch his queen:
Now swallow down that lie.—For Gloster's death,
I slew him not; but to my own disgrace,
Neglected my sworn duty in that case.—
For you, my noble lord of Lancaster,
The honourable father to my foe,
Once did I lay in ambush for your life,
A trespass that doth vex my grieved soul,
And, ere I last receiv'd the sacrament,
I did confess it; and exactly begg'd
Your grace's pardon, and I hope, I had it.
This is my fault: As for the rest appeal'd,
It issues from the rancour of a villain,
A recreant and most degenerate traitor;
Which in myself I boldly will defend;
And interchangeably hurl down my gage
Upon this overweening traitor's foot,
To prove myself a loyal gentleman
Even in the best blood chamber'd in his bosom:
In haste whereof, most heartily I pray
Your highness to assign our trial day.
K. R. Wrath-kindled gentlemen, be rul'd by me;
Let's purge this choler without letting blood:
This we prescribe, though no physician;
Deep malice makes too deep incision:
Forget, forgive; conclude, and be agreed;
Our doctors say, this is no time to bleed.—
Good uncle, let this end where it began;
We'll calm the duke of Norfolk, you our son.
Gau. To be a make-peace shall become my age:
Throw down, my son, the duke of Norfolk's gage.
K. Rich. And, Norfolk, throw down his Gon. When, Harry, when
Obedience bids, I should not bid again.
K. Rich. Norfolk, throw down; we bid; there is no boot.
N. Myself I throw, dread sovereign, at thy foot:
My life thou shalt command, but not my shame:
The one my duty owes; but my fair name,
(Despite of death, that lives upon my grave,) To dark dishonour's use thou shalt not have. I am disgrace'd, impeach'd, and baffled here;
Fie'd to the soul with slander's venom'd spear;
The which no balm can cure, but his heart-blood
Which breath'd this poison.
K. Rich. Rage must be withstood;
Give me his gage:—Lions make leopards tame.
Nor. Yea, but not change their spots: take but my shame,
And I resign my gage. My dear lord
The purest treasure mortal times afford,
Is—spotless reputation; that away,
Men are but gilded bonam, or painted clay.
A jewel in a ten-times-barred-up chest
Is—a bold spirit in a loyal breast.
Mine honour is my life; both grow in one;
Take honour from me, and my life is done:
Then, dear my liege, mine honour let me try,
In that I live, and for that will I die. [begin.
K. Ri. Cousin, throw down your gage: do you
Bol. O, God defend my soul from such foul sin!
Shall I seem crest-fallen in my father's sight?
Or with pale beggar-feast impeach my height
Before this outdare'd dastard? Ere my tongue
Shall wound mine honour with such feeblewroerg,

1 Uninhabitable.
SCENE I.

KING RICHARD II.

Or sound so base a parle, my teeth shall tear
The slavish motive of recanting fear;
And spit it bleeding in his high disgrace,
Where shame doth harbour, even in Mowbray's face.

K. R. We were not born to sue, but to command:
Which since we cannot do to make you friends,
Be ready, as your lives shall answer it,
At Coventry, upon Saint Lambert's day;
There shall your swords and lances arbitrate
The swelling difference of your settled hate;
Since we cannot stone you, we shall see
Justice design the victor's chivalry.—

Marshal, command our officers at arms
Be ready to direct these home-alarms. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—THE SAME. A ROOM IN THE DUKE OF LANCASHIRE'S PALACE.

Enter Gaunt and Duchess of Gloster.

Gaunt. Alas! the part I had in Gloster's blood
Doth more solicit me, than your exclaims,
To stir against the butchers of his life.
But since correction lieth in those hands,
Which made the fault that we cannot correct,
Put we our quarrel to the will of heaven;
Who when he sees the hours ripe on earth,
Will rain hot vengeance on offenders' heads.

Du. Finds brotherhood in thee no sharpspur?
Hath love in thy old blood no living fire?
Edward's seven sons, whereof thyself art one,
Were as seven phials of his sacred blood,
Or seven fair branches springing from one root:
Some of those seven are dried by nature's course,
Some of those branches by the destinies cut:
But Thomas, my dear lord, my life, my Gloster,—
One phial full of Edward's sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most royal root, —
Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt;
Is hack'd down, and his summer leaves all faded,
By envy's hand, and murder's bloody axe.
Ah, Gaunt! his blood wasthine; and though thou liv'st,
Yet art thou slain in him: thou dost consent
In some large measure to thy father's death,
In that thou seest thy wretched brother die,
Who was the model of thy father's life.
Call it not patience, Gaunt, it is despair:
In suffering thus thy brother to be slaughtered,
Thou show'st the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching stern murder how to butcher thee:
That which in mean men we entitle—patience,
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts.
What shall I say? to safeguard thine own life,
The best way is—to venge my Gloster's death.

Gaunt. Heaven's is the quarrel; for heaven's
His deputy anointed in his sight, [substitute,
Hath cas'd his death: the which if wrongfully,
Let heaven revenge; for I may never lift
An angry arm against his minister.

D. Where then, alas! may I complain myself?

Gaunt. To heaven, the widow's champion and defence.

Duch. Why then, I will. Farewell, old Gaunt,
Thou go'st to Coventry, there to behold
Our cousin Hereford and fell Mowbray fight:

1 Reconelle. 2 Show.

SCENE III.

GOSFORD GREEN, NEAR COVENTRY.

Lists set out, and a Throne. Herals, &c., attending.

Enter the Lord Marshal, and Aumerle.

M. My lord Aumerle, is Harry Herefordarm'd! Aum. Yea, at all points: and longs to enter in.

Mar. The duke of Norfolk, sprightly and bold,

Stays but the summons of the appellant's Aum. Why, then the champions are prepar'd,

For nothing but his majesty's approach.

Flourish of Trumpets. Enter King Richard,

Who takes his seat on his throne; Gaunt, and Several Noblemen, who take their places. A trumpet is sounded, and answered by another trumpet within. Then enter Norfolk, in armour, preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, demand of yonder champion

The cause of his arrival here in arms:
Ask him his name; and orderly proceed
To swear him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. In God's name, and the king's, say who

Art, And why thou com'st, thus knightly clad in arms:
Against what man thou com'st, and what thy quarrel:

Speak truly, on thy knighthood, and thy oath;
And so defend thee heaven, and thy valour!

Nor. My name is Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk;

Who hither comes engaged by my oath,
Trumpet sounds. Enter Bolingbroke, in armour; preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, ask yonder knight in arms, Both who he is, and why he cometh hither Thus platted in habitments of war; And formally according to our law Depose him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. What is thy name? and wherefore com'st thou hither, Before king Richard, in his royal lists? Against whom comest thou? and what's thy quarrel? Speak like a true knight, so defend thee heaven! Bol. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby, Am I; who ready here do stand in arms, To prove by heaven's grace, and my body's valour, In lists, on Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk, That he's a traitor, foul and dangerous, To God of heaven, King Richard, and to me: And, as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

Mar. On pain of death, no person be so bold, Or daring-hardy, as to touch the lists; Except the marshal, and such officers, Appointed to direct these fair designs.

Boling. Lord Marshal, let me kiss my sovereign's hand, And bow my knee before his majesty: For Mowbray, and myself, are like two men That vow a long and weary pilgrimage; Then let us take a ceremonious leave, And loving farewell, of our several friends.

Mar. The appellant in all duty greets your highness, And craves to kiss your hand, and take his leave.

K. Rich. We will descend, and fold him in our arms. Cousin of Hereford, as thy cause is right, So be thy fortune in this royal fight! Farewell, my blood; which if to-day thou shed, Lament we may, but not revenge thee dead.

Boling. O, let no noble eye profane a tear For me, if I be gored with Mowbray's spear; As confident, as is the falcon's flight Against a bird, do I with Mowbray fight. My loving lord, [To Lord Marshal.] I take my leave of you;— Of you, my noble cousin, lord Aumerle;— Not sick, although I have to do with death; But lusty, young, and cheerily drawing breath.— Lo, as at English feasts, so I regret The damniest last, to make the end most sweet: [To Gaunt.] O thou, the earthly author of my blood,— Whose youthful spirit, in me regenerate, Doth with a two-fold vigour lift me up To reach at victory above my head,— Add proof unto mine armour with thy prayers; And with thy blessings steel my lance's point,

That it may enter Mowbray's waxen coat, And furnish new the name of John of Gaunt, Even in the lusty 'haviour of his son.

Gaunt. Heaven in thy good cause make thee prosperous! Be swift like lightning in the execution: And let thy blows, doubly redoubled, Fall like amazing thunder on the casque Of thy adverse pernicious enemy: Rouse up thy youthful blood, be valiant, and live.

Boling. Mine innocence, and Saint George to thrive!

Nor. [Rising.] However heaven, or fortune, cast my lot, There lives or dies, true to King Richard's A loyal, just, and upright gentleman: [throne, Never did captivate with a freer heart Cast off his chains of bondage, and embrace His golden uncontroll'd enfranchisement, More than my dancing soul doth celebrate This feast of battle with mine adversary.— Most mighty liege,—and my companion peers,— Take from my mouth the wish of happy years: As gentle and as jovial, as to jest, Go I to fight; Truth hath a quiet breast. K. Rich. Farewell, my lord: securely I esp'y Virtue with valour couched in thine eye.— Order the trial, marshal, and begin.

[The King and the Lords return to their seats.] Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby, Receive thy lance; and God defend the right! Boling. [Rising.] Strong as a tower in hope, I cry,—amen.

Mar. [To an Officer.] Go bear this lance to Thomas duke of Norfolk. [Derby, 1 Her. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Stands here for God, his sovereign, and himself, On pain to be found false and recreant, Toprove the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray, A traitor to his God, his king, and him, And dares him to set forward to the fight. 2 Her. Here standeth Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk, On pain to be found false and recreant, Both to defend himself, and to approve Henry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby, To God, his sovereign, and to him disloyal; Courageously, and with a free desire, Attending but the signal to begin.

Mar. Sound trumpets; and set forward, combatants. [A charge sounded. Stay, the king hath thrown his warder down. K. Rich. Let them lay by their helmets and their spears, And both return back to their chairs again:— Withdraw with us:—and let the trumpets sound, While we return these dukes what we decree.— [A long flourish. [To the Combatants.] Draw near, And list, what with our council we have done, For that our kingdom's earth should not besoill'd With that dear blood which it hath fostered; And our eyes do hate the dire aspect [swords; Of civil wounds plough'd up with neighbours' (And for we think the eagle-wind's pride Of sky-aspiring and ambitious thoughts, With rival-hating envy, set you on 1 Truncheon.
To wake our peace, which in our country's cradle
Draws the sweet infant breath of gentle sleep;
Which so rous'd up, with bolsterous untund' drums,
With harsh resounding trumpets' dreadful bray,
And grating shock of wrathful iron arms,
Might from our quiet confines fright fair peace,
And make us wade even in our kindred's blood:—
Therefore we beseech you, our territories:—
You, cousin Hereford, upon pain of death,
Till twice five summers have enrich'd our fields,
Shall not requit our fair dominions,
But tread the stranger paths of banishment.

Boling. Your will be done: This must my comfort be,—
That sum that warmes you here, shall shine on me;
And those his golden beams, to you here lent,
Shall point on me, and gild my banishment.

K. R. Norfolk, for thee remains a heavier doom,
Which I with some unwillingness pronounce:
The fly-slow hours shall not determine
The dateless limit of thy dear exile:—
The hopeless word of—never to return
Breathe I against thee, upon pain of life.

Nor. A heavy sentence, my most sovereign liege,
And all unlook'd for from your highness' mouth:
A dearer merit, not so deep a main
As to be cast forth in the common air,
Myerved I deserve at your highness' hand.
The language I have learn'd these forty years,
My native English, now I must forgo.
And now my tongue's is to me no more,
Than an unstrung viol or a harp;
Or, like a cunning instrument cas'd up,
Or, being open, put into his hands
That knows no touch to tune the harmony.
Within my mouth you have engag'd my tongue,
Doubly portcullis'd, with my teeth, and lips;
And dull, unfeeling barren ignorance
Is made my gaoler to attend on me.
I am too old to fawn upon a nurse,
Too far in years to be a pupil now;
What is thy sentence, then, but speechless death,
Which robs my tongue from breathing native breath?

K. R. Ric. It boots thee not to be compassionate;
After our sentence, plaining comes too late.

Nor. [Retiring.] Then thus, I turn me from my country's light,
To dwell in solemn shades of endless night.

K. R. Return again, and take an oath with thee.
Lay on our royal sword your banish'd hands;
Swear by the duty that you owe to heaven
(Our part therein we banish with yourselves,)
To keep the oath that we administer:—
You never shall (so help you truth and heaven!) Embrace each other's love in banishment;
Nor never look upon each other's face;
Nor never write, regret, nor reconcile
This lowering tempest of your home-bred hate;
Nor never by advised purpose meet,
To plot, contrive, or complot any ill,
'Gainst us, our state, our subjects, or our land.

Boling. I swear.

Nor. And I, to keep all this.

Boling. Norfolk, so far as to mine enemy;—
By this time, had the king permitted us,
One of our souls had wander'd in the air,
Banish'd this frail sepulchre of our flesh,
As now our flesh is banish'd from this land:
Confess thy treasons, ere thou fly the realm;
Since thou hast far to go, bear not along
The clogging burden of a guilty soul.

Nor. No, Bolingbroke: If ever I were a traitor,
My name be blotted from the book of life,
And I from heaven banish'd as from hence!
But what thou art, heaven, thou, and I do know;
And all too soon, I fear, the king shall rue,— Farewell, my liege:—Now no way can I stray,
Save back to England, all the world's my way:

[Exit.]

K. Rich. Uncle, even in the glasses of thine eyes
I see thy griev'd heart, thy sad aspect
Hath from the number of his banish'd years
Pluck'd four away;—Six frozen winters spent,
Return [To Boling.] with welcome home from banishment.

Boling. How long a time lies in one little word!
Four lagging winters, and four wanton springs,
End in a word; such is the breath of kings.

Gaunt. I thank my liege, that in regard of me.
He shortens four years of my son's exile:
But little vantage shall I reap thereby;
For, ere the six years that he hath to spend,
Can change their moons, and bring their times about,
My oil-dried lamp, and time bewast'd light,
Shall be extinct with age, and endless night;
My inch of taper will be burnt and done,
And blindfold death not let me see my son.

K. R. Why, uncle, thou hast many years to live.

G. But not a minute, king, that thou canst give:
Shorten my days thou canst with sullen sorrow,
And pluck nights from me, but not lend a morrow.

Thou canst help time to furrow me with age,
But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage;
Thy word, is current with him for my death;
But, dead, thy kingdom cannot buy my breath.

K. Ric. Thy son is banish'd upon good advice;
Whereeto thy tongue a party 1 verdict gave;
Why at our justice seem'st thou then to lower?

Gaunt. Things sweet to taste, prove in digestion sour.

You urg'd me as a judge; but I had rather,
You would have bid me argue like a father:—
O, had it been a stranger, not my child,
To smooth his fault, I should have been more
A partial 2 slander sought I to avoid, [mild;
And in the sentence my own life destroy'd.
Alas, I look'd, when some of you should say,
I was too strict, to make mine own away;
But you gave leave to my unwilling tongue,
Against my will to do myself this wrong.

K. R. Cousin, farewell:—and, uncle, bid him so,
Six years we banish him, and he shall go.

[Flourish. Eseunt King Richard and Train.

Avr. Cousin, farewell: what presence must not know,
From where you do remain let paper show.

Mar. My lord, no leave take I; for I will ride,
As far as land will let me, by your side. [words,
G. O, to what purpose dost thou hoard thy
That thou return'st no greeting to thy friends?

Bot. I have too few to take my leave of you,

1 Voted for it.  2 Partiality.
When the tongue's office should be prodigal
To breathe the abundant doleful of the heart.
G. Thy grief is but thy absence for a time.
Bol. Joy absent, grief is present for that time.
G. What is six winters? they are quickly gone.
Boling. To men in joy; but grief makes one hour ten.
G. Call it a travel that thou tak'st for pleasure.
Bol. My heart will sigh when I miscall it so,
Which finds it an enforced pilgrimage.
Gaunt. The sudden passage of thy weary steps
Esteem a foal, wherein thou art to set
The precious jewel of thy home-return.
Bol. Nay, rather, every tedious stride I make
Will but remember me what a deal of world
I wander from the jewels that I love.
Must I not serve a long apprenticeship
To foreign passages, and in the end,
Having my freedom, boast of nothing else,
But that I was a journeyman to grief?
Gaunt. All places that the eye of heaven visits,
Are to a wise man ports and happy havens:
Teach thy necessity to reason thus;
There is no virtue like necessity.
Think not, the king did banish thee;
But thou the king: Woe doth the heavier sit,
Where it perceives it is but faintly borne.
Go, say—I sent thee forth to purchase honour,
And not—the king exil'd thee: or suppose,
Devouring pestilence hangs in our air,
And thou art flying to a fresher clime.
Look, what thy soul holds dear, imagine it
To lie that way thou go'st, not whence thou com'st:
Suppose the singing birds, musicians; [strew'd;
The grass whereon thou treads't, the presence;
The flowers, fair ladies; and thy steps no more
Than a delightful measure or a dance:
For gnarling's sorrow hath less power to bite
The man that mocks at it, and sets it light.
Boling. O, who can hold a fire in his hand,
By thinking on the frosty Caucasus?
Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite,
By bare imagination of a feast?
Or swallow naked in December snow,
By thinking on fantastick summer's heat?
O, no, the apprehension of the good,
Gives but the greater feeling to the worse;
Fell sorrow's tooth doth never rattle more,
Than when it bites, but lanceth not the sore.
Gaunt. Come, come, my son, I'll bring thee on thy way:
Had I thy youth, and cause, I would not stay.
Bol. Then, England's ground, farewell; sweet soil, alien;
My mother, and my nurse, that bears me yet!
Where'er I wander, boast of this I can—
Though banished, yet a trueborn Englishman.

SCENE IV.

The Same. A Room in the King's Castle.
Enter King Richard, Bagot, and Green;
Aumerle following.

K. Rich. We did observe.—Cousin Aumerle,
How far brought you high Hereford on his way?
A. I brought high Hereford, if you call him so,
1 Presence chamber. 2 Growling.

But to the next high way, and there I left him.
K. Rich. And, say, what store of parting tears were shed?
A. Faith, none by me; except the north-east
Which then blew bitterly against our faces,
Awak'd the sleeping rheum; and so, by chance,
Did grace our hollow parting with a tear.
K. Rich. What said our cousin, when you parted
Amer. Farewell; [with him?
And, for my heart disdain'd that my tongue
Should so profane the word, that taught me craft
To counterfeit oppression of such grief,
That words seem'd but buried in my sorrow's grave.
Marry, would the word farewell have lengthen'd
And added years to his short banishment, hours,
He should have had a volume of farewells;
But, since it would not, he had none of me.
K. Rich. He is our cousin, cousin; but 'tis doubt,
When time shall call him home from banishment,
Whether our kinsman come to see his friends.
Ourself, and Bushy, Bagot here, and Green,
Observe'd his courtship to the common people:
How he did seem to dive into their hearts,
With humble and familiar courtesy;
What reverence he did throw away on slaves;
Wooing poor craftsmen, with the craft of smiles,
And patient underbearing of his fortune,
As 'twere to banish their affects with him,
Off goes his bonnet to an oyster-wench;
A brace of draymen bid—God speed him well,
And had the tribute of his supple knee,
With—Thanks, my countrymen, my loving
As were our England in reversion his, [friends;
And he our subjects' next degree in hope.
Green. Well, he is gone; and with him go these thoughts.
Now for the rebels, which stand out in Ireland:—
Expeditious must be made, my liege;
Ere further leisure yield them further means,
For their advantage, and your highness' loss.
K. Rich. We will ourself in person to this war,
And, for our coffers—with too great a court,
And liberal largess—are grown somewhat light,
We are enforce'd to farm our royal realm;
The revenue whereof shall furnish us
For our affairs in hand: If that come short,
Our substitutes at home shall have blank charts; [rich,
Whereto, when they shall know what men are
They shall subscribe them for large sums of gold,
And send them after to supply our wants;
For we will make for Ireland presently.

Enter Bushy.

Bushy, what news? [lord;
B. Old John of Gaunt is grievous sick, my Suddenly taken; and hath sent post-haste,
To entreat your majesty to visit him.
K. Rich. Now put it, heaven, in his physician's
To help him to his grave immediately! [mind,
The lining of his coffers shall make coats
To deck our soldiers for these Irish wars.—
Come, gentlemen, let's all go visit him:
Pray heaven, we may make haste, and come too late! [Excised.
Act Second.

SCENE I.—LONDON. A ROOM IN ELY HOUSE.

Gaunt on a Couch; the Duke of York, and others standing by him.

Gaunt. Will the king come? that I may breathe my last

In wholesome counsel to his unsted youth.

Yor. Vex not yourself, nor strive not with your

For all in vain comes counsel to his ear. [breath;

Gaunt. O, but they say, the tongues of dying men

Enforce attention, like deep harmony: [vain:

Where words are scarce, they are seldom spent in

For they breathe truth, that breathe their words pain.

He, that no more must say, is listen'd more

Than they whom youth and ease have taught to glose: [before:

More are men's ends mark'd, than their lives

The setting sun, and musick at the close,

As the last taste of sweets, is sweetest last;

Writ in remembrance, more than things long past:

[hear,

Though Richard my life's counsel would not

My death's sad tale may yet undeaf his ear.

Y. No; it is stopp'd with other flattering sounds,

As, praises of his state: then, there are found

Lascivious metres; to whose venom sound

The open ear of youth doth always listen:

Report of fashions in proud Italy;

Whose manners still our tardy apish nation

Limps after, in base imitation,

Where doth the world thrust forth a vanity,

(So it be new, there's no respect how vile)

That is not quickly buzz'd into his ears?

Then all too late comes counsel to be heard

Where will doth mutiny with wit's regard.

Direct not him, whose way himself will choose;

'Tis breath thou lack'st, and that breath wilt thou lose.

Gaunt. Methinks I am a prophet new inspir'd;

And thus, expiring, do foretell of him:

His rash fierce blaze of riot cannot last:

For violent fires soon burn out themselves:

Small showers last long, but sudden storms are short;

He tires betimes, that spurs too fast betimes;

With eager feeding, food doth choke the feeder:

Light vanity, insatiate corromant,

Consuming means, soon prey's upon itself.

This royal throne of kings, this scepter'd isle,

This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,

This other Eden, demi-paradise;

This fortress, built by nature for herself,

Against infection, and the hand of war;

This happy breed of men, this little world;

This precious stone set in the silver sea,

Which serves it in the office of a wall,

Or as a moat defensive to a house,

Against the envy of less happier lands; [land,

This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this Eng-

This nurse, this teeming womb of royal kings,

Fear'd by their breed, and famous by their birth,

Renowned for their deeds as far from home,

(For Christian service, and true chivalry)

As is the sepulchre in stubborn Jewry,

1 Flatter.

Of the world's ransom, blessed Mary's son:

This land of such dear souls, this dear land,

Dear for her reputation through the world,

Is now leas'd out (I'd die pronouncing it),

Like to a tenement or pelting farm:

England, bound in with the triumphant sea,

Whose rocky shore beats back the envious siege

Of watery Neptune, is now bound in with shame:

With inky blots, and rotten parchment bonds;

That England, that was wont to conquer others,

Hath made a shamefull conquest of itself;

O, would the scandal vanish with my life,

How happy then were my ensuing death!

Enter King Richard, and Queen; Aumerle,

Bushy, Green, Bagot, Ross, and Willoughby;

York. The king is come: deal mildly with his youth;

For young hot colts, being rag'd, do rage the more.

Queen. How fares our noble uncle, Lancastor?

K. Rich. What comfort, man? How is't with aged Gaunt?

[lion!

Gaunt. O, how that name befits my compos'd

Old Gaunt, indeed; and gaunt² in being old:

Within me grief hath kept a tedious fast;

And who abstains from meat, that is not gaunt?

For sleeping England long time have I watch'd;

Watching breeds leanness, leanness is all gaunt:

The pleasure that some fathers feed upon,

Is my strict fast, I mean—my children's looks;

And, therein fasting, hast thou made me gaunt:

Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a grave,

Whose hollow womb inherits nought but bones.

K. Rich. Can sick men play so nicely with their names?

Gaunt. No, misery makes sport to mock itself:

Since thou dost seek to kill my name in me,

I mock my name, great king, to flatter thee.

K. Rich. Should dying men flatter with those that live?

Gaunt. No, no; men living flatter those that die.

K. Rich. Thou, now a dying, say'st—thou flatter'st me.

Gaunt. Oh no; thou diest, though I theslicher be.

K. Rich. I am in health, I breathe, and see thee ill;

Gaunt. Now, he that made me, knows I see thee ill in myself to see, and in thee seeing ill, (ill;)

Thy death-bed is no lesser than the land,

Wherein thou liest in reputation sick:

And thou, too careless patient as thou art,

Commit'st thy anointed body to the cure

Of those physicians that first wounded thee:

A thousand flatterers sit within thy crown,

Whose compass is no bigger than thy head;

And yet, incaged in so small a verge,

The waste is no whit lesser than thy land.

O, had thy grandsire, with a prophet's eye,

Seen how his sons' son should destroy his sons,

From forth thy reach he would have laid thy shame;

Deposing thee before thou wert possess'd,

Which art possess'd now to depose thyself.

Why, cousin, wert thou regent of the world,

It were a shame to let this land by lease;

But, for thy world, enjoying but this land,

Is it not more than shame, to shame it so?

Landlord of England art thou now, not king:

1 Paltry.

2 Lean, thin.
I am the last of noble Edward's sons,
Of whom thy father, prince of Wales, was first;
In war, was never lion rag'd more fierce,
In peace was never gentle lamb more mild,
Than was that young and princely gentleman;
His face thou hast, for even so look'd he,
Accomplish'd with the number of thy hours;
But, when he frown'd, it was against the French,
And not against his friends; his noble hand
Did win what he did spend, and spent not that
Which his triumphant father's hand had won:
His hands were guilty of no kindred's blood,
But bloody with the enemies of his kin.
O, Richard! York is too far gone with grief,
Or else he never would compare between.

K. Rich. Why, uncle, what's the matter?
York. O, my liege, Pardon me if you please; if not, I, pleas'd
Not to be parden'd, am content withal.
Seek you to seize, and gripe into your hands,
The royalties and rights of banish'd Hereford?
Is not Gaunt dead? and doth not Hereford live?
Was not Gaunt just? and is not Harry true?
Did not the one deserve to have an heir?
Is not his heir a well-deserving son?
Take Hereford's rights away, and take from timo
His charters, and his customary rights;
Let not to-morrow then ensue to-day;
Be not thyself, for how art thou a king,
But by fair sequence and succession?
If you do wrongfully seize Hereford's rights,
Call in the letters patent that he hath
By his attorneys-general to sue
His livery, and deny his offer'd homage,
You pluck a thousand dangers on your head,
You lose a thousand well-disposed hearts,
And prick my tender patience to those thoughts
Which honour and allegiance cannot think.

K. Rich. Think what you will; we seize into our hands
His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands.
York. I'll not be by, the while: My liege, farewell:
What will ensue hereof, there's none can tell;
But by bad courses may be understood,
That their events can never fall out good. [Exit.
K. Rich. Go, Bushy, to the earl of Wiltshire
Bid him repair to us to Ely House, [straight;
To see this business: To-morrow next
We will for Ireland; and 'tis time, I trow;
And we create, in absence of ourself,
Our uncle York lord governor of England,
For he is just and always lov'd us well.—
Come on, our queen: to-morrow must we part;
Be merry, for our time of stay is short. [Flourish.
[Exeunt King, Queen, Bushy, Amnerle, Green, and Bogot.

N. Well, lords, the duke of Lancaster is dead.
Ross. And living too; for now his son is duke.
Willo. Barely in title, not in revenue.
North. Richly in both, if justice had herright.
Ross. M. heart is great; but it must break
With silence,
Ere it be burden'd with a liberal tongue.
North. Nay, speak thy mind; and let him ne'er speak more,
That speaks thy words again, to do thee harm!

1 Raw common soldiers.
1 Claim for possession.
KING. Urge I mine. [Exeunt.]

Willo. Tends that thou'dst speak to the duke of Hereford?
If it be so, out with it boldly, man;
Quick is mine ear to hear of good towards him.
Ross. No good at all, that I can do for him.

Unless you call it good to pitt him,
Stript and bereft of all his patrimony.

North. Now, afore heaven, 'tis shame, such Wrong are borne,
In him a royal prince, and many more
Of noble blood in this declining land.
The king is not himself, but basely led
By flatterers; and what they will inform,
Merely in hate, 'gainst any of us all,
That will the king severely prosecute
'Gainst us, our lives, our children, and our heirs.
Ross. The commons hath he pill'd with Grievous taxes,
And lost their hearts: the nobles hath he fin'd
For ancient quarrels, and quite lost their hearts.
Willo. And daily new exactions are devi'd;
As blanks, benevolences, and I wot not what;
But what, in heaven's name, doth become of this?
N. Wars have not wasted it, for warr'd he hath
But basely yielded upon compromise [not,
That which his ancestors achiev'd with blows:
More hath he spent in peace, than they in wars.
Ross. The earl of Wiltshire hath the realm in Farm. [man.

Willo. The king's gown bankrupt, like a broken
N. Reproach, and dissolution, hangeth over him.
Ross. He hath not money for these Irish wars,
His burdensome taxation notwithstanding,
But by the robbing of the banish'd duke.
N. His noble kinsman: most degenerate king!
But, lords, we hear this fearful tempest sing,
Yet seek no shelter to avoid the storm:
We see the wind sit sore upon our sails,
And ye, we strike not, but severely perish.
E. We see the very wreck that we must suf-
And unavoidable is the danger now, [fer;
For suffering so the causes of our wreck.

North. Not so; even through the hollow eyes of
I spy life peering; but I dare not say [death;
How near the tidings of our comfort is.
Willo. Nay, let us share thy thoughts, as thou dost ours.
Ross. Be confident to speak, Northumberland:
We three are but thyself; and, speaking so,
Thy words are but as thoughts; therefore be bold.
N. Then thus:—I have from Port le Blanc, a
In Britanny, receiv'd intelligence, [day
That Harry Hereford, Reigned lord Cobham,
[The son of Richard earl of Arundel,]
That late broke from the duke of Exeter,
His brother, archbishop late of Canterbury,
Sir Thomas Erpingham, Sir John Ramston,
Sir John Norton, Sir Robert Waterton, and Francis Quaint,—
All these well furnish'd by the duke of Bretagne,
With eight tall'ships, three thousand men of war,
Are making hithe with all due expediencę,
And shortly mean to touch our northern shore:
Perhaps, they had ere this; but that they stay
The first departing of the king for Ireland.
If then, we shall shake off our slavish yoke,
SHAKESPEARE'S DRAMATIC WORKS.

ACT II.

Enter York.

Green. Here comes the duke of York.

Queen. With signs of war about his aged neck; O, full of careful business are his looks!—

Uncle,

For heaven's sake, speak comfortable words.

Y. Should I do so, I should belie my thoughts;

Comfort's in heaven; and we are on the earth,

Where nothing lives but crosses, care, and grief.

Your husband he is gone to save far off,

Whilst others come to make him lose at home:

Here am I left to underprop his land;

Who, weak with age, cannot support myself;

Now comes the sick hour that his surfeit made;

Now shall he try his friends that flatter'd him.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. My lord, your son was gone before I came.

York. He was?—Why, so!—go all which way it will!—

The nobles they are fled, the commons cold,

And will, I fear, revolt on Hereford's side.——

Sirrah,

Get thee to Flashy, to my sister Gloster;

Bid her send me presently a thousand pound:——

Hold, take my ring.

Ser. My lord, I had forgot to tell your lordship:

To-day, as I came by, I called there;

But I shall grieve you to report the rest.

York. What is it, knave?

Ser. An hour before I came, the Duchess died.

York. God for his mercy! what a tide of woes

Comes rushing on this woful land at once!

I know not what to do:—I would to heaven,

1 Cheating.

(Shy. untruth had not provok'd him to it.)

The king had cut off my head with my brother's—

What, are these posts despatch'd for Ireland?—

How shall we do for money for these wars?

Come, sister,—cousin, I would say, pray, pardon me,

Go, fellow, [To the Servant.] Get thee home,

And bring away the armour that is there.——

(Exit Servant.

Gentlemen, will you go muster men? If I know

How, or which way, to order these affairs,

Thrust thus disorderly into my hands,

Never believe me. Both are my kinsmen;

The one's my sovereign, whom both my oath

And duty bids defend; the other again,

Is my kinsman, whom the king hath wrong'd;

Whom conscience and my kindred bids to right.

Well, somewhat we must do.—Cone, cousin, I'll

Dispose of you:—Go, muster up your men,

And meet me presently at Berkley Castle.

I should to Flashy too,—

But time will not permit:—All is uneven,

And every thing is left at six and seven.——

[Exeunt York and Queen.

Bu. The wind sits fair for news to go to Ireland,

But none returns. For us to levy power,

Proportional to the enemy,

Is all impossible.

Green. Besides, our nearness to the king in love,

Is near the hate of those love not the king.

Bagot. And that's the wavering commons:—for their love

Lies in their purses; and whose empties them,

By so much fills their hearts with deadly hate.

Bushy. Wherein the king stands generally condemn'd.

Bagot. If judgment lie in them, then so do we,

Because we ever have been near the king.

G. Well, I'll for refuge straight to Bristol Castle;

The earl of Wiltshire is already there.

Bush. Thither will I with you:—for little office

The hateful commons will perform for us;

Except like curs to tear us all to pieces,—

Will you go along with us?

Bagot. No; I'll to Ireland to his majesty.

Farewell:—if heart's presages be not vain,

We three here part, that never shall meet again.

Bushy. That's as York strives to beat back

Bolingbroke.

G. Alas, poor duke! the task he undertakes

Is—numb'ring sands, and drinking oceans dry;

Where one on his side fights, thousands will fly.

Bu. Farewell at once; for once, for all, and Green. Well, we may meet again. [ever.

Bagot. I fear me, never. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.

THE WILDS IN GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

Enter Bolingbroke and Northumberland, with Forces.

Bol. How far is it, my lord, to Berkeley now?

North. Believe me, noble lord,

I am a stranger here in Glostershire.

These high wild hills, and rough uneven ways,

Draw out our miles and make them wearisome;

1 Disloyalty.
And yet your fair discourse hath been as sugar,
Making the hard way sweet and délectable.
But, I bethink me, what a weary way
From Ravenspur to Cotswoold will be found
In Ross and Willoughby, wanting your company;
Which, I protest, hath very much beguiled
The tediousness and process of my travel:
But theirs is sweeten'd with the hope to have
The present benefit which I possess:
And hope to joy, is little less in joy,
Than hope enjoy'd: by this the weary lords
Shall make their way seem short; as mine hath done
By sight of what I have, your noble company.

Boling. Of much less value is my company,
Than your good words. But who comes here!

Enter Harry Percy.

North. It is my son, young Harry Percy,
Sent from my brother Worcester, whencesoever
Percy, I had thought, my lord, to have learn'd his health of you.
North. Why, is he not with the queen?
P. No, my good lord; he hath forsook the court,
Broken his staff of office, and dispers'd the household of the king.

North. What was his reason?
He was not so resolv'd, when last we spake togeth'r.

Percy. Because your lordship was proclaimed
But he, my lord, is gone to Ravenspur,
To offer service to the duke of Hereford;
And sent me o'er by Berkley, to discover
What power the duke of York had lov'd there;
Then with direction to repair to Ravenspur.

N. Have you forgot the duke of Hereford, boy!
Percy. No, my good lord; for that is not forgot,
Which ne'er I did remember: to my knowledge,
I never in my life did look on him.
N. Then learn to know him now; this is the duke.
P. My gracious lord, I tender you my service,
Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young:
Which older days shall ripen and confirm
To more approved service and desert.

Boling. I thank thee, gentle Percy; and beseech,
I count myself in nothing else so happy,
As in a soul remembrance my good friends:
And, as my fortune ripens with thy love,
It shall be still thy true love's recompense:
My heart this covenant makes, my hand thus seals it.

North. How far is it to Berkley? And what stir
Keeps good old York there, with his men of war?
P. There stands the castle, by yon tuft of trees,
Mann'd with three hundred men, as I have heard:
And in it are the lords of York, Berkley, and Seymore:
None else of name, and noble estimate. [mourn;

Enter Ross and Willoughby.

North. Here come the lords of Ross and Wiloughby,
Bloody with spurring, fiery-red with haste.

Boling. Welcome, my lords: I wot, you love
A banish'd traitor; all my treasury [purses
Is yet but unfelt thanks, which more enrich'd,
Shall be your love and labour's recompense.

Ross. Your presence makes us rich, most noble lord. [it.

Wil. And far surmounts our labour to attain Boling. Evermore thanks, the exchequer of the poor;
Which till my infant fortune comes to years,
Stands for my bounty. But who comes here?

Enter Berkley.

North. It is my lord of Berkley, as I guess.
Be. My lord of Hereford, my message is to you.
Boling. My lord, my answer is—to Lancaster;
And I am come to seek that name in England:
And I must find that title in your tongue,
Before I make reply to aught you say.

Berk. Mistake me not, my lord; 'tis not my meaning,
To raze one title of your honour out:—
To you, my lord, I come, (what lord you will,) From the most glorious regent of this land,
The duke of York; to know, what pricks you on
To take advantage of the absent time, 1
And fright our native peace with self-born arms.

Enter York. attended.

Bo. I shall not needs transport my words by you.
Here comes his grace in person.—My noble uncle!

[Kneels.

York. Show me thy humble heart, and not thy Whose duty is deceivable and false. [knee,

Boling. My gracious uncle!
York. Tut, tut! Grace me no grace, nor uncle me no uncle;
I am no traitor's uncle; and that word—grace,
In an ungracious mouth, is but profane.
Why have those banish'd and forbidden legs
Dar'd once to touch a dust of England's ground?
But then more why,—Why have they dar'd to march
So many miles upon her peaceful bosom;
Frighting her pale-fac'd villages with war,
And ostentation of despised arms?
Com'st thou because the anointed king is hence? Why, foolish boy, the king is left behind,
And in my loyal bosom lies his power.
Were I but now the lord of such hot youth, As when brave Gaunt, thy father, and myself, Rescued the black prince, that young Mars of men,
From forth the ranks of many thousand French; O, then, how quickly should this arm of mine, Now prisoner to the palsy, chastise thee,
And minister correction to thy fault.

Bo. My gracious uncle, let me know my fault;
On what condition stands it, and wherein?
York. Even in condition of the worst degree,—
In gross rebellion, and detested treason:
Thou art a banish'd man, and here art come,
Before the expiration of thy time,
In braving arms against thy sovereign.
Bo. As I was banish'd, I was banish'd Hereford;
But as I come, I come for Lancaster.
And, noble uncle, I beseech your grace,
Look on my wrongs with an indifferent 2 eye:
You are my father, for, methinks, in you I see old Gaunt alive; O, then, my father! Will you permit that I shall stand condemned
A wandering vagabond; my rights and royalties

1 The king's absence. 2 Impartial.
Pluck'd from my arms perforce, and given away
To upstart unthrifts? Wherefore was I born?
If that my cousin king be king of England,
It must be granted, I am duke of Lancaster.
You have a son, Aumerle, my noble kinsman:
Had you first died, and he had been thus trod
down,
He should have found his uncle Gaunt a father,
To rouse his wrongs, and chase them to the bay.
I am denied to sue my livery here,
And yet my letters-patent give me leave;
My father's goods are all distraint'd and sold;
And these, and all, are all amiss employ'd.
What would you have me do? I am a subject,
And challenge law: Attorneys are denied me;
And therefore personally I lay my claim
To my inheritance of free descent. [ab'ds.]
Nor. The noble duke hath been too much R.
It stands your grace upon, to do him right.
Willo. Base men by his endowments are made great.
[This,—
York. My lords of England, let me tell you
I have had feeling of my cousin's wrongs,
And labour'd all I could to do him right:
But in this kind to come, in braving arms,
Be his own carver, and cut out his way,
To find out right with wrong,—it may not be;
And you, that do abet him in this kind,
Cherish rebellion, and are rebels all.
Nor. The noble duke hath sworn, his coming is
But for his own; and, for the right of that,
We all have strongly sworn to give him aid;
And let him ne'er see joy, that breaks that oath.
Yor. Well, well, I see the issue of these arms;
I cannot mend it, I must needs confess,
Because my power is weak, and all ill left:
But, if I could, by him that gave me life,
I would attach you all, and make you stoop
Unto the sovereign mercy of the king;
But, since I cannot, be it known to you,
I do remain as neuter. So fare you well:—
Unless you please to enter in the castle,
And there repose you for this night.
Boling. An offer, uncle, that we will accept.
But we must win your grace, to go with us
To Bristol Castle; which, they say, is held
By Bushy, Bagot, and their complices,
The caterpillars of the commonwealth,
Which I have sworn to weed, and pluck away.
York. It may be, I will go with you:—but yet I'll pause:
For I am loath to break our country's laws.
Nor friends, nor foes, to me welcome you are;
Things past redress, are now with me past care.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. A CAMP IN WALES.

Enter Salisbury and a Captain.

C. My lord of Salisbury, we have staid ten days,
And hardly kept our countrymen together,
And yet we hear no tidings from the king:
Therefore we will disperse ourselves: farewell.
S. Stay yet another day, thou trusty Welshman.
The king reposeth all his confidence in thee.
C. Capt. 'Tis thought the king is dead: we will not
The bay-trees in our country are all wither'd,
1 Wroth. 2 Claim for possessions.
And meteors fright the fixed stars of heaven;
The pale-fac'd moon looks bloody on the earth,
And lean-look'd prophets whisper fearful change:
[Leap.
Rich men look sad, and ruffians dance and
The one, in fear to lose what they enjoy,
The other, to enjoy by rage and war:
These signs forerun the death or fall of kings.
Farewell: our countrymen are gone and fled,
As well asser'd, Richard their king is dead. [Exit. Saf. Ah, Richard! with the eyes of heavy mind,
I see thy glory, like a shooting star,
Fall to the base earth from the firmament!
Thy sun sets weeping in the lowly west,
Witnessing storms to come, we, and unrest.
Thy friends are fled, to wait upon thy foes;
And crossly to thy good all fortune goes. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I. BOLINGBROKE'S CAMP AT BRISTOL.

Enter Bolingbroke, York, Northumberland,
Percy, Willoughby, Ross; Officers behind with Bushy and Green, prisoners.

Boling. Bring forth these men.
Bushy, and Green, I will not vex your souls
(Since presently your souls must part your bodies)!
With too much urging your pernicious lives,
For 'twere no charity, yet, to wash your blood
From off my hands, here in the view of men,
I will unfold some causes of your death.
You have misled a prince, a royal king,
A happy gentleman in blood and lineaments,
By you unhappied and disfigured clean.
You have, in manner, with your sinful hours,
Made a divorce betwixt his queen and him;
Broke the possession of a royal bed,
And stain'd the beauty of a fair queen's cheeks
With tears drawn from her eyes by your foul wrongs.
Myself—a prince, by fortune of my birth:
Near to the king in blood; and near in love,
Till you did make him misunderstand me,—
Have stoop'd my neck under your injuries,
And sigh'd my English breath in foreign clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment:
Whilst you have fed upon my seignories,
Dispark'd my parks, and fell'd my forest woods;
From my own windows torn my household coat,
Raz'd out my impress, leaving me no sign,—
Save men's opinions, and my living blood,—
To show the world I am a gentleman. [This,
This, and much more, much more much than twice all
Condemnis you to the death.—See them deliver'd
To execution and the hand of death. [over Bus. More welcome is the stroke of death to Than Bolingbroke to England. [me,
Gr. My comfort is,—that heaven will takeour
And plague injustice. [souls, Boling. My lord Northumberland, see them despacht.
[Exeunt Northumberland and others,
with Prisoners.
Uncle, you say, the queen is at your house;
1 Completely.
SCENE II.

THE COAST OF WALES. A CASTLE IN VIEW.

K. Rich. Barkloughly Castle call you this at hand?

[the air,

Aum. Yea, my lord: How brooks your grace
After late tossing on the breaking seas?—

K. Rich. Needs must I like it well; I weep for joy.

To stand upon my kingdom once again.—

Dear earth, I do salute thee with my hand,
Though rebels wound thee with their horses.

As a long parted mother with her child
Hath playedonly with her tears, and smiles in meeting;
So, weeping, smiling, greet I thee, my earth,
And do thee favour with my royal hands.

Feed not thy sovereign’s foe, my gentle earth,
Nor with thy sweets comfort his rav’nous sense,
But let thy spiders that suck up thy venom,
And heavy gaited toads, lie in their way:
Doing annoyance to the treacherous feet.
Which with usurping steps do trample thee.

Yield stinging nettles to mine enemies:
And when they from thy bosom pluck a flower,
Guard it, I pray thee, with a lurking adder;
Whose double tongue may with a mortal touch
Throw death upon thy sovereign’s enemies.—

Mock not, my senseless congregation, lords;
This earth shall have a feeling, and these stones
Proved armed soldiers, ere her native king
Shall falter under foul rebellious arms.

Car. Fear not, my lord; that Power, that made you king,
Hath power to keep you king, in spite of all.

The means that heaven yields must be embrac’d,
And not neglected; else, if heaven would,
And we will not, heaven’s offer we refuse;
The proffer’d means of succour and redress.

A. He means, my lord, that we are too remiss;
Whilst Bolingbroke, through our security,
Grows strong and great, in substance, and in friends.

[not,

K. Rich. Discomfortable cousin! know’st thou
That when the searching eye of heaven is hid
Behind the globe, and lights the lower world,
Then thieves and robbers range abroad unseen,
In murders, and in outrage, bloody here;
But when, from under this terrestrial ball,
He lights the proud tops of the eastern pines,
And darts his light through every guilty hole,
Then murders, treasons, and detested sins,
The cloak of night being pluck’d from off their backs,
Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves?
So when this thief, this traitor, Bolingbroke,—
Who all this while hath revel’d in the night,

Whilst we were wandering with the antipodes,—
Shall see us rising in our throne the east,
His treasons will sit blushing in his face;
Not able to endure the sight of day,
But, self-affrighted, tremble at his sin.
Not all the water in the rough rude sea
Can wash the balm from an anointed king:
The breath of worldly men cannot depose
The deputy elected by the Lord:
For every man that Bolingbroke hath press’d,
To lift shrewd steel against our golden crown,
God for his Richard hath in heavenly pay
A glorious angel: then, if angels fight,
Weak men must fall; for heaven still guards the right.

Enter Salisbury.

Welcome, my lord; How far off lies your power?
Sc. Nor near, nor further off, my gracious lord,
Than this weak arm: Discomfort guides my tongue,

And bids me speak of nothing but despair.
One day too late, I fear, my noble lord,
Hath clouded all thy happy days on earth:
O, call back yesterday, bid time return,
And thou shalt have twelve thousand fighting:
To-day, to-day, unhappy day too late, [men! O’er’throws thy joys, friends, fortune, and thy state;
For all the Welshmen, hearing thou wilt dead,
Are gone to Bolingbroke, dispers’d, and fled.

Aum. Comfort, my liege: why looks your grace so pale?

K. K. But now the blood of twenty thousand
Did triumph in my face, and they are fled;
And till so much blood thither come again,
Have I not reason to look pale and dead?

All souls that will be safe fly from my side;
For time hath set a blot upon my pride.

A. Comfort, my liege; remember who you are.

K. Rich. I had forgot myself: am I not king?
Awake thou sluggard majesty! thou sleep’st.
Is not the king’s name forty thousand names?

Arm, arm, my name, a puny subject strikes
At thy great glory. — Look not to the ground,
Ye favourites of a king; Are we not high?

High be our thoughts; I know my uncle York Hath power enough to serve our turn. But who Comes here?

Enter Scroop.

Sc. More health and happiness betide my liege,
Than can my care-tun’d tongue deliver him.

K. R. Mine ear is open and my heart prepar’d;
The worst is worldly loss, thou canst unfold.
Say, is my kingdom lost? why, ‘twas my care;
And what loss is it, to be rid of care?

Strives Bolingbroke to be as great as we?
Greater he shall not be; if he serve God,
We’ll serve him too, and be his fellow so;
Revolt our subjects; that we cannot mend;
They break their faith to God, as well as us;
Cry, woe, destruction, ruin, loss, decay;
The worstis—death, and death will have his day.

Sc. Glad am I, that your highness is so arm’d
To bear the tidings of calamity.
Like an unseasonable stormy day, [shores,
Which makes the silver rivers drown their
As if the world were all dissolv’d to tears;
So high above his limits swells the rage
Of Bolingbroke, covering your fearful land
With hard bright steel, and hearts harder than steel.

White beards have arm'd their thin and hairless
Against thy majesty; boys, with women's voices,
Strive to speak big, and clap their female joints
In stiff unwieldy arms against thy crown;
Thy beardsmen learn to bend their bows
Of double-fatal yew against thy state;
Yea, distaff-women manage rust}' bills
Against thy state: both young and old rebel,
And all goes worse than I have power to tell.

K. R. Too well, too well, thou tell'st a tale so ill.
Where is the earl of Wiltshire? where is Bagot?
What is become of Bushy? where is Green?
That they have let the dangerous enemy
Measure our confines with such peaceful steps?
If we prevail, their heads shall pay for it. [broke.
I warrant they have made peace with Bolingbroke.

Scroop. Peace have they made with him, indeed, my lord.
K. R. O' Villains, vipers, lost without redemption.
Dogs, easily won to fawn on any man! [heart!
Snakes, in my heart-blood warm'd, that sting my Three Judases each one thrice worse than Judas,
Would they make peace?

Soro. Sweet love, I see changing his property,
Turns to the surest and most deadly hate:
Again uncurse their souls; their peace is made
With heads, and not with hands: whom you curse
Have felt the worst of death's destroying wound,
And lie full low, grav'd in the hollow ground.

Aum. Is Bushy, Green, and the earl of Wiltshire defeated?
S. Yea, all of them at Bristol lost their heads.
A. Where is the duke my father with his power?

K. R. No matter where; of comfort no man
Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs;
Make dust our paper, and with rainy eyes
Write sorrow on the bosom of the earth.
Let's choose executors, and talk of wills:
And yet not so,—for what can we bequeath,
Save our deposed bodies to the ground?
Our lands, our lives, and all are Bolingbroke's,
And nothing can we call our own, but death;
And that small model of the barren earth,
Which serves as paste and cover to our bones.
For heaven's sake, let us sit upon the ground,
And tell sad stories of the death of kings:
How some have been depos'd, some slain in war;
Some haunted by the ghosts they have depos'd;
Some poison'd by their wives, some sleeping
kill'd:
All murder'd:—For within the hollow crown
That rounds the mortal temples of a king,
Keeps death his court; and there the anticks sits,
Scoffing his state, and grinning at his pomp;
Allowing him a breath, a little scene
To monarchical, be fear'd, and kill with looks;
Infusing him with self and vain conceit,—
As if this flesh, which walls about our life,
Were brass impregnable; and humour'd thus,
Comes at the last, and with a little pin [king!
Bones through his castle wall, and—farewell
1 Paupers on royal bounty.
Cover your heads, and mock not flesh and blood
With solemn reverence; throw away respect,
Tradition, form, and ceremonious duty,
For you have but mistook me all this while:
I live with bread like you, feel want, taste grief,
Need friends:—Subjected thus,
How can you say to me— I am a king?

Cor. My lord, wise men never wait their present
But presently prevent the ways to wait. [woes.
To fear the foe, since fear oppresseth strength,
Gives, in your weakness, strength unto your foe,
And so your follies fight against yourself.
Fear, and be slain; no worse can come, to fight:
And fight and die, is death destroying death;
Where fearing dying, pays death servile breath.

Aum. My father hath a power, enquire of him;
And learn to make a body of a limb.

K. Rich. Thou chid'st me well:—Proud Bolingbroke, I come
To change blows with thee for our day of doom.
This ague-fit of fear is overblown;
An easy task it is to win our own.
Say, Scroop, where lies your uncle, with his power?
Speak sweetly, man, although thy looks be sour.
Soro. Men judge by the complexion of the sky
The state and inclination of the day:
So may you by my dull and heavy eye,
My tongue hath but a heavier tale to say.
I play the torturer, by small and small,
To lengthen out the worst that must be spoken:—
Your uncle York hath join'd with Bolingbroke;
And all your northern castles yielded up,
And all your southern gentlemen in arms.
Upon his party.

K. Rich. Thou hast said enough.—
Beshrew thee, cousin, which did lead me forth.

[To Aumerle.
Of that sweet way I was in to despair!
What say you now? what comfort have we now?
By heaven, I'll hate him everlastingly,
That bids me be of comfort any more.
Go, to Flint Castle; there I'll pine away;
A king, woe's slave, shall kingly woe obey.
That power I have, discharge; and let them go
To ear the land that hath some hope to grow,
For I have none:—Let no man speak again
To alter this, for counsel is but vain.

Aum. My liege, one word.

K. Rich. He does me double wrong
That wounds me with the flatteries of his tongue,
Discharge my followers, let them hence:—Away,
From Richard's night, to Bolingbroke's fair day.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. — WALES. BEFORE FLINT CASTLE.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, Bolingbroke and Forces; York, Northumberland, and others.

Boling. So that by this intelligence we learn,
The Welshmen are dispers'd; and Salisbury
Is gone to meet the king, who lately landed,
With some few private friends upon this coast.

Nor. The news is very fair and good, my lord:
Richard, not far from hence, hath hid his head.
Y. It would be seem the lord Northumberland,
To say—King Richard:—Alack the heavy day,
When such a sacred king should hide his head!

1 Plough.
Nor. Your grace mistakes me; only to be brief,
Left I his title out.
York. The time hath been,
Would you have been so brief with him he would
Have been so brief with you, to shorten you,
For taking so the head, your whole head’s length.
Boling. Mistake not, uncle, farther than you should. [should,
York. Take not, good cousin, further than you
Lest you mistake: The heavens are o’er your head.
Boling. I know it, uncle; and oppose not Myself against their will.—But who comes here?

Enter Percy.
Well, Harry; what, will not this castle yield?
Percy. The castle royally is mann’d, my lord,
Against thy entrance.
Boling. Royally!
Why, it contains no king?
Percy. Yes, my good lord,
It doth contain a king: King Richard lies
Within the limits of your line and stone,
And with him are the lord Anumerle, lord Salis-
Sir Stephen Scroop: besides a clergymen bury,
Of holy reverence, who, I cannot learn.
North. Belike it is the bishop of Carlisle.
Boling. [To North.] Noble lord,
Go to the rude ribs of that ancient castle;
Through brazen trumpet send the breath of parle
Into his ruin’d ears, and thus deliver,
Harry Bolingbroke
On both his knees doth kiss King Richard’s hand;
And sends allegiance, and true faith of heart,
To his most royal person; hither come
Even at his fees to lay my arms and power;
Provided that, my banishment repeal’d,
And lands restor’d again, be freely granted:
If not, I’ll use the advantage of my power,
And lay the summer’s dust with showers of blood,
Ran’d from the wounds of slaughter’d Englishmen:
[broke
The which, how far off from the mind of Boling-
It is, such crimson tempest should bedrench
The fresh green lap of fair King Richard’s land,
My stooping duty tenderly shall show.
Go, signify as much; while here we march
Upon the grassy carpet of this plain.—
[Northumberland advances to the Castle with a trumpet.
Let’s march without the noise of threat’ning drum,
That from the castle’s to ter rap battles.
Our fair appointments may be well perus’d,
Methinks, King Richard and myself should meet
With no less terror than the elements
Of fire and water, when their thund’ring shock
At meeting tears the cloudy cheeks of heaven.
Be he the fire, I’ll be the yielding water:
The rage be his, while on the earth I rain
My waters; on the earth, and not on him.
Marchion, and mark King Richard how he looks.
A Parle sounded, and answered by another Trumpet within. Flourish. Enter on the Walls King Richard, the Bishop of Carlisle,
Aumerle, Scroop, and Salisbury.
Y, See, see, King Richard doth himself appear,
As doth the blushing discontented sun
From out the fiery-portal of the east:

When he perceives the envious clouds are bent
To dim his glory, and to stain the track
Of his bright passage to the occident.
Yet looks he like a king; behold, his eye,
As bright as is the eagle’s, lightens forth,
Controlling majesty: Alack, alack, for woe,
That any harm should stain so fair a show!
K. Rich. [To North.] We are amaz’d; and thus long have we stood
To watch the fearful bending of thy knee,
Because we thought ourself thy lawful king:
And if we be, how dare thy joints forget
To pay their awful duty to our presence?
If we be not, show us the hand of God
That hath dismiss’d us from our stewardship;
For well we know, no hand of blood and bone
Can gripe the sacred handle of our scepter,
Unless he do profane, steal, or usurp.
And though you think, that all, as you have done,
Have torn their souls; by turning them from us,
And we are barren, and bereft of friends;—
Yet know,—my master, God omnipotent,
Is must’ring in his clouds, on our behalf,
Armies of pestilence: and they shall strike
Your children yet unborn, and unbegot,
That lift your vassal hands against my head,
And threaten the glory of my precious crown.
Tell Bolingbroke, (for you’d; methinks, he is,)
That every stride he makes upon my land,
Is dangerous treason: He is come to ope
The purple testament of bleeding war;
But ere the crown he looks for live in peace,
Ten thousand bloody crowds of mothers’ sons
Shall ill become the flower of England’s face;
Change the complexion of her maid-pale peace
To scarlet indignation, and be wed
Her pasture’s grass with faithful English blood,
N. The king of heaven forbid, our lord the king
Should so with civil and uncivil arms
Be rush’d upon; Thy thrice noble cousin,
Harry Bolingbroke, doth humbly kiss thy hand;
And by the honourable tomb he swears,
That stands upon thy royal gran’dison’s bones;
And by the royalties of both your bloods,
Currents that spring from monest gracious head;
And by the buried hand of warlike Gaunt;
And by the worth and honour of himself,
Comprising all that may be sworn or said,—
His coming hither hath no further scope,
Than for his lineal royalties, and to beg
Enfranchisement immediate on his knees:
Which on thy royal party granted once,
His glittering arms he will commend to rust,
His barbed steeds to stables, and his heart
To faithful service of your majesty.
This swears he, as he is a prince, is just;
And, as I am a gentleman, I credit him.
K. Rich. Northumberland, say,—thus the king returns—
His noble cousin is right welcome hither;
And all the number of his fair demands
Shall be accomplish’d without contradiction:
With all the gracious utterance thou hast,
Speak to his genteel hearing kind commends.—
[To Aumerle.] We do debase ourself, cousin, do we not,
To look so poorly, and to speak so fair?
1 (The part of.)
Shall we call back Northumberland, and send Defiance to the traitor, and so die?

_Aum._ No, my good lord; let’s fight with gentle words. [swords. Till time lend friends, and friends their helpful

_K. Rich._ Merciful heaven, that e’er this tongue of mine,
That laid the sentence of dread banishment
On you proud man, should take it off again
With words of sooth! O, that I were as great
As is my grief, or lesser than my name?
Or that I could forget what I have been!
Or not remember what I must be now! [to beat,
Swell’st thou, proud heart? I’ll give thee scope
Since foes have scope to beat both thee and me.

_Aum._ Northumberland comes back from Bolingbroke.

_K. Rich._ What must the king do now? Must he
The king shall do it. Must he be depos’d?
The king shall be contented: must he lose
The name of king? o’ God’s name, let it go:
I’ll give my jewels for a set of beads;
My gorgeous palace, for a hermitage;
My gay apparel, for an alms-man’s gown;
My fig’r’d goblets for a dish of wood;
My scepter, for a Palmer’s walking-staff;
My subjects, for a pair of carved saints;
And my large kingdom, for a little grave,
A little, little grave, an obscure grave:
Or, I’ll be buried in the king’s highway,
Some way of common trade where subjects’ feet
May hourly trample on their sovereign’s head:
For on my heart they tread, now whilst I live;
And, buried once, why not upon my head?

_Aum._ Aumerle, thou weep’st; My tender-hearted cousin:
We’ll make foul weather with despised tears;
Oursighs, and they, shall lodge the summercorn,
And make a death in this revolting land.
Or shall we play the wantsons with our woes,
And make some pretty march with shedding tears;
As thus:—To drop them still upon one place,
Till they have fretted us a pair of graves
Within the earth; and therein laid.—_There lies
Two kinsmen, digg’d their graves with weeping eyes!
Would not this ill do well?—Well, well, I see
I talk but idly, and you mock at me.—
Most mighty prince, my lord Northumberland,
What says king Bolingbroke? will his majesty
Give Richard leave to live till Richard die?
You make a leg, and Bolingbroke says—ay.

_North._ My lord, in the base court he doth attend,
To speak with you; may’t please you to come down?

_K. Rich._ Down, down, I come; like glitter-
Wanting the manage of unruly jades.

[North, retires to Boling. In the base court? Base court, where kings grow base,
To come at traitors’ calls, and do them grace.
In the base court? Come down! Down, court?
down, king!
For night-owls shriek, where mounting larks should sing. [Exeunt, from above.

_Boling._ What says his majesty?

1 _Gentleness._ 2 _A bow._ 3 _Lower._

SCENE IV.

LANGLEY. THE DUCK OF YORK’S GARDEN.

Enter the Queen and two Ladies.

_Queen._ What sport shall we devise here in this garden,
To drive away the heavy thought of care?

_Queen._ ’Twill make me think
The world is full of rubs, and that my fortune
Runs against the bias.

_Queen._ My legs can keep no measure in delight,
When my poor heart no measure keeps in grief;
Therefore, no dancing, girl; some other sport.

_Queen._ Of either, madam.

_Queen._ Of neither, girl:
For if of joy, being altogether wanting,
It doth remember me the more of sorrow;
Or if, of grief, being altogether had,
It adds more sorrow to my want of joy:
For what I have, I need not to repeat;
And what I want, it boots not to complain.

_Queen._ Madam, I’ll sing.

_Queen._ Tis well that thou hast cause:
But thou shouldst please me better, would’st thou weep.

_Queen._ I could weep, madam, would it do you
Que. And I could weep, would weeping do me
And never borrow any tear of thee. [good,
But stay, here come the gardeners:
Let's step into the shade of these trees.—

Enter a Gardener and Two Servants.
My wretchedness unto a row of pines,
They'll talk of state; for every one doth so
Against a change; Woe is forerun with woe.

[Queen and Ladies retire.

Gar. Go, bind thou upon'you' dangling apricocks,
Which, like unruly children, make their sire
Stoop with oppression of their prodigal weight;
Give some supportance to the bending twigs,
Go thou, and like an executioner,
Cut off the heads of too-fast-growing sprays,
That look too lofty in our commonwealth;
All must be even in our government,
You thus employ'd, I will go root away
The noisome weeds, that without profit suck
The soil's fertility from wholesome flowers.

1 Ser. Why should we, in the compass of a pale,
Keep law, and form, and due proportion,
Showing, as in a model, our firm estate?
When our sea-walled garden, the whole land,
Is full of weeds; her fairest flowers chocked up,
Her fruit trees all unprun'd, her hedges ruin'd,
Her knots disorder'd, and her wholesome herbs
Swarming with caterpillars?

Gar. Hold thy peace:—
He that hath suffer'd this disorder'd spring,
Hath now himself met with the fall of leaf:
The weeds, that his broad-spreading leaves did shelter,
That seem'd in eating him to hold him up,
Are pluck'd up, root and all, by Bolingbroke;
I mean the earl of Wiltshire, Bushy, Green.

1 Ser. What, are they dead?
Gar. They are; and Bolingbroke
Hath seiz'd the wasteful king.—Oh! What pity is it,
That he had not so trimm'd and dress'd his land,
As we this garden! We at time of year
Do wound the bark, the skin of our fruit-trees;
Lest being over-pround with sap and blood,
With too much riches it confound itself:
Had he done so to great and growing men,
They might have liv'd to bear, and he to taste
Their fruits of duty. All superfluous branches
We lop away, that bearing boughs may live:
Had he done so, himself had born the crown,
Which waste of idle hours hath quite thrown down.
[be depos'd?

1 Ser. What, think you then, the king shall
Gar. Depress'd he is already; and depos'd,
Tis doubt, he will be: Letters came last night
To a dear friend of the good duke of York's,
That tell black tidings.

Queen. O, I am press'd to death,
Through want of speaking!—Thou, old Adam's likeness, [Coming from her concealment.
Set to dress this garden, how dares [news?
Thy harsh-rude tongue sound this unpleasing
What Eve, what serpent hath suggested thee,
To make a second fall of cursed man?
Why dost thou say, King Richard is depos'd?
Dar'st thou, thou little better thing than earth,
Divine his downfall? Say, where, when and how,
Cam'st thou by these ill tidings? speak, thou wretch.

1 Of flowers.)

Gard. Pardon me, madam: little joy have I,
To breathe this news; yet, what I say is true,
King Richard, he is in the mighty hold
Of Bolingbroke; their fortunes both are weigh'd:
In your lord's scale is nothing but himself,
And some few vanities that make him light;
But in the balance of great Bolingbroke,
Besides himself, are all the English peers,
And with that odds he weighs King Richard down.

Post you to London, and you'll find it so;
I speak no more than every man doth know.
Q. Nimble mischance, that art so light of foot,
Doth not thy embassage belong to me,
And am I last that knows it? O, thou think'st
To serve me last, that I may longest keep Thy sorrow in my breast.—Come, ladies, go,
To meet at London London's king in woe.—
What, was I born to this! that my sad look
Should grace the triumph of great Bolingbroke?
Gardener, for telling me this news of woe,
I would the plants thou graft'st may never grow.
[Exeunt Queen and Ladies.

Gar. Poor queen! so that thy state might be no worse,
I would, my skill were subject to thy curse.—
Here did she drop a tear; here in this place,
I'll set a bank of rue, sour herb of grace:
Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be seen,
In the remembrance of a weeping queen.

[Exeunt.

Act Fourth.

SCENE I.—LONDON. WESTMINSTER HALL.

The Lords Spiritual on the right side of the Throne; the Lords Temporal on the left; the Commons below. Enter Bolingbroke, Aumerle, Surrey, Northumberland, Percy, Fitzwater, another Lord, Bishop of Carlisle, Abbot of Westminster, and Attendants. Officers behind, with Bagot.

Boling. Call forth Bagot:—

Now, Bagot, freely speak thy mind;
What thou dost know of noble Gloster's death;
Who wrought it with the king, and who per,
The bloody office of his timeless end? [form'd
Bag. Then set before my face the lord Aumerle.
Boling. Cousin, stand forth and look upon that man.

Tongue
Bagot. My lord Aumerle, I know your daring
Scorns to unsay what once it hath deliver'd.
In that dead time when Gloster's death was plotted,
I heard you say,—Is not my arm of length,
That reacheth from the restful English court
As far as Calais, to my uncle's head?
Amongst much other talk, that very time,
I heard you say, that you had rather refuse
The offer of an hundred thousand crowns,
Than Bolingbroke's return to England;
Adding withal, how blest this land would be,
In this your cousin's death.

Aum. Princes, and noble lords,
What answer shall I make to this base man?
Shall I so much dishonour my fair stars,
On equal terms to give him chastisement?
Either I must, or have mine honour soil'd
With the attander of his sland'rous lips.—
There is my gage, the manual seal of death,
That marks thee out. I say, thou liest,
And will maintain, what thou hast said, is false,
In thy heart-blood, though being all too base
To stain the temper of my knightly sword.

Bo. Bagot, forbear, thou shalt not take it up.

Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the best
In all this presence, that hath mov'd me so.

Fitz. If that thy valour stand on sympathies,
There is my gage, Aumerle, in gage to thine:
By that fair sun that shows me where thou stand'st,
I heard thee say, and vauntingly thou spak'st it,
That thou wert cause of noble Gloster's death.
If thou denyst it, twenty times thou liest;
And I will turn thy falsehood to thy heart,
Where it was forged, with my rapier's point.

Aum. Thou dar'st not, coward, live to see that day.

Fitz. Now, by soul, I would it were this hour.

A. Fitzwater, thou art doom'd to hell for this.

Per. Aumerle, thou liest; his honour is as true,
In this appeal, as thou art all unjust;
And, that thou art so, there I throw my gage,
To prove it on thee to the extremest point
Of mortal breathing; seize it, if thou dar'st.

Aum. And if I do not, may my hands rot off,
And never brandish more revengeful steel
Over the glittering helmet of my foe!

Lord. I take the earth to the like, forsown Au.
And spur thee on with full as many lies [merle;
As may be holla'd in thy treacherous ear
From sun to sun: there is my honour's pawn;
Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st.

Aum. Who sets me else? by heaven, I'll throw
I have a thousand spirits in one breast, [at all:
To answer twenty thousand such as you.

Sur. My lord Fitzwater, I do remember well
The very time Aumerle and you did talk.

Fitz. My lord, 'tis true: you were in presence
And you can witness with me, this is true, [then;

Sur. As false, by heaven, as heaven itself is Fitz. Surrey, thou liest. [true.

Surrey. Dishonourable boy!

That lie shall lie so heavy on my sword,
That it shall render vengeance and revenge,
Till thou the lie-giver, and that lie, do lie
In earth as quiet as thy father's skull.
In proof whereof, there is my honour's pawn;
Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st.

F. How fondly dost thou spur a forward horse!
If I dare eat, or drink, or breathe, or live,
I dare meet Surrey in a wilderness,
And spit upon him, whilst I say, he lies,
And lies, and lies: there is my bond of faith,
To tie thee to my strong correction.—
As I intend to thrive in this new world,
Aumerle is guilty of my true appeal:
Besides, I heard the banish'd Norfolk say,
That thou, Aumerle, didst send two of thy men to execute the noble duke at Calais.

A. Some honest Christian trust me with a gage,
That Norfolk lies: here do I throw down this,
If he may be repeal'd to try his honour.

Bo. These differences shall all rest under gage,
Till Norfolk be repeal'd, repeal'd he shall be,

And, though mine enemy, restor'd again
To all his land and signories; when he's return'd,
Against Aumerle we will enforce his trial.

Car. That honourable day shall ne'er be seen,—
Many a time hath banish'd Norfolk fought
For Jesu Christ; in glorious Christian field
Streaming the ensign of the Christian cross,
Against black Pagans, Turks, and Saracens:
And, toil'd with works of war, retir'd himself
To Italy; and there at Venice, gave
His body to that pleasant country's earth,
And his pure soul unto his captain Christ,
Under whose colours he had fought so long.

Boling. Why, bishop, is Norfolk dead?
Car. As sure as I live, my lord.
Boling. Sweet peace conduct his sweet soul to the bosom
Of good old Abraham!—Lords appallants,
Your differences shall all rest under gage,
Till we assign you to your days of trial.

Enter York, attended.

York. Great duke of Lancaster, I come to thee
From plume-pluck'd Richard; who with willing Adopts thee heir, and his highest part[erso[soul to the possession of thy royal hand:
Ascend his throne, descending now from him,—
And long live Henry, of that name the fourth!

Boling. In God's name, I'll ascend the regal

Car. Marry, God forbid!—[throne.
Worst in this royal presence may I speak,
Yet best beseeing me to speak the truth.
Would God, that any in this noble presence
Were enough noble to be upright judge
Of noble Richard; then true nobles would Learn him forbearance from so foul a wrong,
What subject can give sentence on his king?
And who sits here, that is not Richard's subject?
Thieves are not judg'd, but they are by to hear,
Although apparent guilt be seen in them;
And shall the figure of God's majesty,
His captain, steward, deputy elect,
Anointed, crowned, planted many years,
Be judg'd by subject and inferior breath,
And he himself not present? O, forbid it, God,
That, in a Christian climate, souls refin'd
Should show so heinous, black, obscene a deed!
I speak to subjects, and a subject speaks.
Stir'd up by heaven thus boldly for his king,
My lord of Hereford here, whom you call king.
Is a foul traitor to proud Hereford's king:
And if you crown him, let me prophesy,—
The blood of English shall manure the ground,
And future ages groan for this foul act;
Peace shall go sleep with Turks and Infiel's,
And, in this seat of peace, tumultuous wars
Shall kin with kin, and kind with kind confound;
Disorder, horror, fear, and mutiny,
Shall here inhabit, and this land be call'd
The field of Golgotha, and dead men's skulls.
O, if thou rear this house against this house,
It will the worst full division prove,
That ever fell upon this cursed earth:
Prevent, resist it, let it not be so, [woe!
Lest child, child's children, cry, against you—

North. Well have you argu'd, sir; and, for your
Of capital treason we arrest you here: [pains,
My lord of Westminster, be it your charge
To keep him safely till his day of trial.—[suit.
May't please you, lords, to grant the commons' Boling. Fetch hither Richard, that in common He may surrender; so we shall proceed [view Without suspicion.
York. I will be his conduct. [Exit.
Bol. Lords, you that are here under our arrest, Procure your sureties for your days of answer:— To Carlisle.] Little are we beholden to your love, And little look'd for at your helping hands.
Re-enter York, with King Richard, and Officers bearing the Crown, &c.
K. Rich. Alack, why am I sent for to a king, Before I have shook off the regal thoughts Wherewith I reign'd? I hardly yet have learn'd To insinuate, flatter, bow, and bend my knee:— Give sorrow leave a while to tutor me To this submission. Yet I well remember The favours of these men: Were they not mine? Did they not sometime cry, all hail! to me?— So Judas did to Christ: but he, in twelve, Found truth in all but one; I, in twelve thousand, none.
God save the king!—Will no man say, amen? Am I both priest and clerk? well then, amen, God save the king! although I be not he: And yet, amen, if heaven do think me, To do what service am I sent for hither? YORK. To do that office, of thine own good will, Which tired majesty did make thee offer,— The resignation of thy state and crown To Henry Bolingbroke.
K. Rich. Give me the crown:—Here, cousin, seize the crown;
Here, on this side, my hand; on that side, thine.
Now is this golden crown like a deep well, That owes two buckets filling one another; The emptier ever dancing in the air, The other down, unseen, and full of water; That bucket down, and full of tears, am I, Drinking my griefs, whilst you mount up on high.
Bol. I thought you had been willing to resign.
K. Rich. My crown, I am; but still my griefs are mine:
You may my glories and my state depose,
But not my grief; still am I king of those.
Boling. Part of your cares you give me with your crown. [cares down.
K. Rich. Your cares set up do not pluck my My care is—loss of care, by old care done; Your care is—gain of care, by new care won: The cares I give, I have, though given away; They tend the crown, yet still with me they stay.
Bol. Are you contented to resign the crown? K. R. Ay, no;—no, ay,—For I must nothing be; Therefore no no, for I resign to thee. Now mark me how I will undo myself:— I give this heavy weight from off my head, And this unwieldy scepter from my hand, The pride of kingly sway from out my heart; With mine own tears I wash away my balm,3 With mine own hands I give away my crown, With mine own tongue deny my sacred state, With mine own breath release all dutious oaths: All pomp and majesty I do forswear; My manors, rents, revenues, I forgo;

1 Countenances. 2 Owns. 3 Oil of consecration.

My acts, decrees, and statutes, I deny:
God pardon all oaths, that are broke to me!
God keep all vows unbrok, are made to thee!
Make me, that nothing have, with nothing griev'd;
And thou with all pleas'd, that hast all achiev'd!
Long mayst thou live in Richard's seat to sit,
And soon lie Richard in an earthly pit!—
God save king Henry, unking'd Richard says,
And send him many years of sunshine days!—
What more remains?

North. No more, but that you read [Offering a paper.
Their accusations, and these grievous crimes, Committed by your person, and your followers, Against the state and profit of this land: That, by confessing them, the souls of men May deem that you are worthily depos'd.
K. Rich. Must I do so? and must I ravel out My weav'd up follies? Gentle Northumberland, If thy offences were upon record, Would it not shame thee in so fair a troop, To read a lecture of them? If thou wouldst, There shouldst thou find one helenus article,— Containing the deposition of a king, And cracking the strong warrant of an oath,— Mark'd with a blot, mark'd in the book of heaven:—
Nay, all of you, that stand and look upon me, Whilst that my wretchedness doth balm myself,— Though some of you, with Pilate, wash your hands,
Showing an outward pity; yet you Pilates Have here deliver'd me to my sour cross, And water cannot wash away your sin.
N. My lord, despatch: read o'er these articles.
K. R. Mine eyes are full of tears, I cannot see:
And yet salt water blinds them not so much, But they can see a sort of traitors here. Nay, if I turn mine eyes upon myself, I find myself a traitor with the rest:
For I have given here my soul's consent, To undeck the pompous body of a king; Make glory base; and sovereignity, a slave; Proud majesty, a subject; state, a peasant.

North. My lord,—[man,
K. R. No lord of thine, thou haught, insulting Nor no man's lord; I have no name, no title,— No, not that name was given me at the font,— But 'tis usurp'd:—Alack the heavy day, That I have worn so many winters out, And know not now what name to call myself! O, that I were a mockery king of snow, Standing before the sun of Bolingbroke, To melt myself away in water-drops!— Good king,—great king,—(and yet not greatly An if my word be sterling yet in England, [good,) Let it command a mirror hither straight; That it may show me what a face I have, Since it is bankrupt of his majesty.

Boling. Go, some of you, and fetch a lookingglass. [Exit an Attendant.
N. Read o'er this paper, while the glass doth K. Rich. Fiend! thou torment'st me, [come. B. Urge it no more, my lord Northumberland. N. The commons will not then be satisfied.
K. R. They shall be satisfied: I'll read enough,

1 Pack.
When I do see the very book indeed
Where all my sins are writ, and that's myself.—

Re-enter Attendant, with a Glass.

Give me that glass, and therein will I read.—
No deeper wrinkles yet? Hath sorrow struck
So many blows upon this face of mine,
And made no deeper wounds?—O, flattering
Like to my followers in prosperity, [glass,
Thou dost beguile me! Was this face the face,
That every day under his household roof
Did keep ten thousand men? Was this the face,
That, like the sun, did make beholders wink?
Was this the face, that fac'd so many follies,
And was at last outface'd by Bolingbroke?
A brittle glory shineth in this face:
As brittle as the glory is the face;
[Dasheth the Glass against the ground.
For there it is, crack'd in a hundred shivers. —
Mark, silent king, the moral of this sport,—
How soon my sorrow hath destroy'd my face.

Bol. The shadow of your sorrow hath destroy'd
The shadow of your face.

K. Rich. Say that again.
The shadow of my sorrow? Ha! let's see:—
'Tis very true, my grief lies all within;
And these external manners of lament
Are merely shadows to the unseen grief,
That swells with silence in the torrid soul;
There lies the substance: and I thank thee, king,
For thy great bounty, that not only giv'st
Me cause to wall, but teachest me the way
How to lament the cause. I'll beg one boon
And then be gone, and trouble you no more.
Shall I obtain it?

Boling. Name it, fair cousin. Why, I am greater than a king:
For, when I was a king, my flatterers
Were then but subjects; being now a subject,
I have a king here to my flatterer.
Being so great, I have no need to beg.

Boling. Yet ask.

K. Rich. And shall I have?

Boling. You shall.

K. Rich. Then give me leave to go.

Boling. Whither?

K. Rich. Whither you will, so I were from your Bol, Go, some of you, convey him to the Tower.
K. R.O, good! Convey—Conveyers! are you all,
That rise thus nimbly by a true king's fall.

[Exeunt King Richard, some Lords, and a Guard.

Bol. On Wednesday next, we solemnly set down
Our coronation: lords, prepare yourselves.

[Exeunt all but the Abbot, Bishop of Carlisle, and Aumerle.

Abbot. A woeful pageant have we here beheld.

Car. The woe's to come; the children yet unborn
Shall feel this day as sharp as thorn to thorn.

Aum. You holy clergymen, is there no plot
To rid the realm of this pernicious blot?

Abbot. Before I freely speak my mind herein,
You shall not only take the sacrament
To bury mine intents, but to effect
Whatever I shall happen to devise:—
I see your brows are full of discontent,

1 Jugglers.

Your hearts of sorrow, and your eyes of tears;
Come home with me to supper; I will lay
A plot, shall show us all a merry day. [Exeunt.

Act Fifth.

SCENE I.

LONDON. A Street Leading to the Tower.

Enter Queen, and Ladies.

Q. This way the king will come; this is the way
To Julius Caesar's ill-erected tower; 1
To whose flint bosom my condemned lord
Is doom'd a prisoner, by proud Bolingbroke:
Here let us rest, if this rebellious earth
Have any resting for her true king's queen.

Enter King Richard, and Guards.

But soft, but see, or rather do not see,
My fair rose wither: Yet look up; behold;
That in pity may dissolve to dew,
And wash him fresh again with true-love tears.—
Ah, thou, the model where old Troy did stand;
Thou map of honour; thou King Richard's tomb,
And not King Richard; thou most beauteous sun,
Wish'd hard-favour'd grief be'd in thee,
When triumph is become an ale-house guest?

K. R, Join not with grief, fair woman, do not so,
To make my end too sudden: learn, good soul,
To think our former state a happy dream;
From which awak'd, the truth of what we are
Shows us but this: I am sworn brother, sweet,
To grim necessity; and he and I
Will keep a league till death. Hee thee to France,
And cloister thee in some religious house:
Our holy lives must win a new world's crown,
Which our profane hours have stricken down,

[mind.

Q. What, is my Richard both in shape and Transform'd, and weaken'd? Hath Bolingbroke
Deps'dthine intellect? hath he been in thy heart?
The lion, dying, thrusteth forth his paw,
And wounds the earth, if nothing else, with rage,
To be o'er-ter'd; and wilt thou, pupil-like,
Take thy correction mildly? kiss the rod,
And fawn on rage with base humility,
Which art a lion, and a king of beasts? [beasts,
K. R. A king of beasts, indeed? if aught but I had been still a happy king of men. [France:
Good sometyme queen, prepare thee hence for
Think, I am dead; and that even here thou tak'est,
As from my death-bed, my last living leave.
In winter's tedious nights, sit by the fire,
With good old folk; and let them tell thee tales
Of woeful ages, long ago betid 2
And, ere thou bid good night, to quitt their grief,
Tell them the lamentable fall of me,
And send the hearers weeping to their beds.
For why, the senseless brands will sympathise
The heavy accent of thy moving tongue,
And, in compassion, weep the fire out:
And some will mourn in ashes, some coal-black,
For the deposing of a rightful king.

Enter Northumberland, attended.

North. My lord, the mind of Bolingbroke is chang'd:

1 Tower of London. 2 Happened. 3 Requite.
You must to Pomfret, not unto the Tower.—
And, madam, there is order ta'en for you;
With all swift speed you must away to France.

K. Rich. Northumberland, thou ladder wherewithal
The mounting Bolingbroke ascends thy throne,—
The time shall not be many hours of age
More than it is, ere foul sin, gathering head,
Shall break into corruption: thou shalt think,
Though he divide the realm, and give thee half,
It is too little, helping him to all;
And he shall think, that thou, which know'st the
To plant unrightful kings, wilt know again,[way
Being ne'er so little urg'd, another way
To pluck him headlong from the usurped throne.
The love of wicked friends converts to fear;
That fear, to hate; and hate turns one, or both.
To worthy danger, and deserved death.
Nor. My guilt be on my head, and there an end.
Take leave, and part; for you must part forthwith.
K. R. Doubly divorc'd?—Bad men, ye violate
A two-fold marriage; 'twixt my crown and me;
And then, betwixt me and my married wife,—
Let me unkiss the oath 'twixt thee and me;
And yet not so, for with a kiss 'twas made.—
Part us, Northumberland; I towards the north,
Where shivering cold and sickness pines the clime:
[omp
My wife to France; from whence, set forth in
She came adorned hither like sweet May,
Sent back like Hallowmas, 1 or short'd of day.
Queen. And must we be divided? must we part?
K. Rich. Ay, hand from hand, my love; and heart from heart.
Q. Banish us both, and send the king with me.
North. That were some love, but little policy.
Queen. Then whither he goes, thither let me go.
K. R. So twain, together weeping, make one woe.
Weep thou for me in France, I for thee here;
Better far off, than—near, be ne'er the near',
Go, count thy way with sighs; I, mine with groans.
Queen. So longest way shall have the longest moans.
[omp
K. Rich. Twice for one step I'll groan, the way
And piece the way out with a heavy heart.
Come, come, in woeing sorrow, let's be brief,
Since, wedding it, there is such length in grief.
One kiss shall stop our mouths, and dumbly part;
Thus give I mine, and thus I take thy heart.
[They kiss.
Q. Give me mine own again; 'twere no good part,
To take on me to keep and kill thy heart.
[Kiss again.
So, now I have mine own again, begone,
That I may strive to kill it with a groan.
K.R. We make weewanton with this fond delay;
Once more adieu; the rest let sorrow say.
[Exports.

SCENE II.—THE SAME. A ROOM IN THE DUKE OF YORK'S PALACE.
Enter York, and his Duchess.
D. My lord, you told me you would tell the rest,
When weeping made you break the story off,
Of our two cousins coming into London.
York. Where did I leave?
Duch. At that sad stop, my lord,
1 Allhallows, t. e. All-saints.

Where rude misgovern'd hands, from windows' tops,
Threw dust and rubbish on King Richard's head.
York. Then, as I said, the duke, great Boling-
Mounted upon a hot and fiery steed, [broke—
Which his aspiring rider seem'd to know,—
With slow, but stately pace, kept on his course, While all tongues cried—God save thee, Boling-broke! [spake,
You would have thought the very windows
So many greedy looks of young and old
Through casements darted their desiring eyes
Upon his visage; and that all the walls,
With painted imag'ry, had said at once,—
Jesus preserve thee! welcome, Bolingbroke:
Whilst he, from one side to the other turning,
Bareheaded, lower than his proud steed's neck,
Bespake them thus,—I thank you, countrymen:
And thus still doing, thus he pass'd along.
Duch. Alas, poor Richard! where rides he the while!
York. As, in a theatre, the eyes of men,
After a well-grad'd actor leaves the stage,
Are idly bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious:
Even so, or with much more contempt, men's eyes
Did scowl on Richard; no man cried, God save him!
No joyful tongue gave him his welcome home:
But dust was thrown upon his sacred head;
Which with such gentle sorrow he shook off,—
His face still combatting with tears and smiles.
The badges of his grief and patience,— [stec'd
That, had not God, for some strong purpose,
The hearts of men, they most perfec:ave
And barbarism itself have pil'd him, [melted.
But heaven hath a hand in these events;
To whose high will we bound our calm contents.
To Bolingbroke are we sworn subjects now,
Whose state and honour I for aye allow.

Enter Aumerle.

Duch. Here comes my son Aumerle.
York. Aumerle that was;
But that is lost, for being Richard's friend,
And, madam, you must call him Rutland now;
I am in parliament pledge for his truth,
And lasting fealty to the new-made king.
D. Welcome, my son: Who are the violet's now,
That strew the green lap of the new-come spring?
A. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly care not:
Heaven knows, I had as lief be none, as one.
Y. Well, bear you well in this new spring of time,
Lest you be cropp'd before you come to prime.
What news from Oxford? hold those justs 1 and triumphs 2?
Aum. For aught I know, my lord, they do.
York. You will be there, I know.
Aum. I purpose so.
York. What seal is that, that hangs without thy Yea, look'st thou pale? let me see the writing.
Aum. My lord, 'tis nothing.
York. No matter then who sees it;
I will be satisfied, let me see the writing.
Aum. I do beseech your grace to pardon me;
It is a matter of small consequence,
Which for some reasons I would not have seen.
Y. Which for some reasons, sir, I mean to see. I fear, I fear,—
Duch. What should you fear? 'Tis nothing but some bond that he is entered into For gay apparel, 'gainst the triumph day. Y. Bound to himself? what doth he with a bond That he is bound to? Wife, thou art a fool.— Boy, let me see the writing. [show it. Aum. I do beseech you, pardon me; I may not York. I will be satisfied; let me see it, I say. [Snatches it, and reads. Treason! foul treason! villain! traitor! slave! Duch. What is the matter, my lord? Y. Ho! who is within there? [Enter a Servant. Saddle my horse:— Heaven for his mercy! what treachery is here! Duch. Why, what is it, my lord? York. Give me my boots, I say; saddle my horse:—
Now by mine honour, by my life, my troth, I will appease the villain. [Exit Servant. Duch. What's the matter? York. Peace, foolish woman. D. I will not peace:—What is the matter, son? Aum. Good mother, be content; it is no more Than my poor life must answer. Duch. Thy life answer! Re-enter Servant, with Boots. Y. Bring me my boots, I will unto the king. Duch. Strike him, Aumerle.—Poor boy, thou art amaz'd:
Hence, villain; never more come in my sight.— [To the Servant. York. Give me my boots, I say.
Duch. Why, York, why, what wilt thou do? Wilt thou not hide the trespass of thine own? Have we more sons? or are we like to have? And wilt thou pluck my fair son from mine age, And rob me of a happy mother's name? Is he not like thee? is he not thine own? York. Thou fond mad woman, Wilt thou conceal this dark conspiracy? A dozen of them here have ta'en the sacrament, And interchangeably set down their hands, To kill the king at Oxford. Duch. He shall be none;
We'll keep him here: Then what is that to him? York. Away, Fond woman! were he twenty times my son, I would appeach him. Duch. Hadst thou groan'd for him, As I have done, thou'ist be more pitiful. York. Make way, unruly woman. [Exit. D. After, Aumerle; mount thee upon his horse; Spur, post; and get before him to the king, And beg thy pardon ere he do accuse thee. I'll not be long behind; though I be old, I doubt not but to ride as fast as York: And never will I rise up from the ground, Till Bolingbroke have pardon'd thee: Away: Begone. [Exeunt. SCENE III.

WINDSOR. A ROOM IN THE CASTLE.

Enter Bolingbroke, as King; Percy, and other Lords.

Boling. Can no man tell of my unthrifty son? 'Tis full three months since I did see him last:
Thou sheer, immaculate, and silver fountain, From whence this stream through muddy pas-

Hath held his current, and defil'd himself! [sages, Thy overflow of good converts to bad, And thy abundant goodness shall excite This deadly plot in thy digressing son. [shame, Y. So shall he spend mine honour with his As thriftless sons their scraping fathers' gold. Mine honour lives when his dishonour dies, Or my sham'd life in his dishonesty; Thou kill'st me in his life; giving him breath, The traitor lives, the true man's put to death.

Duch. [Within.] What ho, my liege! for heaven's sake let me in.

Bol. What's shrill-voic'd suppliant makes this D. A woman, and thine aunt, great king; 'tis I. Speak with me, pity me, open the door; A beggar begs, that never begg'd before.

Bo. Our scene is alter'd,—from a serious thing, And now changed to the Beggar and the King. My dangerous cousin, let your mother in; I know she's come to pray for your foul sin.

York. If thou do pardon, whatsoever pray, More sins in this for forgiveness, prosper may, This fester'd joint cut off, the rest rests sound; This, let alone, will all the rest confound.

Enter Duchess.

Duch. O king, believe not this hard-hearted Love loving not itself, none other can. [man. York. Thou frantic woman, what dost thou make here?

Shalt thou once more a traitor rear?

Duch. Sweet York, be patient; Hear me, gentle liege.

Bolting. Rise up, good aunt.

Duch. Not yet, I thee beseech: For ever will I kneel upon my knees, And never see day that the happy sees, Till thou give joy; until thou bid me joy, By pardoning Rutland, my transgressing boy.

Aum. Unto my mother's prayers, I bend my knee.

York. Against them both, my true joints bended be.

Ill mayst thou thrive, if thou grant any grace!

Duch. Plead's he in earnest, look upon his face; His eyes do drop no tears, his prayers are in jest; His words come from his mouth, ours from our breast: He prays but faintly, and would be denied; We pray with heart and soul, and all beside: His weary joints would gladly rise, I know; Our knees shall kneel till to the ground they His prayers are full of false hypocrisy; [grow: Ours, of true zeal and deep integrity. Our prayers do out—pray his; then let them have That mercy which true prayers ought to have.

Bolting. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch. Nay, do not say—stand up; But, pardon, first; and afterwards stand up. And if I were thy nurse, thy tongue to teach, Pardon—should be the first word of thy speech. I never long'd to hear a word till now; Say—pardon, king; let pity teach thee how: The word is short, but not so short as sweet; No word like pardon, for kings' mouths so sweet.--

York. Speak it in French, king; say, pardonnez moi.

D. Dost thou teach pardon pardon to destroy? Ah, my sour husband, my hard-hearted lord, That set'st the word itself against the word!— Speak, pardon, as 'tis current in our land: The chopping French we do not understand, Thine eye begins to speak, set thy tongue there: Or, in thy piteous heart plant thine ear; That, hearing how our plaints and prayers do Pity may move thee, pardon to rehearse. [pierce, Boling. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch. I do not sue to stand, Pardon is all the suit I have in hand.

Boling. I pardon him, as God shall pardon me.

Duch. O happy vantage of a kneeling knee! Yet am I sick for fear: speak it again; Twice saying pardon, doth not pardon twain, But makes one pardon strong.

Boling. With all my heart I pardon him.

Duch. A god on earth thou art.

Boling. But for our trusty brother-in-law,— and the abbot,

With all the rest of that consort'd crew,— Destruction straight shall dog them at the heels. — Good uncle, help to order several powers To Oxford, or where'er these traitors are: They shall not live within this world, I swear, But I will have them, if I once know where. Uncle, farewell,—and cousin, too, adieu! [true. Your mother well hath pray'd, and prove you Duch. Come, my oldson;—I pray heaven make thee new.

[Execut.

SCENE IV.

Enter Exton and a Servant.

Exton. Didst thou not mark the king, what words he spake?

Have I no friend will rid me of this living fear? Was it not so?

Serv. Those were his very words.

Exton. Have I no friend? quoth he: he spake it twice, And urg'd it twice together; did he not?

Serv. He did.

Ex. And, speaking it, he wistfully look'd on As who should say,—I would, thou wert the man That would divorce this terror from my heart; Meaning, the king at Pomfret. Come, let's go; I am the king's friend, and will rid his foe.

[Execut.

SCENE V. —POMFRET. THE CASTLE.

Enter King Richard.

K. R. I have been studying how I may compare This prison, where I live, unto the world: And, for because the world is populous, And here is not a creature but myself, I cannot do it;—Yet I'll hammer it out. My brain I'll prove the female to my soul; My soul, the father: and these two beget A generation of still-breed'ning thoughts, And these same thoughts people this little world; In humours, like the people of this world; For no thought is contained. The better sort,—As thoughts of things divine,—are intermiz'd

1 Transparent.

1 Excuse me.
With scruples, and do set the word itself
Against the word:
As thus,—Come, little ones! and then again,—
It is as hard to come, as for a camel
To thread the postern of a needle's eye.
Thoughts tending to ambition, they do plot
Unlikely wonders; how these vain weak nails
May tear a passage through the flinty ribs
Of this hard world, my ragged prison walls;
And, for they cannot, die in their own pride.
Thoughts tending to content, flatter themselves,
That they are not the first of fortune's slaves,
Nor shall not be the last: like silly beggars,
Who, sitting in the stocks, refuse their shame,
That many have, and others must sit there;
And in this thought they find a kind of ease,
Bearing their own misfortune on the back
Of such as have before endured the like.
Thus play I, in one person, many people,
And one contented: Sometimes am I king;
Then treason makes me wish myself a beggar;
And so I am: Then crushing penury
Persuades me I was better when a king;
Then am I king'd again: and by-and-by,
Think that I am unking'd by Bolingbroke,
And straight am nothing:—but whate'er I am,
Nor I, nor any man, but that but man is,
With nothing shall be pleas'd till he be eas'd
With being nothing.—Music do I hear?

[Musick]

Ha, ha! keep time:—How sour sweet music is,
When time is broke, and no proportion kept!
So is it in the music of men's lives.
And here have I the daintiness of ear,
To check time broke in a disorder'd string;
But, for the concord of my state and time,
Had not an ear to hear my true time broke.
I wasted time, and now doth time waste me.
For now hath time made me his numb'ring clock:
My thoughts are minutes; and, with sighs,
they jar
[watch
Their watches on unto mine eyes, the outward
Whereo my finger, like a dial's point,
Is pointing still, in cleansing them from tears.
Now, sir, the sounds that tell what hour it is,
Are clamorous groans, that strike upon my heart,
Which is the bell: So sighs, and tears, and groans,
Show minutes, times, and hours:—but my time
Runs posting on in Bolingbroke's proud joy,
While I stand fooling here, his Jack o' the clock.
This music maddens me, let it sound no more;
For, though it have holp madmen to their wits,
In me, it seems it will make wise men mad.
Yet blessing on his heart that gives it me!
For 'tis a sign of love; and love to Richard
Is a strange brooch in this all-hating world.

[Enter Groom.]

Groom. Hail, royal prince!
K. Rich. Thanks, noble peer;
The cheapest of us is ten groats too dear.
What art thou? and how comest thou hither,
Where no man never comes, but that sad dog
That brings me food, to make misfortune live?
Groom. I was a poor groomsman of thy stable, king,
When thou wert king; who, travelling towards York,

1 An automaton, striking the quarters.

With much ado, at length have gotten leave
To look upon my sometime master's face.
O, how it yearn'd my heart, when I beheld,
In London streets, that coronation day,
When Bolingbroke rode on roan Barbary!
That horse, that thou so often hast bestrid;
That horse, that I so carefully have dress'd!
K. Rich. Rode he on Barbary? Tell me, gentle
How went he under him?
[friend, Gr. So proudly, as if he disdain'd the ground.
K. Rich. So proud that Bolingbroke was on his back!
That jade hath eat bread from my royal hand;
This hand hath made him proud with clapping
him.
Would he not stumble? Would he not fall down,
(Since pride must have a fall,) and break the neck
Of that proud man that did usurp his back?
Forgiveness, horse! why do I rail on thee,
Since thou, created to be aw'd by man,
Wast born to bear? I was not made a horse;
And yet I bear a burden like an ass,
Spur-gall'd, and tir'd, by jauncing Bolingbroke.

[Enter Keeper, with a Dish.]

Keep. [To the Groom.] Tellow, give place; here is no longer stay.
[away.]
K. Rich. If thou love me, 'tis time thou Wert
Groom. What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say.
[Exit.]

Keep. My lord, wilt you please to fall to?
K. Rich. Taste of it first, as thou art wont to do.
K. My lord, I dare not: Sir Pierce of Exton, who Lately came from the king, commands the contrary.
[thee.]
K. Rich. The devil take Henry of Lancaster,
And Patience is stale, and I am weary of it.

[Beats the Keeper.]

Keep. Help, help, help!

Enter Exton, and Servants armed.

this rude assault?
[ment.
Villain, thy own hand yields thy death's instru-
Snatching a weapon, and killing one.
Go thou, and fill another room in hell.
[He kills another, then Exton strikes him down.

That hand shall burn in never-quenching fire,
That stagger's thus my person.—Exton, thy fierce hand
[land.
Hath with the king's blood stain'd the king's own
Mount, mount, my soul! thy seat is up on high;
Whilst my gross flesh sinks downward, here to die.
[Dies.
Exton. As full of valour, as of royal blood:
Both have I spilt: O, would the deed were good!
For now the devil, that told me—I did well,
Says that this deed is chronicled in hell.
This dead king to the living king I'll bear:—
Take hence the rest, and give them burial here.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.

WINDSOR. A ROOM IN THE CASTLE.

Flourish. Enter Bolingbroke, and York, with Lords, and Attendants.

Bol. Kind uncle York, the latest news we hear
Is—that the rebels have consum'd with fire
Our town of Cicester in Glostershire;
But whether they be ta'en, or slain, we hear not.

Enter Northumberland.
Welcome, my lord: What is the news?
N. First, to thy sacred state wish all happiness,
The next news is,—I have to London sent
The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt, and
The manner of their taking may appear [Kent:
At large discoursed in this paper here.
(Presenting a paper.
B. We thank thee, gentle Percy, for thy pains;
And to thy worth will add right worthy gains.

Enter Percy, with the Bishop of Carlisle.
Percy. The grand conspirator, abbot of Westminster,
With clog of conscience, and sour melancholy,
Hath yielded up his body to the grave;
But here is Carlisle living to abide
Thy kingly doom, and sentence of his pride.
Boling. Carlisle, this is your doom:— [room,
Choose out some secret place, some reverend
More than thou hast, and with it joy thy life;
So, as thou livest in peace, die free from strife:
For though mine enemy thou hast ever been,
High sparks of honour in thee have I seen.

Enter Exton, with Attendants bearing a Coffin.
Exton. Great king, within this coffin I present
Thy buried fear: herein all breathless lies
The mightiest of thy greatest enemies,
Richard of Bourdeaux, by me hither brought.
Boling. Exton, I thank thee not; for thou hast wrought
A deed of slander, with thy fatal hand,
Upon my head, and all this famous land.
Exton. From your own mouth, my lord, did
I this deed.
Bol. They love not poison that do poison need,
Nor do I thee; though I did wish him dead,
I hate the murderer, love him murdered.
The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour,
But neither my good word, nor princely favour:
With Cain go wander through the shade of night,
And never show thy head by day nor light.—
Lords, I protest my soul is full of woe,
That blood should sprinkle me, to make me grow:
Come, mourn with me for what I do lament,
And put on sullen black incontinence;
I'll make a voyage to the Holy Land,
To wash this blood off from my guilty hand:—
March sadly after; grace my mournings here,
In weeping after this untimely bler. [Exit.

First Part of King Henry IV.

Persons Represented.

King Henry the Fourth.
Henry, Prince of Wales,
Prince John of Lancaster,
Earl of Westmoreland,
Sir Walter Blunt,
Thomas Percy, Earl of Worcester.

Scene.—England.

Act First.

Enter King Henry, Westmoreland, Sir Walter Blunt, and others.

K. Hen. So shaken as we are, so wan with care,
Find we a time for frighted peace to pant,
And breathe short-winded accents of new broils
To be commenc'd d in stronds afar remote.

1 Strands, banks of the sea.
Shall now, in mutual, well beseeming ranks,
March all one way; and be no more oppos'd
Against acquaintance, kindred, and allies:
The edge of war, like an ill-sheathed knife,
No more shall cut his master. Therefore, friends,
As far as to the sepulchre of Christ,
(Whose soldier now, under whose blessed cross
We are impressed and engag'd to fight,)
Forthwith a power of English shall we levy;
Whose arms were moulded in their mother's womb
To chase these pagans, in those holy fields,
Over whose acres walk'd those blessed feet,
Which, fourteen hundred years ago, were nail'd for our advantage, on the bitter cross.
But this our purpose is a twelvemonth old,
And bootless 'tis to tell you—we will go;
Therefore we meet not now:—Then let me hear
Of you, my gentle cousin Westmoreland,
What yesternight our council did decree
In forwarding this dear expedition.

West. My liege, this haste was hot in question,
And many limits of the charge set down
But yesternight: when, all athwart, there came
A post from Wales, loaden with heavy news;
Whose worst was,—that the noble Mortimer,
Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight
Against the irregular and wild Glendower,
Was by the rude hands of that Welshman taken,
And a thousand of his people butchered.
Upon whose dead corpse there was such misuse,
Such beastly, shameless transformation,
By those Welshwomen done, as may not be,
Without much shame, re-told or spoken of.

K. Hen. It seems, then, that the tidings of this broil
Brake off our business for the Holy Land.
West. This, match'd with other, did, my gracious lord;
For more uneven and unwelcome news
Came from the north, and thus it did import.
On Holyrood day, the gallant Hotspur there,
Young Harry Percy, and brave Archibald,
That ever-valiant and approved Scot,
At Holmedon met,
Where they did spend a sad and bloody hour;
As by discharge of their artillery,
And shape of likelihood, the news was told;
For he that brought them, in the very heat
And pride of their contention did take horse,
Uncertain of the issue any way.

K. Hen. Here is a dear and true industrious friend,
Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his horse,
Stain'd with the variation of each soil
Betwixt that Holmedon and this seat of ours;
And he hath brought us smooth and welcome news.
The earl of Douglas is discomfited;
Ten thousand bold Scots, two-and-twenty knights,
Balk'd in their own blood, did Sir Walter see
On Holmedon's plains: Of prisoners, Hotspur took Mordake the earl of Fife, and eldest son
To beaten Douglas; and the earls of Athol,
Of Murray, Angus, and Menteith.

1 Expedition. 2 Estimates. 3 Piled up. 1 Trim.

And is not this an honourable spoil?
A gallant prize? ha, cousin, is it not?
West. It is a conquest for a prince to boast of.
K. Hen. Yea, thou mak'st me sad, and mak'st me sin
In envy that my lord Northumberland
Should be the father of so blest a son:
A son, who is the theme of honour's tongue;
Amongst a grove, the very straightest plant;
Who is sweet fortune's minion, and her pride:
Whilst I, by looking on the praise of him,
See riot and dishonour stain the brow
Of my young Harry. O, that it could be prov'd,
That some night-tripping fairy had exchang'd
In cradle-clothes our children where they lay,
And call'd mine, Percy—his, Plantagenet!
Then would I have his Harry, and he mine.
But let him from my thoughts:—What think you, coz,
Of this young Percy's pride? the prisoners,
Which he in this adventure hath surpris'd,
To his own use he keeps; and sends me word,
I shall have none but Mordake earl of Fife.
West. This is his uncle's teaching, this is Worcester,
Malevolent to you in all aspects;
Which makes him prune himself, and bristle up
The crest of youth against your dignity.
K. H. But I have sent for him to answer this;
And, for this cause, a while we must neglect
Our holy purpose to Jerusalem.
Cousin, on Wednesday next our council we
Will hold at Windsor, so inform the lords:
But come yourself with speed to us again;
For more is to be said, and to be done,
Than out of anger can be utter'd.

West. I will, my liege.

SCENE II.—ANOTHER ROOM IN THE PALACE.

Enter Henry, Prince of Wales, and Falstaff.
Fal. Now, Hal, what time of day is it, lad?
P. Hen. Thou art so fat-witted, with drinking of old sack, and unbuttoning thee after supper,
And sleeping upon benches after noon, that thou hast forgotten to demand that truly which thou wouldst truly know.
What hast thou to do with the time of the day? Unless hours were cups of sack, and minutes capons, I see no reason, why thou shouldst be so superfluous to demand the time of the day.
Fal. Indeed, you come near me, now, Hal:
for we that take purses, go by the moon and seven stars; and not by Phoebus,—he, that wandering knight so fair.
And, I pray thee, sweet wag, when thou art king,—as, save thy grace, (majesty,) I should say; for grace thou wilt have none)—
P. Hen. What, none?
Fal. No, by my troth; not so much as will serve to be prologue to an egg and butter.
P. Hen. Well, how then? come, roundly, roundly.
Fal. Marry, then, sweet wag, when thou art king, let not us, that are squires of the night's body, be called thieves of the day's beauty, let us be—Diana's foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon: And let men say, we be men of good government; being governed as the sea is, by our noble and chaste mistress the moon, under whose countenance we—steal.

P. Hen. Thou say'st true; and it holds well too: for the fortune of us, that are the moon's men, doth ebb and flow like the sea; being governed as the sea is, by the moon. As, for proof, now: A purse of gold most resolutely snatched on Monday night, and most absolutely spent on Tuesday morning; got with swearing—lay by!; and spent with crying—bring in: now, in as low an ebb as the foot of the ladder; and, by and by, in as high a flow as the ridge of the gallowes.

Fal. Thou say'st true, lad. And is not my hostess of the tavern a most sweet girl? P. Hen. As the honey of Hybla, my old lad of the castle. And is not a buff jerkin a most sweet robe of durance?

Fal. How now, how now, mad wag? what, in thy quips, and thy quiddities? what have I to do with a buff jerkin?

P. Hen. Why, what have I to do with my hostess of the tavern?

Fal. Well, thou hast called her to a reckoning, many a time and oft.

P. H. Did I ever call for thee to pay thy part?

Fal. No; I'll give thee thy due, thou hast paid all there.

P. Hen. Yea, and elsewhere, so far as my coin would stretch; and, where it would not, I have used my credit.

Fal. Yea, and so used it, that were it not here apparent that thou art heir apparent,—But, I pr'ythee, sweet wag, shall there be gallowes standing in England when thou art king? and resolution thus fobbed as it is, with the rusty curb of old father Antick the law? Do not thou, when thou art king, hang a thief.

P. Hen. No; thou shalt.

Fal. Shall I? O rare! I'll be a brave judge.

P. Hen. Thou judgest false already; I mean, thou shalt have the hanging of the thieves, and so become a rare hangman.

Fal. Well, Hal, well; and in some sort it jumps with my humour, as well as waiting in the court, I can tell you.

P. Hen. For obtaining of suits?

Fal. Yea, for obtaining of suits: whereof the hangman hath no lean wardrobe. I am as melancholy as a lugged bear.

P. Hen. Or an old lion; or a lover's lute.

Fal. Yea, or the drone of a Lincolnshire bagpipe.

J. Hen. What sayest thou to a hare, or the melancholy of Moor-ditch?

Fal. Thou hast the most unsavoury similes; and art, indeed, the most comparautive, rascallest,—sweet young prince.—But, Hal, I pr'ythee, trouble me no more with vanity. I wish thou and I knew where a commodity of good names were to be bought: An old lord of the council rated me the other day in the street about you,
P. Hen. Farewell, thou latter spring! Farewell, All-hallow'd summer! [Exit Falstaff.

P. Hen. Now, my good sweet honey lord, ride with us to-morrow; I have a jest to execute, that I cannot manage alone. Falstaff, Bardolph, Peto, and Gadhill, shall rob those men that we have already waylaid; yourself, and I, will not be there: and when they have the booty, if you and I do not rob them, cut this head from my shoulders.

P. Hen. But how shall we part with them in setting forth?

P. Hen. Why, we will set forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, wherein it is at our pleasure to fail: and then will they adventure upon the exploit themselves; which they shall have no sooner achieved, but we'll set upon them.

P. Hen. Ay, but, 'tis like, that they will know us, by our horses, by our habits, and by every other appointment, to be ourselves.

P. Hen. Tut! our horses they shall not see, I'll tie them in the wood; our visors we will change, after we leave them; and, sirrah, I have cases of buckram for the nonce, 2 to immask our noted outward garments.

P. Hen. But, I doubt, they will be too hard for us.

P. Hen. Well, for two of them I know them to be as true-bred cowards as ever turned back; and for the third, if he fight longer than he sees reason, I'll forewear arms. The virtue of this jest will be, the incomprehensible lies that this same fat rogue will tell us, when we meet at supper: how thirty, at least, he fought with; what warts, what blows, what extremities he endure'd; and, in the reproof of this, lies the jest.

P. Hen. Well, I'll go with thee; provide us all things necessary, and meet me to-morrow night in Eastcheap; there I'll sup. Farewell.

P. Hen. Farewell, my lord. [Exit P. Hen.

P. Hen. I know you all, and will a while uphold
The unyok'd humour of your idleness:
Yet herein will I imitate the sun;
Who doth permit the base contagious clouds
To smother up his beauty from the world,
That, when he please again to be himself,
Being wanted, he may be more wonder'd at,
By breaking through the foul and ugly mists
Of vapours, that did deem to strangle him.
If all the year were playing holidays,
To sport would be as tedious as to work;
But, when they seldom come, they wish'd-for
come,
And nothing pleaseth but rare accidents.
So, when this loose behaviour I throw off,
And pay the debt I never promised,
By how much better than my word I am,
By so much shall I falsify men's hopes;
And, like bright metal on a sullen ground,
My reformation, glittering o'er my fault,
Shall show more goodly, and attract more eyes,
Than that which hath no foil to set it off.
I'll so offend, to make offence a skill;
Redeeming time, when men think least I will. [Exit.

2Occasion.

SCENE III.—Another Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Northumberland, Worcester, Hotspur, Sir Walter Blunt, and others.

K. Hen. My blood hath been too cold and temperate,
Unapt to stir at these indigancies,
And you have found me; for, accordingly,
You tread upon my patience; but, be sure,
I will from henceforth rather be myself,
Mighty, and to be fear'd, than my condition:
Which hath been smooth as oil, soft as young
down,
And therefore lost that title of respect,
Which the proud soul ne'er pays but to the proud.

War. Our house, my sovereign liege, little deserves,
The scourge of greatness to be us'd on it;
And that same greatness to which our own hands
Have help to make so shortly.

North. My lord,—

K. H. Worcester, get thee gone, for I see danger
And disobedience in thine eye; O, sir, your presence is too bold and peremptory,
And majesty might never yet endure
The moody front 1 of a servant brow.
You have good leave to leave us; when we need
Your use and counsel, we shall send for you.—
Exit Worcester.

[To North.] You were about to speak.

North. Yea, my good lord.

Those prisoners in your highness' name de-demanded,
Which Harry Percy here at Holmedon took,
Were, as he says, not with such strength denied
As is deliver'd to your majesty:
Either envy, therefore, or misprison,
Is guilty of this fault, and not my son.

Hot. My liege, I did deny no prisoners.

But, I remember, when the fight was done,
When I was dry with rage, and extreme toil,
Breathless and faint, leaning upon my sword,
Came there a certain lord, neat, trimly dress'd,
Fresh as a bridgemon; and his chin, new-reap'd,
Show'd like a stubble-land at harvest-home;
He was perfumed like a milliner;
And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held
A pounce-box, 2 which ever and anon
He gave his nose, and took't away again:
Who, therewith angry, when it next came there,
Took it in snuff:—and still he smil'd and talk'd:
And, as the soldiers bore dead bodies by,
He call'd them—untaught knaves, unmanfully,
To bring a slovenly unhandsome corse
Betwixt the wind and his nobility.
With many holiday and lady terms
He question'd me; among the rest demanded
My prisoners, in your majesty's behalf.
I then, all smearing, with my wounds being cold,
To be so pester'd with a popinjay,
Out of my grief and my impatience,
Answer'd neglectfully, I know not what;
He should, or he should not;—for he made me
mad,
To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet,
And talk so like a waiting-gentlewoman,

1 Forehead. 2 Perfume box.
Of guns, and drums, and wounds, (heaven save the mark!)
And telling me, the sovereign's thing on earth
Was paracetic, for an inward bruise;
And that it was great pity, so it was,
That villainous saltpetre should be digg'd
Out of the bowels of the harmless earth,
Which many a good tall fellow had destroy'd
So cowardly; and but for these vile guns,
He would himself have been a soldier.
This bald unjointed chat of his, my lord,
I answer'd indirectly, as I said;
And, I beseech you, let not his report
Come current for an accusation,
Betwixt my love and your high majesty.

B. The circumstance consider'd, good my lord,
Whatever Harry Percy then had said,
To such a person, and in such a place,
At such a time, with all the rest re-told,
May reasonably die, and never rise
To do him wrong, or any way impeach
What then he said, so lie unsay it now.

K. Hen. Why, yet he doth deny his prisoners;
But with proviso, and exception,—
That we, at our own charge, shall ransome straight
His brother-in-law, the foolish Mortimer;
Who on my soul, hath wilfully betray'd
The lives of those that he did lead to fight Against the great magician, vile Glendower;
Whose daughter, as we hear, the earl of March
Hath lately married. Shall our coffers then
Be emptied, to redeem a traitor home?
Shall we buy treason! and indent² with fears,
When they have lost and forfeit'd themselves?
No, on the barren mountains let him starve;
For I shall never hold that man my friend,
Whose tongue shall ask me for one penny cost
To ransome home revoluted Mortimer.

Hot. Revoluted Mortimer!
He never did fall off, my sovereign liege,
But by the chance of war:—To prove that true,
Needs no more but one tongue for all those wounds,
Those moultered wounds, which valiantly he took,
When on the gentle Severn's sedgy bank
In single opposition, hand to hand,
He did confound the best part of an hour
In changing hardiment with great Glendower:
Three times they breath'd, and three times did they drink,
Upon agreement, of swift Severn's flood;
Who then, afflict'd with their bloody looks,
Ran fearfully among the trembling reeds,
And hid his crisp head in the hollow bank.
Blood-stained with these valiant combatants,
Never did bare and rotten policy
Colour her working with such deadly wounds;
Nor never could the noble Mortimer
Receive so many, and all willingly;
Then let him not be slander'd with revolt.

K. Hen. Thou dost belie him, Percy, thou dost belie him;
He never did encounter with Glendower;
I tell thee,
He durst as well have met the devil alone,
As Owen Glendower for an enemy.

Art not ashamed? But, sirrah, henceforth
Let me not hear you speak of Mortimer:
Send me your prisoners with the speediest means,
Or you shall hear in such a kind from me
As will displeas you.—My lord Northumberland,
We license your departure with your son:—
Send us your prisoners, or you'll hear of it.

[Exeunt King Henry, Blunt, and Train.

Hot. And if the devil come and rue for them,
I will not send them:—I will after straight,
And tell him so: for I will case my heart,
Although it be with hazard of my head.
N. What, drunk with cholier? stay, and pause
Here comes your uncle.

[ awhile;

Re-enter Worcester.

Hot. Speak of Mortimer?
Yes. I will speak of him; and let my soul
Want mercy, if I do not join with him:
Yea, on his part, I'll empty all these veins,
And shed my dear blood drop by drop i' the dust,
But I will lift the down-trod Mortimer
As high i' the air as this unthankful king,
As this ingrate and canker'd Bolingbroke.

North. [To Wor.] Brother, the king hath made your nephew mad.

W. Who struck this heat up, after I was gone?
Hot. He will, forsooth, have all my prisoners;
And when I urg'd the ransome once again
Of my wife's brother, then his cheek look'd pale;
And on my face he turn'd an eye of death,
Trembling even at the name of Mortimer.
W. I cannot blame him: Was he not proclaim'd,
By Richard that dead is, the next of blood?
North. He was; I heard the proclamation;
And then it was, when the unhappy king
(Whose wrongs in us God pardon!) did set forth
Upon his Irish expedition;
From whence he, intercepted, did return
To be depo'd, and shortly, murdered.

Wor. And for whose death, we in the world's wide mouth
Live scandaliz'd, and fouly spoken of.

Hot. But, soft, I pray you; Did King Richard then Proclaim my brother Edmund Mortimer
Heir to the crown?

North. He did; myself did hear it.
Hot. Nay, then I cannot blame his cousin king;
That wish'd him on the barren mountains starv'd:
But shall it be, that you,—that set the crown
Upon the head of this forgetful man;
And, for his sake, wear the detested blot
Of mur'drous subornation,—shall it be,
That you a world of curses undergo;
Being the agents, or base second means,
The cords, the ladder, or the hangman rather?
O, pardon me, that I descend so low,
To show the line, and the predicament,
Wherein you range under this subtle king:—
Shall it, for shame, be spoken in these days,
Or fill up chronicles in time to come,
That men of your nobility and power,
Did gaze them both in an unjust behalf,—
As both of you, Heaven pardon it! have done,—
To put down Richard, that sweet lovely rose,
And plant this thorn, this canker, Bolingbroke?
And shall it in more shame, be further spoken,

---

¹ Brave.
² Bargain.
³ Curled.
That you are fool'd, discarded, and shook off
By him, for whom these shames ye underwent?
No; yet time serves wherein you may redeem
Your banish'd honours, and restore yourselves
Into the good thoughts of the world again:
Revenge the jeering, and disdain't contempt,
Of this proud king; who studies day and night,
To answer all the debt he owes to you,
Even with the bloody payment of your deaths.
Therefore, I say,——

Wor. Peace, cousin, say no more:
And now I will unclasp a secret book,
And to your quick-conceiving discontents
I'll read you matter deep and dangerous;
As full of peril, and advent'rous spirit,
As to o'er-walk a current, roaring loud,
On the unsteadfast footing of a spear.

H. If he fall in, good night:—or sink or swim:
Send danger from the cast unto the west,
So honour cross it from the north to south,
And let them grasp;—O! the blood more stirs,
To rouse a lion, than to start a hare.

North. Imagination of some great exploit
Drives him beyond the bounds of patience.

H. By heaven, methinks, it were an easy leap,
To pluck bright honour from the pale-fac'd moon;
Or dive into the bottom of the deep,
Where fathom-line could never touch the ground,
And pluck up drowned honour by the locks;
So he, that doth redeem her thence, might wear
Without contrivance, all her dignities;
But out upon this half-fac'd fellowship!

Wor. He apprehends a world of figures here,
But not the form of what he should attend.—
Good cousin, give me audience for a while.

H. I cry you mercy.

Wor. Those same noble Scots,
That are your prisoners,——

H. I'll keep them all;
By heaven, he shall not have a Scot of them:
No, if a Scot would save his soul, he shall not:
I'll keep them, by this hand.

Wor. You start away,
And lend no ear unto my purposes.—
These prisoners you shall keep.

H. Nay, I will; that's flat:
He said he would not ransom Mortimer;
Forbade my tongue to speak of Mortimer;
But I will find him when he lies asleep,
And in his ear I'll holla—Mortimer!—
Nay,
I'll have a starling shall be taught to speak
Nothing but Mortimer, and give it him,
To keep his anger still in motion.

Wor. Hear you,
Cousin; a word.

H. All studies here I solemnly defy,
Save how to gall and pinch this Bolingbroke:
And that same sword-and-buckler prince of Wales,—
But that I think his father loves him not,
And would be glad he met with some miscarce,
I'd have him poison'd with a pot of ale.

Wor. Farewell, kinsman! I will talk to you,
When you are better temper'd to attend.

Com. Nor. Why, what a wasp-stung and impatient
Art thou to break into this woman's mood; [fool
Tying thine ear to no tongue but thine own!

H. Why, look you, I am whip'd and scourg'd with rods,
Netted, and stung with pismires, when I hear
Of this vile politician, Bolingbroke.
In Richard's time,—What do you call the place—
A plague upon 't!—It is in Glos'shire:—
"Twas where the mad-cap duke his uncle kept;
His uncle York;—where I first bow'd my knee
Unto this king of smiles, this Bolingbroke,
When you and he came back from Ravenspur.

North. At Berkley Castle.

H. You say true:——
Why, what a candy deal of courtesy
This fawning greyhound then did proffer me!
Look,—when his infant fortune came to age,
And—gentle Harry Percy,—and, kind cousin,—
The devil take such cozeners!—Heaven forgive me!——

Good uncle, tell your tale, for I have done.

Wor. Nay, if you have not, 'tis again;
We'll stay your leisure.

H. I have done, i'faith.

W. Then once more to your Scottish prisoners,
Deliver them up without their ransom straight,
And make the Douglas' son your only men
For powers in Scotland; which,—for divers reasons,
Which I shall send you written,—be assur'd,
Will easily be granted.—[To North.] You, my lord,—
Your son in Scotland being thus employ'd,—
Shall secretly into the bosom creep
Of that same noble Prelate, well belov'd;
The archbishop.

H. Of York, is't not?

Wor. True; who bears hard
His brother's death at Bristol, the lord Scroop,
I speak not this in estimation,
As what I think might be, but what I know
Is ruminated, plotted, and set down;
And only stays but to behold the face
Of that occasion that shall bring it on.

H. I smell it; upon my life, it will do well.

N. Before the game's afoot, thou still let's slip,
H. Why, it cannot choose but be a noble plot;—
And then the power of Scotland, and of York,—
To join with Mortimer, ha?

Wor. And so they shall.

H. In faith, it is exceedingly well aim'd.

Wor. And 'tis no little reason bids us speed,
To save our heads by raising of a head:
For, bear ourselves as even as we can,
The king will always think him in our debt;
And think we think ourselves unsatisfied,
Till he hath found a time to pay us home.
And see already, how he doth begin
To make us strangers to his looks of love.

H. He does, he does: we'll be reveng'd on him.

W. Cousin, farewell:—No further go in this,
Than I by letters shall direct your course.
When time is ripe (which will be suddenly,) I'll steal to Glendower and lord Mortimer;
Where you and Douglas, and our powers at once, (As I will fashion it,) shall happily meet,
To bear our fortunes in our own strong arms,
Which now we hold at much uncertainty.

North. Farewell, good brother; we shall thrive, I trust.

Hot. Uncle, adieu:—O, let the hours be short,
Till fields, and blows, and groans applaud our sport!

[Exeunt.]

---

Act Second.

SCENE I.—Rochester. An Inn Yard.

Enter a Carrier, with a Lantern in his hand.

1 Car. Heigh ho! An' t be not four by the day,
I'll be hanged: Charles' wain is over the new chimney, and yet our horse not packed. What, ostler!

Ost. [Within.] Anon, anon.

1 Car. I pr'ythee, Tom, beat Cut's saddle put a few flocks in the point; the poor jade is wring in the withers out of all cess.²

[Enter another Carrier.]

2 Car. Pease and beans are as dank² here as a dog, and that is the next way to give poor jades the bots: this house is turned upside down, since Robin ostler died.

1 Car. Poor fellow! never jokey since the price of oats rose; it was the death of him.

2 Car. I think this be the most villainous house in all London road for fleas: I am stung like a tench.

1 Car. Like a tench? by the mass, there is ne'er a king in Christendom could be better bit than
I have been since the first cock.

2 Car. What, ostler! come away and be hanged, come away. I have a gammon of bacon, and two razes³ of ginger, to be delivered as far as Charing Cros.

1 Car. The turkeys in my pannier are quite starved. What, ostler!—A plague on thee! hast thou never an eye in thy head? canst not hear?
An 'twere not as good a deed as drink, to break the pate of thee, I am a very villain.—Come, and be hanged:—Hast no faith in thee!

[Enter Gads Hill.]

Gads. Good morrow, carriers. What's o'clock?

1 Car. I think it be two o'clock.

Gads. I pr'ythee, lend me thy lantern, to see my gelding in the stable.

1 Car. Nay, soft, I pray ye; I know a trick worth two of that.

Gads. I pr'ythee lend me thine.

2 Car. Ay, when? canst tell?—Lend me thy lantern, quoth a—marry, I'll see thee hanged first.

Gads. Sirrah, carrier, what time do you mean to come to London?

2 Car. Time enough to go to bed with a candle,
I warrant thee. Come, neighbour Mugs, we'll call up the gentlemen; they will along with company, for they have great charge.

[Exeunt Carriers.]

Gads. What, ho! chamberlain!

Cham. [Within.] At hand, quoth pick-purse.¹

Gads. That's even as fair as—at hand, quoth the chamberlain: for thou variest no more from picking of purses, than giving direction doth from labouring; thou lay'st the plot how.

[Enter Chamberlain.]

Ch. Good morrow, master Gadshill. It holds current, that I told you yesternight: There's a franklin² in the wild of Kent, hath brought three hundred marks with him in gold: I heard him tell it to one of his company, last night at supper;
a kind of auditor; one that hath an abundance of charge too, heaven knows what. They are up already, and call for eggs and butter: They will away presently.

Gads. Sirrah, if they meet not with Saint
Nicholas' clerks,³ I'll give thee this neck.

Cham. No, I'll none of it: I pr'ythee keep that for the hangman; for I know thou wor-ship'st Saint Nicholas as truly as a man of falsehood may.

Gads. What talkest thou to me of the hangman? if I hang, I'll make a fat pair of gallowys:
for, if I hang, old Sir John hangs with me; and,
thou knowest, he's no starveling. Tut: there are other Trojans that thou dreamest not of, the which, for sport sake, are content to do the profession some grace; that would, if matters should be looked into, for their own credit sake, make all whole. I am joined with no foot land-rakers,⁴ no long-staff, sixpenny strikers; none of these mad, mustachio, purple-hued malt-worms; but with nobility, and tranquility; burgomasters, and great onyers⁵; such as can hold in; such as will strike sooner than speak, and speaksooner than drink, and drink sooner than pray: And yet I lie; for they pray continually to their saint,
the commonwealth; or, rather, not pray to her, but prey on her; for they ride up and down on her, and make her their boots.⁶

Cham. What, the commonwealth their boots?
will she hold out water in wet weather?

Gads. She will, she will; justice hath liquored her.
We steal as in a castle, cock-sure; we have the receipt of fern-seed, we walk invisible.

Cham. Nay, by my faith! I think you are more beholden to the night than to fern-seed, for your walking invisible.

Gads. Give me thy hand: thou shalt have a share in our purchase, as I am a true man.

Cham. Nay, rather let me have it as you are a false thief.

Gads. Go to; Homo is a common name to all men. Did the ostler bring my gelding out of the stable. Farewell, you muddy knave. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Road by Gadshill.

Enter Prince Henry and Poins; Bardolph and Peto, at some distance.

Poins. Come, shelter, shelter; I have removed Falstaff's horse, and he frets like a galled
P. Hen. Stand close. [velvet.

1 The pick-purse is always ready.

2 Freeholder.

3 Footpads.

4 Seven.

5 Public treasurers.

6 Booty.

7 Oiled.
Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Where's a Pains, Hal!
P. Hen. He is walked up to the top of the hill; I'll go seek him. [Pretends to seek Pains.

Fal. I am accused to rob in that thief's company: the rascal hath removed my horse, and tied him I know not where. If I travel but four foot by the squire! further afoot, I shall break my wind. Well, I doubt not but to die a fair death for all this, if I 'scape hanging for killing that rogue. I have forsworn his company hourly any time these two-and-twenty years, and yet I am bewitched with the rogue's company. If the rascal have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'll be hanged; it could not be else; I have drunk medicines.—Pains!—Hal! a plague upon you both!—Bardolph!—Peto;—I'll starve ere I'll rob a foot further. An't were not as good a deed as drink, to turn true man, and leave these rogues, I am the veriest varlet that ever chewed with a tooth. Eight yards of uneven ground is three score and ten miles afoot with me; and the stony-hearted villains know it well enough: A plague upon't, when thieves cannot be true to one another! [They whistle.] Whew!—A plague upon you all! Give me my horse, you rogues: give me my horse, and be hanged.

P. Hen. Peace, lie, down; lay thine ear close to the ground, and list if thou canst hear the tread of travellers.

Fal. Have you any levers to lift me up again, being down? I'll not bear mine own flesh so far afoot again, for all the coin in thy father's exchequer. What a plague mean ye to colt me thus?

P. Hen. Thou liest, thou art not colt, thou art uncolt.

Fal. I pr'ythee, good prince Hal, help me to my horse: good king's son.

P. Hen. Out, you rogue! shall I be your ostler?

Fal. Go, hang thyself in thy own heir-apparent garters! If I be ta'en, I'll peach for this. An I have not ballads made on you all, let a cup of sack be my poison: When a jest is so forward, and afoot too—I hate it.

Enter Gadshill.

Gads. Stand.

Fal. So do I, against my will.

Pains. O, 'tis our setter: I know his voice.

Enter Bardolph.

Bard. What news?

Gads. Case ye, case ye: on with your visors; there's money of the king's coming down the hill; 'tis going to the king's exchequer.

Fal. You lie, you rogue; 'tis going to the king's tavern.

Gads. There's enough to make us all—

Fal. To be hanged.

P. Hen. Sirs, you four shall front them in the narrow lane; Ned Pains, and I will walk lower; if they 'scape from your encounter, then they light on us.

Peto. How many be there of them?

Gads. Some eight or ten.

Fal. Will they not rob us?

P. Hen. What, a coward, Sir John Paunch?

Fal. Indeed, I am not John of Gaunt, your grandfather: but yet no coward, Hal.

P. Hen. Well, we leave that to the proof.

Pains. Sirrah Jack, thy horse stands behind the hedge: when thou needest him, there thou shalt find him. Farewell, and stand fast.

Fal. Now cannot I strike him, if I should be hanged.

P. Hen. Ned, where are our disguises?

Pains. Here, hard by; stand close.

[Exeunt P. Henry and Pains.

Fal. Now, my masters, happy man be his dole, say I; every man to his business.

Enter Travellers.

1 Trav. Come, neighbour; the boy shall lead our horses down the hill: we'll walk afoot awhile, and ease our legs.

Thieves. Stand.

Trav. Heaven bless us!

Fal. Strike; down with them; cut the villains' throats: Ah! caterpillars! bacon-fed knaves! they hate us youth: down with them; fleece them.

1 Trav. O, we are undone, both we and ours, for ever.

Fal. Hang ye knaves; Are ye undone? No, ye fat chuffs! I would, your store were here! On, bacons, on! What, ye knaves? young men must live; Ye are grand-jurors are ye? We'll jure ye, i' faith.

[Exeunt Fal., &c., driving the Travellers out.

Re-enter Prince Henry and Pains.

P. Hen. The thieves have bound the true men; now, could thou and I rob the thieves, and go merrily to London, it would be argument for a week, laughter for a month, and a good jest for ever.

Pains. Stand close, I hear them coming.

Re-enter Thieves.

Fal. Come, my masters, let us share, and then to horse before day. An the prince and Pains be not two arrant cowards, there's no equity stirring; there's no more valour in that Pains, than in a wild duck.

P. Hen. Your money. [Rushing out upon Pains, Villains.

[As they are sharing, the Prince and Pains set upon them. Falstaff, after a blow or two, and the rest, run away, leaving their booty behind them.

P. Hen. Got with much ease. Now merrily to horse:

The thieves are scatter'd, and possess'd with fear So strongly, that they dare not meet each other; Each takes his fellow for an officer.

Away, good Ned. Falstaff sweats to death, And lards the lean earth as he walks along: Were't not for laughing, I should pity him.

Pains. How the rogue roar'd! [Exeunt.

1 Clowns.
SCENE III.
Warkworth. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Hotspur, reading a Letter.
—But, for mine own part, my lord, I could be well contented to be there, in respect of the love I bear your house. He could be contented.—
Why is he not then? In respect of the love he bears our house—he shows in this, he loves his own barn better than he loves our house. Let me see some more. The purpose you undertake is dangerous:—Why, that's certain; 'tis dangerous to take a cold, to sleep, to drink: but I tell you, my lord, out of this nettle, danger, we pluck this flower, safety. The purpose you undertake is dangerous; the friends you have named, uncertain; the time itself unsorted; and your whole plot too light, for the counterpoise of so great an opposition.—Say you so, say you so? I say unto you again, you are a shallow, cowardly hind, and you lie. What a lack-brain is this? Our plot is a good plot as ever was laid; our friends true and constant: a good plot, good friends, and full of expectation: an excellent plot, very good friends. What a frosty-spirited rogue is this? Why, my lord of York commends the plot, and the general course of the action. By this hand, an I were now by this rascal, I could brain him with his lady's fan. Is there not my father, my uncle, and myself? lord Edmund Mortimer, my lord of York, and Owen Glendower? Is there not, besides, the Douglas? Have I not all their letters, to meet me in arms by the ninth of the next month? and are they not, some of them, set forward already? What a pagan rascal is this? an infidel? Ha! you shall see now, in very sincerity of fear and cold heart, will he to the king, and lay open all our proceedings. O, I could divide myself, and go to buffets, for moving such a dish of skimmed milk with so honourable an action! Hang him! let him tell the king: We are prepared: I will set forward to-night.

Enter Lady Percy.

How now, Kate? I must leave you within these two hours.

Lady. O my good lord, why are you thus? For what offence have I, this fortnight, been a banish'd woman from my Harry's bed? Tell me, sweet lord, what is't that takes from thee.

Thy stomach, pleasure, and thy golden sleep? Why dost thou bend thine eyes upon the earth? And start so often when thou sit'st alone? Why hast thou lost the fresh blood in thy cheeks;

And given my treasures, and my rights of thee,
To thick-eyed musing, and curs'd melancholy?
In thy faint slumber, I by thee have watch'd,
And heard thee murmur tales of iron wars:
Speak terms of manage to thy bounding steed:
Cry, Courage!—to the field! And thou hast talk'd
Of sallies, and retire; of trenches, tents,
Of palisadoes, frontiers, parapets;
Of basilisks, of cannon, culverin;
Of prisoners' ransome, and of soldiers slain,

And all the 'currents of a heady fight,
Thy spirit within thee hath been so at war,
And thus bath so bestirr'd thee in thy sleep,
That beads of sweat have stood upon thy brow,
Like bubbles in a late disturbed stream:
And in thy face strange motions have appear'd,
Such as we see when men restrain their breath
On some great sudden haste. O, what portents are these?

Some heavy business hath my lord in hand,
And I must know it, else he loves me not.

Hot. What, ho! is Gilliams with the packet gone?

Serv. He is, my lord, an hour ago.

Hot. Hath Butler brought those horses from the sheriff?

Serv. One horse, my lord, he brought even now.

Hot. What horse? a roan, a crop-ear, is it not?

Serv. It is, my lord.

Hot. That roan shall be my throne.

Well, I will back him straight: O esperance!—
Bid Butler lead him forth into the park.

[Exit Servant.

Lady. But hear you, my lord.

Hot. What say'st, my lady?

Lady. What is it carries you away?

Hot. My horse.

Lady. Out, ye mad-headed ape! A weasel hath not such a deal of spleen, As you are toss'd with. In faith, I'll know your business, Harry, that I will. I fear, my brother Mortimer doth stir About his title; and hath sent for you, To line his enterprize: But if you go—

Hot. So far afoot, I shall be weary, love.

Lady. Come, come, you parquet, answer me Directly to this question that I ask.

In faith, I'll break thy little finger, Harry, An if thou wilt not tell me all things true.

Hot. Away.

Away, you trifler!—Love!—I love thee not, I care not for thee, Kate: this is no world To play with mammon; and to tilt with laps: We must have bloody noses, and crack'd crowns, And pass them current too.—My horse, my horse!—

What say'st thou, Kate? what wouldst thou have with me?

Lady. Do you not love me? do you not, indeed? Well, do not then; for, since you love me not, I will not love myself. Do you not love me? Nay, tell me, if you speak in jest or no.

Hot. Come, wilt thou see me ride?

And when I am o' horseback, I will swear I love thee infinitely. But hark you, Kate; I must not have you henceforth question me Whither I go, nor reason whereabout: Whither I must, I must; and, to conclude, This evening must I leave you, gentle Kate. I know you wise; but yet no farther wise, Than Harry Percy's wife: constant you are; But yet a woman: and for secrecy, No lady closer; for I well believe, Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know; And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate?

1 The Percy motto. 2 Strengthen. 3 Puppets.
Lady. How! so fat?

Hot. Not an inch farther. But hark you, Kate! Whither I go, thither shall you go too; To-day will I set forth, to-morrow you.— Will this content you, Kate?

Lady. 'Tis must, of force. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—EASTCHEAP. A ROOM IN THE BOAR'S HEAD TAVERN.

Enter Prince Henry and Poins.

P. Hen. Ned, prythee come out of that fat room, and lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Poins. Where hast been, Hal?

P. Hen. With three or four loggerheads, amongst three or four score hogheads. I have sounded the very base string of humility. Sirrah, I am sworn brother to a leash of dwarves; and can call them all by their Christian names, as—Tom, Dick, and Francis. They take it already upon their salvation, that, though I be but Prince of Wales, yet I am the king of courtesy; and tell me flatly I am no proud Jack, like Falstaff; but a lad of mettle, a good boy, so they call me; and when I am king of England, I shall command all the good lads in Eastcheap.—To conclude, I am so good a proficient in one quarter of an hour, that I can drink with any tinker in his own language during my life. I tell thee, Ned, thou hast lost much honour, that thou wast not with me in this action. But, sweet Ned,—to sweeten which name of Ned, I give thee this pennyworth of sugar, clapped even now in my hand by an under-skinner! one that never spake other English in his life, than—Eight skillings and sixpence, and—You are welcome; with this shrill addition,—Anon, anon, sir! Score a pint of bastard in the Half-moon, or so. But, Ned, to drive away the time till Falstaff come, I prythee, do thou stand in some by-room, while I question my puny drawer, to what end he gave me the sugar; and do thou never leave calling—Francis, that his tale to me may be nothing but anon. Step aside, and I'll show thee a precedent.

Poins. Francis!

P. Hen. Thou art perfect.

Poins. Francis! [Exit Poins.]

Enter Francis.

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.—Look down into the Pomegranate, Ralph.

P. Hen. Come hither, Francis.

Fran. My lord.

P. Hen. How long hast thou to serve, Francis?

Fran. Forsooth, five year, and as much as to—

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. Five years! by'r lady, a long lease for the clinking of pewter. But, Francis, darest thou be so valiant, as to play the coward with thy indigence, and to show it a fair pair of heels, and run from it?

Fran. O, sir! I'll be sworn upon all the books in England, I could find it in my heart—

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. How old art thou, Francis?

Fran. Let me see,—About Michaelmas next I shall be—

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

F. Anon, sir.—Pray you, stay a little, my lord.

P. Hen. Nay, but hark you, Francis: For the sugar thou gavest me,—twas a pennyworth, was't not?

Fran. O, sir! I would it had been two.

P. H. I will give thee for it a thousand pound: ask me when thou wilt, and thou shalt have it.

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon.

P. Hen. Anon, Francis? No, Francis: but tomorrow, Francis; or Francis, on Thursday; or, indeed, Francis, when thou wilt. But, Francis,—

Fran. My lord?

P. Hen. Wilt thou rob this leathern-jerkin, crystal-button, natt-pated, agate-ring, puke-stockg, caddis-garter, smooth-tongue, Spanish-pouch,—

Fran. O sir, who do you mean?

P. Hen. Why then, your brown bastard is your only drink: for, look you, Francis, your white canvas doublet will stink: in Barbary, sir, it cannot come to so much.

Fran. What, sir?

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

P. Hen. Away, you rogue! Dost thou not hear them call?

[Here they both call him; the Drawer stands amazed, not knowing which way to go.]

Enter Vintner.

Vint. What! stand'st thou still, and heark'st such a calling? Look to the guests within. [Exit Fran.] My lord, old Sir John, with half a dozen more, are at the door; Shall I let them in?

P. Hen. Let them alone awhile, and then open the door. [Exit Vintner.]

Re-enter Poins.

Poins. Anon, anon, sir.

P. Hen. Sirrah, Falstaff and the rest of the thieves are at the door; Shall we be merry?

Poins. As merry as crickets, my lad. But hark ye; What cunning match have you made with this jest of the drawer? come, what's the issue?

P. Hen. I am now of all humours, that have show'd themselves humours, since the old days of Goodman Adan, to the pupil age of this present twelve o'clock at midnight. [Re-enter Francis, with wine.] What's o'clock, Francis?

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

P. H. That ever this fellow should have fewer words than a parrot, and yet the son of a woman!—His industry is—up stairs, and down stairs; his eloquence, the parcel of a reckoning. I am not yet of Percy's mind, the Hothspur of the north; he that kills me some six or seven dozen of Scots at a breakfast, washes his hands, and says to his wife.—Fye upon this quiet life! I want work. O my sweet Harry, says she, how many host thou killed to-day? Give me room horse a drench, says he; and answers, Some fourteen, an hour after; a trifle, a trifle. I pr'ythee, 1 a sweet wine.

1 Tapster.
call in Falstaff; I'll play Percy, and he shall play dame Mortimer his wife. Rivo, says the drunkard. Call in ribs, call in tallow.

Enter Falstaff, Gadshill, Bardolph, and Peto.

Poins. Welcome, Jack. Where hast thou been?
Fal. A plague of all cowards, I say, and a vengeance too! marry, and amen!—Give me a cup of sack, boy.—Ere I lead this life long, I'll sew neither-stocks, I mend then, and foot them too. A plague of all cowards!—Give me a cup of sack, rogue.—Is there no virtue extant?

(He drinks.)
P. Hen. Didst thou never see Titan kiss a dish of butter? pitiful-hearted Titan, that melted at the sweet tale of the son! if thou didst, then behold that compound.
Fal. You rogue, here's lime in this sack too: There is nothing but regury to be found in villainous man; Yet a coward is worse than a cup of sack with lime in it; a villainous coward. —Go thy ways, old Jack; die when thou wilt, if manhood, good manhood, be not forgotten upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten²-herring. There live not three good men unhanged in England; and one of them is fat, and grows old: Heaven help the while! a bad world, I say! I would, I were a weaver; I could sing psalms or any thing: A plague of all cowards, I say still.

P. H. How now, wool-sack! what matter you?
Fal. A king's son! If I do not beat thee out of thy kingdom with a dagger of lath, and drive all thy subjects afore thee like a flock of wild geese, I'll never wear hair on my face more. You prince of Wales?

P. H. Why, you round man! what's the matter?
Fal. Are you not a coward? answer me to that; and Poins there?
Poins. Ye fat paunch, an ye call me coward; I'll stab thee.

Fal. I call thee coward! I'll see thee hang'd ere I call thee coward: but I would give a thousand pound I could run as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders, you care not who sees your back: Call you that backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing! give me them that will face me.—Give me a cup of sack!—I am a rogue, if I drank to-day.
P. Hen. O villain! thy lips are scarce wiped since thou drank'st last.

Fal. All's one for that. A plague of all cowards, still say I. (He drinks.)
P. Hen. What's the matter?

Fal. What's the matter? there be four of us here have tak'en a thousand pound this morning.
P. Hen. Where is it, Jack? where is it?

Fal. Where is it? taken from us it is; a hundred upon poor four of us.
P. Hen. What, a hundred, man?

Fal. I am a rogue, if I were not at half-sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have 'scap'd by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the doublet; four through the hose; my buckler cut through and through; my sword hacked like a hand-saw, ece signum. I never dealt better since I was a man; all would not

1 Stockings. 2 Out of season.
do. A plague of all cowards!—Let them speak if they speak more or less than truth, they are villains, and the sons of darkness.
P. Hen. Speak, sirs; how was it?
Gods. We four set upon some dozen,—

Fal. Sixteen, at least, my lord.

Gods. And bound them.
Peto. No, no, they were not bound.

Fal. You rogue, they were bound, every man of them; or I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew.

Gods. As we were sharing, some six or seven fresh men set upon us,—

Fal. And unbound the rest, and then come in the other.
P. Hen. What, fought you with them all?

Fal. All? I know not what you call, all; but if I fought not with fifty of them, I am a bunch of riddish: if there were not two or three and fifty upon poor old Jack, then I am no two-legged creature.
Poins. Pray heaven you have not murdered some of them.

Fal. Nay, that's past praying for: for I have peppered two of them: two, I am sure, I have paid; two rogues in buckram suits. I tell thee what, Hal,—if I tell thee a lie, spit in my face, call me horse. Thou knowest my old ward;—here I lay, and thus I bore my point. Four rogues in buckram let drive at me,—
P. H. What, four? thou saidst but two, even now.

Fal. Four, Hal; I told thee four.
Poins. Ay, ay, he said four.

Fal. These four came all a-front, and mainly thrust at me. I made me no more ado, but took all their seven points in my target, thus.
P. Hen. Seven? why, there were but four, even now.

Fal. In buckram.
Poins. Ay, four, in buckram suits.

Fal. Seven by these hilt's, or I am a villain else. P. Hen. Why, thee, let him alone; we shall have more anon.

Fal. Dost thou hear me, Hal?
P. Hen. Ay, and mark thee too, Jack.

Fal. Do so, for it is worth the listening to. These nine in buckram, that I told thee of,—
P. Hen. So, two more already.

Fal. Their points being broken,—
Poins. Down fell their hose.

Fal. Began to give me ground: But I followed me close, came in foot and hand; and with a thought, seven of the eleven I paid.
P. Hen. O monstrous! eleven buckram men grown out of two?

Fal. But, as the devil would have it, three misbegotten knaves, in Kendal green, came at my back, and let drive at me:—for it was so dark, Hal, that thou couldst not see thy hand.
P. Hen. These lies are like the father that begeth them; gross as a mountain, open, palpable. Why thou knotty-pated fool,—

Fal. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? is not the truth, the truth?
P. Hen. Why, how couldst thou know these men in Kendal green, when it was so dark thou couldst not see thy hand? come tell us your reason: What sayest thou to this?
Why, was I and it and what, I no, my mother. If so, thou hast true, as he, did I thou hast an eft, run and, with a word, out-faced you from your prize, and have it; yea, and can show it you here in the house:—and Falstaff, you ran away as nimbly, with as quick dexterity, and roared for mercy, and still ran and roared, as ever I heard a bull-calf. What a slave art thou, to hack thy sword as thou hast done; and then say, it was in fight! What trick, what device, what starting-hole, canst thou now find out, to hide thee from this open and apparent shame?

Points. Come, let's hear, Jack; what trick hast thou now?

Fal. Ah, my lord, I knew ye, as well as he that made ye. Why, hear ye, my masters: Was it for me to kill the heir-apparent? Should I turn upon the true prince? Why, thou knowest, I am as valiant as Hercules; but beware instinct: the lion will not touch the true prince. Instinct is a great matter; I was a coward on instinct. I shall think the better of myself and thee, during my life: I for a valiant lion, and thou for a true prince. But, lords, I am glad you have the money.——Hostess, clap to the doors; watch to-night, pray to-morrow.——Gallants, ladies, boys, hearts of gold, all the titles of good fellowship come to you! What, shall we be merry? shall we have a play extempore?

P. Hen. Content; and the argument shall be thy running away.

F. Ah! no more of that, Hal, an thou lov'st me.

Enter Hostess.

Host. My lord, the prince.——

P. Hen. How now, my lady the hostess? what sayst thou to me?

Host. Marry, my lord, there is a nobleman of the court at door, would speak with you: he says, he comes from your father.

P. Hen. Give him as much as will make him a royal man, and send him back again to my father.——

Host. An old man.

Fal. What manner of man is he? [mother.

Host. An old man.

Fal. What doth gravity out of his bed at midnight?—Shall I give him his answer?

P. Hen. Prythee, do, Jack.

1 Torture.

Fal. 'Faith, and I'll send him packing. [Exit. P. Hen. Now, sirs; by'r lady, you fighthaif;—so did you, Peto; so did you, Bardolph: you are lions too, you ran away upon instinct, you will not touch the true prince; no,—ifie!

Bard. 'Faith, I ran when I saw others run. P. Hen. Tell me now in earnest, how came Falstaff's sword so hacked?

Peto. Why, he hacked it with his dagger; and said, he should swear truth out of England, but he would make you believe it was done in fight; and persuaded us to do the like.

Bard. Yea, and to tickle our noses with spear-grass to make them bleed: and then to beslubber our garments with it, and to swear it was the blood of true men. I did that I did not this seven year before,—I blushed to hear his monstrous devices.

P. Hen. O villain, thou stol'st a cup of sack eighteen years ago, and wert taken with the manner, and ever since thou hast blushed extempore: Thou hadst fire and sword on thy side, and yet thou ran'st away; what instinct hast thou for it?

Bard. My lord, do you see these meteors? do you behold these exhalations!

P. Hen. I do.

Bard. What think you they portend?

P. Hen. Hot livers and cold purses.2

Bard. Choler, my lord, if rightly taken.

P. Hen. No, if rightly taken, halter.——

Re-enter Falstaff.

Here comes lean Jack, here comes bare-bone. How now, my sweet creature of bombast! How long is 't, Jack, since thou sawest thine own knee?

Fal. My own knee? when I was about thy years, Hal, I was not an eagle's talon in the waist; I could have crept into any alderman's thumb-ring: A plague of sighing and grief! it blows a man up like a bladder. There's villainous news abroad: here was Sir John Bracy from your father: you must to the court in the morning. That same mad fellow of the north, Percy; and he of Wales, that gave Amalmon the bastinado.

What, a plague, call you him?

Points. O, Glendower.

Fal. Owen, Owen; the same; —and his son-in-law, Mortimer; and old Northumberland; and that sprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that runs o'horseback up a hill perpendicular.

P. Hen. He that rides at high speed, and with his pistol kills a sparrow flying.

Fal. You have hit it.

P. Hen. So did he never the sparrow.

Fal. Well, that rascal hath good metal in him; he will not run.

P. Hen. Why, what a rascal art thou then, to praise him so for running?

Fal. O'horseback, ye cuckoo! but afoot, he will not budge a foot.

P. Hen. Yes, Jack, upon instinct.

Fal. I grant ye, upon instinct. Well, he is there too, and one Mordake, and a thousand blue-caps: more: Worcester is stolen away to.

1 In the fact. 2 Drunkenness and poverty. 4 Scots in blue bonnets.
night; thy father's beard is turned white with the news; you may buy land now as cheap as stinking mackarel.—But tell me, Hal, art thou not horribly afraid? thou being heir-apparent, could the world pick thee out three such enemies again, as that fiend Douglas, that spirit Percy, and that devil Glendower? Art thou not horribly afraid? dost not thy blood thrill at it?

P. Hen. Not a whit, I' faith; I lack some of the finetimel.

Fal. Well, thou wilt be horribly chid tomorrow, when thou comest to thy father; if thou love me, practise an answer.

P. Hen. Do thou stand for my father, and examine me upon the particulars of my life.

Fal. Shall I? content: This shall be my state, this dagger my scepter, and this cushion my crown.

P. Hen. Thy state is taken for a joint-stool, thy golden scepter for a leaden dagger, and thy precious rich crown, for a pitiful bald crown.

Fal. Well, an the fire of grace be not quite out of thee, now shalt thou be moved.—Give me a cup of sack, to make mine eyes look red, that it may be thought I have wept; for I must speak in passion, and I will do it in King Cambyses' vein.

P. Hen. Well, here is my leg.

Fal. And here is my speech:—Stand aside, nobility.

Host. This is excellent sport, i' faith.

Fal. Weep not, sweet queen, for trickling tears are vain.

Host. O, the father, how he holds his countenance!

Fal. For heaven's sake, lords, convey my trustful queen, For tears do stop the flood-gates of her eyes.

Host. O rare! he doth it as like one of these players, as I ever see.

Fal. Peace, good pint-pot; peace, good tickle-brain;—Harry, I do not only marvel where thou spendest thine time, but also how thou art accompanied: for though the camomile, the more it is trodden on, the faster it grows, yet youth, the more it is wasted, the sooner it wears. That thou art my son, I have partly thy mother's word, partly my own opinion; but chiefly a villainous trick of thine eye, and a foolish hanging of thy nether lip, that doth warrant me. If then thou be son to me, here lies the point:—Why, being son to me, art thou so pointed at? Shall the blessed sun of heaven prove a micher, and eat blackberries? a question not to be asked. Shall the son of England prove a thief, and take purses? a question to be asked. There is a thing, Harry, which thou hast often heard of, and it is known to many in our land by the name of pitch: this pitch, as ancient writers do report, doth defile: so doth the company thou keepest: for, Harry, now, I do not speak to thee in drink, but in tears; not in pleasure, but in passion; not in words only, but in woes also:—And yet there is a virtuous man, whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his name.

P. Hen. What manner of man, an it like your majesty?

Fal. A good portly man, and a corruptable, of a cheerful look, a pleasing eye, and a most noble carriage; and, as I think, his age some fifty, or, by'r-lady, inclining to threescore; and now I remember him, his name is Falstaff: if that man should be wantonly given, he deceiveth me; for, Harry, I see virtue in his looks. If then the tree may be known by the fruit, as the fruit by the tree, then peremptorily I speak it, there is virtue in that Falstaff; him keep with, the rest banish. And tell me now, thou naughty varlet, tell me, where hast thou been this month?

P. Hen. Dost thou speak like a king? Do thou stand for me, and I'll play my father.

Fal. Depose me? if thou dost it half so gravely, so majestically, both in word and matter, hang me up by the heels for a rabbit-sucker, or a poulterer's hare.

P. Hen. Well, here I am set.

Fal. And here I stand:—judge, my masters.

P. Hen. Now, Harry? whence come you?

Fal. My noble lord, from Eastcheap.

P. Hen. The complaints I hear of thee are grievous.

Fal. 'Sblood, my lord, they are false:—nay, I'll tickle ye for a young prince, i' faith.

P. Hen. Swearest thou, ungracious boy? henceforth ne'er look on me. Thou art violently carried away from grace: there is a devil haunts thee, in the likeness of a fat old man: a tun of man is thy companion. Why dost thou converse with that trunk of humours, that huge bombard of sack, that roasted Manningtree ox; that reverend vice, that grey iniquity, that father ruffian, that vanity in years? Wherein is he good, but to taste sack and drink it? wherein neat and cleanly, but to carve a capon and eat it? wherein cunning, but in craft? wherein crafty, but in villainy? wherein villainous, but in all things? wherein worthy, but in nothing?

Fal. I would, your grace would take me with you; whom means your grace?

P. Hen. That villainous abominable misleader of youth, Falstaff, that old white-bearded Satan.

Fal. My lord, the man I know.

P. Hen. I know, thou dost.

Fal. But to say, I know more harm in him than in myself, were to say more than I know. That he is old (the more the pity), his white hairs do witness it: but that he is villainous, that I utterly deny. If sack and sugar be a fault, if to be old and merry be a sin, then many an old host that I know, is lost: if to be fat be to be hated, then Pharaoh's lean kine are to be loved. No, my good lord; banish Peto, banish Bardolph, banish Pains: but for sweet Jack Falstaff, kind Jack Falstaff, true Jack Falstaff, valiant Jack Falstaff, and therefore more valiant, being as he is, old Jack Falstaff, banish not him thy Harry's company; banish plump Jack, and banish all the world.

P. Hen. I do, I will. [A knocking heard.]

[Execut Hostess, Francis, and Bardolph.]

Re-enter Bardolph, running.

Bard. O, my lord, my lord; the sheriff, with a most monstrous watch, is at the door.

[A leather black-jack to hold beer. 2 Roasted whole,
Fal. Out, you rogue! play out the play: I have much to say in the behalf of that Falstaff.

Re-enter Hostess, hastily.

Host. O, my lord, my lord!—

Fal. Heigh! heigh! the devil rides upon a fiddlestick: What’s the matter?

Host. The sheriff and all the watch are at the door: they come to search the house? Shall I let them in?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? never call a true piece of gold, a counterfeit: thou art essentially mad, without seeming so.

P. Hen. And thou a natural coward, without instinct.

Fal. I deny your major: if you will deny the sheriff, so; if not, let him enter: if I become not a cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing up! I hope, I shall as soon be strangled with a halter, as another.

P. Hen. Go, hide thee behind the arras;—the rest walk up above. Now, my masters, for a true face, and good conscience.

Fal. Both which I have had: but their date is out, and therefore I’ll hide me.

[Exeunt all but the Prince and Poins.

P. Hen. Call in the sheriff.

Enter Sheriff and Carrier.

Now, master sheriff; what’s your will with me?

Sher. First pardon me, my lord. A hue and cry Hath follow’d certain men unto this house.

P. Hen. What men?

Sher. One of them is well known, my gracious lord,

A gross fat man.

Car. As fat as butter.

P. Hen. The man, I do assure you, is not here;

For I myself at this time have employ’d him. And, sheriff, I will engage my word to thee,

That I will, by to-morrow dinner-time, Send him to answer thee, or any man,

For anything he shall be charg’d withal:

And so let me entreat you leave the house.

S. I will, my lord: There are two gentlemen Have in this robbery lost three hundred marks.

P. Hen. It may be so: if he have robb’d these men,

He shall be answerable; and so, farewell.

Sher. Good night, my noble lord.

P. Hen. I think it is good morrow; is it not?

S. Indeed, my lord, I think it be two o’clock.

[Exeunt Sheriff and Carrier.

P. Hen. This oily rascal is known as well as Paul’s. Go, call him forth.

Poins. Falstaff—fast asleep behind the arras, and snoring like a horse.

P. Hen. Hark, how hard he fetches breath: Search his pockets. [Poins searches.] What hast thou found?

Poins. Nothing but papers, my lord.

P. Hen. Let’s see what they be: read them.

Poins. Item, A capon, 2s. 2d.

Item, Sauce, 4d.

Item, Sack, two gallons, 5s. 8d.

Item, Anchovies, and sack after supper, 2s. 6d.

Item, Bread, a half-penny.

P. Hen. O monstrous! but one-half-pennyworth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack!—What there is else, keep close; we’ll read it at more advantage; there let him sleep till day. I’ll to the court in the morning: we must all to the wars, and thy place shall be honourable. I’ll procure this fat rogue a charge of foot; and, I know, his death will be a march of twelve-score. The money shall be paid back again with advantage. Be with me betimes in the morning; and so good-morrow, Poins.

Poins. Good morrow, good my lord. [Exeunt.

Act Third.

SCENE I.—BANGOR. A ROOM IN THE ARCHDEACON’S HOUSE.

Enter Hotspur, Worcester, Mortimer, and Glendower.

Mort. These promises are fair, the parties sure, And our induction full of prosperous hope.

Hot. Lord Mortimer—and cousin Glendower—Will you sit down?—

And, uncle Worcester:—A plague upon it! I have forgot the map.

Glend. No, here it is.

Sit, cousin Percy; sit, good cousin Hotspur: For by that name as oft as Lancaster Doth speak of you, his cheek looks pale; and, with A rising sigh, he wishest you in heaven.

Hot. And you in hell, as often as he hears Owen Glendower spoke of.

Glend. I cannot blame him: at my nativity The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes, Of burning cresses! and at my birth, The frame and huge foundation of the earth Shak’d like a coward.

Hot. Why, so it would have done At the same season, if your mother’s cat had But kitten’d, though yourself had ne’er been born.

G. I say, the earth did shake when I was born. Hot. And I say, the earth was not of my mind, If you suppose, as fearing you it shook.

Glend. The heavens were all on fire, the earth did tremble.

H. O, then the earth shook to see the heavens And not in fear of your nativity. [on fire, Diseased nature oftentimes breaks forth In strange eruptions: oft the teeming earth Is with a kind of colick pinch’d and vex’d By the imprisoning of unruly wind Within her womb; which, for enlargement striveth.

Shakes the old beldame earth, and topples down Steeples, and moss-grown towers. At your birth, Our grandam earth, having this distemperature, In passion shook.

Glend. Cousin, of many men I do not bear these crossings. Give me leave To tell you once again,—that at my birth, The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes; The goats ran from the mountains, and the herds Were strangely clamorous to the frighted fields.

1 Beacon lights set cross-ways.
SC. I.

FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV.

397

These signs have mark'd me extraordinary;
And all the courses of my life do show,
I am not in the roll of common men.
Where is he living,—clipp'd in with the sea
That chides the banks of England, Scotland,
Wales,—
Which calls me pupil, or hath read to me?
And bring him out, that is but woman's son,
Can trace me in the tedious ways of art,
And hold me pace in deep experiments.

Hot. I think there is no man speaks better
Welsh:

I will to dinner. [mad.

M. Peace, cousin Percy; you will make him
Glend. I can call spirits from the vasty deep.

Hot. Why, so can I; or so can any man:
But will they come, when you do call for them?

Gl. Why, I can teach you, cousin, to command the devil.

Hot. And I can teach thee, coz, to shame the devil,
By telling truth; Tell truth, and shame the devil.
If thou have power to raise him, bring him hither,
And I'll be sworn, I have power to shame him hence.

O, while you live, tell truth and shame the devil.

Mort. Come, come.

No more of this unprofitable chat.

Glend. Three times hath Henry Bolingbroke made head
Against my power: thrice from the banks of Wye,
And sandy-bottom'd Severn, have I sent him,
Bootless home, and weather-beaten back.

H. Home without boots, and in foul weather too!
How 'scapes he agues, in the devil's name?

Gle. Come, here's the map; Shall we divide our right,
According to our three-fold order ta'en?

Mort. The archdeacon hath divided it
Into three limits, very equally:
England, from Trent and Severn hitherto,
By south and east, is to my part assign'd:
All westward, Wales beyond the Severn shore,
And all the fertile land within that bound,
To Owen Glendower:—and, dear coz, to you
The remnant northward, lying off from Trent,
And our indentures tripartite are drawn:
Which being sealed interchangeably,
(A business that this night may execute,)
To-morrow, cousin Percy, you, and I,
And my good lord of Worcester, will set forth,
To meet your father, and the Scottish power,
As is appointed us, at Shrewsbury.

My father Glendower is not ready yet,
Nor shall we need his help these fourteen days:
Within that space, [To Glend.] you may have drawn together [men. Your tenants, friends, and neighbouring gentle-

Gle. A shorter time shall send meto you, lords,
And in my conduct shall your ladies come;
From whom you now must steal, and take no
For there will be a world of water shed, [leave;
Upon the parting of your wives and you.

Hot. Methinks, my moiety, north from Burton
In quantity equals not one of yours: [here,

See, how this river comes me cranking in,
And cuts me, from the best of all my land,
A huge half moon, a monstrous candle out.
I'll have the current in this place damn'd up;
And here the smug and silver Trent shall run,
In a new channel, fair and evenly:
It shall not wind with such a deep indent,
To rob me of so rich a bottom here.

G. Not wind? it shall, it must; you see, it doth.

Mort. Yea.

But mark, how he bears his course, and runs me
With like advantage on the other side; [up
Robbing the opposite continent as much,
As on the other side it takes from you.
W. Yea, but a little charge will trench him here,
And on this north side win this cape of land;
And then he runs straight and even.

Hot. I'll have it so; a little charge will do it.

Glend. I will not have it alter'd.

Hot. Will not you?

Glend. No, nor you shall not.

Hot. Who shall say me nay?

Glend. Why that will I.

Hot. Let me not understand you then,
Speak it in Welsh.

Glen. I can speak English, lord, as well as you;
For I was train'd up in the English court:
Where, being but young, I framed to the harp
Many an English ditty, lovely well,
And gave the tongue a helpful ornament;
A virtue that was never seen in you.

Hot. Marry, and I'm glad of it with all my heart:
I had rather be a kitten, and cry—mew,
Than one of these same metre ballad-mongers:
I had rather hear a brazen canstic turn'd,
Or a dry wheel grate on an axle-tree;
And that would set my teeth nothing on edge,
Nothing so much as mincing poetry;
'Tis like the forced gate of a shuffling nag.

Glend. Come, you shall have Trent turn'd.

Hot. I do not care: I'll give thrice so much land
To any well-deserving friend;
But, in the way of bargain, mark ye me,
I'll cavil on the ninth part of a hair.

Are the indentures drawn? shall we be gone?

Glend. The moon shines fair, you may away
by night;
I'll haste the writer, and, withal,
Break with your wives of your departure hence:
I am afraid, my daughter will run mad,
So much she doteth on her Mortimer. [Exit.

Mort. Fie, cousin Percy! how you cross my father!

Hot. I cannot choose: sometimes he angers me,
With telling me of the moldiarp and the ant,
Of the dreamer Merlin and his prophecies;
And of a dragon and a flesse fish,
A clip-wing'd griffin, and a moulent raven,
A couching lion, and a rampant cat,
And such a deal of skimble-skamble stuff
As puts me from my faith. I tell you what,—
He held me, but last night, at least nine hours,
In reckoning up the several devils' names,
That were his lacqueys: I cried, humph,—and well,—go to,—
But mark'd him not a word. O, he's as tedious
As is a tired horse, a railing wife;
 Worse than a smoky house:—I had rather live
 With cheese and garlic, in a windmill, far,
 Than feed on cates, and have him talk to me,
 In any summer-house in Christendom.

Mort. In faith, he is a worthy gentleman;
Exceedingly well read, and profited
In strange concealments; valiant as a lion,
And wondrous affable: and as bountiful
As milks of India. Shall I tell you, cousin?
He holds your temper in a high respect,
And curbs himself even of his natural scope,
When you do cross his humour; faith, he does:
I warrant you, that man is not alive,
Might so have tempted him as you have done,
Without the taste of danger and reproof;
But do not use it oft, let me entreat you.

W. In faith, my lord, you are too wilful-blame;
And since your coming hither have done enough!
To put him quite beside his patience,
You must needs learn, lord, to amend this fault:
Though sometimes it show greatness, courage,
Blood,
(And that's the dearest grace it renders you,) Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh rage,
Defect of manners, want of government,
Pride, haughtiness, opinion, and disdain;
The least of which, haunting a nobleman,
Loceth men's hearts; and leaves behind a stain
Upon the beauty of all parts besides,
Beguiling them of commendation.

Hot. Well, I am school'd; good manners be your speed!
Here come our wives, and let us take our leave.

Re-enter Glendower, with the Ladies.

Mort. This is the deadly spite that angers me,—
My wife can speak no English, I no Welsh.
Gl. My daughter weeps; she will not part with Shall be a soldier too, she'll go to the wars. (you, Mort. Good father, tell her,—that she, and my aunt Percy,
Shall follow in your conduct speedily.
[Glendower speaks to his daughter in Welsh, and she answers him in the same.

Glen. She's desperate here; a peevish self-will'd
One no persuasion can do good upon. [woman,

[Lady M. speaks to Mortimer in Welsh.

Mor. I understand thy looks; that pretty Welsh
Which thou pourest down from these swelling heavens,
I am too perfect in; and, but for shame,
In such a parley would I answer thee.

[Lady Mortimer speaks.

I understand thy kisses, and thou mine,
And that's a feeling disputation:
But I will never be a truant, love,
Till I have learn'd thy language; for thy tongue
Makes Welsh as sweet as ditties highly pens'd
Sung by a fair queen in a summer bower,
With ravishing division, to her lute.

Glend. Nay, if you melt, then will she run mad.

[Lady Mortimer speaks again.

Mort. O, I am ignorance itself in this.

Glend. She bids you
Upon the wanton rushes lay you down,
And rest your gentle head upon her lap,
And she will sing the song that pleaseth you,
And on your eye-lids crown the god of sleep,
Charming your blood with pleasing heaviness;
Making such difference 'twixt wake and sleep,
As is the difference betwixt day and night,
The hour before the heavenly harness'd team
Begins his golden progress in the east.

[sing:

Mort. With all my heart I'll sit, and hear her
By that time will our book, I think, be drawn.

Glend. Do so;
And those musicians that shall play to you,
Hang in the air a thousand leagues from hence;
Yet straight they shall be here: sit, and attend.

Glendower speaks some Welsh words, and then the Music plays.

II. Now I perceive the devil understands
And 'ts no marvel, he's so humorous. [Welsh;
By'r lady, he's a good musician.

Lady P. Then should you be nothing but musical for you are altogether governed by humour.
I lie still, ye thief, and hear the lady sing in Welsh.
Hot. I had rather hear Lady, my brach, howl in Irish.

Lady P. Wouldst thou have thy head broken?
Hot. No.

Lady P. Then be still.
Hot. Peace! she sings.

A Welsh Song, sung by Lady Mortimer.

Hot. Come, Kate, I'll have your song too.

Lady P. Not mine, in good sooth.

H. Not yours, in good sooth! 'Heart, you swear
Like a comfit-maker's wife! Not you, I'll have good sooth;
And, As true as I live; and, As sure as day;
And giv' st such sarcenet surety for thy oaths,
As if thou never walk'dst further than Finsbury.
Swear me, Kate, like a lady as thou art,
A good mouth-filling oath; and leave in sooth,
And such protest of pepper-gingerbread,
To velvet guards, and Sunday citizens.
Come, sing.

Lady P. I will not sing.

Hot. 'Tis the next way to turn tailor, or be red-breast teacher. An the indentures be drawn I'll away within these two hours; and so come in when ye will.
[Exit.

G. Come, come, lord Mortimer; you are assow,
As hot lord Percy is on fire to go.
By this our book's drawn; we'll but seal, and then
To horse immediately.

Mort. With all my heart. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.

LONDON. A ROOM IN THE PALACE.

Enter King Henry, Prince of Wales, and Lords.

K. Hen. Lords, give us leave; the prince of Wales, and I,
Must have some conference: But bencassat hand,
For we shall presently have need of you.—
[Exeunt Lords.

I know not whether heaven will have it so,
For some displeasing service I have done,
That in his secret doom out of my blood
He'll breed revengeence and a scourge for me;
But thou dost, in thy passages of life,
Make me believe,—that thou art only mark'd

1 Hound.
2 In deed.
3 Laced velvet Cockneys.
For the hot vengeance and the rod of heaven
To punish my mis-treadings. Tell me else,
Could such inordinate and low desires,
Such poor, such bare, such lewd, such mean attempts,
Such barren pleasures, rude society,
As thou art match’d withal, and grafted to,
Accompany the greatness of thy blood,
And hold their level with thy princely heart?
P. Hen. So plesse your majesty, I would I could Quit all offences with such clear excuse,
As well as, I am doubtlesse, I can purge
Myself of many I am charg’d withal:
Yet such exstenuation let me beg,
As, in reproov of many tales devis’d,—
Which oft the ear of greatness needs must hear,
By smiling pick-thanks \(^1\) and base newsmongers,
I may, for some things true, wherein my youth
Hath faultier wander’d and irregular,
Find pardon on my true submission.
K. Hen. God pardon thee!—yet let me wonder,
Harry,
At thy affections, which do hold a wing
Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.
Thy place in council thou hast rudely lost,\(^2\)
Which by thy younger brother is supplied;
And art almost an alien to the hearts
Of all the court and princes of my blood:
The hope and expectation of thy time
Is ruin’d; and the soul of every man
Prophecally does fore-think thy fall.
Had I so lavish of my presence been,
So common-hackney’d in the eyes of men,
So stale and cheap to vulgar company;
Opinion, that did help me to the crown,
Had still kept loyal to possession;
And left me in reputeless banishment,
A fellow of no mark nor likelihood.
By being seldom seen, I could not stir,
But, like a comet, I was wonder’d at;
That men would tell their children, This is he:
Others would say,—Where? Where is Bolingbroke?
And then I stole all courtesy from heaven,
And dress’d myself in such humility,
That I did pluck allegiance from men’s hearts,
Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths,
Even in the presence of the crowned king.
Thus did I keep my person fresh and new;
My presence, like a robe pontifical,
Ne’er seen, but wonder’d at: and so my state,
Seldom, but sumptuous, showed like a feast;
And won, by raraeness, such solemnity.
The skipping king, he abled up and down
With shallow jesters, and rash bavards\(^3\) wise,
Soon kindled, and soon burn’d; carded his state;
Misused his royalty with capering fools;
Had his great name profaned with their scorns;
And gave his countenance, against his name,
To laugh at gibing boys, and stand the push
Of every bearless vain comparative:—
Grew a companion to the common streets,
Enfeoff’d\(^4\) himself to popularity:
That being daily swallow’d by men’s eyes,
They surfeited with honey; and began
To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little

More than a little is by much too much.
So, when he had occasion to be seen,
He was but as the cuckoo is in June,
Heard, not regarded; seen, but with such eyes,
As, sick and blunted with community,
Afford no extraordinary gaze,
Such as is bent on sun-like majesty
When it shines seldom in admiring eyes:
But rather drowz’d, and hung their eyelids down,
Slept in his face, and rendered such aspect
As cloudy men use to their adversaries;
Being with his presence glutted, gorg’d, and full.
And in that very line, Harry, stand’st thou;
For thou hast lost thy princely privilege,
With vile participation; not an eye
But is a wearey of thy common sight,
Save mine, which hath desir’d to see thee more;
Which now doth that I would not have it do,
Make blind itself with foolish tenderness.
P. Hen. I shall hereafter, my thrice-gracious
Be more myself.\(^5\)

K. Hen. For all the world,
As thou art to this hour, was Richard then
When I from France set foot at Ravenspur;
And even as I was then, is Percy now.
Now by my sceptre, and my soul to boot,
He hath more worthy interest to the state,
Than thou, the shadow of succession:
For, of no right, nor colour like to right,
He doth fill fields with harness\(^6\) in the realm;
Turns head against the lion’s armed jaws;
And, being no more in debt to years than thou,
Leads ancient lords and reverence bishops on,
To bloody battles, and to bruising arms,
What never-dying honour hath he got
Against renowned Douglas; whose high deeds,
Whose hot incursions, and great name in arms,
Holds, from all soldiers chief majority,
And military title capital,
Through all the kingdoms that acknowledge
Thrice hath this Hotspur Mars in swathing clothes,
This infant warrior in his enterprises
Discomfitted great Douglas: tv’en him once,
Enlarged him, and made a friend of him,
To fill the mouth of deep defiance up,
And shake the peace and safety of our throne,
And what say you to this? Percy, Northumber-
land,
The archbishop’s grace of York, Douglas, Mor-
Capitulate\(^7\) against us, and are up.\(^8\)

P. H. Do not thinke so, you shall not find it so;
And heaven forgive them, that have so much away’d.
Your majesty’s good thoughts away from me!
I will redeem all this on Percy’s head,
And in the closing of some glorious day,
Be bold to tell you that I am your son;
When I will wear a garment all of blood,

1 Parasites.
2 When he struck Judge Gascoigne.
3 Brushwood burning fiercely.
4 Invested.
5 Lord.
6 Arms.
7 Most fatal.
And stain my favours in a bloody mask,
Which wash'd awa', shall scour my shame with it.
And that shall be the day, when'er it lights,
That this same child of honour and renown,
This gallant Hotspur, this all-praised knight,
And your unthought-of Harry, chance to meet;
For every honour sitting on his helm,
'Would they were multitudes; and on my head
My shames redoubled! for the time will come,
That I shall make this northern youth exchange
His glorious deeds for my indignities.
Percy is but my factor, good my lord,
To engross up glorious deeds on my behalf;
And I will call him to so strict account,
That he shall render every glory up,
Yea, even the slightest worship of his time,
Or I will tear the reckoning from his heart.
This, in the name of God, I promise here:
The which if he be pleas'd I shall perform,
I do beseech your majesty, may salve
The long-grown wounds of my intemperance:
If not, the end of life cancels all bands;
And I will die a hundred thousand deaths,
Ere break the smallest parcel of this vow.
K. Hen. A hundred thousand rebels die in this:
Thou shalt have charge, and sovereign trust,
[Enter Blunt.]
How now, good Blunt? thy looks are full of speed.
B. So hath the business that I come to speak of.
Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word,—
That Douglas, and the English rebels, met
The eleventh of this month at Shrewsbury:
A mighty and a fearful head they are,
If promises be kept on every hand,
As ever offer'd foul play in a state. [day;
K. Hen. The earl of Westmoreland set forth to—
With him my son, lord John of Lancaster;
For this advertisement is five days old:—
On Wednesday next, Harry, you shall set
Forward; on Thursday, we ourselves will march:
Our meeting is Bridgnorth: and, Harry, you,
Shall march through Glossthire; by which account,
Our business valued, some twelve days hence
Our general forces at Bridgnorth shall meet.
Our hands are full of business: let's away;
Advantage feeds him fat, while men delay.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—EASTCHEAP. A ROOM IN THE Boar's Head Tavern.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Fal. Bardolph, am I not fallen away vilely since this last action? do I not bate? do I not dwindle? Why, my skin hangs about me like an old lady's loose gown; I am wither'd like an old apple-John. Well, I'll repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking: I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. An I have not forgotten what the inside of a church is made of, I am a pepper-corn, a brewer's horse: the inside of a church! Company, villainous company, hath been the spoil of me.

1 Good condition.

Bard. Sir John, you are so fretful, you cannot live long.

Fal. Why, there is it:—come, sing me a song make me merry. I was as virtuously given, as a gentleman need to be; virtuous enough; swore little; dicet, not above seven times a week;
paid money that I borrowed, three or four times;
lived well, and in good compass: and now I live out of all order, out of all compass.

Bard. Why, you are so fat, Sir John, that you must needs be out of all compass; out of all reasonable compass, Sir John.

Fal. Do thou amend thy face, and I'll amend my life: Thou art our admiral, I thou bearest
the lantern in the poopen,—but 'tis in the nose of thee;
thou art the knight of the burning lamp.

Bard. Why, Sir John, my face does you no
harm.

Fal. No, I'll be sworn; I make as good use of it as many a man doth of a death's head, or a memento mori: I never see thy face, but I think upon Dives that lived in purple. If thou wast any way given to virtue, I would swear by thy face: my oath should be, by this fire: but thou art altogether given over; and wert indeed, but for the light in thy face, the son of utter darkness. When thou ran'st up Gads-hill in the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatuus, or a ball of wildfire, there's no purchase in money. O, thou art a perpetual triumph, an everlasting bonfire-light!
Thou hast saved me a thousand marks in links and torches, walking with thee in the night betwixt tavern and tavern: but the sack that thou last drunk me, would have bought me lights as good cheap, at the dearest chandler's in Europe. I have maintained that salamander of yours with fire, any time these two-and-thirty years; Heaven reward me for it!

[Enter Hostess.]

How now dame Partlet the hen? have you inquired yet, who picked my pocket?

Host. Why, Sir John! what do you think,
Sir John? do you think I keep thieves in my house? I have searched, I have inquired, so has my husband, man by man, boy by boy, servant by servant: the tithe of a hair was never lost in the house before.

Fal. You lie, hostess; Bardolph was shaved and lost many a hair: and I'll be sworn, my pocket was picked: Go to, you are a woman, get away.

Host. Who I? I defy thee: I was never called so in mine own house before.

Fal. Go to, I know you well enough.

Host. No, Sir John; you do not know me.

Sir John: I know you, Sir John: you owe me money, Sir John, and now you pick a quarrel to beguile me of it; I bought you a dozen of shirts to your back.

Fal. Dowlas, dowlas: I have given them away to bakers' wives, and they have made bol-ters of them.

Host. Now, as I am a true woman, holland of eight shillings an ell. You owe money here besides, Sir John, for your diet, and by-drinkings, and money lent you, four-and-twenty pound.

Fal. He had a part of it; let him pay.

Host. He has, he is poor; he hath nothing.

Fal. How! poor? look upon his face: What call you rich? let them coin his nose, let them coin his cheeks; I'll not pay a denier.¹ What, will you make a younger of me? shall I not take mine ease in mine inn, but I shall have my pocket picked? I have lost a seal-ring of my grandfather's worth forty mark.

Host. O! I have heard the prince tell him, I know not how oft, that that ring was copper.

Fal. How? the prince is a Jack, a sneak-cup; and, if he were here, I would cudgel him like a dog if he would say so.

Enter Prince Henry and Poynts, marching.

Falstaff meets the Prince, playing on his truncheon like a fife.

Fal. How now, lad? is the wind in that door, must we all march?

Bard. Ye, two and two, Newgate-fashion.

Host. My lord, I pray you, hear me.

P. Hen. What sayest thou, mistress Quickly? How dost thy husband? I love him well, he is an honest man.

Host. Good my lord, hear me.

Fal. Pr'ythee, let her alone, and list to me.

P. Hen. What say'st thou, Jack?

Fal. The other night I fell asleep here behind the arras, and had my pocket picked.

P. Hen. What did'st thou lose, Jack?

Fal. Wilt thou believe me, Hal? three or four bonds of forty pound a-piece and a seal-ring of my grandfather's.

P. Hen. A trifle, some eight-penny matter.

Host. So I told him, my lord; and I said, I heard your grace say so: And my lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foul-mouthed man as he is; and said, he would cudgel you.

P. Hen. What! he did not.

Host. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in me else.

Fal. There's no more faith in thee than in a stewed prune; nor no more truth in thee, than in a drawn fox; and for womanhood, maid Marian² may be the deputy's wife of the ward to thee. Go, you thing, go.

Host. Say, what thing? what thing? I am an honest man's wife: and, setting thy knighthood aside, thou art a knave to call me so.

Fal. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Host. Say, what beast, thou knave, thou?

P. Hen. An otter, Sir John! why an otter?

Host. Thou art an unjust man in saying so.

P. Hen. Thou sayest true, hostess; and he slanders thee most grossly.

Host. So he doth you, my lord; and said this other day, you ought him a thousand pound.

P. Hen. Sirrah, do I owe you a thousand pound?

Fal. A thousand pound, Hal? a million: thy love is worth a million; thou owest me thy love.

Host. Nay, my lord, he called you Jack, and said, he would cudgel you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bard. Indeed, Sir John, you said so.

Fal. Yea; if he said, my ring was copper.

P. Hen. I say, 'tis copper: Darest thou be as good as thy word now?

Fal. Why, Hal, thou knowest, as thou art but man, I dare; but, as thou art prince, I fear thee, as I fear the roaring of the lion's whelp.

P. Hen. And why not, as the lion?

Fal. The king himself is to be feared as the lion; Dost thou think, I'll fear thee as I fear thy father?

P. Hen. O, sirrah, there's no room for faith, truth, nor honesty, in this bosom of thine. Charge an honest woman with picking thy pocket! Why, thou impudent rascal, if there were anything in thy pocket but tavern-reckonings, and one poor penny-worth of sugar-candy to make thee long winded; if thy pocket were enriched with any other injuries but these, I am a villain. And yet you will stand to it; you will not pocket up wrong: Art thou not ashamed?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? thou knowest, in the state of innocence, Adam fell; and what should poor Jack Falstaff do, in the days of villainy? Thou seest, I have more flesh than another man; and therefore more frailty.—You confess then, you picked my pocket?

P. Hen. It appears so by the story.

Fal. Hostess, I forgive thee: Go, make ready breakfast; love thy husband, look to thy servants, cherish thy guests: thou shalt find me tractable to any honest reason: thou seest, I am pacified.—Still?—Nay, pr'ythee, be gone.

[Exit Hostess.] Now, Hal, to the news at court: for the robbery, lad,—How is that answered?

P. Hen. O, my sweet beef, I must still be good angel to thee:—The money is paid back again.

Fal. O, I do not like that paying back, 'tis a double labour.

P. Hen. I am good friends with my father, and may do any thing.

Fal. Rob me the exchequer the first thing thou doest, and do it with unwashed hands too.

Bard. Do, my lord.

P. Hen. I have procured thee, Jack, a charge of foot.

Fal. I would, it had been of horse. Where shall I find one that can steal well? O for a fine thief, of the age of two-and-twenty, or thereabouts! I am heinously unpriest. Well, Heaven be thanked for these rebels, they offend none but the virtuous; I haud them, I praise them.

P. Hen. Bardolph—

Bard. My lord.

P. Hen. Go bear this letter to Lord John of Lancaster,

My brother John; this to my lord of Westmoreland,—

Go, Poynts, to horse, to horse; for thou, and I, have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner time.—Jack,

Meet me to-morrow i' the Temple-hall

At two o'clock i' the afternoon:
There shalt thou know thy charge; and there-re-money, and order for their furniture. [Leaves.
The land is burning; Percy stands on high;
And either they, or we, must lower lie.
[Exeunt Prince, Poins, and Bardolph.
Fal. Rare words! brave world! — Hostess, my breakfast; come:—
O, I could wish, this tavern were my drum.
[Exit.

Act Fourth.

SCENE I.

The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter Hotspur, Worcester, and Douglas.

Hot. Well said, my noble Scot: If speaking
truth,
In this fine age, were not thought flattery,
Such attribution should the Douglas have,
As not a soldier of this season’s stamp
Should go so general current through the world.
By heaven, I cannot flatter; I defy
The tongues of sooths; but a braver place
In my heart’s love, hath no man than yourself;
Nay, task me to the word; approve me, lord.
Doug. Thou art the king of honour:
No man so potent breathes upon the ground,
But I will heard him.

Hot. Do so, and 'tis well:—

Enter a Messenger, with Letters.

What letters hast thou there? — I can but thank
you.
Mess. These letters come from your father,—
Hot. Letters from him! why come he not himself?
Mess. He cannot come, my lord; he’s grievous sick,
[“sick.”
Hot. Zounds, how has he the leisure to be
In such a justling time? Who leads his power?
Under whose government come they along?
Mess. His letters bear his mind, not I, my lord.

Hot. Wor. I pray thee, tell me, doth he keep his bed?
Mess. He did, my lord, four days ere I set forth;
And at the time of my departure hence,
He was much fear’d by his physicians.

Wor. I would, the state of time had first been whole,
Ere he by sickness had been visited;
His health was never better worth than now.
H. Sick now! droop now! this sickness doth infect
The very life-blood of our enterprise;
’Tis catching hither, even to our camp.—
He writes me here,—that inward sickness—
And that his friends by deputation could not
So soon be drawn; nor did he think it meet,
To lay so dangerous and dear a trust
On any soul remov’d, but on his own.
Yet doth he give us bold advertisement,—
That with our small conjunction, we should on,
To see how fortune is dispos’d to us:
For, as he writes, there is no quailing now;
Because the king is certainly possess’d
Of all our purposes. What say you to it?

Wor. Your father’s sickness is a maim to us.
Hot. A perilous gash, a very limb lopp’d off:—
And yet, in faith, ‘tis not: his present want
Seems more than we shall find it:—Were it good,
To set the exact wealth of all our states
All at one cast? to set so rich a main
On the nice hazard of one doubtful hour?
It were not good: for therein should we read
The very bottom and the soul of hope;
The very list, 1 the very utmost bound
Of all our fortunes.

Doug. Faith, and so we should;
Where now remains a sweet reversion:
We may boldly spend upon the hope of what,
Is to come in:
A comfort of retirement lives in this.

Hot. A rendezvous, a home to fly unto.
W. But yet, I would your father had been here,
The quality and hair 2 of our attempt
Brooks no division: It will be thought
By some, that know not why he is away,
That wisdom, loyalty, and more dislike
Of our kinsmen urge, kept the earl from hence;
And think, how such an apprehension
May turn the tide of fearful faction,
And breed a kind of question in our cause:
For well you know, we of the offering side
Must keep aloof from strict arbitration
And stop all sight-holes, every loop, from whence
The eye of reason may peep in upon us:
This absence of your father’s draws a curtain,
That shows the ignorant a kind of fear
Before not dreamt of.

Hot. You strain too far.
W. Rather, of his absence make this use;—
It lends a lustre, and more great opinion,
A larger dare to our great enterprise,
Than if the earl were here: for men must think,
If we, without his help, can make a head
To push against the kingdom; with his help,
We shall o’erturn it, topsy-turvy down.—
Yet all goes well, yet all our parts are whole.
D. As heart can think: there is not such a word
Spoke of in Scotland, as this term of fear.

Enter Sir Richard Vernon.

Hot. My cousin, Vernon! welcome, by myself.
Ver. Pray Heaven, my news be worth a welcome, lord.
The earl of Westmoreland, seven thousand strong,
Smarching hitherwards; with him, prince John.
Hot. No harm: What more?
Ver. And further, I have learn’d—
The king himself in person is set forth,
Or hitherwards intended speedily,
With strong and mighty preparation.
Hot. He shall be welcome, too. Where is his son,
The nimble-footed madcap prince of Wales,
And his comrades that daff’d 3 the world aside,
And bid it pass?

Ver. All furnish’d, all in arms,
All plumm’d 4 like eagles; that wing the wind;
Bated 5 like eagles having lately bath’d 6 it;
Glittering in golden coats, like images;
As full of spirit as the month of May,

1 Limit. 2 The composition. 3 Tossed. 4 Ostriches. 5 Fresh.
And gorgeous as the sun at midsummer;
Wanton as youthful goats, wild as young bulls,
I saw young Harry,—with his beaver on,
His cuisses on his thighs, gallantly arm'd,—
Rise from the ground like feather'd Mercury,
And vaulted with such ease into his seat,
As if an angel dropp'd down from the clouds,
To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus,
And watch the world with noble horsemanship.

Hot. No more, no more; worse than the sun in March.

This praise doth nourish agues. Let them come;
They come like sacrifices in their trim,
And to the fire-eyed maid of smoky war,
All hot, and bleeding, will we offer them:
The mailed Mars shall on his altar sit,
Up to the ears in blood. I am on fire,
To hear this rich reprisal is so nigh,
And yet not ours;—Come, let me take my horse,
Who is to bear me like a thunderbolt,
Against the bosom of the prince of Wales:
Harry to Harry shall, hot horse to horse,
Meet, and ne'er part, till one drop down a corse.—
O, that Glendower were come!

Ver. There is more news:
I learn'd in Worcester as I rode along,
He cannot draw his power this fourteen days.

D. That's the worst tidings I hear of yet.
W. Ay, by my faith, that bears a frosty sound.

Hot. What may the king's whole battle reach
To thirty thousand. [unto?
Hot. Forty let it be;
My father and Glendower being both away,
The powers of us may serve so great a day.
Come, let us make a muster speedily:
Doomsday is near; die all, die merrily.

Doug. Talk not of dying; I am out of fear
Of death, or death's hand, for this one half year.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.

A PUBLIC ROAD NEAR COVENTRY.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Fal. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry; fill me a bottle of sack: our soldiers shall march through;
we'll to Sutton-Colfield to-night.

Bard. Will you give me money, captain?
Fal. Lay out, lay out.

Bard. This bottle makes an angel.
Fal. An if it do, take it for thy labour; and if it make twenty, take them all, I'll answer the coinage.
Bid my lieutenant Peto meet me at the town's end.

Bard. I will, captain; farewell. [Exit.
Fal. If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a souced gurnet.
I have misused the king's privilege.
I have got in exchange of a hundred and fifty soldiers, three hundred and odd pounds.
I press me none but good householders, yeoman's sons: inquire me out contracted bachelors, such as had been asked twice on the bans; such a commodity of warm slaves, as had as lief hear the devil as a drum; such as fear the report of a caliver worse than a struck fowl, or a hurt wild-duck. I pressed me none but such toasts and butter, with hearts no bigger than pins' heads, and they have bought out their services; and now my whole charge consists of ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies, slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted cloth, where the glutton's dogs licked his sores, and such as, indeed, were never soldiers, but discarded, unjust serving-men, younger sons to younger brothers, revolted tapsters, and ostlers: trade-fallen; the cankers of a calm world, and a long peace; ten times more dishonourably ragged than an old faced ancient; and such have I to fill up the rooms of them that have bought out their services, that you would think that I had a hundred and fifty tatter'd prodigals lately come from swine keeping, from eating draf't and husks. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me I had unloaded all the gibbets, and pressed the dead bodies. No eye hath seen such scare-crows. I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat:—Nay, and the villains march wide betwixt the legs, as if they had gyves on; for, indeed, I had the most of them out of prison. There's but a shirt and a half in all my company; and the half shirt is two napkins tacked together, and thrown over the shoulders like a herald's coat without sleeves; and the shirt, to say the truth, stolen from my host at Saint Albans', or the red-nose inn-keeper of Daintrey. But that's all one; they'll find linen enough on every hedge.

Enter Prince Henry and Westmoreland.

P. Hen. How now, blown Jack? how now, quill?
Fal. What, Hal? How now, mad wag? what dost thou in Warwickshire?—My good lord of Westmoreland, I cry you mercy; I thought your honour had already been at Shrewsbury.

West. Faith, Sir John, 'tis more than time that I were there, and you too; but my powers are there already: The king, I can tell you, looks for us all; we must away all night.

Fal. Tut, never fear me; I am as vigilant as a cat to steal cream.

P. Hen. I think to steal cream, indeed; for thy theft hath already made thee butter. But, tell me, Jack; Whose fellows are these that come after?

Fal. Mine, Hal, mine.

P. Hen. I did never see such pitiful rascals.

Fal. Tut, tut; good enough to toss; food for powder, food for powder; they'll fill a pit, as well as better: tush, man, mortal men, mortal men.

West. Ay, but Sir John, methinks they are exceeding poor and bare; too beggarly.

Fal. Faith, for their poverty,—I know not where they had that; and for their bareness,—I am sure they never learned that of me.

P. Hen. No, I'll be sworn; unless you call three fingers on the ruts bare. But, sirrah, make haste; Percy is already in the field.

Fal. What, is the king encamped?

W. Heis, Sir John; I fear we shall stay too long.

Fal. Well,
To the latter end of a fray, and the beginning of a feast,

Fits a dull fighter, and a keen guest. [Exeunt.

1 Thigh armour.  2 A gash.  3 As soon.  4 Musket.

1 Standard.  2 Fetters.  3 Daventry.
SCENE III.

THE REBEL CAMP NEAR SHREWSBURY.

Hot. We'll fight with him to-night.

Wor. It may not be.

Doug. You give him then advantage.

Ver. Not a whit.

Hot. Why say you so? looks he not for supply?

Ver. So do we.

Hot. His is certain, ours is doubtful.

Wor. Good cousin, be advis'd; stir not to-night.

Ver. Do not, my lord.

Doug. You do not counsel well; you speak it out of fear and cold heart.

Ver. Do me no slander, Douglas: by my life, (And I dare well maintain it with my life,) If well respected honour bid me on, I hold as little counsel with weak fear, As you, my lord, or any Scot that lives:— Let it be seen to-morrow in the battle, Which of us fears.

Doug. Yea, or to-night.

Ver. Content.

Hot. To-night, say I.

Ver. Come, come, it may not be, I wonder much, being men of such great leading, That you foresee not what impediments

Drag back our expedition: Certain horse Of my cousin Vernon's are not yet come up: Your uncle Worcester's horse came but to-day; And now their pride and mettle is asleep, Their courage with hard labour fame and dull, That not a horse is half the half himself.

Hot. So are the horses of the enemy, In general journey-bated and brought low; The better part of ours is full of rest.

Wor. The number of the king exceedeth ours;

For heaven's sake, cousin, stay till all come in.

[The Trumpet sounds a parley.

Enter Sir Walter Blunt.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the king.
If you vouchsafe me hearing, and respect.

Hot. Welcome, sir Walter Blunt; And 'would to heaven,

You were of our determination?

Some of us love you well: and even those some Envy your great deserving, and good name;

Because you are not of our quality,²

But stand against us like an enemy.

Bl. And God defend, but still I should stand So long as, out of limit, and true rule, [so,

You stand against anointed majesty!]

But to my charge.—The king hath sent to know The nature of your grievances; and whereupon You conjure from the breast of civil peace Such bold hostility, teaching this duteous land Audacious cruelty: if that the king Have any way your good deserts forgot,— Which he confesseth to be manifold,— He bids you name your griefs; and with all speed, You shall have your desires, with interest; And pardon absolute for yourself, and these, Herein misled by your suggestion.

1 Experience. 2 Fellowship. 3 Grievances.

Hot. The king is kind; and, well we know, the king
Knows at what time to promise, when to pay.
My father, and my uncle, and myself, Did give him that same royalty he wears:
And,—when he was not six and twenty strong, Sick in the world's regard, wretched and low, A poor unmindful outlaw sneaking home,— My father gave him welcome to the shore;
And,—when he heard him swear, and vow to He came but to be duke of Lancaster, [God, To sue his livery,¹ and beg his peace;]
With tears of innocence, and terms of zeal,— My father, in kind heart and pity mov'd, Swore him assistance, and perform'd it too.
Now, when the lords and barons of the realm Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him, The more and less came in with cap and knee; Met him in boroughs, cities, villages;
Attended him on bridges, stood in lanes, Laid gifts before him, proffer'd him their oaths, Gave him their heirs; as pages followed him, Even at the heels, in golden multitudes.
He presently,—as greatness knows itself,—
Steps me a little higher than his vow
Made to my father, while his blood was poor,
Upon the naked shore at Ravenspurg;
And now, forsooth, takes on him to reform Some certain edicts, and some straight decrees, That lie too heavy on the commonwealth:
Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep Over his country's wrongs; and by this face, This seeming brow of justice, did he win The hearts of all that he did angle for.
Proceeded further; cut me off the heads Of all the favorites, that the absent king In deputation left behind him here,
When he was personal in the Irish war.

Blunt. I came not to hear this.

Hot. Then, to the point.—In short time after, he depos'd the king;
Soon after that, depriv'd him of his life;
And, in the neck of that, task'd the whole state: To make that worse, suffer'd his kinsman March (Who is, if every owner were well plac'd, Indeed his king,) to be incag'd in Wales, There without ransom to lie forfeited: Disgrac'd me in my happy victories; Sought to entrap me by intelligence; Rated my uncle from the council-board; In rage dismiss'd my father from the court; Broke oath on oath, committed wrong on wrong; And, in conclusion, drove us to seek out This head of safety; and, withal, to pry Into his title, the which we find Too indirect for long continuance.

Blunt. Shall I return this answer to the king? Hot. Not so, Sir Walter; we'll withdraw a while.

Go to the king; and let there be impawn'd Some surety for a safe return again,
And in the morning early shall mine uncle Bring him our purposes: and so farewell.

Bl. I would, you would accept of grace and
Hot. And, may be, so we shall. [love.

Blunt. Pray heaven, you do! [Exeunt.
SCENE IV.—YORK. A ROOM IN THE ARCHBISHOP'S HOUSE.

Enter the Archbishop of York, and a Gentleman.

Arch. Hie, good Sir Michael! bear this sealed letter,¹ For winged haste, to the lord marshall; For this to my cousin Scroop; and all the rest To whom they are directed; if you knew How much they do import, you would make Gent. My good lord, [haste.] I guess their tenor. Arch. Like enough you do. To-morrow, good Sir Michael, is a day, Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men Must 'bide the touch: For, sir, at Shrewsbury, As I am truly given to understand, The king, with mighty and quick-rais'd power, Meets with lord Harry: and I fear, sire Michael,— What with the sickness of Northumberland, (Whose power was in the first proportion,) And what with Owen Glendower's absence thence, (Who with them was a rated sinew² too, And comes not in, o'erru'd by prophecies,) I fear the power of Percy is too weak To wage an instant trial with the king.

Gent. Why, good my lord, you need not fear; And Mortimer. [there's Douglas, Arch. No, Mortimer's not there. Gent. But there is Mordake, Vernon, lord Harry Percy, And there's my lord of Worcester; and a head Of gallant warriors, noble gentlemen. [drawn Arch. And so there is: but yet the king hath The special head of all the land together:— The prince of Wales, lord John of Lancaster, The noble Westmoreland, and warlike Blunt; And many more arrivals³ and dear men Of estimation and command in arms.

Gent. Doubt not, my lord, they shall be well oppos'd.

Arch. I hope no less, yet needful 'tis to fear: And, to prevent the worst, Sir Michael, speed: For, if lord Percy thrive not, ere the king Dismiss his power he means to visit us,— For he hath heard of our confederacy.— And 'tis but wisdom to make strong against him; Therefore, make haste: I must go write again To other friends; and so farewell, Sir Michael. [Exeunt severally.

Act Fifth.

SCENE I.

THE KING'S CAMP NEAR SHREWSBURY.

K. Hen. How bloodyly the sun begins to peer Above you busky hill! the day looks pale At his distemperature.

P. Hen. The southern wind Doth play the trumpet to his purposes; And, by his hollow whistling in the leaves, Foretells a tempest, and a blustering day.

K. Hen. Then with the losers let'ts sympathise; For nothing can seem foul to those that win.

Trumpet. Enter Worcester and Vernon.

How now, my lord of Worcester? 'tis not well, That you and I should meet upon such terms As now we meet: You have deceiv'd our trust; And made us doff our easy robes of peace, To crush our old limbs in ungentle steel: This is not well, my lord, this is not well. What say you to't? will you again unknit This churlish knot of all-abhorred war? And move in that obedient orb again, Where you did give a fair and natural light, And be no more an exhal'd meteor, A prodigy of fear, and a portent Of broached mischief to the unborn times?

Wor. Hear me, my liege: For mine own part, I could be well content To entertain the lag-end of my life With quiet hours; for, I do protest, I have not sought the day of this dislike. [then? K. H. You have not sought for it: how comes it Fail. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it. P. Hen. Peace, chewet,¹ peace.

Wor. It pleas'd your majesty, to turn your looks Of favour, from myself, and all our house; And yet I must remember you, my lord, We were the first and dearest of your friends. For you, my staff of office did I break In Richard's time; and posted day and night To meet you on the way, and kiss your hand. When yet you were in place and in account Nothing so strong and fortunate as I. It was myself, my brother, and his son, That brought you home, and boldly did outdare The dangers of the time: You swore to us,— And you did swear that oath at Doncaster,— That you did nothing purpose 'gainst the state; Nor claim no further than your new-fallen right, The seat of Gaunt, duxedom of Lancaster: To this we swore our aid. But, in short space, It raint'st down fortune showering on your head; And such a flood of greatness fell on you,— What with our help, what with the absent king? What with the injuries of a wanton time; The seeming sufferances that you had borne; And the contrarious winds, that held the king So long in his unlucky Irish wars, That all in England did repute him dead,— And, from this swarm of fair advantages, You took occasion to be quickly wrou'd To grip the general sway into your hand; Forgot your oath to us at Doncaster; And, being fed by us, you us'd us so As that ungentle gull, the cuckoo's bird, Useth the sparrow; did oppress our nest; Grow by our feeding to so great a bulk, That even our love durst not come near your sight; For fear of swallowing; but with nimble wing We were enforce'd for safety sake, to fly Out of your sight, and raise this present head: Whereto we stand oppos'd by such means As you yourself have for'd against yourself; By unkind usage, dangerous countenance,

And violation of all faith and truth
Sworn to us in your younger enterprise. [Exeunt.]

K. Hen. These things, indeed, you have articulately proclaimed at market-crosses, read in churches; To face the garment of rebellion With some fine colour, that may please the eye Of sable changelings, and poor discontentments, Which gape, and rub the elbow, at the news Of hurlyburly innovation: And never yet did insurrection want Such water-colours to impart his cause; Nor moody beggars, starving for a time Of pell-mell havoc and confusion.

P. Hen. In both our armies, there is many a soul, Shall pay full dearly for this encounter, If once they join in trial. Tell your nephew, The prince of Wales doth join with all the world In praise of Henry Percy; By my hopes,— This present enterprise list off his head,— I do not think, a braver gentleman, More active-valiant, or more valiant young, More daring, or more bold, is now alive, To grace his latter age with noble deeds. For my part, I may speak it to my shame, I have a trump been to chastity; And so, I hear, he doth account me too: Yet this before my father's majesty,— I am content, that he shall take the odds Of his great name and estimation; And will, to save the blood on either side, Try fortune with him in a single fight.

K. H. And, prince of Wales, so dare we venture Albeit, considerations infinite [thee, Do make against it;—No, good Worcester, no, We love our people well; even those we love, That are misled upon your cousin's part: And, will they take the offer of our grace, Both he, and they, and you, yea, every man Shall be my friend again, and I'll be his: So tell your cousin, and bring me word What he will do:—But if he will not yield, Rebuke and dread correction wait on us, And they shall do their office. So, be gone; We will not now be troubled with reply: We offer fair, take it advisedly.

[Exeunt Worcester and Vernon.

P. Hen. It will not be accepted on my life; The Douglas and the Hotspur both together Are confident against the world in arms.

K. Hen. Hence, therefore, every leader to his For, on their answer, will wait on them: [charge; And God befriend us, as our cause is just! [Exeunt King, Blunt, and Prince John.

Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battle, and bestride me, so; 'tis a point of friendship.

P. Hen. Nothing but a collossus can doe thee that friendship. Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Fal. I would it were bed-time, Hal, and all well.

P. Hen. Why, thou owest heaven a death.

[Exeunt.

Fal. 'Tis not due yet; I would be loath to pay before the day. What need be I so forward with him that calls not on me? Well, 'tis no matter; Honour pricks me on. Yea, but how if honour pricks me off when I come on? how then? Can honour set to a leg? No. Or an arm? No. Or take away the grief of a wound? No. Honour hath no skill in surgery then? No. What is honour? A word. What is in that word, honour? What is that honour? Air. A trim reckoning!—Who hath it? He that died o' Wednesday. Doth he feel it? No. Doth he hear it? No. Is it insensible then? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why! Detraction will not suffer it:—therefore I'll none of it: Honour is a mere scutcheon, and so ends my catechism. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Rebel Camp.

Enter Worcester and Vernon.

Wor. O, no, my nephew must not know, Sir Richard, The liberal kind offer of the king.

Ver. 'Twere best he did. Wor. Then are we all undone. It is not possible, it cannot be, The king should keep his word in loving us; He will suspect us still, and find a time To punish this offence in other faults: Suspicion shall be all stalk full of eyes: For treason is but trusted like the fox; Who, ne'er so tame, so cherish'd, and lock'd up, Will have a wild trick of his ancestors. Look how we can, or sad, or merrily, Interpretation will misquote our looks; And we shall feed like oxen at a stall, The better cherish'd, still the nearer death. My nephew's trespass may be well forgot, It hath the excuse of youth, and heat of blood; And an adopted name of privilege,— A hair-brain'd Hotspur, govern'd by a spleen: All his offences live upon my head, And on his father's;—we did train him on; And, his corruption being ta'en from us, We, as the spring of all, shall pay for all. Therefore, good cousin, let not Harry know, In any case, the offer of the king.

Ver. Deliver what you will, I'll say, 'tis so. Here comes your cousin.

Enter Hotspur and Douglas; and Officers and Soldiers, behind.

Doug. Marry, and shall, and very willingly.

[Exit.

Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the king. Hot. Did you beg any? God forbid! Wor. I told him gently of our grievances, Of his oath-breaking; which he mended thus,— By now forswearing that he is forsworn: He calls us rebels, traitors; and will scourge With haughty arms this hateful name in us. Re-enter Douglas.

D. Arm, gentlemen; to arms! for I have thrown A brave defiance in King Henry's teeth. [it; And Westmoreland, that was engag'd, did bear Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on. Wor. The prince of Wales stepp'd forth before the king, And nephew, challeng'd you to single fight.
SCENE III.—PLAIN NEAR SHREWSBURY.

Excruciations, and Parties fighting. Alarum to the Battle. Then enter Douglas and Blunt, meeting.

El. What is thy name, that in the battle thus Thou crossest me? what honour dost thou seek Upon my head?

1 Recital. 2 Own. 3 The Percy motto.

H. O. Douglas, hast thou fought at Holmedon I never had triumph'd upon a Scot. [thus, D. All's done, all's won; here breathless lies the Hot. Where? [king. Doug. Here? H. This, Douglas? no, I know this face full well: A gallant knight he was, his name was Blunt; Semblably furnish'd like the king himself. Doug. A fool go with thy soul, whither it goes, A borrow'd title last thou bought too dear. Why didst thou tell me that thou wert a king? H. The king hath many marching in his coats. D. Now, by my sword, I will kill all his coats; I'll murder all his wardrobe, piece by piece, Until I meet the king.

Hot. Up, and away; Our soldiers stand full fairly for the day. [Exeunt. Other Alarums. Enter Falstaff. Fal. Though I could 'scape shot-free at London, I fear the shot here; here's no scoring, but upon the pate. Soft! who art thou? Sir Walter Blunt;—there's honour for you! Here's no vanity!—I am as hot as molten lead, and as heavy too; heaven keep lead out of me! I need no more weight than mine own bowels.—I have led my ragamuffins where they are peppered; there's but three of my hundred and fifty left alive; and they are for the town's end, to beg during life. But who comes here!

Enter Prince Henry.

P. H. What, stand'st thou idle here? lend methy Many a nobleman lies stark and stiff [sword: Under the hoops of vaunting enemies, Whose deaths are unreveng'd: Pr'ythee, lend thy sword: F. O Hal, I pray thee, give me leave to breathe a while.—Turk Gregory never did such deeds in arms, as I have done this day. I have paid Percy, I have made him sure. P. Hen. He is; indeed; and living to kill thee. Lend me thy sword, I pr'ythee. Fal. Nay, Hal, if Percy be alive, thou get'st not my sword; but take my pistol, if thou wilt. P. Hen. Give it me: What, is it in the case? Fal. Ay, Hal; 'tis hot, 'tis hot! there's that will sack a city.

[The Prince draws out a bottle of sack. P. Hen. What, is't a time to jest and dally now? [Throws it at him, and exit. Fal. Well, if Percy be alive, I'll pierce him. If he do come in my way, so: if he do not, if I come in his, willingly, let him make a carbonado

1 Meat cut crosswise for the gridiron.
THOU hast redeem'd thy lost opinion; And show'dst thou make'st some tenders of my life, In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me.

P. H. O, heaven! they did me too much injury, That ever said, I hearken'd for your death. If it were so, I might have let alone The insulting hand of Douglas over you; Which would have been as speedy in your end, As all the poisonous potions in the world, And sav'd the treacherous labour of your son.

K. Hen. Make up to Clifton, I'll to Sir Nicholas Gawsey. [Exit King Henry.

Enter Hotspur.

H. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth. P. Hen. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my Hot. My name is Harry Percy. [name. P. Hen. Why then I see A very valiant rebel of the name, I am the prince of Wales; and think not, Percy, To share with me in glory any more: Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere; Nor can one England brook a double reign, Of Harry Percy, and the prince of Wales. Hot. Nor shall it, Harry, for the hour is come To end the one of us; and 'would to God, Thy name in arms were now as great as mine! P. H. I'll make it greater, ere I part from thee; And all the budding honours on thy crest I'll crop to make a garland for my head. Hot. I can no longer brook thy vanities. [They fight.

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Well said, Hal! to it, Hal!—Nay, you shall find no boy's play here, I can tell you. Enter Douglas; he fights with Falstaff, who falls down as if he were dead, and exit Douglas. Hotspur is wounded, and falls.

Hot. O, Harry, thou hast robb'd me of my I better brook the loss of brittle life, [youth; Than these proud titles thou hast won of me; They wound my thoughts, worse than thy sword my flesh:—[fool: But thought's the slave of life, and life time's And time, that takes survey of all the world, Must have a stop. O, I could prophesy, But that the earthy and cold hand of death Lies on my tongue:—No, Percy, thou art dust, And food for—[Dies.

P. Hen. For worms, brave Percy; Fare thee well, great heart!— I'll wea'rn'd ambition, how much art thou shrunk! When that this body did contain a spirit, A kingdom for it was too small a bound; But now, two paces of the vilest earth Is room enough—This earth that bears thee dead Bears not alive so stanch a gentleman. If thou wert sensible of courtesy, I should not make so deep a show of zeal:— But let my favours hide thy mingled face; And, even in thy behalf, I'll thank myself For doing these fair rites of tenderness, Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to heaven! Thy ignominy sleep with thee in the grave, But not remember'd in thy epitaph!

[He sees Falstaff on the ground.

1 earl.
What! old acquaintance! could not all this flesh
Keep in a little life? Poor Jack, farewell!
I could have better spair'd a better man.
I, I should have a heavy miss of thee,
If I were much in love with vanity.
Death hath not struck so fat a deer to-day,
Though many dearer, in this bloody fray:—
Embowell'd will I thee by and by;
Till then, in blood by noble Percy lie. [Exit.]

Fal. [Rising slowly.] Embowell'd! if thou embowel me to-day, I'll give you leave to powder me, and eat me too, to-morrow.
'Twas time to counterfeit, or that hot termagant Scot had paid me scot and lot too.
Counterfeit? I lie, I am no counterfeit:
To die, is to be a counterfeit;
for he is but the counterfeit of a man, who hath not the life of a man:
but to counterfeit dying,
when a man thereby liveth, is to be no counterfeit,
but the true and perfect image of life indeed.
The better part of valour is—discretion;
in which the better part, I have saved my life.
I am afraid of this gunpowder Percy, though he be dead:
How, if he should counterfeit too, and rise!
I am afraid, he would prove the better counterfeit.
Therefore I'll make him sure: yea, and I'll swear I killed him.
Why may not he rise, as well as I?
Nothing confutes me but eyes, and nobody sees me.
Therefore, sirrah, [Stabbing him.] with a new wound in thy thigh, come you along with me.

[Takes Hotspur on his back.

Re-enter Prince Henry and Prince John.

P. Hen. Come, brother John, full bravely hast thou flesh'd thy maiden sword.

P. John. But, soft! whom have we here?
Did you not tell me, this fat man was dead?
P. Hen. I did; I saw him dead, breathless and upon the ground.—[bleeding
Art thou alive? or is it phantasy
That plays upon our eyesight? I pray thee, speak;
We will not trust our eyes, without our ears:
Thou art not what thou seem'st.
F. No, that's certain; I am not a double man:
but if I be not Jack Falstaff, then am I a Jack.
There is Percy: [Throwing the body down.] if your father will do me any honour, so; if not, let him kill the next Percy himself.
I look to be either earl, or duke, I can assure you.

Fal. Didst thou?—How this world is given to lying!—I grant you, I was down, and out of breath; and so was he: but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long hour by Shrewsbury clock. If I may be believed, so; if not, let them, that should reward valour, bear the sin upon their own heads. I'll take it upon my death, I gave him this wound in the thigh: if the man were alive, and would deny it, I would make him eat a piece of my sword.

P. J. This is the strangest tale that e'er I heard.
P. Hen. This is the strangest fellow, brother John,—
Come, bring your luggage nobly on your back:
For my part, if a lie may do thee grace,
I'll gild it with the happiest terms I have.

[Exit, bearing off the body.

SCENE V.—ANOTHER PART OF THE FIELD.

The Trumpets sound. Enter King Henry, Prince Henry, Prince John, Westmoreland, and others; with Worcester and Vernon, prisoners.

K. Hen. Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke.
Ill-spirited Worcester! did we not send grace.
Favon, and terms of love to all of you?
And wouldst thou turn our offers contrary?
Misuse the tenor of thy kinsman's trust?
Three knights upon our party slain to-day,
A noble earl, and many a creature else,
Had been alive this hour,
If, like a Christian, thou hadst truly borne Betwixt our armies true intelligence.

Wor. What have I done, my safety urg'd me to;
And I embrace this fortune patiently,
Since not to be avoided it falls on me.

K. Hen. Bear Worcester to the death, and Vernon too:

[Exeunt Worcester and Vernon, guarded.

How goes the field?

P. Hen. The noble Scot, Lord Douglas, when he saw
The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,
The noble Percy slain, and all his men
Upon the foot of fear,—fled with the rest;
And, falling from a hill, he was so bruis'd,
That the pursuers took him. At my tent
The Douglas is; and I beseech your grace,
I may dispose of him.

K. Hen. With all my heart.

P. H. Then, brother John of Lancaster, to
This honourable bounty shall belong: [you,
Go to the Douglas, and deliver him
Up to his pleasure, ransomless and free:
His valour shone upon our crests to-day,
Hath taught us how to cherish such high deeds,
Even in the bosom of our adversaries.

K. Hen. Then this remains,—that we divide our power.—

You, son John, and my cousin Westmoreland,
Towards York shall bend you, with your dearest speed,
To meet Northumberland, and the prelate
Who, as we hear, are busily in arms: [Scroop, Myself,—and you, son Harry,—will towards
Wales,
To fight with Glendower, and the Earl of March.
Rebellion in this land shall lose his sway,
Meeting the check of such another day:
And since this business so fair is done,
Let us not leave till all our own be won.

[Exeunt.}

Scene.—England.

Even with the rebel's blood. But what mean I
To speak so true at first? my office is
To noise abroad,—that Harry Monmouth fell
Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's sword;
And that the king before the Douglas' rage
Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death.
This have I rumour'd through the peasant towns
Between that royal field of Shrewsbury
And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone,
Where Hotspur's father, old Northumberland,
Lies crafty-sick: the posts come tiring on,
And not a man of them brings other news
Than they have learn'd of me; from Rumour's tongues
They bring smooth comforts false, worse than true wrongs.

[Exit.

Act First.

Scene I.—Warkworth. Before Northumberland's Castle.

The Porter before the Gate; Enter Lord Bardolph.

L. B. Who keeps the gate here, hoy?—Where is the earl?

Port. What shall I say you are?
L. Bard. Tell thou the earl,
That the lord Bardolph doth attend him here.
P. His lordship is walk'd forth into the orchard;
Please it your honour, knock but at the gate,
And he himself will answer.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. 411

Enter Northumberland.

L. Bard. Here comes the earl.

Nor. What news, lord Bardolph? every minute Should be the father of some stratagem⁴; [now The times are wild; contention, like a horse Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose, And bears down all before him.

L. Bard. Noble earl, I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury.

North. Good, an heaven will!

L. Bard. As good as heart can wish:— The king is almost wounded to the death; And, in the fortune of my lord your son, Prince Harry slain outright; and both the Blunts Kill'd by the hand of Douglas; young Prince John, And Westmoreland, and Stafford, fled the field; And Harry Monmouth's brawn,
² the hulk Sir Is prisoner to your son: O, such a day, [John, So fought, so follow'd, and so fairly won, Came not till now, to dignify the times, Since Cæsar's fortunes!

North. How is this deriv'd?

Saw you the field, came you from Shrewsbury? L. Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence; A gentleman well bred, and of good name, That freely render'd me these news for true.

N. Here comes my servant, Travers, whom I On Tuesday last to listen after news. [sent L. Bard. My lord, I over-rode him on the way; And he is furnish'd with no certainties, More than he haply may retail from me.

Enter Travers.

North. Now, Travers, what good tidings come with you?

Tr. My lord, Sir John Umfrevelie turn'd me back With joyful tidings; and, being better hors'd, Out-rode me. After him, came, spurring hard, A gentleman almost forspent with speed, That stopp'd him to breathe his bloodied horse: He ask'd me the way to Chester; and of him I did demand, what news from Shrewsbury. He told me, that rebellion had bad luck, And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold: With that he gave his able horse the head, And, bending forward, struck his armed heels Against the panting sides of his poor jade Up to the rowel head; and, starting so, He seem'd in running to devour the way, Staying no longer question.

North. Ha!—Again. Said he, young Harry Percy's spur was cold? Of Hotspur, coldspur? that rebellion Had met ill luck?

L. Bard. My lord, I'll tell you what;— If my young lord your son have not the day, Upon mine honour, for a silken point³ I'll give my barren: never talk of it.

North. Why should the gentleman that rode by Give then such instances of loss? [Travers, L. Bard. Who, he? He was some hilding⁴ fellow, that had stole The horse he rode on; and, upon my life, Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes more news.

Enter Morton.

North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a title-leaf, 1 Important event. 2 Bona. 3 Lace-tagged. 4 Cowardly. Foretells the nature of a tragick volume; So looks the strawd,¹ whereon the imperious flood Hath left a witness'd usurpation. ——

Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury? Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord; Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask, To fright our party.

North. How doth my son, and brother? Thou tremblest; and the whiteness in thy cheek Is ater than thy tongue to tell thy errand. Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless, So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone, Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night, And would have told him, half his Troy's burden'd: But Priam found the fire, ere he his tongue, And I my Percy's death, ere thou report' st it. This thou wouldst say,—Your son did thus, and thus; Thy brother, Thus; so fought the noble Douglas; Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds: But in the end, to stop mine ear indeed, Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise, Ending with—brother, son, and all are dead. Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother, yet: But, for my lord, your son,—

North. Why, he is dead. See, what a ready tongue suspicion hath! He, that but fears the thing he would not know, Hath, by instinct, knowledge from others' eyes, That what he fear'd di'schanted. Yet speak, Mor. Tell thou thy ear, his divination lies; [ton: And I will take it as a sweet disgrace, And make thee rich for doing me such wrong. Mor. You are too great to be by me gainsaid: Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain. Nor. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy's dead. I see a strange confession in thine eye: Thou shak'st thy head, and hold'st it fear, or sin, To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so; The tongue offends not, that reports his death: And he doth sin, that doth belie the dead: Not he, which saies the dead is not alive. Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news Hath but a losing office; and his tongue Sounds ever after as a sullen bell, Remember'd knoalling a departing friend. [dead. L. Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son is Mor. I am sorry, I should force you to believe That which I would to heaven I had not seen: But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state, Rend'ring faint quittance,² wearied and out-breath'd,

To Harry Monmouth: whose swift wrath beat The never daunted Percy to the earth, [down From whence with life he never more sprung up. In few,³ his death (whose spirit lent a fire Even to the dullest peasant in his camp,) Being bruited ⁴ once, took fire and heat away From the best temper'd courage in his troops: For from his metal was his party steeld; Which once in him abated, all the rest Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead. And as the thing that's heavy in itself, Upon enforcement, flies with greater speed; So did our men, heavy in Hotspur's loss, Lend to this weight such lightness with their fear, That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim, 1 Shore. 2 Return of blows. 3 Short. 4 Reported.
Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety,
Fly from the field: Then was that noble Worcester
Too soon ta'en prisoner; and that furious Scot,
The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring sword
Had three times slain the appearance of the king,
'Gan vail his stomach, and did grace the shame,
Of those that turn'd their backs; and in his flight,
Stumbling in fear, was took. The sum of all
Is,—that the king hath won; and hath sent out
A speedy power, to encounter you, my lord,
Under the conduct of young Lancaster,
And Westmoreland: this is the news at full.

North. For this I shall have time enough to mourn.

In poison there is physic; and these news,
Having been well, that would have made me sick,
Being sick, have in some measure made me well:
And as the wretch, whose fever-weak'd joints,
Like strengthless hinges, buckle under life,
Impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire
Out of his keepers' arms; even so my limbs, Weak'n'd with grief, being now enrag'd with grief. [nice crutch;

Are thrie themselves: hence, therefore, thou
A scaly gauntlet now, with joints of steel,
Must glove this hand: and hence, thou sickly
Thou art a guard too wanton for the head,[quoit, 3
Which princes, flesh'd with conquest, aim to hit.
Now bind my brows with iron: And approach
Theragged shorthair that time and spirit dare bring,
To frown upon the enrag'd Northumberland!
Let heaven kiss earth! Now let not nature's hand
Keep the wild flood confin'd! let order die.
And let this world no longer be a stage,
To feed contention in a lingering act;
But let one spirit of the first-born Cain
Reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being set
On bloody courses, the rude scene may end,
And darkness be the burier of the dead! [lord,

Tre. This strained passion doth you wrong, my L. Bard. Sweet ear, divorce not wisdom from your honour.

Mor. The lives of all your loving complies
Lean on your health; the which if you give o'er
To stormy passion, must perforce decay.
You cast the event of war, my noble lord,
And sum'md the account of chance, before you said,—

Let us make head. It was your presursumise,
That in the dote of bloods your son might drop:
You knew he walk'd o'er peril, on an edge
More likely to fall in, than to get o'er:
You were advis'd, his flesh was capable [spirits
Of wounds, and scars; and that his forward
Would lift him where most trade of danger
rang'd;
Yet did you say,—Go forth; and none of this,
Though strongly apprehended, could restrain
The stiff-borne action: What hath then befallen,
Or what hath this bold enterprise brought forth,
More than that being which was like to be?

L. Bard. We all that are engaged to this loss,
Knew that we ventur'd on such dangerous seas,
That, if we wrought out life, 'twas ten to one:
And yet we ventur'd, for the gain propos'd
Chok'd the respect of likely peril fear'd;

And since we are o'erset, venture again.

Come, we will all put forth; body, and goods.

Mor. 'Tis more than time: And, my most noble lord,
I hear for certain and do speak the truth,—
The gentle archbishop of York is up,
With well appointed powers; he is a man,
Who with a double surety binds his followers.
My lord your son had only but the corps,
But shadows, and the shows of men to fight:
For that same word, rebellion, did divide
The action of their bodies from their souls:
And they did fight with basiness, 1 constraint,
As men drink potions; that their weapons only
Seem'd on this side, but for their spirits and souls,
This word, rebellion, it hath froze them up,
As fish are in a pond; But now the bishop
Turns insurrection to religion:
Suppos'd sincere and holy in his thoughts,

SCENE II.—LONDON. A STREET.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, with his Page bearing his Sword and Buckler.

Fal. The brain of this foolish-compounded clay, man, is not able to invent any thing that tends to laughter, more than I invent, or is invented on me; I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men. I do here walk before thee, like a sow that hath overwhelmed all her litter but one. If the prince put thee into my service for any other reason than to set me off, why then I have no judgment. Thou mandrake, thou art fitter to be born in my cap than to wait at my heels. I was never manned 3 with an agate till now: but I will set you neither in gold nor silver, but in civil apparel, and send you back again to your master, for a jewel; the juvenile, the prince your master, whose chin is not yet fledged. I will sooner have a beard grow in the palm of my hand, than he shall get one on his cheek; and yet he will not stick to say his face is a face-royal; nature may finish it when she will, it is not a hair amiss yet: he may keep it still as a face-royal, for a barbarous shall never earn sixpence out of it; and yet he will be crowing as if he had writ him never so much, since his father was a bachelor. He may keep his own grace, but he is almost out of mine, I can assure him.—What said master Dumblon about the satir for my short cloak, and slopes?

Page. He said, sir, you should procure him

1 His spirit to sink. 2 Trifling. 3 Distribution.
better assurance than Bardolph: he would not take his bond and yours; he liked not the security.

Fal. A rascally Achitophel, yea-forsooth knave! to bear a gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security!—The smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles; and if a man is thorough with them in honest taking up, then they must stand upon—security. I had as lief they would put ratsbane in my mouth, as offer to stop it with security. I looked he should have sent me two- and-twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security, for he hath the horn of abundance.

—Where’s Bardolph?

Page. He’s gone into Smithfield, to buy your worship a horse.

Fal. I bought him in Paul’s, and he’ll buy me a horse in Smithfield: an I could get me but a wife, I were mann’d, horsed, and wived.

Enter the Lord Chief Justice, and an Attendant.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bar-

Fal. Wait close, I will not see him. [dolphins.]

Ch. Just. What’s he that goes there?

Attent. Falstaff, an’t please your lordship.

Ch. Just. He that was in question for the robbery?

Attent. He, my lord: but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury; and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the lord John of Lancaster.

Attent. Sir John Falstaff!

Fal. Boy, tell him, I am deaf. [deaf.

Page. You must speak louder, my master is.

Ch. Just. I am sure, he is, to the hearing of any thing good.—Go, pluck him by the elbow; I must speak with him.

Attent. Sir John,—

Fal. What! a young knave, and beg! Is there not wars? is there not employment? Dost not the king lack subjects? do not the rebels need soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Attent. You mistake me, sir.

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? setting my knighthood and my soldierish aside, I had lied in my throat if I had said so.

Attent. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldierish aside; and give me leave to tell you, you lie in your throat, if you say I am any other than an honest man.

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me! If thou get’st any leave of me, hang me; if thou takest leave, thou wert better be hang’d! You hunt-counter, hence! avant!

Attent. Sir, my lord would speak with you.

Ch. Just. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good lord! give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad; I heard say, your lordship was sick: I hope, your lordship goes abroad by advice. Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltiness of time; and I most humbly beseech your lordship, to have a reverend care of your health.

1 In debt.
2 A buffilf.

Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. Ain’t please your lordship, I hear his majesty is returned with some discomfort from Wales.

Ch. Just. I talk not of his majesty:—You would not come when I sent for you.

Fal. And I hear moreover, his highness is fallen into this same apoplexy.

Ch. Just. Well, heaven mend him! I pray, let me speak with you.

Fal. This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an’t please your lordship; a kind of sleeping in the blood, a tinging.

Ch. Just. What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Fal. It hath its original from much grief; from study, and perturbation of the brain: I have read the cause of his effects in Galen; it is a kind of deafness.

Ch. Just. I think, you are fallen into the disease: for you hear not what I say to you.

Fal. Very well, my lord, very well: rather, if it please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking, that I am troubled withal.

Ch. Just. To punish you by the heels, would amend the attention of your ears; and I care not, if I do become your physician.

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord; but not so patient; your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me, in respect of poverty; but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or, indeed, a scruple itself.

Ch. J. I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me.

Fal. As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come.

Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, Sir John, you live in great infamy.

Fal. He that buckles him in my belt, cannot live in less.

Ch. Just. Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise; I would my means were greater, and my waist slenderer.

Ch. Just. You have misled the youthful prince.

Fal. The young prince hath misled me: I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog.

Ch. Just. Well, I am loath to gavell a new-healed wound: your day’s service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night’s exploit on Gadshill: you may thank the unquiet time for your quiet o’erposting that action.

Fal. My lord?

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping wolf.

Fal. To wake a wolf is as bad as to smell a fox.

Ch. Just. What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Fal. A wassel candle, my lord: all tallow: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Ch. Just. There is not a white hair on your face, but should have his effect of gravity.

Fal. His effect of gray, gray, gray.

Ch. Just. You follow the young prince up and down, like his ill angel.

Fal. Not so, my lord; your ill angel is light; but, I hope, he that looks upon me, will take me without weighing; and yet, in some respects, I grant, I cannot go, I cannot tell: Virtue is of so little regard in these coster-monger times, that true value is turned bear-hard: Pregnancy is made a tapster, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings: all the other gifts appertaining to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. You, that are old, consider not the capacities of us that are young: you measure the heat of our livres with the bitterness of your galls; and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too.

Ch. Just. Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age? Have you not a moist eye? a dry hand? a yellow cheek? a white beard? a decreasing leg? an increasing body? Is not your voice broken? your wind short? your chin double? your wit single? and every part about you blasted with antiquity? and will you yet call yourself young? Fie, fie, fie, Sir John!

Fal. My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head, and something a round belly. For my voice,—I have lost it with hollaining, and singing of anthems. To approve my youth further, I will not: the truth is, I am only old in judgment and understanding: and he that will coper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him. Tor the box o' the ear that the prince gave you,—he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible lord. I have checked him for it; and the young lion repents: marry, not in ashes, and sackcloth; but in new silk, and old sack.

Ch. Just. Well, heaven send the prince a better companion!

Fal. Heaven send the companion a better prince! I cannot rid my hands of him.

Ch. Just. Well, the king hath sever'd you and Prince Harry; I bear you are going with Lord John of Lancaster, against the archbishop, and the Earl of Northumberland.

Fal. Yea; I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But look you pray, all that kiss my lady peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day! for, I take but two shits out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily: if it be a hot day, an I brandish anything but my bottle, I would I might never spit while ago. There is not a dangerous action can peep out his head, but I am thrust upon it: Well, I cannot last ever; But it was always yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common. If you will needs say, I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would to heaven, my name were not so terrible to the enemy as it is. I were better to be eaten to death with rust, than to be scour'd to nothing with perpetual motion.

Ch. Just. Well, be honest, be honest; And heaven bless your expedition!

Fal. Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound, to furnish me forth?

Ch. Just. Not a penny, not a penny; you are too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well: Commend me to my cousin Westmoreland.

[Exit Chief Justice and Attendant.

Fal. If I do, fillip me with a three-man Boy — [beetle.]

Page. Sir?

Fal. What money is in my purse?

Page. Seven groats and two-pence.

Fal. I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse; borrowing only lingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable.—Go bear this letter to my lord of Lancaster; this to the prince; this to the earl of Westmoreland; and this to old mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I perceived the first white hair on my chin: About it, you know where to find me. [Exit Page.] This gout plays the rogue with my great toe. It is no matter if I do halt; I have the wars for my colour, and my pension shall seem the more reasonable: A good wit will make use of any thing; I will turn diseases to commodity. [Exit.]

SCENE III.— YORK. A ROOM IN THE ARCHBISHOP'S PALACE.

Enter the Archbishop of York, the Lords Hastings, Mowbray, and Bardolph.

Arch. Thus have you heard our cause, and known our means:
And, my most noble friends, I pray you all, Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes:— And first, lord marshal, what say you to it? Mowb. I well allow the occasion of our arms; But gladly would be better satisfied, How, in our means, we should advance ourselves To look with forehead bold and big enough Upon the power and puissance of the king. Hast. Our present musters grow upon the file To five-and-twenty thousand men of choice; And our supplies live largely in the hope Of great Northumberland, whose bosom burns With an incensed fire of injuries. L. Bard. The question then, Lord Hastings, standeth thus;— Whether our present five-and-twenty thousand May hold up head without Northumberland. Hast. With him, we may. L. Bard. Ay, marry, there's the point: But if without him, we be thought too fæble, My judgment is, we should not step too far Till we had his assistance by the hand: For, in a theme so bloody-facl'd as this, Conjecture, expectation, and surprisë Of aids uncertain, should not be admitted. Ar. 'Tis very true, Lord Bardolph; for, indeed, It was young Hotspur's case at Shrewbury.

1 A heavy wooden hammer, requiring three men to 2 Profit. To wield it.
L. Ba. It was, my lord; who lined himself with Eating the air on promise of supply, [hope, Flattering himself with project of a power Much smaller than the smallest of his thoughts: And so with great imagination, Proper to madmen, led his powers to death, And, winking, leapt’d into destruction. Hast. But, by your leave, it never yet did hurt To lay down likelihoods, and forms of hope. L. Bard. Yes, in this present quality of war;— Indeed the instant action, (a cause on foot,) Lives so in hope, as in an early spring We see the appearing buds; which, to prove fruit, Hope gives not so much warrant, as despair, That frost will bite them. When we mean to build, We first survey the plot, then draw the model, And when we see the figure of the house, Then must we rate the cost of the erection; Which, if we find outweighs ability, What do we then, but draw anew the model In fewer offices; or, at least, desist To build at all? Much more, in this great work, (Which is, almost to pluck a kingdom down, And set another up,) should we survey The plot of situation, and the model; Consent’d upon a sure foundation; Question surveyors; know our own estate, How able such a work to undergo, To weigh against his opposite; or else, We fortify in paper, and in figures, Using the names of men, instead of men: Like one, that draws the model of a house Beyond his power to build it; who, half through, Gives o’er, and leaves his part-created cost A naked subject to the weeping clouds, And waste for churlish winter’s tyranny. H. Grant, that our hopes (yet likely of fair birth) Should be still-born, and that we now possess’d The utmost man of expectation; I think, we are a body strong enough, Even as we are, to equal with the king. L. Bard. What! is the king but five-and-twenty thousand? [Bardolph. Hast. To us, no more; nay, not so much, Lord For his divisions, as the times do brawl, Are in three heads: one power against the French, And one against Glendower; perfirce a third Must take up us: So is the uniform In three divided; and his coffers sound With hollow poverty and emptiness. A. That he should draw his several strengths to, And come against us in full puissance, [gether, Need not be dreaded. Hast. If he should do so, He leaves his back unarm’d; the French and Welsh Baying him at the heels: never fear that. L. Bard. Who, is it like, should lead his forces hither? H. The Duke of Lancaster and Westmonerland: Against the Welsh, himself, and Harry Monmouth; But who is substituted against the French, I have no certain notice. Arch. Let us on; And publish the occasion of our arms. The commonwealth is sick of their own choice, 1 Agree. Their over-greedy love hath surfeited:— An habitation giddy and unsure Hath he, that buildeth on the vulgar heart. 0 thou fond many 11 with what loud applause Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Bolingbroke, Before he was what thou wouldst have him be? And being now trimm’d 2 in thine own desires, Thou beastly feeder, art so full of him, That thou provokst thyself to cast him up. So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge Thy glutious bosom of the royal Richard; And now thou wouldst eat thy dead vomit up, And howlst to find it. What trust is in these times? They that, when Richard liv’d, would have him Are now become enamour’d on his grave: [die, Thou, that threwst dust upon his goodly head, When through proud London he came sighing on After the admired heels of Bolingbroke, Cry’st now 3 O earth, yield us that king again, And take thou this! O thoughts of men accurst, \( \text{and to come, seem best; things present, worst.} \)

Mow. Shall we go draw our numbers, and set on? Hast. We are time’s subjects, and time bids be gone. [Exeunt.

Act Second.

SCENE I.—LONDON. A STREET.

Enter Hostess; Fang, and his Boy, with her; and Snare following.

Host. Master Fang, have you entered the ac-
Fang. It is entered.
Host. Where is your yeoman? Is it a lusty yeoman? will a’ stand to’t?
Fang. Sirrah, where’s Snare?
Host. O, good master Snare.
Snare. Here, here.
Fang. Snare, we must arrest Sir John Falstaff. Host. Yea, master good Snare; I have entered him and all. Snare. It may chance cost some of us our lives, for he will stab. Host. Alas the day! take heed of him; in good faith, a’ cares not what mischief he doth, if his weapon be out: he will foin 4 like any devil; he will spare neither man, woman, nor child. Fang. If I can close with him, I care not for his thrust.
Host. I’ll be at your elbow.
Fang. An I but fist him once; an’ a’ come but within my vice. 5
Host. If I am undone by his going; I warrant you, he’s an infinite thing upon my score;—Good master Fang, hold him sure;—good master Snare, let him not escape. He comes continually to Pie-corner, and he’s invited to dinner to the Lubbar’s Head in Lumbert-street, to master Smooth’s the silksman: I pray ye, since my exion is entered, and my case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred mark is a long loan for a poor lone woman to bear: and I have borne, and borne, 1 Foolish multitude. 2 A bailiff’s assistant. 3 A grapple. 4 Dressed. 5 Thrust.
SHAKESPEARE'S DRAMATIC WORKS.

ACT II.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, Page, and Bardolph.

Yonder he comes; and that arrant malmsey-nose knave, Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, do your offices, master Fang and master Snare; do me, do me, do me your offices.

Fal. How now? whose mare's dead? what's the matter?

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of mistress Quickly.

Fal. Away, varlets:—Draw, Bardolph; cut me off the villain's head; throw the queue in the channel.

Fal. Keep them off, Bardolph.

Fang. A rescue! a rescue!—Host. Good people, bring a rescue or two.—Thou wot, wot thou? wot wot, wot thou? do, do, thou rogue! do, thou hemp-seed?—Fal. Away, you scullion! you rampallian! you fustillarian!

Enter the Lord Chief Justice, attended.

Ch. Just. What's the matter? keep the peace here, ho!

Host. Good my lord, be good to me! I beseech you!

Ch. Just. How now, Sir John? what, are you brawling here?

Doth this become your place, your time, and business? You should have been on your way to York.—Stand from him, fellow; Wherefore hang'st thou on him?

Host. O my most worshipful lord, an't please your grace, I am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Ch. Just. For what sum?

Host. It is more than for some, my lord; it is for all, all I have: he hath eaten me out of house and home; he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his.

Ch. Just. How comes this, Sir John? Fie! what man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Are you not ashamed to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own?

Fal. What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Host. Marry, if thou wert an honest man, thy self, and the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a coal fire, upon Wednesday in Whitsun-week, when the prince broke thy head for liking his father to a singing-man of Windsor; thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me, and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not goodwife Keech, the butcher's wife, come in then, and call me gossip Quickly? coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar; telling us, she had a good dish of prawns; whereby thou didst desire to eat some; whereby I told thee, they were ill for a green wound? And didst thou not, when she was gone down stairs, desire me to be no more so familiar with such poor people; saying, that ere long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me, and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy book-oath; deny it, if thou canst.

Fal. My lord, this is a poor mad soul; and she says, up and down the town, that her eldest son is like you: she hath been in good case, and, the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you, I may have redress against them.

Ch. Just. Sir John, Sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wenching the true cause the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration; you have, as it appears to me, practised upon the easy-yielding spirit of this woman, and made her serve your uses both in purse and person.

Host. Yea, in truth, my lord.

Ch. Just. Prythee, peace.—Pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villainy you have done with her; the one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentance.

Fal. My lord, I will not undergo this snare without reply. You call honourable boldness, impudent sauciness: if a man will make court'sy, and say nothing, he is virtuous; No, my lord, my humble duty remembered, I will not be your suitor; I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the king's affairs.

Ch. Just. You speak as having power to do wrong; but answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman.

Fal. Come hither, hostess. [Taking her aside.

Enter Gower.

Fal. As I am a gentleman:—

Host. Nay, you said so before.

Fal. As I am a gentleman;—Come, no more words of it.

Host. By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate, and the tapestry of my dining-chambers.

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking: and for thy walls,—a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the prodigal, or the German hunting in waterwork, is worth a thousand of these bed-hangings, and these fly-bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound, if thou canst. Come, an it were

1 Put off.  3 (Homestead).  5 Partly gilt.
2 Worthless woman,  4 (Homicide.)

1 Snub, check.  2 Suitably to your position, not for thy humours, there is not a better wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw thy action: Come, thou must not be in this humour with me; dost not know me? Come, come, I know thou wast set on to this.

Host. Pray thee, Sir John, let it be but twenty nobles; if' faith I am loath to pay my plate, in good earnest, la.

Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shift;
you'll be a fool still.

Host. Well, you shall have it, though I pay my gown. I hope you'll come to supper: you'll pay me altogether?

Fal. Will I live?—Go, with her, with her;
[To Bardolph.] hook on, hook on.
[Exeunt Hostess, Bardolph, Officers, and Page.

Ch. Just. I have heard better news.
Fal. What's the news, my good lord?
Ch. Just. Where lay the king last night?
Gow. At Basingstoke, my lord.
Fal. I hope, my lord, all's well: What's the news, my lord?
Ch. Just. Come all his forces back?
Gow. No: fifteen hundred foot, five hundred
Are march'd up to my lord of Lancaster, [horse,
Against Northumberland, and the archbishop.
Fal. Comes the king back from Wales, my noble lord?
Ch. Just. You shall have letters of me presently:
Come, go along with me, good master Gower.
Fal. My lord!
Ch. Just. What's the matter?
Fal. Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?
Gow. I must wait upon my good lord here: I thank you, good Sir John.
Ch. Just. Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go.
Fal. Will you sup with me, master Gower?
Ch. Just. What foolish master taugh you these manners, Sir John?
Fal. Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me.—This is the right fencing grace, my lord; tap for tap, and so part fair.
Ch. Just. Now heaven lighten thee! thou art
a great fool.

SCENE II.—ANOTHER STREET.

Enter Prince Henry and Poins.

P. Hen. Trust me, I am exceeding weary.
Poins. Is it come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood.

P. Hen. Faith, it does me; though it dis-colours the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilely in me, to desire small beer?
Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied, as to remember so weak a composition.
P. Hen. Belike then, my appetite was not princely got; for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me, to remember thy name? or to know thy face to-morrow? or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast; viz. these, and those that were the peach-coloured ones?
Poins. How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard, you should talk so idly! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yourselves at this time is?
P. Hen. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?
P. Poins. Yes; and let it be an excellent good thing.
P. Hen. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine.
Poins. Go to; I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell.
P. Hen. Why, I tell thee,—it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick:
although I could tell to thee, (as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend,) I could be sad, and sad indeed too.
Poins. Very hardly, upon such a subject.
P. Hen. By this hand, thou think'st me as far in the devil's book, as thou and Falstaff, for obduracy and persistency: Let the end try the man. But I tell thee,—my heart bleeds inwardly, that my father is so sick: and keeping such vile company as thou art, hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow.
Poins. The reason?
P. Hen. What wouldst thou think of me, if I should weep?
Poins. I would think thee a most princely hypocrite.
P. Hen. It would be every man's thought:
and thou art a blessed fellow, to think as every man thinks; never a man's thought in the world keeps the road-way better than thine: every man would think me an hypocrite indeed. And what accites thy most worshipful thought, to think so?
Poins. Why, because you have been so much engraven to Falstaff.
P. Hen. And to thee.
Poins. By this light, I am well spoken of, I can hear it with my own ears: the worse that they can say of me is, that I am a second brother, and that I am a proper fellow of my hands;
and those two things, I confess I cannot help.
By the mass, here comes Bardolph.
P. Hen. And the boy that I gave Falstaff:
he had him from me Christian; and look, if the fat villain hath not transformed him ape.

Enter Bardolph and Page.

Bard. Save your grace.
P. Hen. And yours, most noble Bardolph.
P. Bard. [To the Page.] Come, you virtuous ass, you bashful fool, must you be blushing? wherefore blush you now?

Page. He called me even now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window: at last, I spied his eyes.
P. Hen. Hath not the boy profited?
P. Bard. Away, you upright rabbit, away!
P. Poins. Away, you rascally Althea's dream, away!
P. Hen. Instruct us, boy: What dream, boy?

Page. Marry, my lord, Althea dreamed she

1 Withdrew.

1 Incites.
was delivered of a firebrand; and therefore I call him her dream.

P. Hen. A crown's worth of good interpretation.—There it is, boy. [Gives him money.

Poins. O, that this good blossom could be kept from cankers!—Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee.

Bard. An you do not make him be hanged among you, the gallows shall have wrong.

P. Hen. And how doth thy master, Bardolph?

Bard. Well, my lord. He heard of your grace's coming to town; there's a letter for you.

Poins. Delivered with good respect.—And how doth the martlemas, your master?

Bard. In bodily health, sir.

Poins. Marry, the immortal part needs a physician; but that moves not him; though that be sick, it dies not.

P. Hen. I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog: and he holds his place; for, look you, how he writes.

Poins. [Reads.] John Falstaff, knight.—Every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself. Even like those that are kin to the king; for they never prick their finger, but they say, There is some of the king's blood spilt: How comes that? says he, that takes upon him not to conceive: the answer is as ready as a borrower's cap; I am the king's poor cousin, sir.

P. Hen. Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But the letter:

Poins. Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son of the king, nearest his father, Harry prince of Wales, greeting.—Why, this is a certificate.

P. Hen. Peace!

Poins. I will imitate the honourable Roman in brevity; he sure means brevity in breath; short-windéd.—I commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poins: for he misuses thy favours so much, that he swears, thou art to marry his sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou mayst, and so farewell.

Thine, by sea and no, (which is as much as to say, as thou useth him,) Jack Falstaff, with my familiar; John, with my brothers and sisters; and Sir John with all Europe.

My lord, I will steep this letter in sack, and make him eat it.

P. Hen. That's to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned? must I marry your sister?

Poins. May the girl have no worse fortune! but I never said so.

P. Hen. Well, thus we play the fools with the time; and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us. —Is your master here in London?

Bard. Yes, my lord.

P. Hen. Where sups he? doth the old boar feed in the old frank?

Bard. At the old place, my lord: in Eastcheap.

P. Hen. Shall we steal upon him, Ned, at supper?

Poi. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

P. Hen. Sirrah, you boy,—and Bardolph;—no word to your master that I am yet come to town: There's for your silence.

1 (Old, like Martimmas day.) 2 Sty.

Bard. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, sir;—I will govern it.

P. Hen. Fare ye well; go. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page.] How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to-night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen?

Poins. Put on two leather jerkins, and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers.

P. Hen. From a god to a bull? a heavy des- cension! it was Jove's case. From a prince to a prentice? a low transformation! that shall be mine: for, in every thing, the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.

Warkworth. Before the Castle.

Enter Northumberland, Lady Northumberland, and Lady Percy.

North. I pray thee, loving wife, and gentle
Give even way unto my rough affairs: [daughter,
Put not you on the visage of the times,
And be, like them, to Percy troublesome. [more:
Lady N. I have given over, I will speak no
Do what you will; your wisdom be your guide.

North. Alas, sweet wife, my honour is at pawn;
And, but my going, nothing can redeem it:

Lady P. O. yet, for heaven's sake, go not to these wars!
The time was, father, that you broke your word,
When you were more endeared to it than now;
When your own Percy, when my heart's dear
Harry,

Threw many a northward look to see his father
Bring up his powers; but he did long in vain.
Who then persuaded you to stay at home? [son's.
There were two honours lost: yours, and your
For yours,—may heavenly glory brighten it!
For his—stuck upon him, as the sun
In the grey vault of heaven: and by his light,
Did all the chivalry of England move
To do brave acts: he was, indeed, the glass
Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves.
He had no legs, that practis'd not his gait:
And speaking thick, which nature made his
Become the accents of the valiant: [blemish,
For those that could speak low, and tardily,
Would turn their own perfection to abuse,
To seem like him: So that, in speech, in gait,
In diet, in affections of delight,
In military rules, humour of blood,
He was the mark and glass, copy and book,
That fashioned others. And him,—O wondrous
O miracle of men!—him did you leave, [him! (Second to none, unsecked by you,
To look upon the hideous god of war
In disadvantage; to abide a field
Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's name
Did seem defensible, so you left him:
Never, O never, do his ghost the wrong,
To hold your honour more precise and nice
With others, than with him; let them alone;
The marshal, and the archbishop, are strong:
Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers,
To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck,
Have talk'd of Monmouth's grave.

North. Beshrew your heart,
Fair daughter! you do draw my spirits from me,
With new lamenting ancient oversights,
But I must go, and meet with danger there;
Or it will seek me in another place,
And find me worse provided.

Lady N. O, fly to Scotland,
Till that the nobles, and the armed commons,
Have of their puissance made a little taste.
Lady P. If they get ground and vantage of the king,
Then join you with them, like a rib of steel,
To make strength stronger; but for all our loves,
First let them try themselves: So did your son;
He was so suffer'd; So came I a widow;
And never shall have length of life enough,
To rain upon remembrance with mine eyes,
That it may grow and sprout as high as heaven,
For recordation to my noble husband. [mind,
North. Come, come, go in with me: 'tis with my
As with the tide swell'd up unto its height,
That makes a still-stand, running neither way.
Kain would I go to meet the archbishop,
But many thousand reasons hold me back:—
I will resolve for Scotland; there am I
Till time and vantage crave my company. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—London. A ROOM IN THE BOAR'S HEAD TAVERN IN EASTCHEAP.

Enter Two Drawers.

2 Draw. Mass, thou sayest true: The prince once set a dish of apple-Johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Johns: and, putting off his hat, said I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old withered knights. It angered him to the heart; but he hath forgot that.

1 Draw. Why then, cover, and set them down: And see if thou canst find out Sneak's noise; mistress Doll would fear hear some musick. Despatch:—The room where they supped is too hot; they'll come in straight.

2 Draw. Sirrah, here will be the prince, and master Poins anon; and they will put on two of our jerkins, and aprons; and Sir John must not know of it; Bardolph hath brought word.

1 Draw. By the mass, here will be old utis:—
It will be an excellent stratagem.

2 Draw. I'll see if I can find out Sneak. [Exeunt.

Enter Hostess and Doll.

Host. 'Tis faith, sweet heart, methinks now you are in an excellent good temperality: your pulridge beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire; and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose; but, 'tis faith, you have drunk too much canaries; and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say, What's this? How do you now?
Dol. Better than I was. Hem.

Host. Why, that's well said; a good heart's worth gold. Look, here comes Sir John.

Enter Falstaff, singing.

Fal. When Arthur first in court. And was a worthy king. How now, mistress Doll?

1 Festival.

Dol. Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack: thou art going to the wars; and whether I shall ever see thee again, or no, there is nobody cares.

Re-enter Drawer.

Draw. Sir, ancient Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Dol. Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither: it is the foul-mouth'd rogue in England.

Host. If he swagger, let him not come here; no, by my faith; I must live amongst my neighbours; I'll no swaggerers; I am in good name and fame with the very best:—Shut the door:—there comes no swaggerers here; I have not lived all this while to have swaggering now:—shut the door, I pray you.

Fal. Dost thou hear, hostess?—

Host. 'Pray you, pacify yourself, Sir John; there comes no swaggerers here.

Fal. Dost thou hear? it is mine ancient.

Host. Tilly-fally, Sir John, never tell me; your ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before master Tisick, the deputy, the other day; and, as he said to me,—it was no longer ago than Wednesday last,—Neighbor Quickly, says he;—master Dumb, our minister, was by then;—Neighbor Quickly, says he, receive those that are civil: for, saith he, you are in an ill name;—now he said so, I can tell where-upon; for, says he, you are an honest woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what guests you receive: Receive, says he, no swaggering companions.—There comes none here;—you would bless you to hear what he said;—no, I'll no swaggerers.

Fal. He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame cheater, he; you may stroke him as gently as a pitty greyhound: he will not swagger with a Barbary hen, if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance.—Call him up, drawer.

Host. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater; But I do not love swaggering; by my troth, I am the worse, when one says—swagger: feel, masters, how I shake; look you, I warrant you.

Dol. So you do, hostess.

Host. Do I? yea, in very truth, do I, an't were an aspen leaf: I cannot abide swaggerers.

Enter Pistol, Bardolph, and Page.

Pist. 'Save you, Sir John!

Fal. Welcome, ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I charge you with a cup of sack: do you charge upon mine hostess.

Pist. I will discharge upon her, Sir John, with two bullets.

Fal. She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hardly offend her.

Host. Come, I'll drink no proofs, nor no bullets: I'll drink no more than will do me good for no man's pleasure, I.

Pist. Then to you, mistress Dorothy; I will charge you.

Dol. Charge me? I scorn you, scurvy companion. What! you poor, base, rascally, cheating, lack-linen mate! Away, you mouldy rogue; away!

Pist. I know you, mistress Dorothy,
Dol. Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy bung, away! by this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps, as you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal! you basket-hilt state juggler, you! What, with two points on your shoulder! much?

Pist. I will murder your ruff for this.

Fal. No more, Pistol; I would not have you go off here; discharge yourself of our company, Pistol.

Host. No, good captain Pistol; not here, sweet captain.

Dol. Captain! thou abominable cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called—captain? If captains were of my mind, they would truncate you out, for taking their names upon you before you have earned them. You captain, you slave! Hang him, rogue! He lives upon mouldy stewed prunes, and dried cakes. A captain! these villains will make the word captain odious, therefore captains had need look to it.

Bard. 'Tis your own fault, mistress Doll.

Pist. Not I: tell thee what, corporal Bardolph;—I could tear her:—I'll be revenged on her.

Page. 'Tis your own fault, good captain; these are very bitter words.

Bard. Be gone, good ancient: this will grow to a brawl anon.

Pist. Die men, like dogs; give crowns like pins; Have we not Hiren here?

Host. O' my word, captain, there's none such here. What the good-year! do you think, I would deny her? for heaven's sake, be quiet.

Pist. Then, feed and be fat, my fair Calipolis; Come, give's some suck.

Sic fortuna me tormenta, sperato me contenta.—

Fear we broadsides? no, let the fiend give fire: Give me some suck;—and, sweetheart, lie thou there.

[Falling down his sword.]

Come we to full points here; and are et ceteras Fal. Pistol, I would be quiet. [nothing?

Pist. Sweet knight, I kiss thy nief! What! we have seen the seven stars.

Dol. Thrust him down stairs; I cannot endure such a fustian rascal.

Pist. Thrust him down stairs! know we not Gallows nage?

Fal. Quoit him down, Bardolph, like a shoe-groat shilling: nay, if he do nothing but speak nothing, he shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you down stairs.

Pist. What! shall we have incision? shall we imbume?—[Snatching up his sword.]

Then death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days!—

Pist.

Why, then, let grievous, ghastly, gaping wounds Untwine the sisters three! Come, Atropos, I say!

Host. Here's goodly stuff toward!

Fal. Give me my rapier, boy.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee do not draw.

Fal. Get you down stairs.

[Drawing, and driving Pistol out.

Host. Here's a goodly tumult! I'll forswear keeping house, afore I'll be in these terrors and frights. So; murder, I warrant now.—Alas, alas! put up your naked weapons, put up your naked weapons. [Exeunt Pistol and Bardolph.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet; the rascal is gone. Ah, you little valiant villain, you.

Re-enter Bardolph.

Fal. Have you turned him out of doors?

Bard. Yes, sir. The rascal's drunk: you have hurt him, sir, in the shoulder.

Fal. A rascal! to brave me!

Dol. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you! Alas, poor ape, how thou sweatest! Come, let me wipe thy face. —Ah, rogue! I love thee. Thou art valorous: Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the nine worthies. Ah, villain!

Fal. A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket.

Enter Musick.

Page. The musick is come, sir.

Fal. Let them play:—Play, sirs. A rascal bragging slave! the rogue fled from me like quicksilver.

Dol. I'faith, and thou followedst him like a church. Thou little tidy Bartholomew board-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting o' days, and begin to patch up thine old body for heaven?

Enter behind, Prince Henry and Poins, disguised like Drawers.

Fal. Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a death's head: do not bid me remember mine end.

Dol. Sirrah, what humour is the prince of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow: he would have made a good pantler, he would have chipped bread well.

Dol. They say, Poins has a good wit.

Fal. He a good wit? hang him, baboon! his wit is as thick as Tewkesbury mustard; there is no more conceit in him, than is in a mallet.

Dol. Why does the prince love him so then?

Fal. Because their legs are both of a bigness: and he plays at quoits well; and eats conger and fennel; and drinks off candles' ends for flapdragons: and swears with a good grace; and wears his boot very smooth, like unto the sign of the leg: and breeds no bate with telling of discreet histories; and such other gambol faculties as hath, that show a weak mind and an able body, for the which the prince admits him: for the prince himself is such another: the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avourdupis.

P. Hen. Would not this nave of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poins. Let's beat him.

P. Hen. Look, if the withered elder hath not his poll clawed like a parrot.

Fal. Kiss me, Doll.
P. Hen. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanack to that?
Poi. And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not lisp ing to his master’s old tables, his note-book, his counsel-keeper.
Fal. Thou dost give me flattering busses.
Dol. Nay, truly: I kiss thee with a most constant heart.
Fal. What stuff wilt have a kirtle of? I shall receive money on Thursday: thou shalt have a cap to-morrow. A merry song, come; it grows late. Thou’lt forget me, when I am gone.
Dol. By my troth thou’lt set me a weeping, an thou sayest so: prove that ever I dress my self handsomely till thy return.—Well, hearken the end.
Fal. Some sack, Francis.
Fal. Ha! a bastard son of the king’s!—And art not thou Poius his brother?
P. Hen. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead?
Fal. A better than thou; I am a gentleman, thou art a drawer.
P. Hen. Very true, sir, and I come to draw you out by the ears.
Host. O, heaven preserve thy good grace! by my troth, welcome to London.—Heaven bless that sweet face of thine! are you come from Wales?
Fal. Thou mad compound of majesty,—by this light thou art welcome.
Poi. My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge, and turn all to merriment, if you take not the heat.
P. Hen. You candle-mine, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now, before this honest, virtuous, civil gentlewoman?
Host. ‘Blessing o’ your good heart! and so she is, by my troth.
Fal. Didst thou hear me?
P. Hen. Yes; and you knew me, as you did when you ran away by Gad’s-hill: you knew, I was at your back; and spoke it on purpose, to try my patience.
Fal. No, no, no: not so; I did not think thou wast within hearing.
P. H. I shall drive you then to confess the wilful abuse; and then I know how to handle you.
F. No abuse, Hal, on mine honour; no abuse.
P. H. Not! to dispraise me; and call me—pantler, and bread-chipper, and I know not what.
Fal. No abuse, Hal.
Poi. No abuse!
Fal. No abuse, Ned, in the world; honest Ned, none. I dispraised him before the wicked, that the wicked might not fall in love with him:—in which doing, I have done the part of a careful friend, and a true subject, and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal:—none, Ned, none;—no, boys, none.
P. Hen. See now, whether pure fear, and entire cowardice, doth not make thee wrong this virtuous gentlewoman to close with us? Is she of the wicked? Is thine hostess here of the wicked? Or is the boy of the wicked? Or honest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked?
Poi. Answer, thou dead elm, answer.
Fal. The fiend hath pricked down Bardolph irrecoverable; and his face is Lucifer’s privy-kitchen, where he doth nothing but roast malt-worms. For the boy,—there is a good angel about him; but the devil outbids him too.
Host. No, I warrant you.
Fal. Marry, there is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law; for the which, I think, thou wilt howl.
Host. All victuallers do so: What’s a joint of mutton or two in a whole Lent?
P. Hen. You, gentlewoman,—
Dol. What says your grace?
Fal. His grace says that which his flesh rebels against.
Host. Who knocks so loud at door? look to the door there, Francis.

[Enter Peto.

P. Hen. Peto, how now? what news? Peto. The king your father is at Westminster: And there are twenty weak and wearied posts, Come from the north: and, as I came along, I met, and overtook, a dozen captains, Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns And asking every one for Sir John Falstaff.
P. Hen. By heaven, Poius, I feel me much to blame, So idly to profane the precious time; When tempest of commotion, like the south Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt, And drop upon our bare unarmed heads. Give me my sword, and cloak:—Falstaff, good night.

[Execut Prince Henry, Poius, Peto, and Bardolph.

Fal. [Knocking heard.] More knocking at the door?

Re-enter Bardolph.

How now? what’s the matter?

Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently; A dozen captains stay at door for you.

Fal. [To the Page.] Pay the musicians, sirrah. —Farewell, hostess;—farewell, Doll. —You see how men of merit are sought after: the underserver may sleep, when the man of action is called on. Farewell.

[Execut.

Act Third.

SCENE I.—A ROOM IN THE PALACE.

Enter King Henry in his Night-gown, with a Page.

K. Hen. Go, call the earls of Surrey and of Warwick; [letters, But, ere they come, bid them o’er-read these And well consider of them: Make good speed.— [Exit Page.

How many thousand of my poorest subjects Are at this hour asleep! —Sleep, gentle sleep, Nature’s soft nurse, how have I frighted thee, That thou no more wilt weigh mine eyelids down, And steep my senses in forgetfulness! Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee, [slumber; And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy peace Then in the perfum'd chambers of the great, Under the canopies of costly state, And lull'd with sounds of sweetest melody? O thou dull god, why liest thou with the vile, In loansome beds; and leav'est the kingly couch, A watch-case, or a common 'larum bell? Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast Seal up the ship-boy’s eyes, and rock his brains In cradle of the rude imperious surge; And in the visitation of the winds Who take the ruffian billows by the top, Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them With daunting clamours in the slippery clouds, That, with the hurly, 1 death itself awakes? Canst thou, O partial sleep! give thy repose To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude; And, in the calmest and most still night, With all appliances and means to boot, Deny it to a king? Then, happy low, 2 lie down! Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Enter Warwick and Surrey.

War. Many good morrows to your majesty!
K. Hen. Is it good morrow, lords?
War. ’Tis one o’clock, and past.
K. Hen. Why then, good morrow to you all my lords.

Have you read o’er the letters that I sent you? War. We have, my liege.
K. Hen. Then you perceive the body of our kingdom,
How foul it is: what rank diseases grow, And with what danger, near the heart of it.
War. It Is but as a body, yet distemper’d; Which to his former strength may be restor’d, With good advice, and little medicine:— My lord Northumberland will soon be cool’d.
K. Hen. O Heaven! that one might read the book of fate;
And see the revolution of the times Make mountains level, and the continent (Weary of solid firmness) melt itself Into the sea! and, other times, to see The beathy girdle of the ocean Too wide for Neptune’s ships; how chances mock, And changes fill the cup of alteration With divers liquors! O, if this were seen, The happiest youth,—viewing his progress through,
What perils past, what crosses to ensue,— Would shut the book, and sit him down and die. ’Tis not ten years gone, [friends, Since Richard, and Northumberland, great Did feast together; and, in two years after, Were they at wars: It is but eight years, since This Percy was the man nearest my soul; Who like a brother toil’d in my affairs, And laid his love and life under my foot: Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard, Gave him defiance. But which of you was by, [To Warwick.] (You, cousin Nevil, as I may remember.) When Richard,—with his eye brimful of tears, Then check’d and rated by Northumberland,— Did speak these words, now prov’d a prophecy? Northumberland, thou ladder, by the which,

1 Turmoil. 2 Those in lowly situations.

My cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne;— Though then, heaven knows, I had no such in- But that necessity so bow’d the state, [tent: That I and greatness were compell’d to kiss:— The time shall come, thus did he follow it, The time will come, that foul sin, gathering head, Shall break into corruption:—so went on, Foretelling this same time’s condition, And the division of our amity.

War. There is a history in all men’s lives, Figuring the nature of the times decens’d; The which observ’d a man may prophesy, With a near aim, of the main change of things As yet not come to life; which in their seeds, And weak beginnings, lie intreasured. Such things become the hatch and brood of time; And, by the necessary form of this, King Richard might create a perfect guess, That great Northumberland, then false to him, Would of that seed grow to a greater falseness; Which should not find a ground to root upon, Unless on you.

K. Hen. Are these things then necessities? Then let us meet them like necessities: And that same word even now cries out on us; They say, the bishop and Northumberland Are fifty thousand strong.

War. It cannot be, my lord; Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo, The numbers of the fear’d:—Please your grace, To go to bed; upon my life, my lord, The powers that you already have sent forth, Shall bring this prize in very easily. To comfort you the more, I have receiv’d A certain instance, that Glendower is dead. Your majesty hath been this fortnight ill; And these unseason’d hours, perforce must add Unto your sickness.

K. Hen. I will take your counsel; And, were these inward wars once out of hand, We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Court before Justice SHALLOW’S HOUSE IN GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

Enter Shallow and Silence, meeting; Mouldy, Shadow, Wart, Feeble, Bull-calf, and Servants behind.

Shal. Come on, come on, come on; give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir; an early stirrer, by the rood. 1 And how doth my good cousin Silence?

Sil. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bed-fellow? and your fairest daughter, and mine, my god-daughter Ellen? Sil. Alias, a black ouzel, 2 cousin Shallow.

Shal. By yea and nay, sir, I dare say, my cousin William is become a good scholar: He is at Oxford still, is he not?

Sil. Indeed, sir, to my cost.

Shal. He must then to the inns of court, shortly: I was once of Clement’s Inn; where, I think, they will talk of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were called—lusty Shallow, then, cousin.

Shal. By the mass, I was called any thing; and

1 Cross. 2 Blackbird.
I would have done anything indeed, and roundly too. There was I, and little John Doit of Staffordshire, and Black George Bare, and Francis Pickbone, and Will Squale a Cotswold man,—you had not four such swinge-bucklers in all the inns of court again: and I may say to you, we knew where the bona-robas were. Then was Jack Falstaff, now Sir John, a boy; and page to Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This Sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers?

Shal. The same Sir John, the very same, I saw him break Skogan’s head at the court gate, when he was a crack, not thus high; and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruiterer; behind Gray’s Inn. O the mad days that I have spent! and to see how many of mine old acquaintance are dead!

Sil. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shal. Certain, ’tis certain; very sure, very sure; death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair?

Sil. Truly, cousin, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certain. Is old Double of your town living yet?

Sil. Dead, sir.

Shal. Dead!—See, see!—he drew a good bow;—And dead!—He shot a fine shoot:—John of Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead!—he would have clapp’d it the clout at twelve score; and carried you a foreshaft at fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man’s heart good to see.——How a score of ewes now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be; a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead!

Enter Bardolph, and one with him.

Sil. Here come two of Sir John Falstaff’s men, as I think.

Bard. Good morrow, honest gentlemen: I beseech you, which is justice Shallow?

Sh. I am Robert Shallow, sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the king’s justices of the peace: What is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My captain, sir, commands him to you: my captain, Sir John Falstaff: a tall gentleman, and a most gallant leader.

Shal. He greets me well, sir; I knew him a good backword man: How doth the good knight? May I ask, how my lady’s wife doth?

Bard. Sir, paragon; a soldier is better accommodated, than with a wife.

Shal. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. Better accommodated!—it is good; yea, indeed, it is: good phrases are surely, and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated:—it comes from accommodo: very good; a good phrase.

Bard. Pardon me, sir: I have heard the word. Phrase; call you it? By this good day, I know not the phrase: but I will maintain the word with my sword, to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command. Accommodated; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated: or when a man is,—being,—whereby,—he may be thought to be accommodated; which is an excellent thing.

Enter Falstaff.

Shal. It is very just?—Look, here comes good Sir John.—Give me your good hand, give me your worship’s good hand: By my troth, you look well, and bear your years very well. Welcome, good Sir John.

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good master Robert Shallow:—Master Sure-card, as I think.

Shal. No, Sir John; it is my cousin Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good master Silence, it will befits you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good worship is welcome.

F. Fie! this is hot weather.—Gentlemen, have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men?

Shal. Marry have we, sir, Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Sh. Where’s the roll? where’s the roll? where’s the roll?—Let me see, let me see. So, so, so, so: Yea, marry, sir—Ralph Mouldy:—let them appear as I call; let them do so, let them do so.

—Let me see; where is Mouldy?

Moul. Here, an’t please you.

Shal. What think you, Sir John; a good limbed fellow: young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldy?

Moul. Yea, an’t please you.

Fal. ’Tis the more time thou wert used.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, things that are mouldy lack use: Very singular good!—well said, Sir John; very well said.

Fal. [To Shallow.] Prick him.

Moul. My old dame will be undone now, for one to do her husbandry, and her drudgery: you need not to have pricked me; there are other men fitter to go out than I.

Fal. Go to; peace, Mouldy, you shall go, Mouldy.

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace; stand aside: Know you where you are?—For the other, Sir John:—let me see;—Simon Shadow!

Fal. Ay marry, let me have him to sit under: he’s like to be a cold soldier.

Shal. Where’s Shadow?

Shad. Here, sir.

Fal. Shadow, whose son art thou?

Shad. My mother’s son, sir.

Fal. Thy mother’s son! like enough, and thy father’s shadow.

Shal. Do you like him, Sir John?

Fal. Shadow will serve for summer,—prick him:—for we have a number of shadows to fill up the muster-book.

Shal. Thomas Wart!

Wart. Where’s he?

Wart. Here, sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart?

Wart. Yea, sir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart.

Shal. Shall I prick him, Sir John?

Fal. It were superfluous: for his apparel is built upon his back, and the whole frame stands upon pins: prick him no more.
SHAKESPEARE’S DRAMATIC WORKS.
ACT III.

Fal. The chimes at midnight, master Shallow.

Shal. That we have, that we have, that we have:
in faith, Sir John, we have: our watchword was, Hem, boys!—Come, let’s to dinner; come, let’s to dinner.—O, the days that we have seen!—Come, come.

[Exeunt Falstaff, Shallow, and Silence.]

Bull. Good master corporal Bardolph, stand my friend; and here is four Harry ten shillings in French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had as lief I be hanged, sir, as go: and yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care: but, rather, because I am unwilling, and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends; else, sir, I did not care, for mine own part, so much.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Moul. And good master corporal captain, for my old dame’s sake, stand my friend: she has nothing to do anything about her, when I am gone: and she is old, and cannot help herself: you shall have forty, sir.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Fee. By my truth I care not:—a man can die but once:—we owe God a death:—I’ll ne’er bear a base mind:—an’t be my destiny, so; an’t be not, so: No man’s too good to serve his prince: and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next.

Bard. Well said: thou’rt a good fellow.

Fee. Nay, I’ll bear no base mind.

Re-enter Falstaff, and Justices.

Fal. Come, sir, which men shall I have?

Shal. Four, of which you please.

Bard. Sir, a word with you:—I have three pound to free Mouldy and Bull-calf.

Fal. Go to; well.

Shal. Come, Sir John, which four will you

Fal. Do you choose for me. [have?]

Sh. Marry then,—Mouldy, Bull-calf, Feeble, and Shadow.

F. Mouldy, and Bull-calf:—For you, Mouldy, stay at home, still; you are past service:—and, for your part, Bull-calf,—grow till you come unto it; I will none of you.

Shal. Sir John, Sir John, do not yourself wrong; they are your likeliest men, and I would have you served with the best.

Fal. Will you tell me, master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thews, the stature, bulk, and big assemblance of a man! Give me the spirit, master Shallow.—Here’s Wart:—you see what a ragged appearance it is: he shall charge you, and discharge you, with the motion of a pewterer’s hammer; come off, and on, swifter than he that giblets on the brewer’s bucket. And this same half-faced fellow, Shadow,—give me this man; he presents no mark to the enemy; the foeman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife: And, for a retreat,—how swiftly will this Feeble, the woman’s tailor, run off? O, give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones.—Put me a caliver² into Wart’s hand, Bardolph.

1 As willingly.

2 Musket.
Act Fourth.

SCENE I.—A FOREST IN YORKSHIRE.

Enter the Archbishop of York, Mowbray, Hastings, and others.

Arch. What is this forest call'd?

Hast. 'Tis Gualtree forest, an't shall please your grace.

Arch. [forth, A. Here stand, my lord; and send discoverers To know the numbers of our enemies.

Hast. We have sent forth already.

Arch. 'Tis well done. My friends and brethren in these great affairs, I must acquaint you that I have receiv'd New-dated letters from Northumberland; Their cold intent, tenour and substance, thus:— Here doth he wish his person, with such powers As might hold sortance with his quality, The which he could not levy; whereupon He is retir'd, to rife his growing fortunes, To Scotland: and concludes in hearty prayers, That your attempts may overlie the hazard, And fearful meeting of their opposite.

Mowb. Thus do the hopes we have in him touch And dash themselves to pieces. [ground, Enter a Messenger.

Hast. Now, what news? Mess. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile, In goodly form comes on the enemy: And, by the ground they hide, I judge their number Upon, or near, the rate of thirty thousand. M. The just proportion that we gave them out. Let us sway on, and face them in the field.

Enter Westmoreland.

A. What well-appointed leader fronts us here? Mowb. I think it is my lord of Westmoreland. W. Health and fair greeting from our general, The prince, lord John, and duke of Lancaster. A. Say on, my lord of Westmoreland, in peace: What doth concern your coming? West. Then, my lord, Unto your grace do I in chief address The substance of my speech. If that rebellion Came like itself, in base and abject roots, Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rage, And countenanc'd by boys and beggary; I say, if vile commotion so appear'd, In his true, native, and most proper shape, You, reverend father, and these noble lords, Had not been here, to dress the ugly form Of base and bloody insurrection With your fair honours. You, lord archbishop,— Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd; Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath touch'd; Whose learning and good letters peace hath tutor'd; Whose white investments figure innocence, The dove and very blessed spirit of peace,— Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself, Out of the speech of peace, that bears such grace, Into the harsh and boist'rous tongue of war? Turning your books to graves, your ink to blood,
Your pens to lances; and your tongue divine,
To a loud trumpet, and a point of war?

_Ar._ Wherefore do I this? so the question stands,
Briefly to this end:—We are all diseased;
And, with our surfeiting, and wanton hours,
Have brought ourselves into a burning fever,
And we must bleed for it: of which disease
Our late king, Richard, being infected, died.
But, my most noble lord of Westmoreland,
I take not on me here as a physician;
Nor do I, as an enemy to peace,
Tropp in the throngs of military men;
But, rather show a while like fearful war,
To diet rank minds, sick of happiness;
And purge the obstructions, which begin to stop
Our very veins of life. Hear me more plainly.
I have in equal balance justly weigh'd
What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs
we suffer,
And find our griefs heavier than our offences.
We see which way the stream of time doth run,
And are enforced from our most quiet sphere
By the rough torrent of occasion;
And have the summary of all our griefs,
When time shall serve, to show in articles:
Which, long ere this, we offer'd to the king,
And might by no suit gain our audience:
When we are wrong'd, and would unfold our grievances,
We are denied access unto his person
Even by those men that most have done us wrong.
The dangers of the days but newly gone,
(Whose memory is written on the earth
With yet-appearing blood,) and the examples
Of every minute's instance (present now),
Have put us in these ill-beseeming arms;
Not to break peace, or any branch of it;
But to establish here a peace indeed,
Concurring both in name and quality.

_West._ When ever yet was your appeal denied?
Wherein have you been galled by the king?
What peer hath been suborn'd to grate on you?
That you should seal this lawless bloody book
Of forg'd rebellion with a seal divine,
And consecrate commotion's bitter edge?

_Arch._ My brother general, the commonwealth,
I make my quarrel in particular.

_West._ There is no need of any such redress;
Or, if there were, it not belongs to you.

_Mowbr._ Why not to him, in part; and to usall,
That feel the bruises of the days before;
And suffer the condition of these times,
To lay a heavy and unequal hand
Upon our honour?

_West._ O my good lord Mowbray,
Construe the times to their necessities,
And you shall say indeed,—it is the time,
And not the king, that doth you injuries.
Yet, for your part, it not appears to me
Either from the king, or in the present time,
That you should have an inch of any ground
To build a grief on: Were you not restor'd
To all the duke of Norfolk's signories.
Your noble and right-well remember'd father's?

_M._ What thing, in honour, had my father lost,
That need to be reviv'd and breath'd in me?
The king, that loved him, as the state stood then,

_Was._ force perforce, compell'd to banish him:
And then, when Harry Bolingbroke, and he,—
Being mounted, and both roused in their seats,
Their neighing coursers daring of the spur,
Their armed staves in charge, their beavers
down,
Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of
And the loud trumpet blowing them together;
Then, then, when there was nothing could have staid
My father from the breast of Bolingbroke,
O, when the king did throw his warder down,
His own life hung upon the staff he threw:
Then threw he down himself; and all their lives,
That by indictment, and by dint of sword,
Have since miscarried under Bolingbroke.

_West._ You speak, lord Mowbray, now you know not what:
The earl of Hereford was reputed then
In England the most valiant gentleman;
Who knows, on whom fortune would then have smil'd?
But if your father had been victor there
He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry;
For all the country in a general voice,
Cried hate upon him; and all their prayers
and love,
Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on,
And bless'd and grac'd indeed, more than the king.
But this is mere digression from my purpose.

Here come I from our princely general,
To know your griefs; to tell you from his grace.
That he will give you audience: and wherein
It shall appear that your demands are just,
You shall enjoy them; every thing set off,
That might so much as think you enemies.

_M._ But he hath forç'd us to compel this offer;
And it proceeds from policy, not love.

_West._ Mowbray, you overween, to take it so;
This offer comes from mercy, not from fear:
For, lo! within a ken, our army lies;
Upon mine honour, all too confident
To give admittance to a thought of fear.
Our battle is more full of names than yours,
Our men more perfect in the use of arms,
Our armour all as strong, our cause the best;
Then reason wills, our hearts should be as good:
Say you not then, our offer is compell'd.

_M._ Well, by my will, we shall admit no parley.
_W._ That argues but the shame of your offence:
A rotten case abides no handling.

_Host._ Hath the prince John a full commission,
In very ample virtue of his father,
To hear, and absolutely to determine
Of what conditions we shall stand upon?

_West._ That is intended, in the general's name;
I must, I make so slight a question.

_Arch._ Then take, my lord of Westmoreland,
This schedule:
For this contains our general grievances:
Each several article herein redress'd;
All members of our cause, both here and hence,
That are insinu'd to this action,
Acquitted by a true substantial form;

1 Truncleon.
2 Think too highly.
3 Slight.
4 Understood.
5 Wonder.
And present execution of our wills
To us, and to our purposes, consign'd;
We come within our awful banks again,
And knot our powers to the arm of peace.
West. This will I show the general. Please you, lords,
In sight of both our battles we may meet:
And either end in peace, which heaven so frame!
Or to the place of difference call the swords
Which must decide it.
Arch. My lord, we will do so. [Exit West.
Mow. There is a thing within my bosom, tells me
That no conditions of our peace can stand.
H. Fear you not that: if we can make our peace
Upon such large terms, and so absolute,
As our conditions shall consist upon,
Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains.
Mowb. Ay, but our valuation shall be such,
That every slight and false-derived cause,
Yes, every kile, nice, and wanton reason,
Shall, to the king, taste of this action:
That: were our royal faiths martyrs in love,
We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind,
That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff,
And good from bad find no partition.
Arch. No, no, my lord! Note this,—the king is weary
Of dintiny and such picking grievances:
For he hath found,—to end one doubt by death,
Revives two greater in the heirs of life.
And therefore will he wipe his tables clean;
And keep no tell-tale to his memory,
That may repeat and history his loss
To new remembrance: For full well he knows,
He cannot so precisely weed this land,
As his misdoubts present occasion;
His foes are so enrooted with his friends,
That, plucking to unfix an enemy,
He doth unfasten so, and shake a friend.
So that this land, like an offensive wife,
That hath enrag'd him on to offer strokes;
As he is striking, holds his infant up,
And hangs resolv'd correction in the arm
That was uprear'd to execution.
Hast. Besides, the king hath wasted all his rods
On late offenders, that he now doth lack
The very instruments of chastisement:
So that his power, like to a fangless lion,
May offer, but not hold.
Arch. 'Tis very true:—
And therefore be assur'd, my good lord marshal,
If we do now make our atonement well,
Our peace will, like a broken limb united,
Grow stronger for the breaking.
Mowb. Be it so.
Here is return'd my lord of Westmoreland.

Re-enter Westmoreland.

West. The prince is here at hand: Pleased with your lordship,
To meet his grace just distance 'twixt our armies?
Mowb. Your Grace of York, in God's name
then set forward.
Arch. Before, and greet his grace:—my lord,
we come. [Exit West.

SCENE II.—ANOTHER PART OF THE FOREST.
Enter, from one side, Mowbray, the Archbishop, Hastings, and others: from the other side, Prince John of Lancaster, Westmoreland, Officers, and Attendants.

P. John. You are well encounter'd here; my cousin Mowbray:—
Good day to you, gentle lord archbishop:—
And so to you, lord Hastings,—and to all.—
My lord of York, it better show'd with you,
When that your flock, assembled by the bell,
Encircled you, to hear with reverence
Your exposition on the holy text;
Than now to see you here an iron man,
Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum,
Turning the word to sword, and life to death.
That man, that sits within a monarch's heart,
And ripens in the sunshine of his favour,
Would he abuse the countenance of the king,
Alack, what mischief might be set abroad,
In shadow of such greatness! With you, lord bishop,
It is even so: Who hath not heard it spoken,
How deep you were within the books of heaven?
To us, the speaker in his parliament;
To us, the imag'd voice of heaven itself;
The very opener, and intelligencer
Between the grace, the sanctities of heaven,
And our dull workings: O, who shall believe,
But you misuse the reverence of your place;
Employ the countenance and grace of heaven,
As a false favourite doth his prince's name,
In deeds dishonourable? You have taken up,
Under the counterfeited seal of heaven,
The subject of heaven's substitute, my father;
And, both against the peace of heaven,
Have here up-swarm'd them.
Arch. Good my lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your father's peace:
But, as I told my lord of Westmoreland,
The time misorder'd doth, in common sense,
Crowd us, and crush us, to this monstrous form,
To hold our safety up. I sent your grace
The parcels and particulars of our grief;
The which hath been with scorn show'd from the court,
Whereon this hydra son of war is born:
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep,
With grant of our most just and right desires;
And true obedience of this madness cur'd
Stoop tamely to the feet of majesty.
Mowb. If not we ready are to try our fortunes
To the last man.
Hast. And though we here fall down,
We have supplies to second our attempt;
If they miscarry, theirs shall second them;
And so, success of mischief shall be born;
And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel up,
While England shall have generation.

P. John. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow,
To sound the bottom of the after times.
West. Pleased your grace, to answer them directly,
How far-forth you do like their articles?

1 Trivial. 2 Insignificant. 3 Note-book.

1 Succession.
P. J. I like them all, and do allow them well: And swear here by the honour of my blood, My father's purposes have been mistook; And some about him have too lavishly Wrested his meaning and authority. — My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redress'd; Upon my soul they shall. If this may please you, Discharge your powers unto their several counties, As we will ours: and here, between the armies, Let's drink together friendly, and embrace; That all their eyes may bear those tokens home, Of our restored love, and anity. [dresses. A. I take your princely word for these re- P. J. I give it you, and will maintain my word; And thereupon I drink unto your grace. Hast. [To an Officer.] Go, captain, and deliver to the army This news of peace; let them have pay, and part: I know it will well please them; Hie thee, cap- tain. [Exit Officer. Arch. To you, my noble lord of Westmoreland, West. I pledge your grace; And, if you knew what pains I have bestow'd, to breed this present peace, You would drink freely: but my love to you Shall show itself more openly hereafter. Arch. I do not doubt you. West. I am glad of it:— Health to my lord, and gentle cousin, Mowbray. Ma. You wish me health in very happy season; For I am, on the sudden, something ill. Arch. Against ill chances, men are ever merry; But heaviness foreruns the good event. West. Therefore be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow Serves to say thus.—Some good thing comes to- morrow. Arch. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit. Mowb. So much the worse, if your own rule be true. [Shouts within. P. John. The word of peace is render'd; Hark, how they shout! Mowb. This had been cheerful, after victory. Arch. A peace is of the nature of a conquest; For then both parties nobly are subdued, And neither party loser. P. John. Go, my lord, And let our army be discharged too.— [Exit Westmoreland. And, good my lord, so please you, let our trains March by us; that we may peruse the men We should have cop'd withal. Arch. Go, good lord Hastings, And, cre they be dismiss'd, let them march by. [Exit Hastings. P. John. I trust, my lords, we shall lie to- night together.— [Re-enter Westmoreland. Now, cousin, wherefore stands our army still? West. The leaders, having charge from you to stand, Will not go off until they hear you speak. P. John. They know their duties.

Re-enter Hastings.

Hast. My lord, our army is dispers'd already: Like youthful steers unyok'd, they take their courses [up, East, west, north, south; or, like a school broke Each hurries towards his home, and sporting-place. [which West. Good tidings, my lord Hastings; for the I do arrest thee, traitor, of high treason: — And you, lord archbishop, — and you, lord Mowbray, Of capital treason I attach you both. Mowb. Is this proceeding just and honourable? West. Is your assembly so? Arch. Will you thus break your faith? P. John. I pawn'd thee none: I promis'd you redress of these same grievances, Whereof you did complain; which, by mine honour, I will perform with a most Christian care. But, for you, rebels—look to taste the due Meet for rebellion, and such acts as yours. Most shallowly did you these arms commence, Fondly brought here; and foolishly sent hence. Strike up our drums, pursue the scatter'd stray; Heaven, and not we, have safely fought to-day. — Some guard these traitors to the block of death, Treason's true bed, and yielded up breath of. [Exit.

Scene III.—Another Part of the Forest.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter Falstaff and Coleville, meeting.

Fal. What's your name, sir? of what condition are you; and of what place, I pray? Cole. I am a knight, sir; and my name is— Coleville of the dale.

Fal. Well then, Coleve is your name: a knight is your degree; and your place, the dale: Coleville shall still be your name,—a traitor your degree; and the dungeon your place,—a place deep enough; so shall you still be Cole- ville of the dale.

Cole. Are not you Sir John Falstaff?

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, who'e'er I am. Do ye yield, sir? or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death: therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy.

Cole. I think, you are Sir John Falstaff; and, in that thought, yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine; and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifferency, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe:—Here comes our general.

Enter Prince John of Lancaster, Westmoreland, and others.

P. Jo. The heat is past, follow no further now;— Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland.

[Exit Westmoreland.

Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while? When every thing is ended, then you come: These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life, One time or other break some gallows' back.

1 Approve.

1 Foolishly.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus; I never knew yet, but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility; I have foundered nine-score and odd posts; and here, travel-tainted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Colevile of the dale, a most furious knight, and valorous enemy: But what of that? he saw me, and yielded: that I may justly say, with the hooked-nose fellow of Rome, I—came, saw, and overcame.

P. John. It was more of his courtesy than your deserving.

Fal. I know not; here he is, and here I yield him: and I beseech your grace let it be booked with the rest of this day’s deeds; or I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top of it, Colvile kissing my foot: To the which course, if I be enforced, if you do not all shew like gilt two-pences to me; and I, in the clear sky of fame, o’ershining you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which shew like pins’heads to her; believe not the word of the noble: Therefore let me have right, and let desert mount.

P. John. Thine’s too heavy to mount.

Fal. Let it shine then.

P. John. Thine’s too thick to shine.

Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.

P. John. Is thy name Colvile?

Cole. It is, my lord.

P. John. A famous rebel art thou, Colvile.

Fal. And a famous true subject took him.

Cole. I am, my lord, but as my betters are, that led me hither: had they been ruled by me, You should have won them dearer than you have.

Fal. I know not how they sold themselves: but thou, like a kind fellow, gavest thyself away; and I thank thee for thee.

Re-enter Westmoreland.

P. John. Now, have you left pursuit? Westmoreland is made, and execution stay’d.

P. John. Send Colevile, with his confederates, To York, to present execution: Blunt, lead him hence; and see you guard him sure. [Exit some with Colevile.

And now despatch we toward the court, my lords: I hear, the king my father is sore sick: Our news shall go before us to his majesty,— Which, cousin, you shall bear, —to comfort him; And we with sober speed will follow you.

Fal. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go through Glosstshire; and, when you come to court, stand my good lord, ’pray, in your good report.

P. John. Fare you well, Falstaff: I, in my condition, Shall better speak of you than you deserve. [Exit.

Fal. I would you had but the wit: ’twere better than your dukedom. Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me; nor a man cannot make him laugh:—but that’s no marvel, he drinks no wine. There’s never any of these demure boys come to any proof: for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, they are generally fools and cowards;—which some of us should be too, but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it. It ascends me into the brain: dries me there all the foolish, and dull, and crudy vapours which environ it: makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes; which delivered o’er to the voice (the tongue), which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is,—the warming of the blood; which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice: but the sherris warms it, and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extreme. It illumineth the face; which, as a beacon, gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm; and then the vital commoners, and inland petty spirits, muster me all to their captain, the heart; who, great, and puffed up with this retinue, doth any deed of courage: and this valour comes of sherris: So that skill in the weapon is nothing, without sack; for that sets it a-work; and learning, a mere hoard of gold, kept by a devil; till sack commences it, and sets it in act and use. Hereof comes it, that prince Harry is valiant: for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath, like lean, sterile, and bare land, manured, husbanded, and tilled, with excellent endeavour of drinking good and good store of fertile sherris; that he is become very hot and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first human principle I would teach them should be,—to forswear thin potations, and addict themselves to sack.

Enter Bardolph.

How now, Bardolph?

Bard. The army is discharged all, and gone.

Fal. Let them go. I’ll through Glosstshire; and there will I visit master Robert Shallow, esquire: I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. [Exit. Come away. [Exit.

SCENE IV.

WESTMINSTER. A ROOM IN THE PALACE.

Enter King Henry, Clarence, Prince Humphrey, Warwick, and others.

K. Henry. Now, lords, if heaven doth give successful end To this debate that bleedeth at our doors, We will our youth lead on to higher fields, And draw no swords but what are sanctified. Our navy is address’d, our power collected, Our substitutes in absence well invested, And every thing lies level to our wish: Only, we want a little personal strength; And pause us, till these rebels now afoot, Come underneath the yoke of government. War. Both which we doubt not but your majesty Shall soon enjoy.

1 Sherry. 2 Inventive. 3 An allusion to sealing with soft wax. 4 Prepared.
SHAKESPEARE'S DRAMATIC WORKS.

K. Hen. Humphrey, my son, of Gloster,
Where is the prince your brother?

P. Hum. I think he's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

K. Hen. And how accompanied?

P. Hum. I do not know, my lord.

K. H. Is not his brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him?

P. H. No, my good lord, he is in presence here.

Cla. What would my lord and father?

K. Hen. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence, [brother?]

How chance, thou art not with the prince thy
He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thomas;
Thou hast a better place in his affection,
Than all thy brothers; cherish it, my boy;
And noble offices thou mayst effect
Of mediation, after I am dead,
Between his greatness and thy other brethren:
Therefore omit him not; blunt not his love:
Nor lose the good advantage of his grace
By seeming cold, or careless of his will,
For he is gracious, if he be observ'd;
He hath a tear for pity, and a hand
Open as day for melting charity;
Yet notwithstanding, being incens'd, he's flint;
As humorous as winter, and as sudden
As flaws conceale in the spring of day.
His temper, therefore, must be well observ'd:
Chide him for faults, and do it reverently,
When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth;
But, being moody, give him line and scope;
Till that his passions, like a whale on ground,
Confound themselves with working. Learn this,
Thomas,
And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends;
A hoop of gold, to bind thy brothers in;
That the united vessel of their blood,
Mingled with venom of suggestion,
(As, force perforce, the age will pour it in,)shall never leak, though it do work as strong
As aconitum, or rash gunpowder.

Cla. I shall observe him with all care and love.

K. Hen. Why art thou not at Windsor with him, Thomas?

C. He is not there to-day; he dines in London.

K. Hen. And how accompanied? canst thou tell that?

Cla. With Poinz, and other his continual fol-
K. H. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds;
And he, the noble image of my youth,
is overspread with them; Therefore my grief
Stretches itself beyond the hour of death;
The blood weeps from my heart, when I do shape,
In former imaginary, the long past days,
And rotten times, that you shall look upon
When I am sleeping with my ancestors.
For when his headstrong riot hath no curb,
When rage and hot blood are his counsellors,
When means and lavish manners meet together,
O, with what wings shall his affections fly
Towards fronting peril and oppos'd decay!

War. My gracious lord, you look beyond him
quite:
The prince but studies his companions,
Like a strange tongue: wherein, to gain the language,

'Tis needful that the most immodest word
Be look'd upon, and learn'd: which once attain'd,
your highness knows, comes to no further use,
But to be known and hated. So, like gross terms,
The prince will, in the perfectness of time,
Cast off his followers: and their memory
Shall as a pattern or a measure live,
By which his grace must mete the lives of others;
Turning past evils to advantages.

K. Hen. 'Tis seldom, when the bee doth leave her comb
land?

In the dead carrion.—Who's here? Westmore-

Enter Westmoreland.

W. Health to my sovereign! and new happiness
Added to that that I am to deliver! [hand:]
Prince John, your son, doth kiss your grace's
Mowbray, the bishop Scroop, Hastings, and all,
Are brought to the correction of your law;
There is not now a rebel's sword unsheath'd,
But peace puts forth her olive everywhere.
The manner how this action hath been borne,
Here at more leisure may your highness read;
With every course, in this particular.

K. Hen. O Westmoreland, thou art a summer-bird,
Which ever in the haunch of winter, sings
The lifting up of day. Look! here's more news.

Enter Harcourt.

Har. From enemies heaven keep your majesty;
And when they stand against you, may they fall
As those that I am come to tell you of! [sighs,
The earl Northumberland, and the lord Bar-
With a great power of English, and of Scots,
Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown:
The manner and true order of the fight,
This packet, please it you, contains at large.

K. Hen. And wherefore should these good news make me sick?
Will fortune never come with both hands full,
But write her fair words still in foulest letters?
She either gives a stomach, and no food,—
Such are the poor, in health; or else a feast,
And takes away the stomach,—such are the rich,
That have abundance, and enjoy it not.
I should rejoice now at this happy news;
And now my sight falls, and my brain is giddy:
Ome! come near me, now I am much ill. [swoons.

P. Hum. Comfort, your majesty!

Cla. O, my royal father!

West. My sovereign lord, cheer you yourself, look up!

War. Be patient, princes; you do know, those
Are with his highness very ordinary. [well.
Stand from him, give him air; he'll straight be
C. No, no; he cannot long hold out these pangs;
The incessant care and labour of his mind
Hath wrought the mure, that should confine it out.
So thin, that life looks through, and will break

P. Hum. The people fear me; for they do observe Unfather'd heirs, and lostly birds of nature;
The seasons change their manners, as the year
Had found some months asleep, and leap'd them over. 1

SC. IV.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

431

Cla. The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between:
And the old folk, time's dotting chronicles,
Say, it did so, a little time before [died.
That our great grandsire, Edward, sick'd and
W. Speak lower, princes, for the king recovers.
P. Hum. This apoplexy will, certain, be his end.
-K. Hen. I pray you, take me up, and bear me
Into some other chamber: softly, pray. [hence [They convey the King into an inner part of the room, and place him on a bed.
Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends;
Unless some dull1 and favourable hand
Will whisper musick to my weary spirit.
War. Call for the musick in the other room.
K. H. Set me the crown upon my pillow here.
Cla. His eye is hollow, and he changes much.
War. Less noise, less noise.

Enter Prince Henry.

P. Hen. Who saw the duke of Clarence?
Cla. I am here, brother, full of heaviness.
P. Hen. How now! rain within doors, and none abroad!
How doth the king?
P. Hum. Exceeding ill.
P. Hen. Heard he the good news yet?
Tell it him,
P. Hum. He alter'd much upon the hearing it.
P. Hen. If he be sick
With joy, he will recover without physick.
War. Not so much noise, my lords:—sweet prince, speak low;
The king your father is dispos'd to sleep.
Cla. Let us withdraw into the other room, [us?
War. Will not your grace to go along with P. Hen. No; I will sit and watch here by the king. [Exeunt all but P. Henry.
Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow,
Being so troublesome a bedfellow?
O polished perturbation! golden care!
That keep'st the ports2 of slumber open wide
To many a watchful night!—sleep with it now!
Yet not so sound, and half so deeply sweet,
As he, whose brow, with homely biggin3 bound,
Snored out the watch of night; O majesty!
When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit
Like a rich armour worn in heat of day,
That scalds with safety. By his gates of breath
There lies a downy feather, which stir's not;
Did he suspect, that light and weightless down Perforce must move.—My gracious lord! my father!—

This sleep is sound indeed; this is a sleep
That from this golden rigol5 hath divorc'd
So many English kings. Thy due, from me,
Is tears, and heavy sorrows of the blood;
Which nature, love, and filial tenderness,
Shall, O dear father, pay thee plenteously;
My due, from thee, is this imperial crown;
Which, as immediate from thy place and blood,
Derives itself to me. Lo, here it sits,—
[Putting it on his head,
Which heaven shall guard: And put the world's whole strength
Into one giant arm, it shall not force
This lineal honour from me: This from thee
Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left to me. [Exit.
K. Hen. Warwick! Gloucester! Clarence!

Re-enter Warwick, and the rest.

Cla. Doth the king call?
War. What would your majesty? How fares your grace?
K. Hen. Why did you leave me here alone, my Cla. We left the prince my brother here, my
Who undertook to sit and watch by you. [liege,
K. Hen. The prince of Wales? Where is he?
He is not here:
War. This door is open; he is gone this way,
let me see him:
P. Hum. He came not through the chamber where we stay'd.
K. H. Where is the crown? who took it from my pillow?
[here.
W. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it K. Hen. The prince hath ta'en it hence:—go, seek him out;
Is he so hasty, that he doth suppose
My sleep my death?—
Find him, my lord of Warwick; chide him hither.
[Exit Warwick.
This part of his conjoins with my disease,
And helps to end me. — See, sons, what things you How quickly nature falls into revolt, [are! When Gold becomes her object!
For this the foolish over-careful fathers
Have broke their sleep with thoughts, their
Their bones with industry; [brains with care,
For this they have engaged and piled up
The canker'd heaps of strange-achieved gold;
For this they have been thoughtful to invest
Their sons with arts, and martial exercises:
When, like the bee, tolling1 from every flower
The virtuous sweets; [honey,
Our thighs pack'd with wax, our mouths with
We bring it to the hive; and, like the bees,
Are murder'd for our pains. This bitter taste
Yield his engrossments2 to the ending father.—

Re-enter Warwick.

Now, where is he that will not stay so long
Till his friend sickness hath determin'd3 me?
W. My lord, I found the prince in the next room,
Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks;
With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow,
That tyrannish, which never quaff'd but blood,
Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife
With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither, K. Hen. But wherefore did he take away the crown?

Re-enter Prince Henry.

Lo, where he comes.—Come hither to me, Harry—
Depart the chamber, leave us here alone.
[Exeunt Clarence, Prince Humphrey,
Lords, &c. [again.
P. Hen. I never thought to hear you speak
K. Hen. Thy wish was father, Harry, to that
I stay too long by thee, I weary thee. [thought:
Dost thou so hunger for my empty chair,
That thou wilt needs invest thee with mine hon-
Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth! [ours

2 Soothing.
Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm thee.
Stay but a little; for my cloud of dignity Is held from falling with so weak a wind,
That it will quickly drop: my day is dim. [Hours,
Thou hast stolen that, which, after some few Were thine without offence; and, at my death,
Thou hast seal'd up my expectation:
Thy life did manifest, thou lov'dst me not,
And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it.
Thou hid'st a thousand daggers in thy thoughts;
Which thou hast whetted on thy stony heart,
To stab at half an hour of my life.
What! canst thou not forbear me half an hour?
Then get thee gone; and dig my grave thyself;
And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear,
That thou art crown'd, not that I am dead.
Let all the tears that should bedew thy heart,
Be drops of balm, to sanctify thy head:
Only compound me with begotten dust;
Give that, which gave thee life, unto the worms,
Pluck down my officers, break my decrees;
For now a time is come to mock at form,
Harry the fifth is crown'd:—Up, vanity!
Down, royal state! all you sages counsellors,
And to the English court assemble now, [hence!
From every region, apes of idleness!
Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your cumb.
Have you a Russian, that will swear, drink, dance;
Revel the night; rob, murder, and commit
The oldest sins the newest kind of ways?
Be happy, he will trouble you no more:
England shall double gild his treble guilt;
England shall give him office, honour, might:
For the fifth Harry from curb'd license plucks
The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog
Shall flesh his tooth in every innocent.
O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows!
When that my care could not withthold thy riots,
What wilt thou do, when riot is thy care?
O, thou wilt be a wilderness again,
Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants!

P. Hen. [Kneeling.] O pardon me, my liege!
but for my tears,
The moist impediments unto my speech,
I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke,
Ere you with grief had spoke, and I had heard
The course of it so far. There is your crown;
And He that wears the crown immortally,
Long guard it yours! If I affect it more,
Than as your honour, and as your renown,
Let me no more from this obedience rise,
(Which my most true and inward duteouspirit Teacheth,) this prostrate and exterior bending!
Heaven witness with me, when I here came in,
And found no course of breath within your
majesty,
How cold is struck my heart! if I do feign,
O, let me in my present wildness die;
And never live to show the incredulous world
The noble change that I have purpos'd!
Coming to look on you, thinking you dead,
(And dead almost, my liege, to think you were,)
I spake unto the crown, as having sense,
And thus upbraided it. The care on thee depend-
Hath fed upon the body of my father; [Quee,
Therefore, thou best of gold, art worst of gold,
1 Confirmed.

Other, less fine in carat, is more precious,
Preserving life in medic'ne potable:
But thou, most fine, most honour'd, most ren-

Haste at thy bower up. Thus, my most royal liege, Accusing it, I put it on my head;
To try with it,—as with an enemy,
That had before my face murdered my father,—
The quarrel of a true inheritor.
But if it did infect my blood with joy,
Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride;
If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
Did, with the least affection of a welcome,
Give entertainment to the might of it,
Let God for ever keep it from my head!
And make me as the poorest vassal is,
That doth with awe and terror kneel to it!
K. Hen. O my son!
Heaven put it in thy mind to take it hence,
That thou might'st win the more thy father's Pleading so wisely in excuse of it. [love,
Come hither, Harry; sit thou by my bed,
And hear, I think, the very latest counsel
That ever I shall breathe. Heaven knows, my son,
By what by-paths, and indirect crook'd ways,
I met this crown; and I myself know well,
How troublesome it sat upon my head:
To thee it shall descend with better quiet,
Better opinion, better confirmation:
For all the soil of the achievement goes
With me into the earth. It seem'd in me,
But as an honour snatch'd with boisterous hand;
And I had many living, to upbraid
My gain of it by their assistances;
Which daily grew to quarrel and to bloodshed,
Wounding supposed peace: all these bold fears,
Thou seest, with peril I have answer'd:
For all my reign hath been but as a scene
Acting that argument; and now my death
Changes the mode: for what in me was purchas'd,2
Fails upon thee in a more fairer sort;
So thou the garland wear'st successively.3
Yet, though thou stand'st moreuse than I could do,
Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green;
And all thy friends, which thou must make thy friends,
Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en out;
By whose fell working I was first advanc'd,
And by whose power I well might lodge a fear
To be again displac'd: which to avoid
I cut them off; and had a salve now
To lead that many to the Holy Land;
Lest rest, and lying still, might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore my Harry,
Be it thy course, to busy giddy minds
With foreign quarrels; that action, hence borne
May waste the memory of the former days. [out,
More would I, but my lungs are wasted so,
That strength of speech is utterly denied me.
How I came by the crown, O God, forgive!
And grant it may with thee in true peace live!
P. Hen. My gracious liege,
You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me:
Then plain, and right, must my possession be:
Which I, with more than with a common pain,
'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain.

1 Drinkable. 2 Acquired. 3 By succession.
Enter Prince John of Lancaster, Warwick, Lords, and others.

P. John. Health, peace, and happiness to my royal father!

K. Hen. Thou bring'st me happiness, and peace, son John; But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown. From this bare, wither'd trunk; upon thy sight, My worldly business makes a period.—Where is my lord of Warwick?

P. Hen. My lord of Warwick!

K. Hen. Doth any name particular belong Unto the lodging where I first did swoon; War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord. K. Hen. Land be to God!—even there my life must end. It hath been prophesied to me many years, I should not die but in Jerusalem; Which vainly I supposed the Holy Land: But, bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie; In that Jerusalem shall Harry die. [Exeunt.

Act Fifth.

SCENE I.

CLOSTERSHIRE. A HALL IN SHALLOW'S HOUSE.

Enter Shallow, Falstaff, Bardolph, and Page.

Shal. By cock and pike, sir, you shall not away to-night.—What, Davy, I say! Fal. You must excuse me, master Robert Shallow.

Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excused.—Why, Davy! [Enter Davy.

Davy. Sir, here, sir.

Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy,—let me see, Davy; let me see:—yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither.—Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Marry, sir, thus;—those precepts cannot be served: and, again, sir.—Shall we sow the head-land with wheat?

Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook:—Are there no young pigeons?

Davy. Yes, sir.—Here is now the smith's note, for shoeing and plough-irons.

Shal. Let it be cast, and paid:—Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had:—And, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair?

Shal. He shall answer it:—Some pigeons, Davy; a couple of short-legged hens; a joint of mutton; and any pretty little tiny kiskhaws, tell William cook.

Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night, sir?

Shal. Yes, Davy, I will use him well; A friend i' the court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy; for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite.

Davy. No worse than they are back-bitten, sir; for they have marvellous foul linen.

Shal. Well conceived, Davy. About thy business, Davy.

Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance William Visor of Wincot against Clement Perkes of the hill.

Shal. There are many complaints, Davy, against that Visor; that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge.

Davy. I grant your worship, that he is a knave, sir; but yet, heaven forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have served your worship truly, sir, this eight years; and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, sir; therefore, I beseech your worship, let him be countenanced.

Shal. Go to; I say, he shall have no wrong. Look about, Davy. [Exit Davy.] Where are you, Sir John? Come, off with your boots.—Give me your hand, master Bardolph. Bard. I am glad to see your worship.

Shal. I thank thee with all my heart, kind master Bardolph:—and welcome, my tall fellow. [To the Page.] Come, Sir John.

Fal. I'll follow you, good master Robert Shallow. Bardolph, look to our horses. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page.] If I were sawed into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermit's staves as master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing, to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirit's and his: They, by observing him, do bear themselves like foolish justices; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving-man; their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society, that they flock together in consent, like so many wild-geese. If I had a suit to master Shallow, I would humour his men, with the imputation of being near their master: if to his men, I would curry with master Shallow, that no man could better command his servants. It is certain, that either wise bearing, or ignorant carriage, is caught, as men take diseases, one of another: therefore, let men take heed of their company, I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow, to keep Prince Harry in continual laughter, the wearing-out of six fashions, (which is four terms, or two actions,) and he shall laugh without intermissions. O, it is much, that a lie, with a slight oath, and a jest, with a sad brow, will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders! O, you shall see him laugh, till his face be like a wet cloak till laid up.

Shal. [Within.] Sir John!

Fal. I come, master Shallow; I come, master Shallow. [Exit Falstaff. 1 Serious. 2 Warrant.
SCENE II.

WESTMINSTER. A ROOM IN THE PALACE.

Enter Warwick, and the Lord Chief Justice.

War. How now, my lord chief Justice? whither away?

Ch. Just. How doth the king?

War. Exceeding well; his cares are now all

Ch. Just. I hope, not dead.

War. He's walk'd the way of nature;
And, to our purposes, he lives no more.

C. J. I would his majesty had call'd me with
The service that I truly did his life, [him:
Hath left me open to all injuries. [not.

War. Indeed, I think, the young king loves you Ch. Just. I know he doth not; and do arm my-
To welcome the condition of the time; [self,
Which cannot look more hideously upon me
Than I have drawn it in my fancy.

Enter Prince John, Prince Humphrey,
Clarence, Westmoreland, and others.

War. Here come the heavy issue of dead Harry:
O, that the living Harry had the temper
Of him, the worst of these three gentlemen!
How many nobles then should hold their places,
That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort!
Ch. Just. Alas! I fear, all will be over turn'd.

P. John. Good morrow, cousin Warwick.

P. Hum. Cla. Good morrow, cousin.

P. John. We meet like men that had forgot
To speak.

War. We do remember; but our argument
Is all too heavy to admit such talk.

P. J. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy!

Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier!

P. Humph. O, good my lord, you have lost a friend indeed.

And I dare swear, you borrow not that face
Of seeming sorrow; it is, sure, your own.

P. John. Though no man be assured what grace
You stand in coldest expectation; [to find,
And I am the sorrier; 'would twere otherwise.

Cla. Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstaff fair;
Which swims against your stream of quality.

Ch. Just. Sweet princes, what I did, I did in honour,
Led by the impartial conduct of my soul;
And never shall you see, that I will beg
A ragged and forestall'd remission.—
If truth and upright innocence fail me,
I'll to the king my master that is dead,
And tell him who hath sent me after him.

War. Here comes the prince.

Enter King Henry V.

Ch. Just. Good morrow; and heaven save your majesty!

K. This new and gorgeous garment, majesty,
Sits not so easy on me as you think.—
Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear;
This is the English, not the Turkish court,
Not Amurath an Amurath 1 succeeds,
But Harry Harry: Yet be sad, good brothers,

1 Who had all his brothers strangled.
For, to speak truth, it very well becomes you;
Sorrow so royally in you appears,
That I will deeply put the fashion on,
And wear it in my heart. Why then, be sad:
But entertain no more of it, good brothers,
Than a joint burden laid upon us all.

For me, by Heaven, I bid you be assur'd,
I'll be your father and your brother too;
Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares.
Yet weep, that Harry's dead; and so will I:
But Harry lives, that shall convert those tears,
By number, into hours of happiness.

P. J., &c. We hope no other from your majesty.

King. You all look strangely on me,—[To the Chief Justice.] and you most;

You are, I think, assur'd, I love you not.

Ch. Just. I am assur'd, if I be measur'd rightly,
Your majesty hath no just cause to hate me.

King. No!

How might a prince of my great hopes forget
So great indignities you laid upon me?

What! rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison
The immediate heir of England! Was this easy?

May this be wash'd in Lethe and forgotten?

Ch. Just. I then did use the person of your father;

The image of his power lay then in me:
And, in the administration of his law,

While I was busy for the commonwealth,
Your highness pleased to forget my place,
The majesty and power of law and justice,
The image of the king whom I presented,
And struck me in my very seat of judgment
Whereon, as an offender to your father,
I gave bold way to my authority,
And did commit you. If the deed were ill,
Be you contented, wearing now the garland,

To have a son set your decrees at nought;

To pluck down justice from your awful bench:
To trip the course of law, and blunt the sword
That guards the peace and safety of your person:

Nay, more: to spurn at your most royal image,

And mock your workings in a second body.

Question your royal thoughts, make the case yours.

Be now the father, and propose a son:

Hear your own dignity so much profan'd,

See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted,
Behold yourself so by a son disdain'd:

And then imagine me taking your part,
And, in your power, soft silencing your son:

After this cold considerance, sentence me;
And, as you are a king, speak in your state; 1

What I have done, that misbecame my place,

My person, or my liege's sovereignty.

King. You are right, justice, and you weigh this well;
Therefore still bear the balance, and the sword:

And I do wish your honours may increase,

Till you do live to see a son of mine

Offend you, and obey you, as I did.

So shall I live to speak my father's words:—

Happy am I, that have a man so bold,

That dares do justice on my proper son:

And not less happy, having such a son,

That would deliver up his greatness so

Into the hands of justice.—You did commit me:

SCENE II. GLOUCESTERSHIRE. THE GARDEN OF SHALLOW’S HOUSE.

Enter Falstaff, Shallow, Silence, Bardolph, the Page, and Davy.

Shal. Nay, you shall see mine orchard: where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year’s pippin of my own grafting, with a dish of carraways, and so forth;—come, cousin Silence,—and then to bed.

Fal. You have here a goodly dwelling, and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren; beggars all, beggars all, Sir John:—merry, good sir. — Spread, Davy; spread, Davy; well said, Davy.

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses; he is your serving-man, and your husband.

Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, Sir John.—By the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper:—A good varlet. Now sit down, now sit down:—come cousin.

Sil. Ah, sirrah! quoth a,—we shall [Singing].

Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer, And praise heaven for the merry year; So merrily, And ever among so merrily.

Fal. There’s a merry heart!—Good master Silence, I’ll give you a health for that anon.

Shal. Give master Bardolph some wine, Davy, Davy. Sweet sir, sit; [Sitting Bardolph and the Page at another table.] I’ll be with you anon;—most sweet sir, sit.— Master page, good

Re-enter Davy.

Davy. There is a dish of leather-coats for you.

[Setting them before Bardolph.

Shal. Davy,—

Davy. Your worship?—I’ll be with you straight.

[To Bard.]—A cup of wine, sir?

Sil. [Sings.] A cup of wine, that’s brisk and And drink unto the lady mine; [fine, And a merry heart lives long-a.

Fal. Well said, master Silence.

Sil. And we shall be merry;—now comes in the sweet of the night.

Fal. Health and long life to you, master Silence.

Sil. Fill the cup, and let it come;

I’ll pledge you a mile to the bottom.

Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome: If thou wantest any thing, and wilt not call, beshrew thy heart. —Welcome, my little tiny thief; [To the Page.] and welcome, indeed, too.—I’ll drink to master Bardolph, and to all the cavaliers about London.

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die.

Bard. An I might see you there, Davy,—

Shal. By the mass, you’ll crack a quart togeth’er. Ha! will you not, master Bardolph?

Bard. Yes, sir, in a pottle pot.

Shal. I thank thee:—The knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that: he will not out: he is true bred.

Bard. And I’ll stick by him, sir.

Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Lack nothing: be merry. [Knocking heard.] Look who’s at door there: Ho! who knocks? [Exit Davy.

Fal. Why, now you have done me right.

[To Silence, who drinks a bumper.

Sil. Do me right, And dub me knight:

Samingo.

Is’t not so?

Fal. ‘Tis so.

Sil. Is’t so? Why, then say, an old man can do somewhat.

Re-enter Davy.

Davy. An it please your worship, there’s one Pistol from the court with news.

Fal. From the court! let him come in.—

1 Profacceis. Much good may it do you. 2 Cavallers. 3 Proverbs. 4 An expression used while drinking healths. 5 He who drank a bumper on his knees, to the health of his mistress, was dubb’d a knight for the evening.
Enter Pistol.

How now, Pistol?
Pist. Save you, Sir John!
Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistol?
Pist. Not the ill wind which blows no man to good.—Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in the realm.
Syl. By'r lady, I think 'a be; but goodman Puff of Barson.
Pist. Puff?
Puff in thy teeth, most recreant coward base!—
Sir John, I am thy Pistol, and thy friend,
And hester-skelter have I rode to thee;
And tidings do I bring, and lucky joys,
And golden times, and happy news of price.
Fal. I pr'ythee now, deliver them like a man of this world.
[base!
Pist. A fourta! for the world, and worldlings
I speak of Africa, and golden joys.
Fal. O base Assyrian knight, what thy news?
Let king Cophetua know the truth thereof.
Syl. [Sing.] And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John.
[Helicons?
Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the
And shall good news be baffled?
Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap.
Shal. Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding.
Pist. Why then, lament therefore.
Shal. Give me pardon, sir;—if, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it, there is but two ways; either to utter them, or to conceal them. I am, sir, under the king, in some authority.
[Die.
Pist. Under which king, Benzonian? speak or Shal. Under king Harry.
Pist. Harry the fourth? or fifth?
Shal. Harry the fourth.
Pist. A lig for thine office!—
Sir John, thy tender lambkin now is king;
Harry the fifth's the man. I speak the truth:
When Pistol lies, do this; and figi me, like
The bragging Spaniard.
Fal. What! is the old king dead? [Just.
Pist. As nail in door: the things I speak, are Fal. Away, Bardolph; saddle my horse.
Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou will in the land, 'tis thing.—Pistol, I will double charge thee with dignities.
Bard. O joyful day!—I would not take a knighthood for my fortune.
Pist. What? I do bring good news?
Fal. Carry Master Silence to bed.—Master
Shallow, my lord Shallow, be what thou wilt, I am fortune's steward. Get on thy boots; we'll ride all night.—O, sweet Pistol.—Away, Bardolph.
[Exit Bard.]—Come, Pistol, utter no more:
and with this devise something, to do thyself good.—Boot, boot, master Shallow; I know, you, the young king is sick for me. Let us take any man's horses; the laws of England are at my commandment. Happy are they which have been your friends; and owe to my Lord Chief Justice!
Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also!
Where is the life that late I led, say they:
Why, here it is;—Welcome these pleasant days.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—London. A Street.

Enter Beadle, dragging in Hostess Quickly and Doll.
Host. No, thouarrant knave; I would I might die, that I might have thee hanged; thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint.
Bead. The constables have deliver'd her over to me; and she shall have whipping cheer enough, I warrant her: There hath been a man or two lately killed about her.
Doll. Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lie. Come on; I'll tell thee what, thou tripe-visaged rascal; thou hadst better thou hadst struck thy mother, thou paper-faced villain.
Host. O, that Sir John were come! he would make this a bloody day to somebody.
Bead. Come, I charge you both go with me;
for the man is dead, that you and Pistol
beat among you.
Doll. I'll tell thee what, thou thin man in a censer! I will have you as soundly swung for this, you blue-bottle rogue! you filthy famished correction!
Bead. Come, come, you she knight-errant, come.
Host. O, that right should thus overcome might! Well; of sufferance comes ease.
Doll. Come, you rogue, come; bring me to a justice.
Host. Ay; come, you starved blood-hound.
Doll. Goodman death! Goodman bones!
Host. Thou atomy thou?
Doll. Come, you thin thing; come, you rascal!
Bead. Very well.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.

A PUBLIC PLACE NEAR WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

Enter two Grooms, stirring rushes.
Groom. More rushes, more rushes.
Groom. The trumpets have sounded twice.
Groom. It will be two o'clock ere they come from the coronation: Despatch, despatch.
[Exeunt Grooms.

Enter Falstaff, Shallow, Pistol, Bardolph, and the Page.
Fal. Stand here by me, master Robert Shallow; I will make the king do you grace: I will leer upon him, as 'a comes by; and do but mark the countenance that he will give me.
Pist. Bless thy lungs, good knight.
Fal. Come here, Pistol; stand behind me.
[To Shallow.] O, if I had had time to have made new liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But 'tis no matter; this poor show doth better: this doth infer the zeal I had to see him.
Shal. It doth so.
Fal. It shows my earnestness of affection.
Shal. It doth so.
Fal. My devotion.
Shal. It doth, it doth, it doth.
Fal. As it were, to ride day and night; and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me.
Shal. It is most certain.
SC. V.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

Fal. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him: thinking of nothing else; putting all affairs else in oblivion; as if there were nothing else to be done, but to see him.

Pist. 'Tis semper idem, for absque hoc nihil. 'Tis all in every part.

Shal. 'Tis so indeed.

[Shouts within, and the Trumpets sound.

Pist. There roar'd the sea, the trumpet-clanger sounds.

Enter the King and his Train, the Chief Justice among them.

F. God save thy grace, King Hal! my royal Hal!

Pist. The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal imp 1 of fame!

Fal. God save thee, my sweet boy!

King. My lord chief justice, speak to that vain man.

Ch. Just. Have you your wits? know you what 'tis you speak?

Fal. My king! my Jove! I speak to thee, my K. I know thee not, old man: Fall to thy prayers;

How ill white hairs become a fool, and jester! I have long dream'd of such a kind of man, So surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so profane: But, being awake, I do despise my dream. Make less thy body, hence, 2 and more thy grace; Leave gormandizing; know the grave doth gape For thee thrice wider than for other men: Reply not to me with a fool-born jest; Presume not, that I am the thing I was: [ leaves, For heaven doth know, so shall the world per- That I have turn'd away my former self; So will I those that kept me company, When thou dost hear I am as I have been, Approach me; and thou shalt be as thou wast, The tutor and the feeder of my riots: Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death,— As I have done the rest of my misleaders,— Not to come near our person by ten miles. For competence of life, I will allow you, That lack of means enforce you not to evil: And, as we hear you do reform yourselves, We will,—according to your strength, and qua- lities,— Give you advancement.—Be it your charge, my To see perform'd the tenor of our word.—[lord, Set on. [Exeunt King, and his Train.

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound.

Shal. Ay, marry, Sir John; which I beseech you to let me have home with me.

Fal. That can hardly be, master Shallow. Do not you grieve at this; I shall be sent for in private to him: look you, he must seem thus to the world. Fear not your advancement; I will be the man yet, that shall make you great.

Shal. I cannot perceive how; unless you give me your doublet, and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good Sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word: this that you heard, was but a colour. [Sir John.

Shal. A colour, I fear, that you will die in,

1 Progeny. 2 Henceforth.

Fal. Fear no colours; go with me to dinner. Come, lieutenant Pistol;—come, Bardolph:—I shall be sent for soon at night.

Re-enter Prince John, the Chief Justice, Officers, etc.

Ch. Just. Go, carry Sir John Falstaff to the Take all his company along with him. [Fleet; Fal. My lord, my lord,—

Ch. Just. I cannot now speak: I will hear you Take them away.

P. Si fortuna me tormenta, spero me contenta. [Exeunt Fal., Shal., Pist., Bard., Page, and Officers.

P. Jo. I like this fair proceeding of the king's;

He hath intent, his wounted followers Shall all be very well provided for; But all are banish'd, till their conversations Appear more wise and modest to the world.

Ch. Just. And so they are. [lord.

P. Jo. The king hath call'd his parliament, my Ch. Just. He hath.

P. J. I will lay odds,—that ere this year expire, We bear our civil swords, and native fire, As far as France: I heard a bird so sing, Whose music, to my thinking, pleas'd the king. Come, will you hence? [Exeunt.

EPILOGUE.

SPOKEN BY A DANCER.

First, my fear; then, my court'sy; last, my speech. My fear is, your displeasure; my court'sy, my duty; and my speech, to beg your pardons. If you look for a good speech now, you undo me: for what I have to say, is of mine own making; and what, indeed, I should say, will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture.—Be it known to you, (as it is very well,) I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it, and to promise you a better. I did mean, indeed, to pay you with this; which, if, like an ill venture, it come unluckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors lose. Here, I promised you, I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies: bate me some, and I will pay you some, and as most debtors do, promise you infinitely.

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? and yet that were but light payment,—to dance out of your debt. But a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I. All the gentlewomen here have forgiven me; if the gentemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlewomen, which was never seen before in such an assembly.

One word more, I beseech you. If you be not too much cloyed with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with Sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France: where, for any thing I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already he be killed with your hard opinions; for Oldcastle died a martyr, and this is not the man. My tongue is weary; when my legs are too, I will bid you good night: and so kneel down before you;—but, indeed, to pray for the queen.
Enter Chorus.

O, for a muse of fire that would ascend,
The brightest heaven of invention!
A kingdom for a stage, princes to act,
And monarchs to behold the swelling scene.
Then should the warlike Harry, like himself,
Assume the port of Mars; and at his heels,[fire,
Leash'd in like hounds, should famine, sword, and Crouch for employment. But pardon, gentle all,
The flat unraised spirit, that hath da'rd,
On this unworthy scaffold, to bring forth
So great an object: Can this cockpit hold
The vasty fields of France, or may we cram
Within the wooden O,¹ the very casques,
That did affright the air at Agincourt?
O, pardon! since a crooked figure may
Attest, in little place, a million;
And let us, ciphers to this great accord,
On your imaginary forces work:
Suppose, within the girdle of these walls,
Are now confin'd two mighty monarchies,
Whose high uprear'd and abutting fronts
The perilous, narrow ocean parts asunder.
Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts;
Into a thousand parts divide one man,
And make imaginary puissance:
Think, when we talk of horses, that you see them
Printing their proud hoofs i' the receiving earth,
For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck our kings,
Carry them here and there; jumping o'er times;
Turning the accomplishment of many years
Into an hour-glass; For the which supply,
Admit me Chorus to this history;

Gently to hear, kindly to judge, our play.

Act First.

SCENE I.—LONDON. AN ANTE-CHAMBER IN THE KING'S PALACE.

Enter the Archbishop of Canterbury, and Bishop of Ely.

C. My lord, I'll tell you,—that self bill is urg'd,
Which, in the eleventh year of the last king's reign,
Was like, and had indeed against us pass'd,
But that the scambling¹ and unquiet time
Did push it out of further question.
Ely. But how, my lord, shall we resist it now?
C. It must be thought on. If it pass against us,
We lose the better half of our possession:
For all the temporal lands which men devote
By testament have given to the church,
Would they strip from us; being valued thus,—
As much as would maintain, to the king's honour,
Full fifteen ears, and fifteen hundred knights;
Six thousand and two hundred good esquires;
And, to relief of lazer, and weak age,
Of indigent faint souls, past corporal toil,
A hundred alms-houses, right well supplied;
And to the coffer of the king beside,
